

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

4.77

THE
AMERICAN AND ENGLISH
ENCYCLOPÆDIA
OF
LAW.

COMPILED UNDER THE EDITORIAL SUPERVISION OF

JOHN HOUSTON MERRILL,

Late Editor of the American and English Railroad Cases and the American and English Corporation Cases.

VOLUME III.

NEW YORK:

NORTHPORT, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.:

EDWARD THOMPSON, LAW PUBLISHER.

1887.

COPYRIGHT, 1887,
BY EDWARD THOMPSON.

L 5348

FEB 29 1930

WILLIAMSON

DRUMMOND & NEU, Printers,
1 to-7 Hague Street,
NEW YORK.

PARTIAL LIST OF CONTRIBUTORS, VOL. III.

---

Carriers of Live Stock,	JNO. HOUSTON MERRILL, of the Philadelphia Bar.
Cemeteries,	WM. M. ROCKEL, of the Springfield (Ohio) Bar.
Certiorari,	CHARLES A. ROBBINS, of the Lincoln (Nebraska) Bar.
Champerty,	HOWARD WURTS PAGE, of the Philadelphia Bar.
Character (in Evidence),	JOHN S. ADAMS, of the Philadelphia Bar.
Charities,	HENRY T. DECHERT, of the Philadelphia Bar.
Charter party,	THEODORE M. ETTING, of the Philadelphia Bar.
Chattels,	D. H. PINGREY, of the Bloomington (Ill.) Bar.
Chattel Mortgages,	H. CAMPBELL BLACK, of the Williamsport (Pa.) Bar.
Checks,	HENRY B. BARTOW, of the Philadelphia Bar.
Chose in Action,	L. K. MIHILLS, of the Akron (Ohio) Bar.
Citizenship,	D. H. PINGREY, of the Bloomington (Ill.) Bar.
Clearing House,	GEORGE R. VAN DUSEN, of the Philadelphia Bar.
Codicils,	HOWARD WURTS PAGE, of the Philadelphia Bar.
Comparative Negligence,	WM. H. RUSSELL, of the Chattanooga (Tenn.) Bar.
Conditional Sales,	H. CAMPBELL BLACK, of the Williamsport (Pa.) Bar.
Conflict of Laws,	JAMES M. KERR, of the Rochester (N. Y.) Bar.
Constitutional Law,	H. CAMPBELL BLACK, of the Williamsport (Pa.) Bar.
Consuls and Ambassadors,	D. H. PINGREY, of the Bloomington (Ill.) Bar.
Contempt,	JOHN P. CROASDALE, of the Philadelphia Bar.
Continuance,	WM. M. ROCKEL, of the Springfield (Ohio) Bar.
Contracts,	ROBERT RALSTON, of the Philadelphia Bar.
Words and Phrases,	{ JOHN H. INGHAM, SAMUEL HINDS THOMAS, CHARLES T. CRESSWELL, JOHN S. ADAMS, JOHN P. CROASDALE, GEORGE R. VAN DUSEN, LUTHER E. HEWITT.

TABLE OF TITLES AND DEFINITIONS.

See Index for numerous sub-titles and definitions contained in the notes.

CARRIERS OF LIVE STOCK, 1

Carry, 16

Cart, 19

Cas, 20

Case, 21

Cash, 31

Cast, 35

Casual, 36

Casualty, 37

Catalogue, 37

CATCHING BARGAIN, 37

Catchings, 43

Cattle, 43

Causa. See Cause.

Cause, 44

Caveat, 48

Cease, 48

Cede, 48

Cedule, 48

Celebrate, 48

Cellar, 49

CEMETERIES, 49

Certain, 58

Certainty, 58

Certificate, 59

CERTIORARI, 60

Cestui que trust. See Trusts and Trustees.

Chain, 67

Chair, 67

Chairman, 68

Challenge. See Juries and Jury Trials.

Chambers, 68

Champagne, 68

CHAMPERTY AND MAINTENANCE, 68

Chance, 88

Chancellor, 89

Chancery. See Equity.

Change, 89

CHANGE OF VENUE, 90

Changing words. See Wills.

Channel, 108

Chapel, 109

Chapter, 109

CHARACTER (in Evidence), 110

Charcoal, 118

Charge, 118

Chargeable, 122

Chariot, 122

CHARITIES. TRUSTS FOR CHARITABLE USES, 122

Chart, 138

Charter, 141

CHARTER PARTY, 143

Chase, 155

Chaste, 156

CHASTITY, 158

CHATTELS, 163

CHATTEL MORTGAGES, 175

Cheat, 209

CHECKS, 211

Chemist, 228

Cherokee, 228

Chevisance, 228

Chicory, 228

Chief, 229

CHILD—CHILDREN, 229

Childish, 234

China, 234

Chinese, 234

Chip, 234

Chocolate, 234

Choice, 234

Choose, 234

Chose, 235

Chosen freeholders 235

CHOSES IN ACTION, 235

Christian, 238

Christian name, 239

Christianity. See Religious Societies.

Chuck-a-luck, 239

Church. See Religious Societies.

Cider, 239

Cipher, 239

Circuit, 239

Circular, 240

Circumstances, 240

TABLE OF TITLES AND DEFINITIONS.

- Circumstantial Evidence. See Presumptive Evidence.
 Citation, 240
 Cite, 241.
CITIZENSHIP, 242
 City, 256
 Civil, 256
 Civil action, 257
 Civil corporation. See Corporations.
CIVIL DAMAGE ACTS, 257
 Civilization, 273
 Civiliter, 273
 Civiliter Mortuis, 273
CIVIL RIGHTS. See Constitutional Law.
 Claim, 273
 Claimant, 277
 Claim of comissance, 277
 Claim of liberty, 277
 Clandestine, 277
 Class, 278
 Clause, 278
 Clay, 279
 Cleanse, 279
 Clear, 279
 Clearance, 282
CLEARING HOUSE, 282
 Clerical, 286
 Clerk. See Master and Servant.
CLIENT. See Attorney and Client.
 Clothes, 286
CLOUD ON TITLE. See Bill to Remove Clouds from Title.
 Clubs. See Societies.
 Co., 287
 Coach, 287
 Coal, 287
 Coast, 288
 C.O.D., 289
 Code—Codification, 290
CODICILS, 291
 Coercion. See Duress.
 Coffee House, 305
 Coffin, 305
 Cognate, 306
 Cognizance, 306
 Cognovit, 307
 Cohabit—Cohabitation, 308
 Coin, 309
 Coinage, 310
 Collar, 310
 Collateral, 310
 Collation—Collatio Bonorum, 311
 Collect—Collectible—Collection—Collector, 312
COLLECTION AGENCIES. See Banks.
 Colleges. See Education.
 Colliery, 313
 Collision. See Shipping.
 Collusion. See Divorce; Fraud.
 Color, 314
COLOR OF TITLE. See Adverse Possession.
 Come—Coming, 314
 Comfort, 314
 Commencement of a building, 314
 Commerce. See Constitutional Law; Interstate Commerce.
COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS, 315
 Commission of Lunacy. See Lunacy.
COMMISSION MERCHANTS, 317
 Common, 346
COMMON LAW, 347
 Communicate, 349
 Communication, 349
 Community, 349
COMMUNITY PROPERTY, 350
 Commutation, 365
 Compact, 365
 Company, 366
COMPARATIVE NEGLIGENCE, 367
 Compelled, 377
 Compensation, 378
 Competency, 380
 Competent, 380
 Complain, 381
 Complainant, 381
 Complaint, 381
 Complete, 382
 Completing, 382
 Completion, 382
COMPOSITION WITH CREDITORS, 385
COMPOUNDING OFFENCES, 399
 Compromise. See Accord and Satisfaction; Composition with Creditors.
 Compulsion, 407
 Compute, 407
 Conceal, 407
CONCEALED WEAPONS, 408
 Concealment, 416
CONCEALMENT OF BIRTH, 416
 Concern, 419
 Concerned, 419
 Concerns, 419
 Conception, 420
 Condemnation, 420
 Condition, 422
CONDITIONAL SALES, 424
 Condonation. See Divorce.
 Conduct, 438
 Confederacy, 438
 Confederate money. See Money.
CONFESSIONS, 439
 Confidence, 497
CONFIDENTIAL COMMUNICATIONS. See Privileged Communications.
 Confinement, 497
 Confirmation, 498
 Confiscation acts. See War.
CONFLICT OF LAWS, 499
 Confusion of debts, 660
CONFUSION OF GOODS. See Accession.
 Congregation, 660
 Connivance. See Divorce.
 Consanguinity, 661
 Conscience, 661
 Conscious, 662
CONSENT, 662

TABLE OF TITLES AND DEFINITIONS.

Consequential damages. See Damages; Eminent Domain.
 Consideration. See Contracts.
 Consignation, 667
 Consigned, 677
 Consignor and Consignee. See Carriers.
 Consolidate.
CONSPIRACY. See Criminal Conspiracy
 Constables. See Police.
 Constitution, 669
CONSTITUTIONAL LAW, 670.
 Constraint, 762
 Construction, 762
 Constructive, 763
CONSULS AND AMBASSADORS. 764 Contagious Disorders. See Health; Quarantine.
 Contemplation, 776
 Contemplation of bankruptcy. See Bankruptcy.
CONTEMPT, 777
 Contention, 803
 Contents, 803
 Contest, 803
 Contiguous, 803
 Contingency, 804
 Contingent. See Remainders.
CONTINUANCES, 804.
 Contractor, 822.
CONTRACTS, 823.

THE AMERICAN AND ENGLISH ENCYCLOPÆDIA OF LAW.

CARRIERS OF LIVE STOCK. (See also ANIMALS; BAILMENTS; CARRIERS OF GOODS.)

Carriers of Live Stock as Common Carriers, 1.
England, 2.
Michigan, 5.
Kentucky and Tennessee, 6.
United States Generally, 6.
Injuries Arising from Intrinsic Qualities of Live Stock, 8.
Carrier's Liability when his Negligence is Primary Cause of Loss or Injury, 9. [10.
Carrier's Duty to Receive Live Stock, Notices Limiting Liability, 10.
Contracts Limiting Liability, 10.
English Statutes and Their Construction, 11.
United States Generally, 13.
New York, 15. [15.
Notices of Claim for Damages,

Drivers' Passes, 16. [16a.
Carrier's Liability During Transit, Duty to Furnish Safe Cars and Appliances, 16a.
Loading and Unloading, 16b.
Duty to Feed and Water, 16d.
Duty to Care for Live Stock Generally, 16d.
Liability for Delay, 16e.
Loss of Market, 16f.
Connecting Carriers, 16f.
Statutory Regulations as to Transportation of Live Stock, 16g.
Actions Against Carriers of Live Stock, 16g.
Burden of Proof, 16g.
Evidence, 16h.
Measure of Damages, 16h.

1. Carriers of Live Stock as Common Carriers.—Common carriers of goods, as has been already shown,<sup>1</sup> assume in their undertaking to carry what are practically the obligations of insurers. As usually expressed, they insure against loss or injury from whatever cause arising, excepting only acts of God or the public enemy. While sufficiently accurate for practical purposes, this statement of the rule is subject to the further qualifications that common carriers of goods are not liable when the loss or injury results from the neglect of the consignor, or from the intrinsic qualities of the articles consigned.<sup>2</sup> Under this last-named exception, the law of common carriers of live stock is properly classified.

1. CARRIERS OF GOODS, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, 778.

3 C. of L.—1

2. CARRIERS OF GOODS, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, 787, 841, 853.

The justice of a distinction based upon the character of the freight is scarcely open to question. In the same way that a carrier is not held to a like responsibility for the safe carriage of a bale of cotton and a box of fruit, his liability in the transportation of live stock is modified. The most scrupulous and painstaking performance of his duties could not guarantee an owner against loss. Railroad companies—the class of carriers almost exclusively in question—must use the cattle-car and the locomotive. In addition to many other possible causes of damage, the following must be considered: Animals, whatever their species, must be crowded or partitioned to avoid slipping, and the former process is likely to result in suffocation, while the latter would be too expensive for the shipper; they must have light and air, and the open car means exposure to the weather, often under conditions unfavorable to their health; they must be fed and watered, which necessitates unloading and reloading, with the attendant dangers; add to these difficulties many others which are attributable to the natures and habits of animals—they become frightened and unmanageable; they kick or gore, or fall down and cannot rise; they crowd upon and suffocate the weak; they suffer from the unnatural mode of locomotion with its attendant hardships, and often with the length of the journey. These and similar considerations have brought about not only a unanimous holding among the authorities that carriers of live stock were not insurers against loss or injury arising from the inherent nature, habits, etc., of animals, but have produced some difference of opinion as to whether carriers of animals were common carriers, liable to their duties and subject to their responsibilities.<sup>1</sup>

(a) England.—It is sometimes asserted that by the English law the transportation of live stock by railroad does not come within the reasons of the rules applied to common carriers, so far as relates to the care of the property and responsibility for its loss or injury.<sup>2</sup> The considerations already adverted to have clearly resulted in some difference of opinion among English judges, but an examination of the conflicting, and more particularly the latest cases, will

1. There is a conflict of opinion as to whether the common-law rule of liability as applied to common carriers should be extended to include carriers of animals. Doubts were expressed upon the subject in the following cases: McManus v. Lancashire, etc., R., 2 H. & N. 693; 27 L. J. Exch. 201; 4 Jur. N. S. 144; 4 H. & N. 328; Carr v. Lancashire, etc., R., 7 Exch. 712; Pardington v. South Wales R., 38 Eng. L. & Eq. 432; 1 H. & N. 392.

In other cases the question has been made to depend upon the existence of a special contract of transportation limiting the carrier's liability. In the absence of such a contract the common-law rule should be applied. Palmer v. Grand Junction R., 4 Mee. & W. 749; 7 Dow. P. C. 232; 1 H. & H. 489; 3 Jur. 559. See, generally, Michigan Southern R. v. McDonough, 21 Mich. 169; Lake Shore, etc., R. v. Perkins, 25 Mich. 329; Louisville, etc., R. v. Hedger, 9 Bush (Ky.), 645; Nashville, etc., R. v. Jackson, 6 Heisk. (Tenn.) 273; Baker v. Louisville, etc., R., 10 Lea (Tenn.), 304; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 149.

2. Michigan Southern R. v. McDonough, 21 Mich. 169; Lawson's Contracts of Carriers, § 16.

scarcely bear out these statements.<sup>1</sup> An accepted authority, after a review of the decisions, lays down the following:

1. English Authorities. — Blower v. Great Western, etc., R., L. R. 7 C. P. 655; 41 L. J. C. P. 268; 27 L. T. N. S. 883; 20 W. R. 776; Nugent v. Smith, L. R. 1 C. P. Div. 423; 45 L. J. C. P. 697; 34 L. T. N. S. 827; 25 W. R. 117, reversing s. c., L. R. 1 C. P. Div. 19; 45 L. J. C. P. 19; 33 L. T. N. S. 731; 24 W. R. 237; Kendall v. London, etc., R., L. R. 7 Exch. 373; 41 L. J. Ex. 184; 26 L. T. N. S. 735; 20 W. R. 880; Roberts v. Great Western R., 4 Ad. & El. N. S. 506.

In Palmer v. Grand Junction R., 4 M. & W. 749, Parke, B., mooted the point, as appears on page 758 of the report, putting the following question to defendant's counsel: "Does the rule as to negligence apply to live animals as to men or horses? Of course where they are stolen, it would; but is it so, where they are delivered, although hurt or damaged? If misdelivered the carrier would be liable; but they would not be liable for a mere accident to a live animal supposing the carriage to be safe and good and properly conducted."

Remarks of the same judge looking to a modified form of liability are to be found in Carr v. Lancashire & Yorkshire R., 7 Ex. 707, and the court in McManus v. Lancashire & Yorkshire R., 2 H. & N. 693-702, refer to the opinion expressed in this latter case as entitled to "much consideration."

In the last case cited reported on appeal, 4 H. & N. 346, Earle, J., declared he found "neither reason nor principle for holding that defendants were bound to receive living animals as common carriers." See also similar remarks by Pollock, C. B., and Martin, B., in Pardington v. South Wales R., 1 H. & N., at page 396; and by the judges in Harrison v. London & Brighton R., 2 B. & S. 122, 152.

In Blower v. Great Western R., L. R. 7 C. P. 655, the question arose on the following facts. Thirty-three head of cattle were delivered to defendant for transportation from one point on its line to another. They were loaded in a proper way. A bullock escaped from one of the trucks, and was found dead on the track. Its death was caused solely by its escape from the truck, and it had made its escape either by climbing over the top rail or forcing its way between the iron bars of the truck. All actual negligence on the part of the company was negated. The court, Willes and Keating, JJ., held that the company was not liable. Willes, J., said: "The question as to their liability may turn on the distinction between accidents which happen by reason of some vice inherent in the animals themselves, or disposition producing unruliness or frenzy, and accidents which are not the result of inherent vice or unruliness of the animals themselves. It comes to much the same thing whether we say that one who carries live animals is not liable in the one event, but is liable in the other; or that is, he is not a common carrier at all, because there are some accidents other than those falling within the exception of the act of God and the queen's energies for which he is not responsible. By the expression 'vice,' I mean that sort of vice which, by its internal development, tends to the destruction or injury of the animal or thing to be carried, and which is likely to lead to such a result. If such a cause of destruction exists and produces that result in the course of the journey, the liability of the carrier is necessarily excluded from the contract between the parties."

Shortly afterwards the same point arose in Kendall v. London & Southwestern R., L. R. 7 Ex. 373. There a saddled horse was placed in a proper horse-box. According to the usual custom, the saddle was left on with the stirrups hanging down. At the end of the journey the horse was found injured in the forearm and fetlock. The ruling in the preceding case was cited and followed, Bramwell, B., adding: "But if it so hurt itself from the defendants' negligence or from any misfortune happening to the train, though not through any negligence of the defendants, as, for instance, from the horse-box leaving the line owing to some obstruction maliciously put on it, then the defendants would, as insurers, be liable."

In Blower v. Great Western, etc., R., L. R. 7 C. P. 655; 41 L. J. C. P. 268; 27 L. T. N. S. 883; 20 W. R. 776, Mr. Justice Willes remarked that the conflict of opinion found in the authorities respecting the liabilities of carriers of animals "may turn out after all to be a mere controversy of words."

In Clarke v. Rochester, etc., R. Co., 14 N. Y. 570; s. c., 67 Am. Dec. 205; Denio, C. J., held that a railroad company acting as a common carrier of animals is not liable for their dying or being injured from causes arising from their animal nature and propensities, and which diligent care could not have prevented; but is liable, in the absence of special agreement or proof of inevitable accident, for loss or damage which might have been avoided by use of care and foresight, whether due to the conduct of the animals themselves or to incidents of the company's business. "A bale of goods or other inanimate chattel may be so stowed as that absolute safety may be attained, except in transportation by water, where the carrier usually excepts the perils of the navigation, and except in cases of inevitable accident. The rule established from motives of policy which charges the carrier in almost all cases is not, therefore, unreasonable in its application to such property. But the carrier of animals by a mode of conveyance opposed to their habits and instincts, has no much means of securing absolute safety. They may die of fright or by refusing to eat, or they may—notwithstanding every precaution—destroy themselves in attempting to break away from the fastenings by which they are secured in the vehicle used to transport them, or they may kill each other. In such cases, supposing all proper care and foresight to have been exercised by the carrier, it would be unreasonable in a high degree to charge him with the loss. . . . Where, however, the cause of the damage for which recompense is sought is unconnected with the conduct or propensities of the animal undertaken to be carried, the ordinary responsibilities of the carrier should attach."

"Palmer v. Grand Junction R. Co., 4 Mee. & W. 749, was the case of an action against a railway company for negligence in carrying horses, by which one was killed and others injured; but the damage was occasioned by the carriages running off the track of the road down an embankment, and the case did not turn at all on the peculiarity of the freight, but mainly on the question whether the defendants had limited their responsibility by a notice. The jury found that notice had not been given, and that the defendants had been guilty of gross negligence. Mr. Baron Parke, in giving the opinion of the court, declared that the common law duty of carriers was cast upon the defendants. The precise question now before us was not discussed, but it was assumed that the law of carriers applied to the case. There is no reason why it should not, in all cases of accident unconnected with the conduct of the animals. But the rule which would exempt the carrier altogether from accidents arising out of the peculiar character of the freight, irrespective of the question of negligence, would be equally unreasonable. It would relieve the carrier altogether from those necessary precautions which any person becoming the bailee for hire of animals is bound to exercise, and the owner, where he did not himself assume the duty of seeing to them, would be wholly at the mercy of the carrier. The nature of the case does not call for any such relaxation of the rule, and considering the law of carriers to be established upon considerations of sound policy, we would not depart from it, except where the reason upon which it is based wholly fails, and then no further than the cause for the exception requires."

In Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. Reynolds, 8 Kan. 623, the court observes: "It is claimed there is a difference between live stock and other property, as to the responsibility assumed by a carrier in its transportation; that the voluntary motion of the stock introduces an element of danger in the transportation against which neither reason nor authority requires that the carrier insure; that, inasmuch as it is customary that the shipper, or some one for him, accompany the stock, there is only a qualified or partial delivery to the carrier; and also, that proof that a railroad company has suitable cars, and is engaged in the business of carrying cattle, is not proof that it is a common carrier as to such cattle, because to insure their safe transportation requires yards and stables, with conveniences for feeding both at the termini and along the route, as well as a corps of experienced stockmen to take care of them in the transit. These last, as it seems to us, are duties incident to the employment and not elements to determine its character. Engaging in the business of transporting cattle, it becomes a duty to provide suitable facilities therefor. Not the manner of doing the work, but the fact of an engaging in the business, is the test laid down in the books for determining the character of the carrier."

In Kimball v. Rutland, etc., R., 26 Vt. 247, Isham, J., observes: "It is immaterial whether transportation of cattle is regarded as their (railroad companies') principal employment, or whether it is incidental and subordinate: the fact that they have undertaken such transportation for hire, and for such persons as

"These cases have been considered as establishing in the English law the principle, whatever doubts might have been previously cast upon the question by the opinions of learned judges, that the carriers of live animals incur the responsibilities of common carriers as to such freight; but that, at the same time, where an injury has happened to them it is competent for the carrier to show that it occurred through the 'proper vice' of the animal, and not from any negligence on his part. And in this country, with great unanimity, the duty and liability of the common carrier as to such freight have been defined with exactly the same limitations and exceptions."<sup>1</sup>

Under another branch of this title will be found the statutory limitations placed upon the carriers' freedom to contract in England. Aside from the fact that such regulations are founded upon the assumption that carriers of live stock are common carriers, the judicial construction placed upon these provisions seems to permit no alternative opinion.

(b) Michigan.—In Michigan the law is settled to the effect that cattle, being in their nature much more liable to injury and loss in transportation than property generally transported by that mode of conveyance, impose greater risks, of a different character, demanding more labor and special arrangements for their protection, and do not come within the reasons which, by the common law, imposed upon common carriers the obligation to receive and transport, and the duty of care and custody of property, and made them insurers against loss or injury.<sup>2</sup> Accordingly, in that State, choose to employ them, establishes their relation of common carriers, and with it the duties and obligations which grow out of it."

It has been pointed out that where injury or loss occurs to live stock being transported by a railroad, a slight difference in the facts of the occurrence may change the liability. A horse slips or falls, or kicks or plunges, or in some way hurts itself. If it does so from no cause other than its own inherent propensities—its "proper vice"—that is to say, from fright or temper, or struggling to keep its legs, the carrier is not liable. But if it so hurts itself from any act of negligence of the carrier, or from any misfortune happening to the train, though not through any negligence of the carrier, as for instance from the horse-box leaving the line, owing to some obstruction maliciously put on it, then the carrier as an insurer would be liable. Redman's Law of Railway Carriers (2d Ed.), p. 123; Kendall v. London, etc., R. Co., 41 L. J. Ex. 184; L. R. 7 Ex. 373, per Bramwell, B.; Nugent v. Smith, 45 L. J. C. P. 697; L. R. 1 C. P. D. 423.

The carrier may exclude the carrying of live stock from their public profession as carriers, and receive and carry them only on special contracts as ordinary bailees for hire. North Eastern, etc., R. Co. v. Richardson, 4 L. J. C. P. 60; L. R. 7 C. P. 75.

Presumptions.—The presumption where an accident occurs to a horse on the rail is that it has happened through the vice of the animal, it being shown that it is quiet and accustomed to travel, and also that no accident has occurred likely to harm it. Kendall v. London, etc., R. Co., L. R. 7 Exch. 373.

1. Hutchinson on Carriers, § 221.

2. Michigan.—In Michigan Southern, etc., R. Co. v. McDonough, 21 Mich. 165. Christiancy, J., observes: "But the transportation of cattle and live stock by common carriers by land was unknown to the common law, when the duties and responsibilities of common carriers were fixed, making them insurers against all losses and injuries not arising from the act of God or of the public enemies. These responsibilities and duties were fixed with reference to kinds of property railroad companies are not common carriers of live stock unless they have assumed that character, and cannot be compelled by law to carry it as freight nor be held responsible for it as common carriers.<sup>1</sup>

(c) Kentucky and Tennessee.—In Kentucky and Tennessee carriers of live stock are not insurers, though if an injury occurs to an animal en route the prima facie presumption is that the accident was occasioned by the fault of the company.<sup>2</sup>

(d) United States Generally.—In nearly all the States the rule is now well established that the liability of carriers of live stock is the common-law liability of common carriers of other property, subject only to the qualification that the carrier may be excused from liability where the loss is attributable to the intrinsic qualities or nature of the animals, provided he is himself free from negligence, or is exempted by a valid contract protecting him.<sup>3</sup> This rule seems to have been affirmed in the following States: Alabama, California, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Maine, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Ne- involving, in their transportation, much fewer risks, and of quite a different kind, from those which are incident to the transportation of live stock by railroad. Animals have wants of their own to be supplied; and this is a mode of conveyance at which, from their nature and habits, most animals instinctively revolt; and cattle especially, crowded in a dense mass, frightened by the noise of the engine, the rattling, jolting, and frequent concussions of the cars, in their frenzy injure each other by trampling, plunging, goring, or throwing down; and frequently on long routes, their strength exhausted by hunger and thirst, fatigue and fright, the weak easily fall and are trampled upon, and, unless helped up, must soon die. Hogs also swelter and perish. See per Parke, Baron, in Carr v Lancashire & Y. R. Co., 7 Exch. 712; Denio, J., in Clarke v. Rochester & S. R. Co., 14 N. Y. 573. It is a mode of transportation which, but for its necessity, would be gross cruelty and indictable as such. The risk may be greatly lessened by care and vigilance, by feeding and watering at proper intervals, by getting up those that are down, and otherwise. But this imposes a degree of care and an amount of labor so different from what is required in reference to other kinds of property, that I do not think this kind of property falls within the reasons upon which the common law liability of common carriers was fixed."

1. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co. v. Perkins, 25 Mich. 329; overruling Michigan, etc.,

R. Co. v. Hall, 6 Mich. 243; and Great Western, etc., R. Co. v. Hawkins, 18 Mich. 427.

2. Kentucky and Tennessee.—In Kentucky and Tennessee, carriers of live stock are not insurers, though if an injury occurs to an animal en route the prima facie presumption is that the accident has been occasioned by the fault of the company. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Hedger, 9 Bush (Ky.), 645; Baker v. Louisville & N. R. Co., 10 Lea (Tenn.), 304; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 149, where it was held that railroads are not bound as common carriers of live stock, and only relieved of liability by the act of God or the public enemy. As carriers of live stock they are bound to use due and proper care, and deliver in reasonable time. See also Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Jackson, 6 Heisk. 273.

3. Carrier is not liable where the injury arose from the viciousness, unruliness, fright, refusal to eat, restiveness, and similar causes, attributable to the nature and propensities of the animals themselves, provided the carrier has been guilty of no negligence causing the loss. Evans v. Fitchburg, etc., R. Co., 111 Mass. 142; Penn v. Buffalo, etc., R. Co., 49 N. Y. 204; s. c., 10 Am. Rep. 355; Cragin v. New York, etc., R. Co., 51 N. Y. 61; s. c., 10 Am. Rep. 559; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Harmon, 12 Ill. App. 54; Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Jurey, 8 Ill. App. 160; Wabash, etc., R. Co. v. McCasland, 11 Ill. App. 491; Illinois, etc., R. Co. v. Breisford, 13 Ill. App. 251;

braska, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Vermont, Virginia, West Virginia, Wisconsin,<sup>1</sup>

Hall v. Renfro, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 51; Maslin v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 14 W. Va. 180.

1. Alabama.—South Alabama, etc., R. Co. v. Henlein, 52 Ala. 606; East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Johnston, 75 Ala. 596; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 489.

California.—Agnew v. Contra Costa R. Co., 27 Cal. 425.

Georgia.—East Tenn., etc., R. Co. v. Whittle, 27 Ga. 535; Georgia, etc., R. Co. v. Spears, 66 Ga. 489; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 81; Georgia, etc., R. Co. v. Beattie, 66 Ga. 438; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 75; Mitchell v. Georgia, etc., R. Co., 68 Ga. 644.

Illinois.—Illinois Central, etc., R. Co. v. Crabtree, 19 Ill. 136; Ohio, etc., R. Co. v. Dunbar, 20 Ill. 623; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Dorman, 72 Ill. 504.

Indiana.—In Lake Shore, etc., R. Co. v. Bennett, 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 391, it was held that where a person ships cattle over a railway under a special contract of carriage, he cannot elect to charge the railroad company with the liabilities of a common carrier.

Iowa.—German v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 38 Iowa, 127; McCoy v. Keokuk, etc., R. Co., 44 Iowa, 424.

By the Iowa code carriers are forbidden to exempt themselves by any contract, receipt, rule or regulation, from the liability of a common carrier. Code of Iowa, sec. 1308; McDaniel v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 24 Iowa, 412. Compare Kinnick v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 55.

Reed, J., observes: "Counsel for appellant contend that, as the cause of the injury in question was connected with the natural propensities and characteristics of the property, it was one against which the carrier is not held to be an insurer, and that the instruction is erroneous on that ground. It was held, in effect, by this court in McCoy v. Keokuk & D. M. R. Co., 44 Iowa, 424, that, when the cause of damage for which recompense is sought is connected with the character or propensities of the animals undertaken to be carried, the ordinary responsibility of the carrier does not attach. The reasons for the exception to the general rule as to the liability of the carrier, which arises when he undertakes to transport live stock, are very apparent. There are dangers incident to the transportation of that character of property which are created entirely by the disposition and propensities of the animals, and against which it is often impossible for the carrier to make adequate provision. But the rule of the common law is modified only so far as is rendered necessary by the character of the property in this respect. In every other respect the carrier is held to be an insurer of the property. In our opinion, the present case is not within the exception to the rule. The injury was caused by the 'piling up' of the hogs while struggling to get near to or away from the doors of the car. The propensity, however, was to do this only when the train was standing. Owing to the obstruction of the track, it was kept standing at a station for twelve hours, and, without doubt, it was during that time that the injury occurred. But the danger was not one against which provision could not be made. The injury might have been prevented, either by unloading the hogs or giving them personal attention while in the car. There is no claim that this could not have been done, and we think defendant was bound to do it. As there was nothing shown which tended to take the case out of the general rule, the court did right in instructing that defendant was bound by that rule."

In an action against a railroad company for injuries to a "thoroughbred short-horn cow" shipped over their road, evidence that railroad companies in Iowa do not, and never have by uniform custom, held themselves out as common carriers of live stock of this description, is inadmissible, as such a custom is under Iowa Code, § 1308, void: nor can the defendant show that plaintiff, in previous shipments, had signed contracts releasing the company from any liability above the value of common stock, and that he shipped the cow under the same arrangement. McCune v. B., C. R. & N. R. Co., 52 Iowa, 600.

Kansas.—Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. Reynolds, 8 Kans. 623; Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. Nicholls, 9 Kans. 235; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Piper, 13 Kans. 510.

Louisiana.—Peters v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., 16 La. Ann. 222.

Maine.—Sager v. The Railroad, 31 Me. 228.

Massachusetts.—Smith v. New Haven, etc., R. Co., 12 Allen, 531; Evans v. Fitchburg, etc., R. Co., 111 Mass. 142;

United States Courts.<sup>1</sup>

(e) Injuries Arising from Intrinsic Qualities of Live Stock.—The following are instances in which the carrier has been excused for an injury or loss resulting from the intrinsic qualities and propensities of the live stock transported, or from the owner's negligence: Where a horse's shoes were not removed, or a halter was attached to his jaw in such a manner as to cause restiveness;<sup>2</sup> where the consignor assumed to load the cars and did so improperly;<sup>3</sup> where an animal dies or is injured by heat or cold, or want of food, while in course of transportation, without any negligence on the part of the carrier;<sup>4</sup> where one of a pair of horses kicks and kills or injures the other in the car, if the car was suitable, and proper care was taken to prevent such injuries;<sup>5</sup> where a mule, being transported in a railroad car, kicks through the slats at the side of the car and is killed, without fault of the carrier, it being the nature of the mule to kick;<sup>6</sup> where an unruly jackass is thrown or falls from a ferry-boat, through his own restlessness or viciousness, the

Squire v. New York Central, etc., R. Co., 98 Mass. 239.

Minnesota.—Moulton et al. v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 31 Minn. 85; s. c., 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 13; Lindsley v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 33 N. W. Rep. 7.

Mississippi.—Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Abelo, 60 Miss. 117.

Missouri.—Clark v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 64 Mo. 440; Rice v. Kansas Pacific R. Co., 63 Mo. 314; Oxley v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 65 Mo. 629; Dawson v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 76 Mo. 514; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Cleary, 77 Mo. 634.

Nebraska.—Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Washburn, 5 Neb. 117.

New Hampshire.—Rexford v. Smith, 52 N. H. 355.

New York.—Cragin v. New York, etc., R. Co., 51 N. Y. 61; Penn v. Buffalo, etc., R. Co., 49 N. Y. 204; Harris v. Northern, etc., R. Co., 20 N. Y. 232; Mynard v. Binghamton & N. Y. R. Co., 71 N. Y. 180; Holsapple v. Rome, W. & O. R. Co., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 487.

In Clarke v. Rochester, etc., R. Co., 14 N. Y. 750, it was held that the carrier is responsible for any injury which can be prevented by foresight, vigilance, and care, although arising from the conduct of the animals.

Where live stock is killed under circumstances exonerating the carrier, he is not liable for not delivering their carcasses. Lee v. Marsh, 28 How. Pr. 275.

North Carolina.—Lee v. The Railroad, 72 N. Car. 236.

Ohio.—Wilson v. Hamilton, 4 Ohio St. 722; Welsh v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 10 Ohio St. 65.

Pennsylvania.—Kitz v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 3 Phila. 82; Powell v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 32 Pa. St. 414.

South Carolina.—Bamberg v. South Carolina R. Co., 9 S. Car. 61.

Vermont.—Kimball v. Rutland, etc., R. Co., 26 Vt. 247.

Virginia.—Virginia, etc., R. Co. v. Sayers, 26 Gratt. 328.

West Virginia.—Maslin v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 14 W. Va. 180.

Wisconsin.—Morrison v. Phillips, etc., Constr. Co., 44 Wis. 405.

1. United States Courts.—In Michigan Central, etc., R. Co. v. Myrick (U. S.), 9 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 25, it was held that as far as the route is concerned, the duty of a railroad as a carrier of live animals is the same as its duty as a carrier of goods.

2. Evans v. Fitchburg, etc., R. Co., 111 Mass. 142.

3. Ohio, etc., R. Co. v. Dunbar, 20 Ill. 723; East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Whittle, 27 Ga. 535; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Van Dresor, 22 Wis. 511; East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Johnston, 75 Ala. 596; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 489.

4. Maslin v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 14 W. Va. 180; Kirby v. Great Western, etc., R. Co., 18 L. T. N. S. 658.

5. Evans v. Fitchburg, etc., R. Co., 111 Mass. 142.

6. Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Jurey, 8 Ill. App. 160.

ferryman being guilty of no negligence; <sup>1</sup> where the animal takes fright, after the journey is ended, at a light displayed by a servant of the company, and dashes upon the track and is killed; <sup>2</sup> where a bullock escapes, by his own exertions, from the truck in which he is being transported, without negligence by the carrier, the truck itself being sufficient, and is lost; <sup>3</sup> where an animal while being carried perishes, partly through its own unruly conduct, and partly from the effects of a storm, the carrier being chargeable with no negligence; <sup>4</sup> where horses being transported by water, in consequence of a storm, break down the partitions between them, and by kicking each other some of them are killed. <sup>5</sup>

(f) Carrier's Liability where his Negligence is Primary Cause of Loss or Injury.—Where the negligence of the carrier is the primary cause of the injury, although but for the nature and propensities of the live stock carried no loss need have resulted, the carrier is responsible. <sup>6</sup>

The following are examples of cases holding the carrier liable under such circumstances: Where the contract of transportation contained a clause providing that the carrier should be free from liability for any accident occasioned by the animal's restiveness, and an accident occurred through such restiveness, but the latter resulted from the negligence of the railroad company; <sup>7</sup> where hogs in course of transportation became heated from being overcrowded, and the carrier when informed of the fact neglected to apply water to them, alleging that his pump was out of repair; <sup>8</sup> where, owing to the wreck of a passenger train, a car load of hogs was delayed twelve hours without being unloaded or receiving attention, and injury resulted from "piling up" of the animals, or their struggling to get near to or away from the car doors, which

1. Hall v. Renfro, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 51.

2. Roberts v. Great Western, etc., R. Co., 4 Ad. & El. N. S. 506.

3. Blower v. Great Western, etc., R. Co., L. R. 7 C. P. 655; 41 L. J. C. P. 268; 27 L. T. N. S. 883; 20 W. R. 776.

4. Nugent v. Smith, L. R. 1 C. P. Div. 423; 45 L. J. C. P. 697; 34 L. T. N. S. 827; 25 W. R. 117.

5. Gabay v. Lloyd, 3 B. & C. 793; Lawrence v. Aberdeen, 5 B. & Ald. 107.

6. Powell v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 32 Pa. St. 414; Ritz v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 3 Phila. 82; East Tennessee, etc., R. Co., v. Whittle, 27 Ga. 535; Ohio, etc. R. Co., v. Dunbar, 20 Ill. 623; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Dorman, 72 Ill. 504; Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Strain, 81 Ill. 504; Welch v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co., 10 Ohio St. 65; Great Western, etc., R. Co., v. Hawkins, 18 Mich. 427; s. c., 17 Mich. 57; Clarke v. Rochester, etc., R. Co., 14 N. Y. 570; Conger v. Hudson River, etc., R.

Co., 6 Duer (N. Y.), 375; Harris v. Northern, etc., R. Co., 20 N. Y. 232; Smith v. New Haven, etc., R. Co., 12 Allen (Mass.), 531; Evans v. Fitchburg, etc., R. Co., 111 Mass. 142; Pratt v. Ogdensburg, etc., R. Co., 102 Mass. 557; Rhodes v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 9 Bush (Ky.), 688; Peters v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., 16 La. Ann. 222.

7. Moore v. Great Northern, etc., R. Co., L. R. 10 Irish, 95; Gill v. Manchester, etc., R. Co., 42 L. J. Q. B. 89; L. R. 8 Q. B. 186. See also Kendall v. London, etc., R. Co., L. R. 7 Ex. 373.

8. In Illinois, etc., R. Co. v. Adams, 42 Ill. 474, the hogs being transported by the carrier became heated from being overcrowded, and the carrier when informed of the fact, neglected to apply water to them, and was held liable for the injury resulting from such neglect, in spite of his excuse that his pump was out of repair. See also Toledo, etc., R. Co., v. Thompson, 71 Ill. 434.

propensity is only exhibited when the train is standing;<sup>1</sup> where, because of an unreasonable or negligent delay, animals perish of cold;<sup>2</sup> where, by leaving a car window open, or like negligence, in consequence of which the animals escape, even though the contract expressly stipulates against liability for escapes.<sup>3</sup>

2. Carriers' Duty to Receive Live Stock.—The first important consequence of the rule that carriers of live stock are common carriers is that which imposes upon them the duty to receive and transport the animals consigned, and they are liable in damages for a refusal without reasonable excuse.<sup>4</sup> The carrier cannot excuse his failure in this duty upon the ground that the live stock was received from a connecting line on Sunday;<sup>5</sup> or because of a statute prohibiting railroad companies from carrying Texas or Cherokee cattle, such statute being unconstitutional.<sup>6</sup>

In Michigan, in accordance with the doctrines there in force, a railroad company is not bound to receive and carry live stock unless it has held itself out as a common carrier.<sup>7</sup>

3. Notices Limiting Liability.—The carrier in transporting live stock cannot restrict its common-law liability by notice on a placard, bill of lading, or receipt; the notice must be embodied in a special contract with the shipper.<sup>8</sup>

4. Contracts Limiting Liability.—The consideration of the nature and validity of the contracts of carriers of live stock would involve the repetition of what properly belongs under other subdivi-

1. In Kinnick v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 55, the defendant railway company received a car load of hogs from the plaintiff for shipment. Owing to the wreck of a passenger train, the train on which plaintiff's hogs were shipped was delayed twelve hours. When the train arrived at its destination a number of the hogs were dead and others badly injured. The defendant offered to prove on the trial that the delay occurred without fault on its part, and that it caused the train to be sent forward as soon as possible, but the evidence was excluded. The defendant claimed that the car was overloaded, and that the injury was caused by such overloading. Held, that a common carrier of hogs is an insurer against injury caused by the "piling up" of the hogs while struggling to get near to or away from the car doors, that as their propensity to do this is only while the train is standing, they should be unloaded or given personal attention while the train is delayed.

2. Moulton v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 31 Minn. 85; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 781; 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas., 13.

3. Indianapolis, etc., R. Co., v. Allen, 31 Ind. 394; Oxley v. St. Louis, etc., R.

Co., 65 Mo. 629. See also for numerous other examples of the application of the same principle, cases cited infra, under other branches of this title.

4. South Alabama, etc., R. Co. v. Henlein, 52 Ala. 606; Ballentine v. North Missouri, etc., R. Co., 40 Mo. 491; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Nicholson, 61 Tex. 491; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Erickson, 91 Ill. 613; Wabash, etc., R. Co. v. Black, 11 Bradw. (Ill.) 465.

5. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Lehman, 56 Md. 209; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Erickson, 91 Ill. 613; Guinn v. Wabash, etc., R. Co., 20 Mo. App. 453.

6. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Erickson, 91 Ill. 613.

7. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co. v. Perkins, 25 Mich. 329; s. c., 12 Am. Rep. 275.

8. Art. "Transportation of Live Stock," 19 Cent. L. J. 163; Code of Georgia, § 2068; Ill. Rev. Stats. p. 1159, § 82; Railway & Canal Traffic Act, 17 & 18 Vict. c. 31; Georgia, etc., R. Co. v. Spears, 66 Ga. 485; Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Jurey, 8 Bradw. (Ill.) 160; Wabash, etc., R. Co. v. Black, 11 Bradw. (Ill.) 465; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Harmon, 12 Bradw. (Ill.) 54.

sions of this title. The limitations upon the carrier's freedom to contract have likewise been stated under another title.<sup>1</sup> For reasons already explained, these limitations are somewhat modified in their application to carriers of live stock, and it is these modifications only which now need to be mentioned.

(a) English Statutes and their Construction.—Under the English Railway and Canal Traffic Act,<sup>2</sup> the contract of the carrier must be "just and reasonable" in order to be valid. It is evident that limitations of liability secured to the carrier by contract might be just and reasonable where live stock is in question, and the same conditions still amount to a contract securing against liability for negligence if he undertook the transportation of other goods. There is no such thing as reasonableness in the abstract,<sup>3</sup> and a condition in a contract applying to live animals and dead stock may be good as to the one and void as to the other.<sup>4</sup>

The following conditions in the contracts of carriers of live stock have been held to be "just and reasonable:" Conditions exempting the carrier from "all liability," "all risk," etc., in some of the earlier cases;<sup>5</sup> releasing the carrier from liability for "loss of market;"<sup>6</sup> from "loss or damage in the loading or unloading, from suffocation, or from being trampled on, bruised, or otherwise injured in transit," the claim being for suffocated and injured cattle sent by rail;<sup>7</sup> where, with consignor's knowledge of the carrier's rates, the latter imposed a condition that horses should be carried at owner's risk by passenger train and in horse-boxes, but at lower rates by goods train and in cattle trucks, and the horses were injured while being carried subject to former conditions, but that such contract would not protect the carrier from non-delivery where the contract was to deliver within a reasonable time;<sup>8</sup> where

1. CARRIERS OF GOODS, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.

2. The Railway and Canal Traffic Act. 17 and 18 Vict. c. 31, s. 7, 1854, provides as follows: "Every such company as aforesaid shall be liable for the loss of, or for any injury done to any horses, cattle or other animals, or to any articles, goods, or things, in the receiving, forwarding, or delivering thereof, occasioned by the neglect or default of such company or its servants, notwithstanding any notice, condition, or declaration made and given by such company contrary thereto, or in any wise limiting such liability; every such notice, condition, or declaration being hereby declared to be null and void; provided always that nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent the said companies from making such conditions with respect to the receiving, forwarding, and delivering of any of the said animals, articles, goods, or things as shall be adjudged by the court or judge before whom any question relating thereto shall be tried to be just and reasonable."

3. Lewis v. Great Western, etc., Ry., 47 L. J. Q. B. 131; L. R. 3 Q. B. D. 45.

4. Rooth v. North East Ry., 36 L. J. Ex. 83; L. R. 2 Ex. 173.

5. Gannell v. Ford, 5 L. T. N. S. 604; McCance v. London, etc., R., 7 H. & N. 477; 31 L. J. Ex. 65; 7 Jur. N. S. 1304; 10 W. R. 154; Pardington v. South Wales, etc., R., 1 H. & N. 392; 26 L. J. C. P. 105; 2 Jur. N. S. 1210; Chippendale v. Lancashire, etc., R., 7 Eng. L. & Eq. 395; 21 L. J. Q. B. 22; 15 Jur. N. S. 1106.

6. White v. Great Western Ry., 26 L. J. C. P. 158; 2 C. B. N. S. 7.

7. Pardington v. South Wales Ry., 26 L. J. Ex. 105; 1 H. & N. 392. Compare Rooth v. North Eastern Ry., 36 L. J. Ex. 83.

8. Robinson v. Great Western Ry., 35 L. J. C. P. 123; D'Arc v. London, a declaration of the value of an animal worth more than a specified sum was demanded and a higher rate imposed, and the condition was added that by such declaration the owner shall be bound, the company not being in any event liable to any greater amount than the value so declared.<sup>1</sup> This decision was subsequently overruled, and the condition construed to be unreasonable, as framed to cover even the wilful misconduct of the carrier.<sup>2</sup>

Conditions in a contract for the carriage of animals, although prima facie unreasonable, become just and reasonable if a reasonable alternative is offered to the consignor.<sup>3</sup>

The following conditions in contracts of carriers of live stock have been held to be unjust and unreasonable limitations of their liability: Conditions providing against liability for any injury by over-carriage, detention or delay, "however caused;"<sup>4</sup> injuries caused by the default or negligence of the masters and crews of certain vessels operated by the company;<sup>5</sup> where owner assumes "all risks of conveyance, loading and unloading whatsoever, as the company will not be liable for any injury or damage, however caused;"<sup>6</sup> where condition exempted from liability for accident etc., Ry., L. R. 9 C. P. 325; 22 W. R. 919.

1. Harrison v. London, etc., Ry., 31 L. J. Q. B. 113; 2 B. & S. 152.

2. Ashenden v. London, etc., Ry., 28 W. R. 511.

3. Corrigan v. Great Northern, etc., R., L. R. 6 Ir. 90; Ruddy v. Midland, etc., R., L. R. 8 Ir. 232; Gallagher v. Great Western, etc., R., L. R. 8 Ir. C. L. 326; Manchester, etc., R. v. Brown, L. R. 8 H. L. Cas. 703; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 174.

The burden of showing reasonableness of the condition in the contract or in the alternative contract is on the carrier. Ruddy v. Midland, etc., R., L. R. 8 Ir. 232; Lewis v. Great Western R., 47 L. J. Q. B. 131; L. R. 3 Q. B. Div. 45.

In Pardington v. South Wales R., 1 H. & N. 392, the facts were these: The plaintiff despatched certain cattle by railway in charge of a drover. At the time of shipping the cattle the drover sent a memorandum to him by the servants of the company containing the following stipulations: "The company is to be held free from all risks or responsibility in respect to any loss or damage arising in the loading or unloading, from suffocation or being trampled on, bruised or otherwise injured in transit, from fire, or from any other cause whatsoever, and the company is not to be held responsible for carriage or delivery within any certain or definite time, nor in time for any particular market." The drover was then given a free pass, and the cattle were placed not in the usual cattle trucks, but into two vans usually employed for the transportation of goods; these vans were tightly shut in on every side and could only be opened by a sliding lid. The drover having superintended the shipping of the cattle and having raised no objections to the vans, was placed in a railway carriage and transit was begun. On arriving at the point of destination it was found that by accident the top of one of the vans had become closed, and most of the cattle therein were discovered to be dead. It was held, however, that the stipulation as to carriage signed by the drover was just and reasonable in its terms, and exempted the railway company from liability. Compare Rooth v. North Eastern, etc., R., 36 L. J. Exch. 83.

4. Allday v. Great Western, etc., R., 5 B. & S. 903.

5. Doolan v. Directors, etc., of the Midland R. Co., L. R. 2 App. Cas. 792.

6. In McManus v. Lancashire, etc., R. Co., 4 H. & N. 327, a person upon delivering certain horses to a railroad company signed a ticket containing the following: "This ticket is issued, subject to the owner's undertaking all risks of conveyance, loading and unloading, whatsoever, as the company will not be liable for any injury or damage, however caused, occurring to live stock of any description, travelling upon the railway or in their vehicles." This was ruled not caused by the animal's restiveness, and such restiveness was the result of the carrier's negligence;<sup>1</sup> conditions exempting from "all liability" or from liability "in any case;"<sup>2</sup> that owner shall assume all risks from negligence, default or defects in the stations or cars, etc.; conditions exempting from liability for "kicking, plunging, or restiveness," and carrier permitted the animal to escape when excited, so that she jumped the fence, ran upon the track, and was killed; where carrier was not accountable for the "correct selection of the owner's cattle, or loading or unloading;"<sup>4</sup> where carrier is not liable "in any case" for loss of an animal above a specified value unless the value is declared;<sup>5</sup> where condition exempts carrier from the liability for loss, however occasioned.<sup>6</sup>

(b) United States Generally.—In the United States it is the well-settled rule, that while the carrier may protect himself against the unusual risk of transporting live stock by reasonable conditions in limitation of his common-law liability, he cannot exempt himself from liability for loss or injury resulting from his own negligence.<sup>7</sup> to be a just and reasonable condition, and the truck upon which the horses were placed being defective and the animals injured in consequence, the railway company was held liable accordingly.

1. Moore v. Great Northern, etc., R., L. R. 10 Ir. 95.

2. Gregory v. West Midland R., 2 H. & C. 944; 33 L. J. Ex. 155; 10 Jur. N. S. 243; 12 W. R. 528; Lloyd v. Walesford, etc., R., 15 Ir. C. L. 37; 9 L. T. N. S. 89; Ashendon v. London, etc., R., L. R. 5 Ex. Div. 190; 42 L. T. N. S. 586; 28 W. R. 511; 44 J. P. 203.

A condition that the owner shall assume all risks from negligence, default or defects in the station or cars is unreasonable. Rooth v. North Eastern R. Co., L. R. 2 Ex. 173; 36 L. J. Ex. 83; 15 L. T. N. S. 62.

3. Gill v. Manchester, etc., R. Co., L. R. 8 Q. B. 186; 42 L. J. Q. B. 89; 28 L. T. N. S. 587; 21 W. R. 525.

4. In McNally v. Lancashire, etc., R. Co., L. R. 8 Ir. 81, the contract released the carrier from accountability for the "correct selection of the owner's cattle or loading or unloading," but the exemption was held unreasonable because releasing from liability for negligence, although the contract was an alternative one.

5. Ashendon v. London, etc., R. Co., L. R. 5 Ex. Div. 190; 42 L. T. N. S. 586; 28 W. R. 511; 44 J. P. 203.

6. Booth v. N. E. R. Co., L. R. 2 Exch. 173.

Or that the company "is to be free from all risk and responsibility with respect to any loss or damage arising in the loading and unloading, from suffocation, or from being trampled upon, bruised, or otherwise injured in the transit, from fire, or from any other cause whatsoever." Or that the owner of the cattle shall be bound to see to the efficiency of the conveyance used. Gregory v. West Midland R. Co., 2 H. & C. 944.

7. Squire v. New York Central, etc., R. Co., 98 Mass. 239; Powell v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 32 Pa. St. 414; Kimball v. Rutland, etc., R. Co., 26 Vt. 247; Virginia, etc., R. Co. v. Sayers, 26 Gratt. (Va.) 328; South., etc., R. Co. v. Henlein, 52 Ala. 606; East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Johnston, 75 Ala. 596; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 489; Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Jackson, 6 Heisk. (Tenn.) 271; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Abels, 60 Miss. 1017; Georgia, etc., R. Co. v. Spears, 66 Ga. 485; Georgia, etc., R. Co. v. Beattie, 66 Ga. 438; Mitchell v. Georgia, etc., R. Co., 68 Ga. 644; Rice v. Kansas, etc., R. Co., 63 Mo. 314; Oxley v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 65 Mo. 629; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Cleary, 77 Mo. 634; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 122; Dawson v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 76 Mo. 514; Sturgeon v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 65 Mo. 569; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Piper, 13 Kans. 510; Goggin v. Kansas, etc., R. Co., 12 Kans. 416; Kansas, etc., R. Co. v. Simpson, 30 Kans. 645; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 158; Illinois, etc., R. Co. v. Morrison, 19 Ill. 136; Wabash, etc., R. Co. v. Black, 11 Ill. App. 465; Welsh v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co., 10 Ohio St. 65; Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Allen, 31

The following are examples of reasonable conditions limiting the carrier's responsibility: A stipulation in a contract that the owner shall care for the live stock during the journey, feed and water and load and unload them;<sup>1</sup> a stipulation against

Ind. 394; Betts v. Farmers', etc., Co., 21 Wis. 80; Morrison v. Phillips, etc., Co., 44 Wis. 405; Moulton v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 31 Minn. 85; s. c., 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 13; Maslin v. B. & O. R. Co., 14 W. Va. 180; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Hedges, 9 Bush (Ky.), 445; s. c., 15 Am. Rep. 740; Rhodes v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 9 Bush (Ky.), 688.

Some cases go even so far as to say that the company cannot by contract exempt itself from liability for the performance of any of the duties which it owes. Weish v. Pittsburg & C. R. Co., 10 Ohio St. 65; Adams Ex. Co. v. Nock, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 562; Louisville & C. R. Co. v. Hedges, 9 Bush (Ky.), 645.

Where, therefore, the owner of cattle signed a contract whereby he agreed "to take all risk of loss, injury, damage and other contingency in loading, unloading, conveyance, or otherwise," and the railroad company in the course of the transit ran the cattle upon a side track and there kept them four days and four nights without food or water, whereby many of them died, it was held that notwithstanding the special contract the company was liable. Heineman v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 31 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 430. And see to the same effect Keeney v. Grand Trunk R. Co., 59 Barb. (N. Y.) 104.

So where a contract provided that the company should not be liable in case of loss from delay of trains or any damage the property might sustain from collision, and during the transit the cars in which the animals were confined were thrown from the track by a broken rail, it was held that the company was liable for the injury sustained. Illinois Central R. Co. v. Owens, 53 Ill. 391.

Where cattle were shipped at a reduced rate under a contract that the carrier should not be liable for any injury unless occasioned by wilful negligence or fraud, it was held that the company was, under the circumstances, exempt from liability for injuries occasioned in any other way. Lee v. Marsh, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 102.

But in B. & O. R. Co. v. Brady, 32 Md. 333, it was held necessary for the defendant to show affirmatively in such case that the terms of the contract were known and assented to by the shipper of the cattle.

In Penn v. Buffalo R. Co., 49 N. Y. 204, the owner of the cattle transported agreed to assume all the risk from delays or in consequence of the animals being crowded in the cars, and agreed to load and unload them at his own risk, the company furnishing the necessary laborers to assist. A drover accompanied the cattle on the train. While in transit a snow-storm occurred whereby the train was delayed several days. The cattle might have been unloaded by building a proper platform, but this the servants of the company declined to do. In consequence several of the cattle died and the rest were seriously depreciated in value. The court held, however, that under the particular clauses in the contract the company had discharged its full duty and was not liable to respond in damages for the loss.

If the owner contracts to take care of the cattle and the railroad company stipulates that it shall not be liable in case of injury to them while en route, this is held to afford no exemption from liability if the cattle escape in consequence of a defect of the vehicle in which they are placed. Rhodes v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 9 Bush (Ky.), 688; Hawkins v. Great West. R. Co., 17 Mich. 57; s. c., 18 Mich. 427.

And even if the contract of transportation contain a clause specially exempting the railroad company from liability in case of escape, this will afford no protection if the company fail to remedy a defect in the vehicle which has been pointed out by the agent of the shipper. Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Allen, 31 Ind. 394.

An exception imposed by carriers of cattle relieving them from all liability for negligence less than gross, is invalid. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Johnston, 75 Ala. 596; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 489.

Jettison of deck animals not unreasonable contract. The Enrique, 5 Hughes C. Ct. 275.

1. South, etc., R. Co. v. Henlein, 52 Ala. 606; s. c., 23 Am. Rep. 578; Squire v. New York Central, etc., R. Co., 98 Mass. 239; Penn v. Buffalo, etc., R. Co., 49 N. Y. 204; Heineman v. Grand Trunk, etc., R. Co., 31 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 430; Cragin v. New York Central, etc., R. Co., 51 N. Y. 61. Compare Bills v. New York liability for loss by overcrowding, heat, suffocation, and the like.<sup>1</sup>

(c) New York.—In New York, as has already been mentioned under another title, it is well settled that the carrier may make a contract the effect of which will be to release him from liability for his own negligence. In accordance with this rule, where railroad company contracts for exemption from liability for the negligence of its servants or the insecurity of its cars, it will not be liable for an injury to stock carried in a grain car, unsafe for stock but suitable for grain.<sup>3</sup>

(d) Notices of Claim for Damages.—The carrier may stipulate by contract that notice of a claim for damages shall be given within a specified time in order to be valid, and such a stipulation is regarded as reasonable. The construction upon these stipulations must be reasonable, and adapted to the circumstances of each case.<sup>4</sup>

Central, etc., R. Co., 84 N. Y. 5; Dunn v. Hannibal, etc., R. Co., 68 Mo. 268; Bryant v. S. W. R. Co., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 388.

The shipper of cattle by railway having assumed by special contract the duty of loading and unloading, and having accepted and loaded a car without objection, knowing that it was not "bedded," cannot hold the railroad company liable for negligence in failing to bed, or for insufficient bedding of the car. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Johnston, 75 Ala. 506; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 489.

1. A carrier of animals, in consideration of a reduced rate of freight and a free pass to the shipper, may stipulate with the shipper for exemption from liability by reason of overloading, suffocation, heat, fire, and the like. Georgia, etc., R. Co. v. Beatie, 66 Ga. 438; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 75. So also for exemption from liability except for damage by collision, or running off the track. Georgia, etc., R. Co. v. Spears, 66 Ga. 485; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 81.

A railroad company transporting live stock may contract with the shipper for a consideration that the company shall be released from all liability for damages accruing to the stock, disconnected and apart from the conduct or running of its trains, such as damages from overloading or heat. Mitchell v. Georgia, etc., R. Co., 68 Ga. 646.

2. See CARRIERS OF GOODS, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.

3. Under an agreement to transport stock at reduced rate, the railroad company was released "from all liability for injuries which the animals may receive in consequence of . . . the negligence of said company's servants, . . . or of insecurity of cars." One of the animals was injured by a defective car-door. Held, that the company was not liable, the agreement exempting them even from the consequences of their own negligence. Wilson v. New York Central, etc., R. Co., 27 Hun (N. Y.). 149.

4. A stipulation in a contract of shipment that no claim for loss or damage will be allowed unless the same is put in "before or at the time the stock is unloaded, is valid, and will be sustained." The object of such a condition is to prevent frauds on the company. Goggin v. Kansas, etc., R. Co., 12 Kans. 416; Rice v. Kansas, etc., R. Co., 63 Mo. 314; Dawson v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 76 Mo. 514; Wabash, etc., R. Co. v. Black, 11 Bradw. (Ill.) 465; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Cleary, 77 Mo. 634; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 122; Moore v. Great Northern, etc., R. Co., L. R. 8 Ir. 95.

It seems, however, that this clause will not be strictly construed, and that if the notice of loss be given within such a reasonably short time after the loss as to completely secure the company from fraud, this is sufficient. The agents of the company may also waive the benefit of this clause. See Oxley v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 65 Mo. 629.

It is reasonable for a railroad company to stipulate with a shipper of horses that a claim for damages shall be made before the horses are mingled with other stock. Sprague v. Missouri Pacific R. Co., 34 Kans. 347.

A carrier of live stock may limit his liability by requiring a demand for damages to be made within five days after

Where such a notice required that claim for damages be made before the stock were unloaded, it was held to be unreasonable and void as applied to an injury from illness which might not be discovered before removal of the animals from the cars.<sup>1</sup> Where to such a provision the stipulation was added that notice should be given before mingling the animal with other stock, the carrier was held to be still liable where the consignee declined to receive an injured mule which the carrier had turned out upon a common, on the ground that there was no removal or mingling in the sense of the contract.<sup>2</sup> Where the consignment arrived at midnight, a verbal notice at the time, and one in writing three days later, were considered a compliance with the contract where the stock was removed to premises where the company could examine them.<sup>3</sup> A stipulation that "claims for loss and damage must be presented in thirty days from date of shipment in order to receive attention," was held to be too vague because it did not distinctly state that no right of action was to exist after failure to give the notice.<sup>4</sup>

(e) Drovers' Passes.—The fact that it is customary to furnish those accompanying stock with passes which contain a release of the carrier from liability for their personal safety, does not alter the carrier's obligation to treat them as passengers.<sup>5</sup> The contract of shipment and the pass are read together as a single contract, and the drover is therefore not considered a gratuitous passenger.<sup>6</sup>

the unloading of stock. Dawson v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 76 Mo. 514.

A contract between a railroad company and a shipper of horses stipulated that for injury to the animals shipped over the line of the road the owner should make a demand, in writing, of the agent of the company before removing them from the place of destination or from the place of delivery. Held, that this clause was not applicable where the injury was the illness of the animals, and the extent of such illness could not be known until their removal from the cars, and probably not for some time after such removal. Ormsby v. Union Pacific R. Co., 2 McCrary C. C. 48.

A provision in a contract for the transportation of cattle, that, in consideration of paying at a reduced rate, any claim for damages should be made in writing, sworn to and delivered to the general freight agent of the railroad, at a certain place, within five days from the time the cattle were unloaded, held reasonable and binding, and none the less so because plaintiff neglected to read the contract before signing it. Wabash, etc., R. Co. v. Black, 11 Ill. App. 465.

An owner may bring his action against the carrier for injury done to his animal while in transit, although he has given no notice to the carrier of the animal's injury, nor offered it to be cared for. Evans v. Dunbar, 117 Mass. 546.

1. Ormsby v. Union Pacific R. Co., 2 McCrary (C. C.), 48.

2. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Abels, 60 Miss. 1017.

3. Rice v. Kansas Pacific R. Co., 63 Mo. 314.

4. Dunn v. Hannibal, etc., R. Co., 68 Mo. 868.

5. New York Central, etc., R. Co. v. Lockwood, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 357; I. & St. L. R. Co. v. Horst, 93 U. S. 291; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Henderson, 51 Pa. St. 315; Goldey v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 30 Pa. St. 242; Virginia, etc., R. Co. v. Sayers, 26 Gratt. (Va.) 328; Fleim v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 1 Houst. (Del.) 469; O. & M. R. Co. v. Selby, 47 Ind. 471; O. & M. R. Co. v. Nickless, 71 Ind. 271; Maslin v. Baltimore & O. R. Co., 14 W. Va. 180; C. P. & A. R. Co. v. Curran, 19 Ohio St. 1; Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Garcia, 62 Tex. 285; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 384. But see Poucher v. New York Central, etc., R. Co., 49 N. Y. 263.

6. C., P. & A. R. Co. v. Curran, 19 Ohio St. 1; and cases cited in preceding note.

In the absence of a special contract,

5. Carrier's Liability During Transit.—(a) Duty to Furnish Safe Cars and Appliances.—The carrier is bound to provide safe and suitable cars and appliances for transporting live stock. Cattle-cars must be sufficiently strong to resist their struggles, and the carrier is liable for loss occasioned by his neglect in this regard, in spite of the fact that the animals are vicious and unruly, upon the principle that it is within his power to provide those which are actually and absolutely sufficient.<sup>1</sup> In such case the carrier cannot defend upon the ground that the defective cars belonged to a connecting carrier.<sup>2</sup> It seems, however, that if the consignor the fact that the shipper of a horse is allowed to pass on the same train, is not conclusive that he is to attend to its safety during the journey. Clark v. Rochester, etc., R. Co., 14 N. Y. 571.

In Bissell v. New York, etc., R. Co., 25 N. Y. 442, it was held that public policy is satisfied by holding a railroad company bound to take the risk when the passenger chooses to pay the fare established by the legislature. If he voluntarily, and for any valuable consideration, waives the right to indemnity, the contract is binding. So held where a cattle driver paid no independent consideration for the conveyance of himself, but accompanied his cattle under a contract stating them to be carried at a reduced rate, and providing that "the persons riding free to take charge of the stock, do so at their own risk of personal injury, from whatever cause."

1. Smith v. New Haven, etc., R. Co., 12 Allen (Mass.), 531; Pratt v. Ogdensburg R. Co., 102 Mass. 557; Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Strain, 81 Ill. 504; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Dorman, 72 Ill. 504; Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Jurey, 8 Bradw. (Ill.) 160; Wabash, etc., R. Co. v. Black, 11 Bradw. (Ill.) 465; Harris v. Northern Indiana R. Co., 20 N. Y. 232; Welsh v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co., 10 Ohio St. 65; Hawkins v. Great Western, etc., R. Co., 17 Mich. 57; s. c., 18 Mich. 427; Railroad Co. v. Pratt, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 123; Rhodes v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 9 Bush (Ky.), 688; Peters v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., 16 La. Ann. 222; McDaniel v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 24 Iowa, 412; Kimball v. Rutland, etc., R. Co., 26 Vt. 247; Shaw v. Great Southern, etc., R. Co., L. R. 8 Ir. 10; McManus v. Lancashire, etc., R. Co., 4 H. & N. 327; Combe v. London, etc., R. Co., 31 L. T. 613; Great Western, etc., R. Co. v. Blower, 41 L. J. C. P. 268; L. R. 7 C. P. 655. See also Wilson v. Hamilton, 4 Ohio St. 722; Willoughby v. Horridge, 12 Ad. & El. N. S. 742; 22 L. J. C. P. 90; 17 Jur. 323; Laws of Kansas, 1883, ch. 124, sec. 9; Harrison v. Missouri Pacific R. Co., 74 Mo. 364; s. c., 7 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 382.

In Smith v. New Haven, etc., R. Co., 12 Allen (Mass.), 534, the court observes: "The sufficiency of a car door to resist the struggles of animals, however unruly, it is in the power of a railroad company to secure. And its obligation in this respect is not satisfied by furnishing a reasonably strong car. The company is bound to have one absolutely and actually sufficient. It is practicable to make a car so thoroughly strong that cattle cannot break it down and fall out. For any failure to do so the carrier is responsible."

The excuse will not avail a carrier that he was acting in obedience to a government regulation where he furnishes cars which have been washed with lime and not properly cleaned, and an injury to pigs consigned to his care results therefrom. Shaw v. Great Southern, etc., R. Co., L. R. 8 Ir. 10.

2. In an action against a railroad company for injury to stock shipped in a defective car, it is no defence that the car belonged to another company, a connecting carrier. Wallingford v. Columbia, etc., R. Co. (S. Car.), 2 Southeastern Rep. 19.

A connecting carrier is not bound to transport live stock in the same cars in which they were received. McAlister v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 74 Mo. 351; s. c., 7 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 373; Combe v. London, etc., R. Co., 31 L. T. N. S. 613.

In an action to recover damages for an alleged injury to cattle in transportation to quarantine grounds by the use of improper cars, evidence that the defendant had always used similar cars for this purpose is inadmissible, although the defendant was the only road in the comhas made his own selection of vehicles, the carrier will not be liable for defects therein.<sup>1</sup>

(b) Duty to Load and Unload.—The duty to load and unload live stock is primarily upon the carrier, but he may impose this duty upon the consignor by express contract.<sup>2</sup> If, however, in monwealth engaged in the transportation of cattle to quarantine. Leonard v. Fitchburg, etc., R. Co. (Mass.), 9 North-eastern Rep. 667.

1. Illinois Central, etc., R. Co. v. Hall, 58 Ill. 409; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Van Dresar, 22 Wis. 511; Harris v. Northern Indiana, etc., R. Co., 20 N. Y. 232.

It has been held that the carrier may, by a provision to that effect in the contract, impose upon the consignor the duty of determining whether the cars and appliances are suitable and safe for the transportation of live stock. Squire v. New York Central, etc., R. Co., 98 Mass. 239; Harris v. Northern Indiana, etc., R. Co., 20 N. Y. 232. Compare Welsh v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co., 10 Ohio St. 65.

"This suggests the query whether it is not the duty of the carrier to run cars that are secure and no others, and whether in its business of transporting animals it should not be more familiar than the shipper with the construction and safeguards that make cars suitable. This view seems to be supported in England. Gregory v. West Midland, etc., R. Co., 2 H. & C. 944." Article "Transportation of Live Stock," 19 Central Law Journal, 165.

In Peters v. New Orleans, etc., R. Co., 16 La. Ann. 222, where the owner accompanied the live stock, but was not permitted to nail slats across the doors of box-cars used to transport them, and his suggestion to this effect was not followed, and in consequence of the use of solid doors the cattle were suffocated, it was held that the carrier was liable, and could not offer as an excuse that the owner accompanied the animals and at least permitted the use of these cars.

A railroad company is liable for breach of a parol contract to receive cattle for transportation on a day certain, though no bill of lading had been signed. Texas Rev. Stats. arts. 281-283, making a carrier's liability begin when the bill is signed, do not apply. Texas, etc., R. Co. v. Nicholson, 51 Tex. 491.

In Richardson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 530, it was held that a railroad company, as a common carrier, and independent of any contract between it and a shipper, is not liable for loss and expense occasioned by its failure to have cars in readiness to ship live stock on the day that the shipper notified the agent of the company he would tender them for shipment, when it is not shown that the notice given was a "reasonable notice" within the meaning of Revised Statutes of Wisconsin, sec. 1798, providing that "every railroad corporation shall, upon reasonable notice, when within its power to do so, furnish suitable cars to any person applying therefor for the transportation of freight."

In Wilson v. New York Central, etc., R. Co., 97 N. Y. 87; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 148, plaintiff shipped two horses by defendant's road under a contract by which he released the company from liability for damages resulting from the negligence of its servants or which should be occasioned by the insecurity of its cars. The horses were transported in a grain car, which was out of repair, and, while sufficient for the use for which it was intended, unsafe for the transportation of live stock. In consequence of such defect one of the horses was injured. In an action to recover damages, it did not appear but that other safe and secure cars were provided by defendant and were on hand ready for use, so that the injury might have been caused by carelessness on the part of its servants in selecting an insecure car. Held, that the only negligence shown was that of defendant's servants, from the consequences of which it was released by the contract; and that plaintiff was not entitled to recover.

2. Squire v. New York Central, etc., R., 98 Mass. 239; South, etc., R. v. Henlein, 52 Ala. 606; s. c., 23 Am. Rep. 578; Dawson v. St. Louis, etc., R., 76 Mo. 514; Penn v. Buffalo, etc., R., 49 N. Y. 204; Bills v. New York, etc., R., 84 N. Y. 5; Myers v. Wabash, etc., R., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 53; Combe v. London, etc., R., 31 L. T. N. S. 613. See also cases cited in succeeding notes.

Where a railroad company makes a contract to convey cattle, providing that two men in charge of the cattle may pass free of charge on the train, there being no express stipulation that the cattle shall be unloaded on the way, held, that the pursuance of a contract the consignor undertakes the duty to load or unload, and loss or injury result from his performance of the undertaking the carrier is released from liability.<sup>1</sup> Whatever the terms of the contract of shipment, circumstances may impose upon the carrier the duty to unload and reload, or, at least, to furnish the consignor with facilities for doing so.<sup>2</sup> cattle may be unloaded, and the men in charge have no right to decide when.

Where the unloading occurred in a State where such cattle were prohibited, and plaintiff was arrested and fined for bringing the cattle there, held, that he could not recover for damages thus incurred, though the statute under which he was fined was unconstitutional.

Where a carrier improperly surrendered the plaintiff's cattle to an officer, held, that he was not liable, the writ not being invalid on its face. McAlister v. Chicago, etc., R., 74 Mo. 351; s. c., 7 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 373.

1. Chicago, etc., R. v. Dresor, 22 Wis. 511; Ohio, etc., R. v. Dunbar, 20 Ill. 723; Texas, etc., R. v. Whittle, 27 Ga. 535. See also Evans v. Fitchburg, etc., R., 111 Mass. 142; s. c., 15 Am. Rep. 19; Bowie v. Baltimore, etc., R., 1 McArthur (C. C.), 94; Richardson v. North Eastern, etc., R., L. R. 7 C. P. 75; 41 L. J. C. P. 60; 26 L. T. N. S. 131; 20 W. R. 461. Compare Stuart v. Crawley, 2 Stark. 323.

It was agreed that a shipper of stock should load it on the cars. His men permitted the train to start before there was time for them to close the door, and a steer jumped out and was killed. Held, that the railroad company was not liable. Newby v. Chicago, etc., R., 19 Mo. App. 391.

In Squire v. New York Central, etc., R., 98 Mass. 239, where under a contract imposing upon the consignor the duty of loading live stock, he permitted the carrier's servants to do so, and to so crowd the animals that loss resulted, the carrier was held to be released from liability.

In Mitchell v. Georgia, etc., R., 68 Ga. 644, the contract exempted the carrier from liability for loss from overcrowding, but did not require the consignor to load. The carrier, in loading the hogs, so crowded them that loss resulted, but was nevertheless excused from liability. See this case doubted in 19 Cent. L. J. 165.

In an action against a railroad company to recover damages for the loss of sheep, caused by the negligence of defendant, where it appears that, in consideration of a reduction of freight rates, plaintiff agreed to take all risks of transportation, and to load and unload the sheep at his own expense and risk, and that the loss occurred by reason of the sheep being kept in the cars over night after reaching their destination. Held, that defendant is not liable, although the sheep were kept in the cars, because defendant refused to furnish men to herd the sheep during the night, and the stockpens were too small to hold them, where it further appears that defendant consented to ship the cars over a transfer track of another road to the stockpens of such other road, so that plaintiff could unload the sheep there, if the plaintiff would get the consent of the officers of that road to the use of the track for that purpose, and, on plaintiff's failure to get such consent, offered to haul the cars up to its own stockpens, so that plaintiff could unload the sheep there. Meyers v. Wabash, etc., R. (Mo.), 2 So. Western Rep. 263.

2. Bills v. New York Central, etc., R., 84 N. Y. 5; Dunn v. Hannibal, etc., R., 68 Mo. 268; Dawson v. St. Louis, etc., R., 76 Mo. 514; Bryant v. South Western, etc., R., 68 Ga. 805. But see P nn v. Buffalo, etc., R., 49 N. Y. 204.

In a suit to recover damages to plaintiff's cattle, delayed upon defendant's train by a flood which submerged the track, the court upon a previous trial held that, under the contract, defendants were not bound to unload the cattle when the train was stopped by water, but that, upon reasonable request, their duty was to place the cars, if practicable, so as to enable plaintiff to unload his cattle, and that for a failure to do so they were liable. It appeared that plaintiff's agent made such a request; that the engine drawing the train was disabled, but that other engines might have been readily obtained; that defendant's conductor did not send for them. Held, that the question of negligence was properly for the jury; and that this was so even if the jury might infer from the charge that it

(c) Duty to Feed and Water.—The carrier is likewise primarily bound to provide food and water, a place for sleeping, and, if necessary a place for exercise,<sup>1</sup> but he may transfer such duty to the owner by express contract.<sup>2</sup> He may even then become liable for failure to furnish proper facilities to the consignor for such purposes.<sup>3</sup>

(d) Duty to Care for Live Stock Generally.—The measure of the carrier's duty to care for live stock generally must depend upon circumstances and the nature of his contract, but includes such attentions and precautions as the following: He must securely fasten an animal, such as a dog, to prevent its escape;<sup>4</sup> he is guilty of negligence in placing a car bedded with straw so near to the en-was negligence not to send forty-three miles for another engine. Bills v. New York Central, etc., R., 84 N. Y. 5.

1. Illinois Central R. Co. v. Adams, 42 Ill. 474; Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Thompson, 71 Ill. 434; Dunn v. Hannibal, etc., R. Co., 68 Mo. 268; Harris v. Northern Indiana R. Co., 20 N. Y. 232; Cragin v. New York, etc., R. Co., 51 N. Y. 61; Taff Vale R. Co. v. Giles, 23 L. J. Q. B. 43; Great Northern, etc., R. Co. v. Swaffield, 43 L. J. Ex. 89; L. R. 9 Ex. 132.

In Cragin v. N. Y. Central R. Co., 51 N. Y. 61, it was said that there was no obligation on the part of a railway company to water cattle transported on its line unless it had specially contracted to do so. This, however, was not the doctrine of Dunn v. Hannibal, etc., R. Co., 68 Mo. 268, where it was held that a railroad company which transports live stock ought not only to have the proper machinery and facilities for unloading them whenever, in the course of transit, it may be necessary to unload them for exercise and refreshment, but also to unload, feed and water them at the journey's end, if there be delay in making delivery over and discharging the carrier from liability, and the health of the animals requires this to be done.

2. South, etc., v. R. Co. v. Henlein, 52 Ala. 606; Heineman v. Grand Trunk, etc., R. Co., 31 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 430; Cragin v. New York Central, etc., R. Co., 51 N. Y. 61.

3. A shipper agreed to accompany his stock, and feed and water them at his own risk. Held, that the carrier was liable for loss because of its failure to furnish him proper facilities for so doing. Wabash, etc., R. Co. v. Pratt, 15 Ill. App. 177.

A railroad company received a car load of mules, to be delivered at A. It was agreed that the company was not to feed or water the mules, but that the shipper was to be afforded facilities for this. The company negligently carried the mules to D., forty miles beyond A., and they stood there in cars two days, without food, water, or care. Held, that the company was liable for the damage done. Bryant v. Southwestern R. Co., 68 Ga. 805; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 388; Clarke v. Rochester, etc., R. Co., 14 N. Y. 571. See also Porterfield v. Humphreys, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 497.

A contract to ship stock by railroad provided "that in case of accident to, or delay of time from any cause whatever, the owners are to feed, water, and take proper care of the stock." Held, that it was error in the presiding judge to charge, upon the trial of an action brought to recover for injury to the stock, that in all cases, except of unavoidable delay, accident or collision, the railroad company was bound by the contract to feed and water the stock; that the contract did not, in terms, so provide. Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Trent, 11 Lea (Tenn.), 82; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 170.

4. Stuart v. Crawley, 2 Stark. 323; Porterfield v. Humphreys, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 497. Compare Blower v. Great Western, etc., R. Co., L. R. 7 C. P. 655.

In Stuart v. Crawley, 2 Stark. 323, the carrier was held liable where he accepted a dog consigned to him tied by a string around the neck, and the dog subsequently slipped away.

In Richardson v. North Eastern, etc., R. Co., L. R. 7 C. P. 75, the dog was consigned fastened by a leather collar and strap, and subsequently escaped by slipping his head through the collar. It was held that the loss was by the owner's act, since the dog was fastened by means provided by the owner and apparently engine as to permit sparks therefrom to set it on fire;<sup>1</sup> he is responsible for leaving open a car window, or for any like negligence, by which an animal escapes, although the contract releases him from liability for escapes;<sup>2</sup> he must throw water upon hogs who have become overheated,<sup>3</sup> or take measures to prevent their "piling up" or crowding towards or away from the car doors when the train is unavoidably brought to a long stop;<sup>4</sup> he is liable for suffocation resulting from his negligence;<sup>5</sup> or for a horse's strangling by means of a halter when his attention might have prevented it.<sup>6</sup> sufficient, and that the carrier was exonerated.

(e) Liability for Delay.—The carrier is bound to transport live stock within a reasonable time, and without unnecessary delay.<sup>7</sup>

1. McFadden v. Missouri Pacific R. Co. (Mo.), 4 S. Western Rep. 689.

Where the hay or straw in the bottom of cattle cars catches fire while the animals are in transit, and the cattle are injured in consequence, the company is liable. Powell v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 32 Pa. St. 414; Holsapple v. Rome, etc., R. Co., 86 N. Y. 275; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 487. See also Tucker v. Pacific, etc., R. Co., 50 Mo. 385.

2. Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Allen, 31 Ind. 394; Oxley v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 65 Mo. 629.

3. Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Thompson, 71 Ill. 434; Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Hamilton, 76 Ill. 393; Illinois Central, etc., R. Co. v. Adams, 42 Ill. 474.

4. Kinnick v. Chicago, etc., R., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 55.

5. Sturgeon v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 65 Mo. 569.

6. In Harrison v. Missouri Pacific, etc., R. Co., 74 Mo. 364, a horse while being transported was strangled by his halter. In the absence of a special contract defining the duties and liabilities of the carrier, it was left to the jury to say whether the carrier should not have required his servants to examine the condition of the horse from time to time during the transit.

In Myers v. Wabash, etc., R. Co., 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 53, the defendant railroad company entered into a special contract with plaintiffs to transport a flock of sheep to a certain point, there to be transferred to another railroad for transportation to their ultimate destination. Under the terms of the contract plaintiffs were to take charge of and care for the sheep while in transit, and were charged with the duty of unloading them for the purposes of the transfer, and with all the risks incident thereto. They were not prevented from performance of this duty by any act or refusal of defendant to act. Held, that defendant cannot be held liable for not caring for the stock after they were unloaded; that such a contract cannot be so construed as to cast such duty upon the defendant.

7. Illinois, etc., R. Co. v. Waters, 41 Ill. 73; Ohio, etc., R. Co. v. Dunbar, 20 Ill. 623; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Erickson, 91 Ill. 613; Wabash, etc., R. Co. v. Black, 11 Bradw. (Ill.) 465; Wabash, etc., R. Co. v. McCasland, 11 Bradw. (Ill.) 491; Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Lockhart, 71 Ill. 627; Tucker v. Pacific, etc., R. Co., 50 Mo. 385; Sturgeon v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 65 Mo. 569; Dunn v. Hannibal, etc., R. Co., 68 Mo. 268; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Lehman, 56 Md. 209; Moulton v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 31 Minn. 85; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 781; Baker v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 10 Lea (Tenn.), 304; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 149; East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Hale, 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 36.

In Michigan Southern & N. Ind. R. Co. v. McDonough, 21 Mich. 165, it was however, held, that the statute of that State passed in 1855, which requires freight to be transported in the order in which it is received, was not violated by the passage of a full cattle train past a way station where cattle were awaiting transportation, which cattle could not have been forwarded without making up an extra train.

Where a common carrier was sued for the deterioration in the value of cattle between the time when they were first offered for shipment and the time when they were shipped, held, to be no defence or the refusal to ship that Ill. Rev. Stat. 1874, pp. 141, 144, forbade the transportation of Texas or Cherokee cattle, as said statute to that extent was unconstitutional. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Erickson, 91 Ill. 613.

It is no excuse that a bridge was broken down,<sup>1</sup> or that the live stock were received on Sunday.<sup>2</sup>

For mere loss of weight in cattle occasioned by delay a railroad company will not be held liable.<sup>3</sup> A delay caused by an exceptional press of business need not be unreasonable.<sup>4</sup> A delay caused by a strike, a riot, or a mob will be excused.<sup>5</sup>

(f) Loss of Market.—The carrier is not liable for a loss of market resulting from delay, unless he had actual knowledge, or such knowledge might be reasonably inferred from the circumstances of shipment, that the consignment was intended for a particular market.<sup>6</sup>

6. Connecting Carriers.<sup>7</sup>—In England it is the rule that the right of action lies only against the first of several connecting carriers.<sup>8</sup> In the United States the opposite doctrine has the support of perhaps the weight of authority, so that where the contract of the first carrier includes a delivery beyond the terminus, but stipulates against liability beyond its own line, and a loss occurs on the line of a connecting carrier, the right of action is against the latter, who is at liberty to claim the benefit of any exemptions in the original contract.<sup>9</sup>

P. sued a railroad company for delay in transportation of cattle. The cattle were received February 12, and on February 14 duplicate contracts were executed for their transportation. Held, that proof of delay on the part of the company before the signing of the written contracts was admissible. Cleveland, etc., R. Co. v. Perkins, 17 Mich. 296.

1. Guinn v. Wabash, etc., R. Co., 20 Mo. App. 453.

2. Guinn v. Wabash, etc., R. Co., 20 Mo. App. 453; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Lehman, 56 Md. 209.

3. Ohio, etc., R. Co. v. Dunbar, 20 Ill. 623. See also, on the subject of delay, Frazier v. Kansas City, etc., R. Co., 48 Iowa, 571.

4. In an action against a railroad company, as a carrier of cattle, for delay in delivering them at their destination, an instruction that the carrier was under a duty to carry within a reasonable time is not material error, when in another instruction the jury are told that, in determining what was a reasonable time, all the surrounding circumstances must be kept in view, and that a delay caused by an unusual and exceptional press of business was not to be considered as unreasonable. Illinois Central, etc., R. Co. v. Haynes, 1 Southern Rep. (Miss.) 765.

5. A railroad company was delayed for eleven days in its carriage of live stock by strikers who had left the employ of the company because of a reduction of wages. The company had employees enough left to take the stock through but for the mob of strikers. Held, that the company was not liable, and that it was immaterial that the strike was conceived and organized while the strikers were in the employ of the company. (Reversing s.c., 34 Hun (N.Y.), 50.) Greismer v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 102 N. Y. 563; s. c., 26 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 287; Lake Shore, etc., R. Co. v. Bennett, 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 391.

See also CARRIERS OF GOODS, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, 847.

6. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Lehman, 56 Md. 209; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 194; Horne v. Midland, etc., R. Co., L. R. 8 C. P. 131; Leonard v. Fitchburg, etc., R. Co., 9 North East. Rep. (Mass.) 667.

In Conger v. Hudson R. R. Co., 6 Duer (N. Y.), 375, it was held that where delay in shipment is excused, the carrier is not liable for any damage resulting from such delay, nor it seems where there is no stipulation to carry by a particular train or in season for a particular market day.

7. See this whole subject reviewed in CARRIERS OF GOODS, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law, 859.

8. Coxon v. Great Western, etc., R. Co., 5 H. & N. 615.

9. Halliday v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co.,

7. Statutory Regulations as to Transportation of Live Stock.—In the following States statutes forbid that animals in course of transportation by a railroad company shall be confined for a longer time than so many hours without unloading: Maine,<sup>1</sup> Massachusetts,<sup>2</sup> New Hampshire,<sup>3</sup> Vermont,<sup>4</sup> New York,<sup>5</sup> South Carolina,<sup>6</sup> Iowa.<sup>7</sup>

In Maine,<sup>8</sup> railroad companies are to give cars containing cattle a continuous passage, in preference to other freight. Animals are to be loaded so as to be able to stand comfortably, animals of one kind only are to be loaded in the same compartment, and young animals are not to be loaded with those large and mature, except in the case of dams with their own sucklings.

In Ohio,<sup>9</sup> carriers of live stock, upon the discovery of contagious diseases among the stock in their possession, are to take active measures to prevent its spread, and are to disinfect cars and stalls.

In Nebraska,<sup>10</sup> railroads are required to keep their stock cars clean, and to see that they are clean when they enter the State.

In Pennsylvania,<sup>11</sup> the owner, drover, or shipper of live stock shall have the right at all seasonable hours to enter stock yards and feed and care for their animals, and also to provide suitable bedding, after the cars have been designated, provided it is of the usual kind, and does not increase the carrier's risk.

In Iowa,<sup>12</sup> a statute prevents the carriers of live stock from exempting themselves by any contract, receipt, rule, or regulation from the liability of the common carrier.

8. Actions Against Carriers of Live Stock.—(a) Burden of Proof.—The burden of proof where loss or injury has occurred in the carriage of live stock is primarily upon the carrier. He is 74 Mo. 159. Compare St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Piper, 13 Kans. 505.

A railroad company receiving goods to be transported over several lines of railroad is not responsible for the negligence of other carriers beyond its terminus, unless it has contracted to transport the property beyond its own line. Receiving live stock consigned by marks on the bill of lading to a point beyond its own terminus does not import an agreement to carry to the destination named. Ort v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. (Minn.), 31 N. W. Rep. 519.

In Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Lehman, 56 Md. 209; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 194, it was held that if the defendant had been guilty of such negligence in the transportation of live stock as to render it liable, it could not relieve itself by showing that a connecting road might have made up for its default. See also Myrick v. Michigan Central, etc., R. Co., 107 U. S. 102.

1. Maine Rev. St. ch. 124, § 36.

2. Mass. Pub. St. ch. 207, § 55.

3. Gen. Laws New Hampshire, ch. 281, § 28.

4. Vermont Rev. Laws, § 4185.

5. New York Rev. St. p. 1605.

6. S. Car. Gen. St. § 1479.

7. Code of Iowa, § 4032.

8. Maine Rev. St. ch. 124, § 35.

9. Code of Ohio, § 4212.

10. Laws of Neb. 1877, ch. 149.

11. Act 16, Dec. 1863, § 1. P. L. 1124; Purd. Dig. tit. Common Carriers, p. 221.

12. Code of Iowa, § 1308; McDaniel v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 24 Iowa, 412; McCune v. Burlington, etc., R. Co., 52 Iowa, 600; article "Transportation of Live Stock," 19 Cent. Law Jour. p. 168.

bound to show that such loss or injury resulted from one of the perils excepted by the rules of law applicable to the case or by the terms of a valid and special contract.<sup>1</sup> Where it appears that the negligence of the carrier has combined with the cause of loss excepted by law or the terms of the contract, the carrier is none the less liable.<sup>2</sup>

A contract imposing upon the consignor the duty to care for the stock in transit will shift to him the burden of proving negligence.<sup>3</sup>

(b) Evidence.—The evidence admissible in cases involving carriers of live stock will sufficiently appear from the other branches of this title, but some decisions are mentioned in the notes.<sup>4</sup>

(c) Measure of Damages.—The English Railway and Canal Traffic Act limits the liability of carriers of live stock to a certain sum per head, unless a special valuation is placed upon the animal, and an increased charge paid for its transportation.<sup>5</sup>

1. Evans v. Fitchburg, etc., R. Co., 111 Mass. 142; Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Durkin, 76 Ill. 395; McCoy v. K. & D. M. R. Co., 44 Iowa, 424; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Abels, 60 Miss. 1017; South, etc., R. Co. v. Henlein, 52 Ala. 606.

2. Oxley v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 65 Mo. 629.

3. Where by special contract the carrier of stock has agreed to take charge of it, the burden of proving negligence is on the owner. McBeath v. Wabash, etc., R. Co., 20 Mo. App. 445.

Where an owner specially contracts to load and unload and to take care of the stock, the burden of proving negligence on the part of the railroad company in case of injury to his stock while en route is upon him. Clark v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 64 Mo. 440; Bankard v. B. & O. R. Co., 34 Md. 197; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Piper, 13 Kans. 510; Louisville, etc. R. Co. v. Hedger, 9 Bush (Ky.), 645.

Where a horse in apparent good health was shipped on board a steamer, and was delivered in a sick and dying condition, but without any external injuries, held, that some negligence on the part of the carrier must be shown by the shipper before the burden would be thrown on the carrier to show he was not in fault. The Saragossa, 3 Woods C. C. 380.

4. A common carrier may by special contract limit his liability, and in the absence of fraud or mistake a contract for the transportation of cattle, signed by the shipper, is the sole evidence of the agreement, although it differs from the previous oral agreement, and the shipper did not read it. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Cleary, 77 Mo. 634; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 122.

Under the ordinary counts against a railroad company as a carrier, it has been held that the owner of cattle cannot recover for injuries occasioned him by the misrepresentations of the company's agent, whereby he was induced to place his animals on a slow train instead of a fast one. Maslin v. B. & O. R. Co., 14 W. Va. 180.

Where in an action to recover for injuries done to cattle while in transit, the carrier gives evidence of a custom that in all cases the owner shall accompany the cattle and take care of them, the plaintiff will be permitted to testify that he never heard of such a custom. Evansville, etc., R. Co. v. Young, 28 Ind. 216.

And in a like case, where the plaintiff sought to recover for injuries done to a short-horned cow, it was held that evidence was inadmissible on the part of the company. Defendant should show a usage not to transport such animals. McCune v. B. C. B. & N. R. Co., 52 Iowa, 600. Compare Bills v. New York Central, etc., R., 84 N. Y. 5; s. c., 3 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 318.

5. 17 & 18 Vict. c. 31, sec. 7, provides that no greater damages shall be recovered for the loss of, or for any injury done to any of such animals beyond the

If a false declaration of value is made it estops the consignor from proving any value beyond that declared.<sup>1</sup>

Where the carrier incidentally acquires information as to the value of animals consigned, but the consignor does not declare that value, the carrier cannot refuse to transport the animal because the additional charges are not paid as provided in the act.<sup>2</sup> The limitation of the carrier's liability to a specified sum holds good, under this statute, even though there be no special contract,<sup>3</sup> or where the contract or delivery is incomplete.<sup>4</sup>

The ordinary measure of damages, where the time for delivery has been specified, is the difference in value of the live stock when finally delivered, and the market value at such specified time.<sup>5</sup> To these damages may be added such legitimate charges for expenses arising out of the detention as appear to be just and reasonable.<sup>6</sup>

In estimating the value of animals it has been held allowable to sums hereinafter mentioned, that is to say: For any horse, £50; for any neat cattle, per head, £15; for any sheep or pigs, per head, £2, unless the person sending or delivering the same to such company shall at the time of such delivery have declared them to be respectively of higher value than as above mentioned, paid an increased charge, etc.

The reasonableness of the percentage charged for extra value is for the jury. Harrison v. London, etc., R. Co., 31 L. J. Q. B. 113; 2 B. & S. 122.

Where cattle become out of condition during the journey, this amounts to "injury" within the meaning of the act. All-day v. Great Western, etc., R. Co., 34 L. J. Q. B. 5; 5 B. & S. 903.

1. McCance v. London, etc., R. Co., 7 H. & N. 477; 31 L. J. Ex. 65; 10 W. R. 154; 3 H. & C. 343; 34 L. J. Ex. 39; 10 Jur. N. S. 1058; 11 L. T. N. S. 426; 12 W. R. 1086.

2. Robinson v. London, etc., R. Co., 19 C. B. N. S. 51; 34 L. J. C. P. 234; 14 Jur. N. S. 390; 13 W. R. 660.

3. Hill v. London, etc., R. Co., 42 L. T. N. S. 513.

4. Hodgman v. West Midland R. Co., 5 Best & S. 173; 33 L. J. Q. B. 233; 10 Jur. N. S. 673; 10 L. T. N. S. 609; 12 W. R. 1054; s. c., affirmed, 35 L. J. Q. B. 85; 13 W. R. 758.

5. Black v. Camden & Amboy R. Co., 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 40; Smith v. N. Y. & N. H. R. Co., 12 Allen (Mass.), 531; Sangamon, etc., R. Co. v. Henry, 14 Ill. 156; Sturgeon v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 65 Mo. 569.

In Texas Pacific R. Co. v. Nicholson, 61 Tex. 491; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R.

Cas. 133, it was held that such damages for breach of contract may be allowed as are naturally the result of the breach, or as may fairly be considered as having been within the contemplation of the parties at the time the contract was made.

When it is within the knowledge of a railway company that cattle which it has contracted through its agents to receive at a specified time and to transport to a particular destination are intended for sale on their arrival there, and the company, without fault of the owner of the cattle, violates the contract, and does not receive the cattle until a later period, whereby loss results, the difference between the value of the cattle at the place of destination when they should have arrived there under the contract, and when they did arrive there, is a measure of damage. If there is no other deterioration due to the delay of the carrier, that must also be taken into consideration in estimating damage.

The rule which makes the measure of damages the difference between the value of goods at the place of shipment and their value at the point of destination applies to cases where the goods are never delivered at all at their ultimate destination, and not where there has been loss sustained by the failure to start them on time from the point of shipping. See also East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Hale (Tenn.), 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 36.

6. Texas Pacific, etc., R. Co. v. Nicholson, 61 Tex. 491; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 133; Glascok v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 69 Mo. 589.

receive the testimony of witnesses who have derived their information wholly through the newspapers.<sup>1</sup> The value at the place of destination is the criterion.<sup>2</sup> If there is no market value at that point, such value may be ascertained by proof of the market value at other convenient points.<sup>3</sup>

The damages which may be recovered must be proximate, and not remote.<sup>4</sup>

It has been held in an action against the carrier for failure to deliver cattle within the time agreed, that interest from the date of the breach of the contract (if the suit is considered as ex contractu)

A parol undertaking was made by a railroad company to furnish cars on a particular day to transport cattle from a point in North Carolina to Richmond, with knowledge of the shipper's purpose to have the cattle delivered at the destination, in time for a particular market day. The company failed to have the necessary cars in readiness, and the shipment was delayed until a later day, when the cattle were sent, and a bill of lading then given, the form of which limited the liability of the company as to detention, measure of damages, etc., in consideration of a reduced rate of freight. Held, that the parol undertaking was not merged in the contract arising out of the bill of lading, and that the shipper was therefore entitled to damages consequent upon the detention. Hamilton v. Western, etc., R. Co. (N. Car.), 3 S. Eastern Rep. 164.

1. Cleveland & Toledo R. Co. v. Perkins, 17 Mich. 296. If the verdict in such case be excessive, it will be set aside by the court. Harris v. Panama R. Co., 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 312.

2. Davis v. New York, etc., R. Co., 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 543; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Mason, 11 Lea (Tenn.), 116; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 241; Texas Pacific R. Co. v. Nicholson, 61 Tex. 491; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 133; East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Hale (Tenn.), 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 36.

3. In East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Hale (Tenn.), 27 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 36, it was held that in an action against a railroad company for failure to deliver a car-load of mules according to a contract under which the company agreed to deliver within a reasonable time at Dalton, Ga., the measure of damages is the difference in the market value of the stock at that point when it should have been, and when it was in fact, delivered there; and if there was no market value at that point, such value may be ascertained by proof of the market value at other convenient points.

In Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Mason, 11 Lea (Tenn.), 116; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 241, it was held, in an action against a railroad company, as a common carrier, for damages to horses in transit, the measure of damages would be the value of the horses killed and the depreciation in the value of those injured, at the place of delivery, but direct testimony by the opinion of witnesses of that value or depreciation is not indispensable; it is sufficient if there is proof of these facts in the market of a neighboring State connected with the place by railroad, and a full description of the animals and their qualities, and of the character of the injuries.

4. In McAlister v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 74 Mo. 351; s. c., 7 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 373, it was held that in the absence of evidence to show that a carrier receiving cattle for transportation from a connecting carrier was for any reason bound to continue the transportation in the same cars in which the cattle came to it, or had notice that they were of a kind which it was unlawful to unload within the limits of the State, the receiving carrier will not be compelled to make good to the shipper damages sustained by him by reason of the seizure and sale of the cattle to pay a fine imposed upon him in consequence of its having, against his objection, unloaded the cattle for the purpose of reloading them into its own cars. Such damages are too remote, and cannot be held to have been within the contemplation of the parties.

A recovery cannot be had for the loss of profits anticipated from letting a jack to mares, where the use to which the animal was to be put, and the carrier's knowledge of the same, are not averred and proved. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Hale, 83 Ill. 360. See also Sangamon, or from the date of the injury (if the action be viewed as one in tort) may be allowed if plaintiff recovers damages.<sup>1</sup>

There is a conflict of opinion as to how far a carrier may, in effect, limit his liability for negligence by a contract which stipulates that he shall be liable only in a certain sum, unless the value of animals worth a greater sum is declared, and an increased charge paid therefor. The United States supreme court has recently affirmed the rule which limits the carrier's liability, even though guilty of negligence, to the valuation fixed by the shipper in the contract.<sup>2</sup> In several of the States, however, it is held that the law preventing a carrier from limiting his liability for negligence by means of any contract is too well settled to permit of its modification even to this extent.<sup>3</sup> etc., R. Co. v. Henry, 14 Ill. 156; McAlister v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 74 Mo. 351; s. c., 7 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 373.

1. Illinois, etc., R. Co. v. Haynes (Miss.), 1 South. Rep. 765.

2. Hart v. Pennsylvania R., 112 U. S. 331; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 604; s. c., 2 McCrary (C. C.), 333; Harvey v. Terre Haute, etc., R., 74 Mo. 538; Squire v. New York Central, etc., R., 98 Mass. 239; South, etc., R., v. Henlein, 52 Ala. 606.

An agreement between the shipper and the carrier fixing the value of the animal at the time and place of shipment as the basis for damages, is valid. Chicago, etc., R. v. Harmon, 1 Ill. App. 640.

A condition in a bill of lading expressed the value of a cow shipped over defendant's railroad to be of a certain value, and that the carrier assumed no liability for injuries to the animal, except from collision of trains, in which case the carrier was not to be liable for a greater sum than that specified in the agreement. Animals of greater value than that specified were charged at a higher rate. The animal, while in transit, was injured by a fire which caught from sparks from a locomotive, and died in consequence. Held, that the carrier's liability was limited to the valuation expressed in the agreement, and that the plaintiff was bound by the agreement as made in his behalf by his agent. Hill v. Boston, etc., R. (Mass.), 10 N. East. Rep. 836.

See generally, on this subject, CARRIERS OF GOODS, 2 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.

3. Moulton v. St. Paul, etc., R., 31 Minn. 85; s. c., 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 13; Kansas City, etc., R. v. Simpson, 30 Kan. 645; s. c., 16 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 158.

A horse was shipped by railroad, and the carrier arbitrarily inserted in the bill of lading the words, "Value not to exceed $100." The horse was injured by the carrier's negligence. Held, that the owner was not limited in the recovery by the above words. Kansas City, etc., R. v. Simpson, 30 Kans. 645; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 104.

In McCune v. Burlington, etc., R., 52 Iowa, 600, where the carrier attempted to enforce a regulation that no valuable stock should be shipped over his road unless the consignor signed a contract releasing the carrier from liability for anything beyond the value of ordinary stock, it was held that such regulation was void under Iowa Code, sec. 1308, which declares that the carrier cannot exempt himself by any contract, receipt, rule or regulation, from the liability of a common carrier.

In Chicago, etc., R. v. Abels, 60 Miss. 1017; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 105, it was held that a common carrier cannot avoid payment of full damages to property which he has undertaken to transport, by showing a special contract limiting in advance his liability to an amount less than the real loss sustained by the shipper.

In McFadden v. Missouri Pacific R. (Mo.), 4 So. West. Rep. 689, it was held that whether a stipulation in a bill of lading or contract of shipment, whereby a common carrier limits his liability to a certain fixed sum for each head of stock to be transported, shall limit the shipper to such sum in case the goods are destroyed by the carrier's negligence, depends on the fact whether the shipper has received adequate consideration for

Definition.

CARRY.

Definition.

CARRY.—To convey, bear, or transport, by sustaining the thing carried, or causing it to be sustained; generally implying motion from the speaker, and so often followed by the particles away and off, and opposed to bring or fetch.<sup>1</sup>

the concession. If obtained from the shipper by a false representation that his goods are to be carried at a special and reduced rate, in consequence thereof, such a stipulation is not binding upon him, in the absence of bad faith on his part towards the carrier.

Authorities for Carriers of Live Stock.—Angell on Carriers (5th Ed.); Hutchinson on Carriers; Lawson's Contracts of Carriers; Redman's Law of Railway Carriers (2d Ed.), London, 1880; Article "Transportation of Live Stock" (Henry Austin), 19 Cent. Law Jour. 161; Note to Clarke v. Rochester, etc., R., 67 Am. Dec. 205; Notes to Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas., vols. 1 to 27.

1. Worcester.

Carry Arms.—"Carry," in the sense of the statutes prohibiting the "carrying of arms," means "wear." "When we use the expression 'he carries arms,' we mean 'he goes armed' or 'he wears arms.' This is manifestly the sense in which the word was used by the legislature, and we know of no other single word which could more clearly convey the meaning intended to be conveyed than the word 'carry.' In this sense P. was not only literally carrying a forbidden weapon, but he was 'carrying it,' that is, 'he was going armed,' contrary to the true meaning of the statute. It will be observed that the interpretation which we give to the word 'carry' meets and carries out the manifest purposes of the legislature, which was not only to make criminal the habitual carrying or wearing of [various weapons], but also to make criminal a single act of wearing or carrying one of these weapons, when it is so worn or carried, with the intent of thus going armed. . . . To constitute the carrying criminal, the intent with which it is carried must be that of going armed, or being armed, or wearing it for the purpose of being armed." Page v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 198 n.

To have a weapon upon the person is, in contemplation of law, to "carry" it. State v. Carter, 36 Tex. 89.

The word "carries," in an act prohibiting carrying concealed weapons, is used as the synonym of "bears." "Locomotion is not essential to constitute a carrying within the meaning of that section." Owen v. State, 31 Ala. 389.

Carry Away.—An indictment against a thief averring that he did "feloniously steal, take, and carry" the goods is insufficient for want of adding "away" after "carry." "The word 'carry' has not the same meaning as the words 'carry away.' The words 'did take and carry away' are a translation of the words cepit et asportavit. . . . But no single word in our language expresses the meaning of asportavit. Hence, the word 'away' or some other word must be subjoined to the word 'carry' to modify its general signification and give it a special and distinctive meaning." Com. v. Adams, 7 Gray (Mass.), 45. And see Bish. Dir. & Trus. § 582, n. 6.

But in State v. Mann, 25 Ohio St. 668, it was held that in an indictment for larceny the word "steal" implies a carrying away, and therefore an indictment charging that the defendant did "feloniously steal, take, and drive" a sheep, without alleging that he drove or carried it away, was sufficient.

The phrase "taking and carrying away a negro" does not imply that it was done "by force or violence," and without those words is insufficient in an indictment. Hamilton v. Com., 3 Pen. & W. (Pa.) 142.

Lifting up a bag from the bottom of a boot of a coach when it is not entirely removed from the space first occupied, but each specific part is removed, is "carrying it away." Rex v. Walsh, 1 Moody, 14.

Carried into any Port in England means something different from "imported," and the phrase is applicable to goods where the parties contemplated that they would, or at least might, be carried into and delivered in an English port, and it was provided in the bill of lading and the master in fact put into an English port for orders, in part fulfilment of the contract of carriage. Dapneto v. Wyllie, L. R. 5 P. C. 482, 490-2.

Carry Off.—A covenant by a lessee not to "carry off" hay is not broken by his creditors attaching a quantity of hay on mesne process and carrying it off against his consent. "The words of the covenant, taken strictly, will reach only a voluntary removal of hay, etc., by the defendants." Smith v. Putnam, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 222; 4 Wheel. Am. C. L. 34.

A cart going for manure is exempt from toll as a cart "carrying manure." Harrison v. James, 2 Chit. 547.

Carrying on Business.—"To sell whiskey on a few several occasions" within a period of twelve months could not be just esteemed the being engaged in or carrying on the business of a wholesale dealer in the business of whiskey." Espy v. State, 47 Ala. 538.

To "engage in or carry on any business," within the meaning of the revenue law, is to pursue an occupation or employment as a livelihood or a source of profit. "It is not necessary that it should be the sole or exclusive business or occupation. It may be pursued while pursuing another business or in connection with another; and, in either case, the party would be punishable. It is true, the doing of a single act pertaining to a particular business will not be considered engaging in or carrying on the business; yet a series of such acts would be so considered. The true inquiry is, and one which a jury will seldom fail correctly to solve, what was the intent of the party? Was it to derive a profit or the means of livelihood from retailing or from any of the other occupations mentioned in the statute? If it was, he is guilty; if it was not, he should not be convicted." Harris v. State, 50 Ala. 127; Weil v. State, 52 Ala. 19.

A person who, being the owner of a two-story building, offers for rent, for use as a theatre, a room or hall in the upper story, containing a small stage and dressing-room, which might be used for small dramatic exhibitions, but who had never used it as a theatre, cannot be convicted of "engaging in or carrying on the business of a theatre" under the provisions of the revenue law. Gillman v. State, 55 Ala. 248.

A company, carrying on business in London, which employs in a country town a general commission agent, who transacts the company's business in such town, in an office for which the company pay him rent, does not "carry on business" in that town within the meaning of the County Court Act, 9 and 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 128. Corbett v. Gen. Stm. Nav. Co., 4 H. & N. 482; Shiels v. Great Northern R. Co., 30 L. J. R. (Q. B.) 331.

A railway company having its principal office in London, where its seal was kept and the meeting of its directors and shareholders held, and having likewise a large station at Chester, through which ran several branch lines, the entire management of their line there being conducted by a district superintendent, under the general management of the company in London, is not "carrying on business" in Chester. Brown v. Lond. & N. W. R. Co., 4 B. & S. 326.

A company having a station in London, where a considerable portion of their business is transacted, but whose principal station, where the meetings of the directors are held and the general and substantial business of the company conducted, is without the city, does not "carry on business" within the jurisdiction of the mayor's court. Le Tailleux v. S. E. R. Co., 3 C. P. D. 18.

Selling an occasional drink of spirits out of a bottle, not in a bar-room, where no intention of defrauding the national revenues is apparent, is not "carrying on the business of a retail liquor-dealer" without having paid the special tax. U. S. v. Jackson, 1 Hughes (U. S.), 531.

The renting of a few rooms by a married woman in the house in which she lived with her husband is not "carrying on business" within the meaning of a statute making her liable for debts incurred on account of such business. "What is meant by the expression is, that the married woman must be pursuing a business as an employment, to the carrying on of which she devotes a considerable portion of her time and skill and means—a business that is continuing in its nature and embraces many transactions." Holmes v. Holmes, 40 Conn. 117.

The "carrying on" of the business of a railroad company within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act of March 2, 1867, 14 U. S. St. at L. 536, must be where the railroad is or is to be constructed, maintained, and operated. "In its broadest sense the term 'business' includes nearly all the affairs in which either an individual or a corporation can be actors. . . . Does, then, the doing of any acts whatever pertaining to the affairs of a railroad company constitute 'carrying on business' in the sense of the act? Has the term 'carrying on business' the same meaning as 'transacting any of its business'? . . . I am constrained not only by considerations already suggested, but by what, upon the words themselves, should be their proper interpretation, to answer these questions in the negative. . . . 'Carrying on business' looks to the scheme and purpose to which such transactions tend, and not to the incidental transactions themselves. Thus the business of a railroad corporation is, by its charter, the construction and maintenance and operation of a railroad. . . . In aid thereof it may be necessary to employ agents and agencies. . . . But the transactions of such agents are only collateral or incidental. They do not, in a just sense, constitute the business of the railroad company." In re Ala. & Chat. R. Co., 9 Blatch. 390.

Where a wine-merchant contracted not to "set up, embark, or carry on the business of a wine-merchant" within prescribed limits, and afterwards commenced business at a town not within those limits, but from thence in many instances supplied wine to persons within the limits, in pursuance of orders solicited by him, but has no residence, warehouse, or place of business within the limits, it was held a breach of contract. "I am not now to say what the phrase 'carrying on business' may mean in the Excise Act or in other contracts; but to say what in common-sense it means when used by one who sells the business of a wine-merchant for a large sum of money, and promises that he will not directly or indirectly carry on that business within a specified district. It cannot then be supposed to mean that he may, after selling the good-will of that business, do what he will within the district, provided he has no cellars or stores within it." Turner v. Evans, 2 El. & Bl. 512.

So where, upon the sale of the good-will of a drapery and hosiery business, the vendor covenanted not to "carry on or assist in carrying on" such business within two miles; it was held that the covenant was broken by his supplying from a place beyond the prescribed limit goods to customers residing within the district, at their solicitation. "It is said that a mere casual sale of goods will not constitute a carrying on of business. But however that may be, here the sales were to a large amount; and I cannot entertain a doubt that the defendant has broken his contract." Brampton v. Beddoes, 13 C. B. (N. S.) 538.

The power given to the court, by subsec. 5 of sec. 7 of the Companies Act, 1880, to restore to the register of joint stock companies the name of a company which has been struck off by the registrar, if the court is "satisfied that the company was at the time of the striking off carrying on business or in operation," applies to the case of a company which at the time of the striking off was carrying on business only for the purpose of winding up voluntarily and releasing its assets. In re Outlay Assurance Co., 34 Ch. D. 479.

But in the case of a covenant not to carry on business so long as a company "carried on business," it was held there had been no breach where the business was being carried on not by the company, but by the liquidator, with a view to its sale as a going concern. "The covenant being in restraint of trade must be construed strictly." Shorthorn Dairy Co. v. Hall, 21 Ir. L. T. 343.

A solicitor with a country certificate, whose offices were at Birmingham, and who came up on a retainer and attended the taxation of a bill of costs within ten miles of London, was held not to "practise or carry on his business" within that radius. "Taking the words 'acts or practices' together, and turning to the schedule and finding 'carries on business' used apparently as an equivalent phrase, I think the intention of the legislature was not to strike at one particular transaction within the ten mile radius, but at the general carrying on of business and practising. . . . I think the act means carries on business with a quasi permanent habitat." In re Horton, 8 Q. B. D. 434; s. c., 45 L. T. (N. S.) 543.

A debtor employed as a clerk in a bank, the office of which is within the district of the London bankruptcy court, is "carrying on business" within the district of that court. Cotton, L. J., said: "It is said that a man does not carry on business unless he is a principal, but I do not see that that is necessary. In ordinary language a man is said to carry on business whether he be a principal or not. If I had to decide whether this man's employment was more properly described as a 'business' or an 'occupation,' I might think that the latter would be the more appropriate term. But 'business' is the larger term, and I think it includes his employment." And Lush, L. J., said: "It cannot, I think, be intended that the words 'carries on business' should be confined to persons carrying on business on their own account as principals. That would leave out a large number of persons who are engaged in business in the city of London. I think that a man carries on business where he is to be found during the business hours of the day." Ex parte Breuil, 16 Ch. D. 484.

But in Ex parte Smith, 2 Pugs. (N. B.) 147, it was held that a clerk in the Provincial Secretary's office in Fredericton, who resides outside the city, was not a person "carrying on business," within the meaning of 26 Vic. c. 35, § 20, so as to make him an inhabitant of the city for the purpose of taxation. The court said: “If a public department, such as that of the Secretary of the Province, can be considered ‘carrying on business’ within the legitimate meaning of that expression in the act (which we more than doubt, and which the case of Hathaway v. Cummings [Trin. T. 1864] seems to repudiate), surely the business of that department is not ‘carried on’ by the clerks any more than by the messengers. All the employees in the department do as they are directed by the head—the secretary. He it is who ‘carries on’ (if that is a correct expression), who manages, directs, and is responsible for, the business of the department and the manner in which it is transacted, and to whom the employees are all subordinate. So, with respect to private concerns of a mercantile or manufacturing character, can it be said that each and every of the clerks, servants or laborers carry on the business of any mercantile or manufacturing establishment, in which they are employed? Surely the proprietors, the employers, carry on the business of the establishments which belong to themselves. The business is transacted, the work is done at their instigation, by their capital, for their benefit, and at their risk—it is true, necessarily, by the instrumentality of employees, or by machinery, supplied by them. So, in a shipping business, do not the owners of the ships carry on the business—not the lumpers who load, or sailors who navigate them, though without their services the business could not be carried on? This view will be strongly confirmed by reading section 20, in connection with and by the light of section 24, which shows that the term ‘carrying on business in the city’ refers to the principal who owns the business, and who is entitled to and receives the proceeds and profits thereof.”

CART.—The word “cart,” in its primary and ordinary acceptance, signifies a carriage with two wheels; yet it has a more extended signification, and means a carriage in general.<sup>1</sup>

A covenant not to “carry on or exercise the practice or profession of a surgeon and apothecary” within prescribed limits is not broken by attending several ladies in their confinements, within those limits, with the knowledge and consent of the covenantee, in consequence of a request by him that the covenantor should for a time continue to visit the patients, and the latter did so for the purpose of assisting the former. Rawlinson v. Clarke, 14 M. & W. 187.

A teamster in hauling quartz to a mill performs labor for “carrying on” the mill, and is entitled to a lien against it. Gould v. Wise, 3 Pac. Rep. 34.

Carrying Out a contract is more than the signing and delivery. Assent to a proposition creates, but does not “carry out,” a contract. “Carrying out” comes after the execution of the contract; it is performance. Cartmel v. Newton, 79 Ind. 5.

Carrying to Sell.—Where a servant of a licensed tea-dealer was sent by his master round the neighborhood to ask for orders for tea, and was subsequently sent by his master to deliver small parcels of tea in pursuance of those orders—this was held not to be a “carrying to sell,” within the meaning of the Hawkers and Pedlers Act, 50 G. III. c. 51, so as to subject the servant to a penalty for trading as a hawk without a license. Rex v. M'Knight, 10 B. & C. 734.

1. Favers v. Glass, 22 Ala. 621, where it was held that a vehicle with four wheels, drawn by oxen, suited to the ordinary purposes of husbandry, and employed in the same uses to which carts, in the ordinary acceptance of the term, are appropriated, is protected from levy and sale by the statute exempting “one horse or ox cart” from execution. “In order to ascertain whether the legislature used it in its restricted or enlarged sense, we must look to the design and object of the statute. This evidently was, to secure ‘to each poor family’ . . . ‘some vehicle to be used in hauling their crops, and otherwise subserving their wants.’ The number of wheels upon which it moved, we cannot suppose, was a matter of any moment in the enactment of the law. . . . This construction does no violence to the meaning of the word ‘cart,’ but adopts its general rather than its primary as well as ordinary meaning for the purpose of giving effect to the plain object and intention of the legislature, excluding from the class implied by the general designation such vehicles as were not within the legislative contemplation.”

See to the same effect Webb v. Brandon, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 285, where a large wagon with four wheels was held exempt from levy as an “ox cart,” the court,

CAS. (See also ACT OF GOD.)—Used in the Louisiana Code in the phrase cas fortuits, and equivalent to irresistible force, inevitable accident, or unforeseen event.<sup>1</sup>

however, saying: "It is true, as contended in the argument, that lexicographers define a 'cart' to be a vehicle with two wheels, and a 'wagon' one with four wheels. The proof makes it clear that the vehicle in question was not a cart, but that it was a wagon, a large wagon with four wheels, and suitable to be drawn with oxen."

A coal wagon is a "cart" within the 19 Geo. II. c. 35, s. 11, requiring tickets to be obtained by the driver or carter of "cart or carts," loaded or driven from any wharf, etc. Peto v. Hague, 1 Smith, 417.

Cart or Truck-wagon.—A pedler's wagon designed to be used in trade from place to place, with the body hung upon three elliptic steel springs, with drawer behind and doors at the sides, and a railing around the top and dasher in front, is not exempt from attachment and execution as "one cart or truck-wagon." Smith v. Chase, 71 Me. 164.

Taxed Cart is a designation given by 43 Geo. III. c. 161, to a carriage with less than four wheels, constructed wholly of wood and iron, without any covering other than a tilted covering, and without any lining or springs, and with a fixed seat, without slings or braces, and without any ornament whatever other than paint of a dark color for the preservation of the wood or iron only, with the words "a taxed cart," and the name of the owner painted on the back panel, and which was not of more than a given value. Williams v. Lear, L. R. 7 Q. B. 286.

Cartways, in Pennsylvania, were the roads leading to the great provincial roads, laid out by the order of the justices of the county courts, after a return of certain viewers that the same were necessary for the convenience of the public. McClenahan v. Curwin, 3 Yeates (Pa.), 371.

1. Thus in the case of Viterbo v. Friedlander, 120 U. S. 707, Mr. Justice Gray uses the following language on page 727: "Upon a comparison of the English text with the French of so much of the Louisiana Code as bears upon this case, the greater uniformity and precision of the French text, and its striking resemblance to the Code Napoleon, make it quite clear that the French is the original and the English the translation. Moreover, in the concluding article 3556 (3522) of verbal definitions, the French words in the Code of 1825 are arranged alphabetically, with the English equivalent opposite each one, regardless of its own alphabetical order. In the French column 'cas fortuits' are defined as 'Evénements occasionés par une force à laquelle on ne peut pas résister,' or events caused by a force that one cannot resist; opposite to which in the English column is 'Fortuitous event is that which happens by a cause which we cannot resist.' But on turning back to the other articles we find the French 'cas fortuit' rendered in English in various ways; as 'unforeseen event,' as 'unforeseen accident,' as 'fortuitous event,' as 'fortuitous accident,' as 'accident,' and as 'chance.' In one place cas fortuit ou force majeure is rendered 'fortuitous event or irresistible force,' and in another 'accidental and uncontrollable events;' thus treating the two alternative expressions as synonymous. In the concluding article, also, force is defined both in French and in English as 'the effect of a power which cannot be resisted;' and 'Force majeure, vis major, as 'un fait, un accident, que la prudence humaine ne peut ni prévoir ni empêcher,' or a fact or accident which human prudence can neither foresee nor prevent, with a corresponding definition of the English equivalent, 'superior force.' "Force majeure' is also rendered in different places 'unforeseen events,' 'overpowering force,' and 'force' only; 'événement de force majeure' as 'accident;' and 'accidens de force majeure' as 'inevitable accident.' It cannot be doubted, therefore, that the words 'unforeseen event' and 'accident,' as used in the articles now under consideration, have the meaning of 'fortuitous event' or 'irresistible force.' The Louisiana Code, following the French law and the Code Napoleon, recognizes two kinds or degrees of what, under various but equivalent names, has been called vis major, 'cas fortuit,' irresistible force, inevitable accident, or unforeseen event; the one, ordinary, which might have been foreseen by any man of common prudence as not unlikely to happen at some time; the other, extraordinary, which could not have been foreseen, or expected to occur at any time." S. c., 7 Sup. Ct. Rep. 962, 973.

CASE. (See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.)—A contested question in a court of justice.<sup>1</sup> In this sense it is used in various

1. A case is defined to be a question contested before a court of justice; an action or suit in law or equity. Ex parte Towles, 48 Tex. 413, 433.

The Iowa code provides that actions "for relief on the grounds of fraud in cases heretofore solely cognizable in a court of chancery" are barred in five years (Code, § 2529, p. 4). and that "in actions for relief on the ground of fraud . . . the cause of action shall not be deemed to have accrued until the fraud . . . complained of shall have been discovered by the party aggrieved." Code, § 2530. In holding that this latter section will not suspend the operation of the statute of limitations until the discovery of the fraud in the case of a sale absolutely void, since a deed thereunder would be no defence to recovery in an action at law, the court, Beck, J., said: "The second provision is applicable to actions contemplated in the first, which are such as are prosecuted 'for relief on the grounds of fraud in cases heretofore solely cognizable in a court of chancery.' It is not applicable to all actions for relief against fraud, but to actions in such cases as were before solely cognizable in chancery. The word 'case' here means a contested question in a court of justice. Bouvier's Dict. It does not refer to the action, or the form thereof, or the character it may assume on account of the form in which it is prosecuted, but to the questions and rights involved. Now to bring this action within the operation of section 2530, the case, the questions and rights involved, must have been 'heretofore solely cognizable in a court of chancery.' But this condition does not exist in this cause. As we have seen, the sale was absolutely void, and defendants claiming under it could not maintain an action to recover the property. Of course the sale and deed executed thereon amount to no sufficient defence to the recovery of the property in an action at law by plaintiffs. Plaintiffs' case, their rights, and the questions involved therein, are and were not solely cognizable in a court of chancery. The provision found in section 2530 is not applicable to this action, and the fact that the alleged fraud, the failure of the trustee to comply with the conditions of the trust deed, was not discovered, does not arrest the operation of the limitation." Gebhard v. Sattler, 4 Iowa, 152.

Cases in Law and Equity.—This expression, as used in the Constitution of the United States, art. 3, § 2, has been frequently the subject of exposition. The following brief extracts from the opinions of the various judges will serve to illustrate its meaning:

"A case in law or equity consists of the right of the one party as well as of the other, and may truly be said to arise under the constitution or a law of the United States, whenever its correct decision depends on the construction of either." By Marshall, C. J., Cohens v. Virginia, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 264, 379.

So it has been held by Hughes, J., that the Federal courts have jurisdiction by reason of the character of the cause, irrespective of the citizenship of the parties; and where the question involved is the appointment of a receiver of realty, situate within the United States territory of Fortress Monroe, the jurisdiction is complete. Woodfin v. Phœbus, 30 Fed. Rep. 289.

This has been extended by Drummond, J., to the case of marshals' bonds, on the ground that suits thereon are cases under the laws of the United States within the meaning of the constitution. United States ex rel. v. Davidson, 1 Biss. (U. S.) 433.

"This clause" (viz., U. S. Const. art. 3), said Marshall, C. J., "enables the judicial department to receive jurisdiction to the full extent of the constitution, laws, and treaties of the United States when any question respecting them shall assume such a form that the judicial power is capable of acting on it. That power is capable of acting only when the subject is submitted to it by a party who asserts his rights in the form prescribed by law. It then becomes a case, and the constitution declares that the judicial power shall extend to all cases arising under the constitution, laws, and treaties of the United States." Osborn v. U. S. Bank, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 319, 738.

For a discussion of this clause of the constitution in the State courts, see In the Matter of Booth, 11 Wis. 498; dissenting opinion of Bartley, C. J., Piqua Bank v. Knoup, 6 Ohio St. 342; State v. Davis, 12 S. Car. 528.

A Case arising under a Treaty.—These words, in the same section of the constitution, were held by Marshall, C. J., not to apply to an action of ejectment between two citizens of the same State for a tract of land where the defendant set up an outstanding title in a British subject, which he contended was protected by the treaty, but the highest State court in Maryland decided against the title. Owings v. Norwood's Lessee, 5 Cranch (U. S. Sup. Ct.), 344.

All Cases affecting Ambassadors, etc.—The original jurisdiction reserved to the supreme court of the United States in these cases does not extend to a criminal assault upon the person of a foreign minister. United States v. Ortega, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 467.

Cases of Admiralty and Maritime Jurisdiction—The clause of the constitution restricting the jurisdiction over such subjects to those courts which are established in pursuance of article 3 is not applicable to the Territories. Am. Ins. Co. v. Canter, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 511.

For a discussion of the application of this phrase in a State court, see Home Ins. Co. v. Northwestern Packet Co., 32 Iowa, 223.

Case arising in the Naval Forces.—In construing these words as used in an act of Congress providing for the trial and punishment of offences committed in the naval service by courts-martial, without indictment or the intervention of a jury, in connection with the fifth amendment to the constitution of the United States, the court, Sawyer, Circ. J., said: "If the acts of Congress conferring jurisdiction upon naval and military courts-martial to try offences committed in the naval and military service are held to be constitutional, it is further insisted, on behalf of the petitioner, that the offence must not only be committed, but that the jurisdiction must also be exercised, or, at least, must attach by an arrest and commencement of the prosecution before the connection of the offender with the service is legally severed by the expiration of his term of service, or by resignation, dismissal, or other discharge; that Congress has no power to authorize a trial after the connection is so severed, and after the accused has become a private citizen. To support this view a criticism is made upon the word 'case,' and it is argued that, although the offence has been committed while in the naval service, yet a case does not arise until a charge is actually made; and if the charge is not actually framed and presented till after the offender ceases to be in the service, it is not a 'case arising in the land and naval forces' within the meaning of the fifth amendment to the constitution. This is certainly a very finely-drawn distinction. It is not merely a case that the court is to try, but a 'case arising in the land or naval force.' A case, in ordinary parlance, is that which falls, comes, or happens; an event. Also a state of facts involving a question for discussion. Webster's Dict. But the event—that which happens—the state of facts presenting the question for discussion—must have arisen—must have had an origin. . . . A case arising in the land or naval forces appears to us to be a case proceeding, issuing, or springing from acts in violation of the naval laws and regulations, committed while in the naval forces or service. A case originating in the naval forces or service, or, in other words, 'offences' against the laws regulating the navy, committed by a party while in the naval forces.' In re Bogart, 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 396, 404. See Dynes v. Hoover, 20 How. (U. S.) 65. Ex parte Milligan, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 2.

"Case Affecting" contrasted with "Cause Affecting."—For the same reason that, in United States v. Ortega, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 467, it was held that the clause in the constitution as to "cases affecting ambassadors," etc., did not apply except where the ambassador was a party, so in construing the civil rights bill, which gives jurisdiction to the circuit court of all causes, civil and criminal, affecting persons who are denied, etc., the court held that it did not apply where negroes were witnesses only. Strong, J., saying: "An attempt has, however, been made to discriminate between the words 'case affecting,' as found in the constitutional provision, and the words 'cause affecting,' contained in the act of Congress. We are unable to perceive any substantial ground for a distinction. The words 'case' and 'cause' are constantly used as synonyms in statutes and judicial decisions, each meaning a proceeding in court, a suit, or action. Surely no court can have jurisdiction of either a case or a cause until it is presented in the form of an action. We regard, therefore, the United States v. Ortega as an authority directly in point, to the effect that witnesses in a criminal prosecution are not persons affected by the cause. It necessarily results from this that jurisdiction of the offence for which these defendants were indicted was not conferred upon the circuit court by the act of Congress." Blyew v. United States, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 581, 595.

Case in which the Law of the United States Authorizes an Oath to be Administered.—Where, on a complaint made before a United States commissioner for an offence against the United States, one S. was committed to stand his trial, and before warrant issued V. went before the commissioner to justify as bail for S. and made in his deposition statements of material matter which he did not believe to be true, on an indictment and conviction of V. for perjury the court held that the deposition was made in a case in which a law of the United States authorizes an oath to be administered (Rev. Stat § 5392), Benedict, J., saying: "I am of the opinion that it must be held to have been so made. Plainly, the word 'case,' as used in the statute, is not to be confined to suits or proceedings strictly in court. There are many instances where the laws of the United States authorize an oath to be administered where no suit or criminal proceeding has been commenced." United States v. Volz, 14 Blatch. (U. S.) 15.

phrases, for examples of which see the notes.<sup>1</sup> One of the forms

1. Special Cases.—Action for Assault and Battery.—In construing article 6, § 14, of the New York constitution, which provides as follows: "The county court shall have such jurisdiction in cases arising in justices' courts, and in special cases as the legislature may prescribe, but shall have no original civil jurisdiction except in such special cases," the courts have held that special cases are those distinguished from cases at common law. Thus Gardiner, C. J., says: "The primary meaning of the word 'case,' according to lexicographers, is cause. When applied to legal proceedings, it imports a state of facts which furnishes occasion for the exercise of the jurisdiction of a court of justice. In this, its generic sense, the word includes all cases, special or otherwise. At the forming of the constitution, independently of the general division of cases into those cognizable in equity and those at law, the latter were by the common law grouped into different species, each of which, as a general rule, was designated by the leading fact or incident, which was the cause or ground of the action of the court in that particular species of 'case,' as debt, assumpsit, trespass, etc. But because each case belonged to a species, this, it is hardly necessary to say, did not make it a 'special case;' for in that sense not only all 'cases' but all things are special. The primary signification of the word 'special' is 'designating a species or sort.' Whether we adopt this meaning or that of 'particular,' 'peculiar,' 'noting something more than ordinary,' or 'appropriate, designed for a particular purpose,' or 'extraordinary and uncommon,' in all which senses the word is used, is perhaps not very material. The constitution, as we have seen, does not by the term 'special cases' refer to every species of case, for this construction would annul the limitation on the power of the legislature altogether; but it designates, or was designed to designate, a particular 'sort' possessing certain characteristics which distinguish them from those ordinary 'cases' which the common law had arranged and classified; 'cases,' which are extraordinary in this sense, and 'peculiar,' and which in general are authorized by the law to 'subserve a particular purpose.' The court, in this case, therefore held that an action for assault and battery was not a special case within the meaning of art. 6, § 14, of the constitution; and that the statute purporting to confer jurisdiction therein upon the county court was unconstitutional and void." Kundolf v. Thalheimer, 12 N. Y. 593, 596.

Actions to Foreclose Mortgages.—Such actions have been held not to be special cases within the meaning of the constitution. Thus Emott, J., says: "There are two methods of interpreting the words special cases, which is the limiting phrase used in the constitution in reference to the jurisdiction which may be conferred on the county courts, limiting their original civil jurisdiction and 'jurisdiction in equity cases.' One method is that which I have already indicated, and which would consider the word 'special' as used with reference to the future action of the legislature perhaps as rather directory than otherwise, making it necessary for the legislature to select and specify particular if not peculiar cases which the court might entertain, but allowing every action to be or become a 'special case' within this jurisdiction which the legislature saw fit to legislate into that category. The other construction would refer the meaning of the word 'special' altogether to the past action of the same legislative department of the government, and restrict it not to what the legislature might thereafter see fit to make, but to what they had already made, 'special cases.' In other words, according to this view, the 'special cases' which the county court might entertain were such as were already, at the adoption of the constitution, known in the legislation of the State as distinct from the ordinary suits and actions possessing characteristics by legislation, which were extraordinary, peculiar, and authorized by law, to serve a particular purpose.

This latter view is that which is taken by the Court of Appeals (Kundolf v. Thalheimer, 12 N. Y. 593); and there is no authority under the constitution, as they have interpreted it, to confer jurisdiction upon the county court, except in those particular cases which were to be found in the statute-book, when the constitution was adopted, possessing all these characteristics, and thus clearly distinguishable from all ordinary suits and actions. For examples of such cases the court refer to summary proceedings to recover land, proceedings to drain swamps, and proceedings in insolvency—examples which indicate clearly the scope which the court intended should be given to the provision in question. It is true the decision reported in 12 N. Y. was made in reference to one of a class of actions which were formerly known as actions at law; but the jurisdiction of the courts was as well established, and their proceedings as well settled, in suits in equity as in the ordinary common-law actions of assumpsit, case, covenant, and the rest. And, therefore, it is as easy to determine what were special proceedings in equity as at law, according to the statutes and the jurisdiction and practice of the courts in 1846." Hall v. Nelson, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 88, 94.

A contrary opinion was, however, expressed in Benson v. Cromwell, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 218, by Mitchell, P. J., where he says: "It is proper briefly to state our views as to the constitution. The case in the court of appeals arose in an action for an assault and battery. Judges Gardiner and Hand each delivered written opinions, in which Judge Gardiner confines his understanding of the special cases in which county courts may have criminal jurisdiction to special proceedings existing in 1846 and similar special proceedings. Judge Hand's views are nearly the same, but he cautiously remarks: 'Perhaps it may be different in equity; for the legislature is authorized to confer upon the county judge equity jurisdiction in special cases (art. 6, § 14, subd. 4)'. This prevented him and the court of appeals from being committed to extend that decision to equity cases. Judges Denio, Johnson, Crippen, and Dean avoided the appearance to the views of Judges Gardiner and Hand by stating the grounds of their concurrence to be 'that the statute conferring jurisdiction on county courts in actions of assault and battery was unconstitutional.' Judges Ruggles and Marvin took no part in the decision. In the case in the second district, Justice Emott felt controlled by the decision in the court of appeals, although he does not hesitate to express his dissent from it, and shows strongly the danger of such a decision, when the law had met the approbation of the profession, and many titles depended on its being sustained. Justice Brown dissented from his associates. The reasoning in the court of appeals admits that cases primarily means or includes causes. The section of the constitution referred to uses it in that sense. It says: 'The county court shall have such jurisdiction in cases arising in justices' courts and in special cases as the legislature may prescribe; but shall have no original civil jurisdiction except in such 'special cases.' The 'cases' arising in justices' courts are causes—mostly common law causes—and unless cases includes such causes and not merely special proceedings, the legislature can give no appellate jurisdiction to the county courts over the justices' courts. And if the opinions in the case in the court of appeals are to be extended, that court must also pronounce any act giving an appeal to the county court from decisions of the justices' courts unconstitutional, except in what were known as special proceedings, in 1846. Section 10 of this article in like manner uses the word 'cases.' 'The testimony in equity cases shall be taken in like manner as in cases at law.' The reasoning in that case also depends on the adoption of a meaning of the word 'special' allowable only where precision of language is not required, namely, 'extraordinary.' Special is contradistinguished from 'general' as 'species' is from genus. This very article of the constitution makes this precise distinction, as applicable to this subject. Section 3 says: 'There shall be a supreme court having general jurisdiction in law and equity.' This court was to possess a power in law and equity as general as law and equity themselves are. There was to be no need of any specification of its powers by the legislature, and it may be that it was intended that the legislature should have no right to limit its powers. Having thus provided for a court with general jurisdiction, it was proper to provide for others with special jurisdiction, or jurisdiction in special cases, using the term special as contradistinguished from general. Cases was a more appropriate word than causes, for it includes not only causes, but special proceedings, and is more commonly used as including equity as well as common-law actions, than the word 'causes' is. Cases in equity is a more familiar phrase than causes in equity. This would require the legislature to specify the cases in which the county courts should have jurisdiction; and it may be that the four judges who concurred in the decision in the court of appeals 'on the ground that the statute conferring jurisdiction on county courts in actions of assault and battery was unconstitutional,' so held because the legislature did not 'specify the cases' in which the county court was to have original civil jurisdiction, but gave it in general terms; terms almost as general, as to personal actions, as those in which the constitution confers the powers on the supreme court, except by limiting the actions to the amount demanded and the residence of the defendants . . . But the legislature does distinctly specify the power to foreclose a mortgage and sell the mortgaged premises, if they are situated within that county. . . . So where it is said in section 14 that the legislature may confer equity jurisdiction in 'special cases' upon the county judge, is it not plain that cases here means causes in equity as plainly as equity cases does in § 10, and then that special must mean such as are specified by the legislature, not thrown in mass in general terms upon the court?" Page 220. S. c., 6 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 83.

This reasoning has finally prevailed, and it has been held that the statute conferring upon the county court jurisdiction of actions for the foreclosure of a mortgage and the sale of mortgaged premises, situated within the county, is constitutional, such a proceeding being a special case within art. 6, § 14, of the constitution. Arnold v. Rees, 18 N. Y. 57.

Actions of Assumpsit.—A similar view has been expressed by Willard, J., in holding that the action of the legislature in giving to the county courts jurisdiction over actions of assumpsit is constitutional. Beecher v. Allen, 5 Barb (N. Y.) 169.

Proceedings to obtain Partition of Lands has been held to be a "special case" within the meaning of the constitution. Doubleday v. Heath, 16 N. Y. 80.

Taking the Recognizance of Bail is a "special case" within article 6, § 15, of the constitution, and the power may be conferred by the legislature upon a local officer appointed to discharge the duties of county judge. People v. Main, 20 N. Y. 434.

Special Cases not Cases at Law.—In holding that, by the California constitution, no case, except cases arising in the probate court, and criminal cases amounting to felony, is subject to review by the supreme court, in the exercise of its appellate power, unless it be a case in equity or a "case at law" of a definite character; and that "special cases" are special proceedings characteristically differing from ordinary suits at the common law, and are not "cases at law" within the appellate jurisdiction of the supreme court as defined by the constitution, such as, for example, proceedings under an act to modify the grades of certain streets; the court, by Wallace, J., said: "It will be seen upon examination of the constitution that the cases to which the appellate power extends are carefully defined. . . . It is argued by the appellant that the case is a 'case at law,' one involving the legality of an assessment, and therefore within the jurisdiction of this court to hear and determine. But even if it can be said to involve the legality of an assessment, I think it clear that it is not a case at law within the intent of the constitution. It is said that it is a legal controversy, prosecuted according to the forms of law, and that therefore it is a case at law; but though it be such controversy, and so prosecuted, it does not follow that it is a 'case at law' in the sense of not being a 'special case.' A special case may be said to be a legal controversy, prosecuted according to the forms of law; and yet the constitution itself has distinctly provided that the jurisdiction in 'special cases' shall be in the county court, unless otherwise provided for. A special case can no more be said to be a case at law in a constitutional sense, merely because it is a legal controversy prosecuted according to the forms of law, than it could be said to be a case in equity, because its solution might involve a consideration of the principles of equity, or the judicial proceedings provided for its determination were similar in form to those usually observed in courts of equity. But the case at bar does not belong to either one of the two grand divisions of civil cases mentioned in the constitution as subject to be reviewed here in the exercise of appellate power, but does unmistakably belong to another and well-defined class of cases which are accustomed to be principally designated and distinguished from the others by the fact that they are 'not cases for which the courts of general jurisdiction had always supplied a remedy.' Parsons v. Tuolumne County Water Co., 5 Cal. 43. 'Special cases' are special proceedings characteristically differing from ordinary suits at the common law. Jackson v. Day, 15 Cal. 91. Special proceedings do not proceed according to the course of the common law. They give new rights and afford new remedies (Saunders v. Haynes, 13 Cal. 145), etc. This distinction between 'cases at law' and 'special cases' was already established and enforced by this court when, in 1862, the constitution was amended, and 'cases at law' and 'special cases' again provided for; 'the county courts shall have original jurisdiction . . . of all such special cases and proceedings as are not otherwise provided for' (art. 6, sec. 8), is the language of the constitutional amendment of 1862. I can attribute to this expression no other meaning than that which, as we have already seen, had been theretofore fixed to the term 'special cases' in this court before the amendment of 1862 was adopted; and it results that 'special cases,' that is, cases which grow out of special proceedings authorized by statute creating rights not theretofore existing, and providing remedies not accustomed to be administered by courts of law or equity as such, are not cases at law within the appellate jurisdiction of this court as defined by the constitution, even though they may involve questions or values which, if involved in a case of law, would constitute it one to be reviewed here on appeal or writ of error. The case at bar not being a case in equity nor a case at law, within the constitutional designation, is not within the appellate jurisdiction of this court as defined by the constitution." Houghton's Appeal, 42 Cal. 35, 60.

The term 'special cases,' in the constitution, does not include any class of cases for which the courts of general jurisdiction have always supplied a remedy. The 'special cases' must be confined to such new cases as are the creation of statutes and the proceedings under which are unknown to the general framework of courts of common law and equity. Parson v. Tuolumne County Water Co., 5 Cal. 43.

Writs of mandate are not 'special cases' within the meaning of article 6, section 8, of the constitution; and therefore the act which attempts to confer power on the county courts to issue writs of mandate is unconstitutional; "for," said the court, "the familiar definition of a special case is that it is a case unknown to the general framework of courts of law or equity. Writs of mandamus certainly cannot be held to be 'special cases' within this definition." People ex rel. Jackson v. Supervisors of Kern County, 45 Cal. 679. See Spencer Creek Water Co. v. Vallejo, 48 Cal. 70.

Cases at Law.—The words "'cases at law,' . . . which involve . . . the legality of any task, impost, assessment, toll, or municipal fine," in section 4 of article 6 of the constitution, refer to 'civil cases' as distinguished from criminal cases; and as the supreme court has no jurisdiction on appeal in a criminal action where the offence charged is less than a felony, there can be no appeal from the judgment of the county court imposing a fine on a conviction of unlawfully demanding and receiving toll. People v. Johnson, 30 Cal. 98.

The proceedings for the appointment of a guardian for an insane person is not a "case at law" within the meaning of the fifth section of article 1 of the constitution of Wisconsin, which provides as follows: "The right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate, and shall extend to all 'cases at law' without regard to the amount in controversy," etc. "We think," said Whiton, C. J., "that 'cases at law,' as these words are used in the constitution, are not cases of this description. 'Cases at law' are properly controversies between parties, and not the appointment of guardians for minors or insane persons." Gaston v. Babcock, 6 Wis. 503.

Civil Cases.—In Indiana the act organizing the court of common pleas gave it "original concurrent jurisdiction with the circuit courts in the State in all civil cases both at law and in equity." Acts 1848, p. 32. In construing this act the court, Worden, J., said: "This language is broad enough, in our opinion, to include cases for divorce, which have always been regarded as civil proceedings in this State, inasmuch as no ecclesiastical tribunals have ever been established here." Ellis v. Hatfield, 20 Ind. 101; Herron v. Herron, 16 Ind. 129. But see the opinion of Gregory, J., in Ewing v. Ewing, 24 Ind. 468.

On the question as to the action of the circuit court in setting aside the report of damages, made by the appraisers, for a right of way, and ordering them to be assessed by a jury, the court, Perkins, J., said: "It is contended on the one hand that that clause in the constitution which declares that 'in all civil cases the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate,' forbids an assessment of damages except by jury, unless the same be waived; while on the other it is insisted that that clause has no application to the case at bar, because it is not a 'civil case.' . . . The above provision in our own constitution applies in terms but to 'civil cases.' What then, within its meaning, is a 'civil case'? Not every case which is not a criminal is a civil one. 'Civil case' had a definition, a meaning at common law, when the early constitutions of this country were formed; and it has been held that the term was used in those constitutions in the common-law sense. See Willyard v. Hamilton, 7 Ohio, 112; Livingston v. The Mayor, etc., 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 85; Beekman v. Saratoga, etc., R. Co., 3 Paige (N. Y.), 45; Gold v. Vermont Central, etc., R. Co., 19 Vt. 478; Wells v. Caldwell, 1 A. K. Marsh (Ky.), 441; Harris v. Wood, 6 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 641; and the cases cited in French v. Lighty, 9 Ind. 475; Armstrong v. Jackson, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 374. It may be fairly argued that the term should be construed in our constitution to embrace such as were treated as 'civil cases' in this State when the constitution was adopted; and such has been the rule acted upon in some of the States. See Sedgw. on Stat. 542. But this rule would not extend the meaning of the term so as to embrace legal proceedings in all cases except criminal. It has not been the practice in this State to try chancery causes, nor to assess damages, in the laying out of highways, by jury (see Kemp v. Smith, 7 Ind. 471); nor to try contested elections by that tribunal. Other examples might be named. Chancery causes, it should be observed, are, in the system of practice provided for by the new constitution, expressly merged in the class of civil actions. What has been the practice in the assessment of damages to real estate taken for public works? On appeals in such cases to the circuit court, the trial seems uniformly to have been by jury. It was so in Rubottom v. McClure, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 505. That was the first case, and was tried as early as 1837 or 1838. It was followed by McIntire v. State, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 384; State v. Digby, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 543; Vanblaricum v. State, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 209; State v. Beackmo, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 246; and other cases, all of which seem to have been thus tried on appeal in the circuit court. See New Albany, etc., Co. v. Connelly, 7 Ind. 32. Such being the fact, it follows that this class of cases may legitimately be ranked as civil, and hence held to be within the constitutional provision above quoted." See Sedgw. on Stat., supra; Lake Erie, etc., R. Co. v. Heath, 9 Ind. 558; Norristown & Turnpike Co. v. Burket, 26 Ind. 53.

The Georgia legislature having passed an act declaring in one of its sections "that neither of the aforesaid courts shall issue out any civil process, or try any 'civil case,' except for the trial of the right of property, real and personal." Motion was made to bring on the trial of a certain cause on the ground that this act, which was entitled "An act to alleviate the condition of debtors, and afford them a temporary relief," did not prevent the trial of equity cases, the statutes having created a distinction between equity and "civil cases"; but the motion was overruled, the court, Charlton, J., saying: "The second ground of the motion now demands investigation; and the question it involves is, whether, under our system of laws, an equity case can be denominated a 'civil case.' There can be but this division of cases: 1, criminal; 2, civil. Criminal cases are those which involve a wrong or injury done to the Republic, for the punishment of which the offender is prosecuted in the name of the whole people. 'Civil cases' are those which involve disputes or contests between man and man, and which only terminate in the adjustment of the rights of plaintiffs and defendants. It is said, however, that a critical examination and collation of our statutes establish another class of cases, to wit, equity cases as contradistinguished to civil and criminal cases. I have taken infinite pains to trace, in our laws, the lines of distinction between an equity and a civil case; but without adopting implicitly the inferences of the gentlemen who contend for this distinction, I can see nothing in the plain letter of the law which creates it. The argument, I think, stands fairly thus: The constitution gives to the superior court exclusive and final jurisdiction in all criminal cases, and in cases respecting the titles to land. Art. 3, sec. 1. Here, then, is one distinction between criminal cases and that class of 'civil cases' relating to real property. The inferior courts shall have cognizance 'of all other civil cases.' Art. 3, sec. 1. Here, then, is another distinction between criminal cases and 'all other civil cases,' cognizable in the inferior courts; and, ex concessu of counsel, there is nothing in the constitution which excludes the inferior courts from sustaining a jurisdiction over equity suits, under the sweeping clause of 'all other civil cases.' But the third section of the judicial act of 1799 is, I think, conclusive as to the scope and latitude which should be allowed the terms 'civil cases.' It declares that the said superior and inferior courts shall have full power and authority to hear and determine all causes, both civil and criminal, of which they shall severally have jurisdiction. Now the term 'civil' must evidently mean all cases (whatever technical appellation they may assume, in the shape of an action or chancery bill) which cannot legally be denominated criminal cases. The 53d section of the judicial act of 1799 confers a chancery jurisdiction upon the superior courts. Therefore equity proceedings must be denominated 'civil cases,' agreeably to the mode of classification adopted in the 3d section of the judicial act; and I may add, that the terms 'all other civil cases,' used in the 1st section of the 3d article of the constitution, appear to authorize a similar conclusion, for the constitution speaks of only two classes of cases—criminal and civil; and it will not, I presume, be contended that the judicial department can take cognizance of cases which do not fall under the one or the other of these classes; the conclusion is thus irresistible, that if an equity case is not a 'civil case,' the court has no authority to try it. This is the dilemma we are reduced to by establishing, or rather attempting to establish, a distinction between an equity and a civil case. Upon the second ground of the motion, I am, therefore, of opinion that an equity case is a 'civil case,' and that this bill cannot be tried under the prohibitory provisions of the act of assembly, it not being a case relating to the right of personal property." Grimball v. Ross, Charlton's Rep. (Ga.) 175, 181.

In Ohio it has been held that the mayor of the city of Cincinnati can not take acknowledgments under the act (13 O. L. 67) authorizing him to exercise, within the limits of that corporation, in all "civil and criminal cases," the same powers as are, or may be, delegated to justices of the peace by the laws of the State; the court, Wright, J., saying: "When the general assembly speak of 'civil and criminal cases,' we understand them to employ legal terms in their legal sense, and to describe suits at law. A civil case is a suit at law to redress the violation of some contract, or to repair some injury to property or to the person or personal rights of individuals; a criminal case is a public prosecution for a crime or misdemeanor. In such cases the mayor of Cincinnati was authorized to exercise the same powers as justices of the peace. The authority does not embrace any other case, act, or duty of a justice." Shultz's Lessee v. Moore, Wright's Ch. Rep. (Ohio) 280.

Criminal Cases.—The term "criminal cases," as used in the first section, third article of the constitution, has reference to such acts or omissions as are in violation of the public laws of the State, and not to the violation of the local by-laws or police regulation; for, said Warner, J.: "The common-law definition of a crime, as given by Blackstone, is an act committed, or omitted, in violation of a public law. 4 Black. Com. 3. And it is in this sense that we consider the term 'criminal cases' in the constitution was intended to have been understood;" therefore violations of local by-laws of a municipal corporation, not involving the elements of offences known to the penal laws, are within the jurisdiction of such local authorities as the legislature may authorize, notwithstanding that the constitution provides that the superior courts shall have exclusive jurisdiction in all "criminal cases," except in the cases which are therein specified. Williams v. City Council of Augusta, 4 Ga. 509; Floyd v. Commissioners of Eatonton, 14 Ga. 354.

Capital Cases.—An indictment for a capital offence cannot, in Indiana, be found in a circuit court in the absence of the president, because the third section of the fifth article of the constitution provides: "that the president alone, in the absence of the associate judges, or the president and one of the associate judges, in the absence of the other, shall be competent to hold a court, as also the two associate judges, in the absence of the president shall be competent to hold a court, except in capital cases," etc. In this case it was contended that the constitution has delegated to the circuit court, when held by the two associate judges, general jurisdiction in all criminal cases, by empowering them to hold a court, and that the restriction on their power contained in the exception as to "capital cases," does not reach to that portion of their jurisdiction under which the grand jury is impanelled, sworn, and charged, and under which the indictment is returned into court; but that it only restrains them from proceeding further with the cause after the indictment is returned; but, said the court, Dewey, J.: "This interpretation is founded upon the meaning which those who hold to it give to the word 'cases,' as used in the exception in respect to proceedings for a capital offence. It is contended that case as there employed is synonymous with prosecution (which, according to the definition of Blackstone, is the commencement of a criminal suit by the indictment), and that it does not include the proceeding prior to the indictment. We cannot bring ourselves to concur in this construction. The same word 'cases' is used as well in that part of the constitution which confers jurisdiction generally upon the circuit courts, as in that which restricts it when exercised by the associate judges only; and we cannot suppose that the framers of the constitution designed to use it in the same paragraph, and in relation to the same general subject, in different senses. The circuit courts, whether held by all the judges, by the president alone, by the president and one associate judge, or by the two associates, have unlimited criminal jurisdiction 'in all such cases, and in such manner, as may be prescribed by law,' except that the associate judges shall not hold a court in 'capital cases.' If this word, as used in the first instance, was designed to embrace (as undoubtedly it was) all the stages of criminal proceedings from the impelling of the grand jury to the execution of the final sentence, we know of no rule of criticism by which it must not embrace the same proceeding, when designating the crimes over which a court held by the associate judges shall not have jurisdiction. In our opinion, the circuit court, so held, has no more power to impanel, swear, and charge a grand jury, and receive an indictment for a capital crime, than it has to try the cause and pronounce sentence." Cook v. State, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 165. See Com. v. Hardy, 2 Mass. 303.

Case Stated.—By Sergeant, J.: "According to the English practice, a special case is used instead of a special verdict. It is a species of special verdict. The jury find generally for either party, but subject to the opinion of the court, on a special case (stated by the counsel on both sides, or dictated by the judge), with regard to a matter of law. Leave is sometimes given to turn it into a special verdict. But in a special case, as in a special verdict, the facts proved at the trial ought to be stated, and not merely the evidence of facts. In arguing a special case, the counsel are not permitted to go out of it, and the court must judge upon it as stated. If it be so defective, that the court are not able to give judgment, they will grant a new trial, in order to have it restated. 1 Tidd's Prac. 930; 1 Arch. Prac. 192. Under the Pennsylvania practice, a special case, or as it is usually termed a 'case stated,' has been more extensively used. The parties where a real contest exists may enter an action by amicable agreement, and in that action or in one brought by process issued may agree to state certain facts for the opinion of the court; and if they desire to have the benefit of a writ of error, may insert in their agreement that it shall be in nature of a special verdict. Fuller v. Trevor, 8 S. & R. (Pa.) 529. The rule, however, as to the duty of stating the facts only, and not the evidence of facts, and of submitting to the court only questions of law, is the same here as in the English practice." Diehl v. Ihrie, 3 Wharton (Pa.), 143, 148.

By Gibson, C. J.: "A case stated is a substitute for a verdict, resorted to for convenience and to save the expense of a trial, its purpose being not to make evidence for a jury, but to supersede the action of a jury altogether, by imparting to facts ascertained by consent the judicial certainty requisite to enable the court to pass upon the law, and give judgment on the whole; and its existence is consequently inconsistent with an issue to draw the facts again into contest." McInghan v. Bovard, 4 Watts (Pa.), 308, 312.

By Rogers, J.: "A case stated is a substitute for a special verdict, adopted for convenience to save the labor and expense of finding the same facts by the jury in the form of a special verdict." Whitesides v. Russell, 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 44.

In Each Case.—In a policy of insurance it was stipulated that the underwriters shall not be liable "for any partial loss on other goods, or on the vessel and freight, unless it amount to five per cent, exclusive in each case of all charges and expenses incurred, for the purpose of ascertaining and proving the loss;" and it was held that the words "in each case" in the foregoing clause do not mean "at each time of loss," but that they refer to the three several subjects insured, goods, freight, and vessel, and require a damage of five per cent to justify a claim in each case, and so successive losses on the cargo, in the course of the voyage, each less than five per cent, but in the aggregate amounting to more than five per cent are not within the exception, and are to be borne by the underwriters. Donnell v. The Columbian Ins. Co., 2 Sumner (U. S.), 366.

Facts of his Case.—An affidavit of merits, under the New York rules of court, that the party "has fully and fairly stated the facts of his case," etc., is insufficient; it should be that he "has fully and fairly stated the case." Fitzhugh v. Truax, 1 Hill (N. Y.), 644.

The affidavit may be that the party has stated "this case" or "his case," but not that he has stated "his defence;" for, said Bronzon, J.: "An affidavit that the party has fully and fairly stated this case or his case to counsel fairly implies that he has stated the whole case, and is a sufficient compliance, in that particular, of action, including assumpsit and trover.<sup>1</sup> Used in the phrase "in case of" to denote the contingency of an event.<sup>2</sup> Something that holds or covers anything else.<sup>3</sup>

with the 61st Rule. But an affidavit that he has stated his defence to counsel only implies that he has stated one side of the case, and is therefore insufficient." Brownell v. Marsh, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 636.

Nor will it do to qualify the phraseology by adding "so far as the facts have come to his knowledge, or in any other manner, unless a sufficient excuse therefor be expressly shown." Brown v. Toosey, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 616.

For the text of this 61st Rule, adopted May Term, 1840, see 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 644.

An affidavit of merits (to change the place of trial) which states that the party has fully and fairly stated "the facts of this case" to his counsel was held sufficient, and equivalent to the statement that he has fully and fairly stated "the case" to his counsel, as required by Rule 39. Jordan v. Garrison, 6 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 6.

But an affidavit of merits is defective which states that the defendant has stated "his case in this cause" to his counsel, instead of "the case," as required by Rule 39. Such a statement is not equivalent to the statement that "he has stated his case" generally. Ellis v. Jones, 6 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 296.

See generally on this subject, Cary v. Livermore, 2 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 170; Bleecker v. Storms, 2 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 161; Richmond v. Cowles, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 359; Rickards v. Swetzer, 3 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 413; McMurray v. Gifford, 5 How. Prac. (N. Y.) 14; Britain v. Peabody, 4 Hill (N. Y.), 61, and reporter's note at page 64.

Sit in any Case.—The Texas constitution provides that no judge "shall sit in any case" wherein he has been of counsel. This disqualification disables a district judge from sitting at the trial of a case in which he has been counsel, but not from receiving an indictment from a grand jury, nor, it seems, from making orders preliminary to the trial of such a case. "What is meant," said Winkler, J., "by the phrase 'sit in any case' is, we are of the opinion, explained by the provisions of the constitution as to what may be done when the judge is so disqualified. For instance, the parties may, by consent, appoint a proper person to try the case; or upon their failing to do so, a competent person may be appointed to try the same in the county where it is pending. Art. 5, sec. 11. Taking these several passages in connection, it would seem that when it is said the judge "shall not sit in any case," it is intended that he shall not do what the person chosen or appointed may do—that is, "try the case." So that whilst a judge who has been counsel for either party could not sit in the trial of the case, or make any ruling which would properly arise on the trial, he would not be incompetent to preside in taking incidental orders, as, for instance, an order granting a change of venue, or entering an order appointing the person agreed upon or appointed to try the case. The disqualification of the judge to try the case would not prevent him from receiving the report of the grand jury for the term, although there be embraced in their report the return of an indictment in which he would not be qualified to sit on the trial. We find no error in overruling the defendant's motion in arrest of judgment. Cock v. State, 8 Tex. App. 659, 666.

1. See TRESPASS ON THE CASE.

2. In Case of the Death.—In wills, this and kindred phrases, when applied to a first legatee, and followed by a second legacy of the same property, have been interpreted by the courts not to mean death at any time in the future, but death within a certain period, and when no other period is indicated, within the lifetime of the testator. Lowfield v. Stoneham, 2 Strange, 1261; Hinckley v. Simmons, 4 Ves. 160; Turner v. Moore, 6 Ves. 567; Cambridge v. Rous, 8 Ves. 12; Galland v. Leonard, 1 Swanst. Ch. 161; King v. Taylor, 5 Ves. 806; Home v. Pillans, 2 Myl. & K., 20; Schenk v. Agnew, 4 Kay & Johns. 406; Briggs v. Shaw, 9 Allen (Mass.), 516. But see Douglas v. Chalmer, 2 Ves. Jr. 501; also In re Potter's Trust, L. R. 8 Eq. Cas. 52.

3. By the Metalliferous Mines Act, 1872 (35 and 36 Vict. c. 77, s. 23, subs. 2.): "Gunpowder or other explosive or inflammable substance shall not be taken into the mine, except in a case or canister containing not more than four pounds;" and it was held that the word "case" as used in the section must be taken to mean something solid and substantial in the nature of a canister, and that a bag of linen or calico was not such a "case." By Lord Coleridge, C. J.: "I should say that here the words 'case or canister'

CASH.—Ready money.<sup>1</sup>

explain one another, that the word 'case,' which is used in this place and in connection with 'canister,' must mean a 'case' in the nature of a 'canister,' not strictly speaking a canister, but a solid and substantial thing of wood or metal, or some other such solid substance, which can be covered over so as to prevent ignition from a spark. That seems a proper view of this section, because in so construing the act we give effect to the act according to its purposes. . . . I do not think the respondents gained much by referring to the subsequent act (the Explosives Act, 1875, 38 Vict. c. 17, s. 22, which enacts that the gunpowder shall be in a substantial 'case, bag, canister, or other receptacle'), for that is directed to a totally different subject, viz., the conveyance of gunpowder in the open air, and not below ground, where there is no escape. . . . It was admitted that a net, if sufficiently fine, would be a 'case' within the meaning of the act; and we are familiar with the fact that some most powerful gunpowder is made in such large grains that it could be carried in a net which need not be particularly fine to hold it. But a net would be no protection whatever in a mine. I am clearly of opinion that this bag is not a 'case' within the meaning of the act, and the justices must proceed to convict." And by Grove, J.: "I am entirely of the same opinion. . . . When I first read sec. 23 it never occurred to me that 'case' meant 'bag,' nor indeed should I have expected, until a definition was found including bag—which may be sometimes the same as a 'case'—that 'case' could include 'bag.' For 'case,' prima facie, to my mind means something solid—not confined perhaps to box, canister, or tin case, but something of a solid character. The counsel for the respondents, in answer to a question put to him as to 'net,' defined 'case' to mean anything which would include another thing. So perhaps a handkerchief or net might be a 'case.' . . . Can any one, except a person seeking a way out of the act, interpret the word 'case' used in s. 23 otherwise than as meaning something solid? But it is said the word 'case,' according to the dictionary, may include a bag. There are few words that cannot be used in more senses than one, and are not capable of some exceptional interpretation different from the ordinary meaning if taken from their context. I have as an author tried in vain to find words not capable of being applied differently to my intention. Language does not admit of mathematical accuracy, and it is impossible to use words which, with all their various senses, may not be used in a different sense to that in which the author used them. Nobody reading this act by ordinary common-sense would say that in an act providing against accidents from explosion of gunpowder the provision that 'It shall not be taken into the mine except in a case or canister,' means that it may be taken in a thin calico bag or even in a net, because a net would include some kinds of gunpowder. Every one would understand the word 'case' there to mean something solid, something permanent, which would save the gunpowder from being exploded. . . . Bag is not, however, the ordinary meaning of the word 'case,' and I have not the least doubt that it is not the meaning intended by this act. I am of opinion that case in sec. 23 means—as 'canister' means—something solid and capable of reasonably protecting gunpowder taken into a mine, one of the very sources of danger against which the act is directed. Gunpowder is not to be conveyed into a mine except in something that will protect it. A 'case' or 'canister' would protect it from a spark or hot cinder which would be almost certain to explode it if only in a thin bag, and still more so in a net." Foster v. Diphwys Casson Slate Co., L. R. 18 Q. B. Div. 428; s. c., 56 L. J. Rep. Magistrates' Cases, 23.

1. "A sale for cash is a sale for the money in hand: at least such is the general meaning of the term." By Elmer, J., Steward v. Scudder, 24 N. J. Law, 96, 101.

"In all sales for cash, the money must be paid when the property is delivered. It is wholly inconsistent to claim that a sale for cash means a sale on a credit for a week or ten days. If the commission merchants in New York have adopted such a custom as was contended for and testified to, it must be for their own accommodation, and cannot be recognized as obligatory on those who intrust to them property to be sold for cash." By Williams, C. J., Bliss v. Arnold, 8 Vt. 252.

But in a Missouri case the court said, Gantt, P. J.: "A sale for cash, or a sale which is called a cash transaction, the term being interpreted in the sense in which the merchants of St. Louis use it, is something different from a sale of goods to be paid for on delivery. Of course a sale of goods to be paid for on delivery may in one sense be termed a sale for cash; but the interpretation put on the phrase 'a cash transaction,' or 'a cash sale,' by the course of dealings in St. Louis, demonstrates that often what is thus characterized repudiates the idea of payment at the time when the goods come to the possession of the purchaser. It is distinctly shown that it is quite consistent with the definition practically given to this phrase by the well-understood custom of the merchants of St. Louis, that an interval of thirty days may elapse between delivery and payment, and yet that the transaction may be called and recognized by every one as a 'cash transaction.' It follows that a 'sale for cash,' a 'cash sale,' or a 'cash transaction' is something, as known to the merchants of St. Louis, not to be confounded for a moment with a sale by the terms of which the goods sold are to be paid for on delivery. The two expressions are not convertible; and every instruction which in terms treats them as convertible, or which assumes their convertibility, is liable to mislead a jury—indeed, can hardly fail to have that effect. Now, there was no evidence before the jury that the goods in this case were to be paid for on delivery. There was evidence that the sale was for cash, or that the transaction was what is called a 'cash transaction.' And what this phrase meant we have already seen." St. Louis Type Fdry. v. Union Printing Co., 3 Mo. App. 142, 149.

Where a plaintiff in execution, desiring to purchase the defendant's land at a low price, ordered the sheriff to sell for specie, the order was indorsed on the execution, but no such condition was stated in the advertisement. On the day of sale a junior creditor offered $3000 for the land in bank bills. His offer was refused, and the land was sold to a third person for $1000. It was held that the sale was void as against the junior creditor, and at his instance it was set aside, the court, O'Neal, J., saying: "To enable persons to buy they ought to be apprised of the terms on which the property is to be sold. The usual terms of a sheriff's sale are cash. The term cash has two meanings—one a payment in current bills, the other in specie. The first is the popular, the latter the legal meaning. The former has, in common parlance, entirely supplanted the latter. An advertisement that the sale was to be for cash would be understood by every one to be for current bills. A sale made for specie, under such a notice, was anything else than fair. It was, in fact, a sale without being advertised, for one of the most important conditions of the sale was not disclosed in the advertisement. In this respect the sale was void for want of authority on the part of the sheriff to sell." Farr v. Sims, Rich. Eq. Cas. (S. Car.) 122, 131.

But where property is advertised by the commissioner to be sold for cash, it was held no variance for him to announce at the sale that payment would be received in United States treasury notes, the court, Carroll, Ch., saying: "The mortgaged property was advertised to be sold for cash, and immediately before the sale it was announced that payment would be received in United States treasury notes. It is objected that cash means coin, and that the premises were therefore sold upon other terms than those specified in the advertisement of sale. It would be difficult to show that the term cash in the notice of sale was intended to mean or actually imported anything else than ready money, in contradistinction to credit. That it does not mean coin when employed in an advertisement of sale is shown by the very case cited to sustain the objection (Farr v. Sims, Rich. Eq. Cas. 131)." Meng v. Honter, 13 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 210.

When the terms of a sale by auction require a "cash payment," the auctioneer has no authority to receive as payment a check upon a bank in which the drawer has at the time no funds; and the vendor is not bound by the act of the auctioneer, though he omits to notify the vendee that he repudiates it. Broughton v. Silloway, 114 Mass. 71. See Sykes v. Giles, 5 M. & W. 645; Williams v. Evans, L. R. 1 Q. B. 352.

Where the statement of a mechanic's lien contained the following clause: "That the terms, time given, and conditions of said contract are and were cash," it was held not to be a compliance with the Code Civ. Proc. § 1187, requiring a statement of the terms, time given, and conditions of the contract, the court, Sharpstein, J., saying: "On behalf of appellant it is insisted that the requirement as to 'terms, time given, and conditions of his contract' is not fulfilled by the statement that they 'were and are cash.' . . . The only question which we can determine is, whether there has been a substantial compliance with them. Whether the word cash sufficiently shows what the terms and conditions of the contract were, and what time was given, is the question which we have to decide. In respondent's brief it is said that, 'in modern times there is no word in the English language so pregnant with meaning as the little word cash, used in the proper relation; and it is further said in the same connection, that 'it contains a world of significance.' On turning, however, to the standard dictionaries of the English language we find that its primary meaning is 'a box,' and that its common meaning is 'money,' and that it sometimes means 'ready money.' Accepting these definitions as probably correct, it does not seem to us that the word cash, when used in the connection in which it is in this case, signifies anything. Assuming that the contract in this case was of the most simple character, consisting of an agreement that one of the parties should furnish certain materials to be used in the construction of the buildings which were being erected upon the defendant's premises, and that the other should pay a stipulated price for said materials upon the delivery of them upon said premises or elsewhere, would the word cash indicate to a reasonable certainty that these were 'the terms, time given, and conditions' of the contract? If a witness were asked to state before a court and jury 'the terms, time given, and conditions' of such a contract, would the answer cash be considered satisfactory? It is conceded that, if time had been given, cash would not be the appropriate word to express the 'terms, time given, and conditions' of the contract. In that case the word 'credit' would throw just as much light upon the terms, etc., of the contract as the word cash does in this case. To hold that the statement in this case, in respect of 'the terms, time given, and conditions of his contract' is a compliance with the law, would be in effect to hold that a compliance with it in this respect is unnecessary. This we are not prepared to do." Hooper v. Flood, 54 Cal. 218.

"Cash is money at command; ready money. Worcester. Cash (commerce) is money on hand, which a merchant, trader, or other person has to do business with. Bouv. Law Dict. 240. To receive a cheque, therefore, "as cash" is to receive it as money—ready money, and imports a payment of the debt for which it was given." By Barks, J., Blair v. Wilson, 28 Gratt. (Va.) 165, 175.

"In striving to reach the true meaning of the word cash, C. C. 14 directs us to take its 'most usual signification.' This word may be employed at all times as the synonym of money in general; but Webster declares that, primarily, it means 'ready money, money in chest or on hand, etc.;' and in view of the definition of the Code, art. 2439, declaring a sale to be the giving of a thing 'for a price in current money,' the use of this word sale, in conjunction with the word cash, so modifies the latter as to exclude the idea of its use as expressive of money as a consideration, in contradistinction to goods, property, etc., as in barter. This results, for if anything but money be taken the contract is not under our law a sale, but an 'exchange,' lease, etc., according to its circumstances. The only sense, therefore, permissible in this connection for the term cash sale is the primary one of a sale for ready money as distinguished from one upon credit. Having concluded that where a person, by expression or implication, stipulates for cash, what he reserves is the right to collect his money at will, I do not feel justified in going to the extent of intimating that where parties have actually settled upon a definite period, however short, during which payment may be withheld, the sale is nevertheless for cash. Such a state of facts comes too clearly within Webster's definition of credit, No. 11: 'time given for payment for lands or goods sold on trust, as a long or short credit.'" By McGloin, J., Delaume v. Agar, McGloin Rep. (La.) 97, 104.

But in a Maryland case the court held that where a sale of goods is made for cash, an offer by the vendee to pay in the vendor's own overdue notes was a compliance with the condition, Mason, J., saying: "A cash payment, in ordinary parlance, is understood in contradistinction to a credit payment; and there is no more reason for supposing that the first is to be made in money than that a deferred or credit payment is when due. Each payment must be made in the same way. The only difference, as before remarked, is that one must be made at the time of sale or delivery, the other when the credit has expired. What discharges the one will also discharge the other." Foley v. Mason, 6 Md. 37, 51.

Cash, in the sense used in the statute (authorizing the sale of decedent's lands: Rev. Code, §§ 2228, 2079, 2080, 2090), and in the order of the court authorizing this sale, means money; that is, such a currency as was good as a legal tender in payment of debts under the constitution and laws of the United States, or such a currency as was convertible into such a legal-tender currency without loss to the estate to which it was paid. It does not mean the "war currency" of the so-called Confederate States. Index to Rev. Code, p. 891, § 2134. This was not cash, and a payment in it was not a compliance with the terms of this sale. Const. U. S., art. I, § 10." Kitchell v. Jackson, 44 Ala. 302.

Gold dust is not cash within the meaning of a contract calling for the payment of cash; for, said the court, Bennett, J.: "By the contract the lumber was to be paid for in cash, and gold dust is not cash. The defendants, however, could receive it at such price as they chose in lieu of cash, the same as they might accept any other article of merchandise instead of cash. They did receive it at $15.50 per ounce—the plaintiff paid it at that valuation; and though he paid it, as he says, under protest, his protest was a nullity. If gold dust was in truth, at $16 the ounce, equivalent to cash, why did he not exchange it at that rate for cash, and make his payment in that about which there could be no question? Gold dust is constantly fluctuating in its market value; it is an article of traffic like merchandise, and a payment in it is a payment for just so much as the parties agree, and no more". Gunter v. Sanchez, 1 Cal. 45, 49.

Bank notes, being ready money, pass as cash by a devise of "all that should be in testator's house at his death;" otherwise of bonds and other securities, they not being cash, but only evidence of so much money due. Popham v. Lady Aylesbury, 1 Ambler, 68. See Southcot v. Watson, 3 Atk. 226, 232; Miller v. Race, 1 Burr. 452; U. S. Bank v. Bank of Georgia, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 333, 347; Mann v. Exrs. of Mann, 1 Johns. Chanc. (N. Y.) 231, 238. Contra, Bank notes are not cash, nor can they be brought into court and tendered as such. Coxe v. State Bank at Trenton, 3 Halst. (N. J.) 172.

Treasury notes are not money or cash. In this case the court, Hosmer, C. J., said: "I am aware of the decision made in a sister State (Keith v. Jones, 9 Johns. N. Y. 120), in which it is said that bank-paper, in conformity with common usage and understanding, is regarded as cash, and that the same observation has been made in other cases. Miller v. Race, 1 Burr. 452; Grant v. Vaughan, 3 Burr. 1516). Notwithstanding the truth of the remark, evinced by constant experience, that bank bills are voluntarily received as cash, I cannot admit that he who assumes to pay gold and silver coin can compel his creditor to receive in satisfaction bank bills of any or either of the numerous banks in our country. The creditor may always say, and this should be an impenetrable shield, Non hac in fadera veni. Let the law be as it may with respect to bank bills, which by usage are treated as cash, and are the common currency of our country, there is no analogy between them and treasury notes. The latter are neither cash nor currency; and there is no usage to sanction or even give plausibility to their being considered as such." Foquet v. Hoadley, 3 Conn. 534.

Full Cash Value.—In the Code of California, sec. 3627, providing that "all property must be assessed at its full cash value," the term "full cash value" means the amount at which the property would be appraised if taken in payment of a just debt due from a solvent debtor. Huntington v. C. P. R. Co., 2 Sawy. (U. S.) 503, 510.

Estimated Cash Value.—Where a fire-insurance policy contained this clause: "It is agreed that the aggregate amount insured in this and other companies on the above-mentioned property shall not exceed two thirds of the 'estimated cash value,'" it was held that the "estimated value" was that at the time of insurance, as placed upon the policy, for otherwise the contract would be reformed by substituting "actual" for estimated. Elliott v. Lycoming County Mut. Ins. Co., 66 Pa. St. 22; s. c., 5 Am. Rep. 323.

Actual Cash Payment and Value.—See ACTUAL, note.

Terms Cash.—The words "terms cash" upon an unreceipted bill of goods sent by a wholesale to a retail dealer cannot be held, as a matter of law, to imply that the goods were paid for before they were shipped. Wellauer v. Fellows, 48 Wis. 105.

The words "terms cash" on the bill do not necessarily and conclusively import that the goods are not delivered until the money is paid. They may mean that the money is to be paid in a month, or in a longer or shorter time. They necessarily import nothing more than that the articles purchased are to be paid for in money, and are not to be exchanged for other articles. It is not inconsistent with any inference we can make from them to admit evidence to prove that they were sold on credit, but prima facie they import that there was no credit; and still it may be shown what meaning the parties attached to them. By Gilchrist, C. J., George v. Joy, 19 N. H. 544.

Cash Notes.—A promissory note made payable in foreign bills is not a "cash note," and therefore is not negotiable. Jones v. Fales, 4 Mass. 245. Contra in New York, where the note was made payable in York State bills or specie, which the court held was the same thing as being made payable in lawful current money of the State. Keith v. Jones, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 120.

CAST.—To throw.<sup>1</sup> Used metaphorically in the sense of to turn the balance ; cause to preponderate.<sup>2</sup>

So a promissory note payable "in bank notes current in the city of New York" is a negotiable note within the statute. Judah v. Harris, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 144. See Morris v. Edwards, 1 Ohio, 189.

Credit in Cash.—An instrument in the following form: "Port of London Sea, Fire, and Life Assurance Co. To the Cashier—Fifty-three days after date, credit Messrs. P. & Co. or order with the sum of £500, claimed per Cleopatra, in cash, on account of this corporation. A. C., Managing Director,"—was held to be a bill of exchange, and properly declared on as such, Creswell, J., saying: "Credit in cash clearly means 'pay over the money,'" and Williams, J.: "I am of the same opinion. 'Credit in cash' is equivalent to 'pay.'" Ellison v. Collingridge, 9 C. B. 570.

Copper Cash.—Chinese coin, known in China as "copper cash," composed of copper and lead and copper and nickel, and used in China as money by count, is not entitled to be imported into this country free of duty, under Schedule I of the Tariff Act of July 30, 1846 (9 U. S. Stat. at Large, 49), as "coins, gold, silver, and copper," unless it is imported to be used as a part of the currency of this country, or is at the time of its importation a part of such currency. Otherwise it is chargeable with a duty of five per cent under Schedule H of said act, as "copper, when old and fit only to be re-manufactured." Crocker v. Redfield, 4 Blatch. (U. S.) 378.

In Cash.—Proposals for a contract requiring as security the certificate of a bank that it holds a deposit of $4000 "in cash," are satisfied by a certificate of the deposit of $4000 without further specification. People v. The Contracting Board, 27 N. Y. 378.

For Cash.—The terms of a deed of trust required that the real estate therein mentioned should be sold "for cash." Subsequent to the execution of the deed and prior to the sale, the property became encumbered with various liens. At the sale the purchaser paid for the property only a portion of the sum named as the purchase-money, but gave his notes to the holders of the liens for the balances due them over and above the amounts realized by them at the sale, and in consideration of these notes the lien-holders yielded up their claims against the maker of the deed of trust. Held, that the notes so given were equivalent to "cash" placed in the hands of the trustee. Mead v. McLaughlin, 42 Miss. 198.

1. Cast Away.—In charging the jury in an indictment for "casting away" and destroying a vessel, of which the defendant was owner, on the high seas, with intent to prejudice the underwriters, Washington, J., said: "Before the prisoner can be found guilty, you must be satisfied of the following facts: 1st. That Johns was the owner of The Enterprise: this is acknowledged. 2d. That she was insured: this is proved. 3d. That she was 'cast away' or otherwise destroyed. This is a mixed question of law and fact. The question of law is new; and in giving a legal definition of those words we have very few sources of information to resort to. But after the fullest consideration which we have been able to give the question, we are of opinion that to 'destroy a vessel' is to unfit her for service beyond the hopes of recovery by ordinary means. This, as to the extent of the injury, is synonymous with 'cast away'; it is the general term. 'Casting away' is, like burning, a species of destruction. Both of them mean such an act as causes the vessel to perish, to be lost, to be irrecoverable by ordinary means. Whether upon the evidence, and agreeable to this definition, The Enterprise was 'cast away' or destroyed is a matter of fact for your decision." U. S. v. Johns, 1 Wash. C. C. (U. S.) 363, 371; s. c., 4 Dall. (Pa.) 412; U. S. v. Vanranst, 3 Wash. C. C. (U. S.) 146.

2. Casting Vote.—Where a statute relating to religious corporations provided that no board of trustees should be competent to transact any business "unless the rector, if there be one, and at least one of the church-wardens, and a majority of the vestrymen be present; and such rector, if there be one, and if not, then the church-warden present, or if both the church-wardens be present, then the church-warden who shall be called to the chair . . . shall preside at every such meeting or board, and have the 'casting vote,' the court held that this did not mean that the chairman should have the 'casting vote' only in case of a tie arising upon the votes of the other members, but that the term 'casting vote,' as used in that section, is to be construed as authorizing the chairman, after having first voted with the rest, upon a tie occurring, to give a second vote; the court, Gilbert, J., saying: "The question, then, is, What is the legal signification and effect of the phrase, 'and have the casting vote'?" Does the calling a church-warden to the chair annul for the time being his right as a constituent member of the corporate body or absolve him from the execution of any trust or duty devolved upon him as such member? No authority for such a proposition was cited, except the learned treatise of Mr. Curtis on Parliamentary Practice. This author does, indeed, in his commentary on the practice of legislative assemblies, in the absence of express regulations, sustain the position of the relator's counsel. But he shows at the same time that the reasons for such practice are peculiar to that kind of assembly. In the English House of Commons the Speaker never votes but when there is an equality without his 'casting vote,' which in that case creates a majority; but the Speaker of the House of Lords has no 'casting vote,' and in case of an equality the noncontents, or negative voices, have the same effect and operation as if in fact they were a majority. 1 Bl. Com. 181 n. The practice in the Congress of the United States and in the legislature of this State is different. Neither the Vice-president of the United States nor the Lieutenant-governor of this State, as presiding officer of the Senate, has any vote unless the votes be equally divided. The Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States and of the Assembly of this State each have a vote. The rule of the common law applicable to corporations, however, is uniform and well settled, and it is applicable to religious societies incorporated under our law. They do not belong to the class of ecclesiastical corporations in the sense of the English law, but are civil corporations governed by the ordinary rules of the common law. Robertson v. Bullions, 1 Kern. (N. Y.) 243. In corporations consisting of an indefinite number, a major part of those who are existing at the time are competent to do the act. But when the body is definite, as it is in this case, there must be a major part of the whole number, for it is a special appointment. Rex v. Varlo, Cowp. 250; Rex v. Bellinger, Com. 203. This rule of the common law has been expressly declared by the statute. 2 R. S. 555, § 27; Horton v. Garrison, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 176. As a majority of the vestry did not vote in favor of calling the relator, he was not, therefore, called or elected, unless the statute giving the chairman a 'casting vote' is to be construed as meaning a vote only in case of a tie arising upon the votes of the other members. The plain reading of the statute does not admit of such construction. It first vests the power of election in a body of which the chairman is a constituent member. This is a grant to every such member of a right to vote. It then contains another grant of power to the presiding officer, virtute officii, in the words 'he shall have the casting vote.' What is the legal effect of the latter grant? By the common law a 'casting vote' sometimes signifies the single vote of a person who never votes but in the case of an equality; sometimes the double vote of a person who first votes with the rest, and then, upon an equality, creates a majority by giving a second vote. 1 Bl. Com. 181 n.; Jac. Law Dic., Parliament, 7. I think that in the statute under consideration the term 'casting vote' is used in the latter sense. 1 Bl. Com. 478 n.; Cowp. 377. It is true that a double vote is not allowed in corporate meetings, except by express statute (Anon., Loft's Rep. 315; 15 Vin. 214), but that it ought to be allowed where the statute is clear cannot be doubted. In Rex v. Giniver, 6 T. R. 732, a charter had been granted creating a corporation, and giving the bailiffs and aldermen, or a major part of them, power to choose a senior bailiff. A by-law was passed giving to the senior bailiff the 'casting voice,' in cases where, in the election of bailiffs, aldermen, or other officers, the voices should happen to be equal. The court held the by-law to be void, because it was contrary to the constitution of the charter; but it was tacitly conceded that if the provision of the by-law had been incorporated in the charter the senior bailiff would have had, in case of an equality of votes, a double vote. Lord Kenyon, C. J., and Lawrence, J., expressly asserted that such would have been the effect of the by-law if it had been valid." See also State v. Adams, 2 Stew. (Ala.) 231; Rex v. Bumpstead, 2 B. & Ad. 699; People v. Rector, etc., Church of the Atonement, 48 Barb. (N. Y.) 603.

CASUAL.—Happening without design and without being foreseen or expected; coming by chance; accidental.<sup>1</sup>

1. Webster.

Casual poor are such poor persons as are suddenly taken sick or meet with some accident when from home, and are thus providentially thrown upon the charities.

CASUALTY—CATALOGUE—CATCHING BARGAIN.

CASUALTY.—Accident; that which comes by chance or without design, or without being foreseen.<sup>1</sup>

CATALOGUE.—A list or enumeration of the names of men or things, disposed in a certain order.<sup>2</sup>

CATCHING BARGAIN. (See also EQUITY; FRAUD; POST-OBIT.)

Definition, 37.

Equitable Doctrine, 38.

Who are Expectant Heirs, 40.

Adequacy and Valuation, 40.

Exceptions, 41.

Confirmation and Acquiescence, 42.

Statutory Enactments, 42.

1. Definition.—An agreement made with an expectant heir for the purchase of his expectancy at an inadequate price.<sup>3</sup> Any contract for an inadequate consideration, made with an expectant heir, to be performed on his part when his expectancy shall come into possession.<sup>4</sup> of those among whom they happen to be; and when in such case the parish officers afford relief they have no remedy over for the money expended—not even against the parish where the person relieved was regularly chargeable. Force v. Haines, 2 Harr. (N. J.) 405.

1. Webster.

An unjust condemnation or sentence is not such a casualty as a marine insurer must answer for. Vanderheuvcl v. United Ins. Co., 2 Johns. Ca. (N. Y.) 127, 160.

Casualties in the title to a portion of a statute was held to mean casualties resulting in death in Nothard v. Pepper, 17 C. B. (N. S.) 51.

In an insurance policy it was provided that if the premises "be damaged or destroyed by the bursting of a boiler or by explosion from any cause, this policy shall be null and void the instant the casualty by explosion occurs." Held, the word "casualty" referred to the damage or destruction of the premises mentioned in the condition, and not to a fire caused by the explosion. Waldeck v. Insurance Co., 56 Wis. 98.

Casualties of War.—The shooting and killing, by ununiformed men bent on robbery, of one engaged on the construction of a bridge under the direction of the military authorities during a war, but holding no office of a military character, is not within the meaning of this phrase as used in an insurance policy. Wells v. Conn. Mut. L. I. Co., 48 N. Y. 34.

Casualty or Necessity.—Leaving a homestead because unable to make a living on it is not a case of "casualty or necessity." "The word 'casualty' evidently refers to some sad accident—as fire or flood or some social or family disaster or misfortune—which causes a temporary absence.

... The two words may fairly imply various other events impossible to enumerate; but no proper construction can make them cover an abandonment for years induced by the fact that the owner has found elsewhere a location deemed more advantageous." Thompson v. Tillotson, 56 Miss. 36.

Inevitable Casualties in a lease means only such casualties as are inevitable by the lessee, and not such as might not be avoided by the united efforts of the whole society. Destruction by fire arising from a cause unknown is such an inevitable casualty. Hodgson v. Dexter, 1 Cr. C. C. 109.

Unavoidable Casualties in a lease upon injury or destruction from which there is to be an abatement of rent means "events or accidents which human foresight, prudence, and sagacity cannot prevent," and does not include an injury from the failure of the landlord to repair the adjoining tenements. Welles v. Castles, 3 Gray, 323.

2. Webster.

An expired lease offered in evidence in an action for not farming the land in accordance with the covenants contained therein, is not a schedule, catalogue, or inventory within the meaning of an act inquiring such writings to be stamped. Strutt v. Robinson, 3 B. & Ad. 395.

3. Bouv. L. D.

4. The form of the transaction is of no moment: it may be a sale, loan, mortgage, annuity, or post-obit bond. Beynon v. Cook, L. R. 10 Ch. Ap. 389; Peacock v. Evans, 16 Ves. 512; Emmet v. Tottenham, 10 Jur. N. S. 1090; Bromley v. Smith, 26 Beav. 644; Curling v. Townsend, 19 Ves. 628; Beynon v. Fitch, 29 Beav. 570; Butler v. Duncan, 47 Mich. 94; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 711.

2. The Equitable Doctrine.—Such agreements are held to be infected with fraud, for which equity affords relief. The fraud is always presumed or inferred from the circumstances or conditions of the parties contracting. The transaction is a fraud upon the ancestor or person from whom the expectancy is derived.<sup>1</sup> But there is also an equity more strictly and directly personal to the heir; a necessitating distress on his part or an inequality between the parties always presumed to exist.<sup>2</sup> The onus is therefore cast upon the person dealing with an expectant heir to show that the transaction was reasonable and fair, and the consideration adequate.<sup>3</sup> If this

It is not even necessary that the contingency of coming into possession be stated, so long as the creditor knows that the fund for payment of his debt depends upon his debtor's surviving his ancestor. Chesterfield v. Janssen, 2 Ves. 125; 1 L. C. Eq. 541.

1. "The last head of fraud on which there has been relief is that which infects catching bargains with heirs, reversioners, or expectants, in the life of their fathers, etc., against which relief always extended. These have been generally mixed cases, compounded of all or several species of fraud; there being sometimes proof of actual fraud which is always decisive. There is always fraud presumed or inferred from the circumstances or conditions of the parties contracting—weakness on one side, usury on the other, or extortion or advantage taken of that weakness. There has always been an appearance of fraud from the nature of the bargain. . . . In most of these cases have occurred deceit and illusion on other persons not privy to the fraudulent agreement. The father, ancestor, or relation, from whom was the expectation of the estate, has been kept in the dark; the heir or expectant has been kept from disclosing his circumstances and resorting to them for advice, which might have tended to his relief; this misleads the ancestor, who has been seduced to leave his estate, not to his heir or family, but to a set of artful persons who have divided the spoil beforehand." Lord Hardwicke in Earl of Chesterfield v. Janssen, 2 Ves. 125; s. c., 1 L. C. Eq. 541; Earl of Aylesford v. Morris, L. R. 8 Ch. Ap. 492; Earl of Aldborough v. Trye, 7 C. & F. 436; Boyton v. Hubbard, 7 Mass. 112.

2. Earl of Aylesford v. Morris, L. R. 8 Ch. Ap. 492.

"The whole doctrine with respect to an expectant heir assumes that the one party is defenceless and exposed, unprotected to the demands of the others, under the pressure of necessity." King v. Hamlet, 2 M. & K. 456; s. c., 3 C. & F. 208.

"Fraud does not here mean deceit or circumvention: it means an unconscientious use of the power arising out of the circumstances and conditions of the parties." Aylesford v. Morris, supra; but see remarks of Sir G. Jessel, M. R., in Beynon v. Cook, L. R. 10 Ch. Ap. 389.

"The doctrine has nothing to do with fraud." Bowes v. Heaps, 3 V. & B. 117.

"It has been laid down in case after case that the court, wherever there is a dealing of this kind, looks at the reasonableness of the bargain, and if it is what it calls a hard bargain, sets it aside." In Cribbens v. Markwood, 13 Grat. (Va.) 495, on the other hand, the court, in the absence of evidence of fraud, refused to inquire into the adequacy of the consideration.

3. Wiseman v. Beake, 2 Vern. 121; Cole v. Gibbons, 2 P. Wms. 290; Kendall v. Beckett, 2 R. & M. 88; Bawtree v. Watson, 2 M. & K. 330; Davies v. Cooper, 5. M. & C. 270; Edwards v. Brown, 4 Coll. 100; Gowland & De Faria, 17 Ves. 20; Peacock v. Evans, 16 Ves. 512; Woodroffe v. Allen, 1 H. & J. 73; Sewell v. Walker, 12 Jur. 1041; Addis v. Campbell, 4 Beav. 401; Bromley v. Smith, 20 Beav. 644; Salter v. Bradshaw, 20 Beav. 161; s. c., 28 L. J. Ch. 426; St. Albyn v. Harding, 27 Beav. 11; Foster v. Roberts, 29 Beav. 47; Jones v. Ricketts, 31 Beav. 130; Sharpless v. Leach, 31 Beav. 491; Dally v. Wonham, 33 Beav. 154; Benyon v. Fitch, 35 Beav. 570; Edwards v. Burt, 2 De G., M. & G. 55; Croft v. Graham, 2 De G., J. & S. 155; Hiucksman v. Smith, 3 Russ. 433; Talbot v. Staniford, 1 J. & H. 484; Earl of Aldborough v. Trye, 7 C. & F. 436; In re Salter's Trusts, L. R. 11 Ch. D. 227; Earl of Aylesford v. Morris, L. R. 8 Ch. Ap. 492; Beynon v. Cook, L. R. 10 Ch. Ap. 389; Miller v. Cook, L. R. 10 Eq. 641; Tyler v. Yates, L. R. 11 Eq. 275; Shelly v. Nash, 3 Madd. 235; Smith v. Kay, 7 H. L. C. 750; Bacon v. Bonham, 33 N. J. Eq. 614; Butler v. Duncan, 47 Mich. 94; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 711; Davidson v. Little, 22 Pa. St. 245; Nim- is not shown, the transaction will be set aside upon payment by the expectant of the amount actually advanced or paid with interest.<sup>1</sup> Inadequacy of consideration is sufficient ground upon which to have the agreement set aside, although there is no actual fraud or imposition, and the transaction is bona fide.<sup>2</sup> And the rule is equally mo v. Davis, 7 Tex. 26. But see Larrabee v. Larrabee, 34 Me. 477.

"Dealing with younger heirs and for reversionary interests is also watched with the utmost jealousy, and constitutes a particular class of cases forming an exception to the general rule that, for mere inadequacy of price, a contract is not to be set aside." Osgood v. Franklin, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 1; Juzan v. Toulmin, 9 Ala. 663; Gowland v. De Faria, 17 Ves. 20.

Such bargains, if made for inadequate consideration, are held to be contrary to the policy of the law, and as such void both at law and in equity. Boyton v. Hubbard, 7 Mass. 112. And see Poor v. Hazleton, 15 N. H. 564. In Kentucky, sales of literal expectancies are absolutely void. Alves v. Schlesinger, 81 Ky. 290.

If the purchaser shows that the transaction was reasonable and fair, and the consideration adequate, the court will not set it aside in the absence of fraud. Batty v. Lloyd, 1 Vern. 141; Wharton v. May, 5 Ves. 27; Curling v. Townsend, 19 Ves. 634; Aldborough v. Trye, 7 C. & F. 436; Bacon v. Bonham, 33 N. J. Eq. 614; Fitch v. Fitch, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 480; Fitzgerald v. Vestal, 4 Sneed (Tenn.), 258. And see Power's Ap., 63 Pa. St. 448; Miller's Ap., 31 Pa. St. 337.

Where, too, the vendor in his proposal stated the value of the corpus of the property, which valuation was acted upon, the burden is on him to show that he understated it. Perfect v. Lane, 3 De G., F. & J. 369.

Relief can be had against a sub-purchaser, with full notice of the original fraud. Addis v. Campbell, 4 Beav. 401; King v. Savery, 5 H. L. C. 627.

1. This is on the ground that "he who seeks equity must do equity." Earl of Aylesford v. Morris, L. R. 8 Ch. Ap. 484; Tyler v. Yates, L. R. 11 Eq. 265; s. c., 6 Ch. Ap. 665; Miller v. Cook, L. R. 10 Eq. 641. Compound interest is never allowed. Gowland v. De Faria, 17 Ves. 20.

The defendant is also entitled to compensation for expenditures made by him in lasting and valuable improvements, and generally to costs. Salter v. Beavshaw, 26 Beav. 161; Wharton v. May, 5 Ves. 27; Bowes v. Heaps, 3 V. & B. 117;

Fox v. Wright, 6 Madd. 111; Miller v. Cook, supra. But not to the cost of an unsuccessful reference as to value. Boothby v. Boothby, 15 Beav. 214; Edwards v. Burt, 2 De G., M. & G. 55; Jones v. Ricketts, 31 Beav. 130.

In default of payment in accordance with the decree, the action is dismissed, and costs put upon the plaintiff. Aylesford v. Morris, L. R. 8 Ch. Ap. 498.

But where there has been misconduct or fraud on the part of the defendant, or he has refused proper terms, he will be charged with costs. Beynon v. Cook, L. R. 10 Ch. Ap. 389; Emmet v. Tottenham, 10 Jur. 1090. Each party bore his own costs in Tyler v. Yates, L. R. 11 Eq. 265.

In a suit by the purchaser for specific performance, if he does not show the adequacy of the consideration, the bill will be dismissed with costs and no decree made for the repayment of a deposit. Kendall v. Beckett, 2 M. & R. 88.

2. Peacock v. Evans, 16 Ves. 512; Foster v. Roberts, 29 Beav. 467. where Sir John Romilly, M. R., said: "The burden of proof lies on the defendant to prove that the transaction was a bona-fide one in this sense—that a full and sufficient price was given for the reversion." "I consider the present state of the law on this subject practically to amount to this: that unless a person gives much more than the value, it is impossible to purchase a reversionary interest with safety, except under a sale by auction." It is of no moment that the defendant used no endeavor to prevail on the plaintiff to enter into the contract. "It is not every bargain which necessity may induce one man to offer, which another is bound to accept." Bowes v. Heaps, 3 V. & B. 117; Miller v. Cook, L. R. 10 Eq. 641.

"To that class of persons (expectant heirs) this court seems to have extended a degree of protection approaching nearly to an incapacity to bind themselves by any contract." Peacock v. Evans, 16 Ves. 512.

It is not necessary, therefore, for the plaintiff to show that he was in pecuniary distress at the time of the transaction. Bromley v. Smith, 26 Beav. 644; Salter v. Bradshaw, 26 Beav. 161.

In some of the American States it has applicable, although the expectant is of mature age and perfectly understands the nature and extent of the transaction.<sup>1</sup>

3. Who are Expectant Heirs.—This phrase includes not only those who are literally expectant heirs and persons having expectancies, but all remaindermen and reversioners.<sup>2</sup>

4. Adequacy and Valuation.—There is no rule by which it is determined what is inadequacy of price. This is for the court to decide. Its measure is the difference between the price paid and the market price, which is to be ascertained by expert testimony. Small differences have been held inadequacies sufficient to warrant the setting aside of the bargain.<sup>3</sup> been held necessary that there should be fraud and imposition in order to render the transaction void. Varick v. Edwards, 1 Hoff. Ch. (N. Y.) 382; Mastin v. Marlow, 65 N. C. 695; Cribbins v. Markewood, 13 Grat. (Va.) 495. And see opinions of Lords Blackburn and Gordon in O'Rorke v. Bolingbroke, L. R. 2 Ap. Ca. 814.

The fact that the expectant had a professional adviser is of some importance with regard to the bona-fides of the transaction. Lynte v. Hodge, 2 H. & M. 287; Miller v. Cook, L. R. 10 Eq. 641.

1. Davis v. Duke of Marlborough, 2 Swanst. 147; Earl of Portmore v. Taylor, 4 Sim. 182; Bromley v. Smith, 26 Beav. 644; Tynte v. Hodge, 2 H. & M., where the expectant was forty-seven years old; Wiseman v. Blake, 2 Vern. 121, where he was forty, a proctor and a man of experience.

2. "The phrase is used not in its literal meaning, but as including one who has either a vested remainder or a contingent remainder in a family property, including a remainder in a portion, as well as a remainder in an estate, and every one who has a hope of succession to the property of an ancestor, either by reason of his being heir apparent or presumptive, or by reason merely of the expectation of a devise or legacy on account of the supposed or presumed affection of his ancestor or relative. More than this, the doctrine as to expectant heirs has been extended to all reversioners and remaindermen, as appears from Tottenham v. Emmet, 14 W. R. 3, and Aylesford v. Morris, 8 L. R. Ch. Ap. 484." Beynon v. Cook, L. R. 10 Ch. Ap. 391.

"In more modern times it has been considered not only that those who were dealing for expectancies, but those who were dealing for vested reversions also, were so exposed to imposition and hard terms, and so much in the power of those with whom they contracted, that it was a fit rule of policy to impose upon all who dealt with expectant heirs and reversioners the onus of proving that they had paid a fair price, or otherwise to undo the bargains, and compel a reconveyance of the property purchased." Shelly v. Nash, 3 Madd. 235; Freeman v. Bishop, 2 Atk. 39; Nott v. Hill, 1 Vern. 167; Edwards v. Burt, 2 De G., M. & G. 57; Wiseman v. Blake, 2 Vern. 121; note to Davis v. Marlborough, 2 Swanst. 147; Bowes v. Heaps, 3 V. & B. 117; Kendall v. Beckett, 2 R. & M. 88; Davies v. Cooper, 5 M. & C. 270; Edwards v. Browne, 2 Coll. 100; Gowland v. De Faria, 17 Ves. 20. Contra, Boyton v. Hubbard, 7 Mass. 112; Cribbins v. Markewood, 13 Grat. (Va.) 495.

One who has an estate in possession in a part of which another has a life estate is not an expectant heir. Davidson v. Little, 22 Pa. St. 245. But if the bulk of the property sold is reversionary, the mere fact that a small part is in possession will not prevent the application of the rule with reference to the sale of interests in reversion. Davis v. Marlborough, 2 Swanst. 147; Portmore v. Taylor, 4 Sim. 182. Otherwise where the interest is substantially an estate in possession. Wardle v. Carter, 7 Sim. 490.

One entitled to the income of property, subject to an annuity to another, is not an expectant heir. Webster v. Cook, L. R. 2 Ch. Ap. 542.

A legatee whose legacy is not to be paid for several years is not an expectant. Parmelee v. Cameron, 41 N. Y. 392. One expecting a legacy from a person still living is. Bacon v. Bonham, 33 N. J. Eq. 614.

In Nevill v. Snelling, L. R. 15 Ch. Div. 679, a bargain with a younger son was relieved against, though he had no expectancy; the bargain having been entered into in the hope of extorting money from the father.

3 "The material consideration is the undervalue." "Anything which can be substantially considered as inadequacy, is a ground for setting aside the contract." Peacock v. Evans, 16 Ves. 512; Earl of

5. Exceptions to the Doctrine.—If the agreement is entered into with the knowledge and assent of the ancestor, or person from whom the expectancy is derived or owner of the estate in possession,<sup>1</sup> or if he joins in the bargain,<sup>2</sup> it ceases to be a fraud on him, and will not be set aside. The first part of this proposition, how-

Portmore v. Taylor, 4 Sim. 182. In Edwards v. Browne, 2 Coll. 100, where the market price was £1900, and the price paid £1700, relief was granted. In Jones v. Ricketts, 31 Beav. 130, these prices were respectively £238 and £200. See also Edwards v. Burt, 2 De G., M. & G. 62; Foster v. Roberts, 29 Beav. 471.

The burden is upon the defendant of proving that the price paid is the fair market value, which is done by expert testimony. Edwards v. Burt. supra. In valuing the property the court is to be guided by the market value and not by actuaries' tables. Tynte v. Hodge, 2 H. & M. 287; Wardle v. Carter, 7 Sim. 490; Potts v. Curtis, 1 Younge, 543; Edwards v. Browne, 2 Coll. 100; Aldborough v. Trye, 7 C. & F. 436. And see Perfect v. Lane, 3 De G., F. & J. 369. The value is to be calculated with reference to the time of the contract, not to its result. Gowland v. De Faria, 17 Ves. 20. "The apparent amount of the property is not all that is to be considered; but also its nature, position, and other particulars affecting it." Edwards v. Browne, 2 Coll. 100.

The fact that a reversion depended on contingencies that could not be valued by actuaries, will not relieve a purchaser from the burden of proving that the full value was given. Talbot v. Staniford, 1 J. & H. 484; Boothby v. Boothby, 1 Mac. & G. 604.

1. "The extraordinary protection given in general must be withdrawn if it shall appear that the transaction was known to the father or other person standing in loco parentis,—the person, for instance, from whom the spes successionis was entertained, or after whom the reversionary interest was to become vested in possession—even though such parent or other person took no active part in the negotiation, provided the transaction was not opposed by him, and so carried through in spite of him. . . . Still more fatal to his claim of relief will it be if the father or person in loco parentis shall be found to have concurred in the adoption of the repudiated contract." King v. Hamlet, 2 M. & K. 456; s. c., 3 C. & F. 216. The soundness of this proposition is questioned.

"The son is entitled to be relieved although the father may witness his ruin with indifference." Sugden on V. & P. (11th Ed.) 316.

It is now considered as established that the mere fact that the dealings with regard to the expectancy are known to his family and friends is not of itself sufficient to prevent relief being given. Notes to Chesterfield v. Janssen. 1 L. C. Eq. (6th Ed.) 682; Bispham's Eq. 220; Talbot v. Staniford, 1 J. & H. 484; Earl of Aylesford v. Morris, L. R. 8 Ch. Ap. 491.

Where the tenant for life, who was an uncle of the remainderman, hearing of the bargain which he had made respecting his interest, filed a bill to compel him to repay the money obtained with interest or be foreclosed of any relief from the bargain, and the latter elected to stand to the bargain, declaring it to be fair, he was subsequently, after coming into possession, granted relief, on the ground that he was, at the time his uncle filed the bill, laboring under the same necessity as when he entered into the bargain. Wiseman v. Blake, 2 Vern. 121.

The rule was held to apply where the sale was to the ancestor who took advantage of the expectant heir. Needles v. Needles, 7 Ohio St. 432; Talbot v. Staniford, 1 J. & H. 484. But see Jenkins v. Pye, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 241; Power's Ap., 53 Pa. St. 443.

In America it seems that the knowledge and approval of the ancestor generally renders the bargain valid. Fitch v. Fitch, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 480; Trull v. Eastman, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 121; Jenkins v. Stetson, 9 Allen (Mass.), 128; McBee v. Myers, 4 Bush (Ky.), 356; Fitzgerald, 4 Sneed (Tenn.), 258; though in these cases the consideration was deemed accurate.

On the other hand, it has been held that a sale of an expectancy, in a literal sense, even with the knowledge of the ancestor, is absolutely void, unless the latter joins in for the purpose of divesting himself of the right to make any other disposition of his property. Alves v. Schlesinger, 81 Ky. 290.

2. Wood v. Aubrey, 3 Madd. 422; Wardle v. Carter, 7 Sim. 490; Alves v. Schlesinger, 81 Ky. 290.

But in such a sale other circumstances may exist to throw the onus of proving an adequate consideration on the purchaser, as where undue parental influever, has been questioned, and the weight of authority is against it.

The principal rule is also inapplicable when the transaction is a family arrangement, and there is no misrepresentation or suppression, even though some parental influence is exercised, provided it be not undue.<sup>1</sup>

Nor is the rule applicable where the sale is made by auction, the presumption then being that the price is fair and adequate.<sup>2</sup> This is also the case where the price is by agreement fixed by persons of competent skill to do so.<sup>3</sup>

6. Confirmation and Acquiescence.—Catching bargains may be rendered valid by acts of ratification by the expectant after he comes into possession of his expectancy, remainder, or reversion, and is cognizant of his rights.<sup>4</sup> They may also become valid by acquiescence for a great length of time, after he has been relieved from his distress.<sup>5</sup>

7. Statutory Enactments.—It has been enacted in England that no purchase, made bona-fide and without fraud or unfair dealing, of any reversionary estate shall be opened or set aside merely on the ground of undervalue. This has, however, been construed not to repeal the doctrine which protects expectants in the hands of ence has been used. King v. Savery, 5 H. L. C. 627.

1. Tweddell v. Tweddell, T. & R. 13; Jenner v. Jenner, 2 De G., F. & J. 359; Hartopp v. Hartopp, 2 Jur. N. S. 794; s. c., 21 Beav. 259; Wakefield v. Gibbon, 1 Giff. 401; Williams v. Williams, L. R. 2 Ch. Ap. 294.

There must be a full and fair communication of all material circumstances affecting the subject-matter of the agreement which are within the knowledge of the several parties, whether such information be asked for or not. Greenward v. Greenward, 2 De G., J. & S. 28.

A settlement by an heir in favor of his wife and child will not be relieved against. Shafto v. Adams, 4 Giff. 492.

A purchase by an uncle, tenant for life of a nephew's reversionary interest in the family estate, is not a family arrangement. Talbot v. Staniford, 1 J. & H. 484.

2. Shelly v. Nash, 3 Madd. 232.

Otherwise if the sale take place under such circumstances as to affect the purchaser with notice that he is dealing with a person in distress. Fox v. Wright, 6 Madd. 111.

3. It is not sufficient to take the opinion of an actuary. Edwards v. Burt, 2 De G., M. & G. 55.

So where a fair test of the market value can be obtained from a knowledge of the highest bid at a previous attempt to sell the expectancy at auction (Lord v. Jeffkins, 35 Beav. 7), or where it has at the same price been offered to and declined by many (Moth v. Atwood, 5 Ves. 845; Perfect v. Lane, 2 De G., F. & J. 369), the price may be presumed to be adequate. But see Roche v. O'Brien, 1 Ball & B. 330.

4. Chesterfield v. Janssen, 2 Ves. 125; Cole v. Gibbons, 5 P. Wms. 289; Stump v. Gaby, 2 De G., M. & G. 62; Negley v. Lindsay, 67 Pa. St. 228. See note 5.

5. Sibbering v. Earl of Balcarras, 3 De G. & S. 735; Lyddon v. Moss, 4 De G. & J. 104; Lord v. Jeffkins, 35 Beav. 7; Turner v. Collins, L. R. 7 Ch. Ap. 329.

Time does not begin to run against a reversioner or expectant until the reversion or expectancy has fallen into possession. "There is, I believe, no case in which, during the continuance of the same situation in which the party entered into the contract, acquiescence has ever gone for anything. It has always been presumed that the same distress which pressed him to enter into the contract prevented him from coming to set it aside; that it is only when he is relieved from that distress that he can be expected to resist the performance of the contract." Sir Wm. Grant in Gowland v. De Faria, 17 Ves. 20; Salter v. Bradshaw, 26 Beav. 161; Beynon v. Cook, L. R. 10 Ch. Ap. 393; Portmore v. Taylor, 4 Sim. 182.

The same holds good as to confirmation. Savery v. King, 5 H. L. C. 627.

persons ready to take advantage of their necessities, such dealings being unfair.<sup>1</sup>

CATCHINGS.—"Things caught and in the possession, custody, power, and dominion of a party, with a present capacity to use them for his own purposes."<sup>2</sup>

CATTLE.—"Domestic quadrupeds collectively, especially those of the bovine genus, sometimes also including sheep, goats, horses, mules, asses, and swine."<sup>3</sup>

1. 31 & 32 Vic. c. 4; Bispham's Eq. 221; Miller v. Cook, L. R. 10 Eq. 641; Tyler v. Yates, L. R. 6 Ch. Ap. 665; Earl of Aylesford v. Morris, L. R. 8 Ch. Ap. 484.

Authorities for Catching Bargain.—Story's Eq. Jur. (13th Ed.) §§ 334-348; Bispham's Eq. § 220; Sugden on Vendors and Purchasers, 277 sq.; notes to Earl of Chesterfield v. Janssen, 1 L. C. Eq. 541; note to Davis v. Duke of Marlborough, 2 Swanst. 147.

2. The term used in an insurance policy covers blubber and pieces of flesh cut from a whale and on the deck of the ship insured. Roger v. Mechanics' Ins. Co., 1 Story (C. C.), 603.

3. Webster; U. S. v. Mattock, 2 Sawy. (C. C.) 148.

Worcester's definition is practically identical, and is adopted in Bank v. Bank, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 294, and People v. Barnes, 2 Pac. R. (Cal.) 493.

It is commonly in America confined to beasts of the bovine genus. Webster. "The word originally had a more extensive and comprehensive meaning than it now has in the American States. It has still a more extended signification in English parlance; and to give the term the restricted meaning which it only possesses in general American phraseology, the Englishman still uses some qualifying adjective, such as black or neat cattle." Hubotter v. State, 32 Tex. 479.

The following have been held to be cattle within acts making it a criminal offence to maliciously kill, wound, or maim cattle: Asses. Rex v. Whitney, 1 Moody, 3. Horses. The King v. Paty, 2 Wm. Bl. 721; s. c., 2 East P. C. 1074. Mares. State v. Hambleton, 22 Mo. 452; State v. Sutton, 24 Mo. 376. Geldings. Clark's Case, 1 Lewin, 229; Mott's Case, 2 East P. C. 1075. Pigs. Russ. & Ry. 77.

A buffalo, though tamed, is not. State v. Crenshaw, 22 Mo. 457.

Under these statutes and under larceny acts and stray laws it is sufficient to describe the animal or animals in the indictment as "steer" (State v. Lange, 22 Tex. 591; State v. Abbott, 20 Vt. 537),

"beef steer" (Robertson v. State, 1 Tex. Ap. 311), "beeves" (Hubotter v. State, 32 Tex. 479), "oxen" (State v. Moreland, 27 Tex. 726; Henry v. State, 45 Tex. 84), without the use of the generic term "cattle." Or the specific term may be used in conjunction with the generic, as "a certain calf of the neat-cattle kind." Grant v. State, 3 Tex. Ap. 1.

A description in an indictment as "two cattle" is sufficient under a statute making it larceny to steal "a horse, mare, gelding, cow, steer, bull, calf, mule, jack, jenny, goat, sheep, or hog." The term covers at least a part of these. People v. Barnes 2 Pac. R. (Cal.) 493.

Under statutes requiring railroad companies to fence their lines, making them liable for neglect to do so, "cattle" has been decided to include horses. McAlpine v. Grand Trunk Ry. Co., 38 U. C. Q. B. 446. Asses. O. & M. R. Co. v. Brubaker, 47 Ill. 462. Pigs. Child v. Hearn, L. R. 9 Ex. 176. But see 7 Kan. 497 n. Mules. Railway Co. v. Cole, 50 Ill. 184. Contra, Brown v. Bailey, 4 Ala. 413.

Horses and mares are cattle within an act making owners of dogs liable for injury done by them to cattle. Wright v. Pearson, L. R. 4 Q. B. 582.

So are sheep within an act prohibiting the depasturing of Indian lands with horses, mules, or cattle. United States v. Mattock, 2 Sawy. (C. C.) 148.

A letter of credit guaranteeing drafts on shipments of cattle includes drafts on shipments of hogs. Bank v. Bank, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 294.

Cattle-Guards, in a statute requiring their erection by a railroad, means such appliances as will prevent animals from going on land adjoining the right of way. It will not do to limit their construction to the track or roadbed. Mo. Pac. Ry. v. Mason, 31 Kan. 337; s. c., 13 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 540.

Cattle turned Loose.—Cattle turned into the highway to graze, under the care of a servant, are not. Sherborn v. Wells, 3 B. & S. 784.

Driving or Conducting Cattle through the streets on Sundays, as used in a mu-

CAUSA. See CAUSE.

CAUSE.—That which supplies a motive, decides action, or constitutes the reason why anything is done; hence it sometimes means the consideration for a contract.<sup>1</sup>

The origin or foundation of a thing, as of a suit or action; a ground of action.<sup>2</sup> municipal ordinance forbidding it, does not cover the conveyance of calves in a van drawn by horses. Triggs v. Lester, L. R. 1 Q. B. 259.

Fodder for Cattle.—Barley on the way to a mill to be ground for food for hogs is fodder for cattle within an act exempting such from toll. Clements v. Smith, 3 El. & Bl. 238.

Working Cattle.—Under a statute exempting from attachment "one pair of working cattle," a bull used for work, the owner having no other cattle, is exempt. Bowzey v. Newbegin, 48 Me. 410.

1. Abbott's L. D. The cause, in the civil law, was that which rendered a contract valid; it was "the inducement which constituted a basis for the obligation." Hare on Contracts, 187. The following account of it is given by Pollock (Principles of the Law of Contracts): "Informal agreements (pacta) did not give any right of action without the presence of something more than the mere fact of the agreement. This something more was called the causa. Practically the term covers a somewhat wider ground than our 'consideration executed'; but it has no general notion corresponding to it—at least none coextensive with the notion of contract; it is simply the mark, whatever it may be in the particular case, which distinguishes any particular class of agreements from the common herd of pacta, and makes them actionable." P. 122. See Thomas v. Thomas, 2 Q. B. 851. The term has passed into modern French jurisprudence, where it has a more extended meaning, but never coinciding with the English consideration. Pollock on Contracts, 152. Contra, Monton v. Noble, 1 La. Ann. 192. Cause is used as synonymous with consideration in L. C. Civ. Code, §§ 984, 989.

2. Burrill's L. D.; U. S. v. Rhodes, 1 Abb. (C. C.) 28.

Cause of Complaint.—Where directors of the poor were authorized to adjust rates, and any person was given the right of appeal within four months after the cause of complaint had arisen, it was held that the cause of complaint was the making of an order by the directors. The King v. Justices of Salop, 2 B. & Ad. 145;

Reg. v. Justices of Derbyshire, 7 Q. B. 198.

Cause of Removal, in a statute, means "some dereliction or general neglect of duty, or incapacity to perform the duties, or some delinquency affecting his general character or his fitness for the office." It is not sufficient that the duties of the office can be more efficiently performed by another. People ex rel. Mundy v. Commissioners, 72 N. Y. 445.

Any Other Cause.—Under a statute giving certain rights of a feme sole to any married woman whose husband, "from drunkenness, profligacy, or any other cause," shall refuse or neglect to provide for her support, "any other cause" means cause ejusdem generis, and does not include "mere poverty, sickness, intellectual inferiority, or physical inability of the husband, without being caused by vice." Edson v. Hayden, 20 Wis. 682.

A statute which permits a tenant to quit rented premises without liability for rent where they have been destroyed by the elements or any other cause, without fault of his, applies only to cases where the buildings become untenable by reason of some sudden and unexpected calamity. Hatch v. Stamper, 42 Conn. 28.

Due Cause—Due Cause Shown.—"Where a power to remove [from office] for due cause is given, the words 'due cause' operate as a limitation on the power. . . . What is 'due cause' for the removal of an officer is a question of law to be determined by the judicial department, and in the absence of any statutory provision as to what shall constitute such cause, should be determined with reference to the nature and character of the office and the qualifications requisite to fill it." State ex rel. Gill v. Com. Council, 9 Wis. 261. The removal in such a case is not a mere matter of judicial discretion; some unfitness must be shown. In re Moore Mining Co., L. R. 12 Ch. Div. 325.

For Cause.—"The power to remove a person from office 'for cause' means that a reason must exist which is personal to the individual sought to be removed, which the law and a sound public opinion will recognize as a good cause for his no longer occupying the place." People v. The Mayor, 19 Hun (N. Y.), 441. The cause must be a just cause; and the power can only be exerted after an opportunity given for a defence. Haight v. Love, 39 N. J. Law, 14.

Good Cause—Good Cause Shown.—A contract stipulating that it may be cancelled by either party for good cause, may be revoked for any cause assigned in good faith, the phrase being radically uncertain. Cummer v. Butts, 40 Mich. 332; s. c., 29 Am. Rep. 530.

"Good cause" in the phrase in a statute, "unless he is absent from the United States, or prevented by some other good cause from testifying," means a sufficient cause other than mere absence from the State. In re Jackson, 7 Biss. (C. C.) 280.

Under a statute providing that the report of persons appointed to appraise compensation for land taken for railroad purposes should stand unless upon good cause shown for setting it aside, the cause must be something clear and indubitable, pointing intentional or unintentional error in law or fact, or both. V. & T. R. Co. v. Henry, 8 Nev. 165.

A power to allow costs for good cause shown is equivalent to a power to allow such costs as they deem just and reasonable. Whitcher v. Benton, 50 N. H. 25.

Irresistible Superhuman Cause means act of God which "is natural necessity, as wind and storms, which arise from natural causes, and is distinct from inevitable accident." Clay Co. v. Simonsen, 1 Dakota, 453.

Justifiable Cause in an indictment for maliciously and without justifiable cause forcing a seaman on shore, in a foreign land, does not mean such a cause as in the maritime law would authorize a discharge; but a case of moral necessity, required for the safety of the ship and crew, the due performance of the voyage and the regular enforcement of discipline. U. S. v. Coffin, 1 Sumn. (C. C.) 394.

Legal Cause.—Relationship within the fourth degree of affinity or consanguinity is such a legal cause as to render a judge incompetent to sit on a criminal trial. Gill v. State, 62 Ala. 169.

Nature and Cause.—An indictment which charges that larceny was committed in the county to which the stolen property was brought, sufficiently notifies the accused of the nature and cause of the offence, within an act giving him a right to such notification. Norris v. State, 33 Miss. 373.

Other Cause.—Where a power is given to remove "for incompetency, improper conduct, or other cause satisfactory to the board," "other cause" means other like cause, i. e., one affecting the officer's fitness for the office. State v. McGarry, 21 Wis. 498.

Probable Cause. (See also MALICIOUS PROSECUTION; FALSE IMPRISONMENT.)—Where in a collection law it was provided, that where a seizure shall be made pursuant to this act the onus probandi shall be on the claimant where probable cause is shown for such prosecution, it is held that probable cause means not "prima facie evidence, or such evidence as in the absence of exculpatory proof would justify condemnation," but "less than evidence which would justify condemnation. It imports a seizure made under circumstances which warrant suspicion." Locke v. U. S., 7 Cr. (U. S.) 339. It means "reasonable ground of presumption that the charge is or may be well founded." Wood v. U. S., 13 Pet. (U. S.) 342; Buckley v. U. S., 4 How. (U. S.) 242; Stacey v. Emery, 97 U. S. 642.

The same meaning is given to the term in matters of prize. The Thompson, 3 Wall. 155; The George, 1 Mason, 24.

Probable cause, in the fourth amendment to the constitution of the United States, means a probability that the crime has been committed by the person charged, of which probability the court or magistrate issuing the warrant must be satisfied by facts supported by oath or affirmation. U. S. v. Bollman & Swartout, 1 Cr. C. C. 373; and see In re Coleman, 15 Blatchford (C. C.), 406.

Proximate Cause of anything is "the cause which naturally leads to and which might have been expected to be directly instrumental in producing the result." State v. R. Co., 52 N. H. 528. See also NEGLIGENCE; CASE, ACTION ON THE.

Reasonable Cause, in a statute authorizing a municipality to remove a court clerk, means just cause. Osgood v. Nelson, L. R. 5 H. L. 636.

Men must be considered to have had reasonable cause to believe that they were insolvent under a bankrupt law "when such a state of facts is brought to their notice in respect to the affairs of the bankrupts as would have led prudent business men to the conclusion that they could not meet their obligations as they matured in the ordinary course of business." Toof v. Martin, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 40.

The mere apprehension of future mischief is not a reasonable cause for the dissolution of a corporation on the petition of a majority of its members. In re Franklin Tel. Co., 119 Mass. 447.

A judicial proceeding; an action or suit, including all its steps.<sup>1</sup>
(See also CASE.)

Where "absence from the habitation of the other, without reasonable cause," is ground for a divorce, the reasonable cause is no other than that which would entitle the party so separating himself or herself to a divorce. Butler v. Butler, 4 Pa. L. J. 284; Cattison v. Cattison, 22 Pa. St. 275; May v. May, 62 Pa. 206.

The certificate of a magistrate authorizing the arrest of a poor debtor, reciting that "satisfactory cause" had been shown for the arrest, is not a compliance with an act requiring that such certificate set forth that "he is satisfied that there is reasonable cause to believe" that the charge contained in the affidavit on which the arrest is asked for is true. Smith v. Bean, 130 Mass. 208.

Same Cause.—Where a statute relieves one convicted of an assault on a woman from "all further or other proceeding, civil or criminal, for the same cause," he is exempt from suit by her husband, cause here meaning assault. Maspar v. Brown, L. R. 1 C. P. D. 97.

1. Abbott's L. D.

Cause was held to relate to civil actions only, and not to embrace quo warranto in The Queen v. Seale, 5 E. & B. 1. See Logan v. Small, 43 Mo. 254. But it included criminal cases in another connection in The Queen v. Pembridge, 3 Q. B. 901.

A garnishee order under court rules is not a decision in an "action" or "cause." Mason v. Wirral Highway Board, L. R. 4 Q. B. D. 459.

The term was held to mean the particular suit pending, and not the cause of action, in a statute providing that a cause should be considered as abandoned unless an appeal was taken within a certain time. Koon v. Nichols, 85 Ill. 155.

Cause of Action is "a right to bring an action which implies that there is some person in existence who can assert, and also a person who can lawfully be sued." Bouv. L. D. Douglas v. Beasley, 40 Ala. 148; Parker v. Enslow, 102 Ill. 272. It is the right which a party has to institute and carry through an action. Meyer v. Van Collem, 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 330. The right to prosecute an action with effect. Douglas v. Forrest, 4 Bing. 704. It is "synonymous with right of action—right of recovery, and a complaint which does not show a right of recovery fails to show a cause of action." Graham v. Scripture, 26 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 507. It is composed of the right of the plaintiff and the obligation, duty, or wrong of the defendant. These combined, it is sufficiently accurate to say, constitute the cause of action. Veeder v. Baker, 83 N. Y. 160.

"Cause of action has been held from the earliest time to mean every fact which is material to be proved to entitle the plaintiff to succeed—every fact which the defendant would have a right to traverse." Hence, where a cause of action, in order to be within the jurisdiction of a court, must have arisen within its territorial jurisdiction, the phrase means whole cause of action. Where bills were drawn and indorsed in America and dishonored in England, the cause of action did not arise in England. Cook v. Gill, L. R. 8 C. P. 107; Borthwick v. Walton, 15 C. B. 501.

Where a promise of marriage was made in Germany, and the plaintiff subsequently came to England, where he received a letter from the defendant in Germany, the cause of action was held not to have arisen in England. Cherry v. Thompson, L. R. 7 Q. B. 573.

The contrary has, however, been maintained. It is not the whole cause of action, but "that which in popular meaning—for many purposes in legal meaning—is the cause of action, viz., the act on the part of the defendant, which gives the plaintiff his cause of complaint." Jackson v. Spittall, L. R. 5 C. P. 542.

Where a promise of marriage was made outside of England, and the breach took place in England, the cause of action arose in England. Durham v. Spence, 8 L. R. 6 Ex. 46.

"Whatever be the form of action, the breach of duty is substantially the cause of action." Hornell v. Young, 5 B. & C. 259; Bank of Commerce v. R. Co., 10 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 1. Hence in an action to enforce an equitable lien, the indebtedness is the cause of action. Borst v. Corey, 15 N. Y. 505. And the cause of action arises in the place where the debt is contracted or originates. Steele v. Commissioners of Rutherford, 70 N. C. 157. "Cause of action," however, is not synonymous with "chase in action." Bank v. R. Co., 10 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 1.

There is not a complete cause of action until there is some one who can sue. Parker v. Enslow, 102 Ill. 272. Hence the cause of action does not accrue until there is such a person. McKerras v. Gardiner, 3 Jus. (N. Y.) 137.

To effect by agency, power, or influence; to be the occasion of.<sup>1</sup>

In an action by an administrator on a bill of exchange, payable to the decedent, but accepted after his death, the statute of limitations begins to run, not from the time the bill became due, but from the granting of the letters, at which time there was first a person to sue and the action accrued. Murray v. East India Co., 5 B. & Ald. 204. There must likewise be some one who can be sued. Douglas v. Forrest, 4 Bing. 704.

The action accrues "whenever the defendant's liability becomes perfect and complete, whenever the defendant has done an act which makes him liable in damages, and there is a person in esse to whom damages ought to be paid, and who may sue for and recover the same." In an action for damages for injury resulting in death, brought by the widow, the statute of limitations begins to run at the death. Kennedy v. Burrier, 36 Mo. 128. But when the action must be brought by the personal representative, the statute does not begin to run until his appointment. Andrews v. R. Co., 34 Conn. 57.

A running account is "one cause of action" within a statute forbidding the splitting of such a cause. Bonsey v. Wordsworth, 18 C. B. 325. But where one has a claim against another for money loaned, and also for goods sold and work and labor done, these are not one cause of action. Kimpton v. Willey, 9 C. B. 719.

In an act giving a court jurisdiction of suits when the cause of action shall have arisen or the subject of action shall be situated within a certain city, cause of action refers to personal actions only. Bennett v. Erving, 4 Robt. (N. Y.) 671.

Cause Affecting Persons Who, etc.—The incompetency of witnesses on account of color by the law of a State does not make a criminal action a cause "affecting persons who are denied or cannot enforce in the courts or judicial tribunals of the State or locality where they may be, any of the rights secured to them by" an act protecting their civil rights and furnishing the means of their vindication. The act refers only to parties to a suit. Blyew v. U. S., 13 Wall. (U. S.) 581, overruling U. S. v. Rhodes, 1 Abb. (U. S.) 28.

Causes and Suits held not to include injunctions, they having been provided for in another part of the same act. Cocke v. Pollock, 1 H. & M. (Va.) 515.

Cause or Matter.—A proceeding for contempt is a cause or matter within a removal statute. Lamonte v. Ward, 36 Wis. 559.

Causes Remaining Untried.—An award of referees upon which no judgment has been rendered is a "cause remaining untied." "A cause is not completely tried within the meaning of the act until judgment is pronounced." Preston v. Englebert, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 390.

Any Party to a Cause includes a beneficial plaintiff. Darling v. Sherwood, 2 U. C. L. J. N. S. 130.

Civil Cause.—The right of an individual to a penalty incurred under a statute in a civil cause, within the section of a bill of rights which prohibits the passage of retrospective laws for the decision of civil causes. Dow v. Norris, 4 N. H. 16.

Proceedings for the violation of a city ordinance is neither a civil cause nor a criminal prosecution. Withers v. State, 36 Ala. 252.

A prosecution for bastardy, the object of which is to procure an order of filiation upon the putative father, and thus compel him to aid the mother in supporting the child, is not a civil cause. Sweet v. Sherman, 21 Vt. 23.

A mandamus is not a "civil cause in law or equity." Williamsport v. Commonwealth, 90 Pa. 498.

Final Disposition of the Cause in a bankrupt act means the final disposition of the administration of the estate, and the discharge of the assignee. In re Brightman & Lossee, 14 Blatchf. (C. C.) 130.

Good Cause of Action can mean no more than cause of action. A cause of action, not good, is no cause of action. Parker v. Enslow, 102 Ill. 272.

Suit, Controversy, Matter, or Cause Depending.—An indictment with issue joined on a plea of not guilty is within the meaning of this phrase. U. S. v. Reese, 4 Sawy. 634.

This Cause.—A stipulation that certain testimony taken on a former trial "may be read in evidence on the trial of this cause," applies to any subsequent trial, and not merely to the first. Hincley v. Beckwith, 23 Wis. 328.

4 Webster.

Under an act making a city liable for the destruction of property by mobs, unless the destruction was caused by the owner's illegal or improper conduct, the destruction is so caused if, without such conduct on his part, it would not have occurred. Palmer v. City of Concord, 48 N. H. 211.

Cause to be Taken.—If A delivers poison to B, both intending B to take it

CAVEAT—CEASE—CEDE—CEDULE—CELEBRATE.

CAVEAT. (See also PATENTS; PROBATE; EXECUTORS; WILLS.) (Lat., "Let him beware.")—A notice not to do an act, given to some officer, ministerial or judicial, by a party having an interest in the matter.<sup>1</sup> Especially a caution entered in the court of probate to stop probates, administrations, and such like from being granted without the knowledge of the party that enters.<sup>2</sup>

In patent law, a notice filed in a government office to prevent a patent's being issued on a particular device until the caveator shall have an opportunity to establish his priority of invention.<sup>3</sup>

CEASE. See note 4.

CEDE.—To yield up.<sup>5</sup>

CEDULE.—Technical name of an act under private signature in French jurisprudence.<sup>6</sup>

CELEBRATE. See note 7.

to cause an abortion, and B afterwards, in the absence of A, takes it, this is a causing to be taken by A within a statute punishing the same. Reg. v. Wilson, 7 Cox (C. C.), 190.

Administer, or Cause and Procure to be Administered, when used, in a statute, of poison, constitute one offence, and not separate ones. Le Beau v. People, 34 N. Y. 223.

1. Bouv. L. D.

2. Williams on Executors, 581. It is a mere cautionary act by a stranger to prevent the court from doing any wrong.

3. Bouv. L. D. See Walker on Patents, 143; Bump on Patents, 208.

In the United States it is used for the purpose of protecting persons who have made a new invention or discovery, and desire further time for maturing the same. Rev. Stats. 4902.

A caveat is also used to prevent the issuing of a land patent. Wilcox v. Calloway, 1 Wash. (Va.) 50; Currie v. Martin, 3 Call (Va.), 28; Harper v. Baugh, 9 Grat. (Va.) 508; Caruthers v. Eldridge, 12 Grat. 670; Hanna v. Munn, 3 Md. 230; Hughes v. Stevens, 7 Wr. (Pa.) 197.

4. Cease to be Operated.—Where a policy of insurance becomes void if the premises insured, being a manufacturing establishment, shall "cease to be operated" without agreement, etc., a permanent cessation is meant, not a temporary one, caused by the prevalence of an epidemic of yellow-fever. Poss v. Ins. Co., 7 Lea (Tenn.), 704.

Cease to Reside.—A temporary removal is not such removal as to vacate an office which is declared vacant by the charter creating it when the occupant "ceases to reside" in the ward. State v. Camden, 39 N. J. L. 57.

Cease to Inhabit.—A pauper having purchased a leasehold interest, occupies the premises for more than forty days, but finally quits and ceases to reside within ten miles. Held, he had gained a settlement in the parish, which was lost by his removal. Reg. v. St. Giles, 2 Q. B. 448.

Ceased to be Thereon.—A statutory provision that a school-house lot shall revert to an owner when a school-house has ceased to be thereon for two years, does not apply where such house has not been built nor begun, though two years have elapsed since the choosing of the location. Jordan v. Haskell, 63 Me. 189.

Ceasing to Reside.—A justice of the peace is not disqualified from conducting his office because an act of legislature has placed him in a new township, though the State constitution provides that his commission shall become vacant upon his ceasing to reside in the township in which he is elected. State v. Dilloway, 2 Vroom (N. J.), 42.

5. Will.—The language in a will, "I will unto my son, J. S., and to his heirs by his present wife, A., all the farm, etc. reserving the full use and benefit of the above lands unto my wife during her widowhood, for and at her death, the lands to cede to my said son J., his heirs and assigns, to all intents and purposes," was construed to mean that J. took an estate in fee tail and not a trust estate for the widow; that cede was synonymous with to be yielded up, and the words to all intents and purposes meant the purposes before expressed. Somers v. Pierson, 16 N. J. L. 181.

6. Campbell v. Nicholson et al.

7. Celebrating a Rite.—Held, that the collecting an offertory is not, according to the rubric, the celebration of a rite; and persons being churchwardens, who at-

CELLAR. See note 1.

CEMETERIES. (See also DEAD BODY; EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS; NUISANCE; TAXES.)

Definition, 49.

Title of Lot-owners, 49.

Right to Improve with Monuments, etc., 51.

Right of Burial of the Dead, 51.

Right to Remove Corpse, 52.

Who are Trespassers, 53.

Who can Maintain Action Against, 54.

When Equity will Protect from Desecration, 54.

When They are Nuisances, 55.

Mortgages on Them are Void, 55.

Exemption from Taxation, 56.

Exemption from Execution, 58.

1. Definition.—A cemetery is a place where the dead bodies of human beings are buried.<sup>2</sup>

2. Title of Lot-owners.—Rights of burial in churchyards, although acquired by deed of the particular lot, are only easements in land belonging to the religious society which owns the church and churchyard.<sup>3</sup> tempted to make such a collection, were not guilty of unlawfully molesting the clergyman. Cope v. Barber, L. R. 7 C. P. 393.

Celebrate a Marriage.—A justice of the peace may celebrate a marriage out of the county for which he is commissioned as justice. Pearson v. Howey, 6 Halst. (N. J.) 13.

1. The vestry of each parish have control by statute of all pavements. All vaults, arches, and cellars must by statute be repaired and kept in order by the owners. But a cellar the top of which consists of the flags or stones which form the pavement is not a cellar within the meaning of the act, and the vestry are bound to repair the flags as part of the pavement. Hamilton v. Vestry of St. George, L. R. 9 Q. B. 42.

2. Webster's Dict.

"Cemetery, literally a sleeping place, was the name applied by early Christians to the places set apart for the burial of their dead. These were generally extra-mural and unconnected with the churches, the practice of interment in churches or churchyards being unknown in the first centuries of the Christian era. The term cemetery has, therefore, been appropriately applied in modern times to the burial-grounds, generally extra-mural, which have been substituted for the overcrowded churchyards of populous parishes both urban and rural." Ency. Brit. tit. Cemetery.

"Cemetery properly means sleeping places. The Jews used to speak of death as sleep. The Persians call their cemeteries 'the cities of the Silent.' The Greeks thought it unlucky to pronounce the name of death." Brewer's Dict., Phrase and Fable.

3. Washburn on Easements, etc. (2d Ed.) 604.

In Richards v. Northwest Protestant Dutch Church, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 42, an injunction was applied for by the representatives of the original grantees of a lot in the churchyard to restrain the officers of the church from removing remains and destroying vault. In denying the complainants' right to relief the court said: "The right of burial, it seems to me, when confined to a churchyard as distinguished from a separate and independent cemetery, although conveyed with the common formalities of 'heirs and assigns forever' must stand upon the same footing as the right of public worship in a particular pew of the consecrated edifice. It is an easement in and not a title to the freehold, and must be understood as granted and taken subject (with compensation, of course) to such changes as the altered circumstances of the congregation or neighborhood may render necessary. . . . Like the sale of a church pew, which gives the mere right to worship in the place while the church stands and is occupied for religious purposes, the sale of a church vault gives, it would seem, the mere right of interment in the particular plat of ground, so long as that and the contiguous ground continues to be used and occupied as a churchyard. The owner of the easement may be, in the case of a disturbance, and no doubt is, entitled to a reasonable compensation or equivalent; but he cannot interpose a veto to the disposition of the soil, should the court, as was actually the case in this instance, on the application of the legitimate church officers, deem such disposition proper and order it, accordingly." Sohier v.

A person making an interment in a cemetery in the absence of a deed, properly executed, etc., does so under a mere license, and his exclusive right to make such interments in a particular lot would be limited to the time during which the ground continued to be used for burial purposes.<sup>1</sup> And upon the ground ceasing to be used for burial purposes all he could claim would be that he should have due notice and an opportunity to remove the bodies and monuments to some other place of his own selection, if he desired to remove them himself, and, in default of his so doing, that said remains should be decently removed by others.<sup>2</sup>

But where the right to burial is acquired by deed, properly executed, etc., the owner cannot be deprived of such right without compensation.<sup>3</sup>

Where the proprietor of grounds laid out for use as a public cemetery makes a conveyance of a burial lot, no interest in the Trinity Church, 109 Mass. 21; Buffalo Cemetery v. City of Buffalo, 46 N. Y. 593; Price et al. v. M. E. Church et al., 4 Ohio, 515. Compare Brick Presbyterian Church, 3 Edw. 155.

In this case the petition was filed for sale of the church and churchyard, to which a number of pew-holders and vault-owners, the latter claiming under deeds, objected. The petition was dismissed, the vice-chancellor observing: "The intention obviously was to sell and dispose of the land, and not to grant a mere temporary use and privilege to construct vaults in the land with a reserve of the title in the church. It was a grant of the land itself, such as passed the title to the purchasers or lessees, and hence the form of conveyance describing each lot by metes and bounds, with all the apt words generally used to pass the title to land." Wint v. Ger. Ref. Ch., 4 Sandf. Ch. 471.

C. received from the superintendent of a cemetery a receipt for $75, being the amount of the purchase money of "a plot of ground eight feet by eight feet in Calvary Cemetery, . . . Section 7, Range 35, Plot D, 4 Graves, 5, 6, 7, 8." It was held that this operated as a certificate of his right to use the lot for burial purposes only, conformably with the established by-laws of the corporation. The instrument was not a conveyance or grant vesting title. People v. St. Patrick's Cathedral Trustees, 21 Hun (N. Y.), 184.

1. Partridge et al. v. First Independent Church, 39 Ind. 631, where after reciting the facts, and stating that the certificate was neither under the seal of the corporation, nor acknowledged nor recorded, the court says: "We think it clear that it conferred no title or estate in the soil, nor could it operate as a grant of an easement, because it was not under seal nor was it acknowledged and recorded, so as to be effective to convey such an interest. The right to an easement must be founded upon a grant by deed, or upon prescription, for it is a permanent interest in another's land, with a right of enjoyment; whereas a mere license is but an authority to do a particular act or series of acts upon another's land, without possessing any estate therein. At most, then, the certificate, such as we have here, conferred only a privilege or license to make interments in the lot described, exclusively of others, as long as the ground remained a burying-ground or cemetery." Meagher v. Driscoll, 99 Mass. 381; Kincaid's Appeal, 66 Penn. St. 411; McCrea v. Marsh, 12 Gray (Mass.), 211; Burton v. Scherf, 1 Allen (Mass.), 133; Bryan v. Whistler, 8 B. & C. 288; Wood v. Leadbiter, 13 M. & W. 841. Compare Moreland v. Richardson, 22 Beav. 596; Page v. Symonds, 68 N. H. 17 (1883); s. c., 56 Am. R. 481, 19 Am. Law Reg. 65.

2. Partridge v. First Church, 39 Ind. 631; Craig v. First Presbyterian Church, 88 Penn. St.; s. c., 32 Am. R. 417. In the latter case it was held that "One who is merely a pew-holder or has relatives buried in the yard, and has no contract relation with the church, cannot maintain the objection that an act of the legislature authorizing the removal of the dead from such churchyard impairs the obligation of a contract." See dissenting opinion of C. J. Agnew. Rayner v. Nugent and Brown, 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cases, 267 and note.

3. Richards v. Northwest Protestant Church, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 42.

alleys which separate it from other lots, except a right of way, passes to the purchaser, unless particularly expressed in the deed.<sup>1</sup>

The doctrine as to burial rights does not apply to cases where the grave is in a separate independent cemetery not associated or connected with any other society or body politic.<sup>2</sup>

No adverse right by prescription can be established in a public burying-ground by proof of fencing it, pasturing upon it, cutting trees therefrom, and cultivating a part of the land.<sup>3</sup>

A grant of a lot in a cemetery is said to be analogous to a grant of a pew in a meeting-house, and the right of burial in a public burying-ground in some respects resembles the right of pew tenancy.<sup>4</sup>

The continuous and notorious use of land for twenty years as a public burial-place, with the acquiescence of the owner, affords presumptive evidence of its dedication for that purpose, and the owner is estopped from denying it, and will be enjoined from interfering with such use.<sup>5</sup>

Where a lot in a cemetery is sold, with reference to a certain plan, on which plan appears a certain avenue, leading up to, or close beside, the lot, affording a convenient highway to and from it, that avenue becomes a servitude in favor of the lot and cannot be legally obstructed.<sup>6</sup>

3. Right to Improve with Monuments, etc.—The owner of the lot has a right to enter on the same at all times to improve and erect suitable monuments and vaults. And all monuments so erected are regarded as the personal property of the lot-owner, and he would have the right to remove the same upon the lot ceasing to be used for the purpose of burial.<sup>7</sup> Property in monuments and vaults, etc., to the heir-at-law.<sup>8</sup>

4. Right of Burial of the Dead.—A dead body is not property, but there are rights attached to a dead body—rights to care for it, watch over it, and bury it—which the law will protect.<sup>9</sup> Gen.

1. Seymour v. Page, 33 Conn. 64.

2. Richards v. Dutch Church, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 42; Gay v. Baker, 17 Mass. 435; Daniel v. Wood, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 102; Bryan v. Whistler, 8 B. & C. 288; Downey v. Dee, Cro. Jac. 605.

3. Commonwealth v. Viall, 2 Allen (Mass.), 172.

4. Jones v. Towne, 58 N. H. 462; s. c., 42 Am. R. 602; Sohier v. Trinity Church, 109 Mass. 121; Kincaid's Appeal, 66 Penn. St. 411; s. c., 5 Am. R. 337.

5. Boyce v. Kalbough, 47 Ind. 334 (1877); s. c., 27 Am. R. 464. See Edwards v. Stonington Cem., 20 Conn. 477.

6. Buck v. Wall, 29 La. Ann. 38; s. c., 29 Am. R. 318.

7. Partridge v. First Church, etc., 39 End. 631.

8. 2 Black Com., 429; Savin v. Harkness, 4 N. H. 415.

A widow can, with the consent of the heirs, erect a monument at the grave of her deceased husband, and give the contractor a license to enter the burial-lot for the purpose of removing it if it is not satisfactory, or is not paid for according to the terms of the contract. Fletcher et al. v. Evans (Mass. 1885), 2 N. E. Rep. 837.

The indisputable and paramount right as well as duty of a husband to dispose of the body of his deceased wife by a decent sepulture, in a suitable place, carries with it the right of placing over the spot of burial a proper monument. Durell v. Hayward, 9 Gray (Mass.), 248.

9. 2 Black Com. 429; 4 Black Com. 235; Pierce v. Swan Point Cem., 10 R. I. 227; Guthrie v. Weaver, 1 Mo. App. 136; Reg. v. Sharpe, 7 Cox C. C. 214.

In Indiana it is held that the bodies of erally, where there is no expressed wish of the testator as to the disposition of his remains, the wishes of the surviving husband or widow shall control, as against the next of kin.<sup>1</sup>

A husband is bound to bury his deceased wife, and a wife must bury her deceased husband.<sup>2</sup> A parent is bound to provide a Christian burial for the body of a deceased child.<sup>3</sup>

It is the general right of every one, recognized as such by the common law, to have his body carried, decently covered, from the place where it lies to the cemetery, or other proper inclosure, and there put under the ground.<sup>4</sup>

The expressed wish of the deceased will control the right to the burial of his body.<sup>5</sup>

Replevin will not lie for a coffin and its contents, when those contents are a corpse.<sup>6</sup>

5. Right to Remove Corpse.—A husband has the right to remove the corpse of his wife where it had been buried in the lot of another without his consent.<sup>7</sup>

the dead belong to the surviving relatives, in the order of inheritance, as property to be disposed of as they shall deem fit, but subject to such burial regulations as are reasonable and proper for the public health and advantage. Bogert v. Indianapolis, 13 Ind. 134.

In New York it was held that, in the absence of testamentary disposition, the right to bury the corpse belongs exclusively to the next of kin. That the right to protect the remains includes the right to preserve them by separate burial, to select the place of sepulture, and to change it at pleasure. That if the place of burial be taken for public use, the next of kin may claim to be indemnified for the expense of removing and reintering their remains. In re Widening Beekman Street, 4 Bradf. 502.

In Pennsylvania, that at common law it is the duty of the executor to bury the deceased, and in a manner suitable to the estate he leaves behind him. Wynkoop v. Wynkoop, 42 Pa. St. 293; 10 Cent. Law Jour. §§ 303, 325, 478.

1. Durell v. Hayward, 9 Gray (Mass.), 248; Wynkoop v. Wynkoop, 42 Pa. St. 293; Secor v. Secor, 31 Leg. Int. 268.

2. Ambrose v. Kerrison, 10 C. B. 776; Chapple v. Cooper, 13 Mees. & W. 259; Weld v. Waker, 1 Am. Law Rev. 57; Jenkins v. Tucker, 1 H. Bl. 90.

3. Regina v. Vann, 2 Den. C. C. 325.

4. Regina v. Stewart, 12 Ad. & El. 773; Pierce v. Swan Point Cem., 10 R. 1. 227.

Under the common law, it was held in England that the duty of seeing to the providing for the funeral, and of carrying to the grave the dead body, rests upon the person under whose roof the death takes place. He cannot keep the body unburied, nor he cannot cast it out, or expose the body to violation, or to offend the feelings or endanger the health of the living, nor can he do anything which prevents a Christian burial. Regina v. Stewart, 4 Eng. C. L. 773.

5. In Scott v. Riley, 40 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 382, Phil. Com. Pleas (1883), it was held that a court of equity will not interfere to give the right of burial to the next of kin against the expressed wish of the deceased. Deceased, a female aged 23, had been living with the defendants, for whom she worked seven years previous to her death. She had been entirely neglected by her parents during that time. Just before her death she expressed fears that her father would claim her body and not give her the burial she desired, and requested the defendants to bury her in their lot. The court stated that there was no law which compels the next of kin to perform the duties of burial. See In re Widening Beekman Street, 4 Bradf. 503.

6. When a coffin, with the consent of all persons having a pecuniary interest in it, has been deposited in the earth for the purposes of interment, with a corpse enclosed within it, it is no longer an article of merchandise. There is no property in a corpse: the relatives have, in regard to it, the right of interment, and this having once been exercised by the father of the married woman, though against the consent of the husband, or by the husband, though against the consent of the father, no right to the corpse remains, except to protect it from insult. Guthrie v. Weaver, 1 Mo. App. 136. See Eng. Rep., Moak's notes, 427; 16 Am. Law Reg. (N. S.) 156.

7. Weld v. Walker, 130 Mass. 422.

A widow has no such control over the body of her dead husband as to give her power to remove it from the cemetery where it was buried by his relatives to one of her own selection.<sup>1</sup>

A son cannot remove the corpse of his mother from the family burial-place;<sup>2</sup> nor that of his father.<sup>3</sup>

When a body has once been buried no one has a right to remove it without the consent of the owner of the grave or leave of the proper ecclesiastical, municipal, or judicial authority.<sup>4</sup>

The legislature has the right to authorize a municipality to remove the remains of the dead from the cemeteries.<sup>5</sup>

6. Who are Trespassers.—An interment made in a lot by a stranger is a trespass for which such stranger is liable to the owner.<sup>6</sup>

One who takes up tombstones in a churchyard, or defaces the inscriptions, is a trespasser.<sup>7</sup>

The unlawful disinterment of a dead body consists, not merely in the removal of the dead body, but in its removal without the consent of the deceased, given in his lifetime, or of his near relatives, given since his death.<sup>8</sup>

The erection of a structure on land of the builder to exclude surface water which would otherwise flow from an adjoining burial-ground is not a trespass.<sup>9</sup>

One has the right to enter a burial-lot and remove a tablet sold and placed there conditionally, on breach of the condition of payment, without the assent of the owners of the tomb.<sup>10</sup>

In Fox v. Gordon, 40 Leg. Int. 374, Phil. Com. Pleas, the court held that when the husband has once exercised the right of burial, and consented to the burial of his wife in a certain place, he cannot, after the lapse of years, remove the remains to another place. The wife and child, who had died some weeks previous, were interred, with the consent of the husband, in the burial-lot of the father-in-law, by whom the expenses in the last sickness and funerals of both were paid. The husband acquiesced three years in the place of burial of his child and wife.

1. Ehlen v. Ehlen, Circuit Ct., Baltimore, 18 C. L. N. 208; Wynkoop v. Wynkoop, 42 Pa. St. 293. Compare 5 Wk. L. Bul. 786.

2. Reg. v. Sharpe, 7 Cox C. C. 214.

Erle, J., in delivering the opinion, said: "Our law does not recognize the right of any one child to the corpse of its parent. . . . And there is no authority for saying that relationship can justify the taking of a corpse from the ground where it has been laid." Reg. v. Sharpe, Dears. & B. 160.

3. Secor's Case, 31 Leg. Int. 268.

A proper respect for the dead, a regard for the tender sensibilities of the living, and the due preservation of the public health, require that a corpse should not be disinterred or transported from place to place, except under extreme circumstances of exigency.

4. Regina v. Sharpe, 7 Cox C. C. 216; Wynkoop v. Wynkoop, 42 Pa. St. 293; Weld v. Walker, 130 Mass. 422; s. c., 39 Am. R. 467.

5. Craig v. First Pres. Church, 88 Pa. St. 42; s. c., 32 Am. R. 417.

"The right of the legislature to authorize the removal of the dead from cemeteries is well settled. So it may delegate such power to municipalities. It is a police power necessary to the public health and comfort." Coats v. N. Y. City, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 585; Charlestown v. Wentworth, etc., 4 Strob. Law Rep. (S. Car.) 306. See note to Rayner v. Nugent, 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cases, 271.

6. Smith v. Thompson, 55 Ind. 5; s. c., 39 Am. R. 409.

7. Francis v. Ley, Cro. Jac. 367. Spooner v. Brewster, 3 Bing. 136; 1 Addison on Torts (Wood's Ed.), 16.

8. Tate v. State, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 110; State v. McClure, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 328.

9. Bates v. Smith, 100 Mass. 181.

10. Fletcher v. Evans, S. J. C. Mass. (1885); 3 Daily Law Rec. No. 22.

7. Who can Maintain Action against.—The person who has the freehold of the soil may bring an action of trespass against such as dig and disturb it.<sup>1</sup>

One who erects tombstones in a churchyard can maintain an action for defacing or removing them,<sup>2</sup> and if he is dead the right of action belongs to his heirs.<sup>3</sup> Any person in actual possession may maintain an action against a wrong-doer.<sup>4</sup>

The gist of the action is the breaking and entering the close, yet the circumstances which accompany and give character to the trespass may always be shown either in aggravation or mitigation of damage.<sup>5</sup>

8. When Equity will Protect from Desecration, etc.—Equity will restrain invasion and quiet the possession of grounds appropriated by a church organization to purposes of a cemetery; and will, in a proper case, enjoin town authorities who have assumed, by virtue of an alleged plot and dedication, to open a highway through such lands.<sup>6</sup>

A court of equity will interfere to prevent a mere trespass.<sup>7</sup>

A purchaser of land upon which is located a burial-ground may be enjoined from removing the bodies therefrom, if he attempts to do so against the wishes of those interested.<sup>8</sup>

Mortgagees will also be enjoined from destroying or defacing graves, or from doing any act which may prevent future interments.<sup>9</sup>

1. King v. Lynn, 2 T. R. 733; Haynes' Case, 12 Co. 113; Corven's Case, 12 Co. 105.

"But though the heir has a property in the monuments and escutcheons of his ancestor, yet he has none in his body or ashes, nor can he bring any civil action against such as indecently, at least, if not impiously, violate and disturb their remains, when dead and buried. The parson, indeed, who has the freehold of the soil, may bring an action of trespass against such as dig and disturb it." 2 Black Com. 429.

2. Francis v. Ley, Cro. Jac. 367; Spooner v. Brewster, 3 Bing. 136.

3. Sabin v. Harkness, 4 N. H. 415.

4. Barnstable v. Thatcher, 3 Metc. 243.

A grantee who has buried the remains of his child in a lot in a cemetery, of which he holds possession under a deed from the proprietor, which sets forth that such grantee is entitled to the lot, habendum to him and his heirs and assigns, to his and their use as a place for the burial of the dead, may maintain an action of tort in the nature of quare clausum fregit against the superintendent for disintering and removing the remains therefrom. Meagher v. Driscoll, 99 Mass. 381.

5. Brewer v. Dew, 11 Mees. & W. 625; Guerin v. Harvey, 5 Taunt. 442.

But after one has dedicated land for a burying-ground, he and his grantees have no greater control over it than a lot-holder, and the latter may maintain an action against the grantee of the person who dedicated the ground for trespass upon plaintiff's lot and removing stone post placed there by him. Pierce v. Spofford, 53 Vt. 39.

6. Trustees v. Walsh, 57 Ill. 363.

7. The property dedicated to public and pious uses, threatened with desecration—the sepulchres of the dead with violation—the sentiment of natural affection of the surviving kindred and friends of the deceased to be wounded—the memorials erected by piety and love removed, so as to leave no traces of the last home of their ancestors to those visiting the spot in future generations, were acts that could not be redressed by the ordinary process of law. The remedy must be sought in the protecting power of a court of equity, operating by injunction to preserve the asylum of the dead and quiet the just and natural sensibilities of the living. Beatty v. Kurtz, 2 Pet. 566; Boyce v. Kalbaugh, 47 End. 334; s. c., 28 Am. R. 464.

8. First Pres. Church v. Second Pres. Church, 2 Brewst. (Penn.) 372.

9. Mooreland v. Richardson, 24 Beav.

One who has dedicated land to the public for burial purposes, the dedication having been accepted, will be prohibited from defacing or meddling with the graves thereon, at the suit of any one having relatives or friends buried there.<sup>1</sup>

9. When They are Nuisances.—A burial-ground near dwellings is not necessarily a nuisance, and its use can only be enjoined on clear proof of probable injury.<sup>2</sup>

If, however, it can be clearly proven that a place of sepulture is so situated that the burial of the dead there will endanger either life or health by corrupting the surrounding atmosphere or the waters of wells or springs, a court will grant injunction relief.<sup>3</sup>

Mere proximity will not constitute a cemetery a nuisance.<sup>4</sup>

10. Mortgages on Cemetery Lots are Void.—A mortgage made upon a cemetery lot where an interment has been made is void, as against public policy;<sup>5</sup> but where no interment has been made,

1. Davidson v. Reed, 111 Ill. 167; s. c., 53 Am. R. 613; Beatty v. Kurtz, 2 Pet. 585.

2. Musgrove v. St. Louis Church, 10 La. Ann. 431; New Orleans v. Wardens, 11 La. Ann. 244; Ellison v. Commissioners, 5 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 57; Lake View v. Lutz, 44 Ill. 81; Begein v. City of Anderson, 28 Ind. 79.

"Burial-places for the dead are indispensable. They may be the property of the public, devoted to the uses of the public, or the owner of a freehold may devote a part of his premises to the burial of his family or friends. It is but a just exercise of his dominion over his own property. Neither adjoining proprietors nor the public can complain, unless it is shown that, from the manner of the burial, or some other cause, irreparable injury will result to them. It is quite an error to suppose that of itself a burying-ground is a nuisance to those living in the vicinity. Much depends upon the mode of interment, whether it can be justly asserted that in any event injury will result from it. The particular locality and its surroundings must also be considered. Low, damp grounds, percolated by water, will hasten decomposition and the soil will be saturated with its products. Dry, high, well-ventilated localities retard rather than hasten decomposition, and if in a brief space of time there were numerous burials, there might be great peril of the products of decomposition escaping into and polluting the atmosphere." Kingsbury v. Flowers, 65 Ala. 479; s. c., 39 Am. R. 14; Ellison v. Comrs. of Washington 5 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 57; Dunning v. Aurora, 40 Ill. 481; Barnes v. Hathorn, 54 Me. 124.

3. Clark v. Laurence, 6 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 83; Barnes v. Hathorn, 54 Me. 124.

4. Nor can the verdict be sustained upon the sole ground of the cemetery's proximity to the plaintiff, and the consequent depreciation of the market value of his property. For a repository of the dead is yet indispensable, and wherever located, it must ex necessitate be in the vicinity of the private property of some one who might prove its market value injuriously affected thereby. Cemeteries are not necessarily even shocking to the senses of ordinary persons. Many are rendered attractive by whatever appropriate art and skill can suggest, while to others of morbid or excited fancy or imagination they become unpleasant, and induce mental disquietude from association, exaggerated by superstitious fears. The law protects against real wrong and injury combined, but not against either or both when merely fanciful. The human contents of these graves cannot, as they lie buried there, offend the senses, in a legal point of view. The memorial stones alone affect the senses, and the same would result to the superstitious, though nothing human lay beneath them. If this burial-ground is, under the circumstances, a private nuisance, then it is also a public nuisance to every traveller who passes on the road, as well as every soldier's monument in the country. Monk v. Packard, 71 Me. 309; s. c., 36 Am. R. 315; Cooley on Torts, 600; First Baptist Church v. Railroad, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 79; New Orleans v. Wardens, etc., 11 La. Ann. 244; Barnes v. Hathorn, 54 Me. 124.

5. Plaintiff conveyed to H. by deed, absolute in form, a lot in a cemetery in which plaintiff had buried his children.

and there is no statutory provision forbidding it, it is valid.<sup>1</sup>

11. Exemption from Taxation.—Most of the States contain either a constitutional or a statutory provision exempting burial-grounds from taxation. In Ohio the constitution provides that "laws shall be passed taxing by a uniform rule . . . all real and personal property, according to its true value in money, but burying-grounds . . . may be exempted from taxation,"<sup>2</sup> and by statute it is provided that they shall be exempted from taxation.<sup>3</sup>

But this does not relieve the association from paying an assessment for a street improvement.<sup>4</sup> But its lands cannot be sold to pay such assessment.<sup>5</sup>

This exemption from taxation includes all lands dedicated for cemetery purposes and the necessary improvements therein,<sup>6</sup> even

This deed was intended as a mortgage, security for a loan of money. H. conveyed the lot to F., who conveyed it to C. for a valuable consideration. C. knowing that interments had been made in the lots. It was held that the deeds were void, and equity would restrain a removal of the bodies interred. "But that it is an offence against good morals to mortgage a small, isolated plot of ground in a cemetery dedicated exclusively, under the sanction of the law, as a sanctuary for the dead of one's family, and already consecrated by the ashes of one's kindred, I am sure, cannot be well questioned. Such a transaction is clearly a breach of the policy of the statute, is contrary to its equity, and is within the evils it was designed to cure, and our moral nature protests against it. As a consequence of such a transaction, we have here a stranger calling upon a father to disinter his three children, who have been buried for a period of ten years in a cemetery lot, with a threat that, if the parent will not, he himself will do it. And suppose he carries his threat into execution, what then? Sepulture must, in the end, be had, and that, it is believed, the statute was intended to secure permanently." Thompson v. Hickey, 59 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 434; Lautz v. Buckingham, 11 Abb. N. S. (N. Y.) 64.

1. Lautz v. Buckingham, 4 Lans. (N. Y.) 484.

2. Const. Ohio, art. 12, § 2.

3. Rev. Statutes, Ohio, §§ 2732, 3571, 3578.

4. Assessment.—Lima v. Cemetery Assn., 42 Ohio St. 128; s. c., 5 Am. & Eng. Cor. Cases, 547. See Buffalo City Cem. v. Buffalo, 46 N. Y. 506; Alexander v. Baltimore, 5 Gill (Md.) 396; Baltimore v. Greenmount Cem., 7 Md. 517; Boston, etc., Society v. Boston, 116 Mass. 181;

s. c., 17 Am. R. 153; Paterson v. Society, etc., 24 N. J. L. 385; Northern Liberties v. St. John's Church, 13 Pa. St. 104; Crawford v. Burrell Tp., 53 Pa. St. 219, 280; Orange & A. R. Co. v. Alexander, 17 Gratt. (Va.) 176; Second Univ. Soc. v. Providence, 6 R. I. 235; Beals v. Rubber Co., 11 R. I. 381; Reclamation Dist. v. Goldman, 61 Cal. 205; Emery v. Gas Co., 28 Cal. 345; Palmer v. Stump, 29 Ind. 329; Marks v. Trustees, 37 Ind. 155; Illinois In. Canal v. Chicago, 12 Ill. 403; People v. Graceland Cem., 86 Ill. 336; Sioux City v. School Dist., 55 Iowa, 150; Leefevre v. Detroit, 2 Mich. 586; Broadway Bapt. Church v. McEtee, 8 Bush (Ky.), 508; Louisville v. Nevin, 10 Bush (Ky.), 549; Paine v. Spratley, 5 Kan. 525; Bridgeport v. Railroad, 36 Conn. 255; Yeatman v. Crandall, 11 La. Ann. 220; Rooney v. Brown, 21 La. Ann. 51; Lockwood v. St. Louis, 24 Mo. 20; Sheehan v. Good Samaritan Hos., 50 Mo. 155. Compare Dalrymple v. Milwaukee, 53 Wis. 178; Hale v. Kenosha, 29 Wis. 599; 18 English Rep., Moak's notes, 427.

5. Lima v. Cem. Assn., 42 Ohio St. 128; s. c., 5 Am. & Eng. Cor. Cases, 547.

While the cemetery lands . . . cannot be sold on any legal process, we think the city may nevertheless be able to collect the assessment, if indeed occasion should arise for resorting to further proceedings in the case, and payment, if not voluntarily made, could doubtless be secured by the appointment of a receiver, by sequestration, or by such other appropriate remedy as equity may afford—2 Dillon, Mun. Cor. § 822—without in any way disturbing the resting-place of those reposing in the city of the dead.

6. Taxation.—The exemption was of "the land of the company dedicated to the purposes of a cemetery," and it was argued that this exemption does not though the land may be idle.<sup>1</sup> But this can only be applied to a reasonable quantity of land which will at some time be needed for cemetery purposes.<sup>2</sup>

Where a statute provides that cemetery associations are exempt from "all public taxes and assessments," the exemptions extend to assessments for local improvements, as, for example, a sidewalk built in front of the property.<sup>3</sup>

extend to or include the improvements on the land, because by the tax-law the assessors were required, in valuing real estate, to estimate the value of the land per acre, and "separately" to value the improvements thereon. But the court held the point not well taken. "But this requirement," said Bartol, C. J., "was not designed to convert the improvements into personalty, or to separate them from the realty, nor can it be construed to have that effect: it was intended only to point out the mode in which the assessment should be made, and the whole aggregate value of the land, with the improvements, ascertained. The whole context shows that the permanent improvements are treated as realty, as the law regards them; and in our judgment the exemption of the permanent improvements thereon used for the purposes of a public cemetery, and which are essential to the use and enjoyment of the land for the purposes contemplated in the charter." Appeal, Tax, etc. v. Baltimore Cem. Co., 50 Ind. 433; Note 9 Am. & Eng. Cor. Cases, 436. Compare Woodlawn Cem. v. Inhabitants of Everett, 354.

1. Where there was about five acres of land in the cemetery property that was not used for burial purposes, but was cultivated by the superintendent of the cemetery, who resided in a house on the five acres, this house and five acres were assessed, but the court held it exempt, under a law providing that the cemetery and all the burial lots therein should be free from taxation. Replying to the contention that the exemption extended only to land actually used for burial purposes, the court said: "Such construction of the general act is too narrow. The space required for burial purposes constantly increases, and a reasonable quantity of land for future occupancy should be provided. Land acquired for such purposes is not taxable. Seventeen acres is not an unreasonable quantity of land for a cemetery in the vicinity of Hoboken." Hoboken v. North Bergen, 43 N. J. L. 148.

2. In People v. Cemetery Co., 86 Ill. 337, the exemption was of property held by the company "subservient to burial uses." The company had 153 acres in two tracts near Chicago, besides the land which they had in actual use for burial purposes, and upon this 153 acres were built certain stables, etc., occupied by men and teams employed in the cemetery. The court held the property not within the exemption. "Here are two large tracts of land," said the court, "not used, or likely to be used for years to come, for cemetery purposes. While we may concede the right of the company to purchase and hold the land to be appropriated some time in the distant future for burial purposes, yet we cannot hold, under a fair and reasonable construction of its charter, that the land can be held free from taxation."

3. "The statute relating to cemetery association (Gen. St. 1878, c. 34, § 259) provides that cemetery lands and property formed pursuant to this title are exempt from all public taxes and assessment. The question here is whether this exemption includes assessments levied for local improvements, which in this case was a sidewalk. The cost was, in accordance with the charter of the city of St. Paul, assessed upon the property fronting upon the improvement, in accordance with the number of lineal feet of real estate. In our judgment, the manifest intention of the legislature was to exempt the property of cemetery associations from all public charges and burdens imposed in the exercise of the taxing power, whether of a general or local character. This construction is in harmony with the object of the exemption, which is not merely to aid cemetery associations in dollars and cents, to the amount of the tax or assessment which would otherwise be levied against their property, but mainly to preserve cemeteries for the particular uses to which they have been appropriated, and secure their perpetuity as places of burial, and thus, in accordance with the common sentiment of mankind, guard against the disturbance of the resting places of the dead, which would naturally ensue if the ground was liable to be sold to enforce the collection of taxes or assessments." Oakland Cem. Assn. v.

CEMETERIES—CERTAIN—CERTAINTY.

12. Exemption from Execution, etc.—In many of the States the estate of the owner of a burial-lot is declared by statute to be real estate, and descendible to his heirs and divisible by will, or may be disposed of by the owner by sale, with the approval of the corporation.

It is also protected from attachment or execution for debt, and is not affected by the insolvent laws of the State.

At common law cemeteries were exempted from execution.<sup>1</sup>

CERTAIN. See note 2.

CERTAINTY. See CONTRACTS; DEEDS; INDICTMENT; PLEADING; WILLS.<sup>3</sup>

City of St. Paul, 32 N. W. Rep. 781 (Sup. C. Minn., May 5, 1887).

In Mulroy v. Churchman, 52 Iowa, 238, where out of 40 acres of land alleged to be held by a church as a burying-ground, only one acre, in fact, was actually used for burial purposes, the 39 acres remaining were held taxable.

1. At common law neither a churchyard nor the glebe of a parsonage or vicarage could be extended under an eliget. They were regarded as solemnly consecrated to God and religion. A sentiment of reverence towards the graves of companions and ancestors would certainly go far towards impelling the courts in this country to hold that a churchyard used as a cemetery is not subject to execution. Freeman on Execution.

"We have therefore complete authority for saying that at common law no process ever issued to a sheriff to levy on ecclesiastical property the debt due in an action." Lord Alvanly in Arbuckle v. Cowtar, 3 Bos. & Pull. 328.

The sentiment is sound, and has the sanction of mankind in all ages, which regards the resting-place of the dead as hallowed ground, not subject to the laws of ordinary property, nor liable to be devoted to common uses. Brown v. Lutheran Church, etc., 23 Penn. St. 495.

2. In order to entitle a creditor, under sec. 28 of 3 & 4 Wm. IV. c. 42. to interest on a debt from the time the debt was payable, "if such debt be payable by virtue of some written instrument at a certain time," it is not necessary that the day for the payment should be mentioned in the instrument; it is sufficient if a time or event be fixed, the date of which can be ascertained afterwards. Duncombe v. Hotel Co., L. R. 10 Q. B. 371.

Twelve Months Certain.—An agreement "for twelve months certain," after which time either party should be at liberty to terminate the agreement by giving the other a three months' notice, construed to mean an agreement for twelve months' certain, to expire without notice at all at the end of twelve months, and then to continue, if the parties so please, until terminated by a three months' notice. Langton v. Carleton, L. R. 9 Ex. 57; Thompson v. Maberly, 2 Campb 573.

In Pleading.—A declaration stating the sale of a certain horse at and for a certain quantity of oil, without more distinctly specifying the horse or quantity, was held bad for uncertainty, though not a sufficient objection to arrest judgment after verdict. Ward v. Harris, 2 Bos. & P. 265; Andrews v. Whitehead, 13 East, 102.

In Lease.—A lease for ninety-nine years, if A, B, or C, or any or either of them, should so long live, is not a holding for any term or number of years certain. Doe v. Roe, 9 Barn. & Cress. 2.

In a Writing.—The contention being that the language—"Received of G. W. S. & Co. a note . . . as collateral security for certain notes we hold of theirs"—was ambiguous as not specifying whether all the notes or some were meant, it was held that the word "certain" showed that the notes in the hands of the signers of said writing were those meant, and all of them. Bell v. Martin, 3 Harr. (N. J.) 167.

Certain Rent.—Payment of taxes and daubing and chinking a certain house is a certain rent within the act of 21st March, 1772. Pa. Shaffer v. Sutton, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 228.

3 Moral Certainty.— "The phrase 'moral certainty' has been introduced into our jurisprudence from the publicists and metaphysicians, and signifies only a very high degree of probability. It was observed by Puffendorf that 'when we declare such a thing to be morally certain because it has been confirmed by creditable witnesses, this moral certitude is nothing else but a strong presumption grounded on probable reasons, and which

CERTIFICATE (See also BANKS AND BANKING; SHARES; ADMIRALTY; BILLS AND NOTES; INSURANCE; TRIAL.)—A statement in writing by a person having a public or official status, concerning some matter within his knowledge or authority.<sup>1</sup>

very seldom fails and deceives us.' Law of Nature and Nations (Eng. Ed. 1749), book 1, c. 2, § 11. 'Probable evidence,' says Bishop Butler, in the opening sentence of his Analogy, 'is essentially distinguished from demonstrative by this, that it admits of degrees and of all variety of them, from the highest moral certainty to the very lowest presumption.' Proof 'beyond a reasonable doubt' is not beyond all possible or imaginary doubt, but such proof as precludes every reasonable hypothesis except that which it tends to support. It is proof 'to a moral certainty' as distinguished from an absolute certainty. As applied to a judicial trial for crime, the two phrases are synonymous and equivalent; each has been used by eminent judges to explain the other; and each signifies such proof as satisfies the judgment and consciences of the jury, as reasonable men, and applying their reason to the evidence before them, that the crime charged has been committed by the defendant, and so satisfies them as to leave no other reasonable conclusion possible. Accordingly, in Commonwealth v. Webster, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 295, in which the jury were instructed that the burden of proof was on the prosecutor, and that they must be satisfied to a reasonable and moral certainty that the defendant had committed the murder for which he was indicted, Chief Justice Shaw concluded this part of his charge as follows: 'If upon such proof there is reasonable doubt remaining, the accused is entitled to the benefit of it by an acquittal. For it is not sufficient to establish a probability, though a strong one, arising from the doctrine of chances, that the fact charged is more likely to be true than the contrary; but the evidence must establish the truth of the fact to a reasonable and moral certainty; a certainty that convinces and directs the understanding, and satisfies the reason and judgment of those who are bound to act conscientiously upon it. This we take to be proof beyond reasonable doubt; because if the law, which mostly depends upon considerations of a moral nature, should go further than this, and require absolute certainty, it would exclude circumstantial evidence altogether.' See also Commonwealth v. Goodwin, 14 Gray (Mass.), 55. Baron Parke, in a case tried before him, expressed the same thought conversely, thus: 'Such a moral certainty as convinces the minds of the tribunal, as reasonable men, beyond all possible doubt.' Regina v. Sterne, cited in Best on Ev. § 95, and 3 Greenleaf Ev. § 29. And instructions that the jury should be satisfied of the defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt have often been held sufficient, without further explanation. Commonwealth v. Tuttle, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 502; Commonwealth v. Cobb, 14 Gray (Mass.), 57. Commonwealth v. Harman, 4 Pa. St. 269; Regina v. White, 4 F. & F. 383."

In a Warrant.—A warrant is sufficiently certain to be sustained if the objects called for are identified by the testimony, or unless the calls would equally well suit more than one place. Ross v. Reed, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 482.

1. Rapalje & Lawrence.

Return of Constable.—The return of a constable of the service of a summons is a certificate in both the technical and liberal sense of the term. Miller v. Larmon, 38 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 417.

Certificate of Appraisement.—An affidavit made and signed by three appraisers appointed to appraise land about to be sold by an administrator, with the appraisement immediately following and attached thereto, commencing "we appraise as follows," etc., is a sufficient compliance, although the signatures were not also appended to the appraisement, with a statute requiring the delivery of a certificate of the appraisement. McVey v. McVey, 51 Mo. 406.

Collector's Certificate—Under the revenue act of 1857, to make the collector's certificate of sale for taxes prima facie evidence of right of possession in the purchaser at the sale, the certificate must be executed, acknowledged, and recorded in the same manner as a conveyance of land. After the two years limited for redemption have passed, the holder of the certificate may procure a deed, but he cannot defend his possession upon the certificate merely against a party showing a legal title.

Perjury.—In U. S. v. Ambrose, 2 Fed. Rep. 556, it was questioned whether the sworn statements required to be made by a clerk of a United States court, in his accounts with and returns to the government, are "declarations" or "certificates" within the statutes punishing perjury.

CERTIORARI (See also APPEAL; WRIT OF ERROR.)Definition, 60.By What Courts Granted, 60.The Return, 61.What Matters Reviewed, 62.General Principles upon which Granted or Refused, 62.Effect of Issuing Writ, 66.Judgment, 66.Costs, 67.As an Ancillary Process, 67.

1. Definition.—A certiorari is a writ issuing from a superior court to an inferior court, tribunal, or officer exercising judicial powers, whose proceedings are summary or in a course different from the common law, commanding the latter to return the records of a cause depending before it to the superior court.<sup>1</sup>

2. By What Courts Granted.—At common law the writ issued from chancery or king's bench.<sup>2</sup> In this country the writ is generally provided for by statute; but where no such provision is made, and no appeal or other mode of review is provided from the decisions of any inferior jurisdiction, the circuit or district court of the State or other tribunal exercising general original common-law jurisdiction has an inherent authority to revise the proceedings by certiorari,<sup>3</sup> unless expressly forbidden to do so.<sup>4</sup> Even when the inferior tribunal is given the power to finally hear and determine a cause, the superior court may thus revise its proceedings.<sup>5</sup>

Condition Precedent.—Defendant was to pay for building upon receiving an architect's certificate that the work was done to his satisfaction. The architect checked the builder's charges, and sent them to defendant. Held, that this did not amount to such a certificate of satisfaction as to enable the builder to sue defendant, although defendant had not objected to pay on the ground that no sufficient certificate had been rendered. Morgan v. Birnie, 9 Bing. 672.

In a Will.—The word "certificates" in a will was held not to include warrants for bounty lands, though sometimes used synonymously, it being also in proof that the certificates might refer to other instruments more properly; that the testatrix had previously in her will devised all her lands to her husband for life; that the parties had acquiesced in a settlement on the basis that the warrants did not pass as certificates; and that the person in whose hands the warrants were referred to as being never had them. Edmondson v. Bloomshire, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 382.

Written Statement or Certificate.—The words "written statement or certificate of the number of votes cast," in statute, which the judges are required to make, will not justify a statement indorsed without the signatures of the judges.

The words "statement and certificate" are there used as equivalent terms, and the word "or" in the sense of "to wit." People v. Nordheim, 99 Ill. 560.

1. Farmington, etc., Co. v. Commissioners, 112 Mass. 206; Tidd's Pr. 397.

"A certiorari is an original writ issuing out of chancery or the king's bench, directed in the king's name to the judges or officers of inferior courts, commanding them to return the records of a cause depending before them, to the end that the party may have the more sure and speedy justice before him, or such other justices as he shall assign to determine the cause." Bacon's Abr. Certiorari, title (a).

2. Tidd's Pr. 397.

3. Miller v. School Trustees, 88 Ill. 26; Thompson v. School District, 25 Mich. 483; Lessee v. Suk, 9 Ohio, 142; Ridgway v. Hinton, 25 W. Va. 554.

Statutory Writ.—The statutory writ of certiorari is generally a much more flexible remedy than the common-law certiorari. Washington v. Parker, 60 Ala. 447; Cooley on Tax. 447.

4. Rev. Stat. Neb. (1883) sec. 599. p. 610; Dass. Rev. Stat. Kans. sec. 3796. The writ is not in use in Connecticut and Oregon. Williams v. H. & M. H. R., 13 Conn. 118; s. c., 2 Or. 42.

5. People v. Turner, 1 Cal. 152; Rex

3. The Return.—The purpose of the writ is to have the entire record of the inferior tribunal brought before the superior court to determine whether the former had jurisdiction, or had exceeded its jurisdiction,<sup>1</sup> or had failed to proceed according to the essential requirements of the law.<sup>2</sup> It is proper also to require the inferior court to state its rulings in law on facts stated in the petition for the writ.<sup>3</sup> And it is said that when any fact is denied that goes to the jurisdiction of the inferior tribunal, the evidence in support of such fact should be certified to the revisory court.<sup>4</sup>

v. Morely, 2 Burr. 1040; Hartley v. Hooker, Cowp. 524; 2 Hawk. P. C. 286. But it would seem that in such cases the question of jurisdiction in the inferior tribunal should be the only one reviewed. Ex parte Childs, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 358; Richardson v. Smith, 59 N. H. 517.

1. Ex parte Hayward, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 358; Richardson v. Smith, 59 N. H. 517.

The record of the inferior court should show all facts necessary to sustain its jurisdiction. Molett v. Keenan, 22 Ala. 484.

2. Many authorities seem to hold that the revisory court on certiorari can only inquire as to the jurisdiction of the inferior tribunal, but the better opinion seems to be that errors in law affecting the merits of the case occurring in the course of the proceedings may be reviewed. McAllhiley v. Horton, 75 Ala. 491; Donahue v. Will County, 100 Ill. 94; Hyslop v. Finch, 99 Ill. 171; State v. Dodge County, 56 Wis. 79.

New York.—The growth of opinion in New York is fairly stated by Folger, J., in People v. Betts, 55 N. Y. 600: "The office of a common-law certiorari is, in strictness, merely to bring up the record of the proceedings in an inferior court or tribunal, to enable the court of review to determine whether the former has proceeded within its jurisdiction, and not to correct mere errors in its proceedings. People v. Commissioners of Highways, etc., 30 N. Y. 72. True, it has been sometimes intimated and sometimes held that in the absence of any other remedy, and to prevent a failure of justice, the party will be suffered by it to bring up, not only the naked question of jurisdiction, but the evidence as well as the ground or principles on which the inferior body acted, and the questions of law on which the relator relies. Susquehanna Bank v. Supervisors, etc., 25 N. Y. 312; Baldwin v. Buffalo, 35 N. Y. 380; Swift v. Poughkeepsie, 37 N. Y. 511. Many cases are cited in the People v. Assessors, 39 N. Y. 81, and it is there held that the office of the writ extends to the review of all questions of jurisdiction, power, and authority of inferior tribunals to do the acts complained of, and to all questions of regularity of their proceedings. In People v. Assessors, 40 N. Y. 154, it is held that the writ may bring up for review the decision that a given state of facts is not legally sufficient to compel a board of supervisors to the conclusion that certain property was not liable to assessment; in other words, a decision of law. . . . And in People v. Allen, 52 N. Y. 538, a certiorari brought up for review the decision of the defendants upon a question of law. It is thus seen that the office of a common-law writ of certiorari has been somewhat enlarged since the decision in 30 N. Y. 72. But it will also be seen that it is in cases where the relator has no other available remedy, and where injustice would be done if the writ was not permitted to do its work. The rule still remains unimpaired, at least in principle, that where there is a remedy by appeal, the writ will be confined to its original and more appropriate office." Storm v. Odell, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 287. See also In re Mt. Morris Square, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 14, 27. Compare People v. Burney, 29 Cal. 459; Central Pacific R. v. Placer County, 46 Cal. 667; Phillips v. Welch, 12 Neb. 158.

3. Mendon v. Commissioners, 5 Allen (Mass.), 13; Farmington, etc., Co. v. Commissioners, 112 Mass. 206; Tewksbury v. Commissioners, 117 Mass. 117; Milwaukee Iron Co. v. Schabel, 29 Wis. 447.

4. Whitney v. Board of Delegates, 14 Cal. 480; People v. Board of Police, 69 N. Y. 409; People v. Board of Police, 72 N. Y. 15.

When a certiorari is issued to county commissioners, all should join in the return, which should be the record and not an answer as in a suit. Tewksbury v. Commissioners, 117 Mass. 563; Farmington, etc., Co. v. Commissioners, 112 Mass. 206.

4. What Matters Reviewed.—When its scope is not enlarged by statute, certiorari lies only to correct errors in law and not to review the evidence.<sup>1</sup> According to the better view, however, it is proper to inquire whether there was any evidence to establish some essential fact,<sup>2</sup> and also as to the rulings below upon the admission of alleged incompetent evidence where no other and competent evidence was introduced tending to prove a necessary finding.<sup>3</sup> But the record of an inferior court or other tribunal of matters in its jurisdiction cannot be disputed by other evidence, nor its finding of facts when supported by any competent evidence.<sup>4</sup>

5. General Principles upon which Granted or Refused.—The writ of

1. McAllilley v. Horton, 75 Ala. 491; Central Pacific R. v. Placer County, 43 Cal. 365; Betts v. Warren, 5 Harr. (Del.) 4; Hyslop v. Finch, 99 Ill. 171; Ex parte Nightengale, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 168; Gibbs v. Commissioners, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 298; Corrie v. Corrie, 42 Mich. 509; Rawson v. McIlvane, 49 Mich. 194; Williamson v. Carman, 1 G. & J. (Md.) 196; Rayner v. State, 52 Md. 368; De Rocherbrune v. Southernier, 12 Minn. 78; Lapan v. Commissioners, 65 Me. 160; State v. Davis, 48 N. J. L. 112; State v. Hudson, 32 N. J. L. 365; State v. Bill, 13 Ired. (N. Car.) 373; People v. Assessors, 39 N. Y. 81; Independence v. Pompton, 4 Halst. (Tenn.) 209; In re Kensington County, 97 Pa. St. 260; Healey v. Kneeland, 48 Wis. 407; State v. Kemen, 61 Wis. 494; Poe v. Machine Works, 24 W. Va. 517. Compare Calaway v. Calaway, 3 Harr. (Del.) 84; Hill v. Faison, 27 Tex. 428.

Certiorari is said not to lie to set aside proceedings of county commissioners in allowing illegal claim. Andrews v. Pratt, 44 Cal. 309. Compare People v. Supervisors, 51 N. Y. 442.

2. "Not to determine whether the probabilities preponderate one way or the other, but simply to determine whether the evidence is such that it will justify the finding as a legitimate inference from the facts proved, whether that inference would or would not have been drawn by the superior tribunal." Jackson v. People, 10 Mich. 111. Ex parte Madison Turnpike Co., 62 Ala. 93; Camden v. Block, 65 Ala. 236; Rawson v. McIlvane, 49 Mich. 194; Hyde v. Nelson, 11 Mich. 357; People v. Police Board, 72 N. Y. 415; People v. Police Board, 69 N. Y. 408; People v. Weigant, 14 Hun (N. Y.), 546; Moreland v. Whitford, 54 Wis. 150.

The record of a summary conviction under a penal statute by an inferior court should contain the evidence upon which conviction was had. Mullin v. People, 24 N. Y. 399.

3. Farmington, etc., Co. v. Commissioners, 112 Mass. 206; Cobb v. Lucas, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 1; Gleason v. Sloper, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 181; St. Paul v. Marvin, 16 Minn. 91; Gerdes v. Champion, 108 Ill. 137; Hosford v. Wilson, 1 Taunt. 13.

The objection to the competency of evidence should have been made below. Cousins v. Cowing, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 208; Stratton v. Commissioners, 10 Met. (Mass.) 217.

Assignment of Error.—It has been said that the revisory court without assignment of errors will inspect the record and give judgment. Commissioners v. Sheldon, 3 Mass. 188. But compare Platt v. Hook, 5 Harr. (Del.) 352; Deputy v. Betts, 4 Harr. (Del.) 352. And the statutes of the States generally provide for an assignment of errors on certiorari.

4. Fore v. Fore, 44 Ala. 478; Miller v. McCullough, 21 Ark. 426; Deputy v. Betts, 4 Harr. (Del.) 352; Burton v. Ferguson, 69 Ind. 486; Mendon v. Commissioners, 5 Allen (Mass.), 13; Tewksbury v. Commissioners, 117 Mass. 563; Emery v. Braun, 67 Me. 39; McGregor v. Supervisors, 37 Mich. 388; Hannibal R. v. State Board of Equalization, 64 Mo. 294; Williamson v. Carman, 1 G. & J. (Md.) 196; State v. Miller, 94 N. Car. 902; People v. Fire Commissioners, 73 N. Y. 437; State v. Board of Equalization, 7 Nev. 83; Richardson v. Smith, 59 N. H. 517; Andrews v. Andrews, 14 N. J. L. 141; State v. Kernan, 61 Wis. 494; Cassidy v. Millerich, 52 Wis. 389; State v. Senft, 2 Hill (S. Car.), 367.

Jurisdictional Fact Disputable.—It has been held that a fact which goes to the jurisdiction of the inferior tribunal may be disputed. Whitney v. Board of Delegates, 14 Cal. 480-501; Cullen v. Lowery, 2 Harr. (Del.) 459.

certiorari is not a writ of right, except when made so by statute or when issued at the instance of the sovereign power;<sup>1</sup> but it rests in the sound discretion of the court to grant or refuse it under the circumstances of the case.<sup>2</sup> It will not be granted unless required to do substantial justice.<sup>3</sup> It lies only to inferior courts and officers exercising judicial functions, and the act to be reviewed must be judicial in its nature, and not ministerial or legislative.<sup>4</sup>

1. Bacon's Abr. Certiorari, title (a); 4 Black. Com. 320; Mendon v. Commissioners, 5 Allen (Mass.), 13; Duggen v. McGruder, Walk. (Miss.) 112; s. c., 12 Am. Dec. 527; Supervisors v. Magoon, 109 Ill. 142; Ex parte Hitz, 111 U. S. 766.

2. Flourney v. Payne, 28 Ark. 87; Keys v. Marin County, 42 Cal. 252; Scroggin v. State, 55 Ga. 380; Basnet v. Jacksonville, 16 Fla. 523; Bannister v. Allen, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 414; Freeman v. Oldham, 4 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 420; Duggen v. McGruder, Walk. (Miss.) 112; Specht v. Detroit, 20 Mich. 168; Bath Bridge v. Magoon, 8 Greenl. (Me.) 293; Farmington, etc., Co. v. Commissioners, 112 Mass. 206; Huse v. Gaines, 2 N. H. 210; People v. Supervisors, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 198; State v. Senft, 2 Hill (S. Car.), 367; Erwin v. Erwin, 3 Dev. (N. Car.) 528; State v. Taxing District, 16 Lea (Tenn.), 240; Crosby v. Probate Court, 3 Utah. 50; Walbridge v. Walbridge, 46 Vt. 617; Knapp v. Heller, 32 Wis. 467.

"The discretion was not an arbitrary one, but one to be exercised in subordination to legal principles, and we may always inquire whether those principles have been adhered to or departed from." Trustees v. Directors, 88 Ill. 100.

3. Edgar v. Greer, 14 Iowa, 211; Hyslop v. Finck, 99 Ill. 171; Cobb v. Lucas, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 181; Gager v. Supervisors, 47 Mich. 167; French v. Barre, 58 Vt. 567; State v. Kernan, 61 Wis. 494.

Substantial Justice.—Upon the application for the writ evidence may be introduced to show that substantial justice has been done, and in such event the petitioner may introduce contradictory evidence, but it must be limited to this point. Farmington, etc., Co. v. Commissioners, 112 Mass. 206; Gleason v. Sloper, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 181; Charlestown v. Commissioners, 109 Mass. 270; Hyslop v. Finck, 99 Ill. 171.

Petitioner's Interest.—The petitioner must have an individual pecuniary interest in the proceedings sought to be reviewed. Powell v. Commissioners, 34 Ala. 278; Watson v. May, 6 Ala. 133;

Bath Bridge Co. v. Magoon, 8 Greenl. (Me.) 292; Tucker's Petition, 28 N. H. 405; Daids County v. Horne, 4 G. Greene (Iowa), 133.

But if he have such an interest he need not be a party to the record. Moore v. Hancock, 11 Ala. 245; Dyer v. Lowell, 30 Me. 217. Compare McCreary v. O'Flinn, 63 Miss. 204.

A statutory provision requiring the writ to be brought within two years does not take away its discretionary character; nor does a provision for its allowance out of court by one judge. In re Lantis, 9 Mich. 324; Thompson v. Multnomah County, 2 Ore. 34.

4. Robinson v. Supervisors, 16 Cal. 208; State v. Mansfield, 34 Minn. 250; In re Wilson, 32 Minn. 145; Ex parte Fay, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 243; Lock v. Lexington, 112 Mass. 290; Stone v. Mayor, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 157; Esmeralda County v. District Court, 18 Nev. 438; Thompson v. Multnomah County, 2 Ore. 34.

New Jersey.—But in New Jersey, certiorari is considered a proper proceeding to test the validity of the acts of municipal corporations, whether judicial, legislative, or ministerial. Camden v. Mulford, 2 Dutch. (N. J.) 49; 2 Dil. Mun. Corp. (3d Ed.) sec. 927.

Acts Not Judicial.—Among many cases the following acts have been declared non-judicial, and hence not reviewable on certiorari: The appointment of a supervisor by a county judge. People v. Bush, 40 Cal. 344. The delegating to a committee of the power to locate a "Children's Home" by supervisors. People v. Supervisors, 25 Hun (N. Y.), 131. A resolution at a town meeting to pay bounties to soldiers. People v. Supervisors, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 232. The selection of text-books by a board of education. People v. Board of Education, 54 Cal. 375. The creation of a swamp-land district by supervisors. Williams v. Supervisors, 65 Cal. 160. The selection of an official newspaper. Iowa News Co. v. Harris, 62 Iowa, 501. The rejection of a bid for public printing. Townsend v. Copeland, 56 Cal. 612.

Writ directed to one having Record.—The writ should be directed to the court,

It does not lie when an appeal, writ of error, or other mode of review is given;<sup>1</sup> but if an appeal is improperly denied or the party is deprived of it by fraud or accident, a writ of certiorari is sometimes granted and the whole case reviewed both as to law and fact.<sup>2</sup> This writ does not lie to correct mere irregularities in the proceedings of the inferior jurisdiction;<sup>3</sup> nor where errors and individual hardship are manifest, if great public inconvenience would ensue;<sup>4</sup> nor where the matter sought to be reviewed rests in the discretion of the tribunal below;<sup>5</sup> nor where the party seeking it has been guilty of laches;<sup>6</sup> nor generally, in analogy to the writ of error, where the time in which the latter might be brought has expired.<sup>7</sup> The writ is not granted to review interlocutribunal, or officer having charge of the record at the time the writ is issued. Farmington, etc., Co. v. Commissioners, 112 Mass. 206; Commissioners v. Winthrop, 10 Mass. 177; Williams v. Williams, 71 N. Car. 427.

1. Dean v. State, 63 Ala. 153; Reilly v. Tyng, 1 Ariz. 510; People v. Turner, 1 Cal. 152; Withowski v. Skalowski, 46 Ga. 41; People v. Lindsay, 1 Idaho, 394; Ennis v. Ennis, 110 Ill. 78; Macklot v. Davenport, 17 Iowa, 379; Edgar v. Greer, 14 Iowa, 211; Lynch v. Crosby, 34 Mass. 313; Jones v. Boston, 104 Mass. 461; Williamson v. Carman, 1 G. & J. (Md.) 196; Edgerton v. Green Cove Springs, 18 Fla. 528; State v. Sluder, 8 Ired. (N. Car.) 487; State v. Apgar, 31 N. J. 358; Peacock v. Leonard, 8 Nev. 84-157-247; State v. Cohen, 13 S. Car. 198; Poe v. Machine Works, 24 W. Va. 517; Hauser v. State, 33 Wis. 678. Compare Krumick v. Krumick, 2 Green (N. J.), 39; N. J. Rd. v. Suydam, 2 Harr. (N. J.) 25; Ray v. Parsons, 14 Tex. 370; Murfee v. Leeper, 1 Overt. (Tenn.) 1.

An appeal from a justice has been declared cumulative. Williams v. Burchinal, 3 Harr. (Del.) 83.

And in another case it has been said that where the inferior court has exceeded its jurisdiction an appeal is not proper, but the case should be reviewed on certiorari. Baxter v. Brooks, 29 Ark. 173; People v. Judges, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 249.

2. Hodges v. Lassiter, 94 N. Car. 294; Syme v. Broughton, 84 N. Car. 114; Simmons v. Dowd, 77 N. Car. 155; Perkins v. Hadley, 4 Hayw. (Tenn.) 143; Poe v. Machine Works, 24 W. Va. 517.

3. St. Louis, etc., R. v. Barnes, 35 Ark. 95; Basnet v. Jacksonville, 18 Fla. 523; Hopkins v. Fogler, 60 Me. 266; Galloway v. Corbitt, 52 Mich. 460; Kennedy v. State, 5 R. I. 385.

4. Trustees v. Directors, 88 Ill. 100; Rutland v. Commissioners, 20 Pick.

(Mass.) 79; In re Lantis, 9 Mich. 324; Elmendorf v. Mayor, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 693; Bell v. Overseers, 14 N. J. L. 131; Dailey v. Bertholomew, 1 Ashm. (Tenn.) 135; Crosby v. Probate Court, 3 Utah, 50.

Accordingly, fifteen months after a school district was organized and had assumed corporate functions the writ was denied. Fractional School District v. Joint Board, 27 Mich. 3.

So in tax cases the writ is frequently refused. Weaver v. Devendorf, 3 Denio (N. Y.), 117.

5. Benton v. Taylor, 46 Ala. 388; Brooks v. Kirby, 19 Ala. 72; Hildreth v. Crawford, 65 Iowa, 339; Supervisors v. Auditor-General, 27 Mich. 165; Dwight v. Springfield, 4 Gray (Mass.), 107; People v. Supervisors, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 198; Livingston v. Rector, 45 N. J. L. 230; Commissioners v. Kane, 2 Jones (N. Car.) 288; Wildy v. Washburn, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 49.

Questions of expediency as to the establishing of roads, making public improvements, etc., are of this nature. Tiedt v. Carstensen, 61 Iowa, 334.

6. Hagar v. Supervisors, 47 Cal. 222; Tilton v. Larimer County, etc., 6 Col. 288; State v. Lawrence, 81 N. Car. 522; Brown v. Williams, 84 N. Car. 116; People v. Police Board, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 289; Tye v. Noel, 85 Ill. 290; Trustees v. Directors, 88 Ill. 100; Stone v. Boston, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 220; State v. Hudson, 5 Dutch. (N. J.) 115; Bannister v. Allen, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 414; Fagg v. Parker, 11 Iowa, 187; Poe v. Machine Works, 24 W. Va. 517.

The writ should be applied for while the record is still in the hands of the tribunal whose action is sought to be reviewed. People v. Delaney, 49 N. Y. 655.

7. But upon a strong showing the writ may be granted after such time. Kimple v. San Francisco, 66 Cal. 136; Trustees

tory orders.<sup>1</sup> The petition for the writ should disclose a proper case upon its face.<sup>2</sup> Even where the writ has issued, it may be dismissed without a hearing, when in the opinion of the court it has been granted improvidently.<sup>3</sup> Certiorari is, however, an important remedy, and the right to issue it in proper cases has been steadily maintained by the courts.<sup>4</sup>

v. Directors, 88 Ill. 100; State v. St. Louis, 4 Mo. App. 577; Rutland v. Commissioners, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 83; In re Lantis, 9 Mich. 324; People v. Commissioners, 77 N. Y. 605; State v. Milwaukee Co., 58 Wis. 4.

1. People v. County Judge, 40 Cal. 479; People v. Lindsay, 1 Idaho. 394; Palms v. Campau, 11 Mich. 109; Stakes v. Early, 45 N. J. L. 478; Richardson v. Smith, 59 N. H. 517; Ex parte Hamilton, 58 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 290; Noble v. Board of Pilots, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 126; In re Road, etc., 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 419. Compare Commonwealth v. Simpson, 2 Grant's Cas. (Pa.) 438; State v. Patterson, 39 N. J. L. 489. And in criminal cases. State v. Jefferson, 66 N. Car. 309.

But in England certiorari issues either before or after final order. 1 Tidd's Pr. 398.

2. Russell v. Pickering, 17 Ill. 31; Lee v. Childs, 17 Mass. 351; Willis v. Dunn, Wright (O.), 130.

3. Magee v. Cutler, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 239; Susquehanna Bank v. Supervisors, 25 N. Y. 312; In re Lantis, 9 Mich. 324; People v. Lindsay, 1 Idaho, 394; Burke v. Coolidge, 35 Ark. 180.

Notice.—The statutes of the several States generally provide that the writ shall issue only on notice to the opposite party, and it would seem that such notice should be given in any event. Farmington, etc., Co. v. Commissioners, 112 Mass. 206; Commissioners v. Downing, 6 Mass. 72.

Motion to Quash or Supersede.—A motion to supersede the writ is the proper motion before the return is made, and a motion to quash only lies after the return has been made. State v. Milwaukee Co., 58 Wis. 4; Milwaukee Iron Co. v. Schubel, 29 Wis. 444; s. c., 9 Am. Rep. 591; Rall v. Warren, 16 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 379; Ferguson v. Jones, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 241; 1 Tidd's Pr. 444.

4. Where there is no statutory inhibition, and no appeal or other mode of review is given, certiorari will lie in the following cases:

Streets and Highways.—The proceedings of supervisors, commissioners, city councils, etc., in opening, altering, improving or discontinuing public streets and roads as to their legality and regularity, but not as to the questions of the expediency of such improvements. Ex parte Keenan, 21 Ala. 558; Commissioners v. Thompson, 15 Ala. 134; Murray v. Mariposa County, 23 Cal. 492; Tewksbury v. Commissioners, 117 Mass. 563; Parks v. Boston, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 218; Kingman v. Commissioners, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 306; French v. Commissioners, 12 Mich. 267; Duffield v. Detroit, 15 Mich. 474; People v. Brighton, 20 Mich. 57; Preble v. Portland, 45 Me. 241; St. Charles v. Rogers, 49 Mo. 530; Swan v. Cumberland, 8 Gill (Md.), 150; Nickols v. Sutton, 22 Ga. 369; Spray v. Thompson, 9 Iowa, 500; Deitrich v. Commissioners, 6 Ill. App. 70; Lawton v. Commissioners, 2 Caines (N. Y.), 179; Dorchester v. Wentworth, 31 N. H. 451; Camden v. Mulford, 2 Dutch. (N. J.) 49; Prigden v. Bannerman, 8 Jones (N. Car.), 53; Ruhlman v. Commonwealth, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 26; White's Case, 2 Overt. (Tenn.) 109; French v. Barre, 58 Vt. 567; State v. Stewart, 5 Strob. L. (S. Car.) 29; State v. Cockrell, 2 Rich. L. (S. Car.) 6; State v. McCune, 24 Wis. 286; Ewing v. St. Louis, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 413.

Vermont.—The rule obtains as regards such proceedings in a county court in Vermont. Woodstock v. Gallup, 28 Vt. 587.

New York and Ohio.—In New York and Ohio it has been held that certiorari does not lie in cases like the above—People v. Mayor, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 9; People v. Stilwell, 19 N. Y. 531; Dixon v. Cincinnati, 14 Ohio, 240—but the weight of authority is for the rule announced.

Taxes and Assessments.—Certiorari lies to correct illegalities in the levying of taxes and local assessments by assessors, commissioners, etc., under the above qualifications, but it is granted with great care, and frequently refused on grounds of public convenience. Carroll v. Mayor, 12 Ala. 173; Ex parte Buckner, 4 Eng. (Ark.) 73; California, etc., R. v. Supervisors, 18 Cal. 671; Gilkey v. Watertown, 141 Mass. 317; Worcester County v. Worcester, 116 Mass. 193; Sisson v. New Bedford, 137 Mass. 255; Royce v. Jenney, 50 Iowa, 679; State v. Jersey City, 35 N. J. 381; Weaver v. Devendorf, 3 Denio (N. Y.), 198; Leroy v. New

In England<sup>1</sup> and a number of the States of the Union it issues in both civil and criminal cases.<sup>2</sup>

6. Effect of Issuing Writ.—The issuing of the writ of certiorari stays all proceedings by the inferior tribunal, except in cases where the execution of its order has already begun.<sup>3</sup>

7. The Judgment.—The judgment on the hearing is that the proceedings below be either quashed or affirmed in whole or in part.<sup>4</sup>

York, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 430; O. & M. R. v. Lawrence County, 27 Ill. 50; Shelby County v. M. & T. R., 16 Lea (Tenn.), 401; State v. County Clerk, 59 Wis. 15.

The writ does not lie to correct errors in valuation or equalization. Randle v. Williams, 18 Ark. 380; Jones v. Boston, 104 Mass. 461; People v. Ogdensburg, 48 N. Y. 390; Smith v. Supervisors, 30 Iowa, 531.

The writ has been denied where the defence of illegality could be made at the hearing for judgment. Pease v. Chicago, 21 Ill. 500.

It should not be allowed where the purpose is to enable a party to recover back taxes by a reversal of the proceedings. People v. Commissioners, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 494.

And it has been said that where the relief would affect all tax-payers alike, all should join in the application for the writ. Libby v. West St. Paul, 14 Minn. 248.

Municipal Courts.—The legality of convictions in municipal courts will be reviewed on certiorari. Camden v. Black, 65 Ala. 236; Marion v. Chandler, 6 Ala. 899; Taylor v. Americus, 39 Ga. 59; Corbett v. Duncan, 84 Miss. 84; Jackson v. People, 10 Mich. 111.

Justices.—So of many proceedings before justices. Rex v. Inhabitants, 1 Ld. Raym. 580; Marble v. Laney, 41 Ga. 626; Chicago, etc., R. v. Fell, 22 Ill. 333; Gleason v. Sloper, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 181; Morris, etc., Co. v. Mitchell, 31 N. J. L. 99; Commonwealth v. Betts, 76 Pa. St. 465; McNeil v. Hallmark, 28 Tex. 157; Whittington v. Southworth, 26 Mich. 381; Coombs v. Dunlap, 19 Wis. 591.

Contested Elections.—Certiorari lies to review the proceedings of inferior tribunals invested with the power of hearing and deciding election cases. Whitney v. Board of Delegates, 14 Cal. 480; State v. Marlow, 15 Ohio St. 114; Commonwealth v. Leech, 44 Pa. St. 332; Gibbons v. Sheppard, 65 Pa. St. 20; Chenoweth v. Commissioners, 26 W. Va. 230; State v. Cockrell, 2 Rich. L. (S. Car.) 6; 1 Dill, Mun. Corp. (3d Ed.) 232. Compare O'Docherty v. Archer, 9 Tex. 275.

Other Cases.—As further illustrations of the use of this writ, it has been held to lie to school trustees and superintendents in dividing school districts. Miller v. Trustees, 88 Ill. 26; Moreland v. Whitford, 54 Wis. 150. To town board in removing an assessor. Merrick v. Town Board, 41 Mich. 630. To a city council removing a city officer. Mayor v. Shaw, 16 Ga. 172. To a city council to review the granting of a ferry license. Ex parte Fay, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 243. To review proceeding of supervisors in ordering an election to relocate a county-seat. Herrick v. Carpenter, 6 N. W. Rep. 574. To a probate court allowing a claim without notice. Baskins v. Wylds, 39 Ark. 347. To review forcible entry and detainer proceedings. Thorn v. Reed, 1 Ark. 480; McDonald v. Cousins, 23 Ga. 227; Russell v. Wheeler, 1 Hempst. (Tenn.) 3. To review proceedings of quarter sessions in incorporating boroughs. Borough of Quakertown, 3 Grant Cas. (Pa.) 203. And to remove an indictment from the court of oyer and terminer before trial to the supreme court. People v. Baker, 3 Park. (N. Y.) 181. It has been said to lie to test the validity of the proceedings of a court-martial. People v. Townsend, 10 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 169. But compare Dunbar's Case, 14 Mass. 393. And the Supreme Court of the United States has no power to review the proceedings of a military commission ordered by a general officer of the army. Ex parte Vallandigham, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 243.

1. Rex v. Inhabitants, 1 B. & C. 142; 4 Black Com. 265.

2. John v. State, 1 Ala. 95; People v. Turner, 1 Cal. 152; State v. Stone, 3 H. & M'H. (Md.) 115; People v. Vermilyea, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 141; State v. Gibbons, 1 South. (N. J.) 40; State v. Miller, 94 N. Car. 902; Commonwealth v. Balph, 111 Pa. St. 365; Kenney v. State, 5 R. I. 385; State v. Taxing District, 16 Lea (Tenn.), 240; Macaboy v. Commonwealth, 2 Va. Cas. 268. Compare Winn v. State, 10 Ohio, 345.

3. John v. State, 1 Ala. 95; Hyslop v. Finck, 99 Ill. 171; State v. Hunt, 46 N. J. L. 59.

4. McAllilley v. Horton, 75 Ala. 491; Baxter v. Brooks, 29 Ark. 173; Barne

Unless authorized by statute, the revisory court has no power to enter a different order or judgment on the merits.<sup>1</sup>

8. Costs.—At common law neither party recovered costs;<sup>2</sup> but this matter is now regulated largely by statute.

9. As an Ancillary Process.—The writ of certiorari is frequently used as an ancillary process to obtain a full return to other process. It is the proper ancillary process to a writ of habeas corpus, when it is desired to bring the full record of the proceedings upon which the party was committed below before the court issuing the habeas corpus.<sup>3</sup> And where a cause has been brought before a superior court on appeal, writ of error or other mode, and there appears to be a manifest defect in the record, or diminution is suggested, a writ of certiorari lies to obtain a perfect transcript and all papers.<sup>4</sup>

CESTUI QUE TRUST. See TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES.

CHAIN.—A series of links or rings, connected or fitted into one another.<sup>5</sup>

CHAIR.—A movable seat with a back intended for one person.<sup>6</sup>

1. Jacksonville, 18 Fla. 523; Hamilton v. Harwood, 113 Ill. 154; Taylor v. Gay, 20 Ga. 77; Commissioners v. Blue Hill Turnpike Corp., 5 Mass. 420; Dudley v. Staples, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 195; Hopkinton v. Smith, 15 N. H. 152; Peacock v. Leonard, 8 Nev. 157; White v. Commonwealth, 3 Brewst. (Pa.) 30; Wooton v. Manning, 11 Tex. 327; Bandlow v. Thieme, 53 Wis. 57; Kelly v. Story, 2 Heisk. (Tenn.) 202. Compare State v. Milwaukee Co., 58 Wis. 4.

1. Commissioners v. West Boston Bridge, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 195; Lowell v. Commissioners, 6 Allen (Mass.), 131; Thompson v. School District, 25 Mich. 483.

2. Commissioners v. Ellis, 11 Mass. 465; State v. Leavitt, 3 N. H. 44; Baldwin v. Wheaton, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 262; Wheeler v. Roberts, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 536.

Certiorari will not lie to correct a wrong taxing of costs below. Young v. Blaisdel, 138 Mass. 344.

3. State v. Glenn, 54 Md. 572-609; Corrie v. Corrie, 42 Mich. 509; In re Martin, 5 Blatchf. (U. S. C. C.) 303; Church Hab. Corp. 330; Bac. Abr. tit. Hab. Corp. (B.) 4.

4. Las Animas County v. Bond, 3 Col. 222; Reed v. Curry, 40 Ill. 73; Figart v. Halderman, 59 Ind. 424; Franklin v. Academy, 16 B. Mon. (Ky.) 472; Thatcher v. Miller., 111 Mass. 414; Burr v. Waterman, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 38; Brackett v. State, 2 Tyler (Vt.), 152; Scott v. Hall, 2 Muni. (Va.) 229, U. S. v. Adams, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 661; Fowler v. Lindsay, 3 Dall. (U. S.) 413.

Diminution of the record will not be presumed, and must be alleged by affidavit. Mullary v. Caskaden, Minor (Ala.), 20; Van Glahn v. Raymond, 40 Ill. 73; Williams v. Quin, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 539.

The writ will not be granted till after the record is certified. James v. McCormick, Minor (Ala.), 20.

As to diminution of evidence, see Russell v. Hepburn, 5 Harr. (Del.) 386.

Authorities for Certiorari.—1 Tidd's Pr. (3d Am. Ed.) c. 16; 1 Crary Spec. Proc. (3d Ed.) c. 6 and 12; Powell App. Proc. 347 et seq.; 2 Dil. Munic. Corp.; 2 Add. Torts, secs. 1467-1480; Cooley Tax.; 12 Am. Dec. 529, note; Smith Sheriffs, etc., 413-431; Hilliard New Trials, 686.

5. Webster.

The description "horn chains" in a contract is sufficiently answered by supplying chains made partly of hoof and partly of horn. Sweet v. Schumway, 102 Mass. 365.

6. Webster.

Insurance on stock contained in a chair factory covers not only stock in the main building of the factory where the manufacturing was done, but also in an engine building which was appurtenant to the main building and connected to it by a platform, and by the belting to the machinery. Liebenstein v. Ins. Co., 45 Ill. 301.

CHAIRMAN—CHAMBERS—CHAMPAGNE—CHAMPERTY.

CHAIRMAN.—The presiding officer of a deliberative body, legislative or otherwise.<sup>1</sup>

CHALLENGE (in Practice). See DUELLING; JURIES AND JURY TRIALS.

CHAMBERS.—The office or private rooms of a judge, where parties are heard and orders are made and other business transacted in matters which do not require to be done in open court.<sup>2</sup>

Parts of the ocean included within lines drawn from one promontory to another, or perhaps between points a league distant from each of two promontories.<sup>3</sup>

CHAMPAGNE.—A kind of brisk, sparkling wine, from Champagne, France.<sup>4</sup>

CHAMPERTY AND MAINTENANCE. (See also ATTORNEY AND CLIENT.)

Definition and General Nature, 68.

Existence of the Old Law in the United States, 73.

Recognized Exceptions, 76.

Contingent Fees, 78.

After Litigation Ended, 79.

Advancing Costs, 79.

Pretended Titles and Things in Litigation, 80.

Effect of Maintenance, 85.

Champerty as a Defence, 86.

Quantum, Meruit, 86.

1. Definition and General Nature.—Maintenance is an officious intermeddling in a suit that noway belongs to one, by maintaining or assisting either party with money or otherwise to prosecute or defend it,<sup>5</sup> and signifies an unlawful taking in hand or uphold-

1. Rapalje & Lawrence L.D.

Where a statute incorporating a railway provided that the proceedings of all meetings should be entered in a book and "signed by the chairman of such respective meetings, it was held that the chairman who presided when the proceedings took place might sign the entry of the same at the next meeting; and where the same person was chairman of two meetings held on August 18 and 24, it was a good signature of the proceedings of August 18 to subscribe them "Confirmed 24 Aug., 1836, W. G." W. L. Ry. Co. v. Bernard, 3 Q. B. 873.

2. Jurisdiction at chambers is incidental to and grows out of the jurisdiction of the court itself. It is the power to hear and determine, out of court, such questions arising between the parties to a controversy, as might well be determined by the court itself, but which the legislature has seen fit to intrust to the judgment of a single judge out of court without requiring them to be brought before the court in actual session. It follows that the jurisdiction of a court at chambers cannot go beyond the jurisdiction of the court to which he belongs, or extend to matters with which his court has nothing to do. And the constitution, in granting such jurisdiction at chambers to the judges of the several courts of the State, as may be directed by law, is to be understood as limiting the jurisdiction of each to such subject-matters as are within the jurisdiction of his proper court, and to which, ex vi termini, he is limited." P. F. W. & C. Ry. Co. v. Hurd, 17 O. St. 144.

"The averment of an indictment that the motion for a new trial was heard by the justice of the superior court "at his chambers," is satisfied by proof that the hearing took place in an apartment appropriated to the use of that court for the transaction of business not requiring the presence of a jury. Commonwealth v. McLaughlin, 122 Mass. 449.

3. 1 Pet. Adm. Dec. 29 n.; 1 Kent. Com. 30; Jacobsen's Laws of the Sea, 416.

4. Webster.

Champagne is within the term "liquors" in an act forbidding the sale of such on credit to a greater amount than ten dollars. Kizer v. Randleman, 5 Jones L. (N. C.) 428.

5. 4 Bl. Com. 135; Burrill's Law Dic., tit. Maintenance; Andrews v. Thayer, 30 Wis. 228.

ing of quarrels or sides, to the disturbance or hindrance of common right.<sup>1</sup> Champerty is a species of maintenance, being a bargain with a plaintiff or defendant, campum partice, to divide the land or other matter sued for between them, if they prevail at law; whereupon the champertor is to carry on the suit at his own expense.<sup>2</sup> Hawkins, followed by Coke<sup>3</sup> and Sir William Grant,<sup>4</sup> defines it as "the unlawful maintenance of a suit in consideration of a part of the debt or other thing in dispute."<sup>5</sup> Under this

In 2 Bouvier's Law. Dic. (14th Ed.) 90 it is defined to be "a malicious or at least officious interference in a suit in which the offender has no interest, to assist one of the parties to it against the other with money or advice to prosecute or defend the action, without any authority of law." See also 1 Russ. Cr. Law, 176.

1. 1 Hawk. P. C. (Curw. Ed.) 454; Brown v. Beauchamp, 5 T. B. Monroe (Ky.), 413; s. c., 17 Am. Dec. 81.

"This is an offence against public justice, as it keeps alive strife and contention, and perverts the remedial process of the law into an engine of oppression, and therefore by the Roman law it was a species of the crimen falsi to enter into any confederacy, or do any act, to support another's lawsuit by money, witnesses, or patronage." 4 Bl. Com. 135; 2 Inst. 208.

The penalties of maintenance are applicable to maintenance of any kind of suits, whether at common law or otherwise. Wallis v. Duke of Portland, 3 Ves. (Eng.) 494.

The following is the account given of the rise and growth of the law of maintenance in the leading case of Thalhimer v. Brinkerhoff, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 623; s. c., 15 Am. Dec. 308: "The English law of maintenance arose from causes peculiar to the state of society in which it was established. The great reason for the suppression of champerty and maintenance was an apprehension that justice itself was endangered by these practices. Blackstone, 4 Com. 135, speaks of this offence as perverting the process of the law into an engine of oppression. In the case of Slyright v. Page, 1 Leon. 167, it was said by the whole court of common pleas, that the meaning of the 32 Hen. VIII. concerning maintenance was to repress the practices of many, who when they thought they had title or right to any land, for the furtherance of their pretended right conveyed their interest in some part thereof to great persons, and with their countenance did oppress the possessors. . . . The power of great men to whom rights of action were transferred, in order to obtain suit and favor in suits brought to assert those rights, the confederacies which were thus formed, and the oppression which followed from the influence of great men in such cases are themes of complaint in the early books of English law. While the power of nobles and great men was felt in the administration of justice, these practices seem to have produced real and great evils. In that state of things, instead of invigorating the administration of justice as the direct remedy for such evils, the laws concerning champerty and maintenance were established as penal regulations intended to operate upon the parties to these transactions. . . . 'Nothing,' says Coke (Co. Litt. 114 a), 'nothing in action, entry or re-entry can be granted over, for so, under color thereof, pretended titles might be granted to great men, whereby right might be trodden down and the weak oppressed.' Feeble, partial, and corrupt must have been the administration of justice when such a reason could have force."

Especially is this seen to be true in cases triable by jury, for the juries were (a change of venue not being allowed in those days) generally the tenants of the lord in whose vicinity the suit was brought. 3 Stubbs Const. Hist. 532, 539, 541; 3 Stephen Hist. Eng. Cr. Law, 236, 237, 238.

2. 4 Bl. Com. 435.

3. Co. Litt. 368 b.

4. "Champerty is the unlawful maintenance of a suit in consideration of a bargain for a part of the thing or some profit out of it." Stevens v. Bagwell, 15 Ves. 139.

5. Hawk. P. C. ch. 84, § 1. Chitty and Bouvier follow Blackstone. 2 Chit. Cr. L. 234 (n) a; 1 Bouv. Dic. 235. But see 1 Add. Cont. § 257; Rapalje Lawrence's Dic., "Champerty;" Abbott Law Dic., "Champerty;" Box v. Barnby, Hob. 117; Co. Litt. 368 b.

"The offence of champerty is defined in the old books to be the unlawful maintenance of a suit in consideration of some bargain to have a part of the thing in dispute or some profit out of it." Tindal, C. J., in Stanley v. Jones, 7 Bing. 369.

definition it is not necessary that the champertor carry on the suit at his own expense. Maintenance was an indictable offence at common law and by statute, and is even said to have been malum in se.<sup>1</sup> While the offence may be committed although there is no suit actually commenced,<sup>2</sup> it is essential that there be actual assistance, and not merely an offer to assist.<sup>3</sup> Champerty and maintenance form no exception to the general principle of criminal law, that there can be no offence if the party acts under a misapprehension of the material facts.<sup>4</sup> The offence is not confined to Compare Holloway v. Lowe, 7 Port. (Ala.) 488; Thurston v. Percival, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 416; Key v. Vattier, 1 Ohio, 132; Brown v. Beauchamp, 5 T. B. Monr. (Ky.), 416; Rust v. Larue, 4 Litt. (Ky.) 417.

"The gist of the offence, therefore, consists in the mode of compensation irrespective of the particular manner in which the suit is to be maintained, because all maintenance of a suit by a stranger was at common law unlawful." Sedgwick v. Stanton, 4 Kern. (N. Y.) 289.

"The distinction between maintenance and champerty seems to be this: When there is no agreement to divide the thing in suit, the party intermeddling is guilty of maintenance only; but where he stipulates to receive part of the thing in suit he is guilty of champerty." 4 Cooley's Bl. Com. 134 n; Bell v. Smith, 7 D. & R. 846; s. c., 5 B. & C. 188.

The distinction between maintenance and champerty is not always borne in mind, and the words are carelessly used interchangeably. Scobey v. Ross, 13 Ind. 117.

1. "It appeareth that the end of champerty and maintenance is to suppress justice and truth, or at least to work delay, and therefore it is malum in se, and against the common law." 2 Inst. 208 See also 2 Inst 212; 1 Hawk. P. C. 283 sec. 36. p 543; and for good general discussion, Brown v. Beauchamp, 5 T. B. Monr. (Ky.) 413; s. c., 17 Am. Dec. 84.

"He that mayntaineth other men's suits shall in some cases be three yeres imprisoned, and further punished at the king's pleasure"; the offence being deemed as grave as perjury or forgery. Palton de Pace, Ed. of 1615, 426. See also 1 Bish. Crim. Law, § 942. See also Thurston v. Percival, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 415; Rust v. Larue, 4 Litt. (Ky.) 411, 425; Brown v. Beauchamp, 5 T. B. Mon (Ky.) 413, 416; s. c., 17 Am. Dec. 81; Duglass v. Wood, 1 Swan (Tenn.), 393; Pechell v. Watson, 8 M. & W. (Eng.) 691; Fletcher v. Ellis, 1 Hempst. (Ark.) 300.

The better opinion is that so far as the substance of these offences is concerned the statutes of West. 1, c. 25. 3 Edw. I., 28 Edw. I. c. 11, 33 Edw. I., 32 Hen. VIII. c. 9, were merely declaratory of the common law, and that the fundamental doctrines of the law upon this subject existed before the statutes. Lord Rosslyn in Willer v. Duke of Portland, 3 Ves. 494; Tindal. C. J., in Stanley v. Jones, 7 Bing. 369; Pecke v. Watson, 8 Mes. & W. 691; s. c., 4 Bl. Com. 135; Story Eq. Jur. § 1048; Parker, C. J., in Swett v. Poor, 11 Mass. 354; Thurston v. Percival, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 415; Backus v. Byron, 4 Mich. 535.

2. Rust v. Larue, 4 Litt. (Ky.) 411; Martin v. Amos, 13 Ire. (N. Car.) 201.

3. Fletcher v. Ellis, 1 Hempst. (Ark.) 300.

4. Etheridge v. Cromwell, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 629. See Swett v. Poor, 11 Mass. 549, 553; Everenden v. Beaumont, 7 Mass. 76, 78; Brinley v. Whiting, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 348, 350.

No one has been punished criminally for the offence of maintenance or champerty within the memory of living man. Backus v. Byron, 4 Mich. 535; 3 Stephen Hist. of Crim. Law, 234.

While, however, in the absence of criminal intent no one can be subjected to criminal liability, it is also true that a contract innocently entered into and honestly carried out by the parties may prove to be champertous, when judicially construed, and incapable of enforcement. Thompson v. Reynolds, 73 Ill. 11.

"Maintenance properly so called can only be in a court of justice or in reference to matter pending or to be brought there. Still there is a kind of indictable conspiracy, sometimes treated of under the head of maintenance, having no necessary reference to a court of justice. Persons guilty of it are described in stat. 33 Edw. I. c. 2 to be such as retain men in the country with liveries or fees for to maintain their malicious enterprises and to drown the truth." 2 Bish. Cr. Law (7th Ed.), § 124.

attorneys, and may be committed by laymen under the same circumstances as an attorney may commit.<sup>1</sup>

The extent to which the old common law applied the principles of the law of maintenance is well illustrated by a few instances taken from Hawkins: "Speaking in the cause as one of the counsel of the party," "giving any public countenance to another in relation to the suit," "soliciting the judge to give judgment according to the verdict," "perhaps barely going along with him to inquire for a person learned in the law," were indictable offences: He admits that a juror may exhort his companions to render the verdict which he deems right himself, and even that a non-professional man may impart to his neighbor gratuitously "friendly advice what action is proper for him to bring for the recovery of a certain debt." "Yet it is said that a man of great power not learned in the law may be guilty of maintenance by telling another who asks his advice that he has a good title."<sup>2</sup> Precisely how far these principles are now in force it is difficult to determine. Perhaps indeed we can certainly set down as saved from the old law only what Hawkins terms "assisting another with money to carry on his cause; as by retaining one to be counsel for him or otherwise bearing him out in the whole or part of the expense of the suit." This done under some circumstances is indictable now, and the assistance rendered need not evidently be money: it may be any other thing valuable for accomplishing the object.<sup>3</sup> The offence of maintenance seems further, now, to be confined to the intermeddling of a stranger in a suit for the purpose of stirring up strife and continuing litigation.<sup>4</sup> It may be further laid down as a general principle, that the interference to be maintenous must have some tendency to pervert the course of justice.<sup>5</sup> Thus it is champertous for one man to agree to

1. Stanley v. Jones, 7 Bing. 369; Weakly v. Hall, 13 Ohio. 167; Gilert v. Holmes, 64 Ill. 548; Barker v. Barker, 14 Wis. 142; Miller v. Larson, 19 Wis. 486; Ogden v. Desartes, 4 Duer (N. Y.) 275; Hovey v. Hobson, 51 Me. 62; Martin v. Ames, 13 Ire. (N. Car.) 198; Stotsenburg v. Marks, 79 Ind. 193.

2. 1 Hawk. P. C. (Curw. Ed.), 455, 456. §§ 5-11.

3. Stanley v. Jones, 7 Bing. 369; 2 Bish. Cr. Law (7th Ed.). § 126.

4. Lord Abinger in Findon v. Parker, 11 Mees. & W. 682; Dorwin v. Smith, 35 Vt. 69.

"It is curious and not altogether useless to see how the doctrine of maintenance has from time to time been received at Westminster Hall. At one time not only he who laid out money to assist another in his cause, but he that by his friendship or interest saved him an expense which he would otherwise be put to, was held guilty of maintenance.

Bro. Abr., tit. Maintenance, 7, 14, 17, etc. Nay, if he officiously gave evidence it was maintenance; so that he must have had a subpoena or suppress the truth. That such a doctrine, repugnant to every feeling of the human heart, should be soon laid aside must be expected." Buller, J., in Master v. Miller, 4 T. R. 340. For an extensive review of the ancient law and its various changes see this case.

5. This was the foundation of the decision in Stanley v. Jones, 7 Bing. 369. "For a man to be guilty of maintenance there must be another to be maintained; whence it follows that the combination of force to oppress lies at the foundation of the law of maintenance, the same as of the law of conspiracy. Therefore, in reason, if neither unlawful means nor unlawful ends are contemplated, the combination is not criminal, though it be to use the courts of the country for establishing or defending against a private use and exert his utmost influence and means to procure such evidence as should or might be requisite to substantiate the claim of another in consideration of one eighth part of the sum recovered by means of the production of such evidence.<sup>1</sup>

A contract between an attorney at law and a client that the attorney shall prosecute a claim at his own cost for a part of the subject in litigation is champertous.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, a guarantee of a claim by an attorney and a promise to pay any judgment which may be rendered against his client cannot be enforced.<sup>3</sup> A contract that the attorney shall retain a certain per cent of the money collected or be paid $200, as he shall elect, is entire, and being tainted with champerty, is wholly void, and the attorney can recover nothing.<sup>4</sup> The transfer of the subject-matter of the suit to the attorney by assignment as security for his costs is not deemed champertous, though an absolute sale might be.<sup>5</sup> Nor is there any champerty in an agreement to allow the attorney the first fifty dollars that is collected;<sup>6</sup> nor in an agreement between contesting clients and their attorneys in the settlement of a dispute that a portion of the property in litigation should be divided between the opposing attorneys;<sup>7</sup> nor in a contract which provides that A is to buy land and convey one half interest therein to B, B then to bring suit for the land and pay half the costs of the litigation.<sup>8</sup> claim." 2 Bish. Cr. Law (7th Ed.), § 129.

1. Stanley v. Jones, 7 Bing. 369; Sprye v. Porter, 7 Ell. & B. 58; Powell v. Knowles, 2 Atk. 224.

On the other hand, a contract merely to communicate to another certain documents and information then in the parties' possession, no suit being depending, and there being no stipulation for the commencement of any suit for the recovery of the property, is not champertous. Sprye v. Porter, 7 Ell. & B. 58. See also, for instances in which the contract was held champertous, Wallis v. Duke of Portland, 3 Ves. 494; Stevens v. Bagwell, 15 Ves. 139; Reynell v. Sprye, 1 De G., M. & G. 677. See also, for a good general discussion of the old law, Prosser v. Edmonds, 1 Y. & C. Exch. 481.

2. Martin v. Clarke, 8 R. I. 389; 5 Am. Rep. 586. See also Lafferty v. Jelley, 22 Ind. 471.

3. Adye v. Hanna, 47 Iowa, 264; Boardman v. Thompson, 25 Iowa, 488; Mitchell v. Bell, Cam. & N. (N. Car.) 17; 2 Am. Dec. 627.

4. Elliott v. McClelland, 17 Ala. 206. See also Brown v. Beauchamp, 5 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 413; s. c., 17 Am. Dec. 81.

5. Anderson v. Radcliffe, Ell. B. & E. (Eng.) 806.

A purchase pendente lite of the subject of the action by the attorney is champertous. Simpson v. Lamb, 7 E. & B. (Eng.) 84. For modern doctrine see "Attorney and Client," § 9, 1 Am. & Eng. Enc. of Law. 958.

6. Harmon v. Scott, 109 Mass. 237; s. c., 12 Am. Rep. 686.

"There is no understanding disclosed or implied on the part of the plaintiff to carry on any suit at his own expense, or to look alone to that which might be recovered for his compensation. It does not appear that the pay was dependent on his success, which is the important element, deemed prejudicial to the public repose, and therefore illegal. Here the written agreement appears to be nothing more than a mode adopted for giving the plaintiff a lien on a portion of the debt claimed to be due as security for his services and disbursements."

7. Price v. Carney, 75 Ala. 546.

8. Moore v. Ringo, 82 Mo. 468. "By the contract B.'s interest in the land was to be created before the suit was to be brought. Having a half interest in the land, it would have been right and proper that the plaintiff should contribute half of the costs of suit." P. 474.

A contract is valid whereby the vendor and purchaser of land agree that the costs and expenses incurred by the latter in a joint defence against an ejectment suit for the land and in a proceeding to

Parol evidence is always admissible to show that the contract is champertous.<sup>1</sup>

2. Existence of the Old Law in United States.—In the United States the doctrines of maintenance and champerty have not generally found favor, and, where they exist at all, have been in many States materially modified by legislation.<sup>2</sup> In Texas, California, New Jersey, and Michigan they do not exist.<sup>3</sup> In Arkansas, Vermont, Connecticut, and Pennsylvania their existence is still undetermined.<sup>4</sup> In Maine, Kansas, Alabama, Ohio, Oregon, West Vir- enjoin such suit should be equally divided, and that the latter's share should be indorsed upon a purchase-money mortgage given by him to the vendor. Jones v. Shaw, 56 Mich. 332.

The transfer of an overdue note for the consideration of the principal, and with the understanding that the transferee shall have the accrued interest if he can collect it, and that if the note cannot be collected it shall be retransferred, is not champerty, and cannot be pleaded in defence to suit on the note unless in some way the agreement is injurious to the maker of the note. Taylor v. Gilman, 58 N. H. 417.

In Maine it is held that if the defendant in a suit at the request of a third person permits him to assume the defence upon a promise of such third person to indemnify him and pay all costs recovered against him, such promise cannot be avoided upon the ground of maintenance. Knight v. Sawin, 6 Me. 361; Goodspeed v. Fuller, 46 Me. 141; Industry v. Starks, 65 Me. 167.

1. Martin v. Clarke, 8 R. I. 389; Allen v. Hawks, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 79.

2. Graham v. Graham, 10 W. Va. 355; Grier, J., in Roberts v. Cooper, 20 How. (U. S.) 467. See also Boone v. Chiles, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 177; Barrell v. Mohawk, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 153; Armstrong v. Toler, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 258.

3. Bentinck v. Franklin, 38 Tex. 58. See also Campbell v. Everts, 45 Tex. 106.

In the earlier cases the law of maintenance had been recognized by implication. White v. Gay, 1 Tex. 386; McMullen v. Guest, 6 Tex. 275; Carder v. McDermott, 12 Tex. 546; Mathewson v. Fitch, 22 Cal. 86; Hoffman v. Vallejo, 45 Cal. 564; Ballard v. Carr, 48 Cal. 74; Howard v. Throckmorton, 48 Cal. 482; Sharpstein v. Friedlander, 4 Pac. C. L. J. (S. C. Cal.) 473.

In New Jersey the English statutes against maintenance, 1 Ed. III. c. 14; 20 El. c. 4. etc.; 3 Ed. I. c. 25; 28 Ed. I. c. 11, were omitted as inapplicable in the revision of the English statutes in force in that State made under the act of Nov. 24, 1792, P. L. 794. Schomp v. Schenck, 40 N. J. L. 195.

In Whitney v. Kirtland, 27 N. J. Eq. 333, however, the existence of the law of maintenance appears to have been taken for granted. How. Stat. Mich. § 9004; Wildey v. Crane, 30 N. W. Rep. 327.

In these States, therefore, there is nothing illegal or improper in an attorney agreeing to prosecute a suit for a part of the subject-matter of the litigation, and such a contract will be enforced. Sharpstein v. Friedlander, 4 Pac. C. L. J. (S. C. Cal.) 473.

4. In Arkansas the case of Fletcher v. Ellis, 1 Hempst. 300, appeared to recognize the existence of the law of maintenance by necessary implication; but a different opinion seems to have prevailed in Lytle v. State, 17 Ark. 608, in which it was held that an attorney-at law may purchase of his client an interest in the suit in consideration of services rendered and to be rendered in the prosecution of the suit, and become bound for the costs in the prosecution of his own and client's rights without the violation of any law of champerty in the State. In neither case, however, was the determination of the question absolutely necessary to the decision. See also Merrick & Fenno v. Hult, 15 Ark. Rep. 344.

In Danforth v. Streeter, 28 Vt. 490, C. J. Redfield suggests a doubt whether the offences of maintenance and champerty exist in that State. See also Dorwin v. Smith, 35 Vt. 69.

Their existence in Connecticut has never been directly adjudicated upon. It was incidentally referred to in Stoddard v. Mix, 14 Conn. 23, and in Bridgeport Bank v. N. Y., etc., R. Co., 30 Conn. 231. In Richardson v. Rowtan, 40 Conn. 565, the court inclined to think the law of maintenance did not exist in that State.

In County of Chester v. Barber, 1 Ont. (Pa.) 463, Paxson, J., seems to have ginia, and the District of Columbia their existence has been distinctly recognized;<sup>1</sup> while in Maryland, Virginia, South Carolina, and New Hampshire it has been recognized by necessary implication.<sup>2</sup> In New York the old law upon the subject has been abolished, saving in so far as it has been re-enacted by statute;<sup>3</sup> considered the existence of the doctrine in Pennsylvania doubtful. But see Com. v. Dupuy, Brightly (Pa.), 44; Patten v. Wilson, 34 Pa. St. 299.

1. Gowers v. Norvell, 1 Me. 292; Palmer v. Dougherty, 33 Me. 502; R. S. c. 122, § 12. In Frost v. Paine, 12 Me. 111, the existence of the doctrine was recognized by implication. As to the statutory abrogation of 32 Hen. VIII. c. 9, see Pratt v. Peirce, 36 Me. 448; Hovey v. Hobson, 51 Me. 62; Atchison, Topeka, etc., R. Co. v. Johnson, 29 Kan. 218; Holloway v. Lowe, 7 Porter (Ala.), 488; Byrd v. Odem, 9 Ala. 755; Elliott v. McClelland, 17 Ala. 206; Thompson v. Marshall, 36 Ala. 504; Jenkins v. Bradford, 59 Ala. 400; Ware v. Russell, 70 Ala. 174; 45 Am. Rep. 82; Ins. Co. v. Tunstall, 72 Ala. 142; Key v. Vattier, 1 Ohio, 132; Meakly v. Hall, 13 Ohio, 167; Graham v. Graham, 10 W. Va. 355; Anderson v. Caraway, 27 W. Va. 396; Dahms v. Sears, 11 Pac. Rep. (S. C. Or.) 891; Stanton v. Haskin, 1 McArthur (U. S. C. C.), 558.

In none of these cases was the question whether it is an essential element of champerty that the champertor maintain the suit at his own expense directly adjudicated.

2. Schaferman v. O'Brien, 28 Md. 565; Major's Ex'rs v. Gibson, 1 P. & H. (Va.) 48.

Neither the Virginia Code compiled in 1863 nor the Maryland Revised Code of 1878 has any provision upon the subject.

In South Carolina, while the existence of the old law in a modified form is recognized, it is said that champerty does not apply to a bona fide purchaser of any right whether in possession or in action. Verdier v. Simmons, 2 McCord (S. C.), 385; Fraser v. Charleston, 13 S. Car. 533; State v. Chitty, Bailey (S. Car.), 401; Knox v. Martin, 8 N. H. 157; Christie v. Sawyer, 44 N. H. 298; Taylor v. Gelman, 58 N. H. 417.

3. Sedgwick v. Stanton, 14 N. Y. 289.

The statute 3 R. S. (6th Ed.) 449, §§ 59, 60; Code §§ 73, 74, forbids, first, the purchase of obligations (named therein) by an attorney for the purpose and with the intent of bringing suit thereon; any loan or advance or agreement to loan or advance "as an inducement to the placing, or in consideration of having placed, in the hands of such an attorney" any demand for collection. The code revision changed somewhat the language of the prohibition, but nevertheless must be deemed a substantial re-enactment of the earlier sections. Browning v. Marvin, 100 N. Y. 148.

A devisee whose title under the will is threatened by proceedings before the surrogate may give an attorney a deed for one undivided half part of the property, taking back his covenant to conduct the defence to its close, paying all costs and expenses of the litigation, and indemnifying the devisee against all such liability without violation of the statute.

"The agreement appears to have been purely one of compensation. . . . The contract in no respect induced the litigation. That was already begun, and existed independently of the agreement, and originated in other causes. It did not tend to prolong the litigation. It made it to the interest of the attorney to close it as briefly and as promptly as possible, and at as little cost and expense as prudence would permit. . . . The plaintiff, therefore, stirred up no strife, induced no litigation. . . . The statute presupposes the existence of some right of action, valueless unless prosecuted to judgment, which the owner might or might not prosecute on his own behalf, but which he is induced to place in the hands of a particular attorney by reason of his agreement to loan or advance money to the client. It contemplates a case in which the action might never have been brought but for the inducement of a loan or advance transferred by the attorney, and in which the latter by officious interference procures a suit to be brought and obtains a retainer in it. . . . The attorney loaned nothing and he advanced nothing to the client which the latter was bound to reimburse. Simply he was paid in advance an agreed price, taken in land instead of money, and out of which he was first to pay costs and expenses. The facts before us are not within the terms of the statute, as it respects a 'demand,' which is the subject of 'collection;' but our conclusion rests more strongly upon the conviction that the agreement made was one for compensation merely, and had in it no vicious element of inducing litigation or holding out bribes for a retainer." Fowler v. Callan, 5 East. Rep. 549. See also Mott v. Small, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 212; Small v. Mott, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 403; 102 N. Y. 395; Hall v. Gird, 7 Hill (N. Y.), 586; Voorhees v. Dorr, 51 Barb. (N. Y.) 580.

and in Louisiana the whole matter is regulated by the code.<sup>1</sup> In Delaware, Georgia, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Mississippi, Tennessee, West Virginia, and Rhode Island to render the contract champertous a stipulation for the payment of costs by the alleged champertor is essential.<sup>2</sup> In Indiana, Kentucky,

As to services of unprofessional character, not strictly prohibited by statute, see Harris v. Roof, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 489; Sedgwick v. Stanton, 14 N. Y. 289.

The statute does not apply to the advances made to assist a needy client in supporting his family, long after the suit has been commenced, and after one trial has been had. Bristol v. Dann, 12 Wend. (N. Y.), 142; s. c., 27 Am. Dec. 122, decided under 2 Rev. Stat. 288, §§ 71, 72.

The provisions of 2 Rev. Stat. 288, §§ 71, 73, making it an offence for an attorney to purchase a chose in action for the purpose of bringing suit thereon, only apply where the purchase is made with an intent to bring suit upon the demand. Where there is no suit, the mere purchase of a chose in action is not per se within the statute. The illegal intent must be proved. Hall v. Bartlett, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 297.

The statute is not violated by a purchase in good faith for the purpose of protecting some other right. Van Rensselaer v. Sheriff, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 443; Searing v. Brinkerhoff, 5 Johns. Ch. 329; Williams v. Mathews, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 252; Baldwin v. Laeson, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 306.

The prohibition applies to suits in equity as well as law. Mann v. Fairchild, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 548. Compare Mann v. Fairchild, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 108.

The prohibition only applies to courts of record. Goodell v. People, 5 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 206.

The statute does not embrace a case where some other purpose induced the purchase, and the intent to sue was merely incidental and contingent. Where therefore, in an action by an attorney as an assignee upon a bond, the evidence tended to show that the purpose of the plaintiff in purchasing a bond was to use it to compel the defendant, as a condition of the extension of the time of payment, to assign to him certain stock of a corporation, and, if he would not comply, to sue, it was held not within the statute. Moses v. McDivitt, 88 N. Y. 62.

If before the purchase a suit was instituted and was then pending, the purchase is not within the act. Wetmore v. Hegeman, 88 N. Y. 69.

As to buying and selling dormant titles, see post, § 7.

1. Article 2624 of the Code of Louisiana provides that "Public officers connected with courts of justice, such as judges, advocates, attorneys, clerks, and sheriffs, cannot purchase litigious rights which fall under the jurisdiction of the tribunal in which they exercise their functions, under penalty of nullity and of having to defray all costs, damages, and interest." See also McMicken v. Perin, 18 How. (U. S.) 507.

The transfer of litigious rights to other persons is regulated by chapter 12, Revised Civil Code, art. 2652, which provides that he against whom a litigious right has been transferred may get himself released by paying to the transferee the real price of the transfer, together with interest from its date. Clay v. Ballard, 9 Rob. (La.) 308; Flower v. O'Connor, 7 La. 207; Morgan v. Brown, 12 La. Ann. 159; Walker v. Bietry, 24 La. Ann. 349.

2. Bayard v. McLane, 3 Harr. (Del.) 139; Moses v. Bagley, 55 Ga. 283; Meeks v. Dewberry, 57 Ga. 263; Taylor v. Hinton, 66 Ga. 743; Thompson v. Reynolds, 73 Ill. 11; Coleman v. Billings, 89 Ill. 183; West Park Comm'rs v. Coleman, 108 Ill. 591. The decisions in this State are vacillating. In the last case it was said to be essential that the costs of the suit or some of them be paid, or agreed to be paid, by the champertor. In Newkirk v. Cone, 18 Ill. 453, the old law was said to have been abolished, but this was substantially overruled in Thompson v. Reynolds, 73 Ill. 11. See also Fetrow v. Merriwether, 53 Ill. 275; Zeigler v. Hughes, 55 Ill. 288; C. & N. W. R. Co. v. Boller, 7 Brad. (Ill.) 625. Compare McGoon v. Ankeny, 11 Ill. 558; Norton v. Tuttle, 60 Ill. 130; Gilbert v. Holmes, 64 Ill. 548; Torrence v. Shedd, 112 Ill. 466; Jewell v. Neidy, 61 Iowa, 299; 16 N. W. Rep. 141; Vimont v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 64 Iowa, 513; Adye v. Hanna, 47 Iowa, 264. In Wright v. Meek, 3 G. Gr. 472, it

Massachusetts, and North Carolina Hawkins' definition is followed, and such stipulation is unnecessary.<sup>1</sup>

3. Recognized Exceptions.—It has been seen that the gist of the offence of maintenance is that the interference is officious;<sup>2</sup> where, therefore, a party either has, or honestly believes that he has, an interest, either in the subject-matter of the litigation or in the question to be determined, he may assist in the prosecution or defence of the suit, either by furnishing counsel or contributing to the expenses,<sup>3</sup> and may, in order to strengthen his position, purchase the interest of another party in addition to his own.<sup>4</sup> The interest may be either small or great, certain or uncertain, was held that the law of maintenance did not exist in that State, but this position was overruled in Boardman v. Thompson, 25 Iowa, 488; and McDonald v. Chicago R. Co., 29 Iowa, 170; Duke v. Harper, 66 Mo. 51; Jeffries v. Mut. L. Ins. Co., 29 Alb. L. J. (U. S. S. C.) 192; s. c., 4 Sup. Ct. Rep. 8; Million v. Ohnsorg, 10 Mo. App. 432; Allard v. Lamirande, 29 Wis. 502; Kusterer v. City of Beaver Dam, 56 Wis. 471. See also Stearns v. Felker, 28 Wis. 594; and McLimans v. City of Lancaster, 23 N. W. Rep. N. S. (S. C. Wis.) 689; Canty v. Lattner, 31 Minn. 239.

In Mississippi, to bring an agreement within the rule against champerty it must appear that the champertor agreed to carry on the suit at his own expense, and that the agreement was made before suit commenced, and was its moving cause. Moody v. Harper, 38 Miss. 601.

In Tennessee, see Hayney v. Coyne, 10 Heisk. (Tenn.) 339; Vincent v. Ashley, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 594; and Anderson v. Caraway, 27 W. Va. 396; Martin v. Clarke, 8 R. I. 389; 5 Am. Rep. 586; Orr v. Tanner, 12 R. I. 94.

1. Scobey v. Ross, 13 Ind. 117; Quigley v. Thompson, 53 Ind. 317; Rust v. Larue, 4 Litt. (Ky.) 419; 14 Am. Dec. 172; Brown v. Beauchamp, 5 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 413; s. c., 17 Am. Dec. 81; Rust v. La Rue, 4 Litt. (Ky.) 411; Davis v. Sharron, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 64; Thurston v. Percival, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 418; Lathrop v. Amherst Bank, 9 Met. 489; Martin v. Amos, 13 Ire. (N. C.) 201; Barnes v. Strong, 1 Jones Eq. (N. C.) 100; Slade v. Rhodes, 2 Dev. & B. (N. Car.) 24.

The English authorities do not require an agreement to pay costs to render the contract void. Stanley v. Jones, 7 Bing. (N. C.) 367; Reynell v. Sprye, 21 L. J. Ch. 533; Sprye v. Porter, 7 El. & Bl. 80; 26 L. J. Q. B. 64; Hilton v. Woods, L. R. Eq. 432; 37 L. J. Ch. 194; Prince v.

Beattie, 32 L. J. Ch. 734; Earle v. Hopwood, 9 C. B. N. S. 566; 30 L. J. C. B. 217.

2. Thompson v. Marshall, 36 Ala. 504; s. c., 76 Am. Dec. 328.

3. "Wherever any persons claim a common interest in the same thing, as in a way, churchyard, or common, etc., by the same title, they may maintain one another in a suit relating to the same." 1 Hawk. P. C. (Curw. Ed.) 458. § 24; Hunter v. Daniel, 4 Hare (Eng.), 420; Frost v. Paine, 12 Me. 111; Call v. Calef, 13 Met. (Mass.) 362; Thalhimer v. Brinkerhoff, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 623; s. c., 15 Am. Dec. 308; Tilman v. Searcy, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 347.

The interest may be merely in the determination of the question. Thus where several persons, being taxed for the support of public worship by a parish not of their denomination, bound themselves each to pay his proportion of the expense of defending any suit against any one of their number for such taxes, and the cost of any other legal mode of resisting payment thereof, it was held not to be maintenance. Gowers v. Nowell, 1 Me. 292; Findon v. Parker, 11 Mees. & W. (Eng.) 675.

On the same principle one may lawfully contribute to the expenses of a criminal prosecution, for every member of the community is in some sense a party to such a suit. Com. v. Dupuy, Brightly (Pa.), 44.

It is sufficient if the party honestly believes that he has an interest in the determination of the question, although it may turn out that he was mistaken. Findon v. Parker, 11 Mees. & W. 675; McCall v. Copehart, 20 Ala. 521; Vaughan v. Marable, 64 Ala. 60; Story on Cont. § 579; Wickham v. Conklin, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 220.

4. Thompson v. Marshall, 36 Ala. 504; s. c., 76 Am. Dec. 328; Blackerly v. Holton, 5 Dana (Ky.), 520.

vested or contingent; but it is essential that it be distinct from what he may acquire from the party maintained.<sup>1</sup>

Thus a vendor with warranty may uphold his vendee in a suit about the title;<sup>2</sup> an heir-apparent may do the same for an ancestor of lands in fee;<sup>3</sup> a husband may join in measures to recover lands in which his wife has a potential interest;<sup>4</sup> a cotenant agree to clear the title by suit at his own expense;<sup>5</sup> and a guarantor assist in prosecuting a suit against the principal debtor.<sup>6</sup>

In an action for maintenance it is a good defence that the party maintaining the suit and the party maintained are united by ties of kindred or affinity, or stand in the relation of landlord and tenant, or master and servant, or that the defendant assisted the party out of charity, believing him to be oppressed.<sup>7</sup> Mere relationship by blood or marriage will justify parties in assisting each other in their suits, so far as mutual affection and regard for each other's rights and interests may induce them to do so; but the exception can only be carried so far as is consistent with the idea that the party is influenced by that desire to benefit his relation which the law supposes, and not by motives of self-interest.<sup>8</sup> It

1. Master v. Miller, 4 T. R. (Eng.) 340; Lathrop v. Amherst Bank, 9 Met. (Mass.) 489; Hawk. P. C. (Curw. Ed.) p. 456, §§ 14-17, 20-23. See also Wickham v. Conklin, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 220; Perine v. Dunn, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 508; Tilman v. Searcy, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 347; Cooley v. Osborne, 50 Iowa, 526.

2. Williamson v. Sammons, 34 Ala. 691; Goodspeat v. Fuller, 46 Me. 141.

3. Hawk. P. C. (Curw. Ed.) 457, § 18. See also Persse v. Persse, 7 Cl. & F. (Eng.) 279.

A contract between the vendor and purchaser of a parcel of land to share between them the expenses of a successful defence to a foreclosure suit in which they were codefendants is not champertous. Allen v. Frazee, 85 Ind. 283. See also Jones v. Shaw, 56 Mich. 332.

4. Thalhimer v. Brinckerhoff, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 623; s. c., 15 Am. Dec. 308; Gilliland v. Failing, 5 Den. (N. Y.) 308.

5. Anderson v. Caraway, 27 W. Va. 396. See also Thompson v. Marshall, 36 Ala. 504.

One who is really a party in interest and bound for the costs may agree with another party in interest to pay the entire costs if the latter will join in the suit. Jewel v. Neidy, 16 N. W. Rep. (Iowa) 141.

6. Bartholomew County Commissioners v. Jameson, 86 Ind. 154.

7. 1 Hawk. P. C. 458 (Curw. Ed.), § 26 et seq.; 2 Bouv. Dict. 90; Thalhimer v. Brinckerhoff, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 623; s. c., 15 Am. Dec. 308; Lathrop v. Amherst Bank, 9 Met. (Mass.) 489; Perine v. Dunn, 3 Johns. Ch. 508; Elborough v. Ayers, L. R. 10 Eq. (Eng.) 367; Findon v. Parker, 11 Mees. & W. (Eng.) 675; Harris v. Briseo, L. R. 17 Q. B. D. 504; 55 L. J. Q. B. 423; 55 L. T. 14; 34 W. R. 729; Bristol v. Dam, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 142.

It has been held in New Hampshire that an attorney may render services and advance money in carrying on a lawsuit for a man without property, relying upon an agreement that he shall be first paid out of the funds recovered. Christie v. Sawyer, 44 N. H. 298.

In State v. Chitty, 1 Bailey (S. Car.), 401, it was said that justice alone must be the end in view in maintaining a poor litigant, and if the transaction be turned to purposes of speculation by a stipulation for a share of the verdict or judgment, it will be champerty.

8. Barker v. Barker, 14 Wis. 131.

A son may agree to assist his father in the defence of a suit brought against him. Yet, if he agree to do so for an interest in the property, it has been held that the agreement will be void for champerty, because he will not be allowed to make a financial speculation out of his filial duty. Barnes v. Strong, 1 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 100; Burke v. Greene, 2 B. & B. Eq. (Eng.) 521. See also Cholmondeley v. Clinton, 2 Jac. & Walk. (Eng.) 135; Powell v. Knowles, 2 Atk. (Eng.) 224; Bayly v. Tyrrel, 2 B. & Beat. (Eng.) 358.

Where, however, poor young women, confiding in their uncle, conveyed to him their interest in land in order that is also a good defence that the defendant is an attorney or counsellor at law, and rendered the assistance complained of in the exercise of his profession.<sup>1</sup>

4. Contingent Fees—The general rule appears to be that contracts to pay contingent fees for legal services, made in abundant good faith, uberrima fide, without suppression or reservation of facts, or exaggeration of apprehended difficulties, or undue influence of any sort or degree, and where the compensation bargained for is absolutely just and fair, so that the transaction is characterized throughout by "all good fidelity to the client," are valid, and will be enforced.<sup>2</sup> Thus an agreement to pay counsel a fee equal to one fourth the value of the land recovered,<sup>3</sup> to pay a reasonable percentage upon the amount recovered,<sup>4</sup> or to pay "a sum equal to one tenth the damages which might be recovered,"<sup>5</sup> or to pay a specific sum of money out of the proceeds of the land in suit, when sold by the client, if recovered, is not champertous.<sup>6</sup> The validity he might bring an action in his own name for its recovery—he to be compensated in case of success—it was held that the arrangement was free from champerty, and equity would compel him to convey the land. Wright v. Cain, 9 N. Car. 296.

1. 2 Bouv. Dict. 90; Thompson v. Quigley, 53 Ind. 61; Thalhimer v. Brinckerhoff, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 623; 15 Am. Dec. 308.

The assistance rendered, however, must be strictly professional, for a lawyer is not more justified in giving money to his client than another man. 1 Russell Crimes, 179.

2. Ex parte Plitt, 2 Wall. Jr. (U. S.) 453; s. c., 16 Cent. L. J. 462.

3. Ramsey v. Trent, 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 336.

4. Wright v. Tebbits, 91 U. S. 252.

5. Evans v. Bell, 6 Dana (Ky.), 479; Major v. Gibson, 1 Patton & H. (Ky.), 48.

6. McPherson v. Cox, 96 U. S. 404.

In the leading case of Ramsey v. Trent, 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 341, above referred to, a contract to pay counsel a fee equal to one fourth of the value of the land recovered less costs of suit, and to wait until the land was sold, was held not champertous. "Although the contract implies that the employers may look to the sale of the land for the means of paying the fee, it does not give to the attorneys any specific right to the proceeds, and the reference to one fourth of the value of the land is only for the purpose of measuring or ascertaining the fee. The terms of the contract show that the fee was to be regulated by the value of the recovery, in a certain manner with the costs and expenses. It does not show that the attorneys were to have part or profit out of the thing in contest, or that the contract was made in its actual form in order to secure such part or profit in evasion of the statute." Marshall, C. J. In Withite v. Roberts, 4 Dana (Ky.), 172, it was further said that the litigant may regulate his attorney's fee by the value or half the value of the property in contest, as well as by the value of any other property. In McPherson v. Cox, 96 U. S. 404, it is to be observed that the attorney, by the contract, was neither to pay the costs, nor accept the land or any part thereof, as his compensation. See also Stanton v. Embrey, 93 U. S. 548; Wylie v. Coxe, 15 How. (U. S.) 415; Trist v. Child, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 441; s. c., 1 McA. 1; Stanton v. Haskin, 1 McArthur (D.C.), 558.

As supporting or recognizing the validity of contracts for contingent fees, see Kusterer v. Beaver Dam, 56 Wis. 471; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 725; Clay v. Ballard, 9 Rob. (La.) 308; Flower v. O'Connor, 7 La. 207; Morgan v. Brown, 12 La. Ann. 159; Walker v. Bietry, 24 La. Ann. 349; Whitehead v. Ducker, 11 S. & M. (Miss.) 98; Quint v. Ophiss, 4 Nev. 305; Christie v. Sawyer, 44 N. H. 298; Taylor v. Gilman, 58 N. H. 417; Cross v. Bloomer, 6 Bax. (Tenn.) 74; Dickinson v. Devlin, 46 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 332; Allison v. Scheeper, 9 Daly (N. Y.), 365; Porter v. Pomly, 39 N. Y. Super. Ct. 219; Haight v. Moore, 37 N. Y. Super. Ct. 161; Marsh v. Holbrook, 2 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 176; Benedict v. Stuart, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 424; Ogden v. Des Artes, 4 Duer (N. Y.), 275; Coughlin v. N. Y. R. Co., 71 N. Y. 443; s. c., 27 Am. Rep. 75; Lytle v. State, 17 of such a contract is not interfered with by the fact that the attorney is also a material witness in the case, when it does not appear that the fee was at all intended as a reward for the attorney's services as a witness.<sup>1</sup>

5. After Litigation Ended.—After the litigation is ended an attorney may lawfully contract for remuneration out of the subject of the suit, even where such a contract, if previously made, would be regarded as champertous.<sup>2</sup> Thus the purchase of an interest in property in litigation by an attorney, after a judgment, is not illegal,<sup>3</sup> nor is an assignment to him of a part of a judgment for his fee void.<sup>4</sup>

6. Advancing Costs.—The law against champerty and maintenance has never forbidden an attorney retained in a case to advance money to pay the incidental costs of the litigation; and even though he advance money to pay such costs without special agreement he may recover from his client the amount so advanced.<sup>5</sup> Where the special contract between the attorney and client is void for champerty, the attorney has been allowed to retain the amount of costs actually advanced.<sup>6</sup> If, however, the contract amounts to a war-

Ark. 608; Backus v. Byron, 4 Mich. 535; Dahms v. Sears, 11 Pac. Rep. (Or.) 891; Bent v. Priest, 10 Mo. App. 543; Davis v. Sparrow, 15 Iowa, 68; Boardman v. Thompson, 25 Iowa, 489; McDonald v. Chicago R. Co., 25 Iowa, 171; Jewel v. Neidy, 61 Iowa, 235; s. c., 16 N. W. Rep. 141; Gilchrist v. Brand, 58 Wis. 184; Miles v. O'Hara, 1 S. & R. (Pa.) 32; Boulden v. Hebel, 17 S. & R. (Pa.) 312; Strohecker v. Hoffman, 7 Harris (Pa.), 227; McFarland's Est., 4 Barr (Pa.), 149; Dickerson v. Pyle, 4 Phila. (Pa.) 257; Chester Co. v. Barber 97 Pa. St. 455; Perry v. Dicken, 18 Cent. L. J. 353; s. c., 105 Pa. St. 83; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 181; Hickey v. Baird, 9 Mich. 32; Stansell v. Lindsay, 50 Ga. 360; Newkirk v. Cone, 18 Ill. 449.

Such contracts are not favored in England. Stanley v. Jones, 7 Bing. 309; s. c., 5 M. & P. 193; Sprye v. Porter, 7 E. & B. 58; Reynell v. Sprye, 8 Hare, 222; 1 D. M. & G. 660; Morgan v. Taylor, 105 C. B. N. S. 653. Nor is the Kentucky case followed in Alabama. Holloway v. Lowe, 7 Port. (Ala.) 488.

An agreement to pay a contingent compensation creates an equitable lien on the fund recovered. Williams v. Ingersoll, 23 Hun (N. Y.), 284; Wylie v. Coxe, 15 How. (U. S.) 416. See also Maylin v. Raymond, 15 Bank. Reg. 353; Coughlin v. N. Y. C. R. Co., 15 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 136; Walsh v. Flatbush, 18 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 190. See also "Attorney and Client," 1 Am. & Eng. Enc. of Law, 13.

1. Perry v. Dicken, 105 Pa. St. 83; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 181, 18 Cent. L. J. 353.

The fact that a client has contracted to pay a contingent compensation does not discredit him as a witness; nor does it give the attorney such an interest in the cause of action as to make his admissions competent or to make him liable for costs. Sussdorf v. Schmidt, 56 N. Y. 319.

2. Walker v. Cuthbert, 10 Ala. 213; Floyd v. Goodwin, 8 Yerger (Tenn.) 484; s. c., 29 Am. Dec. 130. See Lytle v. State, 17 Ark. 608; Hickey v. Baird, 9 Mich. 32.

3. McMicken v. Perin, 18 How. (U. S.) 507. The decision, however, was made under the Louisiana Code.

4. Ross v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 55 Iowa, 691.

After a sale and purchase of property, the champertous contract entered into to obtain the judgment cannot be raised. Whitney v. Kirtland, 27 N. J. Eq. 333.

5. Lewis v. Samuel, 8 Q. B. 485; Box v. Barnaby, Hob. 117; Guy v. Gower, March, 273; Christy v. Douglass, Wright, 485; Anderson v. Radcliffe, El. Bl. & El. 817; 28 L. J. Q. B. 32; Scott v. Miller, 28 L. J. Ch. 584; Hawkins P. C. vol. i. 460.

As to the question whether a solicitor can make an agreement to take a fixed sum either "to bring the suit to a conclusion," or "in satisfaction of all demands for costs," see Uppington v. Bullen, 2 Dru. & Warr. (Eng.) 184; Re Whitcombe, 8 Beav. (Eng.) 140.

6. Wood v. Downs, 18 Ves. (Eng.) 120; Grell v. Levy, 6 C. B. N. S. (Eng.) 73; 10 Jur. 210; 12 W. R. 378; 9 L. T. N. S.

ranty against the client's liability to pay costs, it will be tainted with the vice of champerty.<sup>1</sup>

7. Pretended Titles and Things in Litigation.—Buying and selling dormant titles or things in litigation was a particular form of maintenance to guard against which the statute 32 Hen. VIII. c. 9 enacted that no one shall sell or purchase any pretended right or title to land unless the vendor hath received the profits thereof for one whole year before such grant, or hath been in actual possession of the land, or of the reversion or remainder, on pain that both purchaser and vendor shall forfeit the value of the land to the king and the prosecutor.<sup>2</sup> In most of the States this statute has been either substantially re-enacted or adopted as a part of the common law.<sup>3</sup>

(Eng.) 721. See Morgan v. Taylor, 5 C. B. N. S. (Eng.) 653; 5 Jur. N. S. 791; L. J. C. P. (Eng.) 178; Collins v. Broot, 1 F. & F. Eng. 407; 4 Hurl. & Nor. 270; 28 L. J. Exch. 143; Puette v. Beard, 86 Ind. 172; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 280; Bristol v. Dam, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 142.

1. McEgan v. Cochrane, 10 L. T. (Eng.) 37; Mitchell v. Bell, Cam. & N. (N. Car.) 17. Contra, in Vermont. Gregory v. Glead, 33 Vt. 405.

2. 4 Bl. Com. 135. For text see Cassidy v. Jackson, 45 Miss. 397.

In England the old law has been to a great extent abrogated by the 8 & 9 Vic. c. 106, s. 6, which allows a right of entry to be disposed of by deed. See Hunt v. Bishop, 8 Exch. 675; Hunt v. Remnant, 9 Exch. 635.

3. In Maine and Michigan the 32 Hen. VIII. c. 9, was abrogated by statute. R. S. of Maine, c. 73, § 1, and R. S. c. 104; Revised Code Mich. of 1846, p. 262; Roberts v. Cooper, 20 How. (U. S.) 467.

A disseisee having right of entry may convey as freely as if there had been no disseisin. Pratt v. Pierce, 36 Me. 448; s. c., 58 Am. Dec. 758; Hovey v. Hobson, 51 Me. 62.

The same thing was accomplished in Mississippi by art. 1, p. 36, Rev. Code of 1857, which changes the common law as to the effect of adverse possession upon a conveyance of real estate, and allows any one having an interest or claim to land to convey the same, although it may be in the adverse possession of a third person claiming under color of title. Cassidy v. Jackson, 45 Miss. 397.

In Ohio, New Jersey, Texas, California, Pennsylvania, and Georgia the statute is held not to be in force. Key v. Attier, 1 Ohio, 132; Hall v. Ashby, 9 Ohio, 96; Scomp v. Schenck, 40 N. J. L. 195; Bentinck v. Franklin, 38 Tex. 458;

Campbell v. Everts, 45 Tex. 106; Mathewson v. Fitch, 22 Cal. 86; Hoffman v. Vallejo, 45 Cal. 564; Ballard v. Carr, 48 Cal. 74; Howard v. Throckmorton, 48 Cal. 482; Cresson v. Miller, 2 Watts (Pa.), 272; Cain v. Monroe, 23 Ga. 82; Harring v. Barwick, 24 Ga. 59; Webb v. Camp, 26 Ga. 354.

Though it seems to have been thought otherwise in Georgia in earlier decisions. Pitts v. Bullard, 3 Ga. 5; Harris v. Cannon, 6 Ga. 382; Harrison v. Adcock, 8 Ga. 68; Milsap v. Johnson, 22 Ga. 105.

This would also appear to be the view taken in Illinois. Torrence v. Shedd, 112 Ill. 466; Fetrow v. Merriwether, 53 Ill. 275.

In Maryland and South Carolina it is practically obsolete. Schaferman v. O'Brien, 28 Md. 565; Poyas v. Wilkins, 12 Rich. (S. Car.) 420.

In Massachusetts, Indiana, and North Carolina the statute is held to apply. Sweet v. Poor, 11 Mass. 553; Everenden v. Beaumont, 7 Mass. 78; Wolcot v. Knight, 6 Mass. 424; Brinley v. Whiting, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 348; German Mut. Ins. Co. v. Grim, 32 Ind. 249; Steeple v. Downing, 60 Ind. 478; Patterson v. Nixon, 79 Ind. 251; Stotsenburg v. Marks, 79 Ind. 197; Justice v. Eddings, 75 N. Car. 581.

In Kentucky the Rev. Stat. § 2, ch. 12, declare all sales and conveyances of any land of which any other person at the time of such sale, contract, or conveyance has adverse possession null and void. Harmon v. Brewster, 7 Bush (Ky.), 355. See also Baley v. Deakins, 5 B. Mon. (Ky.) 159; Cardwell v. Sprigg's Heirs, 7 Dana (Ky.), 36; Chiles v. Conley's Heirs, 9 Dana (Ky.), 385.

A similar provision exists in Tennessee. Hardwick v. Beard, 10 Heisk. (Tenn.) 659; Whitesides v. Martin, 7 Verg. (Tenn.) 384.

To avoid a deed for maintenance under the statute the lands must be shown to have been in the actual possession of one claiming under a title adverse to the grantor.<sup>1</sup> If such is the case the deed is void, although neither vendor nor vendee is liable to the penalties of the act unless the sale is made with knowledge of the adverse possession.<sup>2</sup>

In New York the old law has been abrogated except in so far as contained in the statute. The Rev. Stat. 2 R. S. 691, §§ 5, 7, prohibit any officer or other person from taking any conveyance of lands from any person not in possession while such lands are the subject of controversy by suit, knowing of the pendency of such suit, and the buying or selling of any pretended title to lands, unless the grantor, or those under whom he claims, shall have been in possession for the space of a year before the sale. By sec. 7 mortgages of lands by persons not in possession, and conveyances by such persons to those in possession, are excepted. Sedwick v. Stanton, 14 N. Y. 289. See for prior law, 1 R. L. 172; Thalhimer v. Brinkerhoff, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 90; Pepper v. Haight, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 429.

The Missouri statute renders it a misdemeanor for one to make, execute, or deliver any deed or writing for the conveyance or assurance of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, goods, or chattels, which he, previously by deed or writing, sold, conveyed, mortgaged, or assured, or covenanted to convey or assure, to any other person, such first deed being outstanding and in force, and shall not in such deed or writing recite or describe such former deed or writing, or the substance thereof, with intent to defraud. 2 Wagn. Stat. 462. Under this act the intent to defraud is the gravamen of the offence. Armstrong v. Winfrey, 61 Mo. 355.

1. Dawley v. Brown, 79 N. Y. 390; Norton v. Sanders, 1 Dana (Ky.), 14, 17; Chiles v. Conley, 9 Dana (Ky.), 385; Parks v. Hendricks, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 442.

2. Possession under a bond for a deed or a contract of purchase is not adverse to the vendor. Possession is not adverse unless accompanied by a claim to the entire title. The possessor must not recognize a higher title as vested in another person. Jackson v. Johnson, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 74; s. c., 15 Am. Dec. 433.

Possession without either claim or color of title is not adverse so as to forbid a sale by the real owner. Monnot v.

Hudson, 39 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 447; Bowie v. Brahe, 3 Duer (N. Y.), 35.

Nor where the occupant assents to the sale. McIntire v. Patton, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 447.

But attornment by a tenant to a stranger without consent of the landlord, or authority from a judicial decision, cannot give the latter such constructive possession as will sustain a deed by him against the objection of champerty. Turner v. Thomas, 13 Bush. (Ky.) 518.

A cestui que trust may assign without being guilty of champerty when he or his trustee is in possession, although another person may for a short time have held possession of a portion of the land. Falls v. Carpenter, 1 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 237; 28 Am. Dec. 592.

When the tenant by the curtesy and the heir are out of possession and the land is held adversely to both, the tenant by the curtesy cannot convey or release to the heir; and it will make no difference that the heir is a child of the tenant by the curtesy. Vrooman v. Shepherd, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 441. For good discussion of common-law doctrine see this case.

The possession of a tenant in common of lands who has ousted his co-tenant and holds adversely to him does not impair a conveyance by the latter of his interest. The doctrine of champerty has no application to such a case; the purchaser may assume, and act upon the assumption so far as the question of maintenance is concerned that the possession of one tenant in common is the possession of all, and for the benefit of all, whatever the real facts may be. Patterson v. Nixon, 79 Ind. 251.

Under the Tennessee statute a non-resident's deed for land that he owns in the State is not void unless the same is at the time held adversely by some one under deed, devise, or inheritance. Code, 1779. In such case mere naked adverse possession will not avoid the deed. Hardwick v. Beard, 10 Heisk. (Tenn.) 659. See also Whitesides v. Martin, 7 Yerg. (Tenn.) 384.

While, however, the owner of land cannot convey it to a third person when in the possession of another, he may convey it to the disseisor. Schwartz v.

The statute applies to mortgages and sales of property pendente lite,<sup>1</sup> but not to wills, being without the mischief to be reme-

Kuhn, 10 Me. 274; s. c., 25 Am. Dec. 239; Williams v. Connell, 4 Jones (N. Car.), 206.

For sundry points adjudged under 32 Hen. VIII. c. 9, see 1 Hawk. P. C. (Curw. Ed.) pp. 470, 472 et seq. See also Bullard v. Copps, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 409; s. c., 37 Am. Dec. 561. See Cassidy v. Jackson, 45 Miss. 397, for good review of law.

"In this point the statute has not altered the common law, for the common law before the statute was that he who was out of possession ought not to bargain, grant, or let his title; and if he had done so it should have been void, and then the statute was made in affirmation of the common law, and not in alteration of it; and all that the statute has done is that it has added a greater penalty to that which was void by the common law." Patridge v. Strange, 1 Plow. (Eng.) Ed. of 1816, 770; Dexter v. Nelson, 6 Ala. 68; Cassidy v. Jackson, 45 Miss. 403.

As the deed is a mere nullity the title to the land is not affected by the transaction. 4 Kent Com. 448; Barry v. Adams, 3 Allen (Mass.), 493; Loud v. Darling, 7 Allen (Mass.), 206; Kincaid v. Meadows, 3 Head (Tenn.), 192; Tabb v. Baird, 3 Call. (Va.) 475; Meredith v. Kennedy, 6 Litt. (Ky.) 522; Shortall v. Hinckley, 31 Ill. 219; Lathrop v. Demont, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 55; Slyright v. Page, 1 Leonard (Eng.), 166; Jackson v. Andrews, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 152; s. c., 22 Am. Dec. 574.

Any after-deed from the grantor to any other person after he shall have obtained possession will convey the title, notwithstanding the prior conveyance. The original grantor can recover the possession from the tenant. Brinley v. Whiting, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 348. See also Co. Litt. 214 a; Gilson v. Shearer, 1 Murph. (N. Car.) 114; Bledsoe v. Little, 4 How. (Miss.) 13, 24; Martin v. Pace, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 99; Kercheval v. Triplett's Heirs, 1 A. K. Marshall (Ky.), 493; Justice v. Eddings, 75 N. Car. 581; German Mutual Ins. Co. v. Grim, 32 Ind. 249.

But as between the parties to the deed it might operate by way of estoppel. 4 Kent Com. 448. And in Indiana it is held that though such a conveyance is void as against the party in possession and his privies, it is good between the grantor and grantee, and persons standing in legal privity with them. Steeple v. Downing, 60 Ind. 478; Patterson v.

Nixon, 79 Ind. 255; Stotsenburg v. Marks, 79 Ind. 197.

In Massachusetts, New York, and Vermont the deed is now held good against all parties saving the disseisor or party in possession and his privies. McMahan v. Bave, 114 Mass. 140; Livingston v. Proseus, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 526; University of Vermont v. Joslyn, 21 Vt. 52.

As to right of grantee to maintain an action in name of grantor, see post, § 9.

A conveyance by a grantor to a grantee, both out of possession, given to remedy a defect in a former deed executed by the grantor, and to fortify the title of the possessor of the premises or that derived from him, is valid for that purpose, and to estop the grantor from setting up the defect. Fryer v. Rockefeller, 63 N. Y. 268.

The mere possibility that the purchaser of a title may be obliged to bring a suit to perfect his right does not render the purchase illegal for the reasons that apply to the purchase of property in litigation. Kellar v. Blanchard, 21 La. Ann. 38. See also, upon the general subject, Simpson v. Montgomery, 25 Ark. 365; Jackson v. Burchin, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 124; Jones v. Chiles, 2 Dana (Ky.), 35; Batterton v. Chiles, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 348; Dantorth v. Streeter, 28 Vt. 490; Jackson v. Ketchum, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 484; Jackson v. Andrews, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 152; Rowe v. Beckett, 30 Ind. 154; Harman v. Brewster, 7 Bush (Ky.), 355; Hassenfratz v. Kelly, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 466; Preston v. Hunt, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 53; Sessions v. Reynolds, 7 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 130; Verdier v. Simmons, 2 McCord Ch. (S. Car.) 385; Jackson v. Andrews, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 152; s. c., 22 Am. Dec. 574.

Even though the vendor knew that he himself had no title. Ethridge v. Cromwell, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 629. See also Le Roy v. Veeder, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 417.

The presumption is, however, that the vendor knew the condition of his own property, and it rests with him to show the contrary. See also Lane v. Shears, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 433. See also Whitaker v. Cone, 2 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 59; Jackson v. Todd, 2 Caines (N. Y.), 183.

1. Vandiver v. Stickney, 75 Ala. 225; Redman v. Sanders, 2 Dana (Ky.), 68, 69; Wash. v. McBrayer, 1 Dana (Ky.), 565, 566. Contra in Connecticut. Leonard v. Bosworth, 4 Conn. 421. In Vermont it does not apply to the assignment of a mortgage. Converse v. Searls, 10 Vt.

died,<sup>1</sup> nor to conveyances made by the State or sales made under a judicial decree,<sup>2</sup> and the purchaser at such sale may convey without champerty, notwithstanding possession by the original debtor.<sup>3</sup> The doctrine of common law, in affirmance of which the 32 Hen. VIII. c. 9, was passed, has never been accepted by courts of equity; but while it is extremely clear that an equitable interest under a contract of purchase may be the subject of sale,<sup>4</sup> a bare right to file a bill in equity to set aside a transaction which, according to the doctrines of equity, is liable to be rescinded on the ground of fraud, cannot be assigned.<sup>5</sup>

578; Bryant v. Ketchum, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 479; Jackson v. Andrews, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 152; Murray v. Ballow, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 566. 570; Murray v. Lylburn, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 441. See Parks v. Jackson, 11 Wend. (N. Y.) 442; Sweet v. Poor, 11 Mass. 549; Webb v. Bindon, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 98.

In Alabama it has been held that a sale of lands pendente lite by one in possession is not void at the common law. Camp v. Forrest, 13 Ala. 114. See also Lewis v. Bell, 17 How. (U. S.) 616; 2 Story Eq. Jur. §§ 1049-1054.

In Indiana, the conveyance of land, pending a suit to set aside a deed therefor, if made to one not having any connection with the action or knowledge of it, is not void for champerty. Rowe v. Becket, 30 Ind. 154. But a purchase by an attorney from his client, pending the litigation of the subject matter of the suit, is void. West v. Raymond, 21 Ind. 305. In Cockell v. Taylor, 15 Beav. (Eng.) 103, Sir J. Romilly, M. R., held that a party prosecuting a claim to fund in court might mortgage it pendente lite.

1. Clay v. Wyatt, 6 J. J. Mar. (Ky.) 583; May v. Slaughter, 3 A. K. Mar. (Ky.) 507.

2. Hoyt v. Thompson, 5 N. Y. 320; Frizzle v. Veach, 1 Dana (Ky.), 216; Dubois v. Marshall, 3 Dana (Ky.), 337; Little v. Bishop, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 240; Hanna v. Renfro, 32 Miss. 132; Jarrett v. Tomlinson, 3 Watts & S. (Pa.) 114; Batterton v. Chiles, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 348; Turner v. Thomas, 13 Bush (Ky.), 518; Snowden v. McKinney, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 258; Smith v. Scholtz, 68 N. Y. 41; Tuttle v. Hills, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 213; Anderson v. Anderson, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 474; Hoyt v. Thompson, 1 Seld. (N. Y.) 320; Truax v. Thorn, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 156; Williams v. Bennett, 4 Ire. (N. C.) 122; Sims v. Cross, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 460; McGill v. McCall, 9 Ind. 306; Saunders v. Groves, 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 106; Cook v. Faris, 20 N. Y. 300. See also Cummins v.

Latham, 4 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 105; Martin v. Pace, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 99.

3. Snowden v. McKinney, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 258.

The execution-debtor's possession is not adverse to the purchaser under the execution, but is that of a quasi tenant at will, until actual disseisin or disclaimer, and does not therefore render a subsequent sale by the purchaser void for champerty. Mitchell v. Lipe, 8 Yerg. (Tenn.) 179; s. c., 29 Am. Dec. 116.

See further upon the construction of the statute, especially in reference to conveyances to cestuis que trust, Saunders v. Groves, 2 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 407; Cardwell v. Spriggs, 7 Dana (Ky.), 36; Moss v. Scott, 2 Dana (Ky.), 271, 274; Swartwout v. Johnson, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 74; Poage v. Chinn, 4 Dana (Ky.), 50; Chiles v. Jones, 4 Dana (Ky.), 479; Allen v. Smith, 1 Leigh (Va.), 231, 248; Whitesides v. Martin, 7 Yerg. (Tenn.) 384; Lipe v. Mitchell, 2 Yerg. (Tenn.) 400, 403; Dickinson v. Burrell, L. R. 1 Eq. 337.

As to partial eviction from the land, see Mitchell v. Churchman, 4 Humph. (Tenn.) 218; Pickens v. Delozier, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 400; Hyde v. Morgan, 14 Conn. 104; Van Dyck v. Van Beuren, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 345.

As to conveyances between near relatives, see Morris v. Henderson, 37 Miss. 492.

4. Wood v. Griffith, 1 Swanst. (Eng.) 55. 56.

5. Prosser v. Edmonds, 1 Y. & C. Exch. (Eng.) 581. In this case a cestui que trust, who had assigned to one of the executors and trustees under his father's will all his interest under the said will, assigned to a third party the right to rescind the assignment to the executor, which it was assumed existed. The assignee filed a bill to set aside the transaction between the cestui que trust and the executor, in which suit, however, the cestui que trust refused to join as plaintiff.

Lord Abinger, C. B., in delivering the judgment, said: "The remaining cause of demurrer, namely, that the plaintiffs have no right to equitable relief, raises an important and curious question, which is this—whether or not parties who either become purchasers for valuable consideration, or take an assignment in trust of a mere naked right to file a bill in equity, shall be permitted to become plaintiffs, in respect of the title so acquired. Now in the course of the argument it was urged that an equitable as well as a legal interest may be the subject of conveyance, and that the assignee of a chose in action may file a bill in equity to recover it, though he cannot proceed at law for that purpose. But where an equitable interest is assigned it appears to me that in order to give the assignee a locus standi in a court of equity the party assigning that right must have some substantial possession, some capability of personal enjoyment, and not a mere naked right to upset a legal instrument. For instance, that a mortgagor who conveys his estate in fee to a mortgagee has in himself an equitable right to compel a reconveyance when the mortgage money is paid, is true. But that is a right reserved to himself by the original security: it is a right coupled with possession and receipt of rent; and he is prohibited so long as the interest is paid; and it does not follow that the assignee of the mortgagor and the mortgagee may not adjust their rights without the intervention of a court of equity. In the present case it is impossible that the assignee can obtain any benefit from his security, except through the medium of the court. He purchases nothing but a hostile right to bring parties into a court of equity, as defendants to a bill filed for the purpose of obtaining the fruits of his purchase. So where a man takes an assignment of a bond he has the possession; and though a court of equity will permit him to file a bill on the bond, it does not follow that he is obliged to go into a court of equity to enforce payment of it. So other cases might be stated to show that where equity recognizes the assignment of an equitable interest, it is such an interest as is recognized also by third persons, and not merely by the party insisting on them." "Where a valuable consideration has passed, and the party is put in possession of that which he might acquire without litigation, there courts of equity will allow the assignee to stand in the right of the assignor. This is not that case. Robert Todd (cestui que trust), when he assigned, was in possession of nothing but a mere naked right. He could obtain nothing without filing a bill. No case can be found which decides that such a right can be the subject of assignment, either at law or in equity."

But although such a right cannot be assigned inter vivos, it is quite clear that it may be devised. In England, even prior to the Wills Act, 1 Vict. c. 26, and though it be not specially referred to, such right will pass under general terms. Gresley v. Mousley, 4 De G. & J. 78; Stump v. Gaby, 2 De G., M. & G. 623; Uppington v. Bullen, 2 Dru. & W. 184. See also, as to assignable rights, Cholmondeley v. Clinton, 4 Bligh, 42; Hartley v. Russell, 2 Sim. & St. (Eng.) 244; Myers v. United Guarantee Society, 7 De G., M. & G. (Eng.) 112; Wilson v. Short, 6 Hare, 384; Scully v. Delaney, 2 Ir. Eq. (N. C.) 379; Hare v. London & N. W. R. Co., Johnson, 722; Forrest v. Manchester R. Co., 9 W. R. 818; Fisher v. Naieker, 2 L. T. N. S. 94.

There is no champerty in an agreement to enable a bona fide purchaser of an estate to recover for rent due or injuries done to it previously to the purchase. Williams v. Pothero, 5 Bing. (Eng.) 309.

See further, as to the development of the doctrine, Vin. Ab., tit. Maintenance, B.; observations of Buller, J., in Master v. Miller, 4 T. R. 340; Chitty on Bills of Exchange (9th Ed.), p. 7. notes; Movisdale v. Birchall, 2 W. Black. Rep. (Eng.) 820.

In Iowa it is held that an assignment of a mere right to file a bill in equity for a fraud committed against the assignor, will be void as contrary to public policy and savoring of maintenance; but when property is conveyed, the mere fact that the grantee may be compelled to bring suit to enforce his right to the property does not render the conveyance void. Traer v. Clews, 115 U. S. 528.

Nor will the fact that both parties to the assignment of an obligation to pay the purchase-money for land, as evidenced by the written contract, signed by vendor and purchaser, knew that a suit would be necessary to enforce the purchaser's liability, render the assignment void. Broughton v. Mitchell, 64 Ala. 210.

The assignment of a legacy does not savor of maintenance, though the assignee may have to institute legal proceedings to protect the legacy from the claims of the testator's creditors. Traser v. Charleston, 13 S. Car. 533.

Since the beginning of the eighteenth century it would appear that any chose in action arising ex contractu, and founded

8. Effect of Maintenance.—A contract affected with champerty or maintenance cannot be enforced either at law or in equity. When such a contract is executed, money paid under it cannot be recovered back; the law leaves the parties where they have placed themselves, and applies the maxim in pari delicto potior est conditio defendentis.<sup>1</sup> If, however, the parties to the contract hold, or are about to hold, to one another the relation of attorney and client, they are not regarded as being in pari delicto, and the client may recover from the attorney money paid to him under the contract.<sup>2</sup> While the contract yet remains executory, money paid under it may be recovered back by an action founded on its disaffirmance,<sup>3</sup> or the contract itself may be rescinded by application to a court of equity.<sup>4</sup> It has also been held that the party directly injured by the maintenance may support an action on the case against the maintenor.<sup>5</sup> Where an attorney enters into a champertous agree-on acquisition or loss in regard to some subject-matter of property, was capable of assignment. It is assumed as probable that, irrespective of special statutory enactment, no assignment of any right of action would be recognized either in law or equity, where at least the right would not have survived to the executors of the assignor, either by the common law or by the terms or the equity of the statute. 4 Edw. III. c. 7; Tapp. on Maintenance and Champerty, 77; Williams on Executors, pt. ii. bk. 3, c. 1, s. 1.

Under the above principle, it would appear that an unliquidated claim for damages for a personal tort, or for the breach of a contract which affects only the person or personal feelings, such as a contract to cure a man of a disease, or to marry,—cases sometimes described as those where vindictive damages would be given,—is not assignable. Beckham v. Drake, 2 H. of Lds. Cases. 579.

Such rights of action have never been held to pass to assignees under the English bankruptcy statutes, and it is quite clear that they do not survive to personal representatives. Rogers v. Spence, 12 Cl. & F. (Eng.) 700; Williams on Ex'rs, pt. ii. bk. 3, c. 1, s. 1. And see opinion of Williams, J., in Beckham v. Drake, 2 H. of Lds. Cas. 579. See remarks of Bosanquet and Parker, JJ., in Stanley v. Jones, 7 Bing. 375. But in Vimont v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 21 N. W. Rep. N. S. (S. C. Iowa) 9, it was held that an unliquidated claim for damages for injury resulting from the negligence of a railroad company could be assigned. See also Hyatt v. C. R. & N. R. Co., 27 N. W. Rep. (Iowa) 815. But compare Metimans v. Lancaster, 23 N. W. Rep. N. S. (S. C. Wis.) 689.

It is apprehended that after the amount has been ascertained and fixed by the judgment of a court, such judgment would become liable to the same rules as every other kind of property, and be assignable like any other debt. Ex parte Charles, 14 East (Eng.). 197. See Simpson v. Lamb, 7 Ell. & B. 84; opinion of Maule, J., in Beakham v. Drake, 2 H. of Lds. Cas. 579.

1 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 319; s. c., 20 Am. Dec. 607. See, as to the general subject of actions founded upon illegal contracts, Gray v. Roberts, 2 A. K. Marshall (Ky.), 208; s. c., 12 Am. Dec. 383 n.; Waite v. Merrill, 2 Greenleaf (Me.), 102; s. c., 16 Am. Dec. 238; Roby v. West, 4 N. H. 285; s. c., 17 Am. Dec. 423.

2. Belding v. Smythe, 138 Mass. 530.

The client may maintain an action for money had and received against the attorney for the whole amount so recovered, less the costs paid by him. Ackert v. Barker, 131 Mass. 436; Grell v. Levy, 16 C. B. N. S. 73; Prince v. Beattie, 32 L. J. N. S. Ch. 734. See also Opinion of Coleridge, J., In re Masters, 4 Dowl. P. C. 18.

3. Morgan v. Groff, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 524.

4. Wood v. Downes, 18 Ves. 120. See also Reynell v. Sprye, 1 DeG., M. & G. 677.

5. Pechell v. Watson, 8 Mees. & W. 691.

To support such an action, however, the declaration must contain an averment of want of reasonable or probable cause. The court considered this species of wrong analogous to a malicious prosecution or arrest, and that here, as there, the want of reasonable or probable cause ought to be alleged. Flight v. Leman, 4 Ad. & Ell. N. S. 883.

"The averments in this declaration," ment with his client, he acquires no rights which will prevent or affect his client's settlement of the action. Any lien claimed by the attorney, by virtue of such contract, is void.<sup>1</sup>

9. Quantum Meruit.—Even though the special contract is void, the attorney does not forfeit his claim to full compensation for his services. The contract being void it is as if it had never been, and should not be allowed to affect the rights of the parties except in so far as they claim directly under it.<sup>2</sup>

10. Champerty as a Defence.—When an action is brought directly upon a champertous contract, champerty is a good defence, and may be set up by way of answer; and if the true character of the contract appears upon the face of the pleading, such pleading may be successfully demurred to. The better opinion would appear to be that the defence of champerty can only be set up when the champertous contract itself is sought to be enforced, and that the existence of a champertous agreement between the plaintiff and his attorney, or the fact that the plaintiff is prosecuting the case upon a contingent interest in the subject-matter of the litigation dependent upon success, is no defence to the action against the defendant.<sup>3</sup> In some States, however, it is held to be the duty said Williams. J., in the last case cited, "might be sustained by proof that the defendant, not being an attorney, had held a conversation with Thomas, and had said, 'If your story is correct, you might sue Flight.' No action could be maintained on that, unless it further appeared that the now defendant knew that there was no right to sue the now plaintiff."

1. Kusterer v. Beaver Dam, 56 Wis. 471; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 725; Weakly v. Hall, 13 Ohio, 167; Maybin v. Raymond, 15 Bank Reg. 353; Davis v. Sharron, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 67. See also Couglin v. Railroad Co., 71 N. Y. 443; s. c., 27 Am. Rep. 75; Atchison, Topeka, etc., R. Co. v. Johnson, 29 Kan. 218.

2. Rust v. Larue, 4 Litt. (Ky.) 412; s. c., 14 Am. Dec. 172; Caldwell v. Shepherd, 67 B. Mon. (Ky.) 389; Stearns v. Felker, 28 Wis. 594; Weeks on Attorneys, § 345; Merrit v. Lambert, 10 Paige (N. Y.), 352; s. c., 2 Denio (N. Y.), 607; Berrian v. McLane, 1 Hoff. Ch. 421. See Walsh v. Shumway, 65 Ill. 471; Moyers v. Graham, 15 Lea (Tenn.), 57; Ryan v. Martin, 16 Wis. 57; Martin v. Veeder, 20 Wis. 491; Satterlee v. Frazer, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 141; Allen v. Hawks, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 79; Wickham v. Conklin, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 220.

Particularly ought the attorney to be allowed to recover for such services as were rendered before the champertous contract was entered into. Thurston v. Percival, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 415. But in

Davis v. Sharron, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 64, it was held that an attorney serving under a champertous contract with his client had no lien on the judgment even for reasonable compensation.

In a number of instances the attorney has been compelled to refund all the money collected under the agreement, and his claim for services has been entirely ignored. Prince v. Beattie, 32 L. J. Ch. 734; Grell v. Levy, 16 C. B. N. S. 73; 10 Jur. (N. S.) 210; 12 W. R. 378; 9 L. T. N. S. 727.

3. Hilton v. Woods, L. R. 4 Eq. Cas. 432; Elborough v. Ayers, L. R. 10 Eq. Cas. 367; Knight v. Bowyer, 2 DeG. & J. 446. In Hilton v. Woods, L. R. 4 Eq. Cas. 432, Malins, V. C., said: "I have carefully examined all the authorities referred to in support of this argument, and they clearly establish that whenever the right of the plaintiff, in respect of which he sues, is derived under a title founded on champerty or maintenance, his suit will on that account necessarily fail. But no authority was cited, nor have I met with any, which goes the length of deciding that when a plaintiff has an original and good title to property he becomes disqualified to sue for it by having entered into an improper bargain with his solicitor as to the mode of remunerating him for his professional services in the suit or otherwise. It is clear that the bargain between the plaintiff and Mr. Wright (the solicitor) amounted to maintenance; and if the of the court to dismiss the suit as soon as it appears upon the trial, to its satisfaction, that the action is being prosecuted under a champertous agreement, and that it is unnecessary to file a plea setting up the champerty.<sup>1</sup> Under this rule the rescission of a latter had been the plaintiff, suing by virtue of a title derived under that contract it would have been my duty to dismiss his suit." See Whitney v. Kirtland, 27 N. J. Eq. 333; Robinson v. Beale, 26 Ga. 17; McMullen v. Guest, 6 Tex. 275; Fetrow v. Merriweather, 53 Ill. 275; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Boller, 7 Brad. (Ill.) 625; Gilbert v. Holmes, 64 Ill. 548; Torrence v. Shedd, 112 Ill. 466; 21 Cent. L. J. 37; Burnes v. Scott, 6 Sup. Ct. Rep. (U.S.) 865; Boone v. Chiles, 10 Pet (U.S.) 177; Knadler v. Sharp, 36 Iowa, 232; Allison v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 42 Iowa, 274; Small v. Chicago, R. I. & P. R. Co., 55 Iowa, 582; 8 N. W. Rep. N. S. 437; Ross v. Chicago R. I. & P. R. Co., 55 Iowa, 691; s. c., 8 N. W. Rep. N. S. 644; Vimont v. Chicago & N. W. R. Co., 28 N. W. Rep. (Iowa) 612; Courtright v. Burnes, 3 McCrary C. Ct. Rep. 60; Lackland v. Smith, 7 Mo. App. 593; Million v. Ohnsorg, 10 Mo. App. 432; Bent v. Priest, 10 Mo. App. 547; Burnes v. Scott, 117 U. S. 582; Hovey v. Hobson, 51 Me. 62; Brinley v. Whiting, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 348.

1. "The question whether a suit is prosecuted upon a champertous agreement is one outside the real merits of the case; and although an issue might possibly be made on it, yet we think it need not necessarily be pleaded; but that if it comes to the knowledge of the court in any proper manner it will refuse longer to entertain the proceeding. It would seem to stand upon similar grounds with an action for divorce prosecuted by collusion between the parties. The court, in arriving at a knowledge of the fact, would not be confined to the strict rules applicable to evidence offered on the trial of the case, though it undoubtedly should not proceed upon mere suspicion or without giving opportunity for avoiding the alleged champerty by proper proofs on the other side." Barker v. Barker, 14 Wis. 131 (142); Allard v. Lamirande, 29 Wis. 502. See also Andrews v. Thayer, 30 Wis. 228; Weedon v. Wallace, Meigs (Tenn.), 286; Webb v. Armstrong, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 379; Vincent v. Ashley, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 554; Hunt v. Lyle, 8 Yerg. (Tenn.) 142; Greenman v. Cohee, 61 Ind. 201; Allen v. Frazee, 85 Ind. 283; Board v. Jameson, 86 Ind. 154.

In Iowa it is said that champerty, if available at all as a defence, must be pleaded, and is not ground for abatement. Allison v. C. N. & W. R. Co., 42 Iowa, 275.

In New York, when the defendant sets up the defence that the demand on which the action is founded "has been bought or sold or received for prosecution" by an attorney or counsellor, contrary to the Rev. Stat. 288, §§ 71, 73, the court and not the jury are to pass upon the question. If determined against the plaintiff, he must be nonsuited; and if in his favor, the jury must be instructed accordingly. Orcutt v. Pettit, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 233. But the mere fact that a demand has been bought or sold, contrary to the above provisions, is no defence to a suit in chancery brought to enforce it, and even at law such demand may be purged of its illegal taint; and when prosecuted for the benefit of the real and bona fide holder a recovery may be had. But an agreement between the complainant in a bill to foreclose a mortgage, and his solicitor, by which the latter is to have part of the claim when collected, is not within the act. Hall v. Gird, 7 Hill (N. Y.), 586.

In England the purchaser of a contested title cannot bring an action of ejectment in his own name, but he may get rid of the difficulty by bringing the action in the name of his vendor. Evans v. Pothero, cited by James, V. C., L. R. 10 Eq. 373.

Upon the same principle it was held in Massachusetts and Indiana that a deed by one out of possession of land entitles the grantee to an action to recover the land in the name of the grantor, but to his own use, even against the disseizor. Brinley v. Whiting, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 348; McMahan v. Bowe, 114 Mass. 145; Steeple v. Downing, 60 Ind. 478; Patterson v. Nixon, 70 Ind. 256.

In North Carolina the same result was reached under the Code. Justice v. Eddings, 75 N. C. 581.

"To establish such a defence," it was said in Brinley v. Whiting, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 355, 356, "would be in fact to transfer the title to the land from the defendant to the tenant by way of punishment for the attempt to convey it unlawfully. To say that the person in possession should hold the land against the claim of the owner, because he had committed an offence, would be to impose a punishment not provided by the statute champertous contract after the action has commenced does not relate back to the commencement of the suit, and preclude the legal bar to the action. If a meritorious defence is pleaded the plaintiff can not reply that the defendants are guilty of champerty between themselves in the defence they have set up.<sup>2</sup>

CHANCE.—The absence of any defined or recognized cause.<sup>3</sup>

of Henry, nor known to the common law."

In Kentucky it is held that there can be no recovery of the land upon the title of the vendor, when it appears to the satisfaction of the jury that the action is brought for the benefit of the champertous purchaser; but if the action is prosecuted bona fide for the benefit of the vendor, he may recover; and whether it is so brought is a question for the jury. Bayley v. Deakins, 5 B. Mon. (Ky.) 159; Cardwell v. Spriggs, 7 Dana (Ky.), 36; Chiles v. Conley's Heirs, 9 Dana (Ky.), 385.

1. Harman v. Brewster, 7 Bush (Ky.), 355.

2. Allen v. Frazee, 85 Ind. 283.

3. Webster.

"Pure chance consists in the entire absence of all the means of calculating results; accident is the unusual prevention of an effect naturally resulting from the means employed." Harless v. U. S. Morr. (Iowa) 169.

By Chance.—Under a statute which permits proof of misconduct of jurors by the affidavits of the jurors in case of resort by the jury to determination by chance, that is not a chance verdict, the amount of which is determined by each juror's writing an amount upon a piece of paper and dividing the sum of these amounts by twelve, the quotient to stand as the verdict. "There is no element of chance in such a verdict. Each juror marks a sum which in his judgment represents the true amount of damages. Neither of these sums is the result of chance: on the contrary, each is the result of the judgment or will of the juror by whom it was marked. Neither is the aggregate of these sums, nor the quotient resulting from a division of the aggregate by twelve, the result of chance, but, on the contrary, the result of the most accurate of the sciences." Turner v. Tuolumne Co. Water Co., 25 Cal. 397; Boyce v. Cal. Stage Co., 25 Cal. 460; and cf. Wilson v. Berryman, 5 Cal. 44; Cowperthwaite v. Jones, 2 Dal. (Pa.) 55; Smith v. Cheetham, 3 Caines (N. Y.), 61; Thompson's Case, 8 Gratt. (Va.) 637.

In Goodman v. Cody, 1 Wash. Ty. 329, the contrary is held, and the decision of Turner v. Water Co., criticised: "The learned judge erred doubly; first, he overlooked the fact that the verdict is already determined and fixed, as soon as the twelve sums are ascertained, and before the exact science is applied, within the maxim, Id certum est quod certum fiat, and second, he evidently mistook the nature of chance, falsely fancying that what is certain in result or is brought about by known or intelligent agencies, cannot be said to result from chance."

"According to generally accepted and ordinary use of the word, anything is said to have happened by chance to any one, which was neither understandingly brought about by his act nor pre-estimated by his understanding." "A juror resorts to the determination of chance for a verdict whenever he resorts to any method of determination, the steps and results of which are beyond his calculation and unfollowed and unparticipated in by his understanding, and all the jurors resort to such a method when they resort to the method of average."

Game of Chance is "such a game as is determined entirely or in part by lot or mere luck, and in which judgment, practice, skill, or adroitness have honestly no office at all, or are thwarted by chance." Ten-pins is not such a game. State v. Gupton, 8 Ired L. (N. Car.) 271. Rattle and snap, a game of cards and dice, is a game of chance. State v. Nates, 3 Hill (S. Car.), 200. The jury having found that rondo was a game of chance, the court refused to interfere with their verdict in Glascok v. State, 10 Mo. 508. So where the jury found shuffle-board not to be such a game. State v. Bishop, 8 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 266. Horse-racing is not a game of chance. Harless v. U. S., Morr. (Iowa) 169; State v. Lemon, 46 Mo. 375. Depositing a half-sovereign as a bet on a dog-race is not "betting a coin as an instrument of gaming on a game of chance." Hirst v. Molesbury, L. R. 6 Q. B. 130. A person betting at a horse-race at a pari mutuel, a machine which registers the amount betted on each horse, and the total amount betted which was to be divided, less ten per cent, among those who placed their money on the winner, is one playing or betting with an instrument at any game of chance. Tollett v.

Definition. CHANCELLOR—CHANCERY—CHANGE. Definition.

CHANCELLOR.—The chief or presiding judicial officer of a court of chancery.<sup>1</sup>

CHANCERY. See EQUITY.

CHANGE.—To cause to turn or pass from one state to another: to alter or make different.<sup>2</sup>

A succession of one thing in place of another.<sup>3</sup>

Thomas. L. R. 6 Q. B. 516. A game into which more skill than chance enters appears not to be a game of chance. Glascock v. State, 10 Mo. 508; but see State v. Gupton, 8 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 271.

Chance - Medley.—"The self-defence whereby a man may protect himself from an assault or the like, in the course of a sudden broil or quarrel, by killing him who assaults him." 4 Bl. Com. 184.

1. For an historical account of the office of chancellor, see 1 Spence's Eq. Jur. 355 seq.; Campbell's Lives of the Lord Chancellors, Introd. Chap.; Encyc. Brit. sub verbo.

2. Webster.

Change its Original Purpose.—The amending a bill introduced to prohibit the sale of liquor within four miles of a town, so that on passage it became a law forbidding such sale within eight miles, does not "change its original purpose." Harrison v. Gordy, 57 Ala. 49.

Change the Form or Ground of Action.—An amendment to the declaration in an action for breach of a covenant against incumbrances, by which a new count is added, setting forth a new and distinct incumbrance, does not change the form or ground of action within an exception to a statute of jeofails. Spencer v. Howe, 26 Conn. 200.

Changed—A transfer made under a bankrupt law by a register in bankruptcy to an assignee, does not avoid a policy of insurance, under a clause that "If the title to the property is transferred or changed, this policy shall be void." Starkweather v. Cleveland Ins. Co., 2 Ab. (C. C.) 67.

3. Webster.

Change in the Property, its Use or Occupation.—Under a statute providing that "any change in the property insured, its use or occupation, . . . shall not affect the contract unless the risk was thereby materially increased," a change from occupancy to disuse was held to be such a change. Cannel v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 59 Me. 582.

Change of Grade.—The raising of a street twelve inches by macadamizing done upon its surface is not a change of grade within an act forbidding such, except on petition of the owners of two thirds in value of the property on both sides of the street. Warren v. Henly, 31 Iowa, 31.

Change of Moorings.—A vessel applied at a dock for landing, and being refused proceeded to another; held, this was not a change of moorings under a pilotage act, and the master being bound to have a pilot on board, the owners were discharged from responsibility for damage done to a barge into which the vessel ran. McIntosh v. Slade, 6 B. & C. 657.

Change of Possession.—Temporary absence of the assured from home with his family, leaving his house in the charge of another, is not a change of possession within the meaning of a clause of the policy, avoiding it for such. Shearman v. Niagara F. I. Co., 46 N. Y. 526; s. c., 7 Am. Rep. 380. "Change of possession" was said to be a mere paraphrase of "delivery" in Sims v. Sims' Admr., 8 Porter (Ala.), 461; s. c., 33 Am. Dec. 393.

Change of Title.—Under a policy of insurance, in which it was provided that "in case of any sale, transfer, or change of title in the property insured . . . such insurance shall be void and cease," it was said: "The change or transfer of title, to be in violation of the policy, must be more than nominal. . . . But if the real ownership remains the same—if there is no change in the fact of title, but only in the evidence of it, and if this latter change is merely nominal, and not of a nature calculated to increase the motive to burn or diminish the motive to guard the property from loss by fire, the policy is not violated." A transfer as collateral security is therefore not such a change of title as will avoid the policy. Ayres v. Hartford F. I. Co., 17 Iowa, 176; s. c., 21 Iowa, 193. But a transfer by one partner to his copartner of his share of the insured partnership property is such a change of title. Hartford F. I. Co. v. Ross, 23 Ind. 179; Dix v. Merc. Ins. Co., 22 Ill. 272. Policies with similar provisions were also held to be avoided, where the insured, who were partners, dissolved partnership and divided the partnership property. Dreher v. Aetna Ins. Co., 18 Mo. 128. And where the insured, S. and K., who were partners, took N. into the firm and

Definition.*CHANGE—CHANGE OF VENUE.*Definition.

Exchange: "a fixed place where merchants meet at certain hours for the transaction of business with each other."<sup>1</sup>

CHANGE OF VENUE. (See also JURISDICTION; MANDAMUS; PRACTICE; TRIAL; VENUE.)

Definition, 90.

To what County the Cause should be Moved, 90.

When Change may be Had, 91.

Generally, 91.

Because of Disqualification of Judge, 93.

For Convenience of Witness, 95.

Because Impartial Trial cannot be Had, 96.

Because of Non-residence of Parties, 100.

Who may Apply for, 101.

When Motion may be Made, 102.

The Affidavit, 104.

Effect of Change, 105.

On the Jurisdiction, 105.

Generally, 107.

Review by Courts of Appeal, 108.

1. Definition.—A change of venue is a change of the place of trial to another county.<sup>2</sup>

2. To What County the Cause should be Moved.—It is provided by statute in most of the States that when the venue is changed, the cause should be moved to the nearest county free from obstacles.

S. sold out to K. and N. Card v. Phoenix Ins. Co., 4 Mo. App. 424.

Where, at the time the policy was issued, the property was subject to a mortgage by which, on default, the mortgagee might consider the whole debt due and sell the property; and this was done and a conveyance made to the purchaser, who subsequently conveyed to another, there took place such a change of title as avoided the policy under the provision therein. C. M. As. Co. v. Scammon, 102 Ill. 46. An agreement between the owner of insured property and another to represent to the creditors of the former, in order to prevent attachments, that the property had been sold to such other person, is not a change of title which will avoid the policy which contained a provision similar to above. Orrell v. H. F. Ins. Co., 13 Gray (Mass.), 431.

A mortgage is not within a clause in a policy of insurance avoiding it, "if any change takes place in the title or possession of the property, whether by sale, legal process, judicial decree, voluntary transfer, or conveyance." Hartford F. I. Co. v. Walsh, 54 Ill. 164.

Actual Change of Possession.—Where a vendor remains in possession of personally as the agent of the vendee, there is not such an "actual change of possession" as the statute requires to prevent a presumption of a fraudulent sale. Grant v. Lewis, 14 Wis. 487.

Where a mortgagee goes into a saloon and takes nominal possession of the tables, the mortgaged property, and puts them in charge of the bar-tender, where they are subsequently used by the mortgagor, there is not an "actual and continued change of possession" under a chattel-mortgage. Brunswick v. McClay, 7 Neb. 137.

The issuance of a dray-ticket bearing the words "Dray-ticket for $50. Knoxville Iron Co.", is merely a method of keeping accounts with draymen. It is not a 'change bill or ticket, the issuance of which is forbidden by statute. State v. Fisk, 3 Sneed, (Tenn.) 695.

1. White v. Brownell, 4 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) N. S. 190.

"There may be property belonging to this body, derived from the payment of dues or fines, or consisting of the furniture of the room where the board meets, but the possession of it is a mere incident, and not the main purpose or object of the association. A member has no severable proprietary interest in it, or a right to any proportionable part of it upon withdrawing. He has merely the enjoyment and use of it while he is a member, but the property remains with and belongs to the body while it continues to exist. . . . When the body ceases to exist, those who may then be members become entitled to their proportionate share of its assets."

2. Abbott's Law Dict.

In criminal proceedings a change of venue is where, by order of court, a cause is removed from the county in which the indictment was found, to an adjoining one for trial. 1 Bishop on Crim. Proc. (3d Ed.) § 68.

Such a statute imports that the judge is to decide which is such county,<sup>1</sup> and a change of venue to a county not one of the nearest, when no objection exists to those nearest, is erroneous.<sup>2</sup> But the venue in some cases may be changed to the "most convenient" unobjectionable county; which means the "most convenient" all things considered, and not the nearest one.<sup>3</sup> In case of a change of venue on account of the prejudice of the judge, the case may be properly transferred to another court in the same county.<sup>4</sup>

3. When Change may be Had.—Generally.—It depends to a large extent on the nature of the statute whether a party is entitled to a change of venue as a matter of right, or whether it is discretionary with the court to grant it. But where a statute provides that on application and showing in certain cases a party may have a change of venue, if the party brings himself within the statutory requisites, he is entitled thereto as a matter of right,<sup>5</sup> and if denied by the court may be enforced by mandamus.<sup>6</sup> The venue in most cases can be changed by consent, without a petition to the court;<sup>7</sup> or, when the court has jurisdiction, the parties to an ac-

1. Ex parte Hodges, 59 Ala. 305; Shaw v. Cade, 54 Tex. 307. So a motion for a change to a particular county is bad, and may be overruled for that reason alone. Olive v. State, 11 Neb. 1.

2. Baxter v. People, 7 Ill. 558. Compare Kennedy v. Commonwealth, 78 Ky. 447.

The Texas statute governing changes of venue provides that on granting a change of venue "the cause shall be removed to some adjoining county, the court-house of which is nearest the court-house of the county in which the suit is pending," etc. Held, that the nearest court-house, in the meaning of the statute, is not necessarily the one nearest by geometrical measurement, but may be the one most convenient of access, and nearest by the usual travelled route. Shaw v. Cade, 54 Tex. 307.

A change of venue cannot be made to a county other than one adjoining, merely because the parties cannot agree on one adjoining. Miller v. Cobell, 81 Ky. 178.

3. Allen v. Skiff, 2 Iowa, 433.

4. State v. McArthur, 13 Wis. 454; Curran v. Beach, 20 Ill. 219.

5. Shattuck v. Myers, 13 Ind. 47; 74 Am. Dec. 236, and note; Mendanhall v. Gately, 18 Ind. 148; Heshion v. Pressley, 80 Ind. 494; Walsh v. Ray, 38 Ill. 30; Clark v. People, 2 Ill. 107; Freleigh v. State, 8 Mo. 606; People v. Yookum, 53 Cal. 566; Rines v. Boyd, 7 Wis. 134; Bachmann v. Milwaukee, 47 Wis. 435; Jones v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 36 Iowa, 66; Manly v. State, 52 Ind. 215; State v. Shaw, 43 Ohio St. 324.

6. Ex parte Chase, 43 Ala. 303.

Mandamus will also lie to set aside an order made for a change of venue, in a criminal case, in the absence of the accused from the court-room. Ex parte Bryan, 44 Ala. 402.

7. Pierson v. Finney, 37 Ill. 29; People v. Scates, 4 Ill. 371; Brennan v. People, 15 Ill. 511; Davidson v. Wheeler, 1 Morr. (Iowa) 238.

Where a cause was transferred from one judicial district to another on a stipulation which provided that if a trial should not be had in the new district by a certain time, the cause should be transferred back to the original district, and the cause was so transferred back, held, not to be error. Lyon County v. Washoe Co., 6 Nev. 241.

But in Mississippi, where the parties agreed to change the venue from the county of S. to the county of G., and the court entered an order on the minutes in accordance with the agreement, and suffered the case removed without a compliance with the statute, held, that this was error, and that the consent or agreement of the parties conferred no power on the court to change the venue in any mode except that prescribed by the statute, which is by petition under oath, addressed to the court, or to the judge of the district in vacation, setting forth the reasons for the application. Wilson v. Rodewald, 49 Miss. 506.

An applicant for a change of venue filed affidavits that he could not have an impartial trial in the county, and that many of the witnesses lived in C. county, in an adjoining circuit; whereupon the tion may waive the venue.<sup>1</sup> In criminal cases the venue cannot be changed without the defendant's consent, and a statute therefore is unconstitutional.<sup>2</sup>

It is a general rule that in actions arising ex delicto, the venue will be changed to the county where the cause of action arose, unless the plaintiff stipulate to give material evidence arising in the county where the venue is laid.<sup>3</sup> But where, on application for a change of venue, a party stipulates not to give any evidence except what may be found in the county in which the venue is laid, the venue will not be changed.<sup>4</sup>

In civil actions the venue will not be changed on the application of one defendant, where there are several defendants in a cause;<sup>5</sup> nor has the defendant a right to change the venue by stipulating to pay the expenses of the plaintiff's witnesses.<sup>6</sup>

Where the venue of an action has been once changed, a further change may be ordered for good cause shown;<sup>7</sup> and where the venue in a criminal case has been changed, it may be changed back to the original county with the consent of the prisoner;<sup>8</sup> and where a defendant is let in to defend on the merits after a default, the plaintiff may change the venue, so as to obtain a speedy trial.<sup>9</sup>

Where land has been annexed to another county pending a suit for its possession, commenced in the county where it originally lay, the record will be transferred to the court of the county to which it last belongs.<sup>10</sup> And where a deputy sheriff of the county of A.

other party filed an affidavit showing that he could not have a fair trial in that county, and thereupon the venue was without objection changed to another county, not in an adjoining circuit. Held, that it would be presumed that the cause was sent to that county by agreement, and therefore objection to proceeding in that court should be overruled. Newman v. Hazelrigg, 96 Ind. 73.

After a cause, begun in one court, has been transferred to another, in which the parties have agreed it shall be tried, the plaintiff is not bound to submit to a trial in that court after new parties defendant have come into the case, as such new parties may have such relation to the court, or such influence in the community, as to jeopardize plaintiff's rights in that court. Bixby v. Carskadden, 63 Iowa, 164.

1. Leach v. Western, etc., R. Co., 65 N. Car. 486.

2. Kirk v. State, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 344; Commonwealth v. Pearce, 6 Gratt. (Va.) 669; Young's Case, 9 Leigh (Va.), 638; Osborn v. State, 24 Ark. 629. Compare Cox v. State, 8 Tex. App. 254.

But where the venue has been changed at the instance of the prisoner he cannot afterwards object that there was not sufficient cause for the change. State v. McLendon, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 195.

3. Serially v. Wells, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 196; Vander Zee v. Van Dyck, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 600.

4. Smith v. Averill, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 28.

5. Sailly v. Hutton, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 508; Van Dyke v. Battle, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 218. See WHO MAY APPLY FOR, infra.

6. Although it seems the plaintiff may retain his venue by stipulating to pay the expenses of the defendant's witnesses. Harrower v. Betts, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 496; Worthy v. Gilbert, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 492.

7. People v. Hubbard, 22 Cal. 34; Herbert v. Beathard, 26 Kan. 746. Compare Musselman v. Pierce, 40 Ind. 120.

8. Paris v. State, 36 Ala. 232.

Where an indictment was found in one county in Illinois, against several jointly, and the venue was changed to another county, on motion of one of the accused, without consent of the others, where he was tried, and afterwards the indictment was returned to the county where it was found, and the others held to answer, held, that the proceedings were regular. Hunter v. People, 2 Ill. 453.

9. Payne v. Smith, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 122.

10. Murdock v. Little, 18 Ga. 719.

When Change may be Had. CHANGE OF VENUE. Disqualification of Judge.

is sued in the county of B., for an act done in the course of his official duty in the county of A., the court will, on affidavit of the fact, change the venue from B. to A.<sup>1</sup> So, where a part of the jury had been selected, but from prevalence of yellow fever in the shire town the court deemed the completion impracticable, it was proper to grant a change of venue.<sup>2</sup>

But one change of the venue of a cause, from the county where it is pending, can be obtained by the same party.<sup>3</sup>

A motion for a change of venue may be renewed as a matter of right, after having been once denied, if the facts have changed since the denial.<sup>4</sup> But where an application is contested on one ground alone, the right to demand a change on other grounds may be deemed waived.<sup>5</sup>

Because of Disqualification of Judge.—Bias or prejudice on the part of the judge is generally held to be a sufficient ground for a change of venue.<sup>6</sup> So is his pecuniary interest in the event of the

1. Dennis v. Ford, 7 N. J. L. 200.

2. Sulinas v. Stillman, 25 Tex. 12.

3. Hutts v. Hutts, 62 Ind. 240; Feneilon v. Butts, 53 Wis. 344. But in Herbert v. Beathard, 26 Kan. 746, it is held that where an action is commenced before a justice of the peace, and the defendant obtains a change of venue to another justice of the peace, such change of venue will not prevent the plaintiff from obtaining still another change if he has sufficient grounds therefor.

In State v. Gates, 20 Mo. 400, it was held that although it is provided by law that a second change of venue in the same cause shall not be allowed, yet it may be allowed when the judge has been counsel for the prisoner. State v. Gates, 20 Mo. 400. In Schaengten v. Smith, 48 Iowa, 359, it is held that, after one change of venue, the party applying for another change must allege and show that the cause upon which he bases his application, was not in existence when the first change was obtained.

A statute which provides that, after one change of venue, no party is entitled to another for any cause in existence when the first change was obtained, does not apply to a case where the first change was made by the agreement of parties. Bixby v. Carskaddon, 63 Iowa, 164.

4. Veeder v. Baker, 83 N. Y. 156.

5. Keith v. Briggs, 32 Minn. 185.

6. McGoon v. Little, 7 Ill. 42; Curran v. Beach, 20 Ill. 219; Carrow v. People, 113 Ill. 550; Goldsby v. State, 18 Ind. 147; Vanderkarr v. State, 51 Ind. 91; Smelzer v. Lockhart, 97 Ind. 315; Leyner v. State, 8 Ind. 490; Berner v. Frazier, 8 Iowa, 77; Turner v. Hitchcock, 20 Iowa, 310; Runols v. Brown, 11 Wis. 193;

State v. McArthur, 13 Wis. 454; Ex parte Curtis, 3 Minn. 274; In re Peyton, 12 Kan. 398. Compare People v. Williams, 24 Cal. 31; People v. Shuler, 28 Cal. 490; Morris v. Graves, 2 Ind. 354; Millison v. Holmes, 1 Ind. 45.

But a prejudice against the cause or defence of a party in the mind of the judge, and not against his person, is no cause for a change of venue. Bent v. Lewis, 15 Mo. App. 40.

A change may be had on the ground of prejudice of a judge who may be called upon to rule on certain motions, though it is certain that the case will not be tried before him. Allerton v. Eldridge, 56 Iowa, 709.

Where an application was made for a change of venue in a cause, upon the ground that the judge then presiding was prejudiced against the party, so that he could not obtain a fair trial, and the application was denied, and the cause was tried in the same court at a subsequent term, before another judge to whom no objection was made, held, that there was no force in the objection that the application had been denied. Myers v. Walker, 31 Ill. 353.

So where an application for a change of venue having been made upon the ground that there had been six hearings in relation to the case at bar before the sitting judge, and that he had decided erroneously in all of them, held, that no presumption was raised that the court was prejudiced, and that the motion must be denied. Burke v. Mayall, 10 Minn. 287.

Although an application for a change of the place of trial of a criminal case, on the ground of the prejudice of the judge, suit or the prosecution;<sup>1</sup> and in such a case it is not error for the judge to act upon his own knowledge;<sup>2</sup> or if, before the judge was elevated to the bench, he had been of counsel for either of the parties to the suit, or for the prisoner in the matter of the indictment;<sup>3</sup> and although it is provided by law that a second change makes allegations upon which, if true, a change should be granted, it does not follow, as a matter of course, that the change must be granted; for the judge may consult his own feelings as well as the papers, and grant or deny the change, as he may think the right demands, in the exercise of a careful discretion. State v. Foley, 65 Iowa, 51.

When Change may be Had. CHANGE OF VENUE. Disqualification of Judge.

And where a petition for change of venue alleged for cause that the judge entertained towards the plaintiff a violent prejudice, incapacitating him to do the plaintiff justice, and that the judge repeatedly, as the plaintiff had been informed and believed, spoke of the plaintiff in harsh and violent terms, derogatory to the plaintiff's character for fairness and honesty, held, that the petition did not show sufficient ground for the change of venue. Millison v. Holmes, 1 Ind. 45.

Where a case involving less than $100 has been certified to the supreme court for the determination of questions of law, and both parties have acquiesced in the findings of fact on which such questions are based, the determination of such questions by that court leaves nothing for the trial court to do but to enter judgment in accordance with such determination; and in such a case, unless a new trial should be granted on account of newly-discovered evidence, a change of venue on the ground of the prejudice of the trial judge should not be granted. Andrews v. Burdick, 64 Iowa, 692.

After P., a temporary judge, had ordered a change of judge on the ground of averred bias, and the defendant had recognized to appear at the next term, S., the regular judge, died; and, on a trial before D., his successor, the jury disagreed, and were by consent of parties discharged. Held, that it was error to refuse an application for change of venue from D. for bias properly averred. There had been no change of judge on account of his bias; and, on a sufficient affidavit, every defendant in a criminal prosecution is entitled to one such change. Duggins v. State, 66 Ind. 350.

A court has no authority upon its own motion, to change the venue of a case, whether for the trial of a part or all the issues involved therein; and the fact that an application for a change of venue on the ground that the judge was prejudiced had been filed and sustained in another case, involving the same issues, is no ground for such change. Bennett v. Craey, 57 Iowa, 221.

The statement of the mere belief of the defendant that the judge is prejudiced, when such belief is founded alone on alleged facts, of the existence of which defendant has no personal knowledge, is insufficient to overcome the presumption which arises from the denial which is implied in the order of the judge overruling the petition for a change of venue; but, with the unequivocal statement of the judge that the alleged facts on which the belief of defendant is based have no existence, the question of the correctness of the ruling is not left to depend on the presumption which arises under the law in its favor, but is affirmatively established. State v. Hale, 65 Iowa, 575.

1. Jim v. State, 3 Mo. 147; Jefferson County v. Milwaukee County, 20 Wis. 147.

Where the president judge gives the requisite certificate, and returns the cause for trial at a special court, and the parties go to trial without exception, it is not an objection to the jurisdiction of the special court that the judge stated, in the certificate, that in his own opinion he was not interested; and that, on the trial, he was admitted as a witness. Barrington v. Bank of Washington, 14 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 405.

An affidavit to change the place of trial of an action, in which the deponent states that he is informed and believes that the judge is disqualified from hearing or trying the cause for the reason that he is interested in the subject-matter of the suit, is not sufficient; it is too loose and uncertain. Table Mountain, etc., Co. v. Wallers, etc., Co., 4 Nev. 218.

Where the only evidence to show that the judge is interested is an affidavit which is insufficient, the refusal of the judge to grant a change of venue will not be sustained. Lombard v. Hayner, 5 Ill. App. 560.

2. So held where the judge in overruling a motion for change of venue gave as reason that he was not interested in the suit. Table Mountain, etc., Co. v. Wallers, etc., Co., 4 Nev. 218.

3. Bailey v. Kimbrough 37 Mo. 182; Van Rensselaer v. Douglass, 2 Wend.

When Change may be Had. CHANGE OF VENUE. Convenience of Witnesses.

of venue in the same cause shall not be allowed, yet it may be allowed when the judge has been of counsel for the prisoner.<sup>1</sup> Where the judge has been of counsel for one of the parties he may order the change of his own motion.<sup>2</sup>

For Convenience of Witnesses.—On an application to change the place of trial the courts should be governed by the convenience of witnesses, and the determination as to whether the ends of justice will be promoted by such a change.<sup>3</sup> In deciding such motions the courts, in whose discretion the determination largely rests, now look beyond the affidavits of the parties and the advice of their counsel to the pleadings and the issues to be tried; and from the whole case as presented by affidavits and the pleadings determine in which county the trial will accommodate the greatest number of witnesses whose attendance it will be necessary for the parties to secure in the reasonable exercise of care and prudence in preparing for trial.<sup>4</sup>

(N. Y.) 290; State v. Houser, 28 Mo. 233; State v. Gates, 20 Mo. 400.

Where the defendant claims in writing his right to have the venue of the action changed to the county in which he resided when the suit was brought and where the summons was served, it is the duty of the judge to order the change of venue, notwithstanding that the judge of that county had previously been retained as counsel for the plaintiff. State v. McArthur, 13 Wis. 454.

1. State v. Gates, 20 Mo. 400.

2. Bruen v. Bruen, 43 Ill. 408; O'Connell v. Gavett, 7 Col. 40; Lux v. Haggin, 13 Pac. Rep. (Cal.) 654. But, it seems, not for any other reason. Bennett v. Carey, 57 Iowa, 221.

3. Jenkins v. California Stage Co., 22 Cal. 537.

4. King v. Vanderbilt, 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 385. See also Benedict v. Hibbard, 5 Hill (N. Y.), 509; Jordon v. Garrison, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 6; Hinchman v. Butler, 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 462; Sherwood v. Steele, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 295; Hull v. Hull, 1 Hill (N. Y.), 671; Wood v. Bishop, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 414; Austin v. Hinckley, 13 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 576; Lynes v. Eldred, 47 Wis. 426.

In an action for use and occupation the venue will be changed to the county in which the premises are situated, and in which all the defendant's witnesses reside if the plaintiff does not show that he has any in the county in which it is laid. Low v. Hallett, 2 Cal. (N. Y.) 374. And in an action against a bank by a person in another county upon affidavit of the defendant that the cause of action arose at the bank, that the witnesses resided near it and were officers in it, and that its books of account must be used at the trial, which it was inconvenient to transport, etc., the court directed the venue to be changed. Kerr v. Bank, 4 N. J. L. 363.

On a motion to change the place of trial, defendant's affidavit alleged that there were nineteen witnesses residing in another county, all of whom were material. Plaintiff's affidavit named no witnesses residing in the county where the venue was laid, but simply set forth facts tending to show that the defence sought to be established by defendant's witnesses had no existence in fact. Held, that the motion should be granted. Wiggin v. Phelps, 17 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 187.

Where the defendants state that if plaintiffs have more witnesses than they, it can only be to prove certain facts which defendants stipulate and admit; the plaintiffs, if they claim them on the ground of other facts, must state what those other facts are. Carew v. Mechanics & F. Bank, 2 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 148.

And where witnesses reside within one mile of the place where it is sought to have the trial take place, they are not to be disregarded in determining the place of trial because they do not reside in the same county. Mason v. Brown, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 481. So the convenience of plaintiff's witnesses residing out of the State is not to be regarded as ground for denying the defendant's application to change the place of trial. New Jersey Zinc Co. v. Blood, 8 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 147; Bowles v. Rome, etc., R. Co., 38 Hun (N. Y.), 507. But it is no ground for a change that the applicant believes that witnesses in an adjoining State will

But a motion to change the venue will not always be granted on account of the mere preponderance in the number of witnesses.<sup>1</sup> If the plaintiff's witnesses reside in the county in which he has laid the venue, unless there is a great and striking preponderance against him the venue will not be changed.<sup>2</sup> It is not enough that the number is equal.<sup>3</sup> The facts and circumstances connected with the investigation have a more controlling influence than the mere number of witnesses,<sup>4</sup> and so the affidavits should state what is expected to be proved by the witnesses that the court may judge of their materiality; otherwise they will be slightly regarded.<sup>5</sup> In determining such motions the dispatch or oppressive delay of suits are also considerations not to be wholly overlooked; so if it appears that in the county where the greatest number of witnesses are shown to reside, the cause, in the ordinary course of things, will not be likely to be reached and tried until after several circuits have been held, and that the greatest convenience will not be secured by such change, the motion will be denied.<sup>6</sup>

But in a criminal case the place of trial cannot be changed for the convenience of witnesses or parties.<sup>7</sup>

Because an Impartial Trial Cannot be Had.—The granting of a change of venue on account of the prejudice of the citizens of a certain county against a party to the action is generally discretionary with the court, and subject to revision only in cases of abuse.<sup>8</sup> The allegation that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had must be clearly established, or the venue will not be changed. The voluntarily attend if such change is had, no reason being given for the belief. Shirley v. Nodine, 1 Idaho N. S. 696.

1. Wallace v. Bond, 4 Hill (N. Y.), 536; Porter v. Mann, 4 Hill (N. Y.), 540; Weed v. Halloday, 1 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 73; Jordon v. Garrison, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 6; Goodrich v. Vanderbilt, 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 467; Benedict v. Hibbard, 5 Hill (N. Y.), 509; Hanchett v. Finch, 49 Cal. 192.

2. Duryee v. Orcott, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 248; Demarest v. Hurd, 46 N. J. L. 471.

Twenty-five witnesses on one side against ten witnesses on the other. Held, not such a preponderance of inconvenience as to induce the court to bring back the venue from the place where the cause of action (if any) arose. Blackman v. Bainton, 15 C. B. N. S. 432.

3. Wood v. Bishop, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 414.

4. Cook v. Pendergast, 61 Cal. 72.

The mere circumstance of a plaintiff being an officer in the navy, and hoping to be shortly appointed to a ship, which would disable him from attending to give evidence at the trial if the venue was changed, is sufficient to induce the court to retain the venue where laid, although it is sworn that all the defendant's witnesses reside at the place to which it is sought to change it. Channon v. Parkhouse, 13 C. B. N. S. 341.

In an action for the breach of a contract made at Liverpool, where the defendant resided, and where the contract was to be performed, the venue was laid in London. A judge on the defendant's application ordered the venue to be changed to Liverpool, upon an affidavit that all his witnesses, thirteen in number, resided there, and that a cross-action arising out of the contract was pending there, notwithstanding that the plaintiff's affidavit stated that all but one of his witnesses, twenty-eight in number, resided in London. The court refused to interfere. Levy or Levi v. Rice or Wright, 5 L. R. C. P. 119.

5. Cook v. Pendergast, 61 Cal. 72, citing People v. Hays, 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 249; Am. Ex. Bank v. Hill, 22 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 29; Price v. Ft. Edw. Waterworks, 16 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 51.

6. King v. Vanderbilt, 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 385; Goodrich v. Vanderbilt, 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 467.

7. People v. Harris, 4 Denio (N. Y.), 150.

8. Watson v. Whitney, 23 Cal. 375; Hubbard v. State, 7 Ind. 160; Weeks v. State, 31 Miss. 490.

court will not in general change it on a suggestion that an impartial trial cannot be had in the county in which the suit is instituted or the indictment has been found, unless the suggestion is accompanied by an affidavit stating the grounds of belief and setting forth the facts and circumstances so that the court may judge whether the application is well founded.<sup>1</sup> And if it appears that a fair trial cannot be had, the court will order the venue changed, even when laid in the proper county.<sup>2</sup>

1. People v. Bodine, 7 Hill (N. Y.), 147; People v. McCauley, 1 Cal. 379; People v. Mahoney, 18 Cal. 180; Wormeley v. Commonwealth, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 658; State v. Windsor, 5 Harr. (Del.) 512; McNealy v. State, 17 Fla. 198; Lewis v. Fire Ins. Co., 2 Cranch (U. S.), 500; Frank v. Avery, 21 Wis. 168; Kounsalaer v. Clarke, 4 Cranch (U. S. C. C.), 98; Cocheco Railroad v. Farrington, 26 N. H. 428; Dean v. White, 5 Iowa, 266; State v. Burris, 4 Harr. (Del.) 582; Cleveland v. Ward, 11 Ohio, 128; Irvin v. State, 19 Fla. 872; State v. Furbeck, 29 Kan. 532.

But in Rhode Island it is held that proofs of such prejudice being naturally vague, great positiveness or definiteness in them cannot be required; and that it is sufficient for a petition to allege that, "by reason of local prejudice and the feeling entertained by the people of said county, the petitioner cannot have a full, fair, and impartial trial in said county," without setting forth the particular facts going to show the existence of the prejudice or feeling complained of. Taylor v. Gardiner, 11 R. I. 182.

2. Murray v. New Jersey R. Co., 23 N. J. L. 63; Lee v. Evalul, 1 N. J. L. 283; Ott v. McHenry, 2 W. Va. 73; People v. Harris, 4 Denio (N. Y.), 150; People v. Long Island R. Co., 4 Park. Cr. (N. Y.) 602. Compare McNealy v. State, 17 Fla. 198; Hilliard v. Beattie, 58 N. H. 112; Healy v. Dettra, 8 Atlantic Rep. (Pa.) 622; Lady Franklin Min. Co. v. Delaney, 12 Pac. Rep. (N. Mex.) 628.

An affidavit that one party has undue local influence and that an odium attaches to the defendant on account of local prejudices, is sufficient to call for a change of venue. Shaw v. Hamilton, 10 Ind. 182.

The venue will also be changed on the ground of excitement, where two ineffectual attempts have been made to obtain a verdict. Messenger v. Holmes, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 203.

So it is sufficient ground to remove a cause if it appears by affidavit that the adverse party has considerable influence, which he will probably exert, and that many persons hold freeholds under him, and may be turned off at pleasure. Smith v. Hortler, 1 Law Repos. (N. Car.) 518.

And where one hundred citizens united in employing counsel to prosecute the defendant, held, that this was a sufficient case to entitle the person to a change of venue. People v. Lee, 5 Cal. 353.

Where a prisoner indicted for murder showed that the sheriff of the county was against him, and wrote a letter calculated to prejudice him, which was published in a newspaper printed and circulated in the prisoner's county, and great excitement was shown to exist, and ten months after the homicide threats of lynching him were made by a mob, the most of whom lived in or near the county seat, where he would have to be tried; held, good cause was shown for a change of venue. State v. Greer, 22 W. Va. 800.

An application for a change of venue was based upon the excitement and prejudice against the defendant. It was supported by the affidavits of three citizens, of whom two were the defendant's attorneys, and there were no counter affidavits. The application was refused, and this decision was reversed upon appeal. State v. Mooney, 10 Iowa, 506.

In the trial upon an indictment for rape, and assault with intent to commit, the trial coming on a few weeks after the charge was made, the accused filed affidavits of leading citizens showing a strong bias and prejudice against him, so that a fair trial could not be had in that county, and the affidavits filed on behalf of the State did not deny these statements in clear and direct language. Held, that a change of venue should have been granted. Richmond v. State, 16 Neb. 388.

But it is not sufficient to authorize a change of venue that the community are prejudiced against the cause of the applicant; the prejudice must be against himself. Charlotte v. Chouteau, 33 Mo. 194.

The plaintiff corporation commenced a suit against the defendant for assessments upon shares, and a change of venue was moved for, on the ground that a fair and impartial trial could not be had in the county where the venue was laid. It was shown in evidence that the plaintiff's road passed through four of the thirteen towns in the county, and that in those towns the subject-matter of the suit had been very generally discussed; and that of the 548 stockholders residing in the county all but 23 were residents of the four towns. It did not appear that the subject of the suit had been much discussed in the other nine towns, or that opinions had been formed or expressed in these towns. Upon these facts shown the motion was denied. Cocheco Railroad v. Farrington, 26 N. H. 428.

The court will not change the venue in a turnpike cause on an affidavit stating the disposition of the county to be unfavorable to turnpikes. President, etc., Turnpike Road v. Wilson, 3 Cai. (N. Y.) 127.

Nor will the court change the venue on an affidavit saying that there is a party spirit in the county against the person applying. Zobieski v. Bauder, 1 Caines (N. Y.), 488.

After two jury trials without a verdict a change of venue will not be granted, unless it clearly appears that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had in the county of defendant's residence. Sommercamp v. Catlow, 1 Idaho (N. S.), 716.

In support of an application to enter a suggestion to try a cause in Nottinghamshire instead of Lincolnshire, upon the ground that the lessor of the plaintiff could not have a fair and impartial trial in the former county, an affidavit was produced alleging that two attorneys, whom the lessor of the plaintiff had successively employed to conduct the cause, had abandoned his interest, the one on account of a bribe paid to him by the defendant, the other on account of an intimacy which existed between him and the defendant, and also that the defendant was a person of large property and possessing great influence in the county, and that he had said that he would "do as he liked at Lincoln," more especially as the lessor of the plaintiff was a poor man. Held, insufficient. Doe d. Hickman v. Hickman, 9 D. P. C. 364.

Nor is it a ground for changing the venue, in an action for a libel contained in a local newspaper, that the defendant, the proprietor, possesses much influence in the county in which the venue is laid, and has, since the commencement of the action, evinced a disposition to exercise it to the prejudice of the plaintiff. Walker v. Brogden, 17 C. B. (N. S.) 571.

Nor the fact that the people of the county where the action is to be tried are generally interested in the question involved. Such interest does not amount to a disqualification. Conley v. Chedie, 7 Neb. 336.

On an application for a change of venue it appeared that the same was sworn to by a nominal party to the suit; that the prejudice of the inhabitants was alleged to be against him alone; and also that a number of counter affidavits were filed, but they were not preserved in the record. Held, that under these facts the supreme court could not say that error was committed in overruling the application. Buchan v. Broadwell, 88 Mo. 31.

Suit was brought for damages for fraudulent representations made by defendants in the sale of oats of a particular kind, which were extensively raised and sold by the farmers of the county to which the suit had been removed, who had combined into associations for that purpose. Plaintiff moved for a change of venue, filing affidavits of the above facts, and also that one of the defendants was a very influential man in the county; that the farmers were considerably excited over the matter, and that he was apprehensive that a fair trial could not be obtained there, etc. Numerous counter affidavits were filed. The motion for removal was refused. Held, that the court had not abused its discretion in so doing. Ross v. Hanchett, 52 Wis. 491.

An affidavit in support of a motion for a change of venue on the ground of undue influence of four attorneys retained by plaintiff is not sufficient, where two of the attorneys, subsequently to the motion, but before ruling upon it, have withdrawn their appearance for plaintiff. Anderson v. Leverick, 30 N. W. Rep. (Iowa) 39.

Editorials in a county newspaper are not competent to establish such a prejudice as would prevent an impartial trial. State v. Barton, 8 Mo. App. 15.

On an application for a change of venue, some six or seven newspaper articles were offered containing statements of facts similar to those disclosed by the State on the trial, and denouncing in strong and severe language the defendant; also the affidavit of a single witness, that he was one of the party engaged in the search for defendant immediately after the shooting, and that he heard bitter and threatening language in every direction against him. Opposed were the affidavits of twenty-one citizens from different parts of the county denying any general prejudice or any feeling which would prevent a fair trial. It was not

Where an application is made for a change of venue in a criminal case, on account of local prejudice, it is proper for the judge to receive the sworn statements of reputable citizens to aid him in the exercise of the discretion confided in him by the law;<sup>1</sup> or the court may deny the motion, until it can be shown by an examination of a sufficient number of jurors whether a fair and impartial trial can be obtained or not;<sup>2</sup> and the fact that a fair jury is ob-shown that there was any difficulty in obtaining a jury, or any reason to suspect the candor and fairness of the jurors impanelled. Held, that the judgment ought not to be set aside because of the refusal to grant a change of venue. State v. Rhea, 25 Kan. 576.

Nor is the fact that some few people have contributed to employ an attorney to prosecute the moving party. People v. Graham, 21 Cal. 261.

There is no error in refusing one accused of murder a change of venue, because of prejudice and excitement against him, which was manifested only at the time of his arrest, and confined to the relatives and friends of the deceased. Honeycut v. State, 8 Baxt. (Tenn.) 371.

A refusal to grant a change of venue held no abuse of discretion when, although mob violence had been threatened at the time of the first trial, public excitement had subsided at the time of the trial in question. Poe v. State, 10 Lea (Tenn.), 673.

And the fact that thirty or forty persons have, upon solicitation, contributed small sums to employ a lawyer to assist the prosecuting attorney does not show such a state of feeling in the whole county as to preclude the obtaining of an impartial jury or to interfere with the impartial administration of the laws. People v. Graham, 21 Cal. 261. See also State v. Williams, 2 McCord (S. Car.), 383.

The defendant alleged in his affidavit that he could not have a fair and impartial trial because of the excitement and prejudice against him in the county. In opposition to the motion, the affidavits of sixty citizens, residing in different parts of the county, were presented, averring that they had a general acquaintance with the citizens of their respective neighborhoods, that they had heard of no excitement or prejudice against the prisoner, and that from their knowledge and acquaintance with the citizens of the county the prisoner could have a fair and impartial trial of his case at that term of the court. Held, that the question was one within the sound discretion of the court, and that there was no abuse of such discretion in overruling the motion. Bissot v. State, 53 Ind. 408.

Accused and three supporting affiants swore positively to an influential combination against him, etc. The court below, despite objection by the accused, examined his affiants, and they disclosed their ignorance of such a combination, but concurred in stating that such a prejudice existed against the accused that he could not get a fair trial in the county. Held, that the application was correctly overruled, though no countervailing witnesses were called to disprove the alleged combination. Dupree v. State, 2 Tex. App. 613.

Ten witnesses testified that there was strong prejudice and excitement against defendant in their part of the county, and ten others testified that there was no excitement in their section; but none said that they did not think defendant would get a fair trial. Held, that a motion for a change of venue was properly overruled. State v. Brownfield, 83 Mo. 448.

The failure to get a jury on a particular day is not such a confirmation of the affidavit of the defendant, alleging that he was the victim of a general prejudice in the county, as to make it error in the court to refuse a change of venue when again requested. People v. Mahoney, 18 Cal. 180.

Upon an application for a change of venue in a murder case, on account of the excitement and prejudice in the county, the full and decisive affidavits of three disinterested witnesses make out a strong prima facie case, only to be overcome by very strong negative testimony. State v. Nash, 7 Iowa, 347.

As a general rule, the state of public excitement which entitles an accused to a change of venue is such a state only as will deter a jury from rendering an impartial verdict. State v. Ferd, 37 La. An. 443.

1. Anderson v. State, 28 Ind. 22; Boswell v. Flockheart, 8 Leigh (Va.), 364; Porter v. State, 3 Lea (Tenn.), 496; Hyde v. Harkness, 1 Idaho (N. S.) 601.

2. State v. Gray, 8 West Coast Rep. (Nev.) 72.

tained is an answer to the affidavit.<sup>1</sup> There is no fixed rule defining what shall or shall not be considered as proof of the fact that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had. It has been held that the venue may be changed, though there has been no actual experiment made by way of trying the cause or even impanelling a jury in the county where the venue is laid;<sup>2</sup> also, that there is no error in postponing the consideration of a motion to so change the venue until an attempt is made to impanel a jury.<sup>3</sup>

After there has been an order of a court, having original jurisdiction of a criminal cause, changing the venue in accordance with constitutional and statutory provisions, on the ground that an impartial trial cannot be had in the county in which the crime was committed, it cannot be attacked collaterally in the court in which the trial is had.<sup>4</sup>

In this class of cases the court in ordering the removal is not precluded from acting in part on personal knowledge possessed by it.<sup>5</sup>

Because of Non-residence of Parties.—The place of trial is sometimes changed on account of the residence of the defendant;<sup>6</sup> and

1. Wright v. Commonwealth, 33 Gratt. (Va.) 880.

2. People v. Webb, 1 Hill (N. Y.), 179. Compare Messenger v. Holmes, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 203; Patchin v. Sands, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 570; Hunter v. State, 43 Ga. 483.

3. People v. Plummer, 9 Cal. 298; Hunter v. State, 43 Ga. 483. See also Ward v. Moorey, 1 Wash. Ter. 122.

4. Otter Creek Block Coal Co. v. Raney, 34 Ind. 329.

5. Giese v. Schlutz, 60 Wis. 449.

6. Spain v. Winter, 1 Miss. 152; Paige v. Carroll, 61 Cal. 215.

But in an action where the people of the State are plaintiffs, the place of trial should not be changed on account of the residence of defendant. People v. Cook, 6 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 448.

A defendant who objects that the suit was brought in the wrong county must show, by proof of facts so notorious that the plaintiff could readily discover them, that his residence was not in the county where he was sued, and that it was in another county where the suit was instituted. 24 Tex. 615.

Where, in an action against a railroad company, commenced in the county of Henry, the defendants moved for a change of venue to the county of Des Moines, on the ground that they were a body corporate, organized under the laws of the State of Iowa, and had their principal place and officers for transacting their business at Burlington, Des Moines county, and so had at the time the suit was commenced; that the original notice was served on defendants, in said Des Moines county, by service thereof by the sheriff of said county, on J. G. T., treasurer of defendants, at his office in Burlington, and on the track-master in Henry county, and in no other way or manner; and that the present suit was about a matter growing out of, and connected with, the said office; which motion was sustained, and the venue changed accordingly. Richardson v. Burlington, etc., R. Co., 8 Iowa, 260. But a foreign corporation cannot obtain a change of venue on the ground of residence, for it has no residence in any county in the State. Thomas v. Placerville G. Q. M. Co., 3 W. C. Rep. (Cal.) 777.

Where the place of trial of an action begun in Rockland county against the sheriff of that county and a codefendant, for acts done by the sheriff in his official character, was changed on application of the co-defendant, acquiesced in by the sheriff, to New York, and the case was tried there twice; yet it being afterwards shown that the co-defendant had died insolvent; that the cause of action arose in Rockland county; that both parties and a large number of witnesses reside there,—held, that the action, on application of defendant, should be retransferred to Rockland county, as well for the public interests as for the private interests of the parties. Abrahams v. Bensen, 60 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 208.

where the defendant asks for a change on this ground, if the plaintiff wishes to have the place of suit retained for the accommodation of witnesses, he should present this claim in opposition to the motion.<sup>1</sup> It is not an ex parte question, and the plaintiff has a right to be heard thereon.<sup>2</sup>

4. Who May Apply For.—An application for a change of venue cannot be made by any one who is not a party to the record; nor in civil cases by part among a number of defendants.<sup>4</sup> But merely formal parties defendant or those having no real interest in the subject-matter of the suit should not be allowed to defeat such an application made by the other defendants.<sup>5</sup>

And where one of the parties to a suit is served with process,

1. Pierson v. McCahill, 22 Cal. 127.

2. Turner v. Maddox, 6 Iowa. 489.

3. Crowell v. Maughs, 7 Ill. 419; Sherry v. Denn, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 542; Squires v. Chillicothe, 89 Mo. 226.

4. Legg v. Dorsheim et al., 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 700; Sailly v. Hutton, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 508; Rupp v. Swinesford, 40 Wis. 28; Jacubeck v. Hewitt, 61 Wis. 96; Remington S. M. Co. v. Cole, 62 Cal. 311; Pieper v. Land Co., 56 Cal. 173; Welling v. Sweet, 1 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 156; Hanna v. People, 86 Ill. 243; Whitaker v. Reynolds, 14 Bush. (Ky.) 616. Compare Krutz v. Howard, 70 Ind. 174, where it is held that one or more co parties to an action may take a change of venue, and thus change the venue as to his co parties as well as himself.

In an action against several defendants, originating in Hickory county, some of the defendants applied for a change of venue, and the court ordered a change, as to them, to Pettis county. The court in Pettis county afterward rendered judgment against one of the defendants who had not joined in the application for the change, and who never appeared to the action, and was served only by publication, and his land was sold to satisfy the judgment. In a suit brought by this party to set aside the sheriff's deed, these facts, among others, appeared in the petition. Held, that the petition was bad on demurrer; that the court in Pettis county obtained no jurisdiction of this party; that the judgment was therefore a nullity as against him, and the deed was void, and so there was nothing upon which a court of equity could act. Holland v. Johnson, 80 Mo. 34.

A motion to change the venue cannot be made by one of three defendants, without the consent of the other two, notwithstanding they have suffered judgment by default, and colluded with the plaintiff to withhold their consent. Anon, 2 Chit. 417.

But the requisition that all parties shall join in an application for a change of venue extends only to such of them as have a trial pending; defendants in default need not join in the application; the whole cause will be removed and final judgment will be rendered for or against all in the court to which the cause is taken. Hitt v. Allen, 13 Ill. 592.

In New York there is an exception to the general rule in a joint action against the maker and indorser of a promissory note. Either defendant in such a case may demand and have the place of trial changed to the proper county as to himself without the other's consent, the same as if he had been separately sued. Sherman v. Gregory, 42 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 481.

Where all the plaintiffs or all the defendants join in applying for a change of venue on account of prejudice of the judge, an affidavit of prejudice by one of them is sufficient. Walcott v. Walcott, 32 Wis. 63.

Where all of several defendants did not join in an application for a change of venue, the plaintiff cannot on appeal object that the order of removal was erroneous, because the defendant, not joining in the application, was not notified of it. Wilson v. Richards, 28 Minn. 337.

5. Walcott v. Walcott, 32 Wis. 63.

By the original complaint in an action in the county of Santa Barbara it appeared that the defendant D. (a resident of San Francisco) was the only defendant against whom the facts alleged would justify judgment. Held, that he was entitled to a change in the place of trial, and that his right thereto could not be taken away by statements in an amended complaint (filed after his demand), setting up a cause of action against the other defendant. Buell v. Dodge, 57 Cal. 645.

and the other not, the one served may move for a change of venue, and the motion may be granted as to him, though the other may have been served meanwhile.<sup>1</sup> Nor does the denial of a motion for change of venue, made by one defendant, prejudice the right of another defendant, subsequently served with summons, to make a similar motion.<sup>2</sup>

But in criminal cases where parties are jointly indicted, the court has power to order a change of venue as to either of the defendants, upon his motion alone.<sup>3</sup> Such motion and order necessarily involve and include a motion and order for a separate trial of the party making the motion, and have all the force and effect of a motion and order for both purposes.<sup>4</sup>

A corporation is entitled to a change of venue equally with individuals; and where a corporation defendant moves for a change of venue, the principal affidavit therefor may be made by any officer or agent of the corporation sufficiently acquainted with the facts to make it conscientiously,<sup>5</sup> but an affidavit which does not show the official character of the affiant, except by an unverified recitation thereof in the body of the affidavit, is not sufficient.<sup>6</sup>

An infant may properly make the suggestion and affidavit for removal.<sup>7</sup>

5. When the Motion May be Made.—A motion for a change of venue must be made at the earliest opportunity, and not put off until just before the cause is to be called for trial; and if a party fails to do so, his rights will be barred.<sup>8</sup> He cannot wait until a

1. Brodhead v. Stanton, 2 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 278. See also Eldred v. Becker, 60 Wis. 48.

2. New Jersey Zinc Co. v. Blood, 8 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 147.

3. Brown v. State, 18 Ohio St. 497; State v. Martin, 2 Ire. (N. C.) 101.

4. Brown v. State, 18 Ohio St. 297; State v. Netherford, 25 Mo. 439.

But in New York, after a cause had been removed by certiorari from the court of oyer and terminer to the supreme court, and while it was pending there, it appearing that a fair trial could not be had in the county where the indictment was found, the court at a special term ordered the trial to be had in another county. Several were jointly indicted. The objection to the trial in the county where the indictment was found justified the removal as to one defendant, and it was decreed as to all, though the defendants were entitled to a separate trial. People v. Baker, 3 Park. (N. Y.) Cr. 181.

5. Commercial Ins. Co. v. Mehlman, 48 Ill. 313; McGovern v. Keokuk Lumber Co., 61 Iowa, 265.

Where the moving party is a railroad company, the affidavit of an agent whose duty it is to investigate the facts connected with all claims against the company, and who is conversant therewith, is sufficient. Jones v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 36 Iowa, 68.

In an action against a corporation and its directors, a defendant director, who was also the secretary of the corporation, made an affidavit of the prejudice of the judge, and asked for a change of venue, stating in the affidavit that he made it, and asked the change, for himself and in behalf and at the request of all the other defendants; and they all by their attorney moved for the change. Held, sufficient. State v. Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce, 47 Wis. 670.

6. McGovern v. Keokuk Lumber Co., 61 Iowa, 265.

7. So held where, in an action by a minor brought in the name of the State, the infant, who was upwards of fifteen years of age, made affidavit for the removal of his cause to another court. Albert v. State, 7 Atlantic Rep. (Md.) 697.

8. Hudson v. Hanson, 75 Ill. 198; Toledo, etc., R. Co. v. Maxfield, 72 Ill. 95; Peoria, etc., R. Co. v. Mitchell, 74 Ill. 394; Haskings v. People, 14 Ill. App. 198; Quinn v. Van Pelt, 12 Hun (N. Y.), 633; Hoffman v. Sparling, 12 Hun (N. Y.), 83; Shackleford v. State, 79 Ala. 26; Cook v. Garza, 9 Tex. 358; Ringgenberg cause is on trial and until the court has intimated an opinion on the merits of the case from the evidence, and then obtain a change of venue;<sup>1</sup> or until the parties have signified their readiness for

v. Hartman, 102 Ind. 537; Waldron v. St. Paul, 33 Minn. 87.

A petition for a change of venue contained the statement that the defendant did not know of the commencement of the suit in time to have made the application at the first term of the court, but the whole record conclusively showed that the reason he did not know of it was because he had absconded from the State to avoid legal process in relation to the subject-matter of the suit. Held, that this did not obviate the necessity of his showing that the cause for the change asked for had arisen or come to his knowledge subsequently to that term. White v. Muttland, 71 Ill. 250.

An affidavit for change of venue on the ground of prejudiced public sentiment, arising from adverse newspaper articles, made after the first term, alleged as an excuse for not applying earlier that the applicant was not aware of the extent of the prejudice until a recent date named, and that since the publication of the articles referred to applicant had avoided as far as possible all intercourse with people. Held, that denial of the application was not error under a statute forbidding change of venue after the first term, "unless the cause shall have arisen subsequent to such term." Roberts v. People, 13 Pac. Rep. (Cal.) 630.

Where the issue was joined Sept. 30, 1873, and the motion was not made until Aug. 8, 1874, the case having been placed on the calendar and noticed in the county where it was brought, and two circuits having been held in the county to which removal was sought in the mean time, held, that the motion was too late. Spratt v. Huntington, 4 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 551.

Where, at the June term of court, a petition was filed for a change of venue, and notice given of an application to be made at that term, but no motion was made until the next term; held, that the fact that the court had entered an order that all causes on the common-law docket should stand continued for all purposes except defaults, assessment of damages, motions, and the settling of issues, was no excuse for not making and pressing the motion at the June term, and therefore the motion was properly denied. Hudson v. Hanson, 75 Ill. 198.

A plaintiff who asks for a change of venue because of the alleged undue influence of the defendant over the mind of the trial judge must make his application therefor as soon as practicable after receiving information of the undue influence complained of. Whether the application is so made within proper time, is a question resting in the sound discretion of the trial judge. Held, that he did not err in refusing an application made at the next term after that at which the information was received. State v. Matlock, 82 Mo. 455.

But where the cause could not have been tried at the first term on account of an epidemic, the motion for a change of venue may be made after the first term. Lynch v. Mosher, 4 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 86.

Although a suit has been pending for several terms, yet if a party applies for the removal the first term he becomes interested, and makes out a sufficient cause in other respects, he is entitled to a removal. Knowes v. Baker, 21 Law Repos. (N. Car.) 98. So a party who enters a voluntary appearance to an action after the day set for trial of the cause is not subject to a rule of court requiring application for a change of venue to be made before that day. Truitt v. Truitt, 38 Ind. 16.

The objection that an application for a change of venue was not seasonably made was supported only by the statement of the applicant's former attorney, to the effect that, some months before, he had been requested and had refused to apply for a change of venue. Held, that this statement could not be received in opposition to the sworn allegations of the petition; and that, the petition showing ground sufficient to support the application, the petition must be granted. Woodhull v. Kelly, 10 Ill. App. 455.

The regular judge of the district court having been of counsel in several cases, and therefore disqualified to sit in the trial thereof, on motion of a member of the bar a pro tem. judge was elected. Neither counsel nor client in this case appears by the record to have participated in such election, or to have been present or consented thereto. Held, that an application for a change of the place of trial to another district was not too late when made at the time the case was called for trial by the pro tem. judge. Hegever v. Kiff, 31 Kan. 636.

1. Richards v. Green, 78 Ill. 525; Ickes v. Kelley, 21 Ind. 72; McKenney v. Hop-

trial, and the jury are being called into court, at least without sufficient excuse for the delay;<sup>1</sup> or after a trial before a referee and report made by him.<sup>2</sup> In South Carolina it is held that the application must be made before the case is reached on the docket.<sup>3</sup>

6. The Affidavit.—In applying for a change of venue, the applicant should state the facts in his affidavit in such a manner as to enable the court to judge of the propriety of granting it;<sup>4</sup> hence an affidavit for a change of venue for prejudice of the judge should state the causes of prejudice as well as the fact.<sup>5</sup> When the venue is sought to be changed for the convenience of witnesses, it is not sufficient for the defendant to state that material witnesses reside in the county to which he wishes to remove it; he ought to add kings, 20 Iowa, 495; Lyne v. Hoyle, 2 Greene (Iowa), 135; Ten Broeck v. Middlebrook, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 205; Hubbard v. National Ins. Co., 11 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 149; Allis v. Meadow Springs Distilling Co., 29 N. W. Rep. (Wis.) 543.

But under the Iowa code,—providing for a new trial on grounds discovered after the term, etc.,—pending an application for a new trial upon the ground of newly discovered evidence, made subsequent to the trial term, a change of venue may be granted upon a proper showing therefor. Gibbs v. Buckingham, 48 Iowa, 96.

1. Fugate v. Carter, 6 Mo. 269; Witz v. Spencer, 51 Ind. 253. At least not after the verdicts upon the issue. Ex parte Cox, 16 Mo. 742. Compare Hunnell v. State, 86 Ind. 431.

2. Cairns v. O'Brien, 40 Wis. 469; Woodrow v. Younger, 61 Mo. 395; Duffy v. Hickey, 32 N. W. Rep. (Wis.) 54.

3. Blakely v. Frazier, 11 S. Car. 122.

At What Stage of the Pleadings.—A motion to change the venue on grounds disclosed by the complaint must be made before or at the time of filing demurrer or answering to the merits. Pearkes v. Freer, 9 Cal. 642; Jones v. Frost, 38 Cal. 245; Howell v. Stetefeldt Furnace Co., 10 Pac. Rep. (Cal.) 390. In Illinois the application should be made at the first term after appearance, whether issue to the contrary is formed or not; and if it is deemed sufficient, and the pleadings are not made up, the cause should stand without an order for the change till such issue be formed. Gilsort v. Powers, 16 Ill. 355. If made on the common affidavit, it must be before the plea is filed; if a special ground is laid, the venue may be changed after plea. Wildes v. Mairs, 6 N. J. L. 320. Or if it appears that the defendant would otherwise be exposed to unnecessary difficulty, or the fair administration of justice would be interrupted.

Bell v. Morris C. & B. Co., 15 N. J. L. 63. But if he moves after plea, and the effect of his delay is to throw the plaintiff over a circuit, the motion will be denied with costs. Anon., 18 Wend. (N. Y.) 514. In New York it is held that the defendant may move to change the venue after issue joined, and at any time, where there has been no loss of trial and no delay will be produced. Kent v. Dodge, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 447; Wistar v. Johnson, 1 N. J. L. 260; Hubbard v. Nat'l Ins. Co., 11 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 149. The motion must, if the intervention of a special term will allow, be made in such season that, if it is denied, the plaintiff will not lose a trial in the county where the venue is laid; if made at a later term it will be denied for that cause. Moreland v. Sanford, 1 Denio (N. Y.), 660. The defendant may apply to the court for an order directing the place of trial to be changed to the proper county at any time before the plaintiff's time for serving an amended complaint has expired, for the plaintiff may make the change by amending. Conroe v. National Protec. Ins. Co., 10 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 403.

4. Sloan v. Smith, 3 Cal. 410; Tooms v. Randell, 3 Cal. 468; Kerr v. Whitaker, 3 N. J. L. 514.

5. Ex parte Curtis, 3 Minn. 294; De Walt v. Hartzell, 7 Col. 601.

An affidavit for a change of venue, averring that "full knowledge" of the fact that the presiding judge was prejudiced, etc., did not come to the affiant until the day the petition was presented, held to be insufficient. McCann v. People, 88 Ill. 103.

Upon application for change of venue based upon the prejudice of the judge, while facts are to be stated, they are not to be set out beyond what are necessary where they involve the judicial acts or character of the judge. Hughes v. People, 5 Col. 436.

that evidence will be given of some material fact happening there.<sup>1</sup> It should also state the town, village, or particular place of residence, in addition to the county.<sup>2</sup> The oath to advice and belief as to necessity of witnesses should be stated in each case after naming witnesses.<sup>3</sup> It need not state the cause of action;<sup>4</sup> but it must be positive that the cause of action arose in another county; if belief is sworn to, it is not sufficient.<sup>5</sup> When the venue is sought to be changed in an action of tort, and especially for a newspaper libel, because the cause of action arose in another county, it must state not only that the cause of action arose there, but that it did not arise elsewhere;<sup>6</sup> when on the ground that deponent believes justice cannot be done in the county where it is pending, it must state the reasons of such belief or it will be insufficient.<sup>7</sup>

The facts sworn to in the affidavit should be stated positively, and not argumentatively<sup>8</sup> or by way of belief.<sup>9</sup> It need not be sworn to by the party himself.<sup>10</sup>

Where the motion is overruled because of the insufficiency of the affidavits supporting it, and the party is granted leave to amend the affidavits, he may properly do so by substituting new ones in their stead.<sup>11</sup>

If a party is unable to obtain affidavits from residents of a county, he may state to whom he applied for the same, the reasons given by each for refusing, and that he was unable to procure affidavits in support of his motion because of the refusal of the citizens to give the same.<sup>12</sup>

7. Effect of Change.—On the Jurisdiction.—An order of a court changing the venue of a cause removes it from the jurisdiction of that court.<sup>13</sup> So an agreement to change the venue gives the court

1. Gourley v. Shoemaker, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) Cas. 392.

It is not enough for the party to say he expects to prove "by some of them" such a fact, and "by some of them" such another fact. Price v. Ft. Edward Water-works Co., 16 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 51.

But an affidavit which does not show wherein the witnesses are material, is enough if there is no affidavit of witnesses on the other side. People v. Hays, 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 248.

2. Westbrook v. Merritt, 1 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 195; Cook v. Finch, 2 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 89; Van Auken v. Stewart, 2 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 181.

3. Mills v. Adsitt, 2 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 83.

4. Baker v. Sleight, 2 Caines (N. Y.), 46.

5. Franklin v. Underhill, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 374.

6. Tillinghast v. King, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 591.

7. State v. Twitty, 2 Hawks. (N. C.) 248; State v. Seaborn, 4 Dev. L. (N. C.) 305.

8. Manning v. Downing, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 453.

9. Territory v. Kelly, 2 N. Mex. 292.

10. Ellsworth v. Henshall, 4 Greene (Iowa), 417; Nicholl v. Nicholl, 66 Cal. 36. Compare Huthsig v. Maus, 36 Mo. 101; McCauley v. People, 88 Ill. 578. In Heshion v. Pressley, 80 Ind. 490, it is held that an application for change of venue on account of the prejudice of the judge must be made on the affidavit of the party to the suit, but for any other cause may be made on the affidavit of any person.

11. Winet v. Berryhill, 55 Iowa, 411.

12. Simmerman v. State, 16 Neb. 615.

13. Frazier v. Fortenberry, 4 Ark. 162; Campbell v. Thompson, 4 Greene (Iowa), 415; Allis v. Meadow Springs Distilling Co., 29 N. W. Rep. 543. And an order of the court to which it is transferred to remit the papers, that they may be properly authenticated, does not restore jurisdiction to the original court. Frazier v. Fortenberry, 4 Ark. 162. But in Indiana, when the court grants an order for a to which the change is made jurisdiction.<sup>1</sup>

On a change of venue, the clerk should send a transcript of the record, proceedings, and original papers in the cause, authenticated by his official seal, to the court to which the venue is removed; and without such authentication of the transcript, the court to which it is sent cannot take jurisdiction.<sup>2</sup>

In a real action, the court of that county where the lands sued for lie, has jurisdiction over the subject-matter; and it is competent for the parties, after change of venue has been ordered, by consent to waive process, come into court, and give jurisdiction over their persons.<sup>3</sup>

In criminal cases, where there are several joint defendants, no jurisdiction over defendants not applying for a change is acquired in the new county, and they should be tried where indicted.<sup>4</sup>

If a defendant charged with a crime, on his own motion procures a change of venue to another county, and submits to a trial in the court to which the cause is sent, without objecting to the jurisdiction of the court trying him, or of the court to award a change of venue, this is a waiver of all objection to the jurisdiction of the court.<sup>5</sup> change, it does not divest it of jurisdiction until certain expenses are paid; and if not paid, it may be reinstated on the docket and disposed of by the court making the order. Buchanan v. Port, 5 Ind. 264.

But the court having once made an order changing the jurisdiction does not thereupon lose all jurisdiction over the cause, if the same has not been removed; and the court after making an order for a change in the place of trial, may, at the same term, and before the papers are transmitted, vacate such order, and direct the cause to be sent to a different county from that first named. Servatius v. Pickel, 30 Wis. 507; People v. Zane, 105 Ill. 662; Atlantic, etc., Coal Co. v. Maryland Coal Co., 64 Md. 302.

Where a change of venue is granted upon payment of costs, if the change has not been perfected at the next term of court, the court may then proceed to trial. Gower v. Howe, 20 Ind. 396.

C. and S. being jointly indicted in Panola county for murder, the venue was changed to Shelby county on the application of S. Pending the joint indictment in Shelby county, a separate indictment for the same offence was preferred by the grand jury of Panola county against C. alone, at the trial of which C. pleaded to the jurisdiction. Held, the plea was properly overruled. Cock v. State, 8 Tex. App. 659.

1. Judah v. Vincennes University, 23 Ind. 273. And the court to which the change has been made in a criminal case cannot inquire into the regularity of the order making such change, and of its own notion, without objection by the prisoner, refuse to take jurisdiction. People v. Zane, 105 Ill. 662.

2. Stone v. Robinson, 9 Ark. 469; Stringer v. Jacobs, 9 Ark. 497. Compare Goodhue v. People, 94 Ill. 37. But all objections to the jurisdiction, arising out of a defective certificate of proceedings, in cases of change of venue, will be considered as waived if the parties proceed to trial without having taken exception. Hitt v. Allen, 13 Ill. 592.

3. Gager v. Doe, 29 Ala. 341.

So a change of venue from a court of one county to that of another having jurisdiction over the subject-matter, which is consented to by all parties, amounts to a waiver, and estops all of the parties from objecting to the jurisdiction of the latter court. Center Township v. Marion Co., 10 N. E. Repr. (Ind.) 291.

4. State v. Wetherford, 25 Mo. 439. Compare People v. Baker, 3 Parker C. C. (N. Y.) 181.

5. Perteet v. People, 70 Ill. 171.

Where a change of venue from the county has been twice taken by the same party, in the same action, and without objection to its jurisdiction over him, he appears to the action in the court to which the last change was taken, and by which it was tried, he cannot afterward question the jurisdiction over him of any

Generally.—It is too late to object to a change of venue after a general appearance;<sup>1</sup> or after the defendant has plead to the action;<sup>2</sup> or after the cause has been tried without objection;<sup>3</sup> or after it is pending in the court of appeals.<sup>4</sup>

Where, in a suit against several defendants, the venue of the cause is changed at the instance of some of the defendants, before process has been served upon the rest, the defendants not served with process will not be bound by the change of venue, although service from the county where the cause originated is afterwards made upon them, and no judgment can be rendered against them if they fail to appear.<sup>5</sup>

Where the venue is changed after arraignment and plea, the prisoner need not be rearraigned in the county where the trial is had;<sup>6</sup> but where a prisoner indicted in one county is arraigned and a plea entered, and the venue is afterwards changed and he is again arraigned in the new county, there is no error.<sup>7</sup>

In Iowa it is held that the prosecuting attorney is authorized by virtue of his office to follow and conduct a criminal prosecution, commenced within his county, into any other county or court to which the case may be taken by change of venue.<sup>8</sup>

The court to which a criminal cause is taken on change of venue may, in its discretion, appoint counsel both to defend and to assist in the prosecution of such cause.<sup>9</sup>

Upon the conviction of a prisoner in a capital case, the sentence of the court must be executed by the sheriff of the county where he was tried, and it is error for the court to order it to be carried into effect in the county whence the cause was removed, or by the sheriff of that county.<sup>10</sup> of the courts in which the cause was pending, or of the judges presiding therein. Yates v. State, 58 Ind. 299.

1. Schaeffner's Estate, 45 Wis. 614.

2. Burnham v. Hatfield, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 21.

But where the record of a certain case stated that "on motion of plaintiff, and for satisfactory reasons shown by affidavits filed in this case, it is ordered that the venue be changed," etc., and nothing else appeared on the record, held, that this order was sufficient to transfer the case; and that the fact that the defendant appeared at the court to which the venue was changed, and procured another transfer of the case, was no waiver of any objections to said order. Roller v. Roller, 8 Baxt. (Tenn.) 207.

The party resisting a motion for a change of venue does not waive an objection to the ruling granting the change by appearing in the court to which the cause is removed, and stipulating for a trial thereof at a time certain, or by moving for a new trial after verdict. Ferguson v. Davis Co., 51 Iowa, 220.

3. Prussel v. Knowles, 5 Miss. 90; Owens v. Owens, Hard. (Ky.) 154. Compare Bennett v. Carey, 57 Iowa, 221.

4. Waller v. Logan, 5 B. Mon. (Ky.) 515.

5. Albin v. Talbott, 46 Ill. 424.

6. Commonwealth v. Pistorius, 12 Phila. (Pa.) 550; Price v. State, 8 Gill. (Md.) 295; Davis v. State, 39 Md. 355; Vance v. Commonwealth, 2 Va. Cas. 162.

7. Gardner v. People, 3 Scam. (Ill.) 83;

It is held to be the better practice to arraign the defendant and require him to plead to the indictment before making an order for a change of venue; but where the defendant applies for the change and has the benefit of arraignment in the county to which the cause is transferred, he has no right to complain that the change was made before his arraignment. Hudley v. State, 36 Ark. 237. See also Ex parte Cox, 12 Tex. App. 665.

8. State v. Carothers, 1 Greene (Iowa), 464.

9. State v. Miller, 107 Ind. 39.

10. State v. Twiggs, 1 Wins. (N. Car.) No. 1, 142.

8. Review by Courts of Appeal.—As a general rule, motions for a change of venue are within the sound discretion of the court to which the application is made, and a court of appeal will not reverse the decision except upon abuse of such discretion shown.<sup>1</sup> In Texas it has been held that the supreme court will not reverse the judgment of the district court as to a change of venue unless it appears that injustice has been done the appellant or some legal principle violated, although upon the facts presented it might originally have come to a different conclusion. Nor is an illegal change of venue on application of the defendant a ground for reversing the judgment at the instance of the defendant.<sup>3</sup>

CHANGING WORDS. See WILLS.

CHANNEL.—The place where a river flows, including the whole breadth of the river; or the deeper part of a strait, bay, or harbor where the principal current flows.<sup>4</sup>

1. State v. Ostrander, 18 Iowa, 435; State v. Mewherter, 46 Iowa, 88; State v. Ray, 50 Iowa, 520; State v. Williams, 63 Iowa, 135; State v. Hill, 72 N. Car. 345; State v. Bunger, 11 La. Ann. 607; Hall v. Jackson, 3 Tex. 305; Mondragon v. State, 33 Tex. 480; Clampitt v. State, 9 Tex. App. 27; Dougherty v. State, 7 Tex. App. 480; Cotton v. State, 32 Tex. 614; Hyde v. Harkness, 1 Idaho (N. S.), 601; Poe v. State, 10 Lea (Tenn.), 673; Holcomb v. State, 8 Lea (Tenn.), 417; Porter v. State, 3 Lea (Tenn.), 476; State v. Kring, 11 Mo. App. 92; Railroad v. Applegate, 21 W. Va. 172; State v. Brownfield, 83 Mo. 448; State v. Perigo, 28 N. W. Rep. (Iowa) 453.

In the case of the State v. Whitton, 68 Mo. 91, it was held that the trial court did not err in refusing to grant a change of venue on account of prejudice, it being observed that witnesses were examined both on the side of the State and the appellant, and the court, upon the evidence adduced, found that the alleged prejudice did not exist and that the finding was conclusive. In the case of the State v. Guy, 69 Mo. 430, it was held that this court would not interfere with the action of the trial court in refusing a change of venue, asked on account of prejudice of the inhabitants of the county, unless it appears that palpable injustice has been done. The case of the State v. Burgess, 78 Mo. 235, is to the same effect.

And if the record fails to show upon what the order for the change of venue complained of was based, the appellate court will presume in favor of the correctness of the action of the court below. Ramsey v. Bush, 27 Iowa, 17.

2. Antonio v. Jones, 28 Texas, 19.

But where, upon a showing made by a defendant for a change of venue, it appeared that the showing of the plaintiff was as strong as that of the defendant against the county to which the change was desired, and the court after the first trial term granted such change of venue, the appellate court granted process to restrain the last court from exercising jurisdiction, and returned the case to its original court. Innerarity v. Hitchcock, 3 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 9.

Where a motion for a change of venue was supported by the affidavits of the accused and two others, showing facts that made out a prima facie cause for a change of venue, but the State filed over ninety affidavits controverting the conclusions of those of the accused, held, that the trial court did not err in refusing a change of venue. State v. Bohan, 15 Kan. 407.

3. Porter v. State, 5 Mo. 538.

4. In the act of Congress admitting Iowa into the Union, which defines its eastern boundary as "the middle of the main channel of the Mississippi River," "channel" means the bed in which the main stream flows, "the bed of the river from bank to bank," and not the deep water of the stream as followed in navigation. D. & D. Bridge Co. v. Co. of Dubuque, 55 Iowa, 558.

CHAPEL.—A lesser or inferior place of worship, sometimes a part of or attached to a church or subordinate to it.<sup>1</sup>

CHAPTER.—A division of a book or treatise.<sup>2</sup> An organized branch of some society or fraternity. A community or corporation composed of the prebends and other clergymen belonging to

1. In English ecclesiastical law, chapters are of the following kinds:

(a) Private Chapels are such as noblemen and other religious and worthy persons have at their own private charge, built in or near their own houses for them and their families, to perform religious duties in. These private chapels are maintained at those persons' charge to whom they belong, and the chaplains provided for them by themselves with pensions; anciently they were all consecrated by the bishop of the diocese.

(b) Free Chapels—those free or exempt from all ordinary jurisdiction. The king may erect a free chapel and exempt it from the jurisdiction of the ordinary, or he may license a subject so to do. The incumbents, however, were generally instituted by the bishop, and instructed by the archdeacon of the place. Most of these chapels were built upon the manors and ancient demesnes of the crown, whilst in the king's hands, for the use of himself and his retinue when he came to reside there.

(c) Chapels Subject to a Mother Church.

—1. A chapel of ease is one not allowed a font at its institution, and which is used only for the ease of parishioners in prayers and preaching (sacraments and burials being received and performed at the mother church). Commonly the curate is removable at the pleasure of the parochial minister.

2. A parochial chapel is that which has the parochial rights of christening and burying, and differs in nothing from a church but in the want of a rectory and endowment. The privileges of administering the sacraments (especially that of baptism) and the office of burial are the proper rites and jurisdiction that make it a separate parochial chapel, and not a depending chapel of ease. Phil. in. Eccl. L., 1821–1830.

Acts of Parliament in aid of the scheme of church extension, known as the Church Building Acts, have provided for the building and endowment of other chapels—(1) By the division, by the church building commissioners with the consent of the bishop and patron, and by order of the Queen in council, of a parish into district parishes; (2) By creating with the consent of the bishop and order of the Queen in council, "district parishes;"

(3) By division into "district chapelries," which may be formed out of former district chapelries or out of such district chapelries and other parts of the original parish, or any extra parochial place. The curate is a perpetual curate, with perpetual succession and capacity to hold lands and tithes, with exclusive care of souls, and not subject to the incumbent of the old parish; but the commissioners may, with the consent of the bishop, determine the proportion of the fees for marriages, or that shall be assigned to the curate; (4) By the creation of "consolidated chapelries," which differ from "district chapelries" in their origin only, being formed out of portions of many parishes "when a population is collected together at the extremities of and locally situate in parishes or extra parochial places contiguous to each other;" (5) By the support of chapels without districts. The commissioners make grants to chapels to be served by curates to the incumbent of the parish; these chapels are not to become perpetual curacies; and the commissioners, with the consent of the bishop and patron, may apportion the emoluments "for the benefit of a person serving any such chapel." Id. 2167. By recent acts, chapels are allowed to public schools, hospitals, asylums, and other public institutions. The clergyman who serves such chapels may in general perform the offices and services of the Church of England, except marriage. 34 and 35 Vict., c. 66.

2. Chapter Headings.—Chapter headings are entitled to more consideration in explaining the intention of the different sections in an act or code than the title of the entire act. Barnes v. Jones, 51 Cal. 303; Huff v. Alsop, 64 Mo. 51; Griffith v. Carter, 8 Kan. 565; Barth v. Shivers, 39 Ga. 405; State v. Popp, 45 Md. 432; U. S. v. Fehrenback, 2 Woods, 175; Nicholson v. Mobile & Mont. R. Co., 49 Ala. 205; Bishop on Statutory Crimes, §46. They are not titles of acts, but are parts of the statute limiting and defining their effect. People v. Molyneux, 40 N. Y. 119.

a cathedral or collegiate church, and presided over by the dean.<sup>1</sup> (Webster.)

CHARACTER (in Evidence). (See also EVIDENCE; WITNESS; and Crimes and Criminal titles generally.)

Definition, 110.

In Criminal Proceedings, 110.

In Civil Proceedings, 112.

How Proved, 114.

Of Witnesses, 116.

1. Definition.—The opinion generally entertained of a person derived from the common report of the people who are acquainted with him.<sup>2</sup>

Evidence of a person's character is irrelevant to any inquiry concerning his conduct, except in the cases mentioned in this article.<sup>3</sup>

2. In Criminal Proceedings, the fact that the person accused has a good character is relevant;<sup>4</sup> but the fact that he has a bad character is irrelevant, unless it is itself a fact in issue, or unless evidence has been given that he has a good character.<sup>5</sup> The character sought to be proved must not be general, but such as would make it likely or unlikely that the party would do the controverted act.

1. Dean and Chapter are the council of the bishop to assist him with their advice in affairs of religion, and also in the temporal concerns of the see. The bishop is the immediate superior and ordinary of the dean and chapter, and exercises over them the power of visitation. Chapter, as distinct from the dean, consist of certain dignitaries called canons, sometimes appointed by the crown, sometimes by the bishop, and sometimes by each other. 1 Black. Comm. 382; Coke Litt. 95 a. 2 Steph. Comm. 674.

2. Bouv. L. Dict. "The reputation or general credit which a man has obtained in public opinion." Taylor on Evidence (8th Ed.), § 350.

3. Humphrey v. Humphrey, 7 Conn. 118; Bennett v. Hyde, 6 Conn. 26; Church v. Drummond, 7 Ind. 17; Gebhart v. Burkett, 57 Ind. 378; Gutzwiller v. Lackman, 23 Mo. 168; Rogers v. Troost, 51 Mo. 470; Dudley v. McCluer, 62 Mo. 241; Anderson v. Long, 10 S. & R. (Pa.) 55; Porter v. Seiler, 23 Pa. St. 424; Battles v. Landenslager, 84 Pa. 446; Smets v. Plunket, 1 Strob. (S. Car.) 372; Wright v. McKee, 37 Vt. 161; Atty.-Gen. v. Bowman, 2 B. & P. 532.

Evidence of the character of one under whom the plaintiff in ejectment claims is inadmissible. Blackburn v. Lessee of Holliday, 12 S. & R. (Pa.) 140.

4. Felix v. State, 18 Ala. 720; Hall v. State, 40 Ala. 698; Kee v. State, 28 Ark. 155; People v. Ashe, 44 Cal. 288; State v. Turner, 19 Iowa, 144; People v. Garbett, 17 Mich. 9; Wesley's Case, 8 Geo. (Miss.) 383; Schaller v. State, 14 Mo. 502;

State v. O'Connor, 31 Mo. 389; Griffin v. State, 14 Ohio St. 55; Cathcart v. Commonwealth, 37 Pa. St. 108; Lockart v. State, 3 Tex. App. 567; State v. Wells, Cox (N. J.), 424; People v. Moett, 23 Hun (N. Y.), 60; Hopps v. People, 31 Ill. 388; State v. Donohoo, 22 W. Va. 761.

In Mathews v. State, 32 Tex. 117, evidence of character was rejected as irrelevant to the issue in a trial for assault and battery, the admission of such evidence being held to be in the discretion of the court, and it being invariably admissible only in cases where the life of the prisoner is involved.

5. Steph. Dig. Ed. art. 56; People v. Fair, 43 Cal. 137; Fletcher v. State, 49 Ind. 124; State v. Kabrick, 39 Iowa, 432; State v. Cresson, 38 Mo. 372; People v. White, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 111; Commonwealth v. Hardy, 2 Mass. 303; Pauli v. Commonwealth, 89 Pa. St. 432; Hartless v. State, 32 Tex. 88; State v. Thurtell, 29 Kan. 148; Reg. v. Rowton, 10 Cox C. C. 25; Reg. v. Hodgkiss, 7 C. & P. 298.

If the prisoner's counsel brings out evidence of his good character on cross-examination, the prosecution may then give evidence of his bad character. Reg. v. Gadbury, 8 C. & P. 676; Reg. v. Shrimpton, 3 C. & K. 373; s. c., 5 Cox C. C. 387.

In an indictment for assaulting a peace officer he cannot testify to his knowledge of the prisoner's bad character for the purpose of showing that he had reasonable cause to suspect him of the crime for which he was arrested. Reg. v. Tuberfield, 10 Cox C. C. 1.

6. The kind of character proved must

The object and effect of such evidence is to disprove guilt by furnishing a presumption that the defendant would not have committed the offence. In homicide it has also been held admissible to aid the jury in ascertaining the grade of the crime.<sup>1</sup> No legal inference can arise from a failure to offer evidence of good character.

Evidence of good character must be considered in all cases where it is offered, as well where the other evidence is direct as where it is circumstantial. Its weight is not confined to doubtful cases; but it may of itself create a doubt. The degree of its force is to be determined by the attending circumstances, and not by the grade of the offence.<sup>3</sup>

In homicide the violent character of the deceased may be proved, but only where the evidence shows that there was an assault committed or threatened by him upon the prisoner, and a doubt was relate to the particular charge, e.g., in murder, the prisoner's general reputation for peace and good order is admissible. People v. Stewart, 28 Cal. 395; Kee v. State, 28 Ark. 155; State v. Kiley, 43 Iowa, 294; State v. King, 78 Mo. 555; State v. Pearce, 15 Nev. 188; State v. Emery, 7 At. Rep. (Vt.) 129.

In homicide the prisoner's reputation as a good soldier is inadmissible. People v. Garbutt, 17 Mich. 9.

1. Carroll v. State, 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 315.

2. A failure to prove his good character raises no presumption against the prisoner. People v. Bodie, 1 Dana (Ky.), 282; People v. White, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 520; State v. Kabrich, 39 Iowa, 277; State v. Dockstader, 42 Iowa, 432; State v. Oikill, 7 Ire. (N. Car.) 251.

3. Cancemi v. People, 16 N. Y. 501; Stevens v. People, 4 Park. (N. Y.) 396; Harrington v. State, 19 Ohio Stat. 264. It is error to charge that good character only steps in in cases of doubt. It will itself sometimes create a doubt where none without it would exist. Felix v. State, 18 Ala. 720; Rosenbaum v. State, 33 Ala. 354; Dupree v. State, 33 Ala. 380; Harrison v. State, 37 Ala. 154; Hall v. State, 40 Ala. 698; People v. Ashe, 46 Cal. 288; People v. Kalkman (Cal.), 13 Pac. Rep. 500; U. S. v. Jackson, 29 Fed. Rep. 503; Kistler v. State, 54 Ind. 400; McQueen v. State, 82 Ind. 72; State v. Kinley, 43 Iowa, 294; State v. Beebe, 17 Minn. 241; Coleman v. State, 59 Miss. 484; Remsen v. People, 43 N. Y. 6; People v. Lamb, 2 Keyes (N. Y.), 360; Kilpatrick v. Commonwealth, 31 Pa. St., 198; Heine v. Commonwealth, 91 Pa. St., 145; State v. Edwards, 13 S. Car. 30; Lee v. State, 2 Tex. App. 339; State v. Daley, 53 Vt. 442. "A weak case on the part of the prosecution is a doubtful case, and without evidence of any kind on the part of the defence the jury ought to acquit. To say, therefore, that proof of character is only available under such circumstances is to say that it is of no substantial account at all. Hanney v. Commonwealth, 19 W. N. C. (Pa.) 437. Character should be submitted to the jury like any other fact, whether the other evidence in the case is direct or circumstantial, and should be considered by them. If the evidence of guilt is direct, it goes to its credibility. Stover v. People, 56 N. Y. 315; People v. Raina, 45 Cal. 292; People v. Shepardson, 49 Cal. 629; People v. Bell, 49 Cal. 485; State v. McMurphy, 52 Mo. 251; State v. Alexander, 66 Mo. 148. But against facts positively and strongly proven it cannot avail. State v. Turner, 19 Iowa, 149; State v. McMurphy, 52 Mo. 251; Commonwealth v. Webster, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 295; State v. Levigne, 17 Nev. 435; U. S. v. Jackson, 29 Fed. Rep. 583. It is not itself a defence, but may turn the scale in defendant's favor. State v. Donovan, 61 Iowa, 278.

In some States it is held that such evidence can only be taken into consideration when a reasonable doubt already exists in the minds of the jury. People v. Gleason, 1 Nev. 173; State v. McGinnis, 6 Nev. 109; State v. Wells, Cox (N. J.), 424; Rex v. Turner, 6 How. St. Tr. 613. In Massachusetts its force is dependent upon the nature of the offence. "Where it is a question of great and atrocious criminality, the commission of the act is so unusual, so out of the ordinary course of things, and beyond common experience—it is so manifest that the offence, if perpetrated, must have been influenced by motives not frequently operating upon created whether the homicide was perpetrated from malice or to repel such assault, and in self-defence.<sup>1</sup> On a similar principle the character of the prosecutrix in rape is in issue.<sup>2</sup> Such evidence may be rebutted by evidence of good character, which is not admissible until attacked.<sup>3</sup>

3. In Civil Proceedings.—Of Parties.—Evidence of the character of a party is relevant whenever the nature of the proceedings is such as to put it in issue.<sup>4</sup> But as the law assumes all characters to be good, they must be first assailed before they can be the human mind—the evidence of character and of a man's habitual conduct under common circumstances must be considered far inferior to what it is in the instance of accusations of a lower grade." Commonwealth v. Webster, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 295; Commonwealth v. Hardy, 2 Mass. 303.

1. People v. Lamb, 2 Keyes (N. Y.), 360; Reynolds v. People, 17 Ab. Pr. (N. Y.) 413; Abbott v. People, 86 N. Y. 460; State v. Field, 14 Me. 248; s. c., 31 Am. Dec. 52; Ripley v. State, 2 Head (Tenn.), 217; Abernethy v. Commonwealth, 101 Pa. St. 322; Franklin v. State, 29 Ala. 19; State v. Chandler, 5 La. Ann. 489; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 599; State v. Robertson, 30 La. Ann. 340; Cotton v. State, 31 Miss. 504; State v. Keene, 50 Mo. 357; State v. Bryant, 55 Mo. 75; State v. Elkins, 63 Mo. 159; State v. Freeman, 3 Mo. App. 591; Franklin v. State, 29 Ala. 14.

"When the conduct of the deceased, although in itself innocent, is such that, illustrated by his character, its tendency is to excite a reasonable belief of imminent peril, the evidence ought to be admitted, and the question of its effect left to the determination of the jury." Franklin v. State, 29 Ala. 14.

But such evidence is inadmissible unless it is shown that the prisoner was, by the violent character of the deceased, impelled to kill him. The mere bad character of the deceased cannot affect the guilt of the accused. Quesenberry v. State, 3 S. & P. (Ala.) 308; Chase v. State, 46 Miss. 683; State v. Keene, 50 Mo. 357; Commonwealth v. Ferrigan, 44 Pa. 386; Prickett v. State, 22 Ala. 39; s. c., 58 Am. Dec. 250; State v. Hogue, 6 Jones (N. Car.), 383; State v. Thawley, 4 Harr. (Del.) 562.

2. State v. Forshner, 43 N. H. 89; State v. Knapp, 45 N. H. 148; Turney's Cas., 8 S. & M. (Miss.) 104. Likewise in bastardy proceedings. Walker v. State, 6 Blf. (Ind.) 1. Contra in Rawles v. State, 56 Ind. 433. By bringing such proceedings the prosecutrix acknowledges her want of chastity.

Character of prosecutor is inadmissible in indictments for assault and battery. Pratt v. State, 56 Ind. 179. So is that of defendant's wife in an indictment for attempt to levy blackmail by accusing prosecutor of seducing his wife. McMillan v. State, 60 Ind. 216.

3. The peaceable character of the deceased cannot be shown until it is attacked. Ben v. State, 37 Ala. 103; People v. Hulse, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 309. Contra in rape in Turney's Cas., 8 S. & M. (Miss.) 104.

4. "Putting character in issue is a technical expression and confined to certain actions, from the notice of which the character of the parties, or some of them, is of particular importance." Anderson v. Long, 10 S. & R. (Pa.) 55.

Character is put in issue in the following actions:

Breach of Promise of Marriage.—The bad character of the plaintiff for chastity is admissible in mitigation of damages. Van Storch v. Greffen, 71 Pa. St. 240; Foulkes v. Sellway, 3 Esp. 236; Baddeley v. Mortlock, 1 Holt, 151; Irving v. Greenwood, 1 C. & P. 350; Burnett v. Simpkins, 24 Ill. 264. Bench v. Merrick, 1 Jns. Cas. (N. Y.) 116; Willard v. Stone, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 22; Palmer v. Andrews, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 142; Kniffen v. McConnell, 30 N. Y. 285. This action does not necessarily involve the character of the parties. Leckey v. Bloser, 24 Pa. St. 401. But when the plaintiff claims that his character has been damaged it is competent to show that he had no character to damage. Wharton on Evidence, § 52, and cases supra. Where seduction is joined with the breach, the plaintiff's character before the seduction is equally in issue. Boynton v. Kellogg, 3 Mass. 189; Green v. Spencer, 3 Mo. 318.

Libel and Slander.—Under the general issue the plaintiff's bad character may be shown in mitigation of damages. Paddock v. Salisbury, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 811; Foot v. Tracy, 1 Jns. R. (N. Y.) 46; Hal-lowell v. Guntle, 82 Ind. 554; Armstrong v. Pierson, 8 Iowa, 29; Dewitt v. Greenfield, 5 Ohio, 225; Duval v. Davey, 32 Ohio Stat. 604; Anthony v. Stephens, 1.

Mo. 254; Henry v. Norwood, 4 W. (Pa.) 347; Steinman v. McWilliams, 6 Pa. 170; Buford v. McLuney, 1 N. & McC. (S. Car.) 268; Sawyer v. Eifert, 2 N. & McC. (S. Car.) 511; Richards v. Richards, 2 M. & R. 557; Leicester v. Walter, 2 Camp. 251. Contra, Scott v. Sampson, L. R. 8 Q. B. D. 491; Jones v. Stevens, 11 Price, 235. It is likewise admissible under pleas of the general issue and justification, but not under a plea of justification alone. Steinman v. McWilliams, 6 Pa. St. 170; Drown v. Allen, 91 Pa. St. 393; Paddock v. Salisbury, 2 Cow. (N.Y.) 811; Stow v. Converse, 3 Conn. 345. Contra, Stone v. Varney, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 86; Downey v. Dillon, 52 Ind. 442; Bell v. Park, 11 Ir. C. L. R. 413. Where the plea denies the libel character is inadmissible. Forshee v. Abrams, 2 Iowa, 571.

Malicious Prosecution.—Evidence of general bad character of the plaintiff is admissible in mitigation of damages, and also in connection with other evidence to establish probable cause. Bacon v. Towne, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 217; Pullen v. Glidden, 68 Me. 559; Miller v. Brown, 3 Mo. 127; s. c., 23 Am. Dec. 693; Gregory v. Chambers, 78 Mo. 294; Winebidle v. Porterfield, 9 Pa. St. 137; Rodriguez v. Tadmire, 2 Esp. 271. Contra, Newsam v. Carr, 2 Starkie, 69; Downing v. Butcher, 2 M. & R. 374.

Where the arrest of plaintiff was made on complaint made by defendant on his own knowledge, the character of plaintiff is inadmissible; otherwise where the complaint is made on information and belief. Skidmore v. Bricker, 77 Ill. 164. Character is also inadmissible in trespass for false arrest against a constable. Russell v. Shuster, 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 308.

Seduction.—The character of the plaintiff is not in issue. Dain v. Wyckoff, 18 N. Y. 45. But that of the seduced is. Stowell v. Beagle, 79 Ill. 257; Wilson v. Sprowl, 3 Pa. 49; Haines v. Sinclair, 23 Vt. 108; White v. Murland, 71 Ill. 250; Hoffman v. Kemerer, 44 Pa. St. 452; Dodd v. Norris, 3 Campb. 520; Hedges v. Tagg, 7 L. R. Ex. 283.

The character of plaintiff's family is admissible in increase of damages, for the seduction lowers the social standing of all its members. Wilson v. Sproul, 3 P. & W. 49; McAulay v. Birkhead, 13 Ire. (N. Car.) 28; Thompson v. Clendenning, 1 Head (Tenn.), 287; Parker v. Monteith, 7 Oreg. 277; Andrews v. Askey, 8 C. & P. 7; Kendrick v. McCrory, 11 Ga. 603. Contra, Haines v. Sinclair, 23 Vt. 108.

Evidence of defendant's character for chastity is admissible. McKern v. Cal- vert, 59 Mo. 243; Devlee v. Boardman, 20 Iowa. But his family's character may be proved to show that the plaintiff was not derelict in allowing his daughter to associate with the defendant. Parker v. Monteith, 7 Oreg. 277.

Divorce.—Character is not in issue in divorce. Humphrey v. Humphrey, 7 Conn. 116; Ward v. Thompson, 5 Port. (Ala.) 382; Washburn v. Washburn, 5 N. H. 195; Berdell v. Berdell, 80 Ill. 604; Dwyer v. Dwyer, 2 Mo. App. 17. Contra in Bryan v. O'Bryan, 13 Mo. 16; s. c., 53 Am. Dec. 128, where the charge was adultery.

Fraud.—A mere charge of fraud does not put character in evidence either in actions ex contractu—Atkinson v. Graham, 5 W. (Pa.) 411; Nash v. Gilkeson, 5 S. & R. (Pa.) 352; Anderson v. Long, 10 S. & R. (Pa.) 55; Fowler v. Ins. Co., 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 673; Smets v. Plunket, 1 Strob. (S. Car.) 372—nor in actions ex delicto. Gough v. St. John, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 647; Woodruff v. Whittlesey, Kirby (Conn.), 62. Contra, Ruan v. Perry, 3 Cai. (N. Y.) 120; State v. Beebe, 17 Minn. 241; Walker v. Stephenson, 3 Esp. 284.

Nor is such evidence admissible where a will is impeached on the ground of fraud. Potter v. Webb, 6 Greenl. (Me.) 6; Rogers v. Troost, 51 Mo. 470; Thomas v. Stump, 62 Mo. 275.

Other Actions.—Evidence of character is also inadmissible in actions for assault. Corning v. Corning, 6 N. Y. 97; Willis v. Forrest, 2 Duer (N. Y.), 310; Porter v. Seiler, 23 Pa. St. 424; Thompson v. Church, 1 Root (Conn.), 312; Givens v. Bradley, 3 Bibb (Ky.), 195; Reed v. Kelly, 4 Bibb (Ky.), 401. And in trespass. Cummings v. Crawford, 88 Ill. 312. And in trover, where the defendant is virtually charged with embezzlement. Wright v. McKee, 37 Vt. 161. On indictment for breach of an ordinance against fast driving, or for negligence, the character of the defendant as a careful driver cannot be shown. Commonwealth v. Worcester, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 462; Boggs v. Lynch, 22 Mo. 563. In an action for damages for an injury occurring through the negligence of an employee, the character of the employee is in issue, as showing negligence on the part of his employer. Frazier v. Railroad Co., 38 Pa. St. 104; Cook v. Parham, 24 Ala. 21. But in such a suit the plaintiff's character is irrelevant. Johnson v. Wells, Fargo & Co., 6 Nev. 224. In an action for malpractice the defendant's character as a physician is in issue. Carpenter v. Blake, 10 Hun (N. Y.), 358. So is plaintiff's character in an action of crim. con. Pratt v. Andrews, proved to be good.<sup>1</sup> The kind of character to be proved must be determined by the nature of the question in issue.<sup>2</sup>

4. How Proved.—Character is a fact which is proved by another fact, general reputation. It cannot be shown by evidence of particular and specific facts,<sup>3</sup> but may be proved by negative testi-

4 N. Y. 493. But not in bastardy process. Sidelinger v. Bucklin, 64 Me. 371.

1. This is the general rule, and the attack may be made either by plea or by evidence. Dame v. Kenney, 25 N. H. 318; Severence v. Hilton, 24 N. H. 147; Cornwall v. Richardson, R. & M. 305; Shurtleff v. Stevens, 51 Vt. 501; Hann v. Wilson, 28 Ind. 296; Rhodes v. James, 42 Am. Dec. 604; Inman v. Foster, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 602; McCabe v. Platter, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 405; Miles v. Vanhorn, 17 Ind. 245; Houghtaling v. Kilderhouse, 1 N. Y. 530; Tibbs v. Brown, 2 Gr. Ca. (Pa.) 39; Leckey v. Bloser, 24 Pa. St. 401. In libel evidence of the truth of the libelous words is such an attack on the plaintiff's character as will make proof of good character admissible. Mathews v. Huntley, 9 N. H. 146; Houghtaling v. Kilderhouse, 1 N. Y. 530. General character is not admissible in reply to testimony of specific acts (e.g., of lewdness). Zitzer v. Merkle, 24 Pa. St. 410; Leckey v. Bloser, 24 Pa. St. 401.

The rule is sometimes confined to cases in which character is not put in issue. Dudley v. McCluer, 65 Mo. 241; Gregory v. Thomas, 2 Bibb (Ky.), 286. This does not really conflict with the cases above, the difference being in the meaning ascribed to "put in issue." But it has been held that where character is put in issue evidence may be given in support of it, although it has not been attacked. Williams v. Haig, 3 Rich. L. (S. Car.) 362; s. c., 45 Am. Dec. 774.

2. See supra, n. 6, p. 87; Church v. Prummond, 7 Ind. 17. In slander, reference must be had to the offence charged in the slander. Paddock v. Salisbury, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 811; Leonard v. Allen, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 241; Duval v. Davey, 32 Ohio St. 604; Smith v. Buckecker, 4 R. (Pa.) 295; Conroe v. Conroe, 47 Pa. St. 118; Moyer v. Moyer, 49 Pa. St. 210; Drown v. Allen, 91 Pa. St. 393. In slander, for calling plaintiff a thief, it is incompetent to prove her character as a prostitute. Douglass v. Tousey, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 352. So of character as an atheist in slander for calling him a perjurer. Ross v. Lapham, 14 Mass. 279. In slander for calling plaintiff a thief it is proper to ask for his character as a thief, and it was held error to rule out such a question and direct that the inquiry should be as to his character for honesty. Drown v. Allen, 91 Pa. St. 393. The rule does not let in reputation that the plaintiff was guilty of the offence charged, but reputation of a vicious habit tending to the commission of the offence. Bell v. Parke, 11 Ir. C. L. R. 413; Scott v. Sampson, 8 Q. B. D. 491. Contra, Vanderveer v. Sutphin, 5 Ohio St. 293. In seduction the chastity of the seduced is the subject of the character evidence. Wilson v. Sprowl, 3 Pa. 49; Stowell v. Beagle, 79 Ill. 525; Haines v. Sinclair, 23 Vt. 108.

3. General reputation is the opinion of a man's character held generally by those who are acquainted with him. The question then is what people in general say, not what others, or certain others, say of him. Sorrelle v. Craig, 9 Ala. 534; Vernon v. Tucker, 30 Md. 456; Engleman v. State, 2 Ind. 91; Commonwealth v. Rogers, 136 Mass. 158; Pickens v. State, 61 Miss. 563; Weaver v. Hendrick, 30 Mo. 502; Matthewson v. Burr, 6 Neb. 311; Taylor v. Ryan, 15 Neb. 573; Sawyer v. People, 1 N. Y. Cr. 249; Gulerette v. McKinley, 27 Hun (N. Y.), 320; Dance v. McBride, 43 Iowa, 624; Wike v. Lightner, 11 S. & R. (Pa.) 198; Frazier v. Railroad Co., 38 Pa. St. 104; Snyder v. Commonwealth, 85 Pa. St. 519. Nor what is said of him by a majority of his neighbors. Adams v. Hannon, 3 Mo. 222; Emory v. Phillips, 22 Mo. 499. Rumor is not reputation. Campbell v. State, 23 Ala. 44; Haley v. State, 63 Ala. 83. In this State a distinction is made between a man's character and reputation, and a witness who says that he is not acquainted with the latter, but knows the former, is allowed to testify. Sullivan v. State, 66 Ala. 48. The rule is applicable to the proof of the character of the deceased in homicide. State v. Elkins, 63 Mo. 159; State v. Abarr, 39 Iowa, 185; Nichols v. People, 86 N. Y. 641.

Specific facts showing character cannot be proved. Every man is supposed to be capable of supporting his general character, but is not likely to be prepared to answer particular facts without notice. Teese v. Huntingdon, 23 How. (U. S.) 2; Janson v. Stuart, 1 T. R. 754; Hirshman v. People, 101 Ill. 568; Walker v. State, 6 Blf. (Ind.) 1; Long v. Morrison, 14 Ind. 595; Wilson v. State, 16 Ind. 392; Hallowell v. Guntle, 82 Ind. 554; Taylor v. Com- monwealth, 3 Bush (Ky.), 508; Thurman v. Virgin, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 785; Hume v. Scott, 3 A. K. M. (Ky.) 261; Macdonald v. Garrison, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 510; Corning v. Corning, 6 N. Y. 97; Conley v. Meeker, 85 N. Y. 618; Seymour v. Farrell, 51 Mo. 95; Sawyer v. Eifert, 2 N. & Mc.C. (S. Car.) 511; Johnson v. Brown, 51 Tex. 65. There is an exception where character for chastity is in issue. In this case particular acts may be proved, but here it has been said the fact of chastity itself is in issue. Ford v. Jones, 62 Barb. (N. Y.) 484; Gulerette v. McKinley, 27 Hun (N. Y.), 320; White v. Murtland, 71 Ill. 258; West v. Druff, 55 Iowa, 335. But see Hoffman v. Kemmerer, 44 Pa. St. 452. An exception is also made in case of crimen falsi in Betts v. Lockwood, 8 Conn. 488.

mony.<sup>1</sup> It must, therefore, be proved by witnesses who are acquainted with the general reputation of the person whose character is in issue, and this acquaintance must be shown before the evidence will be admitted.<sup>2</sup> The individual opinion of the witness is inadmissible.<sup>3</sup> The evidence in rebuttal must be of the same

1. As good characters are generally little talked about, a witness may testify that he has never heard a person's character spoken of, or that he has never heard anything against it. Hadjo v. State, 13 Ala. 718; Dave v. State, 22 Ala. 23; Ward v. State, 28 Ala. 53; Childs v. State, 55 Ala. 28; State v. Nelson, 58 Iowa, 208; State v. Lee, 22 Minn. 407; Davis v. Foster, 68 Ind. 238; Craig v. Craig, 5 R. (Pa.) 91; Johnson v. Brown, 51 Tex. 65; Davis v. Franke, 33 Gratt. (Va.) 413; Rex v. Rowton, 10 Cox C. C. 25. One who testifies that he does not know a witness's character for truth may be asked if he ever heard it questioned. Lenox v. Fuller, 39 Mich. 268.

2. The witness to character should ordinarily be of the same community as the one whose character is inquired into; and he should speak from a knowledge of his reputation, acquired by time and the general speech of the people who know and have the opportunity of forming an opinion from their knowledge. Cheritree v. Roggen, 67 Barb. (N. Y.) 124; Martin v. Martin, 25 Ala. 201; State v. Cox, 67 Mo. 392; Kelly v. Proctor, 41 N. H. 137; Dupree v. State, 33 Ala. 380; Davis v. Franke, 33 Gratt. (Va.) 413; Reg. v. Rowton, 10 Cox C. C. 25. It is essential that the witness should know the reputation rather than the person himself who bears it. Martin v. Martin, 25 Ala. 201.

A stranger who has gone to a particular locality and made inquiries for the purpose of ascertaining the character of an individual is incompetent to testify to it. Douglass v. Tousey, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 352; Sorrelle v. Craig, 9 Ala. 534; Reid v. Reid, 2 C. E. Gr. (N. J.) 101; Curtis v. Fay, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 64; Kelley v. Proctor, 41 N. H. 586; Dave v. State, 22 Ala. 23.

It was held not to be necessary to first inquire of witness whether he knew the plaintiff's general character for chastity in Senter v. Carr, 15 N. H. 351.

One's neighborhood extends as far as one is well known. Kelley v. Proctor, 41 N. H. 139; Dupree v. State, 33 Ala. 380; Griffin v. State, 14 Ohio St. 55. And see State v. Henderson 1 S. E. Rep. (W. Va.) 225; People v. Lyons, 51 Mich. 215.

It is not necessary that impeaching witness should live in the same neighborhood. Wallis v. White, 58 Wis. 26; Chess v. Chess, 1 Pa. 32.

The number of character witnesses allowed rests in the discretion of the court. Cox v. Priutt, 25 Ind. 90. Ordinarily one will not be satisfactory. Waford v. State, 44 Tex. 439.

3. Ayres v. Duprey, 27 Tex. 523; Commonwealth v. Rogers, 136 Mass. 158; Reg. v. Rowton, 10 Cox C. C. 25; State v. King, 78 Mo. 555; Kitteringham v. Dana, 58 Iowa, 632; Sargent v. Wilson, 59 N. H. 396; Best on Evidence, 260. But an impeaching witness may, after testifying to general character for truth and veracity, be asked and testify whether he would believe the impeached witness on oath. Bogle v. Kreitzer, 46 Pa. St. 465; Taylor v. Taylor, 16 Ga. 465; Stokes v. State, 18 Ga. 17; State v. Howard, 9 N. H. 485; Knight v. House, 29 Md. 194; Marshall v. State, 5 Tex. App. 273; Pleasant v. State, 15 Ark. 624; Stevens v. Irwin, 12 Cal. 306; State v. Meadows, 18 W. Va. 658; Mawson v. Hartsink, 4 Esp. 104; Carlos v. Brook, 10 Ves. 50; Rex v. Brown, 1 L. R. C. C. 70; s. c., 10 Cox C. C. 453. But he must show his knowledge of general reputation of the impeached witness before he will be allowed to say whether he would believe him on oath. Lyman v. Philadelphia, 56 Pa. St. 488. Contra, Willard v. Goodenough, 30 Vt. 393; Railroad Co. v. Anthony, 43 Ind. 183; King v. Ruckman, 5 C. E. Gr. (N. J.) 317; State v.

kind, whether by cross-examination or by independent testimony.<sup>1</sup> The character proved must be ante litem motam,<sup>2</sup> and in the case of the impeachment of a witness must be that enjoyed within a reasonable time, i.e., it must be recent enough to show his character at the time when he testifies.<sup>3</sup>

5. Of Witnesses.—Evidence of a witness's bad character for veracity is admissible<sup>4</sup> for the purpose of impeaching his credibility;<sup>5</sup> and

Mairs, Coxe (N. J.), 453; State v. Rush, 77 Mo. 519; Walton v. State, 88 Ind. 9.

It is not necessary that the witness be asked whether he would believe the impeached witness on oath. Bank v. Keeler, 109 Ill. 385.

After testimony as to general reputation, it is admissible to ask him whether he is worthy of belief: this is not the same as asking him if he would believe him on oath. Bluit v. State, 12 Tex. App. 39; Holbert v. State, 9 Tex. App. 219; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 728.

1. Commonwealth v. O'Brien, 119 Mass. 342; Rodman v. State, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 90; Engleman v. State, 2 Ind. 91; s. c., 52 Am. Dec. 494; Snyder v. Commonwealth, 85 Pa. St. 519; State v. Elkins, 63 Mo. 159; McCarty v. People, 51 Ill. 231; Keener v. State, 18 Ga. 194. Contra, State v. Jerome, 33 Conn. 265; and cf. Abenethy v. Commonwealth, 101 Pa. St. 322.

Particulars were held admissible on cross-examination in State v. Arnold, 12 Iowa, 480; People v. Clark, 1 Wh. C. C. (N. Y.) 292; Leonard v. Allen, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 241; Reg. v. Hodgkiss, 7 C. & P. 298.

On cross-examination a witness may be asked if he has not heard certain reports which tend to contradict his testimony as to character. Carpenter v. Blake, 10 Hun (N. Y.), 358; Oliver v. Pate, 43 Ind. 132.

Where particulars are brought out on cross-examination, they cannot be gone into on re-examination. Gulerette v. McKinley, 27 Hun (N. Y.), 320.

Where on cross-examination a witness gives the name of one whom he has heard speak against the person whose character is being investigated, he may be asked what he said. People v. Annis, 13 Mich. 511.

2. Reid v. Reid, 2 C. E. Gr. (N. J.) 101.

In slander the character proved must be that which the plaintiff enjoyed before, and not after, the slander, for the slander itself might have affected his character. Douglass v. Tousey, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 352. So in seduction and breach of promise. Stowell v. Beagle, 79 Ill. 525; White v. Murtland, 71 Ill. 250; Boynton v. Kellogg,

3 Mass. 189; Green v. Spencer, 3 Mo. 318; Capeheart v. Carradine, 4 Strob. (S. Car.) 42; Elsam v. Fawcett, 2 Esp. 562. And in malicious prosecution. Winebiddle v. Porterfield, 9 Pa. St. 137. In criminal cases the prosecution cannot show character subsequent to the indictment. State v. Kinley, 43 Iowa, 294; Commonwealth v. Sackett, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 394. Or the discovery of the offence. White v. Commonwealth, 80 Ky. 480; Wroe v. State, 20 Ohio St. 461.

3. What is a reasonable time is generally within the discretion of the court to decide. Holliday v. Cohen, 34 Ark. 707; Manion v. Lambert, 10 Bush (Ky.), 298; Rucker v. Beatty, 3 Ind. 70; Stratton v. State, 45 Ind. 458; Aurora v. Cobb, 21 Ind. 492; State v. Howard, 9 N. H. 485; Willard v. Goodenough, 30 Vt. 393; Buse v. Page, 32 Minn. 111; Packet Co. v. McCool, 83 Ind. 392; Wood v. Matthews, 73 Mo. 477; Kelly v. State, 61 Ala. 19; Railroad Co. v. Richardson, 66 Ind. 43. But where later character has been shown to be bad, previous good character may be proved. Bank v. Hobbs, 11 Gray (Mass.), 250.

4. See cases in note 2, p. 94.

The bad character of a subscribing witness may be shown to repel the presumption arising from his signature. Boylan v. Meeker, 4 Dutch. (N. J.) 274. And evidence may then be given of his good character. Black v. Ellis, Riley (S. Car.), 73. So where book entries are offered in evidence, the character for honesty of the person who made them may be attacked. Crouse v. Miller, 10 S. & R. (Pa.) 155; Barber v. Bull, 7 W. & S. (Pa.) 391; Tomlinson v. Borst, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 42. Contra, Long v. Taylor, 29 Hun (N. Y.), 127.

5. After a witness's character has been impeached, his evidence should still be considered by the jury and given such weight as under the circumstances it is entitled to. Fuller v. Rounceville, 29 N. H. 555; Johnson v. Brown, 51 Tex. 65; Sharp v. State, 16 Ohio St. 218; Belcher v. Conner, 1 S. Car. 88; Jernigan v. Wainer, 12 Tex. 189. But his testimony to be believed should be corroborated, if the impeachment of his character is success-when his character has been attacked evidence may then, and not before, be given in support of it.<sup>1</sup> The inquiry must be confined to his character for truth and veracity.<sup>2</sup>

ful. Smyth v. Oliver, 31 Ala. 39; Adams v. Adams, 2 C. E. Gr. (N. J.) 324.

1. State v. Cooper, 71 Mo. 436; Stamper v. Griffin, 12 Ga. 450; Harrington v. Lincoln, 4 Gray (Mass.), 563; Heywood v. Reed, 4 Gray (Mass.), 571; Atwood v. Dearborn, 1 Allen (Mass.), 483; Clark v. Bond, 29 Ind. 555; Brand v. Campbell, 86 Ind. 516; Fitzgerald v. Goff, 99 Ind. 28; People v. Gay, 7 N. Y. 378; Vance v. Vance, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 583; Fletcher v. State, 49 Ind. 124; Vernon v. Tucker, 30 Md. 456; People v. Bush, 65 Cal. 129; Turner v. Commonwealth, 86 Pa. 54; State v. Thomas, 78 Mo. 327; Braddle v. Brownfield, 9 W. (Pa.) 124; Wertz v. May, 21 Pa. St. 274.

Evidence of good character is admissible where the attack is made, though unsuccessfully, as where the impeaching witness unexpectedly testified to good character. Commonwealth v. Ingraham, 7 Gray (Mass.), 46; Wilson v. State, 17 Tex. App. 525.

The attack on witness's character may be made in cross-examination. Vernon v. Tucker, 30 Md. 456. Noel v. Dickey, 3 Bibb (Ky.), 268; Russell v. Coffin, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 143. By proving his former conviction of a crime. People v. Amaacus, 50 Cal. 233; Gertz v. Railroad Co., 137 Mass. 77. By evidence tending to prove his subornation. People v. Ah Fat, 48 Cal. 61. Or by proof of conflicting statements previously made by him. Dixon v. State, 15 Tex. App. 271; Railway Co. v. Frawley (Ind.), 9 N. E. Rep. 594; Haley v. State, 63 Ala. 83. Mere contradiction among witnesses is not ground for proving good character. Pruitt v. Cox, 21 Ind. 15; Russell v. Coffin, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 143. Nor is evidence that he has made material false statements. Brown v. Mooers, 6 Gray (Mass.), 451.

Where a prisoner takes the stand in his own behalf, his character as a witness may be impeached, but such impeaching evidence goes to his credibility only. Adams v. People, 9 Hun (N. Y.), 89; State v. Robertson, 1 S. E. Rep. (S. Car.) 443; People v. Beck, 58 Cal. 212; State v. Beal, 68 Ind. 345. And in England in such a case his previous conviction of certain crimes is admissible in rebuttal by 7 and 8 G. IV. c. 28, s. 11; 6 and 7 W. IV. c. 111; 24 and 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 116. and c. 99, s. 37; Steph. Dig. Ev. art. 56.

Where the attesting witnesses to a will are dead, and it is impeached on the ground of fraud in procuring it, and that fraud is imputed to the witnesses, evidence of their good character may be given. Stephenson v. Walker, 4 Esp. 50; Provis v. Reed, 5 Bing. 435.

2. Rapalje's Law of Witnesses, § 197; U. S. v. Vansickle, 2 McLean C. C., 219; Bank v. Cooté, 3 Cr. C. 169; Gass v. Stinson, 4 Cr. C. C. 605; U. S. v. Masters, 4 Cr. C. C. 479; Nugent v. State, 18 Ala. 521; State v. Randolph, 24 Conn. 363; Boswell v. Blackman, 12 Ga. 591; Frye v. Bank, 11 Ill. 367; Crabtree v. Kile, 21 Ill. 180; Fletcher v. State, 49 Ind. 124; Farley v. State, 57 Ind. 331; Carter v. Cavanaugh, 1 Gr. (Iowa) 171; Herzman v. Oberfelder, 54 Iowa, 83; Taylor v. Clendinning, 4 Kan. 524; Phillips v. Kingsfield, 19 Me. 375; State v. Bruce, 24 Me. 71; Shaw v. Emery, 42 Me. 59; State v. Morse, 67 Me. 428; Commonwealth v. Moore, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 194; Bank v. Hobbs, 11 Gray (Mass.), 250; Webber v. Hanke, 4 Mich. 198; Rudsdill v. Slingerland, 18 Minn. 380; Newman v. Mackin, 13 S. & M. (Miss.) 383; Smith v. State, 58 Miss. 867; Hoitt v. Moulton, 21 N. H. 586; Atwood v. Impson, 5 C. E. G. (N. J.) 150; Craig v. State, 5 Ohio St. 605; State v. Alexander, 2 Mill (S. Car.), 171; Clark v. Bailey, 2 Strobel (S. Car.) 143; Boon v. Wethered, 23 Tex. 675; Ayres v. Duprey, 27 Tex. 593; Powers v. Leach, 26 Vt. 270; Willard v. Goodenough, 30 Vt. 393; Rixey v. Bayse, 4 Leigh (Va.), 330; Uhl v. Commonwealth, 6 Gratt. (Va.) 706. Accordingly evidence of a witness's bad character for chastity is inadmissible. Bolles v. State, 46 Ala. 204; People v. Yslas, 27 Cal. 630; Weathers v. Barksdale, 30 Ga. 888; Kilburn v. Mullen, 22 Iowa, 498; Bakeman v. Rose, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 105; Ford v. Jones, 62 Barb. (N. Y.) 484; Commonwealth v. Churchill, 11 Metc. (Mass.) 538; Gilchrist v. McKee, 4 W. (Pa.) 380; Spears v. Forest, 15 Vt. 435; Merriman v. State, 3 Lea (Tenn.), 393; Ketchingman v. State, 6 Wis. 426. Or for intemperance. Thayer v. Boyle, 30 Me. 475; Hoitt v. Moulton, 21 N. H. 586; Brindle v. McIlvaine, 10 S. & R. (Pa.) 282. Evidence as to truth and integrity was held properly admitted in Heath v. Scott, 65 Cal. 548.

On the other hand, it is held that the inquiry is not confined to the witness's

CHARCOAL.—Coal made by charring wood under turf, or in other circumstances to exclude air; wood coal.<sup>1</sup>

CHARGE.<sup>2</sup>—The burden, obligation, or duty laid or imposed upon a person or thing.<sup>3</sup> The person or thing committed or in-character for veracity, but should extend to his general moral character. Majors v. State, 29 Ark. 112; Ward v. State, 28 Ala. 53; People v. Beck, 58 Cal. 212; State v. Kirkpatrick (Iowa), 19 N. W. R. 660; State v. Hart (Iowa), 25 N. W. R. 99; Hume v. Scott, 3 A. K. M. (Ky.) 260; Blue v. Kibby, 1 T. B. M. (Ky.) 195; Tacket v. May, 3 Dana (Ky.) 79; Hutchings v. Cavilier, 3 H. & McH. (Md.) 389; State v. Shields, 13 Mo. 236; State v. Hamilton, 55 Mo. 523; State v. Miller, 71 Mo. 89; Day v. State, 71 Mo. 422; State v. Breeden, 58 Mo. 507; State v. Grant, 76 Mo. 239; State v. Rugan, 5 Mo. App. 592; People v. Mather, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 229; State v. Stallings, 2 Hay. (N. Car.) 30; State v. Boswell, 2 Dev. (N. Car.) 209; Commonwealth v. McClain, 4 Clark (Pa.) 462; Gilliam v. State, 1 Head (Tenn.) 38; and see Teese v. Huntingdon, 23 How. (U. S.) 2. But it is not error to ask the impeaching witness if he knows the witness's general reputation for truth and veracity. Knode v. Williamson, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 586. Bad character for chastity was admitted to impeach a witness in Sword v. Nestor, 3 Dana (Ky.) 453; Evans v. Smith, 5 T. B. Mon (Ky.) 363; Railroad Co. v. Anthony, 43 Ind. 183; State v. Shields, 13 Mo. 236; s. c., 53 Am. Dec. 147. And see James v. State, 13 Tex. 168.

It is provided in Indiana by statute that "in all questions affecting the credibility of a witness, his general moral character may be given in evidence." R. S. of 1881, secs. 505 and 1803; Farley v. State, 57 Ind. 333. So in Iowa by Code, § 3694; State v. Egan, 59 Iowa, 636.

1. Neither in the popular use of the word nor in commercial contracts and legal phraseology, does the simple term "charcoal," without the word "animal" before it, include bone-black or animal charcoal. Animal charcoal or bone-black produced by the process of burning bone, or exposing it to the action of fire, in the same manner that wood is exposed to the action of fire to produce vegetable charcoal, and bone-dust produced by the process of pulverizing or grinding bones or pieces of bone, whereby they are reduced to small fragments of no regular or uniform shape or size, are "manufactures of bone" within the description of an Internal Revenue Act, taxing "manufactures of bone," and the exemption of "charcoal" by such an act from taxation does not exempt animal charcoal or bone-black produced in the manner above stated. Schreifer v. Wood, 5 Blatch. (U. S. C. C.) 215.

2. Distinctive Significance of the Term rests in the idea of obligation, directly bearing upon the individual thing or person to be affected, and binding him or it to the discharge of the duty or satisfaction of the claim imposed. Thus charging an estate with the payment of a debt is appropriating a definite portion to the particular purpose; charging a person with the commission of a crime is pointing out the individual who is bound to answer for the wrong committed; charging a jury is stating the precise principles of law applicable to the case immediately in question. In this view, a charge will in general terms denote a responsibility peculiar to the person or thing affected and authoritatively imposed, or the act fixing such responsibility. Bouvier.

3. As Applied to Property, charge signifies that it is a security for the payment of a debt or performance of an obligation. There is a distinction between a covenant that all the estates of a covenantor are charged with a sum of money, and that he will charge his estates; the former is a charge upon all covenantor's lands, the latter is not. Falkner v. O'Brien, 2 Ball. & B. 223.

A simple covenant or agreement to charge land will not create a charge upon the debtor's real estate when no particular land is mentioned, or the agreement is only for a personal, with power to call for a real security, or where it otherwise appears to be intended to rely only upon the covenant. Collins v. Plummer, 1 P. W. 104.

It is a general term applying as well to mortgages, liens, incumbrances, writs of execution, etc., or as to securities which have no special name, and where there is not necessarily a personal debt.

Where a complaint set forth a series of loans and advances, and of renewals of notes given therefor, and alleged that at the time of each loan and of each renewal a charge of one per cent upon the amount of the debt was made in addition to lawful interest, and that thereafter a balance was claimed by defendant (the lender) as due to it on all previous transactions, and that it granted a renewal of the loan upon the borrower, giving his note for the amount claimed, held. . . . that the word "charge" in the association in which it was found in the complaint implied not only a demand made, but an obligation imposed and taken. Merchants Ex. N. Bk. v. Com. Warehouse Co., 49 N. J. 635.

In a Mortgage—When not Synonymous with Lien.—In an indenture of mortgage executed by a railroad corporation to trustees, to secure bonds issued to raise money to pay off its existing indebtedness, and to complete and equip its road, the corporation covenanted with the trustees that the expenditure of all sums of money realized from the sale of the bonds should be made with the approval of at least one of the trustees, and that his assent in writing should be necessary to all contracts made by the company before the same should be a charge upon any of the sums received from such sales; held, that a contractor, agreeing with the corporation to construct a portion of the road, and obtaining the assent of two of the trustees to his contract, and subsequently doing the work, did not acquire any lien for the payment of his work, under this covenant of the indenture, upon the funds received by the corporation from the bonds. Dillon v. Barnard, 21 Wall. 430.

The term "charge" was here held not to be synonymous with lien; that such a meaning was not in harmony with its immediate context or the object of the indenture. The term "charge" is not used in any technical sense, as importing a lien upon the funds, but in the general acceptation of a claim that may be payable out of them.

Duty of Trustee having a Charge on Fund.—There is no duty on a trustee of a fund who has himself a charge upon it to communicate that charge to a person who gives him notice of a subsequent charge. Ex parte Wilkes, L. R. 4 Chancery Div. 104.

Created by Will.—The testator may create a charge upon the devisee personally in respect of the estate devised, as, if he devises lands to B. on condition, of his paying such a legacy, the devisee takes the estate on that condition; and he will take a fee by implication, though there be no words of limitation, on the principle that he might otherwise be a loser. 4 Kent's Comm. 540.

But where the charge is upon the estate, and there are no words of limitation or other words denoting an intention to pass the fee, but only a devise to A. of his lands, after the debts and legacies are paid, the devisee takes only an estate for life. Johnson v. Bull, 10 Johns. 148; Jackson v. Martin, 18 Johns. 35; Speaker v. Van Alstyne, 18 Wend. 200; McLellan v. Turner, 15 Me. 436; Lithgow v. Kavenagh, 9 Mass. 161; Gibson v. Horton, 5 Harr. & J. 177; Beall v. Holmes, 6 Harr. & J. 208. But where the will directs an act to be done which cannot be accomplished, unless a greater estate than one for life be taken, it becomes necessary that the devise be enlarged to a fee; where by the devise the devisee is to pay "thereout" or out of the "estate" certain legacies, it is a charge on the estate. Such a charge is no interest in, but a lien upon, the lands. Gardner v. Gardner, 3 Mason, 178; Taft v. Morse, 4 Met. (Mass.) 523; Thayer v. Finnegan, 134 Mass. 62; Walters' App., 95 Pa. St. 305; 4 Kent's Com. 541; Denison v. King, 1 Ves. & B. 260.

Charging Part of a Bill.—In equity, pleading consists of some allegation which sets forth the matters of defence or excuse which it is supposed the defendant intends or pretends to set up, to justify his non-compliance with the plaintiff's claim, and then charges other matters which disprove or avoid the supposed defence or excuse. Sometimes used for the purpose of obtaining a discovery of the nature of defendant's case. Story's Eq. Plead. § 31; Mitt. Eq. Plead. 140.

Charge and Discharge.—The mode formerly employed in taking an account before a master in chancery. The complainant exhibited the items of his claim in a form called a "charge;" the defendant then submitted his "discharge," which set forth any counter claim. Dan. Ch. Pr. 1173.

Power to Charge.—A power to charge includes a power to sell. Kenworthy v. Bate, 6 Ves. 797.

In Statutes—Bankruptcy.—The word "charge" has a wider meaning than the words "mortgage" or "lien," and an execution creditor who has obtained, served, and made absolute his garnishee order before the bankruptcy, is a creditor holding a charge on a part of the bankrupt's estate, as a security for a debt due to him within the bankruptcy act, 1869, s. 16, subs. 5, and is therefore a creditor holding a security on the property of the bankrupt under s. 12. Emanuel v. Bridges, L. R. 9 Q. B. 286.

Lawful Charge in Redemption Act.—The word "charge" is of very large signification, and in the statute its proper signification is, every lien or incumbrance or claim the purchaser may have upon the premises, and for which at law or in equity he would be entitled to hold the lands as security, or to the satisfaction of which a court of equity would condemn them. Grigg v. Banks, 59 Ala. 319.

The interest of a mortgage debt is a "charge" upon the estate, though not in terms charged upon the land by the mortgage deed. Lee v. Hutchinson, 8 M. G. & S. 23.

A memorandum in lead pencil is sufficient charge within Statute of Frauds. Clasm v. Bailey, 14 Johns. 484.

Attorney's Charge at Law.—A charge in an attorney's bill for attending at a lock-up house and obtaining defendant's release and filing up the bail bond, is a charge at law under st. 2. G. II. c. 25, s. 25, and subject to taxation. Fearne v. Wilson, 6 B. & C. 86.

Charges.—The expenses incurred in relation to a transaction or suit.

The word "charges" in an agreement held not to include commissions or other compensation. Green v. Jones, 78 N. C. 268.

In a Receipt "in full for freight and charges," the term "charges" does not apply to an unsettled claim for damages. Huntley v. Dows, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 310.

Parliamentary Charges include land tax. 2 Atk. 542.

In a Letter, the expression "charged and assigned" property, does not necessarily mean that it had been conveyed absolutely and unconditionally. Hanby v. James, 5 Paige, 450.

In an Answer, the allegation that defendant "charged twenty-five dollars for his commissions" will not avail as a counter-claim in the absence of an allegation that the services were worth that sum. Farrington v. Wright, 1 Minn. 241.

To render a man liable to the payment of rates, he must be "charged" with them. Reg. v. St. Marylebone, 15 Ad. & El. 403.

Debts and Charges in a statute does not include a legacy. The latter word has from familiar use the precision of a technical term, and merely comprises the expenses incurred in the settlement of an estate. Goodwin v. Chaffee, 4 Conn. 166.

Free of Charge.—Where, in consideration of a conveyance, a railroad company agreed to carry G., his wife, and any of their children "free of charge" in the passenger cars run upon its road, and the plaintiff was one of the children mentioned, it was held that the effect of the agreement was to entitle plaintiff to be carried free of charge; that his right was as complete as though he had paid for it himself; and its infringement, whether tortious or otherwise, is a wrong to him for which he has an action. Grimes v. Minn. L. & M. R. Co., 33 N. W. Rep. 34.

Priority of Charge.—By a turnpike act, tolls were made subject to the payment of moneys borrowed and to be borrowed thereupon, mortgages of such tolls being given, conveying to each creditor such proportion of the tolls, toll-gates, etc., as the money by him advanced bore or should bear to the whole sum due or to become due on that security. By a subsequent act the former act was continued, and certain tolls were granted in respect of the new branch, to be applied like the former, and to be subject to the debts incurred on the credit of the former tolls; and it was enacted that all moneys due on such credit should be entitled to "a preference and priority of charge and payment" before any moneys advanced under this act for making the new branch. On an ejectment for the tolls and toll-house by the holder of a mortgage (framed like the former ones) for moneys lent to complete the branch road, held, that the words "priority of charge" did not prevent this mortgagee from acquiring a legal estate in the subjects mortgaged, and that he might receive the tolls, houses, etc., in ejectment, only remaining accountable to the other mortgagees for such portion of the tolls as they were entitled to in respect of their advances. Thompson v. Lediard, 4 B. & Ad. 137.

Declaration of Charge.—Under statute in England, the court may make a declaration that the solicitor employed in a proceeding is entitled to a "charge" upon the property recovered or pursued. Pilcher v. Arden, 7 Ch. D. 318.

Registered Charge.—By a statutory form under Land Transfer Act of 1875 the proprietor of freehold or leasehold may charge it with payment of money.

Charge on Holding.—A charge secured by the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1875, to the landlord who has made compensation to a tenant for improvements to the land; so that when the landlord is merely a limited owner (e.g., tenant for life) the amount will be paid to him or his representatives, if his estate comes to an end before the time when the improvement in respect of which the compensation was paid is taken to be exhausted. 38 & 39 Vict. c. 92, s. 42.

Charge to Enter Heir—Scotch Law.—A writ commanding a person to enter heir to his predecessor within forty days, trusted to the care, custody, or management of another.<sup>1</sup> To lay on or impose, as a task, duty, or trust. To accuse; impeach; arraign. An accusation or imputation of wrong and crime. An earnest or impressive command, direction, exhortation, or injunction; as the charge of a judge to a jury.<sup>2</sup> otherwise an action to be raised against him as if he had entered.

Charging Order.—In English practice, an order allowed by statute to be granted to a judgment creditor, that the property of the judgment debtor in government stock, or in the stock of any public company in England, corporate or otherwise, shall stand charged with the payment of the amount for which judgment shall have been recovered with interest. 1 & 2 Vict. ch. 110, § 14; 3 & 4 Vict. ch. 82; 3 Steph. Com. 587.

1. Person in Charge.—Where a person selects the course of a ship, and takes the management of her for the purpose of directing her in that course, he is in charge or conduct of the vessel within the meaning of the General Pilot Act. Beilby v. Scott, 7 M. & W. 100.

A medical man sent a patient suffering from scarlet-fever to a fever hospital, directing him to walk in the middle of the road and not to talk with any one; upon his being refused admission, the doctor walked with him through the streets of the town to the residence of the chairman of the local board, and then to the police station to procure an ambulance; held, that the finding of the justices that it was not proved the medical man "had charge of" the patient, was right. Tunbridge Wells Local Board v. Bisshopp, L. R. 2 C. P. Div. 187.

At the time of a collision, the master of a steamer was below and the mate on deck. Soon after the collision the master came on deck. Held, that the mate before and the master after he came on deck were "in charge" of the ship within the meaning of the Merchants' Ship-pings Act. Ex parte Ferguson, L. R. 6 Q. B. 280.

Charged with Crime—Accused of Crime—are phrases implying certain legal steps. Therefore a statute against the concealment or carrying away of any slave "charged with a capital crime" could be violated only after legal proceedings were commenced against the slave. State v. Duncan, 9 Port. (Ala.) 260.

Where an indictment charged that the defendants did "falsely charge and accuse him of the crime of adultery, and thereby to extort," etc., the term "charge and accuse" thus used and in this connection does not mean actually charge before a grand jury or magistrate, but to impute to him these offences falsely as a means of inducing him to pay money to avoid such actual prosecution. Comm. v. O'Brien, 12 Cush. 90. Cf. Rex v. Abgood, 2 C. & P. 436.

"Charges" implies an original complaint made in the first instance, preliminary to a formal trial for a crime—Ryan v. People, 79 N. Y. 598,—and signifies an accusation made in a legal manner of illegal conduct by the person charged. Tempest v. Lithgood, 1 Bush (Ky.), 180.

And under a statute authorizing selectmen of a town to offer a reward to secure any person "charged" with a capital crime, . . . no authority is given to offer such a reward unless the person has been charged with the crime by complaint or indictment. Day v. Inhabitants of Otis, 8 Allen (Mass.), 477. And so of a person in custody, "charged with crime" embraces only such cases as have been passed upon by a grand jury. Mary v. State, 5 Mo. 71.

Use of word "charged" in an indictment instead of "charge," is not such a defect as will justify a reversal. Brazin v. State, 44 Ala. 387.

"Charged" is said by Holt, C. J., to be a vulgar expression, but not a legal one, and a man is not "charged in custody" until a writ has been delivered to the sheriff and he has been arrested. Jackson v. Humphreys, 11 Mod. 69.

Charging the Hundred.—In the ancient law, amercing the hundred for every murder committed within it. 2 Bishop Crim. L. § 623.

Jury—When Charged—In Tennessee.—By the word "charged" is meant after the prisoner has been placed in the hands of the jury for trial. It means charged with the fate of the prisoner, and not with the testimony or law of the case. Ward v. State, 1 Hemps. (Tenn.) 253; State v. Conner, 5 Coldw. (Tenn.) 313.

2 Charge to Jury.—A series of instructions given to a jury by the judge as to their duty, as in case of grand jury, or as to principles or rules of law which they are to apply to the facts in a case in determining their verdict, given to a petit jury after the case has been closed. See JURY TRIALS.

Statute requiring Judge's Charges to be in Writing.—After the jury had been Definition. CHARGEABLE—CHARIOT—CHARITIES. Definition.

CHARGEABLE.—Capable of being charged, laid, imposed, or imputed; as, a duty chargeable on iron; a fault chargeable on man. Subject to be charged or accused; as, revenues chargeable with a claim; a man chargeable with murder. Serving to create expense; costly; burdensome.<sup>1</sup>

CHARIOT.—I. A war car or vehicle. II. A four-wheeled pleasure or state carriage having one seat.<sup>2</sup> (See also CARRIAGE.)

CHARITIES—TRUSTS FOR CHARITABLE USES. (See also ALMS; CORPORATIONS; DEVISE; LEGACY; TAXES; TRUSTS; WILLS.)

Definitions, 122.

Origin and Application of the Law Relating to Charitable Uses, 123.

The Purposes of Charitable Gifts, 126.

Trusts for the Poor, 127.

Trusts for Education, 128.

Trusts for Religious Purposes, 130.

Trusts for Public Purposes, 131.

Trusts for Other Charitable Purposes, 132.

Trusts Held not to be Charitable, 132.

Cy Pres Doctrine, 133.

Incidents of Charitable Uses, 135.

Restraints upon Donors, 137.

1. Definitions.—"A gift to a general public use which extends to the poor as well as the rich."<sup>3</sup> The purposes which are enumerated in the statute of 43 Elizabeth, c. 4, or which, by analogy, are deemed within its spirit and intendment.<sup>4</sup> charged, a juror asked a question as to the rights of the parties to which a negative answer was given, without being reduced to writing; held, that the answer was no part of the "charge" under the statute. Millard v. Lyons, 25 Wis. 516. Remarks to the jury which were substantially a mere direction to find for the plaintiff held not to be a "charge" within the meaning of the same statute. Grant v. Conn. Mut. Life Ins. Co., 29 Wis. 126.

In the absence of a statute or constitutional provision, no charge need be given to a jury—a civil case. Drury v. White, 10 Mo. 354; Coates v. Sangston, 5 Md. 121. And under the code of Mississippi the judge is not at liberty to charge the jury unless requested so to do. Miss. Code, 1871, § 643. See Thompson Charging Juries.

1. Webster.

In Statute.—A notice sent by selectmen of one town to selectmen of another town stating that "W. and E., paupers of your town, are here poor and unable to support themselves," was insufficient, as not showing the paupers were in fact "chargeable" to the town sending the notice, the statute prescribing that the notice should state the name of the pauper and that he is "chargeable." Beacon Falls v. Seymour, 44 Conn. 210.

Where a statute gave the general rule that no person shall be removed till actually chargeable, and then states that an unmarried woman with child shall be deemed to be chargeable within the intent of the act, an order of removal adjudging the person removed was with child and unmarried, without drawing the conclusion that she was "chargeable," is bad; the fact of pregnancy is prima facie evidence of her chargeability, but open to be rebutted by evidence of substance. King v. Holm, 11 East. 381.

"Chargeable" is not equivalent to "not able to work" used in a statute. In re Morten, 5 Ad. & El. (N. S.) 590.

Chargeable Thereby.—When to bar the Statute of Limitations an acknowledgment in writing must be signed by the party chargeable thereby, a letter stating that funds have been appointed for the purpose of paying the debt of which a third party is trustee, and referring the plaintiff to A. for further information, does not charge the writer, the defendant. Whippy v. Hilary, 3 Barn. & Ad. 399.

Actually Chargeable.—In an action to recover for work done by an apprentice to the plaintiff, a recital in the instrument executed by the overseer of the poor under the Massachusetts statute that the boy's father is "actually chargeable" to the town, etc., is prima facie evidence of the fact recited. Bardwell v. Purring-ton, 107 Mass. 419.

2. Webster.

3. Jones v. Williams, Amb. 652; Coggeshall v. Pelton, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 294; Perin v. Carey, 24 How. (U. S.) 465.

4. Sir William Grant in Morice v. Bishop of Durham, 9 Vesey, 405.

"Whatever is given for the love of God, or for the love of your neighbor, in the catholic and universal sense—given from these motives and to these ends—free from the stain or taint of every consideration that is personal, private, or selfish," is a gift for charitable uses.<sup>1</sup>

"A charity in a legal sense may be more fully defined as a gift to be applied consistently with existing laws for the benefit of an indefinite number of persons—either by bringing their hearts under the influence of education or religion, by relieving their bodies from disease, suffering, or constraint, by assisting them to establish themselves for life, or by erecting or maintaining public buildings or works, or otherwise lessening the burdens of government. It is immaterial whether the purpose is called charitable in the gift itself, if it is so described as to show that it is charitable in its nature."<sup>2</sup>

"Good will, benevolence, desire to add to the happiness or improvement of our fellow-beings."<sup>3</sup>

2. Origin and Application of the Law Relating to Charitable Uses.—

It was at one time supposed that these trusts arose from the provisions of the statute of 43 Eliz., c. 4, known as the Statute of Charitable Uses. This act enumerates many classes of charitable uses which were directed to be enforced, but the design of this and several prior statutes was merely the restoration and encouragement of the charitable institutions which had been abolished by earlier statutes.<sup>4</sup> It has been shown that the court of chancery, at a time earlier than the enactment of the Statute of Charitable Uses, had often exercised jurisdiction over these trusts, and it seems clear that the jurisdiction now so common arose not from that statute, but independently of it.<sup>5</sup> It is now generally settled that courts of equity have an original and inherent jurisdiction over charities, though the English statute is not in force, and independently of it.<sup>6</sup> Thus courts of equity in the several States, where they are not restricted by statute in their powers in this respect, exercise an original power over charities according to the rules and practice of equity, irrespective of the adoption by the

1 Vidal v. Girard's Executors, 2 How. (U. S.) 127; Price v. Maxwell, 28 Pa. St. 23.

But a condition that the donor's name shall be attached to the gift does not invalidate it as a legal charity. Miller v. Porter, 53 Pa. St. 292.

2 Gray, J., in Jackson v. Phillips, 14 Allen (Mass.), 556.

3 Mitchell, J., in Donohugh's Appeal, 86 Pa. St. 312.

4 Bispham's Equity, sec. 118. See the statute reprinted in Duke Char. Uses, 1 Boyle Char. 461; Abstract in Perry on Trusts, sec. 692, note.

5 Vidal v. Girard's Executors, 2 How. (U. S.) 127, and see schedule of cases from chancery proceedings in time of Elizabeth, in notes to that case, pp. 155-161.

6 Vidal v. Girard's Executors, 2 How. (U. S.) 127, distinguishing Baptist Association v. Hart's Executors, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 1, in which the earlier view had been taken; Carter v. Balfour, 19 Ala. 814; Wright v. Trustees of M. E. Church, 1 Hoffm. Ch. (N. Y.) 202; Dutch Church v. Mott, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 77; Witman v. Lex, 17 S. & R. (Pa.) 88; Burr v. Smith, 7 Vt. 241; Ould v. Washington Hospital, 95 U. S. 303. "It is believed that such is the settled doctrine in all the States of the Union except Virginia, Maryland, and North Carolina." Kain v. Gibbony, 101 U. S. 362; Russell v. Allen, 107 U. S. 182.

law of the State of the statute of 43 Eliz., c. 4.<sup>1</sup> This statute affords a definition or test of many of the common classes of charities, though many other purposes have been admitted as the subjects of charitable uses by the courts from analogy to those pointed out by the statute; it also authorized a commission to inquire into the abuses and employment of the estates given to charity, and repealed, so far as was necessary, the statutes of mortmain then in force. "It has now become an established principle of American law that courts of chancery will sustain and protect such a gift, devise, or bequest, or dedication of property to public charitable uses, provided the same is consistent with local laws and public policy, where the object of the gift is a dedication specific and capable of being carried into effect according to the intentions of the donor."<sup>3</sup>

1. Perry on Trusts, sec. 694.

2. "The opinion prevailed extensively in this country for a considerable period that the validity of charitable endowments and the jurisdiction of courts of equity in such cases depended upon that statute. . . . The former idea was exploded, and has since nearly disappeared from the jurisprudence of the country. Upon reading the statute carefully, one cannot but feel surprised that the doubts thus indicated ever existed. The statute is purely remedial and ancillary. It provided for a commission to examine into the abuses of charities already existing, and to correct such abuses. An appeal lay to the lord chancellor. The statute was silent as to the creation or inhibition of any new charity, and it neither increased nor diminished the pre-existing jurisdiction in equity touching the subject. The object of the statute was to create a cheaper and a speedier remedy for existing abuses. The Morpeth Corporation, Duke on Charitable Uses, 242. In the course of time, the new remedy fell into entire disuse, and the control of the chancellor became again practically sole and exclusive. . . . The learning developed in the three cases mentioned [Magill v. Brown, Brightly (Pa.), 346, in which an elaborate review of the law was delivered by Baldwin, J., in the U. S. C. C.; Burr's Executors v. Smith, 7 Vt. 241; and Vidal v. Girard's Executors, 2 How. (U. S.) 128] shows clearly that the law as to such uses, and the jurisdiction of the chancellor, and the extent to which it was exercised, before and after the enactment of the statute, were just the same." Swayne, J., in Ould v. Washington Hospital, 95 U. S. 309.

3. Wayne, J., in Perin v. Carey, 24 How. (U. S.) 465.

Jurisdiction over Charities in the Various States.

—Without a particular enactment the statute of 43 Eliz., c. 4, could not be in force in this country. Perin v. Carey, 24 How. (U. S.) 465, citing Atty. Gen. v. Stewart, 2 Merivale, 143, in which it was held that the English mortmain acts were not in force in the colonies.

In Alabama, the court of chancery has jurisdiction by virtue of its original common-law powers, without claiming prerogative powers or invoking the aid of the statute. Carter v. Balfour, 19 Ala. 814. Williams v. Pearson, 38 Ala. 299.

In California, the general chancery jurisdiction is recognized irrespective of the statute. Hinckley's Estate, 58 Cal. 457.

In Connecticut, the spirit of the statute was re-enacted in 1702. American Bible Society v. Wetmore, 17 Conn. 181.

In Delaware, there is in its court of chancery the general equitable jurisdiction independent of the statute. Griffith v. State, 2 Del. Ch. 421; State v. Griffith, 2 Del. Ch. 392.

In Georgia, the principles of the statute have been adopted, and constitute part of the law of the State. Beall v. Fox, 4 Ga. 404.

The Code of 1873 contains general provisions, which, it is said, show "that the law of charities is fully adopted in Georgia, as far as is compatible with a free government, where no royal prerogative is exercised." Jones v. Habersham, 107 U. S. 174.

In Illinois, the principles of the statute are in force. Heuser v. Harris, 42 Ill. 425.

In Indiana, the principles of the statute have been adopted, and constitute a part of the law of the State. McCord v. Ochiltree, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 15; Commissioners of Lagrange Co. v. Rogers, 55 Ind. 299.

In Iowa, the inherent jurisdiction of the courts of equity is recognized. Miller v. Chittenden, 4 Iowa, 252.

In Kentucky, the statute and the equitable jurisdiction are fully adopted. Church v. Church, 18 B. Mon. (Ken.) 635. See also Atty.-Gen. v. Wallace, 7 B. Mon. (Ken.) 611.

In Louisiana, the jurisdiction is derived solely from the civil law, but under its code a liberal jurisdiction is exercised. Fink v. Fink, 12 La. Ann. 301.

In Maine, the general provisions of the statute are held to be in force, but the courts are not restricted by it. Tappan v. Deblois, 45 Me. 122; Howard v. Amer. Peace Soc., 49 Me. 288; Swasey v. Amer. Bible Soc., 57 Me. 526.

In Maryland, the statute was held to have been repealed, and, in the view that the jurisdiction over charitable uses arose from the statute, it is held that the court cannot sustain a trust for charity which would otherwise be void. Dashiell v. Atty.-Gen., 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 392; Barnum's Case, 62 Md. 275; Crisp v. Crisp, 3 Cent. Rep. 870. The bill of rights, however, recognizes the doctrines of the statute by giving validity to gifts, etc., of restricted amounts of land for churches and burying-grounds. Beatty v. Kurtz, 3 Peters (U. S.), 566. There is no jurisdiction to set up a charity for the relief of the poor. Wilderman v. Baltimore, 8 Md. 551. But a trust for educational purposes reposed in a municipal corporation will be enforced as charitable. Barnum v. Baltimore, 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 203.

In Massachusetts the statute is in full force as a test of the law of charitable uses, and such gifts will be most liberally construed in order to accomplish the intent of the donor. Earle v. Wood, 8 Cush. (Mass.) 437; Jackson v. Phillips, 14 Allen (Mass.), 539 (opinion by Gray, J.), reviews the law on this subject.

In Michigan it has been held that the statute is not in force, and that trusts for charitable uses are not distinguished from others, and their validity depends on the same rules. Meth. Church v. Clark, 41 Mich. 730 (1879).

In Minnesota the rule of the New York cases (infra) is followed. Little v. Willford, 31 Minn. 173.

In Mississippi the courts exercise the inherent powers of courts of equity over these trusts. Wade v. Colonization Soc., 7 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 663; State v. Prewitt, 20 Miss. 165.

In Missouri the principles of the statute are liberally administered. Chambers v. St. Louis, 29 Mo. 543.

In New Hampshire the general principles of the law of charitable uses have been recognized. Chapin v. School District, 35 N. H. 445.

In New Jersey the court of chancery has exercised full jurisdiction over charities. Norris v. Thomson, 4 C. E. Green (N. J.), 307; Atty.-Gen. v. Moore, 4 C. E. Green (N. J.), 445.

In New York the law was applied liberally in the earlier cases on the principle of general chancery jurisdiction. Wright v. Trustees, 1 Hoff. Ch. 202; Ayres v. Trustees, 3 Sand. (N. Y.) 351; King v. Woodhull, 3 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 79. But it was then held that the Statute of Charitable Uses was repealed by statute in 1788, and with it the whole system of charitable uses, and that the present law is a peculiar system which has arisen in that State under which trusts for charities must be as definite as private trusts. Bascomb v. Albertson, 34 N. Y. 584.

In North Carolina the principles of the statute were adopted in the earlier cases, but the later cases hold that trusts for charities are to be sustained only by the rules applicable to other trusts. Griffin v. Graham, 1 Hawks (N. Car.), 96; White v. University, 4 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 19; Bridges v. Pleasants, 4 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 26.

In Ohio the statute of 43 Eliz. c. 4, if it was ever in force, was repealed in 1806, but its principles have been applied to all cases as a part of the chancery jurisdiction. Perin v. Carey, 24 How. (U. S.) 465; Amer. Bible Soc. v. Marshall, 15 Ohio St. 537.

In Pennsylvania the statute of 43 Eliz. c. 4 was not reported by the judges in their Report of British Statutes in force in the State, but it has been held that its principles as applied by chancery in England obtained in that State by force of its own common law, and that relief would be given so far as the power of the courts would enable them. Witman v. Lex, 17 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 88; Zimmerman v. Anders, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 218; Wright v. Linn, 9 Pa. St. 433; Vidal v. Girard's Executors, 2 How. (U. S.) 127.

In Rhode Island, a statute was enacted in 1721, which was evidently taken from the statute of Elizabeth; it is in substance and effect like it, and it gives the same power, for the same purpose, to be exercised in substantially the same way, though by a different jurisdiction. This statute is substantially re enacted in the Revised Statutes. Derby v. Derby, 4 R. I. 414.

In South Carolina, the general jurisdic-

3. The Purposes of Charitable Gifts.<sup>1</sup>—These are very numerous and do not admit of an exact classification. The definitions already given show how difficult it is to classify the objects which may be selected by donors and sustained as charitable uses. The main distinction between an ordinary trust and one for a charitable use is, that the former is for a definite ascertained object, while the latter is favored and supported in equity by reason of the uncertainty of its objects. A trust for beneficiaries who are named or defined is a trust which the ordinary doctrines of equity are fully able to support.<sup>2</sup> The uncertainty of the objects is thus a distinguishing feature of trusts for charitable uses, and owing to it they may be upheld under circumstances under which private trusts would fail. "They may, and indeed must, be for the benefit of an indefinite number of persons; for if all the beneficiaries are tion of chancery is exercised. Atty.-Gen. v. Jolly, 1 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 99.

In Tennessee, the statute is not in force, but its provisions which were the law before its enactment, and which are applicable to the institutions, are applied. Dickson v. Montgomery, 1 Swan (Tenn.), 348; Franklin v. Armfield, 2 Sneed. (Tenn.) 305.

In Texas, the general principles of the statute are applied. Paschal v. Acklin, 27 Tex. 173.

In Vermont, the chancery jurisdiction is exercised irrespective of the statute. Burr's Executors v. Smith, 7 Vt. 241.

In Virginia, the statute was repealed, and trusts for charities were held subject to the same rules as private trusts. Gallego v. Atty.-Gen., 3 Leigh (Va.), 451; Baptist Association v. Hart, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 1; Wheeler v. Smith, 9 How. (U. S.) 55; Kain v. Gibbony, 101 U. S. 362; Carpenter v. Miller, 3 W. Va. 174. This doctrine has recently been repudiated, and a more liberal rule has been introduced by statute. P. E. Education Soc. v. Churchman's Rep., 80 Va. 718.

In Wisconsin, the statute is held not to be in force, and the doctrine of charitable uses is not recognized. Dodge v. Williams, 46 Wis. 70.

The Forum in which the Validity of the Trust is Determined.—According to the uniform course of the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States, the validity of a devise for charitable uses, as against the heirs at law, depends upon the law of the State in which the lands lie, and the validity of the bequests, as against the next of kin, upon the law of the State in which the testator had his domicile. Vidal v. Girard's Executors, 2 How. (U. S.) 127; Wheeler v. Smith, 9 How. (U. S.) 55; McDonough v. Murdoch, 15 How. (U. S.) 367; Fountain v.

Raduel, 17 How. (U. S.) 369; Perin v. Carey, 24 How. (U. S.) 465; Lorings v. Marsh, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 337; U. S. v. Fox, 94 U. S. 315; Kain v. Gibbony, 101 U. S. 362; Russell v. Allen, 107 U. S. 182; Jones v. Habersham, 107 U. S. 174; Fellows v. Miner, 119 Mass. 541. But a devise to a charitable corporation which, in the State of its domicile, cannot take land, is void in the State of the testator's domicile, though the land be situated in the latter State. Starkweather v. Amer. Bible Soc., 72 Ill. 50; Crombie's Heirs v. Louisville Orphans' Home Soc., 3 Bush (Ky.), 365. A corporation for educational purposes, however, created by another State, with power to acquire and real estate, may take by devise in Illinois. St. Clara Fem. Acad. v. Sullivan, 4 West. Rep. (Ill.) 114. And in Pennsylvania a charitable corporation of a sister State may take land by gift or devise. A restriction in the statute of wills of the State of incorporation does not affect its capacity in Pennsylvania. Thompson v. Swope, 24 Pa. St. 474.

1. The object and purposes named in the Stat. 43, Eliz. c. 4. are: Relief of aged, impotent, and poor people; maintenance of sick and maimed soldiers and mariners; schools of learning, free schools, and scholars in universities; repair of bridges, ports, havens, causways, churches, sea-banks, and highways; education and preferment of orphans; relief, stock, or maintenance of houses of correction; marriages of poor maids; supportation, aid, and help of young tradesmen, handicraftsmen, and persons decayed; relief or redemption of prisoners or captives; aid or ease of any poor inhabitants concerning payments of fifteens setting out of soldiers, and other taxes.

2. Bispham's Equity, sec. 116.

personally designated, the trust lacks the essential element of indefiniteness, which is one characteristic of a legal charity.<sup>1</sup>

4. Trusts for the Poor—Almsgiving and General Relief.—Almsgiving is perhaps the earliest and primary signification of the term "charity." Among the instances of this class of gifts in the English cases are the following which have been sustained: To the poor of a parish, to poor housekeepers,<sup>3</sup> to the widows and orphans of the parish of L.,<sup>4</sup> to twenty aged widows and spinsters of a certain parish (the word "poor" being implied);<sup>5</sup> "among poor pious persons, male or female, old or infirm, as the executors see fit, not omitting large and sick families, if of good character;"<sup>6</sup> "to the widows and children of seamen belonging to the town of Liverpool;"<sup>7</sup> to the poor on testator's estate;<sup>8</sup> "to the inhabitants of Tawleaven Row" (who at testator's death were seven poor families);<sup>9</sup> for the poor relations of testator;<sup>10</sup> to pay the interest of a fund to such of the lineal descendants of W. as they might severally need;<sup>11</sup> to sixty ejected ministers.<sup>12</sup> The American cases are equally broad in sustaining this class of trusts. The following have been upheld: "In trust for the benefit of the poor;"<sup>13</sup> to the suffering poor of the town of A.;<sup>14</sup> to the poor of a particular parish or church;<sup>15</sup> for the relief of the destitute in such a manner as charity is usually distributed by the minister at large in the city of Boston;<sup>16</sup> to societies whose objects are the "relief of distressed widows and the schooling and maintaining of poor chil-

1. Gray, J., in Russell v. Allen, 107 U. S. 182, reviewing prior decisions of U. S. Sup. Ct. upon charitable uses. Jones v. Habersham, 107 U. S. 174.

2. Atty.-Gen. v. Pearce, 2 Atk. 87.

3. Atty.-Gen. v. Pearce, 2 Atk. 87.

4. Atty.-Gen. v. Comber, 2 Sim. & S. 93; Salter v. Farey, 7 Jur. 831.

5. Thompson v. Corby, 27 Beav. 649.

6. Nash v. Morey, 5 Beav. 177.

7. Powell v. Atty.-Gen., 3 Meriv. 48.

8. Bristow v. Bristow, 5 Beav. 289.

9. Rogers v. Thomas, 2 Keen. 8.

10. Atty.-Gen. v. Sidney Sussex College, 31 Beav. 654; Atty.-Gen. v. Price, 17 Ves. 371; White v. White, 7 Ves. 423.

A gift "for the relief and use of the poorest of my kindred" must, to be a charitable gift, be construed as a gift for the benefit of those who are really poor, and not of those who are the least wealthy. Atty.-Gen. v. Northumberland, 7 L. R. Ch. D. 745.

Friendly Societies.—A friendly society, i.e., for paying benefits to sick members irrespective of their poverty, is not a charitable institution, and on its dissolution a fund bequeathed to it will not be applied cy pres, but will fall into the testator's residuary estate. In re Clark's Trust, 1 L. R. Ch. D. 497.

11. Gillam v. Taylor, 16 L. H. Eq. 581.

12. Atty.-Gen. v. Baxter, 1 Vern. 248.

Protection of Animals.—A bequest for founding and supporting an animal sanitary institution for investigating and curing maladies, distempers, and injuries of quadrupeds or birds useful to man is a good charitable bequest. University of London v. Yarrow, 1 De G. & J. 72.

It seems that the prevention of cruelty to the lower order of animals is a good charitable purpose, though unaccompanied by any reference to the utility or improvement of man. Marsh v. Means, 3 Jur. N. S. 790.

13. Lorings v. Marsh, 6 Wall. (U.S.) 337.

14. Howard v. American Peace Soc., 49 Me. 288; Heuser v. Harris, 42 Ill. 425.

But under the peculiar construction of the law of charities in Maryland gifts to the poor children of a parish, or to the poor children attending a charity school, are void for uncertainty. Dashiell v. Atty.-Gen., 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 392; or to the indigent and necessitous poor residing in a certain ward. Wilderman v. Baltimore, 8 Md. 551.

15. Atty.-Gen. v. Old South Society, 13 Allen (Mass.), 474.

16. Derby v. Derby, 4 R. I. 414.

dren," and the "relief of indigent widows and orphans in the city of S.;"<sup>1</sup> for a hospital for foundlings;<sup>2</sup> for bread for the poor of a congregation;<sup>3</sup> for a hospital, named after the donor, for the relief of the indigent blind and lame;<sup>4</sup> for the relief of poor members of a Friends' meeting, and for the relief and civilization of the Indians;<sup>5</sup> for poor relations;<sup>6</sup> and "for the special benefit of the worthy, deserving, poor, white American Protestant democratic widows and orphans residing in the town of B."<sup>7</sup>

5. Trusts for Education.—"Schools of learning, free schools, and scholars in universities" are objects enumerated in the statute. No trusts have been more constantly and uniformly upheld as charitable than those for the support of schools and colleges.<sup>8</sup> Donations given for the establishment of colleges, schools, and seminaries of learning, and especially such as are for the education of orphans and poor scholars, are charities in the sense of the common law.<sup>9</sup> A gift designed to promote the public good by

1. Jones v. Habersham, 107 U. S. 174.

2. "The objection of uncertainty in this case as to the particular foundlings to be received is without force. The endowment of hospitals for the afflicted and destitute of particular classes, or without any specification of class, is one of the commonest forms of such uses. The hospital being incorporated, nothing beyond its designation as the donee is necessary. Who shall be received, with all other details of management, may well be committed to those to whom its administration is intrusted." Ould v. Washington Hospital, 95 U. S. 303.

3. Witman v. Lex, 17 S. & R. (Pa.) 88, citing as an instance of a charitable use the bequest of money in the will of Benjamin Franklin to be loaned for five years to young mechanics.

4. Philadelphia v. Elliott, 3 Rawle (Pa.), 170. So also devise to build a hospital for aged, decrepid, and worn-out sailors. Inglis v. Sailors' Snug Harbor, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 99.

It is immaterial if the institution is a corporation which receives pay for the admission or care of the patient, if no profit is derived. Gooch v. Assoc., 109 Mass. 558; McDonald v. Mass. Gen. Hosp., 120 Mass. 432.

5. Magill v. Brown, Brightly (Pa.), 347. Opinion by Baldwin, J., in circuit court of U. S. for E. D. of Pa., reviewing the history of charitable uses.

6. Swasey v. American Bible Soc., 57 Me. 527; Smith v. Harrington, 4 Allen (Mass.), 566. But not for testator's children and their descendants who may be destitute and in the opinion of trustees may need such aid. Kent v. Dunham (Mass.), 2 N. Eng. Rep. 655.

7. Beardsley v. Bridgeport (Conn.) 1 N. Eng. Rep. 639; Camp v. Crocker's Adm. (Conn.) 2 N. Eng. Rep. 134.

Gifts in Aid of Poor Rates.—A distinction has been drawn in the class of gifts for the poor by holding that such gifts were applicable only to the poor not receiving public aid as paupers, on the ground that otherwise the gift would relieve the wealthy tax-payers from their taxes, and not materially aid the poor. Atty.-Gen. v. Clarke, Amb. 422; Rogers v. Rogers, 2 Keen. 8; Atty.-Gen. v. Wilkinson, 1 Beav. 373; Atty.-Gen. v. Bovill, 1 Phil. 768; Atty.-Gen. v. Exeter, 2 Russ. 53, 359; Hereford v. Adams, 7 Ves. 324. But this must rest upon the intentions of the donor. Webb v. Neal, 5 Allen (Mass.), 575; Perry on Trusts, sec. 698.

8. Russell v. Allen, 107 U. S. 163.

9. Vidal v. Girard's Executors, 2 How. (U. S.) 127, 192. In this case the validity of the gifts under Girard's will to the city of Philadelphia was sustained. The principal contentions were as to the capacity of the city to act as trustee and the validity of a trust for a college; the testator gave general directions for the course of study, that the beneficiaries were to be "poor, white male orphans between the ages of six and ten years," preference being given "first, to orphans born in the city of Philadelphia; second, to those born in any other part of Pennsylvania; third, to those born in the city of New York; and last, to those born in the city of New Orleans;" and that scholars who shall merit it shall remain in the college until they shall respectively arrive at between fourteen and eighteen years of age." He also required that the encouragement of learning, science, and the useful arts, without any particular reference to the poor, is a charity.<sup>1</sup> A gift to promote education is a charity;<sup>2</sup> and so also to support a "school for the use of poor children,"<sup>3</sup> for the "schooling" of the children of a district,<sup>4</sup> to establish a professorship of the fine arts in a university, and to found an agricultural college,<sup>5</sup> to establish a school or college not necessarily free,<sup>6</sup> for "an establishment for the increase and diffusion of knowledge among men,"<sup>7</sup> "for the purpose of founding an institution for the education of youth" in a county,<sup>8</sup> and instruction in the mechanical arts.<sup>9</sup>

"no ecclesiastic, missionary, or minister of any sect whatever shall ever hold or exercise any station or duty whatever in the said college; nor shall any such person ever be admitted for any purpose, or as a visitor, within the premises appropriated to the purposes of the said college." It was held by the court in the elaborate opinion by Story, J., that "there is nothing in the devise establishing the college or in the regulations and restrictions contained therein which are inconsistent with the Christian religion, or are opposed to any known policy of the State of Pennsylvania."

A devise to the cities of New Orleans and Baltimore for the education of the poor inhabitants of those cities is valid. McDonogh v. Murdoch, 15 How. (U. S.) 367.

1. American Academy v. Harvard College, 12 Gray (Mass.) 582.

2. Chapin v. School District, 35 N. H. 445.

3. But such a trust cannot be applied to a public school where rich and poor are alike admitted, but the fund may be applied to other means of education, to furnishing books, and perhaps even clothes and food, to poor children. McIntire v. Zanesville, 17 Ohio St. 352.

A devise to a school under the auspices and control of a religious denomination or sect, and confined to the youth of its members, both rich and poor, and in which the peculiar views of Christianity, as entertained by that denomination, constituted a part of the instruction imparted in the school, is a charitable use. Price v. Maxwell, 28 Pa. St. 23. But a bequest for the education of testator's nephew for the ministry is not a charitable or religious use. McMillan's Appeal, 11 Weekly Notes Cas. (Pa.) 440.

Where an owner of land devoted it by parol to the purpose of a public school, and permitted it to be improved by the erection of a schoolhouse, he was held to be a trustee for a public charity, and not within the Statute of Frauds. McLain v. School Directors, 51 Pa. St. 196.

4. Heuser v. Harris, 42 Ill. 425; Boxford Religious Soc. v. Harriman, 125 Mass. 321. So also for a school "wherein no book of instruction is to be used to teach except spelling-books and the Bible." Taintor v. Clark, 5 Allen (Mass.), 66.

5. Cresson's Appeal, 30 Pa. St. 437.

6. Price v. Maxwell, 28 Pa. St. 23; Taylor's Executors v. Trustees, 34 N. J. Eq. 101.

7. "The Smithsonian Institution owes its existence to a bequest of James Smithson, an Englishman, to the United States of America, to found at Washington, under the name of the Smithsonian Institution, an establishment for the increase and diffusion of knowledge among men." See Acts of Congress of 1st July, 1836, ch. 252; 10th August, 1846, ch. 178. This was held by Lord Langdale, Master of the Rolls, in U. S. v. Drummond, decided in 1838, to be a good charitable bequest. The decision on this point is not contained in the regular reports, but appears by the letters of Mr. Rush, then Minister to England (printed in the documents relating to the Origin and History of the Smithsonian Institution, published by the Institution in 1879), to have been made after full argument in behalf of the United States by Mr. Pemberton (afterwards Mr. Pemberton Leigh and Lord Kingsdown), and on deliberate consideration by the Master of the Rolls. History of the Smithsonian Institution, 15, 19, 20, 56, 58, 62. And it was cited as authoritative in Whicher v. Hume, 7 H. L. Cas. 124, 141, 155, in which the House of Lords held that a bequest in trust to be applied, in the discretion of the trustees, 'for the benefit and advancement and propagation of education and learning in every part of the world, as far as circumstances will permit,' was a valid charitable bequest, and not void for uncertainty." Gray, J., in Russell v. Allen, 107 U. S. 182.

8. Russell v. Allen, 107 U. S. 182.

9. Barnum v. Baltimore (Md.), 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 203.

6. Trusts for Religious Purposes.—The only reference to this class in the statute is "repairs of churches."<sup>1</sup> But gifts for the advancement, spread, and teaching of religion, or for the convenience and support of worship, or of the ministry, have been held charitable.<sup>2</sup> A distinction, however, has been made where the gift is for the restricted use of a definite number of persons or for a body clearly pointed out as the object of the gift: such a gift has not the elements of a public charity, and will not be sustained as such.<sup>3</sup> In this country there are no "superstitious uses," in the sense in which such gifts are held void in England, i.e., trusts for religious purposes which are illegal by law.<sup>4</sup> The following are instances

1. "No kind of charitable trust finds less support in the words of the st. of 43 Eliz. than the large class of pious and religious uses to which the statute contains no more distinct reference than in the words 'repairs of churches.' Such uses had indeed been previously recognized as charitable and entitled to peculiar favor by many acts of parliament, as well as in the courts of justice. . . . Sir Francis Moore, who drew the st. of 43 Eliz., indeed says that a gift to maintain a chaplain or minister to celebrate divine service could not be the subject of a commission under the statute, but 'was of purpose omitted in the penning of the act,' lest in the changes of opinion in matters of religion such gifts might be confiscated in a succeeding reign as superstitious. Yet he also says that such a gift might be enforced by 'the chancellor by his chancery authority;' and cites a case in which it was so decreed. Duke (Bridgman's Ed.), 125, 154. And from very soon after the passage of the statute, gifts for the support of a minister, the preaching of an annual sermon, or other uses connected with public worship and the advancement of religion have been constantly upheld and carried out as charities in the English courts of chancery. Anon. Cary, 39; Nash's Charity; Dwight's Charity Cases, 114; Pember v. Inhabitants of Knighton; Herne on Charitable Uses, 101; s. c., Tothill (2d Ed.), 34; Duke, 354, 356, 381, 570, 614; Boyle on Charities, 39-41; Tudor, 10, 11. So in this commonwealth [Massachusetts] trusts for the support of public worship and religious instruction, or the spreading of religion at home or abroad, have always been deemed charitable uses. 4 Dane Ab. 237; Bartlet v. King, 12 Mass. 536; Going v. Emery, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 107; Sobier v. St. Paul's Church, 12 Met. (Mass.) 250; Brown v. Kelsey, 2 Cush. (Mass.), 243; Earle v. Wood, 8 Cush. (Mass.), 445. It is not necessary in this connection to speculate whether the admission of pious uses into the rank of legal charities in modern times is to be attributed to the influence of the civil law, to their having been mentioned in the earlier English statutes, to a more liberal interpretation, after religion had become settled in England, of the words 'repair of churches,' or, possibly, of the clauses relating to gifts for the benefit of education, in the st. of 43 Eliz., or to the support given by the court of chancery to public charitable trusts, independently of any statute. It is sufficient for our present purpose to observe that pious and religious uses are clearly not within the strict words of the statute, and can only be brought within its purview by the largest extension of its spirit." Gray, J., in Jackson v. Phillips, 14 Allen (Mass.), 539, 552.

2. Att.-Gen. v. Bishop of Chester, 1 Bro. Ch. 444; Soc. for Prop. of Gospel v. Att.-Gen., 3 Russell, 142; Sennett v. Herbert, L. R. 7 Ch. 232; Cumming v. Reid Mem. Church, 64 Ga. 105; Beatty v. Kurtz, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 566; Jones v. Habersham, 107 U. S. 174.

3. Old South Church v. Crocker, 119 Mass. 1, citing Att.-Gen. v. Meeting House, 3 Gray, 1, 49; Parker v. May, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 336. See, however, McKissick v. Pickle, 16 Pa. St. 140.

4. Superstitious Uses.—The law of England relating to superstitious uses is that arising from the statutes or policy of the law which forbid the having of obits perpetual, or the continual service of a priest or other like uses. Duke Char. Uses, 106; Jarman on Wills, § 205. This has been much relaxed by statute in favor of Protestant dissenters, Roman Catholics, and Jews. The rigor of the acts was relaxed, however, when charity and not a benefit to the testator himself was intended. In this country it has been said of superstitious uses, that "it is not easy to see how there could be such a thing here, at least in the acceptance of the word by the British courts, who seem to of trusts for religious purposes which have been sustained: for the advancement of Christianity among infidels;<sup>1</sup> for foreign missions; for establishing a bishopric in America;<sup>2</sup> for preaching a sermon on Ascension Day;<sup>3</sup> to "the cause of Christ;"<sup>4</sup> to the "first Christian church erected or to be erected in the village of T.;"<sup>5</sup> for building a convent.<sup>6</sup>

7. Trusts for Public Purposes.—The statute makes various public objects charitable, notably the repair of bridges or highways, and the ease of the poor in the payment of taxes. In this class the following gifts have been held to be charitable uses: for supplying water to a town;<sup>8</sup> for the improvement of a town;<sup>9</sup> for the reduction of the national debt;<sup>10</sup> for various public institutions;<sup>11</sup> for municipal purposes;<sup>12</sup> for a fire-engine or hose;<sup>13</sup> for providing shade-trees;<sup>14</sup> for a town house;<sup>15</sup> for the suppression of the manufacture, sale, and use of intoxicating liquors.<sup>16</sup> But a gift to change existing laws is not valid as a charitable use.<sup>17</sup> have extended it to all uses which are not subordinate to the interests and will of the established church." Methodist Church v. Remington, 1 Watts (Pa.), 218. "It is neither for the legislature nor the judiciary, in this State, to discriminate and say what is a pious and what a superstitious use. To do so would necessarily infringe upon the great constitutional guarantee of perfect freedom and equality in all religions." Gass v. Wilhite, 2 Dana (Ky.), 170. "As in this country, from the very nature of its institutions, what was at one time known in England as superstitious uses have no recognition in our laws, and as all the various dogmas of the several Christian sects are to be treated with equal reverence and respect, a religious or charitable bequest, whether for the founding of a church or to purchase masses for the dead, must be regarded as valid, and is to be interpreted and enforced in such a manner as may best accord with the will of the testator." Hence a bequest to the pastor of a church for masses for the repose of testator's soul is valid, and it is the duty of the executors to pay it to the legatee, who has full discretion as to the number of the masses, etc. Seibert's Appeal, 18 Weekly Notes Cas. (Phila.) 276. See also In re Hagenmyer's Will, 12 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 432. In re Petition of James Schouler, 134 Mass. 427.

1. Att.-Gen. v. London, 1 Ves. Jr. 243.

2. Soc. for Prop. the Gospel v. Att.-Gen., 3 Russ. 142; Bartlett v. King, 12 Mass. 537; Fairbanks v. Lamson, 99 Mass. 533; Hinckley v. Thatcher, 139 Mass. 477.

3. Att.-Gen. v. Bishop of Chester, 1 Bro. Ch. 444.

4. Turner v. Ogden, 1 Cox, 316.

5. Going v. Emery, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 107.

6. Jones v. Habersham, 107 U. S. 174; Fidelity Ins., etc., Co.'s Appeal, 99 Pa. St. 443.

7. Hughes v. Daly, 49 Conn. 34.

8. Jones v. Williams, Amb. 651.

9. Att.-Gen. v. Heelis, 2 Sim. & S. 67; Howse v. Chapman, 4 Ves. 542.

10. Ashton v. Langdale, 4 Eng. L. & Eq. 139; Newland v. Att.-Gen., 3 Mer. 684; Dickson v. U. S., 125 Mass. 311. See U. S. v. Fox, 94 U. S. 315.

11. To the British Museum, British Museum v. White, 2 Sim. & S. 594. To the Royal Geographical Society and the Royal Humane Society, Beaumont v. Oliveira, L. R. 6 Eq. 534; L. R. 4 Ch. App. 309.

12. Vidal v. Girard's Executors, 2 How. (U. S.) 124; Town of Hamden v. Rice, 24 Conn. 357.

13. Magill v. Brown, — Bright (Pa.), 411; Thomas v. Ellmaker, 1 Pars. (Pa.) Sel. Cases, 98.

The property of a company formed for extinguishment of fires, etc., is held upon a public trust, and cannot be divided among the members. Bethlehem v. Perseverance Fire Co., 81 Pa. St. 445; Humane Fire Co.'s Appeal, 88 Pa. St. 389.

14. Cresson's Appeal, 30 Pa. St. 437.

15. Coggeshall v. Pelton, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 492.

16. Haines v. Allen, 78 Ind. 100.

17. A bequest in trust to be expended "to secure the passage of laws granting women, whether married or unmarried, the right to vote, to hold office, to hold, manage, and devise property, and all

8. Trusts for Other Charitable Purposes.—There are many trusts which cannot be said to fall within the above classes, but which have been sustained, e.g., gifts to a lodge of Freemasons;<sup>1</sup> to the American Peace Society;<sup>2</sup> to aid in the antislavery movement in the United States;<sup>3</sup> and to maintain a Shaker community.<sup>4</sup> A trust to erect and maintain monuments or tombs of the donors or others is now generally upheld in this country, though not in England.<sup>5</sup> In England trusts "for private charity," and "for benevolent, charitable, and religious purposes," will not be sustained.<sup>6</sup> But in this country a trust "in aid of objects and purposes of benevolence or charity, public or private," has been sustained.<sup>7</sup>

9. Trusts Held not to be Charitable.—A direct appropriation by the legislature for the support of a school or for public improvements does not constitute a charity which will be regulated by a court of equity.<sup>8</sup> So also, where the subject of the trust is the re-other civil rights enjoyed by men," cannot be sustained as a charity. Jackson v. Phillips, 14 Allen (Mass.), 539, 571.

1. Cruse v. Axtell, 50 Ind. 49. So also to a Young Men's Christian Association. Goodell v. Union Assoc., 29 N. J. Eq. 32. And to an order of Sisters of Charity. Quinn v. Shields, 62 Iowa, 129; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 498. But a society for purposes of mutual benevolence only is not an association for charitable uses; as to third parties its members are considered as partners. Babb v. Reed, 5 Rawle (Pa.), 151; Swift's Exec. v. Benef. Soc., 73 Pa. St. 362.

2. Tappan v. Deblois, 45 Me. 122.

3. "For the preparation and circulation of books, newspapers, the delivery of speeches and lectures, and such other means as in the judgment of the trustees will create a public sentiment that will put an end to negro slavery in this country," and "for the benefit of fugitive slaves who may escape from the slaveholding States of this infamous Union from time to time." Jackson v. Phillips, 14 Allen (Mass.), 558.

4. Gass v. Wilhite, 2 Dana (Ky.), 170.

5. "In England there has been a difference of opinion upon the question whether the maintenance and repair of the tomb or monument of the donor is a good charitable use. Down to the time of the American Revolution, as by the civil law, it appears to have been held that it was. . . . According to the later English cases, it is not" (citing cases). Gray, J., in Jones v. Habersham, 107 U. S. 174, in which it was held that under the Code of Georgia such a gift was clearly valid. In the same case, in the circuit court, 3 Woods, 443, Bradley, J., said: "It is somewhat singular that it should ever have been doubted, since the sanctity of tombs and other places of rest for the dead has always been an object of cherished regard since the establishment of Christianity, and received the peculiar care of the Roman law." The bequest to a Friends' meeting, which would become applicable to the maintenance of its burying-ground, is undoubtedly a charitable use, for such support is regarded as a religious duty. Dexter v. Gardner, 7 Allen (Mass.), 243. A bequest to keep testator's family burying-ground in suitable repair is valid. Swasey v. Amer. Bible Soc., 57 Me. 523.

6. Ommaney v. Butcher, 1 Turn. & Russ. 260; Williams v. Kershaw, 5 Law Jur. (N. S.) Ch. 84.

7. Saltonstall v. Sanders, 11 Allen (Mass.), 462.

So a power to trustees to distribute a bequest among institutions for the benefit of the poor is valid under the law of Massachusetts. Lorings v. Marsh, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 337.

A devise to the executor "to be disposed of by him for such charitable purposes as he shall think proper" is a devise in trust, in which the devisee takes no beneficial interest; it is not essential that the words in trust should be expressed; the sureties of the executor are responsible for such a fund unadministered. White v. Ditson (Mass.), 1 N. Eng. Rep. 485.

In New Jersey, however, a gift in trust, to be distributed to "benevolent, religious, and charitable institutions" at the discretion of the wife of the testator, was held not to be a charitable use. Norris v. Thomson, 4 C. E. Greene (N. J.), 308.

8. Perry Trusts, sec. 707.

sult of a contract and not of a gift, the use will not be charitable.<sup>1</sup> Where the gift is for the benefit of particular individuals and not for an indefinite number it is not charitable.<sup>2</sup> While the tendency is to uphold charitable gifts, yet there are many which are too indefinite to be administered as trusts, and in such cases the gift is held void and distribution made to the heirs or next of kin of the testator.<sup>3</sup>

10. Cy Pres Doctrine.—When a gift for charitable uses cannot be applied according to the exact intention of the donor, the courts of equity will apply the gift as nearly as possible (cy pres) in conformity with the presumed general intention of the donor.<sup>4</sup> In England this doctrine has been exercised by the chancellor both by virtue of the royal prerogative committed to him, and by the ordinary equitable jurisdiction of the court.<sup>5</sup> But in this country the power has been exercised only through the judicial power of the courts.<sup>6</sup> This doctrine has been defined as follows: When a gift is made to trustees for a charitable purpose, the general nature of which is pointed out, and which is lawful and valid at the time of the death of the testator, and no intention is expressed to limit it to a particular institution or mode of application; and afterwards, either by change of circumstances the scheme of the testator becomes impracticable, or by change of law becomes illegal, the fund

1. Brendle v. German Ref. Congreg., 33 Pa. St. 419; Atty.-Gen. v. Heelis, 2 Sim. & S. 77; Bisp. Eq. sec. 123.

2. McMillen's Appeal, 11 Weekly Notes Cas. (Phila.) 440, in which the gift was in trust for the education of testatrix's nephew for the ministry. "The object of the trust was neither charitable nor religious within the technical meaning of those terms, but to carry out the intention of the testatrix in the education of her nephew, and in conferring upon him the means of future support." Perry Trusts, sec. 710. "They may, and indeed must, be for the benefit of an indefinite number of persons; for if all the beneficiaries are personally designated, the trust lacks the essential element of indefiniteness, which is one characteristic of a legal charity." Gray, J., in Russell v. Allen, 107 U. S. 182.

3. A gift to a trustee to dispose of "for any and all benevolent purposes that he may see fit" is void for uncertainty. Adye v. Smith, 44 Conn. 60; Bristol v. Bristol (Conn.). 2 N. Eng. Rep. 759. But a bequest is not void because given simply to an association, and not upon any defined charity, or for any specified charitable use. Soc. for Prop. of Gospel v. Atty.-Gen., 3 Russ. 142; Well Beloved v. Jones, 1 Sim. & S. 43; Magill v. Brown, Brightly (Pa.), 347; Evan. Association's Appeal, 35 Pa. St. 316; Beall v. Fox, 4

Ga. 404; Burr's Executors v. Smith, 7 Vt. 243. When, however, the objects of the association are too vague, e.g., "to diffuse more generally the benefits of education, civilization, and Christianity throughout the United States and elsewhere," the gift is void. Owens v. Missionary Soc., 14 N. Y. 380.

4. Bisp. Eq. sec. 126. The object of all the rules on this subject is to ascertain and carry out, as nearly as may be, the true intention of the donor. The doctrine of cy pres is thus only a liberal rule of construction to ascertain intention. Perry Trusts, sec. 727.

5. The cases in which the prerogative power under the royal sign manual is exercised in England are of two classes; first, of bequests to particular uses charitable in their nature, but illegal, as for a form of religion not tolerated by law; and, second, of gifts of property to charity generally without any trust interposed, and in which either no appointment is provided for, or the power of appointment is delegated to persons who die without exercising it. Jackson v. Phillips, 14 Allen (Mass.), 574. But the doctrine of cy pres, formerly pushed to a most extravagant length, is now much restrained. Atty.-Gen. v. Minshull, 4 Ves. 14.

6. Bisp. Eq., sec. 126; Perry Trusts, sec. 727.

having once vested in the charity, does not go to the heirs at law as a resulting trust, but is to be applied by the court of chancery, in the exercise of its jurisdiction in equity, as near the testator's particular directions as possible, to carry out his general charitable intent.<sup>1</sup> The cy pres doctrine, thus restricted, has been approved in many of the States, but it has been entirely repudiated in others.<sup>2</sup>

1. Gray, J., in Jackson v. Phillips, 14 Allen (Mass.), 580. The same judge also says of charitable trusts: "The instruments creating them should be so construed as to give them effect if possible, and to carry out the general intention of the donor, when clearly manifested, even if the particular form or manner pointed out by him cannot be followed." Russell v. Allen, 107 U. S. 182. The doctrine is fully discussed in Philadelphia v. Girard's Heirs, 45 Pa. St. 9, in which Lowrie, C. J., says: "The meaning of the doctrine of cy pres as received by us is, that when a definite function or duty is to be performed, and it cannot be done in exact conformity with the scheme of the person or persons who have provided for it, it must be performed with as close approximation to that scheme as reasonably practicable; and so, of course, it must be enforced. It is the doctrine of approximation, and it is not at all confined to the administration of charities, but is equally applicable to all devises and contracts wherein the future is provided for, and it is an essential element of equity jurisprudence." Of the rule stated in the text a high authority says: "This doctrine seems to be free from objection; for it will be observed that thus stated it avoids both of the extravagant conclusions to which the prerogative cy pres doctrine led. The gift, if for a charity generally, must be made to trustees, thus avoiding the mischief of turning the court into a trustee for a general charity; while, on the other hand, there must be no intention to limit the gift to a particular institution or mode of application, which avoids the obnoxious cy pres doctrine in those cases in which bequests were made to particular charitable uses, but which were applied by the exercise of the prerogative to different objects, because the use designated was illegal." Bisp. Eq. sec. 129.

2. "There seems, indeed, to be no valid reason why the judicial cy pres doctrine, as explained in Jackson v. Phillips, should not be approved in all those States wherein the statute of Elizabeth has been decided to be in force, or where its principles have been adopted by the law of the State; in other words, in those States where the doctrine that indefinite-ness of the object is no objection to a trust, provided it is for a charity, is recognized." Bisp. Eq. sec. 130.

In the following cases the judicial doctrine of cy pres has been favorably considered: Burr v. Smith, 7 Vt. 241; Howard v. Amer. Peace Soc., 49 Me. 302; Derby v. Derby, 4 R. I. 439; Winslow v. Cummings, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 358; Bliss v. Amer. Bible Soc., 2 Allen (Mass.) 334; Amer. Acad. v. Harvard Coll., 12 Gray (Mass.), 582; Jackson v. Phillips, 14 Allen (Mass.) 539; Academy v. Clemens, 50 Mo. 167; Kiefer v. German-Amer. Seminary, 46 Mich. 636; Gilman v. Hamilton, 16 Ill. 225; Moore v. Moore, 4 Dana (Ky.) 354; Philadelphia v. Girard's Heirs, 45 Pa. St. 9; Manners v. Philadelphia Library Co., 93 Pa. St. 165.

In the following cases the doctrine has been repudiated or criticised: Fontain v. Ravenel, 17 How. (U. S.) 369; Carter v. Balfour, 19 Ala. 814; White v. Fisk, 22 Conn. 31; Grimes v. Harmon, 35 Ind. 198; Lepage v. McNamara, 5 Clarke (Iowa), 124; McAuley v. Wilson, 1 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 276; Venable v. Coffman, 2 W. Va. 310; Thomson's Exec. v. Norris, 5 C. E. Green (N. J.), 522; Beekman v. Bonsor, 23 N. Y. 298; Bascom v. Albertson, 34 N. Y. 584; Pringle v. Dorsey, 3 S. Car. (N.S.) 509. See also, for statutes on the subject in Pennsylvania, Act of April 26, 1855, sec. 10, P. L. 331; and in Georgia, Code, sec. 2468.

Examples of the Application of the Cy Pres Doctrine.—A bequest to A., his executors and administrators, desiring him to dispose of it in such charities as he sees fit, recommending poor clergymen with large families and good characters, upon the death of the testator nine years after A.'s death, was executed by the court, having particular regard to the recommendation. Moggridge v. Thackwell, 1 Ves. J. 464; 3 Bro. C. C. 517. A testator in 1627 bequeathed £1000, the income of which was to be distributed for the relief and ransom of poor captives taken by the Turkish pirates, and £1000, the income of which was to be applied to the poorest of his kindred; both sums were so invested in land as to increase enormously in value; under authority of an act of Parliament the moiety

11. Incidents of Charitable Uses.—If the trust is a valid one, and the directions for its management are plain, the trust will not be allowed to fail for want of a trustee.<sup>1</sup> The heirs or other persons interested may bring a bill to test the legality of the trust; after the trust has been established, the remedy for the redress of abuse or mismanagement is by bill or information of the attorney-general, representing the public interests, and in such a case the trust estate does not revert to the heirs of the donor.<sup>2</sup> If the trust is not for a general public charity, but for a corporation or persons having vested rights, the suit cannot be brought by the attorney-general, but must be brought by those whose rights are infringed.<sup>3</sup> A charitable gift must be accepted and held upon the same terms upon which it was given; the donees cannot change the uses at will or for mere convenience.<sup>4</sup> This, however, does not forbid a religious society after altering its faith from using funds given it for general purposes.<sup>5</sup> The rules against perpetuities do not apply for the first object was devoted to the second. Atty.-Gen. v. Northumberland (Duke), 38 L. T. N. S. 245. A bequest for the redemption of British slaves in Turkey and Barbary having ceased to be applicable for that purpose, was directed to be applied to kindred charities as nearly like the original purpose as possible. Atty.-Gen. v. Ironmongers Co., 2 Beav. 313. Bequests made to be expended in the circulation of books, newspapers, the delivery of speeches, lectures, and such other means as in the judgment of the trustees would create a public sentiment that would put an end to negro slavery in the United States, and for the benefit of slaves escaping from the slaveholding States, became inapplicable to those objects by reason of the abolition of slavery, and it was held that the funds should be applied to the nearest similar use. Jackson v. Phillips, 14 Allen (Mass.), 539.

1. "If the founder describes the general nature of a charitable trust, he may leave the details of its administration to be settled by trustees under the superintendence of a court of chancery; and an omission to name trustees, or the death or declination of the trustees named, will not defeat the trust, but the court will appoint new trustees in their stead." Russell v. Allen, 107 U. S. 182; Moore v. Moore, 2 Dana (Ky.), 354; Byers v. McCartney, 62 Iowa, 339; Fuller v. Griffin, 3 Vt. 400; McGirr v. Aaron, 1 P. & W. (Pa.) 49. And see Cincinnati v. White, 6 Peters (U. S.), 433. But if the gift can be applied by the trustee to other than charitable purposes, the gift will be void. Morice v. Bishop of Durham, 9 Ves. 404. Where a discretion is to be exercised by the trustees, and they die during the pendency of a prior life estate, the court will not exercise the discretion and the gift will fail. Fountain v. Ravelnel, 17 How. (U. S.) 369; Zeissweiss v. James, 63 Pa. St. 465. A formal rejection by a town as trustee for a charitable use will not cause the gift to fail, but a new trustee will be appointed. Trustees v. Whitney, 3 N. Eng. Rep. (Conn.) 573.

2. Wellbeloved v. Jones, 1 Sim. & S. 40; Ludlow v. Greenhouse, 1 Bligh (N. S.), 17; Atty.-Gen. v. Gainson, 101 Mass. 223; Beatty v. Kurtz, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 566; Russell v. Allen, 107 U. S. 182.

3. Atty.-Gen. v. Meeting House, 3 Gray (Mass.), 1; Atty.-Gen. v. Merrimack Mfg. Co., 14 Gray (Mass.), 586; Perry Trusts, sec. 732.

4. Gilman v. Hamilton, 16 Ill. 225; Perry Trusts, sec. 733.

5. Perry Trusts, sec. 733, 734, 735. Where a religious body becomes divided and the right to the corporate property is in conflict, the civil courts will consider and determine which of the divisions submits to the regular order of the church, local and general. This division is entitled to the property. In determining which of the divisions has maintained the correct doctrine, the findings of the supreme ecclesiastical tribunal of the denomination in question are binding upon the civil courts. McGinnis v. Watson, 41 Pa. St. 9; Ramsey's Appeal, 88 Pa. St. 60; Ferraria v. Vasconcellos, 31 Ill. 25; Brunnenmeyer v. Buhre, 32 Ill. 183; Second Eccl. Soc. v. First Eccl. Soc., 23 Conn. 255; Kniskern v. Lutheran Churches, 1 Sand. Ch. (N. Y.) 439; Baker v. Fales, 16 Mass. 488; First Presb. Soc. v. Fales, 25 Ohio St. 128; Bellport v.

to trusts for charities, and such trusts may be created for the payment of the income forever for the charitable purposes of the donor.<sup>1</sup> Property vested for such purposes, however, does not become inalienable, for it may be sold by decree of the court.<sup>2</sup> In the absence of statutory regulations, there is no limit beyond which accumulations may not be permitted in favor of a charity.<sup>3</sup> When an estate for charitable uses has vested in the trustees, all illegal conditions and restraints which are incidental to the trust and not of the essence of the gift will be void, leaving the estate to be Tooker, 29 Barb. (N. Y.) 256; Robertson v. Bullions, 1 Kern. (N. Y.) 256; Den v. Bolton, 12 N. J. L. 206; Smith v. Swormstedt, 16 How. (U. S.) 288; Watson v. Jones, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 680; Bouldin v. Alexander, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 131; White Lick Q. M. of Friends v. Alexander, 89 Ind. 136; s. c., 4 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 87. See also note, 4 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 112. Where a bequest is made for a church, to take effect whenever a congregation should be formed, the proper ecclesiastical authorities are the judges of the formation of such congregation. Fidelity Ins., etc., Co.'s Appeal, 99 Pa. St. 443.

1. "Being for objects of permanent interest and benefit to the public, they may be perpetual in their duration, and are not within the rule against perpetuities." Russell v. Allen, 107 U. S. 182. A gift in trust for a charity not existing at the date of the gift, and the beginning of whose existence is uncertain, or which is to take effect upon a contingency that may possibly not happen within a life or lives in being and twenty-one years afterwards, is valid, provided there is no gift of the property meanwhile to or for the benefit of any private corporation or person. Inglis v. Sailors' Snug Harbor, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 99; McDonogh v. Murdoch, 15 How. (U. S.) 367; Ould v. Hospital, 95 U. S. 303; Russell v. Allen, 107 U. S. 182. These cases are in accord with English decisions of the highest authority: Atty.-Gen. v. Downing, 1 Dick. 414, 2 Amb. 550; Atty.-Gen. v. Bowyer, 3 Ves. 714, 5 Ves. 300, 8 Ves. 256; Chamberlayne v. Bockett, L. R. 8 Ch. App. 206. See also Sanderson v. White, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 328; Odell v. Odell, 10 Allen (Mass.), 1. A direction that real estate devised for charitable uses should not be alienated makes no perpetuity in the sense forbidden by the law, but only a perpetuity allowed by law and equity in the cases of charitable trusts. Perin v. Carey, 24 How. (U. S.) 465. An estate is no more perpetual in two successive charities than in one charity, and, as the rule against perpetuities does not apply to charities, it follows that if a gift is made to one charity in the first instance, and then over to another charity upon the happening of a contingency which may or may not take place within the limit of that rule, the limitation over to the second charity is good. Christ's Hospital v. Grainger, 16 Sim. 84, 100; McDonogh v. Murdoch, 15 How. (U. S.) 367; Jones v. Habersham, 107 U. S. 174; Trustees v. Whitney, 3 N. Eng. Rep. (Conn.) 573. But see exceptions to the rule in Wetmore v. Parker, 52 N. Y. 450; Phelps's Exec. v. Pond, 23 N. Y. 69; Jocelyn v. Nott, 44 Conn. 55; DeWolf v. Lawson, 61 Wis. 469. See also, generally, Gray on Rule against Perpetuities.

2. If "lapse of time, or changes as to the condition of the property and of the circumstances attending it, have made it prudent and beneficial to the charity to alien the lands, and vest the proceeds in other funds or in a different manner, it is competent for this court to direct such sale and investment, taking care that no diversion of the gift be permitted. Lord Langdale, the Master of the Rolls, observed in Attorney-General v. South Sea Company, 4 Bevan, 458: 'It is plain that in ordinary cases a most important part of this duty is to preserve the property, but it may happen that the purposes of the charity may be best sustained and promoted by alienating the specific property. The law has not forbidden the alienation, and this court, upon various occasions, with a view to promote interests of charities, has not thought it necessary to preserve the property in specie, but has sanctioned its alienation.' " Stanley v. Colt, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 169. In this case a proviso against sale of the property devised to an ecclesiastical society was held a limitation in trust and not a common-law condition, and that the legislature of Connecticut could exercise the power of the court of chancery of England in directing the alienation of the property.

3. Bisp. Eq. sec. 133; Perry Trusts, secs. 393-400, 738.

managed legally for the purposes of the trust.<sup>1</sup> The statute of limitations does not ordinarily run against a trust for charitable uses.<sup>2</sup>

12. Restraints upon Donors.—Under the English statutes of mortmain gifts for religious or charitable purposes are void unless executed by deed in the presence of two witnesses twelve months before the donor's death, and enrolled.<sup>3</sup> These statutes are not in force in this country,<sup>4</sup> but in several States there have been restraints imposed as to the time prior to decease, and the amount which a donor may give to charitable objects.<sup>5</sup>

1. Perry Trusts, sec. 739; Philadelphia v. Girard's Heirs, 45 Pa. St. 9.

2. Perry Trusts, sec. 745.

3. 9 Geo. II. c. 36 (1736). The statute of 43 Eliz. c. 4 had repealed the earlier mortmain acts.

4. Perin v. Carey, 24 How. (U. S.) 465.

5. In California by the provisions of the code a bequest or devise can be made only by a will executed thirty days prior to the testator's death, and cannot exceed one-third of his estate. Code, sec. 1313.

In Georgia the code provides: "No person leaving a wife or child or descendants of a child shall by will devise more than one third of his estate to any charitable, religious, educational, or civil institution, to the exclusion of such wife or child; and in all cases the will containing such devise shall be executed at least ninety days before the death of the testator, or such devise shall be void." Code, sec. 2419. This does not invalidate a charitable devise contained in a will executed within ninety days before the testator's death, unless he leaves a wife or child or descendants of a child. Jones v. Habersham, 107 U. S. 174.

In Kentucky no church or society of Christians can acquire more than fifty acres of land.

In Maryland all gifts, sales, and devises of land or personalty to religious sects or for religious uses, without the prior sanction of the legislature, are void, except of land not exceeding five acres, for a church, parsonage, or cemetery, and actually so used. Decl. of Rights, sec. 38.

In Missouri gifts, sales, or devises of land for religious purposes are prohibited, except one acre for a church. Const. art. i. sec. 13.

In New York no devise to a corporation is valid unless expressly authorized by its charter or by statute to take by devise. Hence a devise of lands in this State to the United States for the national debt is void. U. S. v. Fox, 94 U. S. 315; s. c., 52 N. Y. 530.

Corporations created under the act of 1848, c. 319, are restricted to $10,000 yearly income, and all gifts to be valid must have been made or devised two months before the donor's death. Stephenson v. Short, 92 N. Y. 433; s. c., 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 607.

There is also a general provision by the Act of 1860, c. 360, that no person having a husband, wife, child, or parent shall by his or her last will or testament devise or bequeath to any benevolent, charitable, literary, scientific, religious, or missionary society, association, or corporation, in trust or otherwise, more than one half part of his or her estate after the payment of his or her debts.

In Ohio a devise or bequest to a charitable, religious, or educational purpose by a testator leaving issue or adopted children is void unless made at least one year before the testator's death. Rev. Stat., sec. 5915.

In Pennsylvania a devise, bequest, or conveyance for religious or charitable uses is void unless done by deed or will attested by two credible and, at the time, disinterested witnesses, at least one calendar month before the decease of the testator or alienor. Act of 1855, Purd. Dig. 252. Under this statute a testator may provide that a subsequent will shall only act as a revocation of a former will making charitable bequests in case he shall live beyond the month. Hamilton's Estate, 74 Pa. St. 69. It does not apply to an executed gift made to a charity within the month. McGlade's Appeal, 99 Pa. St. 338.

A bequest for masses for the repose of testator's soul is a religious use within this act. Rhymer's Appeal, 93 Pa. St. 142.

Who may be Trustee.—A corporation may hold and execute a trust for charitable objects in accord with or tending to promote the purposes of its creation, although such as it might not by its charter or by general laws have authority itself to establish or to spend its corpo-

CHART refers ordinarily to maps for seamen or boatmen; but for twenty-five years it has been further used to signify sheets on which information is exhibited—as historical charts. Charts of the latter sort, at least when of a literary rather than of an art nature, are not contemplated by the word “chart” in American copyright law.<sup>1</sup> rate laws for. A city, for instance, may take a devise in trust to maintain a college, an orphan asylum, or an asylum. Vidal v. Girard's Executors, 2 How. (U. S.) 127; McDonogh v. Murdoch, 15 How. (U. S.) 367; Perin v. Carey, 24 How. (U. S.) 465; Barnum v. Baltimore, 62 Md. 275; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 203 (see note); Philadelphia v. Elliott, 3 Rawle (Pa.), 170; 2 Dill. Mun. Corp. (3d Ed.) secs. 567, 909.

It seems that the purposes of the trust should be “germane to the objects of the incorporation,” and “relate to matters which will promote and aid and perfect those objects.” Vidal v. Girard's Executors, 2 How. (U. S.) 189; Jones v. Hathersham, 107 U. S. 174.

A county may be trustee of a fund to aid the poor of a township. Lawrence Co. v. Leonard, 34 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 104. But it has been held that townships are not proper trustees of a charity for educating poor orphan children. Mason v. Church, 27 N. J. Eq. 47.

A gift to a charity may be good, although it requires a future incorporation to carry it into effect. Ould v. Hospital, 95 U. S. 303; Inglis v. Sailors' Snug Harbor, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 99.

Exemption of Charities from Taxation.—An exemption of the property of religious, charitable, and educational institutions will be construed to extend only to the property actually used for the religious, charitable, or educational purpose, and not to other property held by it as a source of revenue or capable of being applied to such use. Baltimore v. Grand Lodge, 3 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 415; Lima v. Lima Cemetery Assoc., 5 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 547; Pittsburg v. Mechanics' Assoc., 8 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 484, and notes to each case.

Liability of Charitable Funds for Torts.—“It seems to have been thought that if charity trustees are guilty of a breach of trust, the persons damnified thereby have a right to be indemnified out of the trust funds. That is contrary to all reason and justice and common-sense. Such a perversion of the intention of the donor would lead to the most inconvenient consequences. The trustees would in that case be indemnified against the consequences of their own misconduct, and the real object of the charity would be defeated. . . . Damages are to be paid from the pocket of the wrongdoer, not from a trust fund.” Lord Campbell, in Feoffees of Heriot's Hospital v. Ross, 12 Cl. & Fin. 507. See also Russell v. Men of Devon, 2 T. R. 672-3; Riddle v. Proprietors, etc., 7 Mass. 187.

In McDonald v. Mass. Gen. Hosp., 120 Mass. 432, the principle was applied to an action for injuries sustained by negligent and unskilful surgical treatment; and in Perry v. House of Refuge, 63 Md. 20; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 291, to an action for injuries sustained by a malicious assault by teachers of the institution. It has been held that the provisions of the charter of a defendant corporation do not alone establish its right to exemption from liability for negligence; the facts regarding the actual objects of the corporation should appear by proofs. Boyd v. Insurance Patrol, 113 Pa. St. 269.

Authorities on Charities.—The English text-books are: Boyle's Practical Treatise on Charities, 1837; Duke on Charitable Uses (Bridgeman's Edition), 1805; Finlason on Charitable Trusts, 1860; Francis on Charities, 1855; Herne on Charitable Uses, 1663; Tudor, 1871; Cook & Hawwood on Charitable Trust Acts, 1867; Whiteford, 1878; Kenny on Endowed Charities, 1880.

In this country the only single treatise is by T. W. Dwight (1863), being his argument in the Rose will case. 4 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 108. But the subject is fully treated in Perry on Trusts, ch. 23, and more briefly in Bispham's Principles of Equity, part i., chap. 5; Story's Equity, chap. 32.

A summary of American cases is appended to the reprint of Vidal v. Girard's Executor in 3 Sharswood & Budd's Leading Cases, in the American Law of Real Property (Phila. 1887), 332. The opinion by Story, J., in that case, and in Jackson v. Phillips, 4 Allen (Mass.), 539, by Gray, J. (now of the Supreme Court of the United States), are especially comprehensive and valuable.

1. Taylor v. Gilman, 24 Fed. Rep. 632.

Insurance of Ship.—Insurance under the word “ship” covers charts, in some ports at least, as Boston; not so, it seems, in Hamburg. 1 Phillips on Insurance, § 468; 2 Parsons on Maritime Law, 203, 204. But if the master were accustomed to buy the charts, compasses, sextants, etc., on his own account, it would be doubtful whether the word "ship" would cover them, in the absence of a usage to that effect. 2 Parsons on Maritime Law, 203, 204.

Copyright in charts exists, to a limited degree, at common law. Though the author has not obtained the statutory copyright, yet by the common law, so long as the charts are unpublished, he has the same right of exclusive enjoyment of them as of any other species of personal property, for by his possession they have proprietary marks, and are distinguishable property. Rees v. Peltzer, 75 Ill. 475; Prince Albert v. Strange, 2 De G. & Sm. 652. In the last case, it was held that distribution, to private friends, of a few copies of etchings did not amount to a publication.

Deposit in Navy Department, upon the express understanding that the chart was not to be published except by the plaintiff, was held not to amount to publication. Blunt v. Patten, 2 Paine's C. C. Rep. 397.

Sale to City—Estoppel—Partners.—Where one of several owners sold a copy of a map of the city of Chicago to that city, after the great fire had consumed all other maps except one, also held by his firm, and obtained a very high price by representing to the councils and to the finance committee, of which bodies he was a member, that the sale would cause his firm to lose their monopoly, it was held that all the owners were estopped from restraining the sale, by any person, of lithographic copies. Rees v. Peltzer, 75 Ill. 476.

Statutory Copyright.—In Great Britain, maps were considered formerly as artistic works, but by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 45, s. 2, the protection afforded to literary works is extended to charts. "And rightly so," says Sir W. M. James, L. J., in Stannard v. Lee, 6 Chanc. Appeal, 349; "for maps are intended to give information in the same way as a book does. A chart, for instance, gives similar information as to sailing rules; maps give instruction as to the statistics and history of the country portrayed."

In the United States, however, charts continue to be classed with works of art. Taylor v. Gilman, 24 Fed. Rep. 632. But doubtless the American courts will protect as a "book" any chart containing work of a literary character. A "book" may be on one sheet. Drone on Copyright, 142.

Objects of Copyright.—Maps and charts are distinctly named in the copyright laws as objects of copyright.

Original Work.—Difficulty respecting this is necessarily felt in the case of charts, "where there is not, and cannot be, any originality in the facts or materials of which they are composed, and which facts and materials are equally open to all."

As to purely original work, it is very clear that the copyright of one chart does not prevent another author from designing another chart by independent labor of his own, since the material is open to all. But where one has gone to pains and expense in executing and copyrighting a chart, that chart itself cannot be the object of servile imitation. Sayre v. Moore, 1 East, 361; Blunt v. Patten, 2 Paine, 397; Johnson v. Donaldson, 3 Fed. Rep. 22.

The following rule is laid down in Copinger's Law of Copyright, in the first edition, page 90: "The rule appears now to be settled that the compiler of a work in which absolute originality is of necessity excluded is entitled, without exposing himself to a charge of piracy, to make use of preceding works upon the subject, where he 'bestows such mental labor upon what he has taken, and subjects it to such revision and correction as to produce an original result'; provided that he does not deny the use made of such preceding works, and the alterations are not merely colorable." Lord Mansfield said: "In all these cases the question of fact to come before a jury is, whether the alteration be colorable or not? There must be such a similitude as to make it probable and reasonable to suppose that one is a transcript of the other, and nothing more than a transcript. So in the case of prints: no doubt different men may take engravings from the same picture. The same principle holds with regard to charts; whoever has it in his intention to publish a chart may take advantage of all prior publications. There is no monopoly of the subject here any more than in the other instances; but upon any question of this nature the jury will decide whether it be a servile imitation or not. If an erroneous chart be made, God forbid it should not be corrected even in a small degree, if it thereby become more serviceable." Sayre v. Moore, 1 East, 361, note.

Adapting Old Map to Correct Principles cannot be considered as "servile imitation." Thus, in the last case, a sea chart made as a plain map was altered according to the Mercatorian projection. As-the old chart, except in low latitudes, could not give information with the accuracy necessary to navigators, the alteration was an essential one, and not a piracy.

Reducing Chart to Smaller Scale is not "original" work; it is piracy. Farmer v. Calvert, etc., Co., 5 Am. L. T. Rep. 174. See also Lawrence v. Dana, 2 Am. L. T. Rep. N. S. 426.

Township Boundaries, chart of, when of irregular shape, may be copyrighted. Farmer v. Calvert, etc., Co., 5 Am. L. T. Rep. 174.

Cards or Tables exhibiting methodically arranged information are not "charts" within the copyright law. Taylor v. Gilman, 24 Fed. Rep. 632.

Card Exhibiting Colors of paints sold by a dealer is neither a chart, work of art, nor book, and cannot be copyrighted. Ehret v. Pierce, 18 Blatchf. (U. S. C. C.) 302.

Advertising Cards, etc., may be copyrighted, when they contain matter useful to the general public, but not when mere advertisements. Ehret v. Pierce, 18 Blatchf. (U. S. C. C.) 302; Grace v. Newman, L. R. 19 Eq. 623; Hatten v. Arthur, 1 H. & M. 603.

Who is Entitled to Copyright.—Employer's right to copyright chart made for him is governed by the general copyright law, as to which see infra. See also Copinger's Copyright, 2d Ed. 126; Sweet v. Benning, 24 L. J. C. P. 175; Cox v. Cox, 11 Hare, 118; Grace v. Newman, 19 Eq. Ca. 623; Drone on Copyright, 243, 255. U. S. Rev. St. § 4952, enables the "proprietor" of any chart to obtain copyright. "There can be no reasonable doubt that an employer may become such proprietor by virtue of the contract of employment." Drone, 257. But the employer "cannot be considered as the owner of what is written by an author independently of the duties for which the latter is employed and paid." See Shepherd v. Conquest, 17 C. B. 427, as to the effect of suggestion of the work by employer. Also Copinger, 127; Drone, 259. Agreement as to who shall own may be implied from circumstances and conduct.

Designer and Drawer.—Where one person designed a map, and furnished his own rough sketches, newspaper maps, official reports, etc., to another, and fixed the proportion and contents of the design, it was held that though the other person made the drawing, yet the designer was the author within the copyright law. Stannard v. Harrison, 24 Law Times Rep. 570; Drone, 254.

Donee of chart may obtain copyright.

Lawrence v. Dana, 1 Am. L. T. R. N. S. 402.

Judicial Sale.—Sale of the plates, on execution, does not pass the copyright. Stephens v. Cady, 14 How. 528; Stevens v. Gladding, 17 How. 447.

According to a dictum of the United States Supreme Court, the copyright is not subject to seizure and sale on execution; it is mere "property in notion;" nor does it exist in any particular State or district. Stephens v. Cady, 14 How. (U. S.) 528. And see Stevens v. Gladding, 17 How. 447.

Creditor's Bill.—It was intimated in Stephens v. Cady that the copyright might be reached by creditor's bill, but that the court would probably have to decree a transfer in the mode pointed out in the act of Congress. See Murray v. Ager, 105 U. S. 126.

New Edition of Old Chart may be protected by the original copyright; nor will this protection be lost by slight additions and improvements. But if the improvements are material it is a new chart, and will not have the benefit of statutory copyright unless a new copyright be obtained. Drone, 145.

Pleading, in equity suit for infringement, must not contain voluminous references to similarities. These are matters of evidence, to be shown by affidavits or exhibits. Farmer v. Calvert, 5 Am. L. T. Rep. 172; Story's Eq. Pl. § 266.

Evidence.—Discovery will not be compelled by a court of equity, where it will subject defendant to penalties under U. S. Rev. St. § 4965, unless these are waived expressly by the plaintiff. Johnson v. Donaldson, 3 Fed. Rep. 22; Sto. Eq. Pl. § 575; Daniell's Chancery, 626.

Damages under U. S. Rev. St. § 4965 are penal. Johnson v. Donaldson, 3 Fed. Rep. 22; Taylor v. Gilman, 24 Fed. Rep. 632; Farmer v. Calvert, 5 Am. L. T. Rep. 168.

Infringement by Agent, without principal's knowledge or consent, cannot subject principal to penalty or forfeiture, but the burden may be on him to show his innocence. Taylor v. Gilman, 24 Fed. Rep. 632. See Com. v. Nichols, 10 Metc. 259; Att.-Gen. v. Sidden, 1 Crompt. & T. 219; Rex v. Gutch, 1 Moody & M. 433; Rex v. Almon, 5 Burr. 2686.

§ 4965 U. S. R. S., imposing penalties, must be strictly construed. Taylor v. Gilman, 24 Fed. Rep. 632.

Statutory Requisites must be strictly complied with. Parkinson v. Laselle, 3 Sawyer, 333.

Title of Chart.—The name of the pub-

CHARTER. (See FRANCHISE.)—Originally the word seems to have been used as including all sealed instruments, or solemn acts in writing. It is not unfrequently met in old English books, in a sense equivalent to deed. But this broad and general use of the word is now practically obsolete. It is retained to denote writings emanating from government, chiefly the following:

1. A written instrument setting forth privileges or an assurance of rights, granted by the sovereign power to the people, or to some large class of them; such as magna charta. A charter is granted by the sovereign, a constitution established by the people.

2. An act of Parliament, of Congress, or of a State legislature, creating a corporation, is called the charter of the corporation.<sup>1</sup> blishers, and the date and place of publication, were held not to be a part of the title in American law. Farmer v. Calvert, 5 Am. L. T. Rep. 168.

1. Quoting Abbott's Law Dictionary.

In Pennsylvania, under the constitution of 1874, and act of 29th April, 1874, the courts may create social and religious corporations; while the State government (not the legislature) grants charters for manufacturing, mining, railroad, and other trading corporations.

Municipal Corporations are created, in England, by act of Parliament or by the king's charter, usually the latter; in this country, by statute only. Their charters are at the will of the legislature, which can alter or repeal at pleasure.

By-laws.—Power in the municipality to make reasonable by-laws would exist at common law, but the limit is usually fixed by the charter or by general statutes.

Interpretation of Municipal Charter is according to general doctrines. Thus power to prohibit sale without license implies power of enforcement by imposition of penalty, so that it is certain and reasonable. Bishop on Statutory Crimes, § 25. But power to cause forfeiture of property will not be implied, it must be given in express words.

Proof of Charter.—(a) Judicial Notice.

—Charter of municipality will be taken notice of judicially (1) when it is declared to be a public statute; (2) when it is declared to be public or general in its nature or purposes, though there be no express provision to that effect. 1 Dillon's Munic. Corp. § 83. Supplements or Amendments. Such declaration in the charter extends likewise to supplements. Newark Bank v. Assessors, 30 N. J. Law, 22; State v. Bergen, 34 N. J. Law, 439; New Jersey v. Yard, 95 U. S. 112.

(b) Primary evidence of special charter of municipality is (1) the original, or an authenticated copy; or (2) parol evidence of acts, reputation, etc. 1 Dillon's Munic. Corp., § 84.

Repeal of charter does not take place, where both may stand together. 1 Dillon's Munic. Corp., § 87; Bishop on Statutory Crimes, § 156; and see § 151.

Dissolution may be, in England, (1) by act of Parliament; (2) by loss of integral part; (3) by surrender; (4) by forfeiture. In the United States it may only be by act of the legislature. See 1 Dillon's Munic. Corp., § 166 (110).

Outline of Ordinary Municipal Charter.

—See 1 Dillon's Munic. Corp., § 39.

Acceptance of the charter is unnecessary, unless the statute requires it. 1 Dillon, § 44; Berlin v. Gorham, 34 N. H. 266.

Delegation of Power is illegal. Mayor and aldermen, empowered to issue licenses, cannot delegate that authority. 1 Dillon, § 96.

Special Powers as to wharves, ferries, etc. See 1 Dillon, title Charter in index; also infra.

Private Corporations—The charter is an irrevocable contract between such a corporation and the State. Dartmouth College v. Wood, & Wheat (U. S.) 663. In Pennsylvania, however, under constitutional and statute law, the legislature has power to alter, revoke, or annul any charter of incorporation now existing and revocable, or any that may hereafter be created, in such manner that no injustice shall be done to the corporators.

Eminent Domain.—A charter may be taken under the power of eminent domain. Phila., etc., Co.'s Appeal, 102 Pa. St. 123; Hare on Const. Law, Lecture xvii.

Delegation of Power to Charter Corporations is illegal; but its charter may be made to depend on certain preliminary conditions, the performance of which is to be ascertained by some public officer. 1 Morawetz on Private Corporations, § 15.

Acceptance is essential. Rex v. Vice-Chancellor, 3 Burr. 1661; King v. Passmore, 3 T. R. 240; Bailey v. The Mayor, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 531; Short v. Unangst, 2 Watts & Serg. (Pa.) 45; Ellis v. Marshall, 2 Mass. 279.

Independently of legislative provision, no particular form of acceptance is necessary; any act clearly showing intent is sufficient. U. S. Bank v. Dandridge, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 64, 71; Covington v. Covington, etc., Co., 10 Bush (Ky.), 69. But where a stockholder's assent is necessary, if he dissent he must actively make his dissent known, and restrain every attempt to act under the charter. Owen v. Purdy, 12 Ohio St. 79.

Conditions Precedent do not delay the existence of the corporation, unless such seems to be the legislative intent. See Cincinnati, etc., R. v. Cole, 29 Ohio St. 126; Crocker v. Crane, 21 Wend. 211; 1 Morawetz on Private Corporations, § 26.

Fact of Existence is for the jury. Hammond v. Straus, 53 Md. 1.

Prescription.—Corporations may exist by prescription. 2 Kent Com. 277 (a). It is said in Angell & Ames on Corporations, § 70: "It may, indeed, be safely relied on as a sound imposition, that, when an association of persons have for a long time acted as a private corporation, have been uniformly recognized as such, and rights have been acquired under them as a corporation, the law will countenance every presumption in favor of their legal corporate existence; at least, unless against the sovereign."

Corporate existence cannot be denied by one who deals with an association as a corporation. Palmer v. Lawrence, 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) 161, 169, 170; Oregonian R. Co. v. Oregonian Nav. Co., 22 Fed. Rep. 245. The existence can only be attacked by the State. 2 Morawetz on Pri. Cor., § 750. See Id. § 692, where the last case cited—Oregonian R. Co. v. Oregonian Nav. Co.—is disapproved so far as it acts on the idea that the rule just stated rests on estoppel.

Expiration of Separate Franchise.—But in Grand Rapids Bridge Co. v. Prange, 35 Mich. 400, it was held that where a bridge corporation was created by the State, but its franchise of taking tolls depended on the assent of county supervisors, the right to take toll was separate from the corporate existence; and the period allowed to the corporation by the supervisors having expired, it was competent for one sued for tolls to show the fact. See also City of London v. Vanaere, 12 Mod. 270; Rex v. Gregory, 4 T. R. 240, 242, note a.

Dissolution may not be here, as in England, by act of the legislature, except under peculiar laws, as in Pennsylvania. It may, however, take place (1) by the loss of an integral part; (2) by surrender; (3) by forfeiture; (4) by expiration of the term of its duration.

1. BY THE LOSS OF AN INTEGRAL PART.—The old rule that loss of integral parts, where restoration is impossible, dissolves the corporation, still has force, but it has no effect upon most corporations of the present day, with their transferable shares.

Death of all the members cannot dissolve such a company, for the shares must descend to next of kin or legatees. Boston Glass Mfg. Co. v. Langdon, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 52; Russell v. McLellan, 14 Pick. (Mass.) 69.

Failure to hold elections does not cause a dissolution. Usually the charter or general law provides that old officers shall hold over till their successors be chosen, and that when there are no officers the corporators may elect others. State v. Barron, 58 N. H. 370; Commonwealth v. Cullen, 13 Pa. St. 133; Harris v. Miss. Valley R., 51 Miss. 603.

Insolvency.—Nor is failure to hold property, or sufficient property, a dissolution. The State, by suit for forfeiture, or the members through surrender, can alone terminate the corporate existence. Coburn v. Boston, etc., Co., 10 Gray (Mass.), 245.

2. SURRENDER.—Acceptance by the State is essential, and ordinarily this must be by act of the legislature. Town v. Bank, 2 Doug. (Mich.) 538; Wilson v. Central Bridge, 9 R. I. 590; Enfield Bridge Co. v. Connecticut River Co., 7 Conn. 45, 46.

Surrender by Majority Vote.—This may be done, for such is the implied condition in the charter of every pecuniary corporation. Lanman v. Lebanon Valley R., 30 Pa. St. 42; Treadwell v. Salisbury, 7 Gray (Mass.), 393; Angell & Ames on Corporations, § 772; Morawetz on Private Corporations, § 413. The surrender, however, must be in good faith; and the dissenting members cannot be compelled to take shares in a newly formed company as compensation for their old interests. Nor can directors or trustees, with a view to their individual emolument and in disregard of the interests of the corporators, sell the property to a new corporation with the intent to shut out members. Abbott v. Rubber Co., 33 Barbour (N. Y.), 579. And the power of the majority to surrender does not authorize a continuance of the old company with fundamental changes in its purposes; does not, e.g., warrant the extension of a railroad line, alteration

CHARTER-PARTY. (See also BILL OF LADING; DEMURRAGE; FREIGHT; MARITIME LIEN; SHIPPING.)

Definition, 143.

Who May Make, 143.

General Nature, 144.

Usual Contents, 145.

Special Terms Construed, 148.

Implied Engagements, 149.

Construction of Contract, 150.

Custom and Usage, 150.

Conditions Precedent, 151.

Obligation of Parties, 152.

Vessel Let on Shares, 153.

Charter to Government, 153.

Dissolution of Contract, 154.

Damages for Breach of Contract, 154.

Jurisdiction Remedy, 155.

1. Definition.—A charter-party is a contract whereby the owner of a ship or other vessel lets the whole or a part of her to another for the conveyance of goods in consideration for the payment of freight.<sup>1</sup> It is usually in writing,<sup>2</sup> not under seal,<sup>3</sup> but may be made by word of mouth.<sup>4</sup>

2. Who May Make.—In a foreign port the master<sup>5</sup> of the vessel may make a charter-party provided that no agent of the owner be present;<sup>6</sup> but in the home port, or the place of residence of the of route, or consolidation with another company. There are authorities upholding such action by the majority of the corporators, but the weight of authority is the other way. See Morawetz on Priv. Corp. § 402.

3. FORFEITURE.—Non-user or misuser does not dissolve. The corporate existence continues until the State, through legal proceedings, ascertains the forfeiture and takes away the charter. Elevated R., 70 N. Y. 337, 338; Irvine v. Lumberman's Bank, 2 W. & S. (Pa.) 204.

Fraud against the State, in obtaining the charter, will not vitiate the charter so long as the State does not elect to set it aside. Bridge Co. v. Bridge Co., 7 Pick. (Mass.) 344; Centre, etc., Co. v. McConaby, 10 S. & R. (Pa.) 140. For fraud does not make grants or contracts void, but only voidable.

4. EXPIRATION of the term of its existence dissolves the corporation; but those who continue to act with the society as a corporation cannot deny its corporate character. See supra. See also above for expiration of a separate franchise of a corporation.

Charter of Foreign Corporation cannot be altered. This is not because of any contract between it and the State, which granted it no charter. It is because to do so would be to violate the contract between the corporators. Morawetz on Private Corporations, § 1059.

Proof of Charter.—This is unnecessary in a federal court within the State granting it, when the charter is a public law. Covington Drawbridge Co. v. Shepherd, 20 How. (U. S.) 227. In England and some American States, the plea of the general issue does not acknowledge the fact of incorporation; in other States it does. Angell & Ames, § 632. But which are public charters, needing no proof, and which are private, cannot be ascertained by any certain, general rule, as the decisions are at variance. Morawetz on Prin. Corp. § 38.

Accepting New Charter from Another State does not relieve from the obligations to the State granting the first charter. Comm. v. Pittsburg & Connellsville R., 58 Pa. St. 26.

General Statutes apply to a charter, unless they are expressly repealed by the charter. Pratt v. Atlantic R., 42 Me. 579.

1. Bouv. Dict. 259; 3 Kent, 301.

The term is derived from the old custom of writing contracts on a card and cutting it into two parts from top to bottom, one part being delivered to each party, the card so cut being called charta partita.

2. Hurry v. Hurry, 2 Wash. C. C. 145.

3. Brown v. Ralston, 4 Rand. (Va.) 504.

4. Taggard v. Loring, 16 Mass. 336.

5. But the master of a vessel has no right to make a charter-party in a foreign port for the purpose of giving a creditor security for a debt. Hurry v. Hurry, 2 Wash. C. C. 145.

Nor have the agents, even when part owners, the right to charter a vessel to a creditor of their own as a means of enabling him to repay himself out of the earnings. The A. M. Bliss, 2 Low (D. C.), 103.

A charter-party, when so made, will be void, as against the other owners, and as against the vessel. The A. M. Bliss, 2 Low (D. C.), 103.

6. Freeman v. Buckingham, 18 How.

owners, their assent or that of the managing owner is requisite.<sup>1</sup>

Charter-parties are usually effected by the agency of brokers, who are employed by the ship-owner, and are paid a commission.<sup>2</sup>

3. General Nature.—A charter-party is not a conveyance within the recording acts of Congress,<sup>3</sup> and need not therefore be recorded.<sup>4</sup>

A personal agreement between the owners to embark in a common enterprise is not a charter-party.<sup>5</sup> The owner may either let the capacity or burden of the ship, continuing the master and crew in their employment,<sup>6</sup> or he may surrender the entire ship to the charterer, who then assumes possession and control, and provides himself with master and crew.<sup>7</sup>

When a charter-party authorizes the charterer "to relet the vessel, in whole or in part," the charterer is authorized to make sub-contracts of affreightment, and the vessel will be bound thereby.<sup>8</sup>

If the charter-party be under seal, it is governed by technical rules incident to instruments under seal.<sup>9</sup>

When a charter-party is a contract for the carriage of goods, the ship-owner has a lien on the cargo for his freight money, but when (U. S.) 191; Hurry v. Hurry, 2 Wash. C. 145.

A person authorized to act for the charterers of a vessel as their agent to procure a cargo in a foreign port is not thereby authorized to modify or cancel a charter-party concluded by his principals.

Ye Ling & Co. v. Corbitt, 9 Fed. Rep. (D. C.) 433. Cargo of salt, 4 Blatch. C. C. 224.

1. The Schooner Tribune, 3 Sum. C. C. 144, 149. And this is true notwithstanding the fact the vessel is sailed on shares. Swan v. Ruckman, 25 How. (N. Y.) Pr. 468.

An informal agreement in the nature of a charter-party, acted upon by parties, may be treated as equivalent to a charter-party. Lidgett v. Williams, 4 Hare, 462.

A charter-party made in good faith by the managing owner is binding on all interested in the vessel. Bangs v. Lowber, 2 Cliff. C. C. 157; Marcadier v. Chesapeake Ins. Co., 8 Cranch (U. S.), 39.

But a ship-broker at the home port of the vessel cannot bind the owners by a charter-party executed upon the mere authority of a telegram from the master, without consulting the managing owner; nor will the silence of the managing owner after notice operate as a ratification, if such notice contains an incorrect statement of the facts. Craig v. Magee, 11 Fed. Rep. C. C. 175.

Whilst the managing owner has implied authority to charter he has not a like authority to cancel an existing charter. Thomas v. Lewis, 4 Ex. D. 18.

2. The Nouva Raffaelina, L. R. 3 Adm. & E. 483; Cross v. Pagliano, L. R. 6 Ex. 79.

3. Mott v. Ruckman, 3 Blatch. C. C. 71; Hill v. The Golden Gate, 1 Newb. (D. C.) 309.

4. Hill v. The Golden Gate, 1 Newb. (D. C.) 309.

5. Vandewater v. The Yankee Blade, 1 McAll. (D. C.) 9.

6. Marcadier v. Chesapeake Ins. Co., 8 Cranch (U. S.), 39; Donahoe v. Kittell, 1 Cliff. C. C. 135.

Such a contract is a mere covenant for the conveyance of merchandise, or for the performance of a stipulated service. Parrish v. Crawford, 2 Strange, 1251; Colvin v. Newbury, 1 Clark & F. 283. And the owner is responsible, under such circumstances, for the conduct of the master and crew. Gracie v. Palmer, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 605.

7. Marcadier v. Chesapeake Ins. Co., 8 Cranch (U. S.), 39; Clarkson v. Edes, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 470.

8. The T. A. Goddard, 12 Fed. Rep. (D. C.) 174.

And the bill of lading is a reletting in part. The T. A. Goddard, 12 Fed. Rep. 174.

9. A contract of affreightment, if not under seal, may be dissolved at any time, before breach, by consent of the parties, and such consent need not be expressed in an instrument under seal; but if the charter-party itself be under seal, it can the charter-party amounts to a demise of the ship, the rule is otherwise.<sup>1</sup>

4 Usual Contents.—Charter-parties are ordinarily printed in common form, the unusual terms agreed upon between the parties being inserted in writing.

The order of the various settled provisions of the document is usually as follows:<sup>2</sup>

1. The name of the contracting parties. The description of the ship; her present situation or local position, either at sea or in dock.

2. Warranty of fitness of the ship for the adventure.

3. The promise by the ship-owner that the ship shall, with all convenient speed, load, proceed, and deliver, on being paid freight, a full and complete cargo (provisions as to excepted perils).

4. The promise of the charterer to pay freight and load within a prescribed time, or pay demurrage.

5. Lay-days agreed on by the ship-owner and the rate of demurrage, if stipulated time is exceeded.

6. Clause of cesser of liability.

7. Penalty for non-performance.

The usual and printed parts of the contract are construed with the same formality as covenants in a deed.<sup>3</sup>

Preliminary statements as to the burthen, build, and location of a vessel are the nature of representations or declarations of what is known, and therefore ought to be stated with extreme accuracy.<sup>4</sup> only be discharged or dissolved by an agreement under seal. Gross v. Nugent, 5 B. & A. 65; Ellen v. Topp, 6 Ex. 424.

1. Newbury v. Calvin, 8 B. & Cr. 166.
2. The above is a skeleton of the ordinary form. In practice, based on this outline, charter-parties of great length and complexity are not infrequently drawn up. The Law of Merchant Shipping (Foard), 355.

3. The Law of Merchant Shipping (Foard), 257.

4. Thus a statement that the ship is lying in a certain dock," or is "A 1 at Lloyds," or that she will sail on a certain day, is or may be an allegation upon which the entire contract will be based, and in particular cases, have been construed as conditions precedent, which, if not performed, entitle the promisee to renounce the contract. Glaholm v. Hays, 2 M. & G. 257; Oliver v. Fielden, 18 L. J. Ex. 353.

If the ship is named, the charterer is entitled to the ship he bargains for, and may have an injunction to restrain a mortgagee from exercising his power of sale or from interfering with the ship for any other purpose. De Mattos v. Gibson, 28 L. J. Ch. 165.

The statement that the ship is lying in a certain dock or at a certain wharf imports a warranty and renders the contract voidable, if not in part performed. Behm v. Burness, 32 L. J. Q. B. (Exch.) 204.

The statement of the burthen or tonnage of a ship as "about so many tons" is usually considered to be a description, and will not ordinarily be deemed a warranty unless so agreed, or the surrounding circumstances established that a vessel of a particular size and tonnage was essential. Watts v. Camors, 10 Fed. Rep. 145. A variance to the extent of a ton or half a ton in size might be fatal if it was a warranty, and if an excess would frustrate the contract. Windle v. Barker, 25 L. J. Q. B. 349. A statement that a ship will sail on or before a given date, is not necessarily a condition precedent, but would entitle a charterer to recompense in damages if not complied with. Hall v. Cazenove, 4 East, 477; Deffell v. Brocklebank, 3 Bligh, 561.

If the vessel be guaranteed to stow and carry a specific amount of cargo, the charterers are not bound to accept a vessel of less capacity. Simonetti v. Foster, 2 Fed. Rep. 415.

And if the charterer suffers loss in con-

Preliminary statements as to the ship being tight, stanch, and strong, and in every way fitted for the voyage, form a contract of seaworthiness, which, even if not expressed, is involved in all contracts for the carriage of goods, whether by charter-party or otherwise.<sup>1</sup>

The obligation to sail "forthwith," or "with all convenient speed," does not mean at this very moment nor at any specific period of time; it means with all proper despatch and without unreasonable delay.<sup>2</sup>

Where the ship is to load at a named port, and the promise is qualified as usual by the term, "or as near thereto as she can safely get," the ship complies by loading as near as possible without running an unnecessary risk.<sup>3</sup> sequence, he is entitled to recover damages. Gomila v. Culiford, 20 Fed. Rep. 734.

The vessel is not liable in rem for misrepresentation or concealment of facts by her master or owner in respect to her tonnage or capacity. The Eli Whitney, 1 Blatch. C. C. 360.

But fraudulent representation in these regards may defeat the right to freight. Weston v. Minot, 3 Wood & M. C. C. 448.

1. Richardson v. Staunton, 41 L. J. C. P. 180; Steel v. State Line St. S. S. Co., 3 Asp. C. 72.

Under a charter-party the contract of seaworthiness is, that the vessel shall be seaworthy at the time she leaves or sails actually on the voyage. Worms v. Story, 25 L. J. Ex. 1. And the ship-owner must keep his ship seaworthy unless prevented by perils of the sea of unavoidable accidents. Werk v. Leathers, 1 Woods C. C. 271. The Bark Gentleman, Olcott (D. C.) 115. And this implies that the vessel must be fit to carry such a cargo as was actually carried. The Lizzie W. Virden, 8 Fed. R. 624.

The law places on the owner of the vessel the obligations of a warrantor. McCann v. Conery, 11 Fed. R. 747.

It is an ordinary presumption that a ship is seaworthy and her machinery in good order when she undertakes a voyage. Pyman v. Von Singen, 3 Fed. Rep. 802.

The owner is answerable for visible as well as for latent defects, whereby the cargo is damaged. Hubert v. Recknagel, 13 Fed. R. 912.

The obligation of seaworthiness in reference to passengers has been said not to have existed at common law. Christie v. Gredd, 2 Camp. 81; Crofts v. Waterhouse, 3 Bing. 319.

But the modern decisions extend the doctrine of seaworthiness to passengers as well as to goods. Cohen v. Davidson, 2 Q. B. D. 455; Steel v. State Line S. Co. 3 App. C. 72.

This warranty also involves the obligation that the ship shall sail with a fit and adequate crew, a sufficient and capable master, and that she shall be properly found. Thompson v. Hopper, 27 L. J. Q. B. (Ex. D.), 441.

And the ship must be furnished with ground tackle sufficient to enable her to meet ordinary peril. Wilkie v. Geddes, 3 Doug. 57.

With proper and necessary anchors. Harrison v. Douglass, 3 Ad. & E. 396. And with a competent master as well as properly manned. Tait v. Levi, 14 East, 481; De Mattos v. Gibson, 28 L. J. Ch. 498. A supply of suitable compasses is a prerequisite to seaworthiness. Lord v. G. N. & P. S. Co., 4 Sawyer (D. C.), 292.

And the master may not load a greater cargo than the ship contracted for will safely carry. Weir v. Aberdeen, 2 B. & A. 320; Foley v. Tabor, 2 F. & F. 663.

2. Hudson v. Hill, 43 L. J. C. P. 273. "Directly," would mean less than in a reasonable time, but would not necessarily mean immediately. Thompson v. Gibson, 10 L. J. Ex. 241; Duncan v. Topham, 18 L. J. C. P. 310.

As to the engagements involved in the word "immediately." Queen v. Justices of Berks, 4 Q. B. D. 469; Falsdike v. Stone, 3 L. R. C. P. 607.

A loss by delay or deviation, if going to the root of the contract and frustrating the purposes of the voyage, is a condition precedent. But short of this, the charterer has an action for damages. McAndrew v. Chapple, 1 L. R. C. P. 643; Tarrabochia v. Hickie, 26 L. J. Ex. 26.

3. Shield v. Wilkins, 19 L. J. Ex. 238. If the approach be blocked by ice, she

"To load a full and complete cargo" involves an obligation to fill the whole reach and burden of the ship, and the term "cargo" means the entire load of the ship.<sup>1</sup>

As an alternative expression, the words "other lawful merchandise" are frequently used. When the words follow a cargo of specified goods, they are interpreted as meaning goods of the same kind.<sup>2</sup>

The words "and there deliver at freighter's risk and expense the same on being paid freight" have been construed as an agreement that the owner must be ready and willing to deliver on payment of the money.<sup>3</sup>

The perils excepted under the usual form of charter-party are identical with those ordinarily used with the bill of lading.<sup>4</sup>

The same is also true of the demurrage clause.<sup>5</sup> must wait until the impediment be removed.

A temporary obstruction is no dissolution of the contract. Metcalf v. Britannia Iron Works Co., 2 Q. B. D. 423.

1. Borrowman v. Drayton, 2 Ex. Div. 15. Ordinarily, the terms mean a full and complete cargo, according to the usage of the port. Cuthbert v. Cummings, 11 Ex. D. 405.

What is a "full and complete cargo," may be determined by the usage of trade. Duckett v. Satterfield, 3 L. R. C. P. 227. The property to be carried must be placed under the control of the carrier or his servants. Grosvenor v. N. Y. C. R. Co. 39 N. Y. 34.

And delivery must be made to a servant whose proper duty is to receive it and not to an irresponsible servant or agent. Blanchard v. Isaacs, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 388.

If there be an agreement to freight the hull of the ship without specifying the burden, the ship must be filled; the hirer must pay his freight money, full or empty. Duffie v. Hays, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 327; The Brig Cynthia, 1 Pet. Ad. (D. C.) 203; Kleine v. Catara, 2 Gall. C. C. 61.

A failure on the part of the charterer to comply with his engagement, accompanied by the sailing of the vessel empty, will render the charterer liable for the sum which would have been earned by the ship, if he had complied with his covenant. Kleine v. Cattara, 2 Gall. C. C. 61.

2. Gibbs v. Lawrence, 30 L. J. Chanc. 170; Russian St. Nav. Co. v. Silva, 13 C. B. N. S. 610.

The term refers to the kind rather than to the amount of the goods. If lawful and not diseased or contraband they must be received, whether heavy or light, agreeable or disagreeable. Weston v. Minot, 3 Wood. & M. C. C. 436.

If the words "other lawful merchandise" follow a declaration of assorted goods, with specified rates for each assortment, the freighter must pay on the basis of the stipulated quantity of the enumerated goods shipped. Cockburn v. Alexander, 6 C. B. 791.

3. Duthie v. Hilton, 4 L. R. C. P. 138.

Under an ordinary bill of lading freight is demandable only when the goods are discharged from the vessel and an opportunity had for their examination by the party who is to receive them; but the carrier is not bound to make an actual delivery, except upon payment of the freight. 1265 Vitrified Pipes, 14 Blatch. C. C. 274.

"Freight on right delivery" is the same as "freight upon right delivery." Paynter v. Jones, 2 L. R. C. P. 348.

When freight is made payable "after delivery," delivery is a condition precedent. Potage v. Cole, 1 Wm. Sanders, 356; Foster v. Coleback, 28 L. J. Ex. 81.

A delivery on the usual wharf will discharge the carrier. Hyde v. Trent & Mersey Nav. Co., 5 T. R. 389.

But the master is not entitled to deliver goods immediately on the arrival of the vessel and without notice to the owner, and if he should land them, and they should be destroyed, he will be responsible to the owner for the loss. Gatliffe v. Bourne, 4 Bing. N. C. 314.

But it is a good answer to the liability of the ship-owner to say that the goods were safely delivered at the wharf and taken care of there until destroyed by fire. Gatliffe v. Bourne, 4 Bing. N. C. 314.

4. For decisions thereon, see BILL OF LADING.

5. For decisions thereon, see DEMURRAGE.

As charter-parties are frequently executed by agents, the question which most frequently arises with regard to the signature is, whether, where an agent, acting for his principal, has entered into a charter-party, he has entered it in such a form as to render himself personally liable or not. This depends upon the intention of the parties as disclosed by the language of the contract itself and the mode in which it is done. Where a person signs a contract in his own name, without qualification, he is prima facie a contracting party, and, to prevent this liability from attaching, it must appear clearly from other portions of the agreement that he did not intend to act as a principal.<sup>1</sup>

If a contract not only describes one of the parties as agent, but clearly indicates that he is acting only as such for a named principal, he is relieved from liability although his signature is unqualified.<sup>2</sup>

The signature, however, "as agent," is the strongest evidence to show that the person signing incurs no personal liability.<sup>3</sup>

Charter-parties of late years have contained provisions limiting the liability of the parties; as, for example, to absolve the charterer from all liability for demurrage and other incidental charges after the cargo is shipped, or to exempt the vessel owner from liability after the cargo has been landed.

This clause is technically known as the Cesser Clause, and its construction has given rise to some difficulty.<sup>4</sup>

The measure of damages for the breach of the charter-party is necessarily the price which has been agreed upon, as the value of the ship per day or hour or voyage; but where the parties agree that a specific sum should be payable as a penalty for all breaches, it will be sustained if it be in effect liquidated damages.<sup>5</sup>

5. Special Terms Construed.—"To be employed" means not only the act of not doing anything, but also to be engaged to do it; to be under contract or orders.<sup>6</sup> "Empty" means without cargo.<sup>7</sup> The term "incident to the navigation of the river" has the same signification as the words "perils of navigation," or "dangers of the sea," or "dangers of navigation."<sup>8</sup>

The covenant "dangers of the seas excepted" does not cover a loss by fire originating on board.<sup>9</sup> "With all possible despatch" is a warranty, and goes to the root of the contract, and is a condi-

1. Parker v. Winlow, 7 E. & B. 942.

2. Gadd v. Houghton, 1 Ex. Div. 357.

3. Deslandes v. Gregory, 2 E. & E. 602.

4. Maude and Pollock's Law of Merchant Shipping, 335, 336; Price v. Green, 16 M. & W. 346.

5. Where there is uncertainty whether the parties intended the sum named as a penalty or as damages, the court will be inclined to view as a penalty. Barton v. Glover, Holt N. P. C. 43.

Mere largeness of amount will not, however, determine it to be so. Herbert v. The Salisbury & Yeovil Ry. Co., 2 L. R. Eq. 221.

The use of the term "liquidated and ascertained damages," with a declaration that it is not a penalty, is not decisive. Davies v. Penton, 6 B. & C. 216; Green v. Price, 13 M. & W. 701.

6. U. S. v. The Catherine, 2 Paine C. 721.

7. Perrine v. The Chesapeake & Del. Can. Co., 9 How. (U. S.) 172.

8. The Waltham, 13 Opin. Att.-Gen.

9.

Airey v. Merrill, 2 Curt. (D. C.) 8.

tion precedent to the right of recovery.<sup>1</sup> If there be a stipulation for "despatch in discharging," the vessel is entitled to demurrage for delay caused in waiting her turn in respect to other vessels.<sup>2</sup>

But "customary despatch" means the usual despatch of persons who are ready to receive a cargo, and excludes all custom in accordance with which the charterer claims the right to decline to receive cargo simply because it was to his advantage to postpone;<sup>3</sup> it means despatch in accordance with the lawful, reasonable, and well-known customs of the port.<sup>4</sup> But neither custom nor usage is allowed to give meanings to words, or to annex incidents to contracts or to vary or alter the legal construction, or to interpret them, so as to conflict with the statute law.<sup>5</sup> "Working days" means days as they succeed each other, exclusive of Sundays and holidays.<sup>6</sup>

6. Implied Engagements.—There are certain terms which, even if not expressed in the contract of affreightment, must ordinarily be regarded as implied. Unless there be an express agreement to the contrary, the ship-owner is held impliedly to warrant that the ship he provides shall be seaworthy and in a condition to perform the voyage and undergo the perils of the sea and other included risks to which she must of necessity be exposed in the course of the voyage.<sup>7</sup> In the absence of any expressed provision as to time, the law implies an obligation on the part of the ship-owner to furnish a vessel within a reasonable time,<sup>8</sup> and to prosecute the voyage without unnecessary deviation.<sup>9</sup> Apart from any expressed contract by a charter-party, a common carrier of goods for hire would ordinarily be bound to take reasonable care of goods intrusted to him from the moment of receiving them.<sup>10</sup> And to transport and deliver them with reasonable care, skill, and diligence.<sup>11</sup> To carry them safely in the usual manner and not circuitously.<sup>12</sup> To obey the directions of the owner in respect to

1. Lowber v. Bangs, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 728; Deshong v. Cosby, 1 Woods C. C. 289.

2. Keen v. Audenreid, 5 Ben. (D. C.) 535.

3. Lindsay v. Cusimano, 10 Fed. R. (D. C.) 302.

4. Smith v. 60,000 ft. of Lumber, 2 Fed. R. (D. C.) 396.

5. Noble v. Durell, 3 T. R. 271; Hockin v. Cook, 4 T. R. 314.

6. Pedersen v. Eugster, 14 Fed. R. (D. C.) 422.

7. Kopitoff v. Wilson, 1 Q. B. D. 377. The ship-owner not only undertakes that the ship shall be fit to carry a cargo of merchandise, but where a particular cargo has been named in the contract, he undertakes that the ship shall be fit to carry the cargo named. Stanton v. Richardson, L. R. 7 C. P. 421.

8. Stanton v. Richardson, L. R. 7 C. P. 421.

9. Davis v. Garrett, 6 Bing. 716.

But a deviation for the purpose of saving life is justifiable. Scaramanga v. Stamp, 4 C. P. D. 316. In general a delay by deviation is the same as a delay in starting. McAndrew v. Chapple, L. R. 1 C. P. 643.

10. Nugent v. Smith, 1 C. P. D. 423; The Chasta, 4 L. R. A. & E. 446.

11. The Parana, 1 P. D. 455.

12. Davis v. Garrett, 6 Bing. 716.

But he is not bound to adopt the shortest route. Myers v. L. & S. W. R. Co., 5 L. R. C. P. 1. Nor is he obliged to adopt extraordinary means to insure it. Bridson v. G. N. R. Co., 28 L. J. Ex. 51. He is bound to carry, if a common carrier, by the route which he professes to be his route, and cannot justify a delay because it is said to be a usual mode consequent on particular method of delivery. Hales v. L. & M. W. R. Co., 32 L. J. Q. B. 292.

them.<sup>1</sup> Subject to the perils excepted, he is responsible for the safe delivery of articles and for the same weight of merchandise that he has actually in truth received.<sup>2</sup> He is excused from the performance of his obligation, in reference to the foregoing liabilities, when prevented by the act of God or the king's enemies.<sup>3</sup>

The carrier is also excused if the contract to carry, though possible and legal at the time it is made, becomes impossible afterwards by an act of God or its performance be illegal.<sup>4</sup>

7. Construction of Contract.—The usual and printed portions of the contract are construed with the same formality as covenants in a deed.<sup>5</sup> The informal and written parts are necessarily mercantile and uncertain, often hurriedly framed with a view to immediate exigencies and without much consideration, and with regard thereto, it is the duty of the court to give effect, if possible, to the intention of the parties as apparent on the instrument.<sup>6</sup>

If there be any reasonable doubt as to the sense and meaning of the whole instrument, written words are entitled to have a greater effect attributed to them than to printed ones.<sup>7</sup> It is the province of the court to construe all written contracts, but if particular words have obtained by mercantile or other usage a peculiar meaning, it is for the jury to say what the meaning of these expressions is, and then for the court to decide on the meaning of the contract.<sup>8</sup>

8. Custom and Usage.—Charter-parties may be explained but not contradicted by evidence of usage of the particular trade to which the contract relates.<sup>9</sup> The general custom of merchants, like

1. Bailey v. H. R. R. Co., 49 N. Y. 70; The Felix, 2 L. R. A. & E. 273.

2. Davidson v. Gwynne, 12 East. 381; Brown v. Powell St. Co., 10 L. R. C. P. 562.

3. Nugent v. Smith, 1 C. P. D. 19, 423; Grey v. Mobile Trading Co., 55 Ala. 387.

4. Baly v. De C. Respigney, 4 L. R. Q. B. 130; The Teutonia, 3 L. R. A. & E. 394.

5. The Law of Merchant Shipping (Foard), 257.

6. The intention of the parties, so far as it is just and reasonable and in accordance with law, governs. Lowber v. Bangs, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 736; Richie v. Atkinson, 10 East. 295.

If, however, the meaning be clear, it is conclusive, and a claim that it does not express the intention of the parties will not be entertained. The Hermitage, 4 Blatch. C. C. 474.

In the earlier cases, harsh and oppressive stipulations were not infrequently rejected or explained away, the effect of which was to practically make for the parties a new contract. The present rule seems to be to give to clear and unambiguous stipulations their obvious meaning without reference to the possible hardships of the consequence. Stadhard v. Lee, 3 B. & S. 364.

The court will not, at the instance of one party, so construe a contract that it will be necessarily void at the option of that party, unless it appears that both parties intended it to be so construed. Watts v. Camors, 10 Fed R. C. C. 145.

The intent of the parties is not to be inferred from single clauses or from single facts, but from the tenor of the whole instrument construed in the light of facts which are admissible in explanation of its intent and meaning. The Abberfoyle, Abb. Ad. (D. C.) 255; The Volunteer, 1 Sum. C. C. 551; The Anna Kimball, 2 Cliff. C. C. 4.

7. Robertson v. French, 4 East. 130; Pearson v. Goshen, 33 L. J. C. P. 265.

But printed words cannot be rejected in order to give effect to written passages. German v. Tyrie, 33 L. J. Q. B. 97; Mayer v. Lovell, 9 L. R. C. P. 107.

8. Smith v. Bland, Ry. & M. 260; Hutchinson v. Bowker, 5 M. & W. 535.

9. Gould v. Oliver, 2 M. & Gr. 208.

proof of usage, is admissible to interpret the otherwise indeterminate intentions of the parties, and to ascertain the extent and nature of their contract.<sup>1</sup> But neither usage nor custom is allowed to give meanings to words, or to annex incidents to contracts, or to vary or alter their legal construction, or to so interpret them as to bring them in conflict with law.<sup>2</sup>

Charter-parties may be explained but not contradicted by evidence of usage of the particular trade which the contract relates, or to explain and ascertain the true meaning of a particular word or words when they have various meanings.<sup>3</sup> Of the general custom of merchants, courts will take judicial notice, but particular customs of a port or place by specific usages must be proven.<sup>4</sup>

9. Conditions Precedent.—In determining whether particular statements do or do not amount to conditions precedent, the rule of construction is to discover, if possible, the intentions of the parties as apparent on the instrument and from surrounding circumstances.<sup>5</sup> Generally speaking, any stipulation which goes only to a portion of the consideration, or, in other words, the breach of which would deprive the party who has a right to insist upon it of a portion only of the benefit of his contract will not be construed as a condition precedent.<sup>6</sup>

Any particular stipulation which if broken would wholly frus-

1. The Reeside, 2 Sum. C. C. 567; Oelricks v. Ford, 23 How. (U. S.) 63.

Evidence of usage is admissible to explain what is ambiguous in the charter-party, but it is inadmissible to vary or contradict what is plain. Turnbull v. The Citizens' Bank of La., 16 Fed. R. C. C. 145.

In a written instrument of charter-party where an unambiguous term is used, which has an accepted signification both in commercial and judicial language, proof of usage will not be permitted to show that such a term has a local meaning repugnant to its settled sense. Pedersen v. Eugster, 14 Fed. R. (D. C.) 422.

The evidence as to usage is restricted to the fact of a general usage and practice. The judgment or opinion of the witness is inadmissible. Cunningham v. Fond-bianque, 6 C. & P. 44; Lewis v. Marshall, 7 M. & Gr. 729.

As to the admissibility of evidence of usage. Wigglesworth v. Allison, Notes thereto, Smith's Leading Cases (8th Ed.), vol. i., 594.

2 Noble v. Durell, 3 T. R. 271; Hockin v. Cook, 4 T. R. 314.

The existence of a custom amongst merchants at a particular port for shippers to make out for the master a correct copy of the bill of lading, cannot impose a duty not named in the contract or existing by law. Dutton v. Powles, 30 L. J. Q. B. 169.

3. Palmer v. Blackburn, 1 Bing. 61; The Reeside, 2 Sum. C. C. 567; Bradwell v. Butler, 1 Newb. (D. C.) 175; Pierpont v. Fowle, 2 Wood. & M. C. C. 44.

"Good barley and fine barley" are not the same. Hutchison v. Bowker, 5 M. & W. 335.

4. The Law of Merchant Shipping (Foard). 280.

Particular usages must be reasonable. Paxton v. Courteney, 2 F. & F. 131; Foxall v. Inter. Land Co., 16 L. T. N. S. 637. It must be uniform and known. Salvador v. Hopkins, 3 Burr. 1707; Abbott v. Bates, 43 L. J. C. P. 150.

But its existence for one year has been held sufficient. Postlethwaite v. Free-land, 4 Ex. Div. 155. And one witness has been held sufficient to establish its uniformity or notoriety. McKenzie v. Dunlap, 3 Macq. 22.

5. To which intention, when once discovered, all technical forms of expression must give way. Stavers v. Curlin, 3 Bing. N. C. 368; Luger v. Duthie, 1 Asp. 3; Dimech v. Corlett, 12 Moo. P. C. C. 199.

No formal arrangement of words is necessary; the reason and sense of the thing is to be collected from the whole contract. Dimich v. Caulett, 12 Moo. C. C. 199.

6. Ritchie v. Atkinson, 10 East, 295.

trate the contract is, while the contract remains executory, a condition precedent.<sup>1</sup> When the whole consideration for any stipulation fails, or if it becomes impossible to be performed substantially as the parties intended, by the voluntary act of one of the parties, the other is not bound to proceed.<sup>2</sup>

10. Obligations of Parties.—Under a contract simply giving the use and disposal of a vessel, the owners are not bound, in the absence of proof of usage or custom, to alter materially the construction of the vessel.<sup>3</sup> When the vessel becomes disabled by accident, while loading, the freighter will not be bound by the charter unless she is repaired and rendered fit for contemplated use in a reasonable time.<sup>4</sup> The positive refusal to furnish a cargo dispenses with the obligation of waiting to receive it.<sup>5</sup> The owner under a charter-party is only a bailee for hire, and as such is bound to the use of only ordinary skill and care.<sup>6</sup> The performance of the conditions of the charter-party is imperative.<sup>7</sup> And if what is agreed to be done is possible or lawful, it must be done;<sup>8</sup> breach of performance is not excused by accident.<sup>9</sup> No exceptions of a private nature, not contained in the contract itself, can be engrafted by implication as an excuse for non-performance.<sup>10</sup> When the general owner obtains the possession, command, and navigation of the vessel and contracts to carry a cargo on freight for the voyage, the charter-party is a mere contract of affreightment sounding in covenant, and the owner is responsible for the conduct of the master and mariners.<sup>11</sup> On a mere contract of affreightment, the charterer is not clothed with the character of owner, and the general owner will be liable for every damage chargeable to the carrier, unless it appears by present stipulations that the obligation has been assumed by the charterer.<sup>12</sup> An executory contract for the employment of the vessel, and a purchase by the charterer of a share in the vessel, does not alter the status of the charterer as a bailee for hire.<sup>13</sup>

The charterer may, before the sailing of the vessel, substitute a

1. Bradford v. Williams, 7 L. R. Ex. 259; Jackson v. The Union Marine, 44 L. J. C. P. 27.

2. Kleine v. Catara, 2 Gall. (C. C.) 60; Richardson v. Stanton, 1 Asp. (N. S.) 449.

3. Beecher v. Bechtell, 3 Blatch. (C. C.) 40.

But are bound to keep her in good condition. The Frances Wright, 7 Ben. D. C. 88.

4. Purvis v. Tunno, 1 Brev. (S. Car.) 259; s. c., 2 Am. Dec. 664.

5. Hall v. Hurlbut, Tacey (C. C.), 598; Kleine v. Catara, 2 Gall. (C. C.) 61.

6. Lamb v. Parkman, 1 Sprague (D. C.), 343.

7. Hudson Can. Co. v. Penn. C. Co., 8 Wall. (U. S.) 289; Randall v. Lynch, 12 East. 179.

8. The Harriman, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 177; 95.

Oglin v. Ins. Co. of Va., 2 Wash. (C. C.) 319.

9. Holyoke v. Depew, 2 Ben. (D. C.) 341; Spence v. Chadwick, 10 Q. B. 517.

10. Howland v. Greenway, 22 How. (U. S.) 502; Atkinson v. Ritchie, 10 East, 530.

11. Gracie v. Palmer, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 605; Marcadier v. Chesapeake Ins. Co., 8 Cranch (U. S.), 39; Leary v. U. S., 14 Wall. (U. S.) 611.

Such a contract is a mere covenant for conveyance of merchandise or the performance of the stipulated service. Richardson v. Winsor, 3 Cliff. (C. C.) 399.

12. Richardson v. Winsor, 3 Cliff. (C. C.) 406; Colvin v. Newbury, 6 Bligh, 187.

13. Ward v. Thompson, Newb. (D. C.)

sound cargo for one damaged, and it is the duty of the master to receive the substituted cargo.<sup>1</sup> If the agreement be to take all lawful goods and merchandise, the master must carry any cargo that is comprised within the terms if delivered to him in good condition,<sup>2</sup> but he may refuse goods if they are in a condition not to be carried without injury to the cargo.<sup>3</sup> When the charter-party is a mere contract of affreightment, the owners are common carriers, and will in general be responsible for a failure to convey the goods.<sup>4</sup> A person may be the owner for the voyage if he is to have exclusive possession, control, and management, appoint the master, run the vessel, and receive the entire profits.<sup>5</sup> Under such circumstances, he will be responsible and not the general owner.<sup>6</sup> The words "let" and "to freight" do not of themselves make the charterer owner for the voyage.<sup>7</sup>

11. Vessel Let on Shares.—When the vessel is leased or chartered to the master, who directs her employment, hires her crew, and divides the earnings between himself and the owners, he and not the general owners is liable on contracts for supplies for the vessel while thus employed.<sup>8</sup>

12. Charter to Government.—When the charter provides for a per diem compensation, the government is not the owner for the voyage, and cannot be held liable for the expense of pilot and crew sent to the vessel's assistance.<sup>9</sup> Nor is the government liable for demurrage for detention on the return trip after the discharge of the vessel under the terms of the contract.<sup>10</sup> When an officer whose duty it is to supervise government contracts orders the price fixed upon by the contract of his assistant with the vessel-owner reduced, the original contract price cannot be recovered if the owner after notice allows her to remain in the service of the government.<sup>11</sup> When payment is to be made day by day until discharged, a retroactive order of discharge will not deprive the

1. The Cargo of The Luedkin, 6 Ben. (D. C.) 565.

2. Freeman v. A Cargo of Salt, 40 Hunt's Mer. Mag. 457.

3. Boyd v. Moses, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 316.

4. The Volunteer, 1 Sum. (C. C.) 551.

5. Certain Logs of Mahogany, 2 Sum. (C. C.) 597; Gracie v. Palmer, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 632.

6. Gracie v. Palmer, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 632; Hill v. The Golden Gate, Newb. (D. C.) 308.

7. The appointment of the master and crew is not in all cases conclusive. Drinkwater v. The Spartan, 1 Ware (D. C.), 160; The Waldo, 2 Ware (D. C.), 165; Donahoe v. Kettell, 1 Cliff. (C. C.) 139.

8. The Volunteer, 1 Sum. (C. C.) 551; Palmer v. Gracie, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 632.

9. Skolfield v. Potter, 2 Ware (D. C.), 395; Thorp v. Hammond, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 416. And the owners do not incur a joint liability. The Phebe, 1 Ware (D. C.), 266; Taggard v. Loring, 16 Mass. 336.

10. In victualling and manning the vessel the master acts on his own account, and not as agent of the owner. Fox v. Holt, 4 Ben. (D. C.) 290; Webb v. Peirce, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 104.

11. He is deemed owner pro hac vice. Kenzell v. Kirk, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 113. And is liable for "small generals." Mayo v. Snow, 2 Curt. (C. C.) 106. Whether he is liable for repairs appears to depend on usage. Packard v. The Louisa, 2 Wood. & M. C. C. 55; The Reeside, 2 Sum. (C. C.) 567.

9. Reed v. The U. S., 11 Wall. (U. S.) 591.

10. Claim of Clarke & Co., 4 Opinion Att.-Gen. 83.

11. Emery v. U. S., 4 Ct. of Cl. 401; Clyde v. U. S., 5 Ct. of Cl. 134; Cobb v. U. S., 5 Ct. of Cl. 176.

vessel-owner of his right to the charter-money.<sup>1</sup> It is the duty of the government to notify the owner, and until notice is given the owners are entitled to payment for the hire.<sup>2</sup> The owners are entitled to extra freight for conveyance of goods beyond the point agreed on.<sup>3</sup> If the vessel be injured in the government service, by a forced employment beyond her capacity, the government will be liable for damages.<sup>4</sup>

13. Dissolution of Contract.—Contracts of affreightment may be dissolved by the consent of the parties; and at any time before breach it is not necessary that there should be any new consideration for the dissolution.<sup>5</sup> But if not dissolved, the rule as to performance is that where a party by his own act creates a duty or charge, he is bound to perform it notwithstanding inevitable accident, because he might and ought to have provided against the happening of such a contingency by his contract.<sup>6</sup> If, however, after the contract is made, it becomes unlawful for either party to perform it, then the performance cannot be insisted upon, nor can damages be recovered for the non-performance.<sup>7</sup>

14. Damages for Breach of Contract.—If the master or owner refuses to perform the contract, the charterer may resort to a personal action for damages.<sup>8</sup> The owner is bound to make compensation, in the event of non-performance, for actual damages only.<sup>9</sup> The measure of damages for which the owner is liable for breaking up the voyage is the actual loss and expense incurred, labor and services in the procuring another vessel, and reasonable disbursements and taxed costs.<sup>10</sup> For failure to sail at the proper time, or for delay in delivery, the measure of damages is the differ-

1. Leary v. U. S., 9 Ct. of Cl. 233.

2. Smith v. U. S., 9 Ct. of Cl. 237.

3. Swain v. U. S., 2 Dev. 35.

4. Schultz v. U. S., 3 Ct. of Cl., 56; Morgan v. U. S., 5 Ct. of Cl. 182.

5. King v. Gillett, 7 M. & W. 55; Adams v. New Castle S. S. Asso., 4 Q. B. D. 462.

6. Paradine v. Jayne, Aleyn, 27; Adams v. Royal Mail Steam Packet Co., 5 C. B. N. S. 492.

This general rule is subject, however, to this qualification, that where the event is of such a character that it cannot reasonably be supposed to have been in contemplation by the contracting parties when the contract was made, they will not be held bound by general words which, though large enough to include, were not used in reference to the possibility of the particular contingency which afterwards happened. Bailey v. DeCrespigny, L. R. 4 Q. B. 185.

Where time is expressly limited in the terms of the contract for the loading or discharge of the ship, the merchant will be liable if he neglects to perform the contract on his part, even though he may be prevented by some unforeseen event. Schilizzi v. Derry, 4 E. & B. 673; Kish v. Gibb, 1 H. & N. 810; Hills v. Sughrue, 15 N. & W. 253.

7. Bailey v. DeCrespigny, N. R. 42 D. 180.

If after the making of the contract the exportation of the articles which were to compose the cargo were prohibited by the law of this country the contract will be at an end. Barker v. Hodgson, 3 M. & S. 270.

A prohibition at the port of discharge by a foreign government would not have this effect. Blight v. Paige, 3 B. & P. 295.

A blockade of the port of discharge, or an interdiction of commerce with it, after the commencement of the voyage, works a dissolution of the contract. Scott v. Libby, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 336.

8. The Gen. Sheridan, 2 Benedict (D. C.), 296.

But if performance has not been entered upon, there is no remedy in rem. The Gen. Sheridan, 2 Benedict (D. C.), 296.

9. Harrison v. Stewart, Taney's Rep. (D. C.) 485.

10. The Tribune, 3 Sum. (C. C.) 144.

ence between the fair market price at the port of destination on the day the vessel ought to have arrived and the time that she did actually arrive.<sup>1</sup>

15. Jurisdiction—Remedy.—In addition to the courts of common law, the jurisdiction of the admiralty extends to all contracts of affreightment upon the high seas or navigable waters of the United States.<sup>2</sup> Courts of equity also will in fitting cases interfere by injunction.<sup>3</sup> The method of procedure in the admiralty is both in personam and in rem; the latter will lie whenever by the maritime law a lien exists.<sup>4</sup>

CHASE, in its general signification, is a great quantity of woody ground lying open, and privileged for wild beasts and wild fowl; and the beasts of chase properly extend to the buck, doe, fox, marten, and roe; and in common and legal sense to all the beasts of the forests.<sup>5</sup>

1. Page v. Munro, 1 Holmes (C. C.), 233; The Success, 7 Blatch. (C. C.) 551.

2. N. J. Steam Nav. Co. v. Merchants Bank, 6 How. (U. S.) 344; Morewood v. Enequist, 23 How. (U. S.) 491.

But no jurisdiction exists with regard to the enforcement of preliminary agreements to enter into a charter-party. Andrews v. F. & M. Ins. Co., 3 Mason (C. C.) 6; The Tribune, 3 Sum. (C. C.) 4.

3. A charter-party is not a mere contract for the conveyance of goods from one place to another, but for the services of a specific ship often selected after a careful consideration of the purposes for which it is adapted, and though a court of equity cannot enforce specific performance of the various provisions of the charter-party, yet an injunction will lie to restrain the employment of the vessel in a manner inconsistent with their charter. De Mattos v. Gibson, 28 L. J. Ch. 498.

4. Oakes v. Richardson, 2 Low. (D. C.) 173; Maury v. Culliford, 10 Fed. R. (C. C.) 388.

For further information with regard to charter-parties, see Maude & Pollock's Law of Merchant Shipping; The Law of Merchant Shipping (Foard); Abbott on Shipping; Desty's Shipping and Admiralty; Parsons on Shipping; Abbott's and Prichard's Digests.

5. Co Litt. 233. Though see 1 Jones Rep. 278.

It differs from a park in that it is not inclosed, and also in that a man may have a chase in another man's ground as well as in his own. 2 Bl. 38.

It has a greater compass than a park, more variety of game, and more officers.

It is commonly less than a forest, and not endowed with so many liberties, as the courts of attachment, swainmote, and justice-seat. Crompt. in his Jurisd., fol. 148, says a forest cannot be in the hands of a subject, but it forthwith loses its name, and becomes a chase; but, fol. 197, he says a subject may be lord and owner of a forest. Both sayings are in some sort true; for the king may give or alienate a forest to a subject, so as when it is once in the subject, it loses the true property of a forest, because the courts called the justice-seat, swainmote, etc., do forthwith vanish, none being able to make a Lord Chief Justice in Eyre of the forest, but the king; yet it may be granted in so large a manner, as there may be attachment, swainmote, and a court equivalent to a justice-seat. Manwood, part 2, c. 3, 4.

A chase is ad communem legem, and not to be guided by the forest laws. A man may have a free chase as belonging to his manor in his own woods; for it does not issue out of the soil, but is a collateral inheritance. 4 Inst. 318.

If a man have freehold where is a chase, he may cut timber without the license of any, though not so of a forest. But if he cut so much that there is not sufficient for covert, and to maintain the game, he shall be punished at the suit of the king. See 11 Rep. 22. The owner of the soil may have by prescription common in the chase for his sheep, and warren for his conies. Inclosing a free chase is said to be a good cause of seizure into the king's hands. It is not lawful to make a chase, park, or warren, without license from the king under the broad seal. Jacob's Law: Dictionary.

CHASTE, in the seduction statutes, means actual<sup>1</sup> virtue<sup>2</sup> in conduct and principle. One who falls from virtue, but afterwards reforms, is chaste within the meaning of the statutes.<sup>3</sup> (See also CHASTITY; SEDUCTION.)

1. That is, what the woman really is, as distinguished from what she is reputed to be.

Reputation.—Evidence of 'bad reputation, therefore, is inadmissible. Bishop on Statutory Crimes, § 639; Crozier v. People, 1 Parker's Crim. Rep. (N.Y.) 453; Carpenter v. People, 8 Barb. (N.Y.) 603, 608; People v. Kenyon, 5 Parker's Crim. Rep. (N.Y.) 254; Andre v. Iowa, 5 Iowa, 389; Kauffman v. People, 11 Hun (N.Y.), 82, 87; State v. Prizer, 49 Iowa, 531; 2 Wharton's Cr. L. § 1757. Safford v. People, 1 Parker's Cr. R. (N.Y.) 474, holding the contrary, is opposed by later cases.

In Ohio.—Ohio Rev. St. § 7022, relates to all seduced women "of good repute for chastity," and therefore it was held, in Bowers v. State, that it was not competent for defendant to prove specific acts of illicit intercourse by the prosecutrix with other persons, but that he must attack her reputation for chastity.

Effect on Verdict.—Where evidence as reputation of prosecutrix for unchastity was received, it was on appeal held that "it is not enough that the court sitting in review of the judgment may be of the opinion that the result ought and probably would have been the same if the objectionable evidence had been excluded." Kauffman v. People, 11 Hun, 82, 87; Coleman v. People, 58 N. Y. 555.

Reputation in Support of Prosecution is admissible in evidence to rebut testimony as to acts of lewdness. State v. Prizer, 49 Iowa, 533, explaining State v. Sherr, 32 Iowa, 88; Bishop on Statutory Crimes, § 650.

2. Virtue.—"Something of purity of heart and feeling beyond the mere physical fact that [the woman] has not been defiled." Bishop on Statutory Crimes, § 639; Wood v. Georgia, 48 Ga. 288-9. "A female who delights in lewdness—who is guilty of every indecency, and lost to all sense of shame," "whose conversation and manners may even have suggested the thought and opened the way," is not "chaste," though she has not been guilty of sexual intercourse. Andre v. Iowa 5 Iowa, 389; Boak v. Iowa, 5 Iowa, 430. See also Carpenter v. People, 8 Barb. (N.Y.) 608.

3 Reformed women are 'chaste.' Carpenter v. People, 8 Barb. (N.Y.) 603; Kenyon v. People, 26 N. Y. 203; Boyce v. People, 55 N. Y. 644; Com. v. McCarty, 4 Pa.

L. J. 136; s. c., 2 Clark (Pa.), 351; Boak v. State, 5 Iowa, 430; State v. Carron, 18 Iowa, 372; State v. Sutherland, 30 Iowa, 570; State v. Dunn, 53 Iowa, 526; State v. Timmins, 4 Minn. 325; People v. Millsbrough, 11 Mich. 278; Wilson v. State, 73 Ala. 527; 2 Wharton's Cr. L. § 1757; People v. Clark, 32 Mich. 112.

Second Betrayal.—A woman who is seduced under promise of marriage may remain sufficiently chaste to make a second betrayal by the same man a seduction under the statute. People v. Millsbrough, 11 Mich. 278. Christiancy, J.—"While we express no opinion as to a female who is shown to be unchaste with other men, we think all that is necessary in a case like the present, where there is no such evidence, is, that her personal character should be such as to satisfy the jury that she would not have yielded in the particular case, without the express promise of marriage."

Consent, except sometimes where it is prompt and ready, is no defence on charge of seduction. People v. Cook, 61 Cal. 478; Lewis v. People, 37 Mich. 518; Tucker v. State, 8 Lea (Tenn.), 633; 2 Whart. Cr. Law, § 1759. See People v. Clark, 33 Mich. 112.

Presumption as to Chastity.—The cases on this point are at variance. (1) Some hold that the chastity of the prosecutrix must be presumed, in the absence of proof. State v. Wells, 48 Iowa, 671; Crozier v. People, 1 Parker's Cr. Law, 453; State v. Higdon, 32 Iowa, 262; Wilson v. State, 73 Ala. 527. (2) Others consider that, since also the defendant is presumed to be innocent, some evidence of chastity must be brought forward by the prosecution. People v. Roderigas, 49 Cal. 10; Zabriskie v. State, 43 N. J. Law, 640; Oliver v. Com., 101 Pa. St. 218; West v. Wisconsin, 1 Wis. 217. Van Syckel, J., in Zabriskie v. State, 43 N. J. Law, 640: "The fact that she has sacrificed that virtue which was her glittering crown casts such a shadow upon her, that, in the most charitable view of the case, it should be left without presumption either way, to be determined by competent evidence, what her prior repute has been." This conclusion seems to be the better view. Bishop on Statutory Crimes, § 648. "Yet ordinarily such evidence can in the nature of things be only slight and circumstantial." Bishop on Statutory Crimes, § 648; West v. Wisconsin, 1 Wis. 217. It need not directly show chaste character, but the chastity "may be shown, prima facie, by presumption from other facts and circumstances attending the transaction; as, for instance, that the unmarried female—the subject of the injury—was at the time residing with her parents, or other relatives, or her guardian, or in some respectable household or by proof of other like circumstances consistent with, and the usual concomitants of, chaste female character." People v. Roderigas, 49 Cal. 10. Or the fact that she went into good society. Crandall v. People, 2 Lans. (N. Y.) 311.

Definition.

CHASTE.

Definition.

In State v. Wells, 48 Iowa, 671, the court not only held that presumption of chastity of prosecutrix existed until evidence was offered to rebut it, but they laid down that it is not enough for defendant to produce evidence raising a reasonable doubt as to chastity, but it must be such as would overcome the presumption of law in its favor by a fair preponderance. The court support their position by reference to several cases in regard to burden of proof where defence of insanity is set up. The insanity cases are indeed useful as analogous, but they are divided as to the ruling requiring fair preponderance.

In Lawson's Insanity as a Defence to Crime it is stated that there are three theories: first, that the burden is on the prisoner to prove defence beyond reasonable doubt; now almost obsolete, says Lawson, except perhaps in Delaware (p. 514 of his work), and New Jersey (p. 514); second, that the burden is on the prisoner until it is overcome by a preponderance of evidence showing the prisoner's insanity to the satisfaction of the jury, which is the rule in England and in 17 American States (merely fair preponderance, not clear preponderance. Coyle v. Com. of Pa., 100 Pa. St. 573); third, that the burden rests on the State to prove sanity where there is doubt raised by the evidence, which is the rule in nine States.

The Indictment must allege the fact of previous chaste character. People v. Roderigas, 49 Cal. 10; Bishop on Stat. Crimes, § 647; State v. Stogdell, 13 Ind. 565; 2 Whart. Cr. Law, § 1757. "And perhaps, in some cases, it must where those words are not in the statute." Bishop on Stat. Crimes, § 647. See State v. Stogdell, 13 Ind. 565, where an averment to the effect that the female was of good repute for chastity seems to have been considered sufficient, though the report of the case is meagre.

The woman may testify to prove her previous chaste character. Kenyon v. People, 26 N. Y. 203.

Unchaste Conduct of a time after the seduction cannot be given in evidence against the female's previous character. It very likely is the result of the defendant's having seduced her. State v. Wells, 48 Iowa, 671; Mann v. State, 34 Ga. 5; Boyce v. People, 55 N. Y. 644—in which respect the rule is different, properly, from that of some (not all) authorities in adultery cases.

Effort to Compromise, on the woman's part, when she had become the mother of defendant's child, was held to be properly rejected when offered in evidence against her. State v. Dietrich, 51 Iowa, 467.

Previous Unchastity.—Unchastity previous to the offence may be shown either by direct testimony as to specific act or acts, or by evidence of wanton and indiscreet act or acts towards some other person than defendant. People v. McCordle, 5 Parker's Crim. Rep. (N. Y.) 180; State v. Bell, 49 Iowa, 440. See also VIRTUE, supra, note 2.

Examination of Prosecution.—She may be asked, on cross-examination, in respect, to prior unchaste acts and conversations, or sleeping in bed with other men than defendant. State v. Sutherland, 30 Iowa, 570. Since the woman's chastity is in evidence by her mere prosecution of the action, she may properly be cross-examined as to it. Of course, she cannot be compelled to answer so as to expose herself to indictment.

Remote Evidence.—Proof of indiscretion eight years before, when prosecutrix was a girl of fourteen, was held not to be receivable, as Bishop says (Stat. Cr. § 649) it "allows too little for the influence of mature years and probable reformation." State v. Dunn, 53 Iowa, 526.

Rebuke by Parent.—Evidence of having been rebuked once by parent was held inadmissible—first, because the rebuke merely indicated the reprover's opinion, and second, because conduct may call for rebuke yet not be unchaste. State v. Curran, 51 Ind. 112.

"Previous Chaste Character".—As indicated already, this means chaste character up to the time of the offence; hence subsequent unchastity is not defence to seducer.

"Care and Protection" Statute.—The offence prohibited by Kansas Crimes and Punishment Act, § 233, of defiling a female under eighteen years of age while she is confided to defendant's care and protection, may be committed, although the female may be of unchaste character, and may consent to the unlawful embraces of defendant. Kansas v. Jones, 16 Kans. 608.

CHASTITY.—Purity or freedom from unlawful sexual intercourse.<sup>1</sup> The law justifies a woman killing one who attempts to

1. 1 Hale P. C. 485, 486; 4 Broom & H. Com. 214.

The ravishment of a prostitute or of a mistress is rape. 2 Bishop Cr. Law, § 1119; Richie v. State, 58 Ind. 355.

Reputation for Chastity in Rape Cases.

—A different rule prevails than in the seduction cases, for the reason that in the latter consent is no defence, while in prosecutions for rape it is.

(a) Previous to the Supposed Offence.—

Evidence that the woman had a bad reputation for chastity previous to the supposed commission of the offence is admissible. Rex v. Clarke, 2 Stark. N. P. C. 241; Rex v. Barker, 3 C. & P. 589; Pleasant v. State, 15 Ark. 624; Pratt v. State, 19 Ohio St. 277; State v. Forshner, 43 N. H. 89; R. v. McClure, 2 Craw. & Dix, 244; Camp v. State, 3 Ga. 417. "It helps the probabilities that the connection was voluntary on her part, and that his manifestations of apparent force came rather from his presuming her consent than from a purpose to ravish her." 2 Bishop on Criminal Procedure, § 965, where many cases are cited. See Roscoe on Crim. Ev., § 648, quoted below.

(b) Subsequent Reputation for Unchastity.—Whether evidence of subsequent reputation is admissible is disputed. Such evidence was received in Reg. v. Barker, 3 Car. & Payne, 589, and Mr. Bishop thinks that the better rule is to receive it.

On the other hand, it was rejected by Patteson, J., in Reg. v. Clay, 5 Cox C. C. 146. He referred to R. v. Barker, but declined to follow it as to this point. It was held inadmissible, too, in State v. Forshner, 43 N. H. 89, and in Pratt v. State, 19 Ohio St. 277. In State v. Forshner, Bell, J., said (1861): "A state of facts proved to have existed is presumed to continue, unless some reason is shown for doubt. But the reverse is not true. The bad character a person may have now is not assumed to have always existed." In Elsam v. Faucett, 2 Esp. 562, in an action for crim. con., evidence of misconduct in the woman subsequent to her connection with defendant was rejected. In Douglass v. Tousey, 2 Wend (N.Y.) 352, in an action for slander for calling plaintiff a thief, evidence of plaintiff's bad reputation as a prostitute was rejected, partly because it related to a time subsequent to the alleged slander. On motion for new trial, this ruling was sustained, the court assigning, as one of its reasons, the fact that the reputation was a subsequent one. See 1 Greenl. on Ev., § 54. Mr. Wharton (Cr. Law, vol. 1, § 568) says the reputation for unchastity is only admissible when acquired before defendant's alleged commission of the crime.

(c) Proof of Reputation.—The court will not receive such proof through an agent of defendant sent into the neighborhood of the prosecutrix about the time of the trial, especially to collect evidence as to the reputation of the prosecutrix for unchastity at a time previous to the alleged offence of defendant. Such testimony would amount only to hearsay. Douglass v. Tousey, 2 Wend. (N.Y.) 352; State v. Forshner, 4 N. H. 89.

Prior Illicit Intercourse with Defendant.

—"If on previous occasions the woman has voluntarily surrendered her person to the defendant, this, even more distinctly than her being a common prostitute, indicates alike her willingness and his presuming on it; therefore he may show such fact in his defence." 2 Bishop on Crim. Procedure, § 966. The following cases authorize this statement: State v. Jefferson, 6 Ired. (N.Car.) 305; State v. Forshner, 43 N. H. 89; People v. Abbott, 19 Wend. 192; Woods v. People, 55 N. Y. 515, 517; State v. Reed, 39 Vt. 417, 419.

Specific Acts with Other Men.—It has frequently been decided that evidence of specific acts of intercourse with other men may not be given. Peck, J., said, in McDermott v. State, 13 Ohio St. 334, that "it by no means follows that a desire to have sexual intercourse with one person tends, legitimately, to prove a willingness to have like intercourse with another and different person. Indeed, the reverse is much the most probable; but, however this may be, the introduction of such proof is opposed to the well settled rules of evidence." Further, it is pointed out that the woman is presumed to be unprepared to disprove such specific accusations; and it is said that to admit them would be to create collateral and confusing issues. These views are upheld, also, in the following cases: McCombs v. State, 8 Ohio St. 643; Pleasant v. State, 15 Ark. 624; Camp v. State, 3 Kelly (Ga.), 422, dictum; Rex v. Clarke, 2 Stark. 241; Rex v. Hodgson, Russell and Ryan, 211 (leading case, decided unanimously by twelve judges); Richie v. State, 58 Ind. 355; R. v. Holmes, 12 Cox C. C. 147; State v. Knapp, 45 N. H. 154; Comm. v. Regan, 105 Mass 593, where evidence of declarations by prosecutrix that she was pregnant by other men was ruled out; State v. White, 35 Mo. 500; Comm. v. Harris, 131 Mass. 336; Rogers v. State, 1 Tex. Ap. 187; Woods v. People, 1 Thomp. & Cook (1 N. Y. Sup. Ct.), 610.

In State v. Henry, 5 Jones (N. Car.), 66, exposure by prosecutrix of her person to others was not allowed to be proven because it was not shown that the exposure was known to the accused. Whether it would have been admitted had that been shown, the court said they were not called upon to decide.

Cross-examination of Prosecutrix.—The practice of most courts, not all, both in England and America, is to permit the prosecutrix to be asked questions of this sort, although in no court can she be compelled to criminate herself. Mr. Bishop says that if she denies the connection (with other men), the defendant is bound by her answer and cannot prove the denial false. Crim. Procedure, § 966. In Wharton's Crim. Law, § 568, the diversity of authorities is declared. In these cases it was held that defendant is bound by her answers: R. v. Cockroft, 11 Cox C. C. 410 (1870); R. v. Holmes, 12 Cox C. C. 137, overruling R. v. Robins, 2 M. & R. 512; People v. Jackson, 3 Parker's Crim. Rep. (N. Y.) 391, denying People v. Abbott, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 192. And see the authorities cited, supra, respecting specific acts.

In the following cases it was held that the defendant is not bound by her answers, but may give evidence of specific acts of intercourse with other men in order to rebut the inference against consent on her part to the act charged against him: People v. Abbott, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 192, a carefully considered case; R. v. Robins, overruled, as has been said; Strang v. People, 24 Mich. 1; State v. Reed, 39 Vt. 417; State v. Johnson, 28 Vt. 512; Benstine v. State, 2 B. J. Lea (Tenn.), 169; People v. Benson, 6 Cal. 221.

In Koscoe's Criminal Evidence, 648, it is said that where the man is led from the conduct of the woman to believe in her willingness, the act of connection cannot amount to a rape, for which he cites Denman, J., to that effect in People v. Urry, tried in 1873 at Lincoln Spring Assizes.

1. The first class of cases regard the answers of the prosecutrix respecting her chastity with particular men, as immaterial and not in the issue.

2. The second class consider that her denials strengthen the presumption of her resistance of defendant. They therefore regard them as material, not collateral, since the charge is that against her consent the act was committed. In State v. Johnson, 28 Vt. 512, the court said: "In determining that question, which is purely [as to] mental act, it is important to ascertain whether her consent would, from her previous habits, be the natural result of her mind, or whether it would be inconsistent with her previous life, and repugnant to all her moral feelings."

In People v. Abbott, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 192, it is said that the cases allowing evidence of general lightness of character, street-walking, etc., are based on this very principle. "Why is this?" asks Cowan, J. "Because there is not so much partiality that a common prostitute or the prisoner's concubine would withhold her assent, as one less depraved; and may I not ask, does not the same probable distinction arise between one who has already submitted herself to the lewd embraces of another, and the coy and modest female, severely chaste and instinctively shuddering at the thought of impurity?" Both are equally under the protection of the law, but so are the prostitute and concubine whose character may yet be assailed by evidence of their immorality.

See the subject of unchastity, as evidence of consent, discussed in Wharton's Crim. Law, and in Bishop on Criminal Procedure.

Compelling Prosecutrix to Answer.—No court, however, will compel prosecutrix to criminate herself. In People v. Abbott, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 192, the court said that her answer would be compelled, and reference was made to 2 Phil. on Ev. 937, and to Roberts v. Alatt, 1 Mood. & Malk. 932. These authorities are disposed of, however, by recalling that at common law adultery and fornication were cognizable only in the spiritual courts, whereas today the statute law of probably every State makes such offences indictable. But quare as to District of Columbia. See Pollard v. Lyon, 91 U. S. 225.

Specific Acts with Other Men as Explaining Physical Condition of Prosecutrix.—In Sherwin v. People, 69 Ill. 55, the court recognized the rule supported by the first class of cases, but held that it was inapplicable to the case before them. There the woman testified that she was unconscious, and did not know whether the accused committed the rape or not, and the prosecution proved by a physician, who examined her three weeks afterwards, that she did not bear the physical evidences of virginity, and gave it as his opinion that she had had carnal connecravish her, and so, too, the husband or father may justify killing a man who attempts a rape upon his wife or daughter; but not if he takes them in adultery by consent, for the one is forcible and felonious, but not the other. In the latter case, however, the homicide may be excusable.<sup>1</sup>

Unwritten words attributing want of chastity to a woman are, in many of the States, probably in all,<sup>2</sup> actionable per se,<sup>3</sup> though at common law no action lay.

tion with a man at some time before. It was held that evidence of intercourse with other men was admissible to explain the physical indicia. In Benstine v. State, 2 Lea (Tenn.), such explanation was allowed, but there the court took the ground that evidence of particular acts with other men was admissible in all rape cases.

In action for breach of promise to marry, evidence of plaintiff's unchastity subsequent to the breach is inadmissible. 1 Greenl. Ev. § 54.

Proof by Inference.—Query whether, in those States where proof of particular instances is received as evidence of consent by prosecutrix, evidence may be given of indiscreet and indecent conduct leading to the inference that illicit intercourse occurred. It may. State v. Jefferson, 6 Iredell (N. Car.), 305. It may not. Benstine v. State, 2 B. J. Lea (Tenn.), 174; Strang v. People, 24 Mich. 7.

Remote Acts done many years before would hardly seem to be admissible in evidence. Benstine v. State, 2 B. J. Lea (Tenn.), 174. And see the similar note under CHASTE.

Solicitation to Commit Unchaste Acts.—For discussion of this subject see this work, SOLICITATION; 1 Bishop's Crim. Law, § 768; Wharton's Cr. Law, § 1738, § 179. As the views of these two writers are not in harmony, perusal of each of the references will be desirable. See especially Smith v. Commonwealth, 54 Pa. St. 209; State v. Avery, 7 Conn. 266; Cox v. People, 82 Ill. 191; People v. Murray, 14 Cal. 159; R. v. Higgins, 2 East, 5.

Credibility of Prostitute.—Whether evidence of common prostitution is admissible to impeach a female witness, quære. It is. Commonwealth v. Murphy, 14 Mass. 387. It is not. Comm. v. Moore, 3 Pick. 194. Compare Comm. v. Murphy; Spears v. Forrest, 15 Vt. 435; State v. Smith, 7 Vt. 141; Morse v. Pineo, 4 Vt. 281; Jackson v. Lewis, 13 Johnson, 504; 2 Stark Ev. 369, note by Metcalf.

1. The Roman law also justified homicide, when committed in defence of the chastity either of one's self or relations.

Dig. 48, 8, 1. And so also, according to Selden, stood the law in the Jewish republic. De Leg. Hebræor., l. 4, c. 3. See 1 Whart. Cr. L. § 495. Opportunity of Escape, § 306, removes the justification.

Where a husband kills an adulterer deliberately and in revenge, it is murder. 1 Russ. on Crimes, 525; 1 Whart. C. L. § 459.

Hot blood may reduce to manslaughter not only homicide by husband, but by any one having a legal and natural right to protect, as a brother. Whart. C. L. § 460.

2. Not so in District of Columbia—Pollard v. Lyon, 91 U. S. 225—if special damage is not averred and shown.

3. Words Imputing Want of Chastity, at Common Law—Unwritten Words.—The old English decisions respecting slander are incongruous and in some respects irreconcilable. Judge Spencer, in Brooker v. Coffin, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 190, 1 Am. L. C. 98, alluded to the great uncertainty of the law, and to the necessity of laying down a rule which would remove difficulty. In the name of the court he then prescribed the following rule: "In case the charge, if true, will subject the party charged to an indictment for a crime involving moral turpitude, or subject the party to an infamous punishment, then the words will be in themselves actionable;" and that rule has ever since been followed in New York, and has been very extensively adopted in the courts of other States. 1 Am. Lead. Cases, 98; Pollard v. Lyon, 91 U. S. 225; Dunnell v. Fiske, 11 Metc. (Mass.) 552; Gosling v. Morgan, 32 Pa. St. 275; Giddens v. Mirk, 4 Ga. 364, 368; McCuen v. Ludlum, 2 Harrison 13; Kinney v. Hosea, 3 Harr. (Del.) 77; Taylor v. Kneeland, 1 Doug. (Mich.) 68, 72.

It is unnecessary that legal infamy should attach to the offence, provided it be indictable either at common law or by statute, and be infamous or disgraceful in a general or moral sense. Young v. Miller, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 21; Crawford v. Wilson, 4 Barb. 505, 511.

In most States it is enough to support the action for slander, per se, that it charges an offence morally base and wicked, and indictable by statute, though only punishable by fine. Coburn v. Harwood, Minor (Ala.), 93; Hillhouse v. Peck, 2 Stew. & Porter (Ala.), 395; Miller v. Parish, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 384; Pollard v. Lyon, 91 U. S. 232; Todd v. Rough, 10 S. & R. (Pa.) 18, 22.

Definition.

CHASTITY.

Definition.

In Missouri, Maryland, and Vermont corporal punishment has been held necessary. Birch v. Benton, 26 Mo. 161; Billings v. Wing, 7 Vt. 439; Wagaman v. Byers, 17 Md. 187. And in Starkie on Slander, p. 43, it has been laid down that where the crime imputed is one not punishable corporally, the words imputing the crime are not actionable per se. But in most of the States corporal punishment is not necessary to support action of slander per se.

Adultery and Fornication were matters of ecclesiastical cognizance, and punishable in the spiritual courts, and were not punishable in the common-law courts. Accordingly at common law unwritten words charging adultery or fornication were not actionable saving in London and some other localities, where by custom the common-law courts exercised jurisdiction over adultery and fornication.

Instances.—Thus it was held not actionable, in the absence of special injury, to call a woman a whore, or prostitute, or common prostitute. Brooker v. Coffin, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 188; Wilby v. Elston, 8 C. B. 142; 1 Stark. on Slander, 28; Townshend on Slander, § 172. Or to charge an unmarried one with having had a bastard. Vin. Abr., Act. for Words, D. A. 19, 23; Graves v. Blanchard, 2 Salk. 696; Colabyn v. Viner, W. Jones, 356; Falkner v. Cooper, Carth. 55; McQueen v. Fulghan, 27 Tex. 463. Or to call a woman a bawd. Cavel v. Birket, Sid. 438. Contra, Hicks v. Hollinghead, Cro. Car. 261. Or to charge a married woman with adultery, or an unmarried one with fornication. Townshend, § 172; Heard on Libel, 46. Or to charge a young woman with self-pollution. Anon., 60 N. Y. 262. Or to say of a woman, "She was hired to swear the child on me; she has had a child before this, when," etc.

Charge of Fornication.—It does not amount to a charge of fornication without innuendoes showing more meaning than the words themselves contain, to say of a woman that she is not a decent woman. Dodge v. Lacey, 2 Carter (Ind.), 212. Or a bad character, a loose character. Vanderlip v. Roe, 25 Pa. St. 82. Or has raised a family of children by a negro.

Patterson v. Edwards, 2 Gilman (7 Ill.), 720. But it does to say of an unmarried woman, she had a child, and buried it in the garden. Worth v. Butler, 7 Blatchf. 251. Or that she "has been to swear a young one." So, with proper innuendoes, the words, "A. caught them [plaintiff and another] together in the packing-room."

Says Duncan, J., in Walton v. Singleton, 7 S. & R. 457: "There is no offence which can be conveyed in so many multiplied forms and figures as that of incontinence. The charge is seldom made, even by the most vulgar and obscene, in broad and coarse language."

To charge a woman with "getting fat." Emmerson v. Marvel, 55 Ind. 265. Or of being a "bitch." Schwick v. Kollman, 50 Ind. 336; K. v. H., 20 Wis. 252. Or "a bad woman." Riddle v. Thayer, 127 Mass. 487. Or "bad girl." Snell v. Snow, 13 Met. 278; Fitzgerald v. Robinson, 112 Mass. 371, 382. Or "having had intercourse with" a certain man. Merritt v. Dearth, 48 Vt. 65. These charges, unless explained by the circumstances as intended in a defamatory sense, do not sustain an action of slander. Odgers on L. & S. § 84, note.

Excommunication.—In Massachusetts, in a sentence of excommunication from a church read by the minister on Sunday in the presence and hearing of the congregation, it was recited "that the plaintiff had clearly violated the seventh commandment," and in a subsequent part of the sentence it was declared "that this church does now as always bear its solemn testimony against the sin of fornication and uncleanness;" held, that the sentence did not impute the charge of adultery in its legal sense as an indictable offence. Farnsworth v. Storrs, 5 Cushing (Mass.), 412.

Injury to Business or Profession.—Where the words uttered injure a woman in her business or professional character, action lies at common law without proof of special damage. The words need not expressly refer to that character, but must affect it, and not other qualities of the individual. Thus to impute prostitution to a schoolmistress has sometimes been held not actionable per se. Odgers on Libel and Slander, § 84. Though it is to be remarked that these cases, though illustrating perfectly the principle, are based on a very narrow idea of the duties of a teacher. And see Wright, 651, where action was allowed for calling a school-teacher a dirty slut.

Special Injury.—Injure to name and fame is not special injury. Pollard v.

Definition.

CHASTITY.

Definition.

Lyon, 91 U. S. 225. Special injury means pecuniary or material loss. Pollard v. Lyon, 91 U. S. 225; s. c., 1 Am. Lead. Cas. § 104. And allegation that plaintiff has fallen into disgrace, infamy, and lost her credit, reputation, and peace of mind, is not sufficient. Woodbury v. Thompson, 3 N. H. 194; s. c., 1 Am. L. C. § 104. Nor that she is shunned by her neighbors. Beach v. Ranney, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 310, 314. The office or profession need not be one of profit, but it must be of material temporal advantage. So that exclusion from a religious society is not legal damage. Roberts v. Roberts, 33 Law Journal, Q. B. 250; Townshend on Libel, 320. See this explained, Odgers on Libel and Slander, § 19. The gist of the action is the loss of reputation; some material loss is required as legal evidence of that injury to reputation.

Yet the courts will deem slight pecuniary loss as sufficient special damage. Accordingly, averment of the loss of valuable hospitality and of a support or income derived from the bounty of others, will be sufficient. Moore v. Meagher, 1 Taunton, 40; Olmsted v. Miller, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 506; Williams v. Hill, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 305. Or refusal of civil treatment, meat and drink at a hotel. Olmsted v. Miller, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 510. Or of the loss of health, and the consequent incapacity of transacting business. Bradt v. Towsley, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 253; Fuller v. Fenner, 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 334.

Damage Resulting from the Slander.—Illness resulting from words not actionable per se will not support action. Odgers L. & S. 312. But the injury must be a natural result.

In an anonymous case in 60 N. Y. 262 a girl having been charged with secret vice, her father refused her music-lessons, and a silk dress, which he had previously promised; it was held that this was not a natural result, for the reason that the father disbelieved the story, and hence no action lay. This decision expressly refrained from deciding what would be the result had the parent believed the report; and to the present writer it seems open to some question even as limited, since, as the defendant could not foresee the father's disbelief, he must have had an idea of what in fact did happen.

In another case, cited in Odgers on Slander, § 323, defendant said to K., Jane, K.'s wife, is a notorious liar; she was all but seduced by C., and I advise you, if C. comes to Dublin, not to permit him to enter your place. K. thereupon turned his wife away. Held, that while loss of consortium is special damage, it was not a natural, reasonable result of the slander in this case, and therefore could not support an action.

"The Act of a Third Party, if caused by the defendant's language, is not too remote; and this, whether such action be in itself a ground of action by the plaintiff against such third party or not. . . . The defendant cannot be held liable for any eccentric or foolish conduct on the part of the person he addressed; but only for the ordinary and reasonable consequences of his words." The contrary doctrine was laid down, sometimes, formerly, and is stated as law in the note in 1 Am. L. Cases to Brooker v. Coffin.

Lord Chancellor Campbell, in Lynch v. Knight, 9 H. L. 593, expressed regret at the unsatisfactory state of the law, according to which an imputation by unwritten words, however gross, on an occasion, however public, upon the chastity of a modest matron or a pure virgin is not actionable without proof that it has actually produced special temporal damage. And Lord Brougham said that he would go further, and say that the law was not only "unsatisfactory," but "barbarous." Same case, p. 594.

And in Ohio and in Georgia the courts deliberately broke away from the old common law, holding that this was required out of deference to the enlightened sentiment of the age.

Writing.—Charge of want of chastity is actionable if in writing.—Odgers on L. & S. 24; Townshend on L. & S. (3d Ed.) § 177; Bodwell v. Osgood, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 379; Woodard v. Eastman, 108 Mass. 404.—without proof of special damage.

Statute Law.—In many States, acts of incontinence are now punishable under statutes, and in such jurisdictions, therefore, the imputing of such a crime is actionable per se, without showing special damage. Also in several States the charging a person with fornication or adultery is by statute actionable. But excommunicating a person for violation of the seventh commandment, reciting in the sentence of excommunication "that the church does now as always bear its solemn testimony against the sin of fornication and uncleanness," was held not to impute legal adultery. Farnsworth v. Storrs, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 412.

The general enactment of laws subjecting persons guilty of adultery, fornication, or sodomy to punishment has of itself rendered slanders imputing such crimes actionable per se; but especial statutes have been passed, in addition, in many States. Mo. Rev. St. § 2120.

A witness cannot be impeached by evidence of her unchastity, except when she is prosecuting for certain assaults.<sup>1</sup>

CHATTELS. (See also ACCESSION; ADMINISTRATION; ATTACHMENT; BAILMENT; CONTRACTS; CHOSSES IN ACTION; COPYRIGHT; DONATIO CAUSA MORTIS; DOWER; EXECUTORS; FIXTURES; FORFEITURE; INSOLVENCY AND BANKRUPTCY; JOINT TENANCY; JUDGMENTS; PATENTS; REMAINDERS AND REVERSIONS; TENANCY IN COMMON; TORTS; TRADE-MARKS; etc.)

Definition, 163.

Chattels Real—Definition, 164.

Chattels Personal—Definition, 167.

Property In, 168.

In Possession, 168.

Absolute—Definition, 168.

Joint Tenancy, 168.

Tenancy in Common, 168.

Severalty, 168.

Qualified—Definition, 169.

In Action, 170.

Choses in Action, 170.

Chattel Interests in Remainder, 170.

Torts, 171.

Title to, 171.

By Occupancy, 171.

By Forfeiture, 171.

By Succession, 171.

By Marriage, 171.

By Judgment, 171.

By Gift, 172.

Inter Vivos, 172.

Donatio Causa Mortis, 172.

By Contract, 173. [173.

By Insolvency and Bankruptcy,

By Testament and Administration, 174.

By Accession, 174.

By Intellectual Labor, 174.

Patents, 174.

Copyright, 174.

Trade-marks, 174. [175.

By Attachment against Property,

1. Definition.—Chattels includes all kinds of property except freehold, or things which are parcels of it.<sup>2</sup> Movable means everything which in its nature may be removed, except what is appropriated to real estate by destination, as keys of a house, and certain fixtures; personal property includes not only movables, but also something more; the whole of which is designated as chattels. This term includes all kinds of property except the freehold, or things which are parcels of it.<sup>3</sup>

(a) Movables.—Things personal by law include things movable,

In Mississippi, Virginia, and Georgia it is enacted that all words which are commonly considered insults, and lead to breach of the peace, shall be actionable.

In Tennessee, Arkansas, Illinois, and Missouri, imputing either orally or in writing adultery or fornication is actionable. In Missouri it is also a misdemeanor.

Indiana.—Imputing to a female incest, fornication, adultery, or whoredom, or to impute to any one incest, is actionable.

Florida.—Charge by a citizen against another, imputing incest, fornication, or adultery, is actionable.

North Carolina, New York, New Jersey.

—Want of chastity.

Maryland.—Want of chastity in feme sole.

Michigan.—Annoying female with obscene words.

Masturbation.—But to charge a girl with self-pollution is not actionable per se in New York, where it is not indictable. Anonymous, 60 N. Y. 262.

1. Credibility of Prostitute.—Whether evidence of common prostitution is admissible to impeach a female witness, query. It is. Comm. v. Murphy, 14 Mass. 387. It is not. Comm. v. Moore, 3 Pick. 194. overruling Comm. v. Murphy; Spears v. Forrest, 15 Vt. 435; State v. Smith, 7 Vt. 141; Morse v. Pineo, 4 Vt. 281; Jackson v. Lewis, 13 Johns. 504; 2 Stark. Ev. 369. note by Metcalf.

2. Chitty Pr. 90.

3. 1 Bouvier's Inst., No. 462.

and also something more; all of which is comprehended under the general term of chattels, a word signifying goods. This name is derived from the technical word catalla, which primarily signified only beasts of husbandry, or cattle, but in its secondary sense is applied to all movables in general. The idea of goods, or movables only, is not sufficiently comprehensive to include everything that the law considers chattel interest.<sup>1</sup>

(b) Personal Property includes not only things temporary and movable, but all subjects of property not of a freehold nature, nor descendible to the heirs at law. Chattels is a very comprehensive term, including every kind of property which is not real estate or a freehold.<sup>2</sup>

(c) Nature.—Chattels are goods movable, except such as are in the nature of freehold or parcel of it.<sup>3</sup> Chattels are every kind of property except the freehold, or the things which are parcels of it; it is a more extensive term than goods or effects.<sup>4</sup>

(d) Real and Personal.—Chattels, considering their nature, may be divided into real and personal.<sup>5</sup> Chattels are either (1) personal, which belong immediately to the person of the owner, and for which, if they are injuriously withheld from him, he has no other remedy than by personal action; (2) real, which either appertain, not immediately to the person, but to some other thing by way of dependency, as a box with writings of land, or issue out of some immovable thing, as a lease, or rent for a term of years; and they concern the realty, lands, and tenements, such as an interest in advowsons, in statutes-merchant, and the like.<sup>6</sup> Chattels are distributed by law into two kinds: chattels real and chattels personal.<sup>7</sup>

I. CHATTELS REAL.—Definition.—Chattels real are interests annexed to or concerning the realty, as a lease for years of land. The duration of the time of the lease is immaterial, provided it be fixed and determinate, and there be a reversion or remainder in fee in some other person.<sup>8</sup> It is a personal estate if the term be for a thousand years. If the interest falls below the dignity and character of a freehold, it is governed and descendible as a chattel. It does not attend the inheritance, because if it did it would partake of the quality of an estate in fee.<sup>9</sup> Estates at will and for years are considered by law as only chattel interests. The lessees of this kind of estates are considered as only the bailiffs of the owners.<sup>10</sup> Any estate in land which does not amount to a freehold is a chattel real. It is so called because it concerns or savors of the realty; also to distinguish it from things which have no concern with realty.<sup>11</sup> The interest which the lessee possesses is not his real but his personal property. It is a chattel, though the rent

1. 1 Bl. Com. b. 11, 386.

2. 2 Kent Com. 342.

3. Wharton's L. Dict.

4. Webster's Dict.

5. Bouvier's Inst., No. 462.

6. 1 Inst. 118.

7. 1 Bl. Com. b. 11, 386; 2 Kent Com. 342.

8. 2 Kent Com. 342.

9. Brewster v. Hill, 1 N. H. 350; Gay's Case, 5 Mass. 419.

10. Watkins' Convey. 61.

11. Willard's Real Est. 49, 81.

may be only nominal, and the term ninety or even a thousand years.<sup>1</sup> Chattels real are interests issuing out of, or annexed to, real estate. They have one quality which denominates them real, viz., immobility, but want another, viz., a sufficient, legal, indeterminate duration; and this want it is that constitutes them chattels.<sup>2</sup> Many chattels have a movable nature, but being attached to the freehold, go along with it in descent and alienation, such as deeds and other papers which constitute the muniments of title to the inheritance.<sup>3</sup> So also pigeons in a pigeon-house, deer in a park, and fish in an artificial pond, go with the inheritance as heirlooms to the heir.<sup>4</sup>

1. Williams Real Prop. 9.

2. Bl. Com. b. 11, 386

3. Co. Litt. 20 a.

4. Co. Litt. 8 a.

Heirlooms are a class of property distinct from fixtures. 2 Kent Com. 343. Heirlooms do not seem to be recognized in the law of the United States. 1 Washb. Real Prop. 6.

Fixtures differ from heirlooms, and are sometimes considered as personal chattels and, at other times as part of the realty. Fixtures, technically speaking, are personal chattels annexed to the land, and which may afterwards be severed and removed by the party who has annexed them, or his personal representatives, with or without the consent of the owner of the freehold. A fixture is annexed to the freehold either actually or by construction, and the annexation must be made by joining the chattel to the freehold. 1 Bouvier's Inst., No. 472; Pothier's Des Choses, sec. 1.

Kent says: "The law of fixtures is in derogation of the original rule of the common law, which subjected everything affixed to the freehold to the law governing the freehold; and it has grown up into a system of judicial legislation so as almost to render the right of removal of fixtures a general rule, instead of being an exception. The general rule, which appears to be the result of the cases, is that things which the tenant has affixed to the freehold for the purpose of trade or manufactures may be removed, when the removal is not contrary to any prevailing usage, or does not cause any material injury to the estate, and which can be removed without losing their essential character or value as personal chattels." 2 Kent Com. 343; Cook v. Champlain T. Co., 1 Denio (N. Y.), 92.

The right to remove fixtures depends on the situation of the parties who claims them, which may be classified as follows: 1. Between the executor and the heir; 2, between the vendor and vendee; 3, between the mortgagor and the mortgagee; 4, between the devisee and executor; 5, between the landlord and tenant for years; 6, between tenants for life and their executors and their remaindermen or reversioners; 7, between landlord and tenant at will. 1 Bouvier's Inst., No. 473.

Under the common law the husband gains a title to the rents and profits during coverture of the wife's realty. 1 Bl. Com. b. 11, 433. A chattel real under the common law would thus vest in the husband, sub modo. As in a case of a lease for years, the husband received all the rents and profits of it, and could sell, surrender, or dispose of it during the coverture. Co. Litt. 46.

This term for years was liable to execution for the husband's debt. Co. Litt. 351.

In the absence of statutes, pews in a church partake of the nature of realty. 1 Washb. Real Prop. 9. The pew-owner has exclusive right to occupy it, and can maintain trespass against any one who occupies his seat against his will. Freligh v. Platt, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 494; Gay v. Baker, 17 Mass. 435; Gorton v. Hadsell, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 508.

The interest of the pew-holders or owners is the right to occupy their respective pews as part of the auditory upon occasion of public worship; they have no ownership in the church lot. Wheaton v. Gates, 18 N. Y. 395; Kimball v. Parish, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 347; Cooper v. Pres. Church, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 222; Kellogg v. Dickinson, 18 Vt. 266.

The owner of a pew cannot dig a vault under it or erect anything over it without the consent of the owners or trustees of the church. Daniel v. Wood, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 102.

If the church becomes dilapidated, and has to be rebuilt, the right of the pew-holder is gone. Voorhees v. Church, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 103; Van Houton v. Church, 2 Green (N. J.), 126.

(i) By Testament and Administration, which is acquiring title to chattels on the death of a person who leaves his property undisposed of, or transferred by will.<sup>1</sup>

(j) By Accession.—"Accession" is the right to all which one's property produces, and the right to it by accession either naturally or artificially.<sup>2</sup>

(k) By Intellectual Labor.—By "intellectual labor" is meant the rights an author has in his writings called literary property, and of an inventor in his inventions.<sup>3</sup>

(1) A Patent is a grant by the State of the exclusive privilege of making, using, and vending, and authorizing others to make, use, and vend, an invention.<sup>4</sup>

(2) A Copyright is the right an author has in his literary productions, such as books, maps, charts, or musical composition, print, cut, or engraving.<sup>5</sup>

(3) A Trade-mark is a distinguishing mark or device used by manufacturers on their goods or labels, the legal right in which is recognized by law.<sup>6</sup>

subject of bankruptcy throughout the United States. U. S. Const. art 1, sec. 4.

The U. S. Bankrupt Act of 1867 was repealed June 7, 1878, 20 St. at L. 99. Insolvent laws prevail throughout the United States. While the bankrupt law of the United States is in force it destroys the validity of the operation of a State insolvent law even though no proceedings be under it at the time. The bankrupt law supersedes the State insolvent law, for they, in the proceedings, would be repugnant to each other and conflict. Griswold v. Pratt, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 16. Compare Ex parte Ziegenfuss, 2 Ired. (N. Car.) 463.

1. 2 Kent's Com 409.

2. Civil Code of Louisiana, No. 546, 547.

It is not easy to reduce to specific rules as to the right of accession. They may be arranged, however, into three artificial kinds of accession: 1. Adjunction, or the union of two things belonging to different owners; 2. Specification, or the formation of a new species with personal chattels belonging to another; 3. Commixtion, or the mixture of several things belonging to several owners. 1 Bouvier's Inst. No. 503.

3. 1 Bouvier's Inst. No. 508.

The constitution of the United States provides that authors and inventors, for a limited time, shall have the right to the exclusive use and profit of their productions and discoveries. Congress shall have power "to promote the progress of science and useful arts by securing, for limited times, to authors and inventors, the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries." Art. 1, sec. 8.

4. 2 Kent's Com. 366.

5. 1 Bouvier's Inst. No. 515.

6. Webster's Dict.

The act of Congress of July 8, 1870, provides that any citizen of the United States, or resident therein, who shall be the author, inventor, designer, or proprietor of anything mentioned in the text, of any dramatic composition, photograph, or negative thereof, or of any painting, drawing, chromo, statue, statuary, and of models or designs intended to be perfected as works of the fine arts, and his executors, administrators, or assigns, shall, upon complying with the act, have the sole right of printing them and vending the same. U. S. Stat at L. sec. 86.

The fundamental principle of trade-marks is that no one shall put off his chattels for sale as the goods of a rival or competitor, and cannot make use of marks, names, or other indicia so as to deceive the public in making it appear that he is selling the chattels of some special manufacture of a special brand. Singer Manuf. Co. v. Loog, 8 App. Cas. (Eng.) 15; Johnson v. Orr Ewing, 7 App. Cas. (Eng.) 219; Perry v. Truefitt, 6 Beav. (Eng.) 66; Seixo v. Provezende, L. R. 1 Ch. (Eng.) 192; Leather Co. v. Am. Leather Co., 11 H. L. C. (Eng.) 523; McLean v. Fleming, 96 U. S. 245; Manhattan Med. Co. v. Wood, 4 Cliff. (U. S. C. C.) 461; Marshall v. Pinkham, 52 Wis. 572.

Trade-marks may be sold and transferred and be lawfully used by the purchaser. But he must not use them so as

(1) By Attachment against Property, which is a legal mode by which a title to property may be acquired by operation of law.<sup>1</sup> Attachment is a proceeding for the collection of debts by preliminary levy upon property of the debtor to conserve it for eventual execution after the lien shall have been perfected by judgment.<sup>2</sup>

CHATTEL MORTGAGES. (See also CONDITIONAL SALES; MORTGAGES.)

Definition and Criteria, 175.
Form, Contents, and Execution, 179.
Affidavit, 182.
Who may Mortgage Chattels, 182.
What may be Mortgaged, 183.
What the Mortgage Covers and Secures, 186.
Nature of Mortgagor's Interest, 189.
Validity, by What Law Governed, 191.
Registration, 191.
Refiling, 194.
Change of Possession, 195.

Validity as against Third Persons, 198.
Nature of Mortgagee's Title, 200.
Redemption, 200.
Discharge of Mortgage, 201.
Rights of Action in Mortgagee, 202.
Mortgagee's Right to take Possession on Default, 204.
Foreclosure, 205.
Sale for Breach of Condition, 206.
Rights of Second Mortgagees, 208.
Assignment of Mortgage, 209.

1. Definition and Criteria.—A chattel mortgage is an instrument of sale conveying the title of the property to the mortgagee with terms of defeasance, and if the terms of redemption are not complied with, then at common law the title becomes absolute in the mortgagee. The nature of the agreement must be such that by the mere non-performance of the condition by the mortgagor the title will be transferred to the mortgagee by the force of the agreement. This test is decisive.<sup>3</sup> It is held, however, that an instru-to make untrue pretences. An attempt to deceive as to the maker or character of the article will not be protected. Curtis v. Bryan, 2 Daly (N. Y.), 312; Samuel v. Berger, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 163; Walton v. Crowley, 3 Blatchf. (U. S. C. C.) 440. One who has a secret process of manufacturing an article, whether patentable or not, will be protected by injunction against persons who, in violation of contract or duty, and in breach of confidence who may undertake to apply it to their own use, or to disclose it to a third party. Peabody v. Norfolk, 98 Mass. 452.

1. 2 Kent's Com. 402.

2. Waffe's Attach. 1.

Blackstone divides the title to chattels personal into—1, by occupancy; 2, by prerogative; 3, by forfeiture; 4, by custom; 5, by succession; 6, by marriage; 7, by judgment; 8, by gift; 9, by contract; 10, by bankruptcy; 11, by testament; 12, by administration. 2 Bl. Com. b. 11, 399.

3. Parshall v. Eggart, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 367; Miner v. Judson, 2 Hun (N. Y.), 441; Mowry v. Wood, 12 Wis. 413.

A chattel mortgage is a mortgage of personal property. Bouvier's Law Dict., citing 2 Kent's Com. 516.

A conveyance of chattels, absolute in form, made to secure the payment of a loan of money at a future day, defeasible on the payment of a note given for the amount loaned, is, as between the parties, a mortgage. Carpenter v. Snelling, 97 Mass. 452; Taber v. Hamlin, 97 Mass. 489.

Whenever a transaction resolves itself into a security for a debt, it is a mortgage. The right of redemption must exist in order to constitute a mortgage, so that the debtor shall be entitled to redeem his property. Wilmerding v. Mitchell, 42 N. J. L. 476.

A receipt given by a debtor, not a warehouseman, to a creditor, for property owned by and in possession of the debtor, is void as against other creditors, the transaction being within the statute requiring every mortgage of chattels or conveyance intended to operate as a mortgage to be recorded, unless change of possession takes place. Thorne v. Wilmington Bank, 37 Ohio St. 254.

Question of Law.—Whether an instru-

of the civil law were the chattels personal of the common law. Whatever was fixed to the freehold perpetui usus causa was justly deemed a part of the res immobiles of the civil law.<sup>1</sup> Things personal are goods, money, and all other movables which may attend upon the owner's person wherever he thinks proper to go.<sup>2</sup> Chattels personal are such that belong immediately to the person of a man.<sup>3</sup> Chattels personal belong immediately to the person of the owner, and for which, if they are injuriously withheld from him, he has no other remedy than by a personal action.<sup>4</sup>

2. Property in.—Property in chattels is of two kinds: (i.) in possession and (ii.) in Action.

I. IN POSSESSION.—Property in possession may be (a) absolute or (b) qualified.

(a) Absolute.—Definition.—Absolute property denotes a full and complete title and dominion over it.<sup>5</sup> Property in possession absolute is where a man has solely and exclusively the right and also the occupation of any movable chattels, so that they cannot be transferred from him, or cease to be his, without his own act or default.<sup>6</sup>

I. Joint Tenancy.—Definition.—Joint tenancy as regards personal property is where two or more persons hold chattels by the same title, obtained at the same time, for the same interest, and having the same possession.<sup>7</sup>

II. Tenancy in Common.—Definition.—A tenancy in common of chattels is one of property owned by two or more persons by unity of possession only.<sup>8</sup>

1. Taylor's Elem. Civil Law, 475.

2. Shep. Touch. 268; 1 Platt's Leases.

3. 1 Bouvier's L. Dict.

4. 1 Inst. 118.

5. 2 Kent Com. 348.

6. 1 Bl. Com. 388.

A person can have absolute possession of inanimate things, as goods, plate, money, jewels, implements of war, garments and the like, which cannot be moved out of the owner's possession without his own act or consent. It is different with animals, which are divided into domitæ or tame, and feræ naturæ, or wild. Of the domestic animals, as the horse, kine, sheep, poultry, and the like, one can have absolute property as in inanimate beings. But in animals, feræ naturæ, a man can have no absolute property.

7. 1 Bouvier's Inst. No. 484.

Joint tenancy in chattels is very much restricted. It does not apply to stock used in any joint undertaking, either in trade or agriculture. When one joint partner in trade or agriculture dies, his interest or share in the common does not survive, but goes to the personal representative. Jeffreys v. Small, 1 Vern. (Eng.) 217.

A joint tenant of an estate can only convey his part. Co. Litt. 186 a.

8. 1 Bouvier's Inst. No. 485.

If one tenant in common of a chattel sells the share of his co-tenant, as well as his own, he is answerable in trover. Wilson v. Reed, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 175; Hyde v. Stone, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 354.

It is a conversion as to the share of the other. Park, B., 1 M. & W. (Eng.) 685. But one tenant in common of a chattel cannot bring trover against his co-tenant for simply dispossessing him, for each has an equal right to the possession. But for the loss or destruction or sale of the whole chattel by one of the co-tenants an action of trover will lie against him by the other. Co. Litt. 200 a; Farr v. Smith, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 338; Lucas v. Wasson, 3 Dev. (N. Car.) 398; Cole v. Terry, 2 Dev. & Battle (N. Car.), 252; Herrin v. Eaton, 13 Me. 192; Mersereau v. Norton, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 179.

Trover will lie—not trespass—by one co-tenant of goods against another who sells the whole interest in the chattel. Waddell v. Cook, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 47.

One tenant in common of personal property can sell his own share only. Bradley v. Boynton, 22 Me. 287. If he

III. Severalty.—Definition.—A chattel may belong in severalty to one person alone. By severalty is understood the state of property which is held by only one person in his own right, without any other person being joined or connected with him in point of interest during the continuance of his estate.<sup>1</sup>

(b) Qualified.—Definition.—A qualified property in a chattel is a transient or conditional interest in a chattel which may be divested on some contingency without the consent of the party interested. The legal possession and occupation of a chattel personal, not coupled with the present ability to make such occupancy and possession permanent, are characteristic of this kind of chattels.<sup>2</sup> Qualified property is that property which is not perfect in the hand of the owner, but his right to it is qualified, or limited, or special.<sup>3</sup> Personal property has a qualified or special nature, on account of peculiar circumstances of the possessor, when the chattel is susceptible of absolute ownership. For instance, a bailee has a qualified property in the chattel bailed, and so has the bailor. The pledgor and the pledgee have also a qualified property in the things pledged.<sup>4</sup> sells the whole property in common, the vendee of the original co-tenant cannot be sued while in possession. The person in possession under such sale is a co-tenant with the rightful owner. The remedy is trover against the co-tenant. Dain v. Cowing, 22 Me. 347.

1. 1 Bouvier's Inst., No. 483.

2. 2 Kent Com. 347; 2 Bl. Com. b. 11, 391.

3. Story's Bailm. sec. 93; 2 Greenl. Ev. sec. 637.

4. 1 Bouvier's Inst., No. 477.

A qualified property may subsist in wild animals by man's reclaiming them and making them tame. Such as deer in a park, hares or rabbits in an enclosed warren, doves in a dove-house, fish in a private pond, and the like. These are the property of the man reclaiming them while in his actual possession; but if they regain their natural liberty his property instantly ceases, unless they have animus revertendi. While these chattels continue in the possession of the owner they are under the protection of the law. It is a felony by the common law to steal such of these reclaimed animals as are fit for food; but not if they are only kept for pleasure, curiosity, as dogs, bears, cats, apes, parrots, and singing-birds. When wild animals rear their young upon the land of a person, he has a qualified property in the young ones until they depart. For a stranger to take them away would be trespass in some cases and felony in others. 1 Bl. Com. b. 11, 391-395.

This common-law doctrine has been changed in many particulars. Trespass will lie for taking, interfering with, or exercising acts of ownership over the personal property of another. 1 Chitty Pl. 168.

Dogs, tamed animals, as parrots, monkeys, bees, which have been reclaimed, and the like, are personal property, and trespass lies for taking or injuring them. Williams Pers. Prop. 19; Pierson v. Post, Caines (N. Y.), 175; Buster v. Newkirk, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 75; Commonwealth v. Chace, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 15; Goff v. Kitts, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 550.

Pursuit alone gives no property in wild animals. Before the property vests the wild animal must be brought within the power of the pursuer. Actual taking may not always be necessary. Pierson v. Post, 3 Caine's Cas. (N. Y.) 175.

It is required that the possession be so far complete, by the aid of nets, snares, or other means, that the animal cannot escape. An action will not lie against a person for killing and taking a fox which has been pursued by another, and is actually in view of the person who first found, started, and chased it. The mere pursuit, and being in sight of the animal, does not create a property, because no possession has been acquired. Com. v. Chace, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 15; Buster v. Newkirk, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 75.

This seems to be the rule of the civil law, that the property in a wounded wild animal does not attach until the animal is in actual possession. Co. Litt. 182 a.

Hiving and reclaiming bees gives property in them; but merely marking the tree in which they are found does not

(i) By Testament and Administration, which is acquiring title to chattels on the death of a person who leaves his property undisposed of, or transferred by will.<sup>1</sup>

(j) By Accession.—"Accession" is the right to all which one's property produces, and the right to it by accession either naturally or artificially.<sup>2</sup>

(k) By Intellectual Labor.—By "intellectual labor" is meant the rights an author has in his writings called literary property, and of an inventor in his inventions.<sup>3</sup>

(1) A Patent is a grant by the State of the exclusive privilege of making, using, and vending, and authorizing others to make, use, and vend, an invention.<sup>4</sup>

(2) A Copyright is the right an author has in his literary productions, such as books, maps, charts, or musical composition, print, cut, or engraving.<sup>5</sup>

(3) A Trade-mark is a distinguishing mark or device used by manufacturers on their goods or labels, the legal right in which is recognized by law.<sup>6</sup>

subject of bankruptcy throughout the United States. U. S. Const. art 1, sec. 4.

The U. S. Bankrupt Act of 1867 was repealed June 7, 1878, 20 St. at L. 99. Insolvent laws prevail throughout the United States. While the bankrupt law of the United States is in force it destroys the validity of the operation of a State insolvent law even though no proceedings be under it at the time. The bankrupt law supersedes the State insolvent law, for they, in the proceedings, would be repugnant to each other and conflict. Griswold v. Pratt, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 16. Compare Ex parte Ziegenfuss, 2 Ired. (N. Car.) 463.

1. 2 Kent's Com 409.

2. Civil Code of Louisiana, No. 546, 547.

It is not easy to reduce to specific rules as to the right of accession. They may be arranged, however, into three artificial kinds of accession: 1. Adjunction, or the union of two things belonging to different owners; 2. Specification, or the formation of a new species with personal chattels belonging to another; 3. Commixtion, or the mixture of several things belonging to several owners. 1 Bouvier's Inst. No. 503.

3. 1 Bouvier's Inst. No. 508.

The constitution of the United States provides that authors and inventors, for a limited time, shall have the right to the exclusive use and profit of their productions and discoveries. Congress shall have power "to promote the progress of science and useful arts by securing, for limited times, to authors and inventors, the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries." Art. 1, sec. 8.

4. 2 Kent's Com. 366.

5. 1 Bouvier's Inst. No. 515.

6. Webster's Dict.

The act of Congress of July 8, 1870, provides that any citizen of the United States, or resident therein, who shall be the author, inventor, designer, or proprietor of anything mentioned in the text, of any dramatic composition, photograph, or negative thereof, or of any painting, drawing, chromo, statue, statuary, and of models or designs intended to be perfected as works of the fine arts, and his executors, administrators, or assigns, shall, upon complying with the act, have the sole right of printing them and vending the same. U. S. Stat at L. sec. 86.

The fundamental principle of trade-marks is that no one shall put off his chattels for sale as the goods of a rival or competitor, and cannot make use of marks, names, or other indicia so as to deceive the public in making it appear that he is selling the chattels of some special manufacture of a special brand. Singer Manuf. Co. v. Loog, 8 App. Cas. (Eng.) 15; Johnson v. Orr Ewing, 7 App. Cas. (Eng.) 219; Perry v. Truefitt, 6 Beav. (Eng.) 66; Seixo v. Provezende, L. R. 1 Ch. (Eng.) 192; Leather Co. v. Am. Leather Co., 11 H. L. C. (Eng.) 523; McLean v. Fleming, 96 U. S. 245; Manhattan Med. Co. v. Wood, 4 Cliff. (U. S. C. C.) 461; Marshall v. Pinkham, 52 Wis. 572.

Trade-marks may be sold and transferred and be lawfully used by the purchaser. But he must not use them so as

(1) By Attachment against Property, which is a legal mode by which a title to property may be acquired by operation of law.<sup>1</sup> Attachment is a proceeding for the collection of debts by preliminary levy upon property of the debtor to conserve it for eventual execution after the lien shall have been perfected by judgment.<sup>2</sup>

CHATTEL MORTGAGES. (See also CONDITIONAL SALES; MORTGAGES.)

Definition and Criteria, 175.

Form, Contents, and Execution, 179.

Affidavit, 182.

Who may Mortgage Chattels, 182.

What may be Mortgaged, 183.

What the Mortgage Covers and Secures, 186.

Nature of Mortgagor's Interest, 189.

Validity, by What Law Governed,

Registration, 191.

Refiling, 194.

Change of Possession, 195.

Validity as against Third Persons, 198.

Nature of Mortgagee's Title, 200.

Redemption, 200.

Discharge of Mortgage, 201.

Rights of Action in Mortgagee, 202.

Mortgagee's Right to take Possession on Default, 204.

Foreclosure, 205.

Sale for Breach of Condition, 206.

Rights of Second Mortgagees, 208.

Assignment of Mortgage, 209.

1. Definition and Criteria.—A chattel mortgage is an instrument of sale conveying the title of the property to the mortgagee with terms of defeasance, and if the terms of redemption are not complied with, then at common law the title becomes absolute in the mortgagee. The nature of the agreement must be such that by the mere non-performance of the condition by the mortgagor the title will be transferred to the mortgagee by the force of the agreement. This test is decisive.<sup>3</sup> It is held, however, that an instru-to make untrue pretences. An attempt to deceive as to the maker or character of the article will not be protected. Curtis v. Bryan, 2 Daly (N. Y.), 312; Samuel v. Berger, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 163; Walton v. Crowley, 3 Blatchf. (U. S. C. C.) 440. One who has a secret process of manufacturing an article, whether patentable or not, will be protected by injunction against persons who, in violation of contract or duty, and in breach of confidence who may undertake to apply it to their own use, or to disclose it to a third party. Peabody v. Norfolk, 98 Mass. 452.

1. 2 Kent's Com. 402.

2. Waffie's Attach. 1.

Blackstone divides the title to chattels personal into—1, by occupancy; 2, by prerogative; 3, by forfeiture; 4, by custom; 5, by succession; 6, by marriage; 7, by judgment; 8, by gift; 9, by contract; 10, by bankruptcy; 11, by testament; 12, by administration. 2 Bl. Com. b. 11, 399.

3. Parshall v. Eggart, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 367; Miner v. Judson, 2 Hun (N. Y.), 441; Mowry v. Wood, 12 Wis. 413.

A chattel mortgage is a mortgage of

personal property. Bouvier's Law Dict., citing 2 Kent's Com. 516.

A conveyance of chattels, absolute in form, made to secure the payment of a loan of money at a future day, defeasible on the payment of a note given for the amount loaned, is, as between the parties, a mortgage. Carpenter v. Snelling, 97 Mass. 452; Taber v. Hamlin, 97 Mass. 489.

Whenever a transaction resolves itself into a security for a debt, it is a mortgage. The right of redemption must exist in order to constitute a mortgage, so that the debtor shall be entitled to redeem his property. Wilmerding v. Mitchell, 42 N. J. L. 476.

A receipt given by a debtor, not a warehouseman, to a creditor, for property owned by and in possession of the debtor, is void as against other creditors, the transaction being within the statute requiring every mortgage of chattels or conveyance intended to operate as a mortgage to be recorded, unless change of possession takes place. Thorne v. Wilmington Bank, 37 Ohio St. 254.

Question of Law.—Whether an instru-

(i) By Testament and Administration, which is acquiring title to chattels on the death of a person who leaves his property undisposed of, or transferred by will.<sup>1</sup>

(j) By Accession.—"Accession" is the right to all which one's property produces, and the right to it by accession either naturally or artificially.<sup>2</sup>

(k) By Intellectual Labor.—By "intellectual labor" is meant the rights an author has in his writings called literary property, and of an inventor in his inventions.<sup>3</sup>

(1) A Patent is a grant by the State of the exclusive privilege of making, using, and vending, and authorizing others to make, use, and vend, an invention.<sup>4</sup>

(2) A Copyright is the right an author has in his literary productions, such as books, maps, charts, or musical composition, print, cut, or engraving.<sup>5</sup>

(3) A Trade-mark is a distinguishing mark or device used by manufacturers on their goods or labels, the legal right in which is recognized by law.<sup>6</sup>

subject of bankruptcy throughout the United States. U. S. Const. art 1, sec. 4.

The U. S. Bankrupt Act of 1867 was repealed June 7, 1878, 20 St. at L. 99. Insolvent laws prevail throughout the United States. While the bankrupt law of the United States is in force it destroys the validity of the operation of a State insolvent law even though no proceedings be under it at the time. The bankrupt law supersedes the State insolvent law, for they, in the proceedings, would be repugnant to each other and conflict. Griswold v. Pratt, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 16. Compare Ex parte Ziegenfuss, 2 Ired. (N. Car.) 463.

1. 2 Kent's Com. 409.

2. Civil Code of Louisiana, No. 546, 547.

It is not easy to reduce to specific rules as to the right of accession. They may be arranged, however, into three artificial kinds of accession: 1. Adjunction, or the union of two things belonging to different owners; 2. Specification, or the formation of a new species with personal chattels belonging to another; 3. Commixtion, or the mixture of several things belonging to several owners. 1 Bouvier's Inst. No. 503.

3. 1 Bouvier's Inst. No. 508.

The constitution of the United States provides that authors and inventors, for a limited time, shall have the right to the exclusive use and profit of their productions and discoveries. Congress shall have power "to promote the progress of science and useful arts by securing, for limited times, to authors and inventors, the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries." Art. 1, sec. 8.

4. 2 Kent's Com. 366.

5. 1 Bouvier's Inst. No. 515.

6. Webster's Dict.

The act of Congress of July 8, 1870, provides that any citizen of the United States, or resident therein, who shall be the author, inventor, designer, or proprietor of anything mentioned in the text, of any dramatic composition, photograph, or negative thereof, or of any painting, drawing, chromo, statue, statuary, and of models or designs intended to be perfected as works of the fine arts, and his executors, administrators, or assigns, shall, upon complying with the act, have the sole right of printing them and vending the same. U. S. Stat at L. sec. 86.

The fundamental principle of trade-marks is that no one shall put off his chattels for sale as the goods of a rival or competitor, and cannot make use of marks, names, or other indicia so as to deceive the public in making it appear that he is selling the chattels of some special manufacture of a special brand. Singer Manuf. Co. v. Loog, 8 App. Cas. (Eng.) 15; Johnson v. Orr Ewing, 7 App. Cas. (Eng.) 219; Perry v. Truefitt, 6 Beav. (Eng.) 66; Seixo v. Provezende, L. R. 1 Ch. (Eng.) 192; Leather Co. v. Am. Leather Co., 11 H. L. C. (Eng.) 523; McLean v. Fleming, 96 U. S. 245; Manhattan Med. Co. v. Wood, 4 Cliff. (U. S. C. C.) 461; Marshall v. Pinkham, 52 Wis. 572.

Trade-marks may be sold and transferred and be lawfully used by the purchaser. But he must not use them so as

(1) By Attachment against Property, which is a legal mode by which a title to property may be acquired by operation of law.<sup>1</sup> Attachment is a proceeding for the collection of debts by preliminary levy upon property of the debtor to conserve it for eventual execution after the lien shall have been perfected by judgment.<sup>2</sup>

CHATTEL MORTGAGES. (See also CONDITIONAL SALES; MORTGAGES.)

Definition and Criteria, 175.

Form, Contents, and Execution, 179.

Affidavit, 182.

Who may Mortgage Chattels, 182.

What may be Mortgaged, 183.

What the Mortgage Covers and Secures, 186.

Nature of Mortgagor's Interest, 189.

Validity, by What Law Governed,

Registration, 191.

Refiling, 194.

Change of Possession, 195.

Validity as against Third Persons, 198.

Nature of Mortgagee's Title, 200.

Redemption, 200.

Discharge of Mortgage, 201.

Rights of Action in Mortgagee, 202.

Mortgagee's Right to take Possession on Default, 204.

Foreclosure, 205.

Sale for Breach of Condition, 206.

Rights of Second Mortgagees, 208.

Assignment of Mortgage, 209.

1. Definition and Criteria.—A chattel mortgage is an instrument of sale conveying the title of the property to the mortgagee with terms of defeasance, and if the terms of redemption are not complied with, then at common law the title becomes absolute in the mortgagee. The nature of the agreement must be such that by the mere non-performance of the condition by the mortgagor the title will be transferred to the mortgagee by the force of the agreement. This test is decisive.<sup>3</sup> It is held, however, that an instru-to make untrue pretences. An attempt to deceive as to the maker or character of the article will not be protected. Curtis v. Bryan, 2 Daly (N. Y.), 312; Samuel v. Berger, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 163; Walton v. Crowley, 3 Blatchf. (U. S. C. C.) 440. One who has a secret process of manufacturing an article, whether patentable or not, will be protected by injunction against persons who, in violation of contract or duty, and in breach of confidence who may undertake to apply it to their own use, or to disclose it to a third party. Peabody v. Norfolk, 98 Mass. 452.

1. 2 Kent's Com. 402.

2. Waffle's Attach. 1.

Blackstone divides the title to chattels personal into—1, by occupancy; 2, by prerogative; 3, by forfeiture; 4, by custom; 5, by succession; 6, by marriage; 7, by judgment; 8, by gift; 9, by contract; 10, by bankruptcy; 11, by testament; 12, by administration. 2 Bl. Com. b. 11, 399.

3. Parshall v. Eggart, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 367; Miner v. Judson, 2 Hun (N. Y.), 441; Mowry v. Wood, 12 Wis. 413.

A chattel mortgage is a mortgage of

personal property. Bouvier's Law Dict., citing 2 Kent's Com. 516.

A conveyance of chattels, absolute in form, made to secure the payment of a loan of money at a future day, defeasible on the payment of a note given for the amount loaned, is, as between the parties, a mortgage. Carpenter v. Snelling, 97 Mass. 452; Taber v. Hamlin, 97 Mass. 489.

Whenever a transaction resolves itself into a security for a debt, it is a mortgage. The right of redemption must exist in order to constitute a mortgage, so that the debtor shall be entitled to redeem his property. Wilmerding v. Mitchell, 42 N. J. L. 476.

A receipt given by a debtor, not a warehouseman, to a creditor, for property owned by and in possession of the debtor, is void as against other creditors, the transaction being within the statute requiring every mortgage of chattels or conveyance intended to operate as a mortgage to be recorded, unless change of possession takes place. Thorne v. Wilmington Bank, 37 Ohio St. 254.

Question of Law.—Whether an instru-

(i) By Testament and Administration, which is acquiring title to chattels on the death of a person who leaves his property undisposed of, or transferred by will.<sup>1</sup>

(j) By Accession.—"Accession" is the right to all which one's property produces, and the right to it by accession either naturally or artificially.<sup>2</sup>

(k) By Intellectual Labor.—By "intellectual labor" is meant the rights an author has in his writings called literary property, and of an inventor in his inventions.<sup>3</sup>

(1) A Patent is a grant by the State of the exclusive privilege of making, using, and vending, and authorizing others to make, use, and vend, an invention.<sup>4</sup>

(2) A Copyright is the right an author has in his literary productions, such as books, maps, charts, or musical composition, print, cut, or engraving.<sup>5</sup>

(3) A Trade-mark is a distinguishing mark or device used by manufacturers on their goods or labels, the legal right in which is recognized by law.<sup>6</sup>

subject of bankruptcy throughout the United States. U. S. Const. art 1, sec. 4.

The U. S. Bankrupt Act of 1867 was repealed June 7, 1878, 20 St. at L. 99. Insolvent laws prevail throughout the United States. While the bankrupt law of the United States is in force it destroys the validity of the operation of a State insolvent law even though no proceedings be under it at the time. The bankrupt law supersedes the State insolvent law, for they, in the proceedings, would be repugnant to each other and conflict. Griswold v. Pratt, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 16. Compare Ex parte Ziegenfuss, 2 Ired. (N. Car.) 463.

1. 2 Kent's Com 409.

2. Civil Code of Louisiana, No. 546, 547.

It is not easy to reduce to specific rules as to the right of accession. They may be arranged, however, into three artificial kinds of accession: 1. Adjunction, or the union of two things belonging to different owners; 2. Specification, or the formation of a new species with personal chattels belonging to another; 3. Commixtion, or the mixture of several things belonging to several owners. 1 Bouvier's Inst. No. 503.

3. 1 Bouvier's Inst. No. 508.

The constitution of the United States provides that authors and inventors, for a limited time, shall have the right to the exclusive use and profit of their productions and discoveries. Congress shall have power "to promote the progress of science and useful arts by securing, for limited times, to authors and inventors, the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries." Art. 1, sec. 8.

4. 2 Kent's Com. 366.

5. 1 Bouvier's Inst. No. 515.

6. Webster's Dict.

The act of Congress of July 8, 1870, provides that any citizen of the United States, or resident therein, who shall be the author, inventor, designer, or proprietor of anything mentioned in the text, of any dramatic composition, photograph, or negative thereof, or of any painting, drawing, chromo, statue, statuary, and of models or designs intended to be perfected as works of the fine arts, and his executors, administrators, or assigns, shall, upon complying with the act, have the sole right of printing them and vending the same. U. S. Stat at L. sec. 86.

The fundamental principle of trade-marks is that no one shall put off his chattels for sale as the goods of a rival or competitor, and cannot make use of marks, names, or other indicia so as to deceive the public in making it appear that he is selling the chattels of some special manufacture of a special brand. Singer Manuf. Co. v. Loog, 8 App. Cas. (Eng.) 15; Johnson v. Orr Ewing, 7 App. Cas. (Eng.) 219; Perry v. Truefitt, 6 Beav. (Eng.) 66; Seixo v. Provezende, L. R. 1 Ch. (Eng.) 192; Leather Co. v. Am. Leather Co., 11 H. L. C. (Eng.) 523; McLean v. Fleming, 96 U. S. 245; Manhattan Med. Co. v. Wood, 4 Cliff. (U. S. C. C.) 461; Marshall v. Pinkham, 52 Wis. 572.

Trade-marks may be sold and transferred and be lawfully used by the purchaser. But he must not use them so as

(1) By Attachment against Property, which is a legal mode by which a title to property may be acquired by operation of law.<sup>1</sup> Attachment is a proceeding for the collection of debts by preliminary levy upon property of the debtor to conserve it for eventual execution after the lien shall have been perfected by judgment.<sup>2</sup>

CHATTEL MORTGAGES. (See also CONDITIONAL SALES; MORTGAGES.)

Definition and Criteria, 175.
Form, Contents, and Execution, 179.
Affidavit, 182.
Who may Mortgage Chattels, 182.
What may be Mortgaged, 183.
What the Mortgage Covers and Secures, 186.
Nature of Mortgagor's Interest, 189.
Validity, by What Law Governed, 191.
Registration, 191.
Refiling, 194.
Change of Possession, 195.

Validity as against Third Persons, 198.
Nature of Mortgagee's Title, 200.
Redemption, 200.
Discharge of Mortgage, 201.
Rights of Action in Mortgagee, 202.
Mortgagee's Right to take Possession on Default, 204.
Foreclosure, 205.
Sale for Breach of Condition, 206.
Rights of Second Mortgagees, 208.
Assignment of Mortgage, 209.

1. Definition and Criteria.—A chattel mortgage is an instrument of sale conveying the title of the property to the mortgagee with terms of defeasance, and if the terms of redemption are not complied with, then at common law the title becomes absolute in the mortgagee. The nature of the agreement must be such that by the mere non-performance of the condition by the mortgagor the title will be transferred to the mortgagee by the force of the agreement. This test is decisive.<sup>3</sup> It is held, however, that an instru-to make untrue pretences. An attempt to deceive as to the maker or character of the article will not be protected. Curtis v. Bryan, 2 Daly (N. Y.), 312; Samuel v. Berger, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 163; Walton v. Crowley, 3 Blatchf. (U. S. C. C.) 440. One who has a secret process of manufacturing an article, whether patentable or not, will be protected by injunction against persons who, in violation of contract or duty, and in breach of confidence who may undertake to apply it to their own use, or to disclose it to a third party. Peabody v. Norfolk, 98 Mass. 452.

1. 2 Kent's Com. 402.

2. Waffle's Attach. 1.

Blackstone divides the title to chattels personal into—1, by occupancy; 2, by prerogative; 3, by forfeiture; 4, by custom; 5, by succession; 6, by marriage; 7, by judgment; 8, by gift; 9, by contract; 10, by bankruptcy; 11, by testament; 12, by administration. 2 Bl. Com. b. 11, 399.

3. Parshall v. Eggart, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 367; Miner v. Judson, 2 Hun (N. Y.), 441; Mowry v. Wood, 12 Wis. 413.

A chattel mortgage is a mortgage of

personal property. Bouvier's Law Dict., citing 2 Kent's Com. 516.

A conveyance of chattels, absolute in form, made to secure the payment of a loan of money at a future day, defeasible on the payment of a note given for the amount loaned, is, as between the parties, a mortgage. Carpenter v. Snelling, 97 Mass. 452; Taber v. Hamlin, 97 Mass. 489.

Whenever a transaction resolves itself into a security for a debt, it is a mortgage. The right of redemption must exist in order to constitute a mortgage, so that the debtor shall be entitled to redeem his property. Wilmerding v. Mitchell, 42 N. J. L. 476.

A receipt given by a debtor, not a warehouseman, to a creditor, for property owned by and in possession of the debtor, is void as against other creditors, the transaction being within the statute requiring every mortgage of chattels or conveyance intended to operate as a mortgage to be recorded, unless change of possession takes place. Thorne v. Wilmington Bank, 37 Ohio St. 254.

Question of Law.—Whether an instrument by which one agrees to sell and the other to purchase certain personal property at a specified price, and that the vendor shall have a "lien" upon the property until the price is paid, is in the nature of a chattel mortgage.<sup>1</sup>

A chattel mortgage is distinguished from a pledge in this—that whether possession of the chattel is delivered to the mortgagee or not, the title passes to the mortgagee, subject to be defeated upon performance of the condition, and in case of a breach it becomes absolute at law in the mortgagee; while in the case of a pledge a special property only passes to the pledgee, and the general property remains in the pledgor.<sup>2</sup>

ment by virtue of which the plaintiff avers that he became entitled to the possession of personal property, alleged to have been converted by the defendant, is or is not a mortgage, is a question of law; and to enable the court to determine it, the complaint should set forth, if not the whole instrument, at least those provisions which are relied on as giving to it the character of a mortgage. Fairbanks v. Bloomfield, 2 Duer (N. Y.), 349.

Money Debt Necessary.—A mortgage is essentially a security for a debt, and when no debt exists a mortgage is impossible. West v. Hendrix, 28 Ala. 226; Robinson v. Farely, 16 Ala. 472.

But in Byram v. Gordon, 11 Mich. 531, it is said that it is not necessary to the validity of a chattel mortgage, as to third persons, that it should be for the payment of any sum certain or of any money whatever; it may be for the performance of any other act, or of any contract, by the mortgagor or a third person.

1. Dunning v. Stearns, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 630; Whiting v. Eichelberger, 16 Iowa, 422; Yenni v. McNamee, 45 N. Y. 614. Compare Freeman v. Bass, 34 Ga. 355; Metcalfe v. Fosdick, 23 Ohio St. 114; Barrett v. Mason, 7 Ark. 253.

A written agreement properly executed, stipulating that the amount due for rent of land shall be paid before the crops are removed, is held to operate as a mortgage upon the crops. Weed v. Standley, 12 Fla. 166; Brown v. Coats, 56 Ala. 439; Lamson v. Moffatt, 61 Wis. 153. Compare Haynes v. Ledyard, 33 Mich. 319.

Slaves were conveyed by an agent who was only authorized to mortgage, with notice of which authority the grantee was chargeable. Held, that the conveyance should be deemed a mortgage only. Coppage v. Barnett, 34 Miss. 621.

2. Heyland v. Badger, 35 Cal. 404; Wright v. Ross, 36 Cal. 414; Conner v. Carpenter, 28 Vt. 237; Conard v. Ins. Co., 1 Pet. (U. S.) 449; Brown v. Bement, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 96; Brownell v. Hawkins, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 491; Wood v. Dudley, 8 Vt. 435; Badlam v. Tucker, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 389; Sims v. Canfield, 2 Ala. 555; Barfield v. Cole, 4 Sneed. (Tenn.) 465; Evans v. Darlington, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 320.

A mortgage is a pledge and something more; for it is an absolute pledge, to become an absolute interest if not redeemed in a certain time. Doak v. Bank, 6 Ired. (N. Car.) 309.

Possession.—A subsidiary distinction between a pledge and a chattel mortgage lies in the fact that transfer of possession to the pledgee is absolutely essential to the creation of the former species of security, but not at all necessary in the latter. See Eastman v. Avery, 23 Me. 248; Brownell v. Hawkins, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 491; Homes v. Crane, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 610.

Roman Law.—The distinction last mentioned is also recognized in the modern civil law. "The term pignus [pledge], in its recent and most extensive signification, must be understood as also including hypotheca [mortgage]; but in its stricter acceptation it is used to denote that species of mortgage which arises when the thing pledged is also delivered to the mortgagee. A creditor may very often have an opportunity to detain an hypotheca, but such detention has not the effect of changing this kind of a pledge into a pignus. The detentor may become the natural possessor of the thing pledged, without obtaining the possessio civilis." Tomkins & Jencken's Mod. Rom. Law, 185.

An instrument in writing by which the owner of personal property turns it out as "security" for a debt which he contracts, and by the terms of which it appears to have been contemplated that the property should remain in the possession of the owner, is to be treated as a mortgage and not as a pledge. Coty v. Barnes, 20 Vt. 78.

An instrument giving security upon a

Parol evidence is admissible both in law and equity to show that a bill of sale of chattels, absolute upon its face, was intended by the parties to operate as a mortgage only; and when this intention is discovered, the conveyance will be treated as a mortgage.<sup>1</sup> But it is only between the parties that an absolute bill of sale may be treated as a mortgage; this will not be done to the prejudice of creditors.<sup>2</sup> And the proof that a bill of sale absolute on its face was intended as a mortgage ought, in the absence of fraud or imposition, to be clear, decisive, and without doubt.<sup>3</sup> chattel for the payment of a debt on a future day, possession to remain in the debtor, and authorizing the creditor to take possession on default, is a mortgage and not a pledge, notwithstanding the words used are, "I hereby pledge," etc. Langdon v. Buel, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 80.

A debtor delivered to his creditor a watch and chain, at the same time executing and delivering to the creditor an instrument expressed as follows: "I hereby agree to give up all claim to the watch, etc., if all claims due to you from me are not paid by" a date specified. Held, that this was a mortgage and not a pledge. Bunacleugh v. Poolman, 3 Daly (N. Y.), 236.

Mortgage Changed to Pledge.—If the mortgagor of chattels makes a new and distinct contract with the mortgagee to deliver to him the mortgaged chattels and also other chattels, to be held as security for the payment of the debt which the mortgage was made to secure, and delivers them accordingly, and the mortgagee takes and holds possession of them under such new contract, he thereby becomes pawnee of all the chattels so delivered. Rowley v. Rice, 10 Metc. (Mass.) 7.

1. Reed v. Jewett, 5 Me. 96; Caswell v. Keith, 12 Gray (Mass.), 351; Despard v. Walbridge, 15 N. Y. 374; Smith v. Beattie, 31 N. Y. 542; Brogden v. Walker, 2 Har. & J. (Md.) 285; Leighman v. Marshall, 17 Md. 550; Dadney v. Green, 4 H. & M. (Va.) 101; Sledge v. Clopton, 6 Ala. 603; Carter v. Burris, 10 Sm. & Mar. (Miss.) 527; Fowler v. Stoneum, 11 Tex. 478; Horne v. Puckett, 22 Tex. 201; National Ins. Co. v. Webster, 83 Ill. 470; McAnnulty v. Seick, 59 Iowa, 596; Fuller v. Parish, 3 Mich. 211; Cooper v. Brock, 41 Mich. 488.

Admissible at Law.—Parol evidence that what appears to be an absolute bill of sale was in fact intended as a mortgage is admissible in an action at law, as well as in equity. Fuller v. Parish, 3 Mich. 211; Despard v. Walbridge, 15 N. Y. 374.

A bill of sale, though absolute on its face, will be treated as a chattel mortgage, if it can be proved that it was intended as security for money loaned or to be loaned. Ing v. Brown, 3 Md. Ch. 521; Scott v. Henry, 8 Engl. (Ark.) 112; Rogers v. Vaughan, 31 Ark. 62; Frost v. Allen, 57 Ga. 326; Laeber v. Langhor, 45 Md. 477; Blodgett v. Blodgett, 48 Vt. 32; Plummer v. Shirley, 16 Ind. 380.

Sale with Terms of Defeasance.—Where an absolute bill of sale is made, and at the same time the vendee gives back an instrument of defeasance, the transaction will be construed a mortgage if it can be consistently done. Barnes v. Holcomb, 12 Sm. & Mar. (Miss.) 306; Hopkins v. Thompson, 2 Port. (Ala.) 433.

A bill of sale accompanied by a verbal defeasance is a chattel mortgage. Omaha Book Co. v. Sutherland, 10 Neb. 334.

A writing, making in the first place an absolute conveyance of a horse, and then containing a condition that the instrument shall be void upon the payment by the vendor to the vendee of a certain sum of money, is in law a mortgage. McFadden v. Turner, 3 Jones (N. Car.), 481.

But if an absolute deed is made of a chattel, and a defeasance made at the same time, but separate from it, it should not operate as a mortgage to the prejudice of third persons. Gaither v. Mumford, 2 Tayl. (N. Car.) 167.

Where a bill of sale of goods, and a lease absolute on its face, is executed to secure a previous debt, and the vendee stipulates that the vendor shall have a certain time to pay the amount and retain possession of the goods until such payment, the transaction amounts to a chattel mortgage. Ford v. Ransom, 39 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 429; Winslow v. Tarbox, 6 Shep. (Me.) 132.

2. State v. Bell, 2 Mo. App. 102; Gaither v. Mumford, 2 Tayl. (N. Car.) 167.

3. Williams v. Cheatham, 19 Ark. 278; Triebler v. Andrews, 31 Ark. 163; Freeman v. Baldwin, 13 Ala. 246.

The inclination of courts of equity has always been to lean against conditional sales, because an error which converts a conditional sale into a mortgage is not so injurious as one which changes a mortgage into a conditional sale. Hence in all cases of doubt the courts will be disposed to construe a transaction as a chattel mortgage rather than a conditional sale.<sup>1</sup>

That section of the statute of frauds which provides that any conveyance made in trust for the use of the person making the Evidence of Extraneous Circumstances.

—To convert an absolute conveyance into a security for money there must be facts and circumstances  dehors  the deed, showing that it was so intended, and proof of the declarations of the parties alone will not be sufficient. Colvard v. Waugh, 3 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 335.

To determine whether a bill of sale is a mortgage or not, it is a well-established rule that the courts will not be limited to the terms of the written contract, but will consider all the circumstances connected with it, such as the circumstances of the parties, the property conveyed, its value, the price paid for it, defeasances verbal or written, as well as the acts and declarations of the parties, and will decide on the whole circumstances taken together. Scott v. Henry, 8 Engl. (Ark.) 112.

On a bill filed to have a deed absolute on its face declared a mortgage, a writing executed by the grantee several months after the original deed, reciting that it was agreed between him and the grantor, at the time the deed was executed, that if the latter repaid to him by a specified day the amount of the consideration money expressed in the deed, then he would reconvey to him all the property therein mentioned, and binding himself to reconvey accordingly, is evidence of the highest character against the grantee; and although it may not be sufficient of itself to show that the parties intended the deed to operate as a mortgage, yet if the other evidence in the case taken in connection with it, establishes that to have been the purpose of the parties, or even renders it doubtful whether a mortgage or a conditional sale was intended, it is enough to induce a court of equity to declare it a mortgage. Locke v. Palmer, 26 Ala. 312.

Proof of Undue Imposition.—An absolute bill of sale of a chattel was decreed to stand only as a mortgage upon proof that the vendor was upwards of seventy years old, infirm, embarrassed, his property levied on and about to be sold, and that the vendee, who was his son-in-law, took advantage of all these circumstances to make the transaction assume the form of an absolute sale instead of a mortgage. Smith v. Pearson, 24 Ala. 348.

Estoppel.—A party is not precluded from proving that a bill of sale absolute upon its face was in fact a mortgage by his having admitted, for the purpose of avoiding a continuance of his cause, that such paper was a bill of sale. National Ins. Co. v. Webster, 83 Ill. 470.

1. Locke v. Palmer, 26 Ala. 312; Parish v. Gates, 29 Ala. 254; Pioneer Gold Mining Co. v. Baker, 23 Fed. Repr. 258; s. c., 10 Sawy. (U. S. Cir.) 539; Hughes v. Sheaff, 19 Iowa, 335; Watson v. James, 15 La. Ann. 386; Scott v. Britton, 2 Yerg. (Tenn.) 215; Wilson v. Weston, 4 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 349; Brown v. Dewey, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 28. See infra, this volume, tit. CONDITIONAL SALES.

The general tests in doubtful cases are the adequacy of the consideration and the continuance or extinguishment of the debt. Parish v. Gates, 29 Ala. 254.

Still the intention of the parties to the contract is the true test; and when a conditional sale is clearly established it will be enforced. Hughes v. Sheaff, 19 Iowa, 335.

If a promissory note for a sum certain is given for an article of personal property, and in the note it is stipulated that the article shall remain the property of the promisee until the note is fully paid, the transaction will constitute a mortgage, and the promisee is entitled to possession, unless agreement be made to the contrary. Woodman v. Chesley, 39 Me. 45.

Where it is shown that the parties to a written agreement designed, at the time of executing it, a borrowing and lending, not a purchase and sale, of the property therein conveyed, it is a mortgage, and nothing can divest it of the equity of redemption, not even a subsequent agreement of the parties that it shall be irredeemable. Weatherley v. Weatherley, 40 Miss. 462.

Where a conditional sale of personal property reserves title in the vendor, such reservation must be in writing, and the instrument will be treated as an equitable mortgage. Talmadge v. Oliver, 14 S. Car. 522.

same shall be void as against creditors, does not apply to chattel mortgages.<sup>1</sup>

2. Form, Contents, and Execution.—A valid mortgage of personal property may be created by a writing which uses the word "mortgage" only without any other words of conveyance, nor is it necessary that it should contain a power of sale or authorize the mortgagee to take possession on default.<sup>2</sup> But to render a chattel mortgage valid as against attaching creditors of the mortgagor there must be at least a distinct and specific condition that can be clearly stated, on performance of which the property would be released.<sup>3</sup> A chattel mortgage need not be under seal.<sup>4</sup> And as between the parties to the transaction, it need not even be in writing. A verbal agreement to give and accept security upon personal property is valid between the parties, although of no validity as against creditors and subsequent purchasers in good faith.<sup>5</sup> A chattel mortgage may be void for uncertainty as well as a mortgage of real estate.<sup>6</sup>

1. Godchaux v. Mulford, 26 Cal. 316; Curtis v. Leavitt, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 309. See Chapman v. Hunt, 14 N. J. Ex. 149.

An instrument transferring to a creditor a stock of goods, and providing that he shall pay certain creditors and himself, and then return any surplus to the maker, is a chattel mortgage and not a general assignment, and it is a valid instrument. Waterman v. Silberberg, 23 Repr. (Tex.) 315; Texas Bank v. Lovenberg, 63 Tex. 506. Compare Camp v. Thompson, 25 Minn. 175.

A mortgage may be valid though it be not wholly for the mortgagee's benefit, nor will its containing a trust for the benefit of a third person of itself suffice to render it an assignment, so as to bring it within the act which requires assignments to be of all the debtor's property and without preferences. Morse v. Powers, 17 N. H. 286.

2. Mervine v. White, 50 Ala. 388. An instrument of writing, very inartificially drawn, which shows on its face that the relation of debtor and creditor existed between the parties, and by which it is declared that the creditor "shall have a lien" on a horse, the property of the debtor, "to have and to hold" until the debt is paid, operates as a mortgage, although it contains no words of conveyance. Ellington v. Charleston, 51 Ala. 166.

A chattel mortgage and a written agreement to govern the same subject-matter between parties, executed contemporaneously, must be treated as one contract. Blakeslee v. Rossman, 43 Wis. 116.

Lex Loci.—The construction of a mortgage of personal property is to be governed by the lex loci. Tucker v. Toomer, 36 Ga. 138.

Mortgage of Stock.—A mortgage of shares of stock in a corporation is valid without a transfer thereof upon the books of the company. Ede v. Johnson, 15 Cal. 53.

3. Fairfield Bridge Co. v. Nye, 60 Me. 372.

4. Gibson v. Warden, 14 Wall (U. S.) 244; Milton v. Mosher, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 244; Gerrey v. White, 47 Me. 504; Sweetzer v. Mead, 5 Mich. 107; Flory v. Denney, 11 Eng. Law & Eq. 584.

As a chattel mortgage need not be under seal, and as the mortgage of such property of a firm, made by one of the partners to secure a firm debt, is valid, the addition by him of a seal thereto does not vitiate it. Milton v. Mosher, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 244.

A sealed mortgage of personal property may be waived or altered by a subsequent parol agreement. Acker v. Bender, 33 Ala. 230.

5. Couchman v. Wright, 8 Neb. 1; Bank of Rochester v. Jones, 4 N. Y. 497; Brooks v. Ruff, 37 Ala. 371; Morrow v. Turney, 35 Ala. 131. Compare Day v. Swift, 48 Me. 368.

A verbal chattel mortgage, if accompanied by delivery of the property, is valid. Bardwell v. Roberts, 66 Barb. (N. Y.) 433.

Informalities in the attestation or execution of a mortgage created by verbal contract and reduced to writing do not affect its validity. Alabama Warehouse Co. v. Lewis, 56 Ala. 514.

6. Golden v. Cockril, 1 Kan. 259; Rood v. Welch, 28 Conn. 157.

As between the mortgagor and mortgagee of personal chattels a specific and particular description of the several articles mortgaged, by which to identify them from other like articles owned by the mortgagor, is not necessary.<sup>1</sup> But in order to give the mortgage general validity it is requisite that it should contain such a description of the property covered as will enable third persons clearly to identify the property, when aided by inquiries which the instrument itself indicates and directs.<sup>2</sup> But it is to be observed that an actual

1. Call v. Gray, 37 N. H. 428.

2. Lawrence v. Everts, 7 Ohio St. 194; Mills v. Kansas Lumber Co., 26 Kan. 574; Griffiths v. Wheeler, 31 Kan. 17.

Description of Horses and Cattle.—"What may properly be regarded as a sufficient description of horses and cattle in an instrument of conveyance depends to some extent upon circumstances aside from the peculiar description of the animals themselves. For example, if a mortgagor owned but a small number of such animals, and should include in the mortgage all that he owned, stating therein the place or places where they were kept, or the uses in which they were employed, a less particular description of each by natural marks or individual characteristics would suffice for identification than if the mortgagor were owner of a large number, part of which only were included in the mortgage, and no information should be given in the instrument of the place where the animals were kept, or for what purposes or uses, whether freighting, carriage-driving, riding, racing, or breeding." Stone, J., in Tabor v. Sampson, 18 Repr. (Col.) 165.

Descriptions which have been Held Sufficient.—When the articles mortgaged are very numerous, it is not necessary to describe each article; a mortgage of all the property of a particular description in a certain store is sufficient. Harding v. Coburn, 12 Metc. (Mass.) 333; Russell v. Winne, 37 N. Y. 591.

A mortgage expressed to be of "my entire crop of cotton and corn of the present year" is capable of being made sufficiently definite by extrinsic proof. Ellis v. Martin, 60 Ala. 394.

A mortgage of "my entire crop of corn, cotton-seed, fodder, peas, potatoes, and cane that I may make the present year upon my place," is not void for uncertainty. Seay v. McCormick, 68 Ala. 549.

"One half of all the crops growing" on certain described lands means one undivided half, and is a sufficient description. Melin v. Reynolds, 18 Repr. (Minn.) 177.

If a mortgage is made of all the property "now in the shop occupied by me in said B.," and is without date, parol evidence is admissible to show the day of the execution and delivery of the instrument; the description is sufficient. Burditt v. Hunt, 25 Me. 419.

A mortgage of "the property described in the annexed schedule marked A, except such articles as are by law exempt from levy and sale under execution," is not void for uncertainty as to articles enumerated in the schedule, and which necessarily or presumptively do not fall within the exception. Newell v. Warner, 44 Barb. (N. Y.) 258.

A mortgage of cattle is not invalid because it describes them incorrectly as to their age, where it clearly appears from the evidence what cattle were intended. Harris v. Kennedy, 48 Wis. 500.

Where several oxen are described in a mortgage as "red, white, and blue," the full description need not apply to each. Fordyce v. Neal, 40 Mich. 705.

"Fourteen mules now on my plantation in Russell County" is a sufficient description in a chattel mortgage, and parol evidence of the fact that the mortgagor had but one plantation in said county, and that he had on it fourteen mules, renders the description definite and certain. Hurt v. Redd, 64 Ala. 85.

A description in a mortgage "one black mule, about eight years old," is not so indefinite as to render the mortgage void. Connally v. Spragins, 66 Ala. 258. Compare Tindall v. Wasson, 74 Ind. 495.

A chattel mortgage of ten horses in the mortgagor's possession is not void for uncertainty in the description, and the mortgagee may prove that horses taken by him were those actually mortgaged. Eddy v. Caldwell, 7 Minn. 225. Compare Blakeley v. Patrick, 67 N. Car. 40.

In Indiana, parol evidence being admissible to identify the property, a mortgage is not invalidated by describing the chattel as a "dark bay mare." Burns v. Harris, 66 Ind. 536. Compare Cowden v. Lockridge, 60 Miss. 385.

The description of property in a chat-delivery of the specific articles covered by a chattel mortgage into the possession of the mortgagee, before any rights of third parties have intervened, will cure a defect in the description of the property.<sup>1</sup> A chattel mortgage should in general contain a description of the debt or liability for which it is given. But if it is executed in good faith for a valuable consideration, and not for the purpose of defrauding any creditor of the mortgagor, its validity is not affected by the fact that its condition misrepresents the obligation or liability in fact secured and intended to be secured by it.<sup>2</sup>

A chattel mortgage is presumed to have been executed at its date till the contrary is shown; and the time of acknowledging and tel mortgage as "41 Berkshire hogs and 65 grain sacks" is not so uncertain as to invalidate the mortgage. Knapp v. Dietz, 64 Wis. 31. Compare Everett v. Brown, 64 Iowa, 420.

Descriptions which have been Held Too Indefinite.—The words "all book debts due and owing, or which should, during the continuance of the security, become due and owing to the mortgagor," in a chattel mortgage, must be construed to include all the book debts becoming due to the mortgagor in any trade which he may carry on anywhere, though the mortgage itself is for the stock in trade, fixtures, etc., of the mortgagor's regular occupation, and are hence too indefinite to pass any future book debts due the mortgagor. The clause is too indefinite at law, and to be effective in equity the description is not certain enough to support a bill for specific performance. Re Izon v. Tailby (Eng. Ct. of App.), 23 Repr. 190.

Under the Canadian statute (20 Vict. c. 3, § 4), which requires that a mortgage of chattels "shall contain such efficient and full description thereof that the same may be thereby readily and easily known and distinguished," a mortgage of a horse describing it simply as "one sorrel horse" is, as to third persons, void for want of sufficient description. Montgomery v. Wight, 8 Mich. 143.

In an intended mortgage of crops in these words, "all the cut and growing and having grown," on certain described land, the word "crops" will not be supplied; the description is fatally defective. Clay v. Currier, 17 Repr. (Iowa) 683.

A mortgage upon a stated quantity of mixed logs in the drive is void for uncertainty as against third persons if it does not furnish the data for separating the mortgaged logs from the mass. Richardson v. Alpena Lumber Co., 40 Mich. 203.

"One four-horse iron-axle wagon" is not a sufficient description. Nicholson v. Karpe, 58 Miss. 34.

A mortgage of "30 head of cattle, 6 oxen, 3 horses," etc., is void for uncertainty. Kelly v. Reid, 57 Miss. 89; McCord v. Cooper, 30 Ind. 9.

1. Parsons Bank v. Sargent, 20 Kan. 576.

Schedule.—A chattel mortgage is valid which describes the property mortgaged by reference to a schedule attached to another mortgage by the same mortgagor on file in the same office. Newman v. Tymeson, 13 Wis. 172. See Van Heusen v. Radcliff, 17 N. Y. 580.

2. Manor v. Sheehan, 30 Minn. 419; Cushman v. Luther, 53 N. H. 562; Kaysing v. Hughes, 64 Ill. 123.

But a chattel mortgage securing a collateral note, described in the mortgage and affidavit as an absolute debt, is not valid against creditors of the mortgagor. Kennard v. Gray, 58 N. H. 51.

The Ohio statute in relation to chattel mortgages requires a mortgage given to indemnify the mortgagee against a liability as surety for the mortgagor to have entered thereon a true statement of such liability, and that the instrument was taken in good faith to indemnify against any loss resulting therefrom, and the omission of such statement renders the mortgage void as against the mortgagor's creditors. Hanes v. Tiffany, 25 Ohio St. 549.

Under a statute requiring the debt or liability intended to be secured to be specified in the condition of the mortgage, a general description of all debts or all demands will not be sufficient. Page v. Ordway, 40 N. H. 253. See Webb v. Stone, 24 N. H. 282.

Although a mortgage may be valid without any written description of the debt, parol evidence is not admissible to vary the conditions expressed. Varney v. Hawes, 68 Me. 442.

recording tends to establish the time of execution.<sup>1</sup> In several of the States it is required by statute that a chattel mortgage be duly acknowledged by the mortgagor.<sup>2</sup> And a mortgage which is not acknowledged at all, or not properly acknowledged, although it may be obligatory upon the parties to it, is void as to junior mortgagees, subsequent purchasers in good faith, and creditors of the mortgagor.<sup>3</sup> But where the mortgagee is in possession of the mortgaged chattels before any lien or other right attaches, the mortgage will be good against all persons, regardless of the acknowledgment.<sup>4</sup>

3. Affidavit.—In several of the States the statutes provide that no chattel mortgage shall be valid (except as between the immediate parties) unless the mortgagor and mortgagee shall make an affidavit that the mortgage is made for the purpose of securing the debt specified in the consideration thereof and for no other purpose, and that the same is a just debt due the mortgagee from the mortgagor.<sup>5</sup> When this is omitted the mortgage is not good against an attaching creditor.<sup>6</sup>

4. Who may Mortgage Chattels.—Generally speaking, any person who owns chattels, and who is by law authorized to enter into other valid contracts in respect to his property, may execute a

1. Merrill v. Dawson, 1 Hemp. (U. S. Cir.) 563. See Stonebreaker v. Kerr, 40 Ind. 186.

2. Ill. Rev. Stat. c. 95, § 2; Minn. Genl. Stat. 1878, c. 39, § 3; Md. Rev. Code 1878, art. 44, §§ 47-50; Cal. Code, § 7957; Colo. Genl. Stat. 1883, § 164; Wash. Code, § 1987; Dak. Civ. Code, §§ 1744-6; Idaho Acts 1885, p. 74, § 2; Fla. Dig. 1881, c. 31, § 1.

3. Forest v. Tinkham, 29 Ill. 141; Sage v. Browning, 51 Ill. 217; McDowell v. Stewart, 83 Ill. 538; Selking v. Hebel, 1 Mo. App. 340.

Good against Mortgagor.—A chattel mortgage made upon good consideration, although it has not been acknowledged according to the statute, is good against the mortgagor and any one claiming under him by virtue of a void conveyance. Machette v. Wanless, 2 Col. Ter. 169.

Acknowledgment before Interested Party.—An acknowledgment of a chattel mortgage taken and certified by a party beneficially interested in it is void, and does not authorize record of the instrument; nor does such record, if made, impart any legal notice to third persons. Wilson v. Traer, 20 Iowa, 231; Hamers v. Doyle, 61 Ill. 307.

4. Chipron v. Feikert, 68 Ill. 284.

5. New Hamp. Genl. Stat. 1878, c. 137, § 6; Verm. Rev. Ls. 1880, § 1967; New Jer. Act, 1880, c. 178, § 2; Ohio Rev. Stats. § 4154; Nev. Act, 1885, c. 54.

6. Field v. Silo, 44 N. J. L. 355.

But a chattel mortgage without the affidavit required by statute is valid against one having knowledge that it was made in good faith and for a valuable consideration. Roberts v. Crawford, 58 N. H. 499.

Statement of Consideration.—Simply affirming under oath that the consideration of a chattel mortgage is the sum for which it is given, without disclosing how the debt on which it is founded arose or was incurred, is not a compliance with the statute requiring the mortgagee to file an affidavit showing the consideration of his mortgage. Ehler v. Turner, 35 N. J. Eq. 68.

Where a debt and a liability are secured by a chattel mortgage, and the affidavit speaks of the debt only, the mortgage will be good as to the debt, although invalid as security for the liability. Sumner v. Dalton, 58 N. H. 295.

Mode of Making Affidavit.—If the mortgagor and mortgagee write their own names in the body of the affidavit to a chattel mortgage, this is not a compliance with the statute which requires that the parties shall make and subscribe the affidavit. Stone v. Marvel, 45 N. H. 481.

A chattel mortgage to secure a debt due a town is valid when the necessary affidavit is made and subscribed by one of the selectmen as such. Sumner v. Dalton, 58 N. H. 295.

chattel mortgage.<sup>1</sup> But one cannot mortgage property which he does not own. And if one executes a mortgage upon chattels which belong to another, the latter's ratification will not affect the rights of one taking a mortgage from the true owner without knowledge of the fact of ratification.<sup>2</sup> The case of a conditional vendee, who holds possession of the goods but is not to acquire any title until the price is fully paid, and who attempts to mortgage them before condition performed, is somewhat anomalous; but it is generally held that the original vendor's title overrides that of the mortgagee.<sup>3</sup>

5. What may be Mortgaged.—In most of the American States the rule is that personal property of every description which has an actual or potential existence, and in which the mortgagor has a present interest or right of property, may be the subject of a chattel mortgage.<sup>4</sup> A chattel mortgage covering property

1. A chattel mortgage duly executed by an infant is voidable at his election at any time before he arrives at full age, and within a reasonable time thereafter, and it is avoided by any act which evinces such purpose. Chapin v. Shafer, 49 N. Y. 407. See State v. Plaisted, 43 N. H. 413.

If several persons own property together as joint tenants or tenants in common, or as partners, they may all join in mortgaging it, and either may mortgage his individual interest. Monnot v. Ibert, 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 24; Milton v. Mosher, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 244; Shuart v. Taylor, 7 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 251.

A chattel mortgage may be executed by an agent who is thereto authorized. Brownell v. Hawkins, 4 Barb. (N. Y.) 491.

Under the requirements of Colo. Rev. Stats. p. 103, and the law of 1874, p. 196, that a chattel mortgage be acknowledged before a justice in whose district the mortgagor "may reside," it is held that a non-resident person, whether natural or artificial, cannot execute a valid chattel mortgage in Colorado. Cook v. Hagar, 3 Colo. 386.

2. Maier v. Davis, 57 Wis. 212.

3. Goodwin v. May, 23 Ga. 205; Kingsland v. Drum, 80 Mo. 646; Winchester v. King, 46 Mich. 102. See infra, this volume, tit. CONDITIONAL SALES.

Chattels in the possession of a buyer who is not to become the owner until he has fully paid for them may, at any time before the price is wholly paid, be mortgaged by the seller to another person, and such person will acquire a title superior to that of the conditional buyer. Everett v. Hall, 67 Me. 497.

4. See New Hamp. Genl. Laws, 1878, c. 137, § 1; Verm. Rev. Laws, 1880, §

1965; Nev. Act. 1885, c. 54; Wash. Code, § 1986; Wyoming Act. 1882, c. 11, § 7; New Mexico Comp. Laws, § 1586.

Rolling Stock.—The rolling stock of a railroad company is personal property, and may be made the subject of a chattel mortgage. Hoyle v. Railroad, 54 N. Y. 314; Beardsley v. Ontario Bank, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 619; Stevens v. Railroad, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 590.

But it is also said that rolling-stock and other property strictly appurtenant to a railroad is part of the road, and a mortgage thereof in connection with the road, if duly registered as a mortgage of realty, need not be recorded also as a chattel mortgage. Farmers' Loan Co. v. Railroad, 3 Dill. (U. S. Cir.) 412.

Bank Stock.—Stock in a banking corporation may be mortgaged like any other personal property. Manus v. Brookville Bank, 73 Ind. 243. And without a formal transfer thereof on the books of the company. Ede v. Johnson, 15 Cal. 53.

Executory Interests.—The interest of a party to an executory contract may be mortgaged before performance. Forman v. Procter, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 124. So the obligee in a title bond has an interest which he can mortgage. Baker v. Bishop Hill Colony, 45 Ill. 264.

But an unpaid legacy is not the subject of a chattel mortgage, and an assignment of one need not be filed as a chattel mortgage. Kilbourne v. Fay, 29 Ohio St. 254; Bacon v. Bonham, 27 N. J. Eq. 209.

And a mere possibility or expectancy not coupled with any interest in or growing out of property cannot be made the subject of a mortgage. Skipper v. Stokes, 42 Ala. 255; Purcell v. Mather, 35 Ala. 570.

The words "goods and chattels," as to be afterwards acquired by the mortgagor may be valid, as between the parties, if the property is in existence at the time the instrument is executed, and if the goods claimed under the mortgage are clearly within its descriptive terms.<sup>1</sup> But the general rule is that a mortgage of goods which the mortgagor does not own when the mortgage is made, though he afterwards acquires them, is void as against his attaching creditors.<sup>2</sup> Yet if, after ac-used in the recording acts of West Virginia, do not embrace choses in action. Tingle v. Fisher, 20 W. Va. 497.

Stock of Goods.—A chattel mortgage on a stock of goods in trade may be prima facie fraudulent, as being out of the usual and ordinary course of business, but its validity may be established by proof. Moore v. Young, 4 Biss. (U. S. Cir.) 128.

Goods held by Bailee.—A mortgage of a chattel is held valid, although, at the time of the mortgage, a third person holds the chattel in possession under the mortgagor, and has a special property therein. McCalla v. Bullock, 2 Bibb (Ky.), 288.

Property not in Existence.—A mortgage of personal property cannot apply to goods not in existence, or not capable of being identified at the time of its execution. Milliman v. Naher, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 37.

1. Beall v. White, 94 U. S. 382; Scharfenburg v. Bishop, 35 Iowa. 60; Fejavery v. Broesch, 52 Iowa. 88; Stephens v. Pence, 56 Iowa. 257; Hughes v. Wheeler, 20 Repr. (Iowa), 331; Arques v. Wasson, 51 Cal. 620; Curtis v. Wilcox, 49 Mich. 425; Williams v. Winsor, 12 R. I. 9; Cayce v. Stovall, 50 Miss. 396; Ludwig v. Kipp, 20 Hun (N. Y.), 265; Hirshkind v. Israel, 18 S. Car. 157. Compare Hunter v. Bosworth, 43 Wis. 583; Case v. Fish, 58 Wis. 56; Hunt v. Bullock, 23 Ill. 320.

Stock in Trade.—A clause in a chattel mortgage on a stock of goods which purports to extend the lien of the mortgage over after acquired property does not render the mortgage absolutely void where there is no arrangement permitting the mortgagor to deal with the mortgaged goods, and no knowledge of such dealing on the part of the mortgagee, and the absence of any intent to defraud creditors is affirmatively found. Yates v. Olmstead, 56 N. Y. 632; Brett v. Carter, 2 Low. (U. S. Dist.) 458. Compare Chapin v. Cram, 40 Me. 561; In re Bloom, 17 Nat. Bank Reg. 425; Gardner v. McEwen, 19 N. Y. 123; Chatham Nat. Bank v. O'Brien, 6 Hun (N. Y.), 231; In re Manly, 2 Bond (U. S. Dist.), 261.

2. Jones v. Richardson, 10 Metc. (Mass.) 481; Looker v. Peckwell, 38 N. J. L. 253; Farmers' L. & T. Co. v. Long Beach Improvement Co., 27 Hun (N. Y.), 89.

Doctrine in Equity.—Equity treats a mortgage of property to be afterwards acquired as a contract binding in conscience to execute a mortgage upon it at the instant it comes into being, and will enforce specific performance. Further, it considers it as already done if no specific performance be requested, and then binds everybody to respect the equitable lien who knows of it, or, without knowing of it, has got the property without valuable consideration. Little Rock, etc., R. Co. v. Page, 35 Ark. 304.

A hotel was leased for a term of years by an indenture whereby, among other things, the lessor sold to the lessee the furniture of the hotel, and the lessee resold the same furniture to the lessor as collateral security for the rent, and further agreed that whatever furniture he should place on the premises should be considered as belonging to the lessor as additional security for the rent. New furniture was purchased by the lessee, which was afterwards levied upon by his creditors, and the lessor applied for an injunction to restrain the sheriff from selling the furniture under his levy. Held, that the contract constituted an equitable mortgage, and the prayer of the complainant should be granted. Smithurst v. Edmunds, 14 N. J. Eq. 408. Compare Griffith v. Douglass, 73 Me. 532; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 395.

Natural Produce.—At law a mortgage or sale of future acquired personal property, the mortgagor having acquired neither the thing nor the agent of its production at the time of making the contract, creates no valid subsisting property. But if the future acquired property be the product of present property in the mortgagor—as the wool growing on a flock of sheep, or the produce of a dairy or farm, or anything of that character—the mortgage will take effect upon the property as soon as it comes into existence, and will be perfectly binding at law. Conderman v. Smith, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 404.

quisition of the property by the mortgagor, and before any other rights have intervened, the mortgagee, by delivery from or by consent of the mortgagor, takes possession of the property under the mortgage conveyance, the title to the property, both in law and equity, will vest in the mortgagee as against all persons.<sup>1</sup> A valid chattel mortgage of growing crops may be made by the owner thereof, provided they have a potential and substantial existence at the time.<sup>2</sup> Whenever one person owns real estate upon which there are fixtures which belong to another who has a right to the possession of them, such owner may mortgage them by a chattel mortgage.<sup>1</sup> Although grass growing is in general parcel

1. Cook v. Cothrell, 11 R. I. 482; Williams v. Briggs, 11 R. I. 476; Walker v. Vaughn, 33 Conn. 577; Gregg v. Sanford, 24 Ill. 17; Titus v. Mabee, 25 Ill. 257; Chapin v. Cram, 40 Me. 561.

A stipulation in a chattel mortgage that property subsequently purchased by the mortgagor shall be subject to the same lien, and that the mortgagor will execute a new mortgage thereof, is an executory agreement, which, until it is executed by a new mortgage, does not bind after-acquired property; nor does it vitiate the mortgage as to property to which it attached at the time of its execution. Codman v. Freeman, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 306.

2. Minnesota Linseed Oil Co. v. Maginnis, 32 Minn. 193; Hansen v. Dennison, 7 Ill. App. 73; Rider v. Edgar, 54 Cal. 127; Stephens v. Tucker, 55 Ga. 543; Robinson v. Ezzell, 72 N. Car. 231. Compare Coman v. Thompson, 47 Mich. 22; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 706.

A chattel mortgage on a growing crop, as against an attaching creditor, continues to be a lien on the crop in the possession of the mortgagor after the severance and removal from the land. Rider v. Edgar, 54 Cal. 127.

Part of Crop.—A mortgage may be of part of a growing crop if the part mortgaged is so described as to be identified by parol evidence, and whether so identified or not is a question for the jury upon the proof. Stephens v. Tucker, 55 Ga. 543.

Maturity of Crop, when Material.—In some States crops may be mortgaged without regard to the stage of their growth toward maturity. New Hamp. Genl. Laws, 1878, c. 137, § 1; Nev. Act, 1885, c. 54; Wash. Code, § 1986; Cook v. Steel, 42 Tex. 53. But in New Mexico not until they are matured and gathered. New Mex. Comp. Laws, § 1586.

A crop is a "growing" crop, so that it can be mortgaged, giving a legal title to the mortgagee from the time the seed is deposited in the ground. Wilkinson v.

Ketler, 69 Ala. 435; Cotten v. Willoughby, 83 N. Car. 75; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 564; Hanson v. Dennison, 7 Ill. App. 73. Compare Comstocks v. Scales, 7 Wis. 159.

Unplanted Crops.—It is even held that a crop to be planted on one's own land or on land to be let to him, as well as a crop planted and in process of cultivation, is the subject of a valid mortgage. Rawlings v. Hunt, 90 N. Car. 270; Robinson v. Ezzell, 72 N. Car. 231; Senter v. Mitchell, 16 Fed. Rep. 206; Thrash v. Bennett, 57 Ala. 156; Hurst v. Bell, 72 Ala. 336; Watkins v. Wyatt, 9 Baxt. (Tenn.) 250. Compare Hutchinson v. Ford, 9 Bush (Ky.), 318; Comstocks v. Scales, 7 Wis. 159; Milliman v. Neher, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 37.

A mortgage of crops to be sown is too indefinite and uncertain to be valid against third persons unless at least designating the year or term in which they are to be grown. Pennington v. Jones, 57 Iowa, 37.

3. Godard v. Gould, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 662; McEntee v. Scott, 2 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 284; Deering v. Ladd, 22 Fed. Rep. 575; Waterloo Bank v. Elmore, 52 Iowa, 541.

The plaintiffs built a steam-engine for a mill, and before it left their shop took a chattel mortgage upon it, with a stipulation that they might take possession of and remove it whether attached to realty or otherwise. The engine was set up in the mill, which had been previously mortgaged, and which was subsequently sold to the defendant on foreclosure of the mortgage. Held, that the engine continued personal property, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to it. Eaves v. Estes, 10 Kans. 314. s. c., 15 Am. Rep. 345. See also Pierce v. George, 108 Mass. 78; s. c., 11 Am. Rep. 310 and note.

Where the owners of real estate execute a mortgage upon chattels which may properly be made fixtures, and subse-of the realty, yet when it is owned by one who does not also own the land, it is personalty, and may be mortgaged as such.<sup>1</sup>

6. What the Mortgage Covers and Secures.—Where live-stock is mortgaged, the natural increase and produce of the stock also becomes subject to the mortgage.<sup>2</sup> And where unfinished articles of manufacture are mortgaged, and the mortgagor afterwards adds labor and materials to them, the mortgagee will hold them as against a creditor of the mortgagor, provided they remain substantially the same as when mortgaged.<sup>3</sup> And the same is true of new material added to the mortgaged articles by way of repairs.<sup>4</sup> A mortgage may be made to cover a stock of merchandise as it changes by sales and purchases, but it ought only to be enforced to the extent of the value of the stock on hand at the time when it was given, at least as against any person having an earlier claim in respect to goods subsequently purchased.<sup>5</sup> But in gen-quently affix them to the real estate, no person having knowledge of such facts can, by purchase of the real estate or otherwise, acquire from the mortgagor any title to such chattels paramount to the mortgagee. Sowden v. Craig, 26 Iowa, 156.

But fixtures so permanently attached to the realty as to become a part thereof as between vendor and vendee pass to the vendee free from the lien of a prior chattel mortgage of which said vendee had no notice. A purchaser, in examining the title to real estate, is not required to examine the records of chattel mortgages. Brinholff v. Munzenmaier, 20 Iowa, 513.

1. Smith v. Jenks, 1 Denio (N. Y.), 580.

2. Forman v. Proctor, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 124; Kellogg v. Loveley, 46 Mich. 131; 3 C., 41 Am. Rep. 151; Gundy v. Biteler, 6 Ill. App. 510.

A mortgage of two cows, which was duly recorded, failed to include their increase. The mortgagor, who retained possession of the cows, sold their calves when they were eighteen months old. Held, that the mortgage would not defeat the sale. Winter v. Landphere, 42 Iowa, 471.

3. Harding v. Colburn, 12 Metc. (Mass.) 333; Crosby v. Baker, 6 Allen (Mass.), 295; Dehority v. Paxson, 97 Ind. 253.

A mortgage of leather, cut and prepared for the manufacture of shoes, covers shoes subsequently made from it by the mortgagor. Putnam v. Cushing, 10 Gray (Mass.) 314.

4. Repairs.—A mortgage of a gun, which is subsequently broken by accident and repaired, will be valid against an attaching creditor, although the lock and stock are changed, provided it is capable of identification by parol evidence. Comins v. Newton, 10 Allen (Mass.), 518.

Where the mortgagor of a vessel removed the old sails, which were worn out, and put on new ones, and the vessel passed into the possession of the mortgagee, held, that the new sails also passed as in the case of repairs, and that the mortgagor could not maintain trover for the sails. Southworth v. Isham, 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) 448.

New printing materials, purchased after the giving of a chattel mortgage on the establishment to supply the wear, decay, and destruction of the old, and which have been so commingled with the old as not to be readily distinguished, would be included in the mortgage and become a part of the mortgaged property by accession, but if so kept separate as to be readily distinguishable, would not be so included. Fowler v. Hoffman, 31 Mich. 215.

5. Goodrich v. Williams, 50 Ga. 425 (construing Ga. Rev. Code, § 1954). Chisholm v. Crittenden, 45 Ga. 213.

If a mortgagor, who is intrusted with the possession of the mortgaged goods, intermix them, purposely or through want of proper care, and without the consent of the mortgagee, with other property of his own, so that they cannot be distinguished, the whole mass is subject to the lien and operation of the mortgage. Willard v. Rice, 11 Metc. (Mass.) 493; Dunning v. Stearns, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 630; Adams v. Wildes, 107 Mass. 123; Fuller v. Paige, 26 Ill. 358; Simmons v. Jenkins, 76 Ill. 479. Compare Wilcox v. Jackson, 7 Colo. 521; Hamilton v. Rogers, 8 Md. 301.

H. bought a stock of goods from A., gave him a mortgage thereon for the pureral the lien of the mortgage will be restricted to such articles as are specifically mentioned in it or clearly embraced within its terms.<sup>1</sup> Where personal property is mortgaged to secure a debt, and the mortgagor exchanges such property for other property, with the assent of the mortgagee, the latter property cannot be held under the mortgage, at least as against third persons.<sup>2</sup> A mortgage of personal chattels which, under the statutes, is fraudulent and void as to a part of the chattels covered by it (e.g., as being intended to delay and defraud creditors), is void altogether.<sup>3</sup>

A chattel mortgage made to secure future advances is not on that account fraudulent as a matter of law.<sup>4</sup> The fact that a chase-money, and afterwards formed a copartnership with S., who furnished goods of equal value. Held, that purchases made by the firm of S. & H., to supply the deficiency made by sales from the stock bought from A., were not subject to the mortgage. Anderson v. Howard, 49 Ga. 313.

A mortgage of all the goods in a certain store covers the goods, though moved to another place. Wheelden v. Wilson, 44 Me. 1.

1. A chattel mortgage on the "fixtures, furniture, and appliance used in and about the carrying on of" a certain store, does not cover wagons and teams used for the delivery of goods. Van Patten v. Leonard, 55 Iowa, 520.

A mortgage of "groceries" contained in a "country and village grocery store," does not include pails, shovels, and the like, although such goods are usually kept for sale in such a store. Fletcher v. Powers, 131 Mass. 333.

A piano, billiard table, and paintings are included in a mortgage of "all the furniture" in a certain house. Sumner v. Blackslee, 59 N. H. 242; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 196.

A chattel mortgage of a stock of goods and "all books of account and rights of credit arising out of said business," was held not to cover subsequently accruing accounts on sales with the mortgagee's consent in the regular course of trade. Lorimer v. Allyn, 64 Iowa, 725. See La-hbrooks v. Hatheway, 52 Mich. 124; Kemp v. Carnley, 3 Duer (N. Y.), 1.

A mortgage of "the goods and chattels now in" the mortgagor's store, "a schedule of which is hereunto annexed," covers only the goods in the store of which a schedule was made. Partridge v. White, 59 Me. 564.

2. Rhines v. Phelps, 3 Gilm. (Ill.) 455; Sharpe v. Pearce, 74 N. Car. 600; Rose v. Bevan, 10 Md. 466; Barnard v. Eaton, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 294. But it might be as between the parties. Sharpe v. Pearce, 74 N. Car. 600.

No verbal agreement entered into between the mortgagor and mortgagee after the execution of a chattel mortgage can, as between the mortgagee and a subsequent purchaser from the mortgagor, subject property not originally included within the mortgage to its terms, or give the mortgagee a lien thereon. Powers v. Freeman, 2 Lans. (N. Y.) 127. But it might bind the parties themselves. Burns v. Campbell, 71 Ala. 271.

The terms of a mortgage cannot be controlled, nor fraud in its execution shown, by the understanding of a witness as to what property was covered by it, especially when he does not state when he had this understanding. Hurd v. Gallaher, 14 Iowa, 394.

A mortgagee of personal property has no claim upon a note taken by the mortgagor in payment of the property and transferred to a third person, having no notice that the note was given for mortgaged property. Kahler v. Hanson, 53 Iowa, 698.

3. Russell v. Wynne, 37 N. Y. 591; Yates v. Olmstead, 56 N. Y. 632. Compare Barron v. Morris, 14 Nat. Bank. Reg. 371; State v. Tasker, 31 Mo. 445.

But the validity of a mortgage is not in the least affected by the fact that the mortgagee holds other independent collateral security for the debt secured by the mortgage. Ayres v. Wattson, 57 Pa. St. 360.

4. Jones v. Indemnity Co., 101 U. S. 622; Lawrence v. Tucker, 23 How. (U. S.) 14; Holbrook v. Baker, 5 Me. 309; Googins v. Gilmore, 47 Me. 9; Boswell v. Goodwin, 31 Conn. 74; Brown v. Kiefer, 71 N. Y. 610; Ackerman v. Hunsicker, 85 N. Y. 43; Carpenter v. Blote, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 491; Steiner v. McCall, 61 Ala. 406; Speer v. Skinner, 35 Ill. 282; Carter v. Rewey, 62 Wis. 552; Berry v. O'Connor, 19 Repr. (Minn.)

chattel mortgage is given for a sum greater than the actual liability of the mortgagor to the mortgagee, does not of itself render the mortgage void at law.<sup>1</sup> The fact that a chattel mortgage appears on its face to be given to secure an absolute debt, but, in fact, was in good faith given to secure against a contingent liability as surety, does not avoid it as to creditors of the mortgagee.<sup>2</sup> A 574; Madigan v. Mead, 31 Minn. 94; Necklin v. Nelson, 19 Repr. (Oreg.) 181; Jones on Chatt. Mtgs. §§ 94-97; Herman on Chatt. Mtgs. § 50.

Present and Future Debts.—In the absence of any showing of fraud, a chattel mortgage given as continuing security to cover present and future indebtedness is valid as to the mortgagor's creditors. Brown v. Kiefer, 71 N. Y. 610; Speer v. Skinner, 35 Ill. 282; Googins v. Gilmore, 47 Me. 9; Fairbanks v. Bloomfield, 5 Duer (N. Y.), 434; Lawrence v. Tucker, 23 How. (U. S.) 14.

As to whether a mortgage which, on its face, is given to secure a present debt, but which is known to have been given only to secure future advances or credits, is valid as against creditors or purchasers, see Westcott v. Gunn, 4 Duer (N. Y.), 107.

If the condition of a mortgage is broad enough to cover future claims, it will be construed to apply to existing debts or liabilities, if the language does not forbid such construction, and the mortgage will not be void for that cause as to existing claims. Page v. Ordway, 40 N. H. 253.

Future Advances Must be Contemplated.

—A chattel mortgage cannot be extended to cover advances not contemplated at the time of its execution. Sims v. Mead, 29 Kans. 124. Or not expressed in the instrument. Driver v. McLaughlin, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 596.

A mortgage of personal property given to secure the payment of such sums as may thereafter become due to the mortgagee is not a valid security, as against a judgment creditor of the mortgagor, for claims accruing after the property was attached in his suit, and the mortgagee summoned as trustee. Barnard v. Moore, 8 Allen (Mass.), 273.

Partnership Debts.—A mortgage by a firm, though valid to secure future advances, cannot inure to secure advances made to their successors after a dissolution of the original firm. Monnot v. Ibert, 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 24.

Renewal Notes.—A mortgage "for the better security of two notes," etc., the condition of which was that the mortgage should cease if the mortgagor paid the said notes "on the days they respectively mature," does not secure notes given in renewal of the original mortgage notes, they being given up. Ayres v. Wattson, 57 Pa. St. 360.

1. Frost v. Warren, 42 N. Y. 204; Goff v. Rogers, 71 Ind. 459; Barkon v. Sanger, 47 Wis. 500. But if the amount is materially larger than that due, this may be a badge of fraud, and the question is for the jury. Goff v. Rogers, 71 Ind. 459.

To render a chattel mortgage void in law, because taken for a larger amount than was in fact due the mortgagee, it must appear that it was so taken intentionally, and not by mere mistake, in computation or otherwise. Kalk v. Fielding, 50 Wis. 339.

But the taking a chattel mortgage for a greater amount than is due, from a party known by the mortgagee to be in failing circumstances and pressed by his creditors, is conclusive evidence of fraud. Butts v. Peacock, 23 Wis. 359.

Justly Due.—The sum "justly due" upon a chattel mortgage given to secure future contingent liabilities, and to be ascertained by the court where the property is attached, and the mortgagee summoned as trustee under Mass. Genl. Stats. ch. 123, § 67, is that sum which will fully secure the mortgagee against all such liabilities covered by the mortgage. Rogers v. Abbott, 128 Mass. 102.

The word "due" in a stipulation contained in a chattel mortgage, providing for insurance for the mortgagee's benefit in a sum equal to the full amount due on the mortgage, is construed to be synonymous with "owing," and to contemplate insurance to the extent of the amount remaining unpaid. Fowler v. Hoffman, 31 Mich. 215.

2. Goodheart v. Johnson, 88 Ill. 58. Compare Belknap v. Wendell, 31 N. H. 92. See Treat v. Gilmore, 49 Me. 34.

A clause in a chattel mortgage given as security to an accommodation indorser for the payment of certain notes therein named, providing that the mortgagor would indemnify the mortgagee for all damages, costs, etc., which he had incurred or might incur, or in any way become liable for, on account or by reason of the use of his name as indorser or otherwise, mortgage founded on a usurious consideration is utterly void against all other liens.<sup>1</sup>

7. Nature of Mortgagor's Interest.—While the mortgagor of personal property remains in possession, before default, he has such an interest that he may (unless forbidden by the terms of the mortgage) sell and deliver the mortgaged goods, and convey to the purchaser all the interest which he himself has, the purchaser holding subject to the mortgage; and the latter may in turn, before default, sell and deliver to another person, with the same effect; and the remedy of the mortgage, upon breach of condition, is to follow the property into the hands of the last purchaser.<sup>2</sup> And until a chattel mortgage becomes absolute by non-performance of its condition, the mortgagor has an interest in the chattels which is liable to levy and sale on execution, and the purchaser takes subject to the mortgage, and acquires the right of redemption.<sup>3</sup> for the mortgagor's accommodation or benefit, applies to and covers other similar notes outstanding at the date of the mortgage, although not specified therein. Ripley v. Larmouth, 56 Barb. (N. Y.) 21.

If a mortgage of personal property is given to secure a debt, liability, or agreement, the debt, etc., must be strictly between the mortgagor and mortgagee. Parker v. Morrison, 46 N. H. 280.

Where a chattel mortgage is made as security for the payment, "according to its tenor," of a promissory note, payable at a day certain, which has passed, the condition must be understood to be the payment of the note in its then existing state. Pettis v. Kellogg, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 456.

1. Thompson v. Van Vechten, 27 N. Y. 568; Leslie v. Hoffman, 1 Edm. Sel. Cas. (N. Y.) 475.

Where a chattel mortgage was made to secure in part a valid debt, and in part the payment of a note given upon a usurious agreement, held, that the mortgage could only be enforced to the extent of the valid debt, and as to the residue it was void. Langdon v. Gray, 52 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 387; Vesey v. Ockington, 16 N. H. 479.

Where a chattel mortgage on its face and by its terms is given to secure a usurious note, but the note secured by it expresses a legal rate of interest, the mortgage is only apparently and not in fact usurious, and therefore is valid. Ward v. Anderberg, 17 Repr. (Minn.) 154.

Violation of Statutes.—A mortgage made to secure the payment of promissory notes, part of the consideration of which is spirituous liquors sold in violation of law, is wholly void. Brigham v. Potter, 14 Gray (Mass.), 522. So of a debt which is in contravention of the insolvent laws. Denny v. Dana, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 160.

2. Hall v. Sampson, 35 N. Y. 277; Goulet v. Asseler, 22 N. Y. 228; Hamill v. Gillespie, 48 N. Y. 556; Hathaway v. Brayman, 42 N. Y. 322; s. c., 1 Am. Rep. 524; Gardner v. Morrison, 12 Ala. 517. Compare Travis v. Bishop, 13 Metc. (Mass.) 304; Hurt v. Reeves, 5 Hayw. (Tenn.) 50. See infra, §§ 11, 13, 16 of this article.

3. Champlin v. Johnson, 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 606; Hull v. Carnley, 11 N. Y. 501; Hamill v. Gillespie, 48 N. Y. 556; Olds v. Andrews, 66 Ind. 147; Durfee v. Grinnell, 69 Ill. 371; Nelson v. Ferris, 30 Mich. 497.

Whether or not, under the laws of South Carolina, there remains such a legal estate in the mortgagor of a chattel, at least until breach of condition, as is the proper subject of levy and sale under execution, he certainly has the right to continued possession and use of the chattel until that event, unless expressly denied in the instrument. McKnight v. Godon, 13 Rich. (S. Car.) 222.

After Default.—After the debt has become due the mortgagee acquires an absolute title, and the mortgagor, although remaining in possession, has no longer any interest which can be levied upon and sold by virtue of an execution. Champlin v. Johnson, 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 606; Judson v. Easton, 58 N. Y. 664; Nichols v. Mead, 2 Lans. (N. Y.) 222.

One who gives a chattel mortgage, specifying no time of payment, to secure a debt already overdue, has thereafter no leviable interest in the mortgaged chattels. The mortgagee becomes the absolute owner, and the interest of the mortgagor is merely the right to pay off the mortgage debt, and his possession is that

Where a chattel mortgage specifically defines the circumstances under which the mortgagee shall become entitled to the possession of the property, the law implies an agreement that it is to remain meantime in the mortgagor.<sup>1</sup>

8. Validity, by What Law Governed.—The general rule is, that a chattel mortgage which is valid under the laws of the State where it was executed, both as between the immediate parties thereto and as against third persons, will be so held by the courts of a sister State to which the property may be removed.<sup>2</sup> And if a mortgage is valid where it is made, and if it is executed and recorded according to the laws of the State or country of its execution, it will be enforced in the courts of another State or country as a matter of comity, although it is not executed according to the requirements of the law of the latter State; and this is because of the general principle that the law of the place of contract governs as to the nature, validity, construction, and effect of the contract.<sup>3</sup> of a bailee. Battes v. Ripp, 1 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 78.

1. Hall v. Sampson, 35 N. Y., 274.

Although property is mortgaged by one person to another, that does not authorize any one but the mortgagee, or one claiming under him, to take the property from the mortgagor, and if any other person does so he will be liable for more than nominal damages. Tallman v. Jones, 13 Kans. 438.

2. Offutt v. Flagg, 10 N. H. 46; Ferguson v. Clifford, 37 N. H. 86; Jones v. Taylor, 30 Vt. 42; Taylor v. Boardman, 25 Vt. 581; Cobb v. Buswell, 37 Vt. 337; Bigelow v. Bridge Co., 14 Conn. 583; Rhode Island Bank v. Danforth, 14 Gray (Mass.), 123; Martin v. Hill, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 631; Whitman v. Conner, 40 N. Y. Super. Ct. 339; Ryan v. Clanton, 3 Strobb. (S. Car.) 411; Barker v. Stacy, 25 Miss. 477; Hall v. Pillow, 31 Ark. 32; Blystone v. Burgett, 10 Ind. 28; Ames Iron Works v. Warren, 76 Ind. 512; Simms v. McKee, 25 Iowa, 341; Smith v. McLean, 24 Iowa, 322; Feurt v. Rowell, 62 Mo. 524.

Thus the Vermont rule of law requiring a change of possession to render valid a chattel mortgage does not apply to a mortgage made in another State, where the parties resided and where the property was situated at the time the mortgage was executed, when no change of possession is required by the law of that State; and the property when subsequently brought into Vermont by the mortgagor, with the consent of the mortgagee, cannot be attached by the creditors of the former. Cobb v. Buswell, 37 Vt. 337.

Louisiana.—Chattel mortgages being unknown to the laws of Louisiana, they cannot be enforced in that State, where movables are not susceptible of being mortgaged, and the supreme court is not bound by the comity of nations to enforce a contract which, if made there, could not defeat the rights acquired by attachment under the State law. Delop v. Windsor, 26 La. Ann. 185.

Invalid at Common Law.—A chattel mortgage, appearing on its face to have been executed in another State, will not be upheld to defeat the title of an innocent purchaser here, though shown to have been recorded in the county where executed, it not being valid at common law and not shown to be valid by the lex loci contractus. Blystone v. Burgett, 10 Ind. 28.

Lex Situs Governs.—The law of the State in which personal property is at the time of its being mortgaged, as to the steps necessary to be taken to give the mortgage validity as against creditors or subsequent purchasers or incumbrancers, governs when the mortgage is relied on in the courts of that State as the basis of an action or a defence, although the mortgage may have been executed in another State and for the purpose of securing an obligation made and to be performed in the latter. Whitman v. Conner, 40 N. Y. Super. Ct. 339.

The registration of a chattel mortgage in Missouri, the residence of the parties, while the property mortgaged is in Kansas, is not sufficient notice to creditors in Kansas. Golden v. Cockril, 1 Kans. 259. See Langworthy v. Little, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 109.

3. Offutt v. Flagg, 10 N. H. 46; Ferguson v. Clifford, 37 N. H. 86; Bigelow v.

9. Registration.—It is provided in nearly all the States that chattel mortgages shall be filed in a designated office—or recorded, or registered—or else they shall not be valid as against creditors of the mortgagor or subsequent purchasers or incumbrancers without notice, unless the property mortgaged is delivered to and retained by the mortgagee.<sup>1</sup> The object of requiring a chattel mortgage Bridge Co., 14 Conn. 583; Langworthy v. Little, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 109; Rhode Island Bank v. Danforth, 14 Gray (Mass.), 123; Tyler v. Strang, 21 Barb. (N. Y.), 198; Nichols v. Mase, 25 Hun (N. Y.), 640; Whitman v. Conner, 40 N. Y. Super. Ct. 339; Martin v. Hill, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 631; Edgerly v. Bush, 81 N. Y. 199; Wilson v. Carson, 12 Md. 54; Ryan v. Clanton, 3 Strobb. (S. Car.) 411; Barker v. Stacy, 25 Miss. 471; Beall v. Williamson, 14 Ala. 55; Hall v. Pillow, 31 Ark. 32; Kanaga v. Taylor, 7 Ohio St. 134; s. c., 70 Am. Dec. 62; Blystone v. Burgett, 10 Ind. 28; Ames Iron Works v. Warren, 76 Ind. 512; Arnold v. Potter, 22 Iowa, 194; Smith v. McLean, 24 Iowa, 322; Simms v. McKee, 25 Iowa, 341; Feurt v. Rowell, 62 Mo. 524.

Thus where a chattel mortgage has been duly executed and recorded in Massachusetts, and the mortgagor removes with such property into New Hampshire, a new record of the mortgage need not be made in the latter State. Offutt v. Flagg, 10 N. H. 46; Nichols v. Mase, 25 Hun (N. Y.), 640.

Rule in Michigan.—In Montgomery v. Wight, 8 Mich. 143, it is said that laws for recording chattel mortgages can have no force beyond the jurisdiction of the sovereignty enacting them, and the record of a chattel mortgage in Canada is therefore no notice to the creditors of the mortgagor who shall find the property in his possession in Michigan.

So of a chattel mortgage recorded in another State. Boydson v. Goodrich, 49 Mich. 65.

1. Maine Rev. Stats. c. 91, § 1; New Hamp. Gen'l Ls. 1878, c. 137, § 2; Verm. Rev. Ls. 1880, § 1966; Mass. Pub. Stats. 1882, c. 192, § 1; act of 1883, c. 73; Rhode Island Pub. Stats. 1882, c. 176, § 9; New York act 1833, c. 279, § 1; New Jer. act of 1878, c. 234; act of 1881, c. 179, § 4; act of 1885, c. 244, § 4; Maryl. Rev. Code 1878, art. 44, § 45; Virg. Code of 1873, c. 114, § 5; N. Car. Code of 1883, § 1254; S. Car. Gen'l Stats. 1882, § 2346; Georgia Code 1882, § 1956; Fla. Dig. 1881, c. 31, § 1; Ala. Code, § 2162; Tex. Rev. Stats. 1879, § 4341; West Va. Rev. Stats. 1878, art. 96, § 5; Tenn. Code 1884, § 2809; Kans. Comp. Ls.

1879, c. 68, § 9; Mansfield's (Ark.) Dig. §§ 4742, 4750; Ohio Rev. Stats. 1880, § 4150; Ind. Rev. Stats. § 4913; Ill. Rev. Stats. art. 95, § 1; Iowa Rev. Code, § 1923; Mo. Rev. Stats. § 2503; Mich. Annot. Stats. § 6193; Wis. Rev. Stats. § 2313; Minn. Gen'l Stats. 1878, c. 39, § 1; Nebr. Comp. Stats. pt. 1, c. 32, § 14; Cal. Code, § 7957; Oreg. Gen'l Ls. 1872, c. 6, § 46; Nev. Comp. Ls. § 294; Colo. Gen'l Stats. §§ 163, 172; Wash. Code, § 1987; Dak. Civ. Code, § 1744; Montana act 1881, p. 3, §§ 1, 4; Wyom. act 1882, c. 11, § 2.

Bills of Sale.—"A bill of sale, absolute upon its face, but executed as a security and intended to operate as a mortgage, is within the operation of a statute making void a mortgage not recorded in case the property be not delivered to and retained by the mortgagee." Jones on Chatt. Migs. § 275; Necklin v. Nelson, 19 Repr. (Oreg.) 181; Kuhn v. Graves, 9 Iowa, 305; Cooper v. Brock, 41 Mich. 491; Fuller v. Parrish, 3 Mich. 211; Comm'rs v. Babcock, 5 Oreg. 472.

Vessels.—The statute in relation to the registration of chattel mortgages does not apply to property in vessels which are duly registered and enrolled according to the laws of the United States. Wood v. Stockwell, 55 Me. 76; Cunningham v. Tucker, 14 Fla. 251.

Schedule or Inventory.—A schedule referred to in a chattel mortgage as a part of the same must, equally with the mortgage, be recorded in the town clerk's office, to give effectual notice to the public. Sawyer v. Pennell, 1 App. (Me.) 167. Compare Lund v. Fletcher, 39 Ark. 325.

But if a chattel mortgage is to secure a written agreement, the two are distinct contracts, and no copy of the agreement need be filed with the mortgage in order to render the latter operative against third persons. Byram v. Gordon, 11 Mich. 531.

Lost Mortgage.—Where a chattel mortgage is lost before being recorded as provided by law, the mortgagee cannot protect himself against a levy of execution by the mortgagor's creditors by recording a copy of the mortgage certified as correct by the justice before whom the orig-

to be filed or recorded is to give notice of its existence to creditors and subsequent purchasers when the mortgagor retains possession of the mortgaged property; hence if the actual possession is transferred to and continues in the mortgagee, that is sufficient notice, and the necessity for filing or recording the mortgage fails.<sup>1</sup> And a chattel mortgage is good as between the parties to it without any filing or change of possession.<sup>2</sup> But it is void as against execution creditors who levy after the making of the mortgage, but prior to its recording.<sup>3</sup> Chattel mortgages are generally required to be filed in the office of the town-clerk, or in the county where the mortgagor resides.<sup>4</sup> In several of the States there are statutory inal was acknowledged, the copy not being acknowledged. Porter v. Dement, 35 Ill. 478.

1. Morrow v. Reed, 30 Wis. 81; Greeley v. Reading, 74 Mo. 309; Wescott v. Gunn, 4 Duer (N. Y.), 107.

In order that a chattel mortgage should be valid without being recorded, there must be an immediate delivery of the goods mortgaged, followed by an actual and continued change of possession. It is not sufficient, as against attaching creditors, that the mortgagee takes possession before the attachment issues. Pars-hall v. Eggart, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 367.

The registration of a mortgage is intended solely for the benefit and protection of the mortgagee, and rests wholly in his election, and in the absence of an agreement, express or implied, to the contrary, he cannot hold the mortgagor liable for the costs or fees of registration. Simon v. Sewell, 64 Ala. 241.

2. Stewart v. Platt, 101 U. S. 731; Hodgson v. Butts, 3 Cranch (U. S.), 138; Winsor v. McLellan, 2 Story (U. S. Cir.), 492; Smith v. Moore, 11 N. H. 55; Wescott v. Gunn, 4 Duer (N. Y.), 107; Williamson v. Railroad, 26 N. J. Eq. 398; Pancoast v. American Heating Co., 66 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 49; Hudson v. Warner, 2 Harr. & J. (Md.) 415; Merrick v. Avery, 14 Ark. 370; McTaggart v. Rose, 14 Ind. 230; Fuller v. Paige, 26 Ill. 358; Morrow v. Reed, 30 Wis. 81.

3. Cass v. Rothman, 42 Ohio St. 380; Garland v. Plummer, 72 Me. 397; Sheldon v. Connor, 48 Me. 584; Rich v. Roberts, 48 Me. 548.

4. Where Filed.—It is sufficient if a chattel mortgage is filed in the clerk's office of the town where the mortgagor resided at the time of its execution, though he may be a resident of another town at the time of filing. Hicks v. Williams, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 523.

A record of a chattel mortgage in a town where the mortgagee resides, if that be not the town where the mortgagor resides, is of no validity. Stowe v. Meserve, 13 N. H. 46.

If the case discloses nothing as to the residence of the mortgagor, the validity of the mortgage, though recorded, is not established. Bither v. Buswell, 51 Me. 601; Smith v. Jenks, 1 Denio (N. Y.), 580.

Where a township or a part of a township is annexed to the corporate limits of a city or village wherein the office of the county recorder is kept, such recorder's office does not become the place for deposit of chattel mortgages executed by residents of such annexed territory. Curtiss v. McDougal, 26 Ohio St. 66.

Removal of Mortgagor to Another Town.—The removal of the mortgagor from the town in which he resided when the mortgage was executed and where it was duly recorded, and the taking of the mortgaged property with him, does not invalidate the record of the mortgage or necessitate the recording of it again in the town to which he has removed. Pease v. Odenkirchen, 42 Conn. 415; Elson v. Barrier, 56 Miss. 394; Offut v. Flagg, 10 N. H. 46; Hoit v. Remick, 11 N. H. 285; Barrows v. Turner, 50 Me. 127; Brigham v. Weaver, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 298; Hicks v. Williams, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 523.

"The object in requiring a mortgage to be recorded is to give publicity to such conveyances, and to provide sources of information common to all persons, in order to enable purchasers and creditors and all others to determine with some degree of facility, convenience, and certainty the question of title to property whenever they may be interested to know it; while at the same time it is not among the purposes of the registry acts to subject a bona fide mortgagee, who is of course a creditor, to the inconvenience, if not impracticability, of the constant vigilance and ceaseless watching necessary to guard and secure his interests if he were obliged to record his mortgage in every town into which the mortgagor provisions requiring that chattel mortgages, in order to be valid against creditors, must be recorded or filed within a certain period after their date. In some this period is described as "forthwith;" while in others it ranges from ten to forty days.<sup>1</sup> And even in the absence of such a provision, neglect seasonably to record a mortgage on a stock of goods, through which innocent parties are led to intrust goods with the mortgagor, deprives it of priority of lien as against them.<sup>2</sup> A chattel mortgage is to all intents and might see fit to remove with the property. If he were required to do this, the mortgagee's security would be rendered worthless by a seizure of the mortgaged property under process of law at the instance of a creditor of the mortgagor." Mr. Freeman's note to Kanaga v. Taylor, 70 Am. Dec. 67.

Removal to Another County.—A mortgage of a chattel once properly recorded in the county where the chattel was and where the mortgagor lived need not be again recorded because the chattel is removed to another county; the first record affords constructive notice to the world. Griffith v. Morrison, 58 Tex. 46; Bevans v. Bolton, 31 Mo. 437. Compare Boydson v. Goodrich, 49 Mich. 65.

Where a party living in one county executes a mortgage upon a crop to be planted on land bought by him in another county, to which he contemplates removing, such mortgage may be properly registered in the latter county, the mortgagor having actually made such removal after the registration of the paper. Harris v. Jones, 83 N. Car. 317.

Joint Owners.—A chattel mortgage executed by two or more joint mortgagors residing in different towns in the same State is invalid as against third persons unless it is recorded in every town in which any of the mortgagors resides. Morrill v. Sanford, 49 Me. 566; Rich v. Roberts, 50 Me. 395; Altman v. Guy, 41 Ohio St. 598.

Partnership.—A partnership having a definite local abiding-place has a residence there within the meaning of the statute requiring chattel mortgages to be filed in the township or city of the residence of the mortgagor, if a resident of the State; and a chattel mortgage given by the firm in the firm name, and which covers partnership property, is properly filed in the township where one of the partners resides and where is the seat or abiding-place of the firm, although the other partner is a non-resident of the State. Hubbardston Lumber Co. v. Covert, 35 Mich. 254; Briggs v. Leitelt, 41 Mich. 79.

In Indiana, on the other hand, it is held that a mortgage on partnership goods, executed by one partner on behalf of all, must be recorded in each county where a partner resides, to be valid against creditors. Granger v. Adams, 90 Ind. 87.

Corporations.—With reference to recording chattel mortgages, the principal office within the State of the corporation mortgagor, and not the situs of the property, determines the county of residence. Wright v. Bundy, 11 Ind. 398.

A chattel mortgage executed by a joint-stock association need only be filed in the office of the clerk of the town where the company's business is principally conducted, not wherever stockholders reside. Nelson v. Neil, 15 Hun (N. Y.), 383.

1. "Forthwith." Kans. Comp. Ls. 1879, c. 68, § 9; Texas Rev. Stats. 1879, § 4341; New Mexico Comp. Ls. § 1587. Ten days. Ind. Rev. Stats. § 4913; Del. Laws, vol. 15, c. 477, § 1. Fifteen days. Mass. Pub. Stats. c. 192, § 1; act 1883, c. 73. Twenty days. Maryl. Rev. Code 1878, art. 44, § 50. Forty days. South Car. Gen'l Stats. 1882, § 2346.

In computing the time within which a chattel mortgage must be recorded, the day of execution must be excluded and the day of recording included. Towell v. Hollweg, 81 Ind. 154. A chattel mortgage is seasonably recorded in ten days from the time of its acceptance by the mortgagee. Eaton v. McKahan, 91 Ind. 109.

2. Simon v. Oppenheimer, 20 Fed. Repr. 553; Pond v. Skidmore, 40 Conn. 213.

But delay in recording a chattel mortgage does not at all affect its validity as between the parties, and avoids it only as against an intervening purchaser in good faith or an intervening judgment creditor. Wescott v. Gunn, 4 Duer (N. Y.), 107. And a chattel mortgage, if recorded, however long after its execution, is valid as against an attachment made after the record. McVay v. English, 30 Kans. 368.

The town clerk's certificate on the mortgage of his receipt of it for record at purposes "recorded" from the time it is deposited with the proper officer for record, and thereafter imparts notice; that it should be actually spread upon the record is not essential.<sup>1</sup> And it is "filed" when it is delivered to, and received and kept by, the proper officer for the purposes of notice mentioned in the statute.<sup>2</sup> The title to personal property does not vest in a mortgagee, by virtue of the mortgage, until a delivery of the instrument to him or his agent.<sup>3</sup> In order to prove the contents of a chattel mortgage on the trial, the original mortgage must be produced; a certified copy made by the clerk or register where the mortgage is filed is evidence only of the fact of its filing.<sup>4</sup>

10. Refiling.—In many of the States a chattel mortgage ceases to be valid at the expiration of a year from the time of filing or recording, unless the mortgage or a true copy is filed anew, or unless a new affidavit is made within the last thirty days, or other short period before the end of the year.<sup>5</sup> But refiling is not necessary the time stated proves the fact; and the further entry under the same date, of its being recorded in the town books, proves that it was so recorded on the same day. Head v. Goodwin, 37 Me. 181. Compare Jones v. Parker, 73 Me. 248.

Where the holder of a chattel mortgage sent a person to the town clerk's office to see if it was on file, and the agent, misunderstanding his instructions, withdrew the mortgage and took it to his principal, who with due diligence caused it to be refiled, held that the lien thereof remained as against one who, with knowledge of the facts, attached the property while the mortgage was absent from the files. Swift v. Hall, 23 Wis. 532.

1. Craig v. Dimock, 47 Ill. 308; Meherin v. Oaks, 20 Repr. (Cal.) 40; Jordan v. Farnsworth, 15 Gray (Mass.), 517.

A chattel mortgage delivered to the town clerk with orders not to record it until further notice, and not in fact recorded, cannot be considered as recorded, if the notice has not been given, even though the clerk may have noted thereon the time of receiving it. Town v. Griffith, 17 N. H. 165.

In the absence of a town clerk, a delivery of a chattel mortgage to a person in an adjoining office, not his deputy, and the clerk's memorandum of receipt as of the hour of delivery, according to such person's minute thereon, is a sufficient lodgment for record to give a lien therefrom. Fairbanks v. Davis, 50 Vt. 251.

The legality of a record as such is not impaired by its being in the handwriting of the grantor, it being in its appropriate place in the record book, and the presumption being that it was allowed by the register. Merrill v. Dawson, 1 Hemp. (U. S. Cir.) 563.

2. Gorham v. Summers, 25 Minn. 81.

3. Jewett v. Preston, 27 Me. 400; Foster v. Perkins, 42 Me. 168.

A mortgage of personal property, made by a debtor to secure a creditor without his knowledge, although recorded, is inoperative until it is approved or assented to by such creditor. Oxnard v. Blake, 45 Me. 602.

4. George v. Toll, 39 How. Pr. (N.Y.) 497. See Bissell v. Pearce, 28 N. Y. 252; Hewitt v. Morris, 37 N. Y. Super. Ct. 18.

5. New York Laws 1873, c. 501, p. 767; Laws 1833, c. 279, § 3; New Jer. Rev. Stats., Mortgages, 41; Ohio Rev. Stats. § 4155; Mich. Rev. Stats. § 6196; Kans. Comp. Ls. c. 68, § 11; Oreg. Genl. Stats. c. 6, § 48; Nev. Laws 1885, c. 54; Mont. Laws 1885, c. 4; Utah Laws 1885, c. 5; New Mex. Comp. Ls. § 1589.

In other States the refiling must be at the end of two years. Ill. Rev. Stats. 1883, art. 95, § 4; Wisc. Rev. Stats. § 2315; Minn. Genl. Stats. 1878, c. 39, § 3; act 1879, c. 65, § 3; Colo. Genl. Stats. 1883, § 165. In Dakota three years. Dak. Civ. Code, § 1748. In Nebraska five years. Neb. Comp. Stats. 1881, pt. 1, c. 32, § 16.

Where, after default by the mortgagor, an actual change of possession of the property has taken place, or the rights of the parties have been changed by some new act or contract in relation to the property which would render refiling an idle ceremony, the omission to refile the mortgage will not impair the rights of the mortgagee. Porter v. Parton, 34 N.Y. Super. Ct. 398.

A chattel mortgagor, by the concurrence and direction of the mortgagee, for purposes of protection against those persons as to whom no record was necessary in the first instance. And that the provision of the statute requiring refiling has not been complied with is no defence to an action brought against a person for afterwards wrongfully refusing to deliver up the mortgaged goods which he had purchased before the expiration of the year.<sup>1</sup>

11. Change of Possession.—It is the principle of the common law that where a chattel mortgage is silent as to the possession of the property, the mortgagee is entitled to immediate possession upon the execution of the mortgage.<sup>2</sup> Still it is quite customary to stipulate that indorsed on the mortgage, and signed, sealed, dated, and acknowledged a statement that "this chattel mortgage is here by renewed for one year from this date." Held to create a new mortgage, valid as against him and his creditors. Smith v. Hooper, 22 Hun (N.Y.), 11.

How Refiled.—Where the holder of a chattel mortgage, to secure a continuance of its validity after the expiration of a year, refiled the original with the statement required by statute indorsed thereon, held a sufficient compliance with the statute requiring that a "true copy" be again filed. Stockham v. Allard, 4 Thomp. & C. (N.Y.) 279.

Where Refiled.—Under a statute requiring refiling of a chattel mortgage in the clerk's office of the town where the mortgagor resides, a refiling in the town in which he formerly resided, when he has become a non-resident of the State, is of no avail. Dillingham v. Bolt, 37 N. Y. 198.

When Refiled.—In some States the refiling of the mortgage may be done at any time within thirty days before the expiration of the year. Newell v. Warren, 44 N.Y. 244; Edson v. Newell, 14 Minn. 228.

In others, in order to preserve the lien of the mortgage beyond the first year, the refiling of a copy as required by law must be done during the thirty days immediately preceding the expiration of the year; a refiling before the commencement of the thirty days is unavailing. National Bank v. Sprague, 20 N. J. Eq. 13; Biteler v. Baldwin, 42 Ohio St. 125. Compare Paine v. Mason, 7 Ohio St. 198.

Successive Refilings.—If it is desired to keep the mortgage alive after the first refiling, it is necessary, in several States, that a similar refiling should be made at the expiration of each successive period of time equal to that first limited. Mich. Rev. Stats. § 6197; Wisc. Rev. Stats. § 2316; Oreg. Genl. Stats. c. 6, § 49; Nevada Laws 1885, c. 54; Dak. Civ. Code, § 1748; New Mex. Comp. Laws, § 1589; Minn. Genl. Stats. 1878, c. 39, § 3; act 1879, c. 65, § 3; New York Laws 1873, c. 501, p. 767; Laws 1833, c. 279, § 3. Compare Newell v. Warren, 44 N.Y. 244.

Calculation of Days.—When the year expires on Sunday that day is included in the thirty days. Pain v. Mason, 7 Ohio St. 198; Nitchie v. Townsend, 2 Sandf. (N.Y.) 299.

A chattel mortgage must be refiled within one year from the hour of the next preceding filing. Fractions of a day are not to be disregarded in computing the year. Seamen v. Eager, 16 Ohio St. 209, 1. Manning v. Monaghan, 23 N. Y. 539; Wiles v. Clapp, 41 Barb. (N.Y.) 645.

But unless the mortgage is duly refiled it will be void as against a levy made within the year by an execution creditor of the mortgagor. Thompson v. Van Vechten, 6 Bosw. (N.Y.) 376.

A chattel mortgagee in possession need not renew his mortgage by affidavit in order to maintain an action for the possession of the property taken from him while the mortgage continued in full force. Bates v. Wilbur, 10 Wis. 415.

The omission to refile a chattel mortgage gives no rights to a subsequent mortgagee with notice. Hill v. Beebe, 13 N. Y. 556; Wetherell v. Spencer, 3 Mich. 123.

If a mortgage which under the statute should be refiled within a year is not filed until after the year, the lien is restored as against an execution issued after the refiling. Nixon v. Stanley, 33 Hun (N.Y.), 247.

2. Broadhead v. McKay, 46 Ind. 595; Wolfey v. Rising, 12 Kans. 535; Hickman v. Perrin, 6 Cold. (Tenn.) 135; Robinson v. Fitch, 26 Ohio St. 659. Compare Anderson v. Holmes, 14 S. Car. 162.

Where the mortgage does not provide that the mortgagor shall retain possession, the mortgagee of personal property may, if he can take possession of it peaceably, retain it until satisfaction of the mortgage, unless other liens have attached to it while in the possession of the mortgagor. Whisler v. Roberts, 19 Ill. 274.

the mortgagor shall retain the possession until default, or until the mortgagee shall deem himself insecure. And it seems to be the doctrine of the later English and American cases that when this is done, where the chattels are capable of manual transfer, a presumption of fraud arises as respects creditors and other third parties, but that this presumption can be rebutted by evidence showing the transaction to have been fair and honest, and disclosing a proper reason for retention of possession by the mortgagor.<sup>1</sup> Possession under a chattel mortgage, to be effectual, must be actual, and not merely constructive.<sup>2</sup>

A chattel mortgage on a stock of goods, reserving to the mortgagor the right to continue in possession and to sell the goods and replenish the stock in the ordinary course of business from time to time, with no provision that the proceeds of sales shall be in any

A mortgagee's right to the possession of mortgaged chattels is not affected by a garnishment suit against the mortgagor. Smith v. Circuit Judge, 53 Mich. 560.

A mortgagee who takes possession before default is answerable to the mortgagor for the value of any reasonable use to which the property is or could have been put, but not for remote damages. Jackson v. Hall, 84 N. Car. 489.

If he allows the chattels to return into the possession of the mortgagor on a forthcoming bond, the legal possession remains in the mortgagee, the mortgagor holding as his bailee. Moody v. Haselden, 1 S. Car. 129.

1. Alton v. Harrison, L. R. 4 Ch. App. 622; Martindale v. Booth, 3 B. & Ad. 498; Weaver v. Joule, 3 C. B. N. S. 309; Kleine v. Katzenberger, 20 Ohio St. 110; s. c., 5 Am. Rep. 630; Watson v. Williams, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 26; Brunswick v. McClay, 7 Neb. 137; Collins v. Myers, 16 Ohio, 547; Peck v. Land, 2 Kelly (Ga.) 1; Curd v. Miller, 7 Gratt. (Va.) 185; Frost v. Mott, 34 N.Y. 253; Griswold v. Sheldon, 4 N.Y. 581; Swift v. Hart, 12 Barb. (N.Y.) 530.

Question for Jury.—The question of fraud in a chattel mortgage which permits the mortgagor to retain possession of the chattels and act as apparent owner, is one of fact for a jury to decide. Brett v. Carter, 2 Low. (U.S.) 458.

And where evidence of good faith in a chattel mortgage has been given, to rebut the presumption of fraud arising from continued possession by the mortgagor, the finding of the jury thereon is conclusive. Ostrander v. Fay, 3 Abb. App. Dec. (N.Y.) 431.

Vermont.—In this State a chattel mortgage, not accompanied by a change of possession, is inoperative and void as against creditors of the mortgagor. Rus- sell v. Fillmore, 15 Vt. 130; Sturgis v. Warren, 11 Vt. 433.

A mortgagee in Maryland who permits the mortgagor to retain possession of the mortgaged chattels and bring them into Pennsylvania and sell them to a bona fide purchaser, loses all right thereto. MacCabe v. Blymyre, 9 Phila. (Pa.) 615.

Good between Parties.—Although the mortgagor retains possession, the mortgage will not, for that reason, be void as between the parties. The only question is as to its validity against subsequent purchasers and bona fide creditors. Morrow v. Turney, 35 Ala. 131; Hackett v. Manlove, 14 Cal. 85. See Winsor v. McLellan, 2 Story (U. S. Cir.), 492; Johnson v. Jeffries, 30 Mo. 423; Golden v. Cockril, 1 Kans. 259; Smith v. Moore, 11 N. H. 55; Smith v. McLean, 24 Iowa, 322.

2. Crandall v. Brown, 18 Hun (N. Y.), 461.

Symbolical Delivery.—See Fry v. Miller, 45 Pa. St. 441; Luckenbach v. Breckenstein, 5 Watts & S. (Pa.) 145; Morrow v. Reid, 30 Wis. 81; Holmes v. Crane, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 607.

Where only symbolical delivery of mortgaged chattels can be made, and they are left where the right of possession is uncertain, doubts must be decided in favor of creditors and against the mortgagee, since he could have protected himself fully by filing the mortgage. Anderson v. Brenneeman, 44 Mich. 198.

Where a firm, of which the mortgagor is a member, is in the use of mortgaged chattels, an agreement between the mortgagor and mortgagee, after default in payment, that a partner of the former shall retain possession of the property for the latter, the property remaining and being used as before, does not work a change of possession. Mere words will not effect way applied in reduction or discharge of the mortgage debt, is generally held fraudulent and void as to creditors, both in respect to the original stock and to additions thereto.<sup>1</sup> But in several of the States the opinion prevails that such a transaction is not void on its face, though it may afford a presumption of fraud.<sup>2</sup> In any a change in law when there is none in fact. Porter v. Parmly, 52 N.Y. 185.

1. Wells v. Langbein, 20 Fed. Rep. 183; Crooks v. Stuart, 2 McCrary (U. S. Cir.), 13; Matter of Manly, 2 Bond (U. S. Dist.), 261; Ranlett v. Blodgett, 17 N. H. 298; Gardner v. McEwen, 19 N.Y. 123; Edgell v. Hart, 13 Barb. (N.Y.) 380; Russell v. Winne, 37 N.Y. 591; Yates v. Olmstead, 65 Barb. (N.Y.) 43; Marston v. Vultee, 8 Bosw. (N. Y.) 129; Joseph v. Levi, 58 Miss. 843; Peiser v. Peticolas, 50 Tex. 638; Martin v. Ogden, 41 Ark. 186; Read v. Wilson, 22 Ill. 377; Simmons v. Jenkins, 76 Ill. 479; State v. Jacobs, 2 Mo. App. 183; Lodge v. Samuels, 50 Mo. 204; Steinart v. Deuster, 23 Wis. 136; Horton v. Williams, 21 Minn. 187; Orton v. Orton, 7 Oreg. 478; Gregory v. Whedon, 8 Nebr. 373.

And this effect cannot be avoided by a stipulation in the deed of trust (or mortgage) for monthly accounts to be rendered to the trustee, and for payment to him of the money received, to be applied under his direction to the payment of the current expenses of the business and in making purchases to replenish the stock. Joseph v. Levy, 58 Miss. 843.

Good between Parties.—A mortgage of a stock of goods with power to the mortgagor to sell in the ordinary course of trade, although fraudulent and void as to creditors and subsequent purchasers, is valid between the parties to it. And one who purchases the entire stock of goods, with intent to hinder creditors, cannot hold such goods against the mortgage, although it was not recorded until after the pretended purchase. Gregory v. Whedon, 8 Nebr. 373.

2. Lister v. Simpson, 38 N. J. Eq. 438; Cheatham v. Hawkins, 76 N. Car. 335; McLaughlin v. Ward, 77 Ind. 383; Morris v. Stern, 80 Ind. 227; Clark v. Hyman, 55 Iowa, 14; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 160; Barron v. Morris, 14 Nat. Bank. Reg. 371; People v. Bristol, 35 Mich. 28; Gay v. Bidwell, 7 Mich. 519.

If the mortgagee allows the mortgagor, who is a merchant or manufacturer, to remain in possession and sell the property in the usual course of trade, the mortgagor will be considered as acting as the agent of the mortgagee and receiving the money for him; but it will be different if the stock is sold otherwise than in the usual course of business. Miller v. Pancoast, 5 Dutch. (N. J.) 250.

Question for the Jury.—Several cases hold that good faith of the mortgage of a stock of merchandise left in the possession of the mortgagor to be retailed by him in the ordinary course of trade is a question of fact for the jury, to be determined upon all the circumstances of the case. Kleine v. Katzenberger, 20 Ohio St. 110; McFadden v. Fritz, 90 Ind. 590; Morse v. Riblet, 22 Fed. Repr. 501; Marsh v. Bird, 22 Fed. Repr. 576.

A mortgage by an insolvent person on a stock of goods, providing that the mortgagor may remain in possession for at least nine months, and stipulating that in case of an attempt to remove the goods from the town "and an unreasonable depreciation in value, or if from any other cause the security should become inadequate," the mortgagee may take possession, was held to afford the most cogent intrinsic evidence of fraud. Cheatham v. Hawkins, 80 N. Car. 161.

Mortgage Void only in Part.—It is said that a mortgage upon a stock of goods which authorizes the mortgagor to sell them and replace with others, at such times and in such manner as he may determine, and use the proceeds generally as he sees fit, is void as to such goods only as the power of sale relates to. In re Kahley, 2 Biss. (U. S. Cir.) 383; Catlin v. Currier, 1 Sawy. (U. S. Cir.) 7; Putnam v. Osgood, 51 N. H. 192; Nichols v. Hampton, 46 Ga. 253; Lund v. Fletcher, 39 Ark. 325; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 270; Bar-net v. Fergus, 51 Ill. 352.

An agreement in a mortgage of the stock of goods then in the mortgagor's store, that, until default, he might retain possession of the property and make sales, other goods of equal value being substituted for those sold, will not empower the mortgagor to put the mortgaged property into a partnership as his share of the capital. Barnard v. Eaton, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 294.

Sales to be for Mortgagor's own Benefit.

—Where a lien is ostensibly created on personal property by a mortgage, and the right is retained by the mortgagor to sell the property and appropriate the proceeds to his own use, such a transaction must be held void as against the policy of the law, as tending to delay and de-event, suffering property covered by a chattel mortgage to remain in the hands of the mortgagor after default is a fraud per se, and not open to explanation.<sup>1</sup>

12. Validity as against Third Persons.—The only persons who can claim protection against unrecorded chattel mortgages are creditors without notice, innocent purchasers for value, and subsequent mortgagees. Thus an unrecorded chattel mortgage where the mortgagor retains possession is valid against attaching creditors who have actual notice of its existence at any time before levy.<sup>2</sup> So a chattel mortgage which is good as to the parties executing it will hold, without record or renewal, as to third persons who purchase with knowledge of the mortgage, as such purchasers are not considered bona fide; they acquire only the right of redemption.<sup>3</sup> fraud creditors. Greenebaum v. Wheeler, 90 Ill. 296; Brackett v. Harvey, 91 N. Y. 214; Steinart v. Deuster, 23 Wis. 136.

Proceeds of Sales to be Applied on Mortgage Debt.—A chattel mortgage which permits the mortgagor to retain possession and sell is not unlawful or fraudulent per se, if the proceeds are to be paid over to the mortgagee or otherwise applied on the mortgage debt. Brackett v. Harvey, 91 N. Y. 214; Ford v. Williams, 24 N. Y. 359; Conkling v. Shelley, 28 N. Y. 360; Miller v. Lockwood, 32 N. Y. 293; Robinson v. Elliott, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 524; Metzner v. Graham, 57 Mo. 404; Adler v. Claffin, 17 Iowa. 89; Kleine v. Katzenberger, 20 Ohio St. 110; s. c., 5 Am. Rep. 630; Abbott v. Goodwin, 20 Me. 407.

Where by agreement the mortgagor is to continue in possession with the right to sell and pay over the proceeds to the mortgagee, the sales made and proceeds received by the mortgagor under such an arrangement should, as between the creditors of the latter and the mortgagee, be considered applied in payment and satisfaction of the mortgage, whether the money is ever actually paid over to the mortgagee or not. Conkling v. Shelley, 28 N. Y. 360.

1. Reed v. Eames, 19 Ill. 594; Wilson v. Rountree, 72 Ill. 570.

2. Cragin v. Carmichael, 11 Nat. Bank Reg. 511; Allen v. McCalla, 25 Iowa, 464. Compare Farmers' L. & T. Co. v. Hendrickson, 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 484. But such notice, if not received by the creditor until after he has procured process and is proceeding to attach or levy upon the property, is not sufficient. Stowe v. Meserve, 13 N. H. 46.

The fact that the sheriff who makes the levy is the mortgagee in a chattel mortgage upon the articles levied upon, is not notice to the levying creditor of the existence of the mortgage. McCarthy v. Grace, 23 Minn. 182.

An attaching creditor who has constructive notice of a mortgage upon the property levied upon cannot defeat it by his belief that the mortgage was void. Allen v. McCalla, 25 Iowa, 464.

If mortgaged chattels are not delivered to the mortgagee, an attachment takes precedence of the mortgage if made before the mortgage is recorded, although it is recorded within the time (fifteen days) required by statute. Drew v. Sireeter, 137 Mass. 460.

Creditors at Large.—A chattel mortgage will not be declared void at the instance of a creditor at large of the mortgagor on the ground that the mortgage has not been filed in the proper office. To maintain such right, the party must be a judgment creditor with a lien upon the mortgaged property or a valid claim to its avails. Stewart v. Beale, 14 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 405. Compare Sidener v. Bible, 43 Ind. 230.

3. Hathorn v. Lewis, 22 Ill. 395; Boyd v. Beck, 29 Ala. 703; Lewis v. Palmer, 28 N. Y. 271; Sanger v. Eastwood, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 514; Gildersleeve v. Landon, 73 N. Y. 609. Compare Travis v. Bishop, 13 Metc. (Mass.) 304; Shapleigh v. Wentworth, 13 Metc. (Mass.) 358.

Where a chattel mortgage provided that the mortgagor should retain possession of the property until default in the payment of the debt, and more than two months after the debt matured he sold and delivered the property to a third person, and no reason appeared why possession was not taken by the mortgagee at the proper time, it was held that the purchaser took the property free from any lien of the mortgage, even though he had actual notice that it was still unsatisfied. Lemen v. Robinson, 59 Ill. 115.

Execution Purchaser.—One who at an

The failure to file or record a chattel mortgage making it void as against the creditors of the mortgagor by virtue of a statute to that effect, the mortgage in such case is also void as to the executor or administrator of the mortgagor, the estate being insolvent, though it might have been good against the mortgagor himself.<sup>1</sup> It is to be noted that want of registration and retention of possession by the mortgagor are not the only reasons for which a chattel mortgage may be declared void as against creditors. Thus, if a chattel mortgage is executed, not alone to secure an indebtedness to the mortgagee, but also to protect the property of the mortgagor and to hinder and delay his creditors, and this fact is known at the time by the mortgagee, the mortgage will be void as to the creditors attempted to be defrauded.<sup>2</sup> To render a chattel mortgage fraudulent, the intent to defraud must exist when the mortgage is made; the mortgagor's subsequent conduct in dealing with execution sale, for a valuable consideration, purchases a chattel without notice of an unrecorded mortgage thereof, executed after the contraction of the execution debt, is entitled to the protection afforded to a "subsequent purchaser." McKnight v. Gordon, 13 Rich. Eq (S. Car.) 222.

Purchaser's Vendee.—The recording acts are to be construed consistently with the rule of equity, that a purchaser with notice from a purchaser without notice is protected equally with his vendor, the latter on his own merit and by immediate title, the former on the merit of his particular vendor, and as the indispensable means of his security. McKnight v. Gordon, 13 Rich. Eq (S. Car.) 222.

1. Becker v. Anderson, 11 Neb. 493; Kilbourne v. Fay, 29 Ohio St. 264. Compare Griffin v. Wertz, 2 Ill. App. 487.

Widow and Heir.—A chattel mortgage, when possession is not taken by the mortgagee on the maturity of the debt, is void only as to third persons, and the widow, heir, or administrator of the mortgagor is not such third person; and where, in such a case, the mortgagor died before the maturity of the note secured, and the widow elected to take the property mortgaged in lieu of the specific articles which had been assigned to her, it was held that the mortgaged property was not open to selection by her, except subject to the lien of the mortgage. Sumner v. McKee, 89 Ill. 127.

Assignee in Insolvency.—An unrecorded mortgage of personal property which is not delivered to and retained by the mortgagee is not valid against the assignee in insolvency of the mortgagor. Bingham v. Jordan, 1 Allen (Mass.), 373.

Under the statutes of Nebraska it is only creditors of the mortgagor and subsequent purchasers in good faith that can assail a chattel mortgage under which the mortgagor retains possession. Pyle v. Warren, 2 Neb. 241.

A pledge of personal property is good as against a subsequent registered conveyance, if possession is given to the pledgee. Crisp v. Miller, 5 Heisk. (Tenn.) 697.

2. Strohm v. Hayes, 70 Ill. 41; Robinson v. Elliott, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 513. See Crapster v. Williams, 21 Kans. 109. Compare Olmstead v. Mattison, 45 Mich. 617; Allen v. Kennedy, 49 Wis. 549.

But the fact that the intention of the debtor in making a mortgage to secure a creditor was fraudulent is not of itself sufficient to make the mortgage fraudulent as to such creditor, if the latter in no way participated in the fraud or aided or assisted in the illegal act. Moline Wagon Co. v. Rummell, 14 Fed. Repr. 155; Kohn v. Clement, 58 Iowa, 589.

The title of a mortgagee of personal property cannot be defeated by an attaching creditor of the mortgagor by showing that the property mortgaged was purchased by the mortgagor with money which he had fraudulently reserved from his creditors on the settlement of his estate as an insolvent debtor. Codman v. Freeman, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 306.

Question of Fact.—It is well settled that in the case of a chattel mortgage the question whether the mortgage was given for a valuable consideration in good faith and without an intent to defraud creditors is one for the jury, and cannot be taken from them. Bishop v. Cook, 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 326; Bagg v. Jerome, 7 Mich. 145. See Voorhis v. Langsdorf, 31 Mo. 451.

the property, while it may furnish strong evidence of fraud in the making of the mortgage, will not of itself render the instrument void.<sup>1</sup>

13. Nature of Mortgagee's Title.—It is the doctrine at law that the mortgagee of chattels has the legal title, but subject to defeasance on performance of the condition.<sup>2</sup> But in equity it is considered that the mortgage is a mere security for the debt and the mortgagor continues the real owner, the equity of redemption being treated as the real and beneficial estate, tantamount to the fee at law.<sup>3</sup> But at common law the mortgagee of chattels acquires, upon breach of the condition by the mortgagor, an absolute title to the chattel.<sup>4</sup>

14. Redemption.—The title vesting in the chattel mortgage upon breach of condition is an absolute legal title, but there still remains to the mortgagor a right or equity of redemption, and this equity may be asserted (notwithstanding the mortgagee has taken possession) at any time before foreclosure or sale or other appropriate proceedings to cut it off.<sup>5</sup> In some States a definite period of time is limited by statute within which, after condition broken, the mortgagor may redeem. If he fails to do so within this time, his equity is cut off.<sup>6</sup>

1. Horton v. Williams, 21 Minn. 187.

2. Talbot v. De Forrest, 3 Iowa, 586; Bank of Rochester v. Jones, 4 N. Y. 497; Porter v. Parmly, 43 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 445; Stewart v. Hanson, 35 Me. 506.

3. Hannah v. Carrington, 18 Ark. 85; Bryan v. Robert, 1 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 334.

4. Winchester v. Ball, 54 Me. 558; Flanders v. Barstow, 18 Me. 357; Ferguson v. Clifford, 37 N. H. 86; Conner v. Carpenter, 28 Vt. 237; Patchin v. Pierce, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 61; Freeman v. Freeman, 2 Green (N. J.) 44; Brown v. Lipscomb, 9 Port. (Ala.) 472; Constant v. Mattison, 22 Ill. 546; Talbot v. De Forrest, 3 Iowa, 586; Nichols v. Webster, 1 Chand. (Wis.) 203.

In New York a mortgage of chattels is a sale on condition. Under it the legal title to the property is vested in the mortgagee subject to the right of the mortgagor to perform the condition. Upon breach of the condition, the legal title becomes absolute in the mortgagee, leaving a mere equity in the mortgagor. The mortgagee may thereupon take possession of the property, and so far as the legal rights of the parties are concerned, he may thenceforth treat it as his own. But if he pursues such a course he waives his claim for any deficiency that might otherwise arise. Porter v. Parmly, 43 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 445.

5. Cutts v. York Co., 18 Me. 201; Charter v. Stevens, 3 Denio (N. Y.), 35; Freeman v. Freeman, 17 N. J. Eq. 44;

Landers v. George, 49 Ind. 309; Doane v. Garretson, 24 Iowa, 351; Van Brunt v. Wakelee, 11 Mich. 177; Heyland v. Badger, 35 Cal. 404; Kemp v. Westbrook, 1 Ves. 278; Wayne v. Hanham, 9 Hare, 62.

The power of sale in a chattel mortgage does not extend the right to redeem until a sale. Thurber v. Jewett, 3 Mich. 295.

In an equitable action by the mortgagor to redeem, the court can give complete relief; and where the mortgagee by disposing of the property has prevented a redemption, reparation may be decreed in damages. Stoddard v. Denison, 2 Sweeney (N. Y.), 54; Spaulding v. Barnes, 4 Gray (Mass.), 330.

A judgment creditor of a mortgagor of chattels may redeem on tendering the principal and interest due on the mortgage, and expenses incurred in and about a sale, if known. Lambert v. Miller, 19 Repr. (N. J.) 216.

An agreement between mortgagor and mortgagee to submit to arbitrators the right of the mortgagor to redeem from the mortgage does not acknowledge such right. Kea v. Council, 2 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 345.

If a portion of the mortgaged property has been sold with the mortgagor's consent, and the proceeds applied towards the satisfaction of the debt, he may file a bill to redeem the residue. Locke v. Palmer, 26 Ala. 312.

6. Rhode Island Pub. Stats. 1882, c.

15. Discharge of Mortgage.—Generally speaking, whatever extinguishes the mortgage debt extinguishes the mortgage.<sup>1</sup> Hence the payment and acceptance of the amount secured by the chattel mortgage, whether before or after breach of condition, discharges the lien of the mortgage and reverts the title to the property in the mortgagor without any further act or release.<sup>2</sup> So the mortgagee may, after the maturity of the debt, keep the property without selling it under the mortgage, and in case he does so, if it be of sufficient value it extinguishes the debt, but if it be of greater value than the amount of the debt and there is no sale, the mortgagor has no legal claim for the excess of such value.<sup>3</sup> A chattel mortgage given by a principal debtor to his sureties to protect them against their suretyship is discharged by the creditor's discharging the sureties.<sup>4</sup> If the statute of limitations runs long enough to bar a debt secured by a mortgage, and has not barred a bill or suit as to the property, the debt is protected by the mort-

176, §§ 11, 12; South Car. Genl. Stats. 1882, § 2347. See Winchester v. Ball, 54 Me. 558; Trask v. Pennell, 59 Me. 419; Daniels v. Henderson, 5 Fla. 452.

1. Packard v. Kingman, 11 Iowa, 219.
2. Leighton v. Shapley, 8 N. H. 359; Thompson v. Van Vechten, 27 N. Y. 568; Parks v. Hall, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 206; Harrison v. Hicks, 1 Port. (Ala.) 423.

A mere tender of the amount secured by a chattel mortgage to the creditor on the day fixed for payment, although not accepted nor kept good, has the effect to release the property from the lien of the mortgage. Tompkins v. Batie, 11 Neb. 147.

Where the buyer of a mortgaged chattel delivered to the mortgagee a part of the price upon an understanding between all parties that the latter should relinquish his claim on the chattel and look to the mortgagor for the balance due on the mortgage, held, that though he gave no formal discharge he could not afterwards enforce the mortgage against the buyer of the chattel. Rickerson v. Raeder, 4 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 60. Compare Oswald v. Hayes, 42 Iowa, 104.

But a payment made to the mortgagee by a third party who is under no obligation to pay the debt will not operate as a satisfaction of it, unless it is manifestly the intention or interest of the party making the payment that it should so operate. Walker v. Stone, 20 Md. 195. See McLemore v. Pinkston, 31 Ala. 266.

A bequest of money by the chattel mortgagee to the mortgagor does not extinguish the mortgage debt pro tanto unless there is something in the terms of the bequest to show such an intention. Harrington v. Brittan, 23 Wis. 541.

The renewal of the evidence of a debt is neither payment nor a discharge of the lien of a mortgage given as security for the debt. Boyd v. Beck, 29 Ala. 703.

And a second chattel mortgage on the same property to secure the same debt does not of itself extinguish the first. Shuler v. Boutwell, 18 Hun (N. Y.), 171; Hill v. Beebe, 13 N. Y. 556. Compare Daly v. Proetz, 20 Minn. 411; Chapman v. Jenkins, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 164.

A chattel mortgage made to secure the mortgagee against a contingent liability on negotiable paper is discharged by payment of such paper. Franklin Bank v. Pratt, 31 Me. 501; Packard v. Kingman, 11 Iowa, 219.

Acceptance of payment of a chattel mortgage by the mortgagee after forfeiture is a waiver of the forfeiture. West v. Crary, 47 N. Y. 423; Porter v. Parmly, 52 N. Y. 188; Winchester v. Ball, 54 Me. 558.

Attachment in a suit on a note does not release a chattel mortgage given to secure it. Thurber v. Jewett, 3 Mich. 295.

3. Olcott v. Railroad, 40 Barb. (N. Y.) 179; Davis v. Rider, 5 Mich. 423.

Where the owner of land which is leased to the owner of personality thereon purchases the personality and the lease, the purchase will not operate to extinguish the lien of an existing chattel mortgage thereon, nor prevent its enforcement by one to whom the mortgage has been assigned after such purchase. Denham v. Sankey, 38 Iowa, 269.

4. Sumner v. Bachelder, 30 Me. 35. But an extension of time does not affect the mortgagee's right to possession after breach of condition. Bowens v.

gaged property, and will not be barred till a suit for it is.<sup>1</sup> A chattel mortgage may also be discharged by presenting to the proper officer a deed or certificate from the mortgagee that the mortgage is satisfied, and by an appropriate entry to that effect upon the records.<sup>2</sup>

16. Rights of Action in Mortgagee.—Where a chattel mortgage contains an acknowledgment of a specific indebtedness from the mortgagor to the mortgagee, and declares that the property therein described is transferred as security for the payment of the same, the mortgagee may sue for the debt at its maturity, without being compelled to resort first to the property. He may in case of a tortious conversion of the goods, maintain replevin (or other appropriate action) against the mortgagor or his alienee.<sup>4</sup> The Benson, 57 Mo. 26. Though it may as against an innocent purchaser. Cleckley v. Hull, 30 Ga. 838.

A mortgagee on personal property does not release the property from the lien of his mortgage by his mere silence on being informed that a portion of the property has been disposed of by the mortgagor and delivered to another creditor. Patterson v. Taylor, 15 Fla. 336.

A chattel mortgage, though under seal, may be released by a subsequent parol contract, and the mortgagor, when sued for the recovery of the thing mortgaged, may show such parol contract in bar of the action, although the mortgage debt is unpaid. Wallis v. Long, 16 Ala. 738; Acker v. Bender, 33 Ala. 230.

1. Almy v. Wilbur, 2 Wood & M. (U. S. Cir.) 371; Crain v. Paine, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 483.

Where a statute declares that chattel mortgages duly recorded shall be good as against creditors for not exceeding one year, it is held, that as between the parties such a mortgage might be good for any length of time. Laubenheimer v. McDermott, 5 Mont. 512.

2. Verm. Rev. Laws 1880, § 1970; New York act 1879, c. 171, § 1; Minn. Genl. Stats. 1878, c. 39, § 13; Texas act 1879, c. 127, § 5; Mont. act, 1881, p. 3, § 11.

Where a chattel mortgage given to secure several notes was released of record by the mortgagee, who had previously assigned the notes and supposed they had been paid, held, that such release would not discharge the mortgagee as to any unpaid notes in the hands of the assignee. Martindale v. Burch, 57 Iowa. 291.

3. Elder v. Rouse, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 218; Sterling v. Rogers, 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 658; Coleman v. Van Rensselaer, 44

How. Pr. (N. Y.) 368. See Jones v. Turck, 33 Iowa, 246; Hall v. Forqueron, 2 Litt. (Ky.) 329.

But no action will lie unless the mortgage contains a specific agreement to pay the debt, or a distinct acknowledgment of it. Culver v. Sisson, 3 N. Y. 264; Weed v. Covill, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 242.

The mortgagee may waive his claim under the mortgage and attach the property to secure his debt, without violating any of the mortgagor's rights. Buck v. Ingersoll, 11 Metc. (Mass.) 226.

Or, in case of apprehended danger or loss of the goods, he may apply to have a receiver appointed. Rose v. Bevan, 10 Md. 466.

4. Where the mortgage stipulates for continued possession by the mortgagor, but that the mortgagee may take possession on default or in case the former attempts to sell or remove the property, the mortgagee may bring replevin, although the debt is not due, if the mortgagor removes the property from the county. Russell v. Butterfield, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 300; Woodruff v. Halsey, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 333.

But there is no conversion of the property if there is no intent or act of placing it beyond the mortgagee's reach. Metcalf v. McLaughlin, 122 Mass. 84.

A mortgagor of chattels in possession, who mortgages the entire property to another without notice of the existing mortgage, and permits him to take possession, is liable to the first mortgagee in trover for a tortious conversion. Millar v. Allen, 10 R. I. 49.

After breach of condition the mortgagor's possession is adverse, and no demand need precede the mortgagee's suit for the goods. Nordman v. Wilkins, 28 Ark. 191.

A mortgagee of personal property of title of the mortgagee is sufficient to enable him to bring trover or trespass against any third person who has unlawfully converted the chattels, or detinue or replevin to recover their possession.<sup>1</sup> And he may bring an action for damages to his reversionary ina decedent may, on default of payment, replevy the same from the widow, although it has been duly appraised and set off to her by the proper court. She may then redeem. Recker v. Kilgore, 62 Ind. 10.

The mortgagee has an equitable lien for the payment of the mortgage debt on the proceeds of a sale of the goods by the assignee of the mortgagor for the benefit of creditors. Wilson v. Gray, 2 Stockt. (N. J.) 323.

Replevin against Purchaser.—If the mortgagor of chattels mingles them, purposely or carelessly, with his own and sells the whole mass, the mortgagee can replevy the whole from the purchaser, in the absence of evidence by which the mortgaged goods can be distinguished from those not covered by the mortgage. Adams v. Wildes, 107 Mass. 123.

A stipulation in a chattel mortgage that the mortgagor shall remain in possession until breach of condition is personal to the mortgagor and cannot be assigned or transferred. The mortgagee is therefore not precluded from bringing trover for the property, before breach of the condition, against a purchaser from the mortgagor. Ballune v. Wallace, 2 Rich. (S. Car.) 80. See McCandless v. Moore, 50 Mo. 511. Compare Hathaway v. Brayman, 42 N. Y. 322; s. c., 1 Am. Rep. 524; Bailey v. Godfrey, 54 Ill. 507; Skiff v. Solace, 23 Vt. 279.

A mortgagee of chattels, one of which has been sold by the mortgagor to a bona fide purchaser for value, may be compelled to exhaust the others before resorting to the one sold; but he cannot be charged with laches by the purchaser, in case the mortgagor has converted the other property, unless the latter can show that the other property would have been sufficient, without that sold, to satisfy the mortgage. High v. Brown, 46 Iowa, 259.

1. Holmes v. Sprowl, 31 Me. 73; Hotchkiss v. Hunt, 49 Me. 213; Pratt v. Harlow, 16 Gray (Mass.), 379; Gooding v. Shea, 103 Mass. 360; Langdon v. Buel, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 80; Howland v. Willett, 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) 607; Montgomery v. Kerr, 1 Hill (S. Car.), 291; Hopkins v. Thompson, 2 Port (Ala.) 433; Stamps v. Gilman, 43 Miss. 456; Brown v. Phillips, 3 Bush (Ky.), 656; Ashley v. Wright, 19 Ohio St. 291; McCandless v.

Moore, 50 Mo. 511; Worthington v. Hanna, 23 Mich. 530.

No parol understanding between mortgagor and mortgagee respecting the possession of mortgaged chattels can afford any protection against the mortgagee's action of trover to third persons who have unlawfully converted the property. Harvey v. McAdams, 32 Mich. 472.

A mere naked trespasser sued by the mortgagee in trover for the conversion of the property cannot question the mortgagee's dealings with the mortgaged goods. Broughton v. Atchison, 52 Ala. 62.

Where the mortgagor of goods, of which the mortgagee had the right of immediate possession by a mortgage duly recorded, induced the mortgagee by false and fraudulent representations to allow the goods to remain in his possession for a certain period, during which the mortgagor, for the purpose of defrauding the mortgagee, sent the goods to an auctioneer, by whom they were sold and the proceeds paid over to the mortgagor, held, that the mortgagee might maintain trover for the goods against the auctioneer, although the latter did not participate in the fraud of the mortgagor and had no knowledge in fact of the existence of the mortgage. Coles v. Clark, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 399.

But a voluntary donee or bailee of the mortgagor may show payment of the mortgage debt, when sued in trover. Sanders v. Knox, 57 Ala. 80.

Measure of Damages.—If any third person unlawfully takes the property from the possession of the mortgagor, he is liable for more than merely nominal damages. Tallman v. Jones, 13 Kans. 438.

Storage Charges.—A mortgagee of chattels who does not authorize the mortgagor to store them cannot be made liable to one with whom the mortgagor stores them for storage charges. Storms v. Smith, 137 Mass. 201.

Officer Levying Attachment.—Whether the mortgagee can recover possession of the chattels from a sheriff or other officer who has attached them or levied on them under execution, will depend upon whether, under the circumstances, the mortgagor's interest was still subject to seizure and sale. See Hull v. Carnley, 11 N. Y. 501; Shinners v. Brill, 38 Wis.

terest although he has not a right to immediate possession.<sup>1</sup> When personal property is mortgaged to several persons to secure debts owing to them separately by the mortgagor, and by the terms of the mortgage the whole property is forfeited by a single default, it is forfeited to the holders of the mortgage jointly, and they become tenants in common of the whole property.<sup>2</sup>

17. Mortgagee's Right to take Possession on Default.—At common law, when the mortgagor of personal property makes default in the payment of the debt at maturity, the mortgagee has a right to take immediate possession of the property.<sup>3</sup> But he should take possession of the goods at once, upon maturity of the debt, or endeavor to do so with sufficient diligence; otherwise he will lose his lien.<sup>4</sup> The holder of a chattel mortgage securing a debt falling due at different times, or payable by instalments, is not 648; Brayley v. Byrnes, 20 Minn. 435; Nelson v. Ferris, 30 Mich. 497; Worthington v. Hanna, 23 Mich. 530.

If the mortgagee holds two mortgages made by the same debtor, each conveying different articles and to secure different demands, and all the property is attached in a suit against the mortgagor, a statement and demand, to the officer, sufficient as to one mortgage, will avail pro tanto though it be insufficient as to the other. Simonds v. Parker, 3 Metc. (Mass.) 144.

A mortgagee of goods not in possession cannot maintain trespass or trover against a creditor of the mortgagor levying an execution on the property. Goulet v. Asseler, 22 N. Y. 225. Compare Long Dock Co. v. Mallery, 1 Beasley (N. J.), 94.

1. Googins v. Gilmore, 47 Me. 9; Forbes v. Parker, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 462. See Manning v. Monaghan, 23 N. Y. 539; Ferguson v. Thomas, 26 Me. 499.

Where a chattel mortgage is given to secure a debt payable in instalments, the title of the mortgagee becomes as perfect upon default in the payment of an instalment as upon a default in the payment of the whole debt. Halstead v. Swartz, 1 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 559.

But a chattel mortgage payable on demand cannot become absolute until demand made. Ely v. Carnley, 19 N. Y. 496.

2. Tyler v. Taylor, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 585; Howard v. Chase, 104 Mass. 249.

A chattel mortgage appearing by its terms to have been given to a second indorser of two notes to secure their payment, may be shown by parol to have been intended as a security for all the indorsers, and may thereupon be enforced by the first indorser. Bainbridge v. Richmond, 17 Hun (N. Y.), 391.

3. Talman v. Smith, 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 390; Brown v. Phillips, 3 Bush (Ky.), 656; Lacey v. Giboney, 36 Mo. 320.

If possession of personal property be rightfully taken by the mortgagee, the failure to sell the property will not make the possession wrongful. Bradley v. Redmond, 42 Iowa, 452.

The mortgagee cannot be deprived of his possession under a subsequent levy of attachment on execution against the mortgagor. Nelson v. Wheelock, 46 Ill. 25.

But he cannot hold the property as pledgee if the mortgage proves to be void. Janvrin v. Fogg, 49 N. H. 340.

Taking must be Peaceable.—A mortgagee of personal property has no right to take it out of the mortgagor's possession by force or threats, although the law day has passed and the mortgage contains an express power authorizing him to taken possession on default. Thornton v. Cochran, 51 Ala. 415; McClure v. Hill, 36 Ark. 268.

But the mortgagor's permission is not necessary, if there is no breach of the peace. Brayley v. Byrnes, 21 Minn. 482; Street v. Sinclair, 71 Ala. 110; Burns v. Campbell, 71 Ala. 271.

In an action of trespass by mortgagor against mortgagee for entering on the mortgagor's premises and taking and carrying away the mortgaged chattels, it is a good defence that the money was past due at the time. Nichols v. Webster, 1 Chand. (Wis.) 203.

The mortgagee of personal property has an implied irrevocable license, after foreclosure, to enter in a peaceable and reasonable manner upon the premises of the mortgagor and take away the goods mortgaged. McNeal v. Emerson, 15 Gray (Mass.), 384.

4. Travis v. McCormick, 1 Mont. Ter.

bound to wait until the last payment matures before seizing and selling the mortgaged chattels.<sup>1</sup> A clause in a chattel mortgage providing that if the mortgagee shall at any time deem himself insecure he may take possession and sell the property, vests in him an absolute discretion, and his right so to take possession does not depend on his having reasonable grounds for deeming himself insecure.<sup>2</sup>

18. Foreclosure.—Although by a mortgage of chattels the legal title is vested in the mortgagee, subject to the mortgagor's right to perform the condition, and after default such legal title is said to become absolute, leaving a mere equity of redemption in the mortgagor, the title is only a legal title, and the equity can be disposed of only by an action in equity to foreclose, or by a sale under a power contained in the mortgage, or possibly by lapse of time.<sup>3</sup> And it is well settled that equity will take cognizance of a bill to foreclose a chattel mortgage.<sup>4</sup> A person to whom the chattel mort-

148; Burnham v. Muller, 61 Ill. 453; Argall v. Seymour, 4 McCrary (U. S. Cir.), 55.

What is a reasonable time within which to take possession, after default, depends on the situation of the parties and the circumstances of the case. Arnold v. Stock, 81 Ill. 407. See Jones v. Turck, 33 Iowa, 246.

A mortgagee of personal property which has never come into his possession is not bound, after garnishment by an attaching creditor of the mortgagor, to take possession of the property for the benefit of such creditor; and he cannot, in the absence of fraud or collusion, be held liable for the same though it exceeded in value the amount of his mortgage. Curtis v. Raymond, 29 Iowa, 52; First Nat. Bank v. Perry, 29 Iowa, 266.

1. McConnell v. Scott, 67 Ill. 274; Barbour v. White, 37 Ill. 164; Chapin v. Whitsett, 3 Colo. 315.

2. Huebner v. Koebeke, 42 Wis. 319; Werner v. Bergman, 28 Kan. 60; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 152. Compare Furlong v. Cox, 77 Ill. 293. Roy v. Goings, 96 Ill. 361; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 151.

Under such a clause he may take possession of the property before the maturity of the debt and sell it without demanding payment from the mortgagor or giving him notice of the sale. Huggans v. Fryer, 1 Lans. (N. Y.) 276.

His sense of insecurity must be based on facts arising since the mortgage. Barrett v. Hart, 42 Ohio St. 41; s. c., 51 Am. Rep. 801.

Under a clause in a chattel mortgage empowering the mortgagee to take possession whenever he should deem himself insecure, he would have good cause for doing so if he had reason to think, and did think, that he had been overreached in regard to the value of the property; and there would be no conversion in taking it if the mortgagee's interest exceeded the value. Botsford v. Murphy, 47 Mich. 536.

A chattel mortgage for $100 on a growing crop and a mare worth $50 provided that if the mortgagee at any time should deem himself unsafe he might take possession and sell. Held, that the failure of the crop justified the taking possession of the mare. Allen v. Vose, 34 Hun (N. Y.), 57.

Attempt to Sell.—The filing by the mortgagor of a voluntary petition in bankruptcy is an "attempt to sell" within the meaning of the usual clause in chattel mortgages. Moore v. Young, 4 Biss. (U. S. Cir.) 128.

So is a seizure by distress. Conkey v. Hart, 14 N. Y. 22.

But not an attachment in due course of law. Carpenter v. Town, Hill & Denio (N. Y.), 72.

3. Stoddard v. Dennison, 38 How Pr. (N. Y.) 296; Charter v. Stevens, 3 Denio (N. Y.), 35; Broadhead v. McKay, 46 Ind. 595; Kemp v. Westbrook, 1 Ves. 278.

4. Slade v. Rigg, 3 Hare, 35; Wayne v. Hanham, 9 Hare, 62; Kemp v. Westbrook, 1 Ves. 278; Briggs v. Oliver, 68 N. Y. 336; Davis v. Banks, 2 Sweeney (N. Y.), 184; Hall v. Bellows, 11 N. J. Eq. 333; Freeman v. Freeman, 2 Green (N. J.), 44; Farrell v. Bean, 10 Md. 217; Bryan v. Robert, 1 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 334; Brown v. Greer, 13 Ga. 285; Blake-more v. Taber, 22 Ind. 466; Broadhead v. McKay, 46 Ind. 595; Dupuy v. Gibson, 36 Ill. 197; Packard v. Kingman, gagor has sold and delivered the goods is a proper party defendant to an action to foreclose the chattel mortgage; being in possession as owner, it is necessary to join him in order to foreclose his equity of redemption and to subject the property in his hands to sale.<sup>1</sup>

19. Sale for Breach of Condition.—If the mortgagee, in addition to his legal rights, desires to extinguish the mortgagor's equity of redemption after forfeiture, he must either resort to foreclosure proceedings (as above) or else make a bona fide sale of the property under the power contained in the mortgage.<sup>2</sup> But to be effective for this purpose the sale must be fair and in good faith, and not clandestine or collusive.<sup>3</sup> The mortgagee himself may purchase

11 Iowa, 219; Forepaugh v. Pryor, 30 Minn. 35; Smith v. Quartz Co., 14 Cal. 242.

Bills to foreclose chattel mortgages are entertained on the ground that the property may be sold under direction of the court, and that all the rights of the parties may be ascertained and enforced in one proceeding. Bryant v. Robert, 1 Strobb Eq. (S. Car.) 334.

A bill in equity may be maintained to foreclose a chattel mortgage where there are successive liens and incumbrances on the mortgaged property and various rights and interests to be adjusted; but if the amount is small, and there are no adverse claims or other liens or mortgages, the remedy by notice and sale of the property is sufficient. Dupuy v. Gibson, 36 Ill. 197.

After personal property under mortgage has been attached, and the mortgagee summoned as trustee, he cannot give notice and foreclose. Hobart v. Jouvett, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 105.

A notice of intention to foreclose a chattel mortgage given to secure a debt payable on demand is equivalent to a demand of payment of the debt, and constitutes a breach of condition of the mortgage and entitles the mortgagee to possession. Goodrich v. Willard, 2 Gray (Mass.) 203.

Contents of Bill.—A bill to foreclose a chattel mortgage should show of what the property consists, the mortgagor's title or claim of title to it, and that it is within the jurisdiction of the court. Chapman v. Hunt, 1 McCarter (N. J.), 149.

1. Trittip v. Edwards, 35 Ind. 467. Compare Sears v. Abrams, 10 Oreg. 499.

A mortgagor of a chattel who has parted with his interest and against whom no relief is demanded in a suit to foreclose, is not a necessary party to the suit. Farnsley v. Anderson Foundry Works, 90 Ind. 120.

Nor is the mortgagor of the holder of another mortgage on the same property. Gregory v. Cable, 26 N. J. Eq. 178.

The personal representative of a deceased chattel mortgagee, and not his heir, should file the bill to foreclose. Harrison v. Harrison, 1 Call (Va.) 419.

2. Porter v. Parinly, 43 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 445; Stoddard v. Denison, 2 Sweeney (N. Y.), 54; Chapman v. Hunt, 13 N. J. Eq. 370; Hall v. Bellows, 11 N. J. Eq. 333; Wilson v. Brannan, 27 Cal. 258.

Where a chattel mortgage is made to two, to secure their separate claims, a sale for condition broken may be made by either creditor, and the purchaser, as owner of the vendor's undivided interest, would become a tenant in common with the other creditor. Wilson v. Brannan, 27 Cal. 258.

3. Bird v. Davis, 14 N. J. Eq. 467; Walker v. Stone, 20 Md. 195; Charter v. Stevens, 3 Denio (N. Y.), 35; Stoddard v. Denison, 2 Sweeney (N. Y.), 64; Chamberlain v. Martin, 43 Barb. (N. Y.), 607; Ashton v. Corrigan, L. R. 13 Eq. 76; Freeman v. Freeman, 2 Green (N. J.), 44; Williams v. Hatch, 38 Ala. 338.

The conduct and fairness of a sale of chattels by a mortgagee and the rights acquired under it, are always open to investigation at the instance of the mortgagor. On this account a sale under judicial sanction is safer, and where the amount is large, advisable. Freeman v. Freeman, 2 Green (N. J.), 44.

Notice.—In most of the States the mortgagee must give the mortgagor notice of the sale, either by mail, personally, by publication, or by posting, within a prescribed period before sale. See statutes generally.

When the mortgage itself provides specially how and upon what notice the mortgagee may sell, these express provisions preclude all implications on the subject and must be accurately followed. Flanders v. Chamberlain, 24 Mich. 305. Compare Whitaker v. Sigler, 44 Iowa, 419.

the chattel at a fair sale under the power contained in the mortgage. Such purchase is good at law, and if voidable in equity, it would only be so for unfair dealing, and only at the instance of interested parties.<sup>1</sup> A mortgagee of personal property who sells the same under a power of sale clause in the mortgage must account to the mortgagor for any surplus above the debt and expenses.<sup>2</sup>

Public or Private Sale.—A chattel mortgage provided that in case of default in payment, the mortgagee might sell the mortgaged property without specifying the mode of sale. It also provided that if he deemed himself unsafe at any time before payment, he might sell the property at public or private sale. Held, that upon default in payment the mortgagee could sell the property at private sale, and that the vendee's title would be perfect if the sale was fair and bona fide, although no notice of it was given to the mortgagor. Chamberlain v. Martin, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 607; Ballou v. Cunningham, 60 Barb. (N. Y.) 425.

Sale for Cash.—The power of sale confers upon the mortgagee no right to barter the property or to dispose of it otherwise than for cash. Edwards v. Cottrell, 43 Iowa, 194. Compare Williams v. Hatch, 38 Ala. 338.

Excessive Sales.—A mortgagee's sale of the residue of the mortgaged chattels, after enough have been sold to pay the debt and costs, is a conversion of them for which he is liable to the mortgagor. Griswold v. Morse, 59 N. H. 211; Beckley v. Munson, 22 Conn. 299; Charter v. Stevens, 3 Denio (N. Y.), 33; West v. Cary, 47 N. Y. 423; Stromberg v. Lindberg, 25 Minn. 513; Bellamy v. Dowd, 11 Iowa, 285.

A chattel mortgage provided that goods seized under it should be sold at public auction after notice, and that the power of sale should be limited to so much of the property as the sale should show was needed to pay the debt. The mortgagee, however, retailed part of the goods at private sale. Held, that the mortgagor could elect to have the amount to be sold ascertained as in other cases, and, in suit on the mortgage note, the jury should have been charged to find the market value of the goods sold at private sale. Botsford v. Murphy, 47 Mich. 537. See Alger v. Farley, 19 Iowa, 518.

Adjournment.—In the exercise of a power of sale in a chattel mortgage, the mortgagee has a right, in the exercise of a reasonable discretion, to adjourn the sale from time to time, without doing so through the agency of a licensed auctioneer or giving any new notice to the mortgagor. Hosmer v. Sargent, 8 Allen (Mass.), 97.

Caveat Emptor.—On a sale of chattels, announced as made by virtue of a mortgage, there is no implied warranty of title. Harris v. Lynn, 25 Kans. 281; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 253.

Where a mortgaged chattel is advertised for sale, and sold subject to the mortgage, purchasers have sufficient notice of the mortgage to estop them from contesting it on the ground that it was not duly placed on file. Kellogg v. Secord, 42 Mich. 318.

1. Olcott v. Railroad, 27 N. Y. 546; Hart v. Ten Eyck, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 100; Charter v. Stevens, 3 Denio (N. Y.), 35; Black v. Hair, 2 Hill Ch. (S. Car.) 622; Lyon v. Jones, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 533; Bean v. Barney, 10 Iowa, 498; Wright v. Ross, 36 Cal. 414. See also New Hamp. Gen. Laws 1878, c. 137, § 21; Mich. Stats. § 6200; Minn. act 1885, c. 171; Nebr. Comp. Stats. pt. 1, c. 12, § 7; Dak. act 1885, c. 32. Compare Pulver v. Richardson, 3 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 436; Buffalo Steam-engine Works v. Sun Ins. Co., 17 N. Y. 403; Korns v. Shaffer, 27 Md. 83; Imboden v. Hunter, 23 Ark. 622; Beard v. Westerman, 32 Ohio St. 29; Pettibone v. Perkins, 6 Wis. 616.

Where the mortgagee in a chattel mortgage buys the mortgaged property at a sale made at his instance for the amount of the debt and costs, and neither the mortgagor nor his creditors complain of any irregularity in the sale, the mortgagee cannot call in question its regularity, and the purchase by him is a payment of the mortgage debt. Massey v. Hardin, 81 Ill. 330.

2. Flanders v. Thomas, 12 Wis. 410; Pettibone v. Perkins, 6 Wis. 616; Kohl v. Lynn, 34 Mich. 360; Korns v. Shaffer, 27 Md. 83; Moore v. Aylett, 1 Hen. & M. (Va.) 29; Bryan v. Robert, 1 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 342.

But he is not accountable for profits unless it appears that he received profits before the sale. Moore v. Aylett, 1 Hen. & M. (Va.) 29.

Where the mortgagor accepts, either expressly or by legal intentment, of the proceeds of the sale, he is thereby

20. Rights of Second Mortgagees.—Where two or more mortgages of the same chattels are made and recorded at the same time, the mortgagees are entitled to hold the property in proportion to the amounts of their respective claims.<sup>1</sup> An agreement by the parties thereto, that one of two mortgages executed at the same time shall be the prior lien, will be enforced as between the parties, although the mortgage postponed was first recorded.<sup>2</sup> A subsequent mortgagee of chattels to secure previous indebtedness, who has notice of a senior mortgage, is not a mortgagee in good faith so as to entitle him to attack the senior mortgage for fraud.<sup>3</sup> A second mortgagee with a right of possession is entitled to possession of the mortgaged property as against all persons except the first mortgagee, and as against all persons but the latter and those claiming under him, may maintain an action for any taking of it which is in conflict with his rights.<sup>4</sup> When the first mortgage is estopped from denying the legality of the sale. France v. Haynes, 21 Repr. (Iowa), 43.

Expenses of Sale.—Where the mortgage provides for the payment of "all expenses for the sale" of the mortgaged property out of the avails of such sale, only such expenses are intended as are incurred in doing such things as form part of the proceedings of sale. Ferguson v. Hogan, 25 Minn. 135. And compensation to the mortgagee for his care is not included by implication. Imboden v. Hunter, 23 Ark. 622.

Application of Proceeds.—A chattel mortgagee has an absolute right to apply the proceeds of mortgaged property sold by consent to the payment of the mortgage debt, instead of another debt of the mortgagor to him. Masten v. Cummings, 24 Wis. 623.

If the debt secured is payable by instalments, the proceeds of the sale may be applied towards the payment of any instalments which may be due, at the option of the mortgagee. Saunders v. McCarthy, 8 Allen (Mass.), 42; Locke v. Palmer, 26 Ala. 312.

1. Aldrich v. Martin, 4 R. I. 520.

2. Rigler v. Light, 90 Pa. St. 235; Corbin v. Kincaid, 33 Kans. 649; Chadbourn v. Rahilly, 28 Minn. 394. See Sanders v. Barlow, 21 Fed. Repr. 836.

A mortgage of personal property to one party, expressed to be "subject to prior mortgages" to another, conveys to a mortgagee knowing their amount and terms only the right to redeem therefrom, and, although recorded first, takes no precedence thereof. Pecker v. Silsby, 123 Mass. 108; Hoagland v. Shampayne, 37 N. J. Eq. 588.

Where a debtor at the same time executes and causes to be recorded separate and independent mortgages of the same property to several of his creditors, without the knowledge of either, that mortgage which is soonest ratified will first have effect and will take precedence. Oxnard v. Blake, 45 Me. 602.

Where two parties have chattel mortgages on the same property, and they both permit the property to remain in the possession of the mortgagor an unreasonable length of time after the maturity of their respective mortgages, they cannot as against the claim of a third person enforce them; but as against each other, the one first acquiring possession of the property is entitled to priority of lien. Atkins v. Byrnes, 71 Ill. 326.

A purchase-money mortgage, made part of the sale, takes precedence. Walker v. Vaughn, 33 Conn. 577.

A statute forbidding a second mortgage without a reference in it to the first does not make the second mortgage void; for the statute is designed to secure the rights of the second mortgagee, and the parties are not in pari delicto. Leach v. Kimball, 34 N. H. 568.

3. Tolbert v. Horton, 18 Repr. (Minn.) 88. See Baskins v. Shannon, 3 N. Y. 310. Compare De Courcey v. Collins, 21 N. J. Eq. 357.

A second mortgagee of a chattel who takes it from the possession of the mortgagor, sells it, and receives the full consideration of the sale, without regard to the rights of the senior mortgagee, is liable to the latter in an action for the conversion of the chattel. Lowe v. Wing, 56 Wis. 31.

4. Newman v. Tymeson, 13 Wis. 172; Treat v. Gilmore, 49 Me. 34; Gardner discharged or extinguished, the second mortgagee acquires all the rights of a first mortgagee.<sup>1</sup>

21. Assignment of Mortgage.—Although a chattel mortgage is not assignable or negotiable at law, yet a party taking an assignment of such an instrument acquires rights and an interest in the debt secured and the property pledged, which courts of law as well as of equity will recognize and protect.<sup>2</sup> But independently of the debt it was made to secure, a chattel mortgage has no assignable quality, and an assignment of the mortgage without the debt is a nullity.<sup>3</sup> In certain of the States assignments of chattel mortgages are not required to be recorded.<sup>4</sup>

CHEAT. (See also FRAUD.)—A cheat,<sup>5</sup> at common law,<sup>6</sup> is a fraud (not amounting to felony) accomplished<sup>7</sup> by any deceitful and illegal symbol or token which may affect the public at large<sup>8</sup> in some pecuniary interest, and against which common prudence cannot guard.

v. Morrison, 12 Ala. 547. Compare Ring v. Neale, 114 Mass. 111.

1. Daly v. Proetz, 20 Minn. 411.

2. Zeiter v. Bowman, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 133; Sirrine v. Briggs, 31 Mich. 443.

A mortgagee of chattels, after their seizure and before the right of redemption is barred, has an assignable interest under the mortgage. Moody v. Ellerbe, 4 S. Car. 21.

The assignee of a bona fide mortgagee of chattels is entitled to the same protection as the mortgagee in an action of replevin brought by a claimant of the chattels. Mayer v. Soulier, 48 Mich. 411.

The assignee takes the mortgage subject to all equities between the original parties, but not subject to latent equities of third persons of which he had no notice. Langdon v. Buel, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 80; Barbour v. White, 37 Ill. 164.

3. Polhemus v. Trainer, 30 Cal. 685; Hamilton v. Browning, 94 Ind. 242; Earle v. Stumpf, 56 Wis. 50.

Where a chattel mortgage is given to secure the payment of a debt by note, the assignment of the note and mortgage, whether the assignment is under seal or not, vests in the assignee the right of action on the mortgage. Gilchrist v. Patterson, 18 Ark. 575; Langdon v. Buel, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 80.

The assignee of part of a debt secured by a chattel mortgage, with a right to sell, can only sell so much of the mortgaged property as will cover the assigned interest. Emmons v. Dowe, 2 Wis. 322.

4. Bigelow v. Smith, 2 Allen (Mass.), 264; Baxter v. Gilbert, 12 Abb. (N. Y.) 97.

Authorities for Chattel Mortgages.—Jones on Chattel Mortgages; Boone on Mortgages; Herman on Chattel Mortgages; Pierce on Fraudulent Mortgages of Merchandise.

5. 2 East P. C. 818; 2 Wharton's Cr. Law, § 1116.

6. The common law as to cheats is mostly superseded by the legislation against FALSE PRETENCES, q.v.

7. There must be a prejudice received. Bouvier's Law Dict.; Rex v. Dale, 7 C. & P. 352; 2 Bishop on C. L. § 159.

8. A naked lie could not constitute a cheat at common law, which considered that it was folly in the injured party to be so deceived. Pinkney's Case, 2 East C. L. 818. But many lies to-day come under legislation relating to false pretences. Nor did merely writing the lie and signing one's own name to the paper (e.g., check on a bank) constitute a device or token; otherwise if the name of another was signed; though if in the latter case the act amounted to forgery, the cheat, a misdemeanor, was lost in the felony. Whether that is so to-day, the reasons for the merger having ceased, is more appropriately discussed in other parts of this work.

Wheatley, a brewer, sold 16 gallons of amber for 18. On indictment, Lord Mansfield, C. J., said: "It amounts only to an unfair dealing and an imposition on this particular man by which he could not have suffered but from his own carelessness in not measuring it; whereas fraud, to be the object of criminal prosecution, must be of that kind which in its nature is calculated to defraud members, as false weights or measures, false tokens, or where there is a conspiracy." East C. L. 818.

Definition.

Getting a promissory note by pretending wish to look at it, and then refusing to return it, was held to be a mere private fraud. People v. Miller, 14 Johns. (N.Y.) 371. See Lambert v. People, 5 Cowen (N.Y.), 578.

Channing, a miller, received three bushels of wheat to grind, and kept back forty-two pounds, not in the way of excessive toll, but simply as a private fraud. On indictment it was adjudged for defendant. 2 Stra. 793.

Eagleton contracted to supply to the poor of a certain borough, in accordance with arrangements made with the guardians of the poor, loaves of bread of a certain weight. He furnished parish loaves of a less weight. Held, that as no tokens or weights were used, the fraud was a private one, and not indictable. The defendant was convicted, however, of the statutory offence of attempting to obtain money, in that, after having thus defrauded the parishioners, he made return (fraudulent misstatement of antecedent fact) that he had sold a certain number of the specified loaves, whereby he obtained credit on the relieving-officer's book. R. v. Eagleton, 33 Eng. L. & Eq. 545; 6 Cox C. C. 559.

But a baker employed by the United States army marked 219 barrels of bread as weighing 88 lbs. each, though they only severally weighed 68 lbs. Held, that the marking constituted false token equivalent to false measure, and indictment was sustained. Republica v. Fowell, 1 Dallas (U. S.), 47.

For cheating effected by false weights and measures betokens a general design to defraud, and the offender is indictable therefor. 2 East C. L. 820.

So in all cases where false tokens having the semblance of public authenticity are used; as where cloth was sold with counterfeit seal thereon, or where false dice were used in gaming. 2 East C. L. 820.

But where Wilders, a brewer, sends to Hicks, a publican, vessels of ale marked as containing such a measure, when in fact they contained less; and wrote also a letter to Hicks assuring him that they did contain the measure as marked, indictment against the brewer was quashed. R. v. Wilders, cited by Lord Mansfield in Bur. 1128. This is doubtless explainable by the fact that the marks were put on the vessels in a way not evincing a general intent to defraud, but only to cheat a certain individual.

A person may make a token of himself. Thus an apprentice obtained a bounty by enlisting as a soldier, representing that there was no impediment. Appearing free, without his indentures and unaccompanied by any master, inquiry was averted. Rex v. 2 Jones, East P. C. 822.

CHEAT.

Definition.

The Fraud must be Latent.—For instance, handing back musty mixture of barley and oat in return for good barley received by a miller was held not indictable, though it might be otherwise in some kinds of general fraud. R. v. Haynes, 4 M. & S. 214.

So personating one's self for another, where there is nothing deceiving in the pretender's appearance or reputation, is not a cheat at common law. 2 East P. C. 1010.

But a minor, apparently of age, going about deceiving many,—2 Wh. C. L. § 1124,—likewise a married woman pretending to be single, may be indicted.

By 33 Hen. VIII. (a part of the common law of some American States) cheats are indictable as misdemeanors when effected by false tokens or counterfeit letters made in the name of another. A "privy token," within the meaning of this statute was held to denote some real visible mark or thing, as a key, a ring, etc., and not a mere affirmation or promise. This is really in affirmance of the old common law.

A check on a bank, where the drawee has no deposit, in the name of the deceiver, is not a token; another's check is. The deceiver's check is a token if there be no such bank, or if, being a bank, it is broken and he knows it. So with a bank-note unsigned or falsely signed. 2 East P. C. 827; State v. Patillo, 4 Hawks, 348.

Private Cheats.—Sometimes private cheats, for instance, misreading a deed to an illiterate person, and thereby causing the latter to execute it to his prejudice, or suppressing a will, have been denominated cheats. Yet in 2 East P. C. 823 it is shown that in the indictments in those cases several persons were convicted, thus indicating a charge for conspiracy rather than for cheat. For the rule at common law was that the fraud must be (1) latent, (2) addressed to the public at large.

False News, if the fraud be skillfully done so as to be latent, and addressed to the public at large, may be made the means of a cheat at common law. 2 Wh. C. L. 1121.

Illegality of the Thing Pretended will not, in prosecutions for cheats at common law, be a defence; as where a man counterfeited a false discharge. R. v. Fawcett, 2 East P. C. 862.

Public Cheats.—Besides the cheats al-

Definition.

CHECKS.

Definition.

CHECKS. (See also ALTERATION OF INSTRUMENTS; ASSIGNMENTS; BANKS AND BANKING; BILLS AND NOTES; EVIDENCE.)

Definition, 211.

Presentment and Notice, 212.

Time for Presentment, 213.

What is a Reasonable Time, 213.

Delay in Presentment and Notice, 215.

Ante-dated and Post-dated Checks, 218.

Certified Checks, 219.

What Certification Imports, 221.

Forged Checks, 222.

Forgery of Signature, 222.

Fraudulent Alterations after Signature, 225.

Damages for Wrongful Dishonor of Checks, 225.

Measure of Damages, 226.

Check-holder's Right to Sue the Bank, 226.

1. Definition.—A check is a draft or order upon a bank or banking house, purporting to be drawn upon a deposit of funds for the payment at all events of a certain sum of money, to a certain person therein named, or to him or his order, or to bearer, and payable instantly on demand.<sup>1</sup> ready mentioned against numbers of people, there are others deceiving the public in general, or by affecting the public trade or revenue, or being fraud against public justice. So taking advantage of official position may be indictable, though the same fraud in a private person would not. Thus in Rex v. Bower a private jeweller's exposing for sale worse gold than the standard was held not indictable; though had one of the Goldsmith Company done so he would have been. 1 Cowper, 323.

The word "cheat" is not actionable unless spoken of the plaintiff in relation to his profession or business. Heard, Libel & Sl. § 16. Or unless accompanied by other words or circumstances making it impute an indictable offence. Chose v. Whitlock, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 139; Stevenson v. Hayden, 2 Mass. 406; Lucas v. Flynn, 35 Iowa 9. See FALSE PRETENCES.

1. 2 Daniel on Neg. Inst. (3d Ed.) 583. This definition has been quoted with approval in Blair & Hoge v. Wilson, 28 Gratt. (W. Va.) 170. See generally Billgerry v. Branch, 19 Gratt. (W. Va.) 418; Deener v. Brown, 1 MacArthur (C. C.), 350; Matter of Brown, 2 Story (C. C.), 502; Bowen v. Newell, 8 N. Y. 195; McIntosh v. Lytle, 23 Minn. 336. A check has also been defined as, "in legal effect, an inland bill of exchange drawn on a banker, payable to bearer (or order) on demand." Byles on Bills, *13 (7th Am. Ed.) 1. "A check," says Story, "is a written order or request, addressed to a bank, or to persons carrying on the business of bankers, by a party having money in their hands, requesting them to pay on presentment to another person, or to him or bearer, or to him or order, a certain sum of money specified in the instrument." Story on Promissory Notes (7th Ed.), § 487.

A check has been said to be "a bill with some peculiarities, or a species of a bill." 2 Daniel on Neg. Inst. 584. But in the opinion of Mr. Morse "the differential traits decidedly preponderate." Morse on Banking (2d Ed.), 259. In Merchants' Bank v. State Bank, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 604, 647, Mr. Justice Swayne, in pointing out the differences between a check and bill of exchange, says: "Bank checks are not inland bills of exchange, but have many of the properties of such commercial paper; and many of the rules of the law merchant are applicable to both. Each is for a specific sum payable in money. In both cases there is a drawer, a drawee, and a payee. Without acceptance, no action can be maintained by the holder upon either against the drawer. The chief points of difference are that a check is always drawn on a bank or banker. No days of grace are allowed. The drawer is not discharged by the laches of the holder in presentment for payment, unless he can show that he has sustained some injury by the default. It is not due until payment is demanded, and the statute of limitations runs only from that time. It is by its face the appropriation of so much money of the drawer in the hands of the drawee to the payment of an admitted liability of the drawer. It is not necessary that the drawer of a bill should have funds in the hands of the drawee. A check in such case would be a fraud."

A check purports to be drawn upon a deposit. See Champion v. Gordon, 70 Pa. St. 476; Morrison v. Bailey, 5 Ohio St. 13; Espy v. Bank of Cincinnati, 18

2. Presentment and Notice.—Until the check has been presented to the bank and payment refused, and notice of dishonor given to the drawer, the holder has no right of action against the drawer.<sup>1</sup>

If, however, the presentment and notice could be of no benefit to the drawer, they may be dispensed with.<sup>2</sup>

Wall. (U. S.) 620. In the hands of a bank or banker. See Bowen v. Newell, 8 N. Y. 195; Deener v. Brown, 1 MacArthur (C. C.), 350.

The Amount of the Check.—Where the amount stated in marginal figures differs from the words in the body of the check, the latter will govern. Smith v. Smith, 1 R. I. 398; National Bank of Rockville v. Second National Bank, 69 Ind. 479. In the latter case the body of the check was for "twenty-one and thirty-six in exchange dollars," while the margin contained the figures "2,136.00." Held, that the figures were controlled and contradicted by the words in the body of the check. The marginal figures may be used to explain the words in the body of the check. Thus, the words "five hundred" written in the body of the instrument, by reference to the dollar-mark in the margin, were held to mean five hundred dollars. Corgan v. Frew, 39 Ill. 31. In Northrup v. Sanborn, 22 Vt. 433, an order was drawn for "37.89" without any dollar-mark. Held, that the figures were used to express the currency of the United States.

1. Purcell v. Allemong, 22 Gratt. (W. Va.) 739; Pollard v. Bowen, 57 Ind. 232; Judd v. Smith, 3 Hun (N. Y.), 190; Jaudon v. Read, 32 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 190; Murray v. Judah, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 484; Little v. Phoenix Bank, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 430; Harker v. Anderson, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 372; Levy v. Peters, 9 Serg. & Rawle (Pa.), 125; Flemming v. Denny, 2 Phila. Rep. 111; Case v. Morris, 31 Pa. St. 100; Sherman v. Comstock, 2 McLean (C. C.), 19.

In Purcell v. Allemong, 22 Gratt. (W. Va.) 739, the court say: "A check is an inland bill of exchange drawn on a bank or other house of deposit. The drawer undertakes that the bank will pay to the payee or holder the sum named in the check; and the payee having received the check, the drawer is not liable to pay it, if he drew it in good faith, until the holder has demanded and failed to obtain payment from the bank upon which it was drawn. If the bank refuses to pay, the holder, as a general rule, has no right of action against it, but must look to the drawer for payment. But the drawer may have his action against the bank for refusing to honor his check, but not until the same has been presented and payment refused. It is consequently well settled, as a general rule, that the holder of a check has no recourse upon the drawer until the check has been presented to the bank and payment refused."

2. Case v. Morris, 31 Pa. St. 100; Sterrett v. Rosencrantz, 3 Phila. Rep. (Pa.) 54; Hoyt v. Seeley, 18 Conn. 353; Judd v. Smith, 3 Hun (N. Y.), 190; Cromwell v. Lovett, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 369; Frue v. Thomas, 16 Maine, 36.

When Presentment and Notice are Unnecessary.—When the drawer has no funds, or has withdrawn them from the bank, or has stopped payment of the check, notice of its dishonor is unnecessary. Wirth v. Austin, L. R. 10 C. P. 689; Carew v. Duckworth, L. R. 4 Ex. 313; Conroy v. Warren, 3 Johns. Cas. 259; Murray v. Judah, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 484; Flemming v. Denny, 2 Phila. Rep. 111; Eichelberger v. Finley, 7 Har. & J. (Md.) 381; True v. Thomas, 16 Me. 36; Franklin v. Vanderpool, 1 Hall (N. Y.), 78; Fitch v. Redding, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 130; Jacks v. Darrin, 3 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 557; Purchase v. Mattison, 6 Duer (N. Y.), 587. So also presentment is unnecessary when the drawer has no funds. Bell v. Alexander, 21 Gratt. (W. Va.) 1; Foster v. Paulk, 41 Me. 425. Or has withdrawn them from the bank. Deener v. Brown, 1 MacArthur (C. C.), 350; Moody v. Mack, 43 Mo. 210. Or the bank becomes insolvent within the time required for presentment. Syracuse R. Co. v. Collins, 3 Lans. (N. Y.) 29; Warrensburg Assn. v. Zoll, 83 Mo. 94.

In Case v. Morris, 31 Pa. St. 100, 104, the court say: "The general rule of law is, that the holder cannot resort to the drawer without proof of due presentment to the drawee for payment, and prompt notice of dishonor. Little v. Phoenix Bank, 2 Hill's N. Y. Rep. 430. But in Bickerdike v. Bollman, 1 T. R. 408, it was held that when the drawer had no effects in the hands of the drawee at the time the bill was drawn, notice was not necessary. It is sometimes said that this exception to the general rule is placed on the ground that it was a fraud to draw the bill when the drawer knew that it would not be paid. At other times it is said that the drawer's knowledge that it would be dishonored is tantamount to

Time for Presentment.—The holder, in order to charge the drawer in case of a dishonor, must present the check for payment within a reasonable time, otherwise the delay is at the peril of the holder.<sup>1</sup>

What is a Reasonable Time.—What is a reasonable time will depend upon circumstances, and will in many cases depend upon the time, the mode, and the place of receiving the check, and upon the relations of the parties between whom the question arises.<sup>2</sup>

If the bank on which the check is drawn be in the same place where the payee received the check, it should be presented for payment within banking hours on the day it is received, or on the following day. If, in the mean time, the bank fails, the loss will be the drawer's.<sup>3</sup>

If the bank be not in the same place where the payee received demand and notice. Cory et al. v. Scott, 3 B. & Ald. 619. But whatever may be the grounds for that decision, it is very certain that it introduced an exception to a plain and intelligible rule of commercial law, which many eminent and experienced judges have since regretted. It is adhered to on the principle of stare decisis, but it is not to be extended a single step. Ort v. Maginnis, 7 East, 362; Legge v. Thorpe, 12 East, 176; Rucker v. Hiller, 16 East, 43; 3 B. & P. 241; 3 Barn. & Ald. 619; 6 Bing. 623. Where the drawer has no effects in the hands of the drawee, and has no reason to expect any, or to believe that the bill will be paid, notice of the dishonor of it could do him no good, and may therefore be dispensed with."

In Shaffer v. Maddox, 9 Neb. 205, the drawers had no funds in the bank at the time the check was drawn and presented for payment. Held, that the drawers were not released from liability by reason of the failure of the holder to notify them.

Withdrawal of Deposit Before the Bank Fails.—In Kinyon v. Stanton, 44 Wis. 479, the holder failed to present the check, and eight days after its date the bank suspended payment. But just before the bank's failure the drawer withdrew his funds. The bank would have paid the check had it been presented for payment at any time up to the day of its failure. Held, that the drawer was liable. The court say: "The appellants could have escaped liability over only by leaving funds in the bank to meet the check from the day it was given until the failure of the bank. They cannot expect to draw all their funds from the bank before its failure, and then escape liability upon a check previously given, merely because the bank failed."

1. Bell v. Alexander, 21 Gratt. (W. Va.) 1; Stewart v. Smith, 17 Ohio St. 82; Tay- lor v. Sip, 1 Vroom (N. J.), 284; Morrison v. McCartney, 30 Mo. 183; Cork v. Bacon, 45 Wis. 192; Scott v. Meeker, 20 Hun (N. Y.), 163; Harker v. Anderson, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 372; Daniels v. Kyle, 5 Ga. 245; Montalms v. Charles, 76 Ill. 303; Stevens v. Park, 73 Ill. 387.

In Daniels v. Kyle, 5 Ga. 245, 251, the court say: "A check, unlike a bill of exchange, is generally designed for immediate payment, and not for circulation; and therefore it becomes the duty of the holder to present it for payment as soon as he reasonably may, and if he does not, he keeps it at his own peril."

2. Woodruff v. Plant, 41 Conn. 344; Taylor v. Sip, 1 Vroom (N. J.), 284, 290.

3. Simpson v. Pacific, etc., Ins. Co., 44 Cal. 139; Veazie Bank v. Winn, 40 Me. 60; Wear v. Lee, 87 Mo. 358; Cawein v. Browinski, 6 Bush (Ky.), 457; Schoolfield v. Moon, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 171; Syracuse, etc., R. Co. v. Collins, 3 Lans. (N. Y.) 29; s. c., 57 N. Y. 641; Smith v. Miller, 6 Rob. (N. Y.) 157; s. c., 43 N. Y. 171, 52 N. Y. 546; Kelty v. Bank, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 328; Bickford v. First Nat. Bank, 42 Ill. 238; Moule v. Brown, 4 Bing. N. C. 268; Bailey v. Bodenham, 16 C. B. (N. S.) 288; Boddington v. Schlencker, 4 Barn. & Ad. 752.

Where the check is received on Saturday, the payee has until the close of banking hours on Monday to present it. Mead v. Caswell, 9 Mod. 60; O'Brien v. Smith, 1 Black (U. S.), 99.

The holder of a check upon a bank located in the town of his residence may present it for payment during business hours the day after it is drawn, and his omission to do so sooner is no defence to the drawer, unless the holder had information of its precarious condition. First Nat. Bank v. Alexander, 84 N. C. 30. See also Cawein v. Browinski, 6 Bush (Ky.), 457.

the check, then it must be forwarded by mail on the next secular day after it is received for presentment. If the person to whom it is forwarded presents it for payment on the day after it has reached him by due course of mail, it will be sufficient.<sup>1</sup>

1. Middletown Bank v. Morris, 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 616; Smith v. Jones, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 192; Burkhalter v. Second Nat. Bank, 42 N. Y. 538; Taylor v. Sip, 1 Vroom (N. J.), 284; Griffin v. Kemp, 46 Ind. 172, 176; Himmelmänn, v. Hotaling, 40 Cal. 111; Woodruff v. Plant, 41 Conn. 344; Hare v. Henty, 30 L. J. C. P. 302; Werk v. Mad River, etc., Bank, 8 Ohio St. 301.

In Cox v. Boone, 8 W. Va. 500, a party residing about four miles from the post-office received a check at supper time in mid-winter, on a Wheeling bank, on account of a debt. The only mail that left the post-office the next day closed at 7.30 A.M., and left at 8 A.M. Held, that the holder was not required to forward the check by that mail. The court observed that, to have sent the check by that mail, the plaintiff "would have been required to have gotten up in the night and rode to the post-office before daylight in the morning. To require this would be unreasonable.

A. received a small check at a lumber camp twenty miles from the bank, on Friday. His place of business was twenty miles in an opposite direction, and he deposited the check in a bank there on Monday, on which day the drawee bank failed. Held, that the delay was not unreasonable. Freiberg v. Cody, 55 Mich. 108.

In Rickford v. Ridge, 2 Camp. 537, the plaintiffs, bankers of Aylesbury, discounted for defendant on June 13th a check on bankers of London, and sent it to their London agent on the 14th for presentment. The agent received it on the 14th and sent it for presentment on the 15th, when payment was refused. Held, that the check was presented in time; the bank, receiving the check on the 13th, was not bound to send it off till the 14th; the agent, receiving it on the 14th, was not bound to present it before the 15th, on which day it was done. Lord Ellenborough said: "The rule to be adopted must be a rule of convenience; and it seems to me to be convenient and reasonable that checks received in the course of one day should be presented the next. Is this practice consistent with the law merchant? It cannot alter it. Banks would be kept in continual fever if they were obliged to send out a check the moment it was paid in."

Reasonable Time is Question of Law.—

Whether a presentment is made within a reasonable time is a question of law for the court where there is no dispute about the facts. Mohawk Bank v. Broderick, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 304; Himmelmänn v. Hotaling, 40 Cal. 111.

The holder does not gain an extra day for presentment by depositing the check in bank for collection. It must be forwarded by the bank for presentment within the same time required of the holder. Alexander v. Burchfield, 1 Carr. & M. 75. See also Moule v. Brown, 4 Bing. N. Cas. 266.

In Alexander v. Burchfield, 1 Carr. & M. 75, the check was received by the plaintiffs on the 10th, and paid in to their bank on the 11th, and by them presented to the drawees, defendant's bankers, on the 12th, who stopped payment on that day. There was a verdict for defendant. Tindal, C. J., in summing up, said: "If a party receive a check on a particular day, he may present it at any time during banking hours on the following day to that on which he received it. I am not aware of any decision which says that a person may keep it all the first day, and on the second day pay it in to his own bankers, and that they may present it on the third day. The cases which seem to bear upon this point relate only to the notice of dishonor, and not to the time of presentment. I cannot agree that, if a bill becomes due, say on the 1st of March the holder may pay it in to his bankers on the 2d of March, and that his banker will have till the following day, the 3d, to present it."

In Moule v. Brown, 4 Bing. N. Cas. 266, a check drawn March 28th, by F., on a banker at Bath, was cashed for defendant by a branch of the N. W. bank at Malmesbury, and the same day forwarded to its main office at Melksham, twelve miles from Bath, where it was presented on Friday, the 31st, and dishonored. Held, that the presentment was not in time to give the N. W. bank any claim against defendant. Tindal, C. J., said: "The result of the cases, from Rickford v. Ridge (2 Camp. 539) to Boddington v. Schlencker (4 B. & Ad. 752), is, that the party receiving a check has till the following day to present it, where there are the ordinary means of doing so. Here, the plaintiffs resided in a post-town, and if they had transmitted the check to Bath by the next day's post, it would have been presented on Thursday. If there was any sufficient reason for not pursuing that course, it lies on them to show it; but I think upon this state of facts they have been guilty of laches."

Delay in Presentment and Notice.—The drawer is not discharged by any laches of the holder in not making due presentment of the check, or in not giving him due notice of its dishonor, unless he has suffered some loss or injury thereby, as by the intermediate failure of his bank, and then only pro tanto.<sup>1</sup>

1. Bell v. Alexander, 21 Gratt. (W. Va.) 1; Stewart v. Smith, 17 Ohio St. 82; Emery v. Hobson, 63 Me. 32; Taylor v. Slip, 1 Vroom (N. J.), 284; Cork v. Bacon, 45 Wis. 192; Howes v. Austin, 35 Ill. 396; Stevens v. Park, 73 Ill. 387; Heushaw v. Root, 60 Ind. 220.

In Hoyt v. Seeley, 18 Conn. 353, the holder of a check did not present it to the bank for payment until after the lapse of more than two years from the time he received it, and omitted to give any notice to the drawer of its non payment. The drawer never had funds in the bank sufficient to pay it before it was protested, except at one time, and then such funds were immediately afterwards drawn out by himself. The bank was not insolvent, and the drawer sustained no loss or injury from the want of notice or delay in presentment. Held, that the drawer was liable. The court said that the general rule "does not apply to a case where the drawer has sustained no loss or injury. Were it otherwise, the drawer would profit by a neglect which did him no injury."

In Smith v. Jones, 2 Bush (Ky.), 103, the check was dated April 12, 1862, and was not presented at the bank in New Orleans until January 13, 1863. The city, meanwhile, had been captured by the United States army, and at the time the check was presented the drawer had no funds in bank. Held, that the drawer was not liable. Robertson, J. said: "Unlike a bill of exchange, a check does not require 'due diligence,' and apparent laches in presenting it for payment does not exonerate the drawer, unless by unreasonable delay he has suffered loss, and then he is entitled to relief pro tanto. But the evidence authorizes the deduction, that, for nearly a month after the date of the appellee's check, the appellants, if only reasonably provident and diligent, might have presented the check and received the amount of it."

In Cork v. Bacon, 45 Wis. 192, nine days after the date of the check and about a week after plaintiff became the holder, the drawee suspended payment. During all of this time the drawer had sufficient funds in the drawee's hands to meet the check, which was not presented until the drawee became bankrupt. Held, that the check had not been paid through the laches of the holder, and the drawer was not liable.

In Harry v. Wood, 2 Miles (Pa.), 327, plaintiff issued an attachment execution against the defendant's deposit in the bank, and on the same day and after the service of the attachment a check drawn by defendant, dated several days before the service, was presented to the bank for payment. Held, that the holder of the check had been negligent in not presenting it to the bank, and was postponed to the attaching creditor, who was entitled to the fund.

If the maker has withdrawn from the bank his entire deposit against which the check is drawn he is not injured by any delay in presenting it or any lack of formal notice of its non-payment before action brought. Emery v. Hobson, 63 Maine, 32.

In Scott v. Meeker, 20* Hun (N. Y.), 161, the defendant being indebted to the plaintiff on a promissory note, mailed to him his check on a bank for the amount thereof, on receipt of which the plaintiff returned the said note to defendant. On the morning of the day after the check was received it was accidentally burned and destroyed. The defendant on being informed of its destruction promised the plaintiff to pay him, but subsequently refused so to do. Held, that the destruction of the check made it impossible for plaintiff to present it for payment, that defendant was bound by his subsequent promise to pay it, and having suffered no loss from the omission to present it, he was liable.

In Morrison v. McCartney, 30 Mo. 183, A., on October 2, 1857, drew a check on B., a banker, in favor of C., who on the same day transferred the same for value to D. On October 3, about 2 P.M., the banking-house of B. suspended payment. On October 6, A., who had previously instituted suits by attachment against B. to recover the amount of his deposits, compromised the same and received his deposits. The check was not presented until January 29, 1858, when payment was refused. The check was then duly protested and notice given. Held, in a suit by D., the holder, against the drawer, that the latter was not discharged by the delay.

Verbal Agreement Not to Present.—A verbal agreement between the payee and the drawer of a check, contemporaneous with its execution and delivery, that the former will not present it to the drawee for payment until a certain time, is a sufficient excuse for a delay in presenting it until the time specified. Pollard v. Bowen, 57 Ind. 232; Barclay v. Weaver, 19 Pa. St. 396.

Drawer May Extend Time for Presentment.—The necessity for presentment may be waived by the representations and conduct of the drawer. Woodruff v. Plant, 41 Conn. 344; Compton v. Gilman, 19 W. Va. 312, 316; Holmes v. Roe (S. C. of Mich. 1886), 28 Northwest Rep. 864.

Burden of Proof as to Injury to the Drawer.—Where there has not been due presentment and notice, the burden of proof is upon the holder of the check to show that the drawer has sustained no injury. Little v. Phoenix Bank, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 425; Stevens v. Park, 73 Ill. 387; Ford v. McClung, 5 W. Va. 166; Planters' Bank v. Merritt, 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 177, 193. See also Syracuse, etc., v. R. Co. v. Collins, 3 Lans. (N. Y.) 29.

Unreasonable Delay Discharges Indorser.—As between the holder and an indorser, it seems that an unreasonable delay in presentment will discharge an indorser, even though he does not appear to have suffered any injury thereby. Mohawk Bank v. Broderick, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 304; s. c., 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 133; Morse on Banking, 286. See also Gough v. Staats, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 549; Murray v. Judah, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 484; Veazie Bank v. Winn, 40 Me. 60. In Mohawk Bank v. Broderick, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 304, a check was received in Schenectady on January 14, drawn on a bank in Albany, a distance of 16 miles from the former place, there being a daily mail between the places, and was not presented until February 6. The check would not have been paid had it been duly presented, as the drawer's account was overdrawn. Held, that the holder had been guilty of laches, and that the indorser was discharged.

In Massachusetts, however, the indorser is only entitled to have such presentment and notice as will save him from loss. Small v. Franklin Mining Co., 99 Mass. 277. See also Emery v. Hobson, 62 Me. 578.

Presentment by Mail.—It is sufficient presentment and demand to send the check by mail to the bank on which it is drawn. Hare v. Henty, 10 C. B. (N. S.) 65; Bailey v. Bodenham, 16 C. B. (N. S.) 288; Morse on Banking, 281. See also Indig v. National City Bank, 80 N. Y. 101. In Bailey v. Bodenham, 16 C. B. (N. S.) 294, Erle, C. J., after stating that he considered a presentment by mail a good presentment, observed: "But unless the money was remitted by return of post, the absence of an answer should have been considered as a dishonor, and notice of such dishonor should have been given promptly." See, however, Farwell v. Curtis, 7 Bissell (C. C.), 162, where Hopkins, J., says: "In these days, when such facilities are furnished by express companies for presentation at distant places, there is no reason for adopting a less direct or effective mode to accomplish the object."

In Indig v. National City Bank, 80 N. Y. 101, Rapallo, J., said: "The defendant, instead of sending the note to an agent or correspondent at Louisville for presentment, sent it by mail directly to the respondent (the National City Bank), where it was payable. This appears to be an ordinary method of transacting such business, and the defendant was bound only to adopt the ordinary rule." Compare Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Goodman, 16 W. N. C. (Pa.) 513.

Drawee Bank not a Suitable Agent for Collection.—Where a bank receives on deposit a check on another bank, and forwards it to the drawee bank for collection, it will be liable to the depositor for resulting loss. The drawee bank is not a suitable agent for collection. Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Goodman, 14 W. N. C. (Pa.) 531; s. c., 16 W. N. C. 513, 109 Pa. St. 422; Drovers' Nat. Bank v. Anglo-American, etc., Co., 117 Ill. 100; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 855. In Goodman v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 14 W. N. C. (Pa.) 534, the court say: "It was the duty of the defendant to transmit to a suitable agent to collect; and it seems to us that the Mississippi Valley Bank, on whom the check was drawn, was in no sense a suitable agent to demand payment against itself. Its interest plainly was to delay instead of speeding payment. The defendant put it in the power of the Mississippi Valley Bank to do what it pleased with the check, and that which it did please to do, on the eve of insolvency, was to cancel and surrender the check, and transmit—not money—but a worthless draft in payment. We think the principle may be stated as a true one, that no firm, bank, corporation, or individual can be deemed a suitable agent, in contemplation of law, to enforce on behalf of another a claim against itself."

Where a bank receives a check on a bank at another place and intrusts it directly to that bank for payment, it is liable to the depositor for loss by the failure of the drawee.

Drovers' Nat. Bank v. Anglo-American, etc., Co., 117 Ill. 100; s. c., 57 Am. Rep. 855. In this case the court say: "The same person cannot be both debtor and creditor at the same time, and in respect of the same debt. How then can he who is debtor be, at the same time and in respect of the same debt, the disinterested agent of the creditor? Can it be said to be reasonable care in selecting an agent, to select one known to be interested against the principal?—to place the principal entirely in the hands of his adversary?"

Time within which Drawee must make Payment or Refuse.—Upon presentation, "the drawee has a reasonable time to inspect his accounts and ascertain whether he is in funds to meet the demand." Overman v. Hoboken City Bank, 2 Vroom (N. J.), 565, per Beasley, C. J. And it has been said that such reasonable time is the space of twenty-four hours. Belasis v. Hester, 1 Ld. Raym. 280. See also Northumberland Bank v. McMichael, 106 Pa. St. 460.

In Boyd v. Emmerson, 2 Ad. & Ell. 184, it was held that where the check is drawn upon the persons who were bankers both for the drawer and the payee, the bankers were entitled to one day's time to determine whether they were in funds with which to pay the check, and that by giving notice of refusal on the following day they were relieved from liability for retaining the check. See also Kilsby v. Williams, 5 B. & Ald. 815.

If the bank credits a depositor with a check drawn on itself, it becomes liable to him for the amount thereof. Oddie v. Nat. City Bank of N. Y., 45 N. Y. 735. But merely entering a credit for the amount in the pass-book will not render the bank liable. Nat. Gold Bank v. McDonald, 51 Cal. 64.

In Overman v. Hoboken City Bank, 2 Vroom (N. J.), 563, a check, dated October 29, drawn to the order of plaintiffs upon the defendants, was deposited in the Bank of Commerce in New York City, and by that bank transmitted to the Ocean Bank of the same city, to be sent to the defendants for payment. It was received by defendants on October 31, between twelve and one o'clock, and retained by them till twelve o'clock, noon, of the following day, when it was returned to the Ocean Bank, marked "not good." On the following morning the Ocean Bank sent the check back to the Bank of Commerce, which immediately notified the plaintiffs of its dishonor. Held, that the mere retention of the check by the defendants did not constitute an acceptance by them, and plaintiff was not entitled to recover.

In First Nat. Bank of Northumberland v. McMichael, 106 Pa. St. 460, a check was sent by mail from one bank, whose customer had deposited it there for collection, to another bank on which it was drawn, with these instructions: "Do not hold collections; return promptly if not paid." The check was received on March 6, and held until March 10, when it was protested in consequence of notice from the drawer the day before, not to pay the check. During the whole time the drawer's account was sufficient to meet the check, but the bank was short of actual cash, and frequently obliged to borrow to meet current demands. The holder of the check brought suit against the drawee bank for the amount thereof, and the question whether the check had been accepted was left to the jury, who found a verdict for the plaintiff. Held, that the delay was entirely consistent with an acceptance, and that the question had been properly submitted to the jury. Mr. Justice Green said: "It is not pretended there was any refusal of the check at the time of its presentment, or for several days thereafter. The depositor's account was much more than good for the amount of the check during all that time. Both the holder and the collecting bank might well have inferred the check was or would be paid. The delay in actual payment was easily accounted for, both by the way in which the defendant bank usually paid such checks, and by the fact that it was short of money at that time. The delay, therefore, was entirely consistent with an acceptance, and was quite inconsistent with a refusal, since, if a refusal was intended, notice would naturally, and ought legally, to have been given at once, either on the same or, at the farthest, the next day. An acceptance was therefore the natural inference from all the facts, and the court was right in submitting, and the jury in finding, the fact of acceptance."

Rights of Bona Fide Holder without Notice.—A holder who takes a check in good faith and for value received, several days after it is drawn, takes it clear of equities of which he had no notice. Ames

3. Ante-dated and Post-dated Checks.—A check may be either ante-dated or post-dated. An ante-dated check is payable immediately. A post-dated check, or one which bears a date subsequent to that of its actual issue, is payable on or at any time after the day of its date.<sup>1</sup>

v. Meriam, 98 Mass. 294; In re Brown, 2 Story (C. C.), 502.

The lapse of two or three days after the date of a check is not sufficient to put a party who received the same for a valid consideration upon inquiry in regard to the consideration on which it is drawn. Laber v. Steppacher, 103 Pa. St. 81; Walker v. Geisse, 4 Whart. (Pa.) 256.

In Lancaster Bank v. Woodward, 18 Pa. St. 357, the maker of a check for $600 paid that amount to the holder the day before the time named therein for payment. The check was not delivered up to the drawer, and more than a year after it was due was presented to the bank on which it was drawn and paid. The drawer had no funds in the bank when the check was drawn, and only about $13 when it fell due and when it was paid. Held, that the circumstances were sufficient to put the bank on inquiry; that the check being long overdue, the bank must be presumed to have taken it on the credit of the indorser, and could not recover from the drawer.

Order of Payment.—Checks are not payable in the order of priority in which they are given, but in the order of their presentation for payment. The rule is, "first come, first served." Bullard v. Randall, 1 Gray (Mass.), 605; s. c., 61 Am. Dec. 433; Laclede Bank v. Schuler, 120 U. S. 511.

A check does not bind the fund in the hands of the bank until it has notice of the check by presentation for payment or otherwise. Laclede Bank v. Schuler, 120 U. S. 511 (reversing 27 Fed. Rep. 424). In this case plaintiff was the owner and holder of a draft or bank check, drawn on the Laclede Bank for the sum of $11,250, dated October 20, 1885, which was duly presented on October 26, and payment refused on the ground that the drawers had on October 24 made an assignment under the laws of Texas for the benefit of creditors, of which the said bank had been advised by telegraph early on the morning of the 26th, before the check was presented. Held, that the assignment had priority, and the plaintiff could not recover.

Part-payment of Checks.—The bank is not obliged to make part-payment, if the funds of the drawer in its possession are not sufficient to pay his check in full. Murray v. Judah, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 490; Dana v. Third Nat. Bank, 13 Allen (Mass.), 445. In Coates v. Preston, 105 Ill. 470, 473, the court say: "If the drawer did not have a sufficient sum or deposit in defendant's bank with which to make full payment, so that it could take up and hold the check as a voucher, the bank was under no obligation to make a partial payment, and could rightfully refuse to pay the check, or any part of it, as it did." But in Bromley v. Commercial Nat. Bank, 9 Phila. Rep. (Pa.) 522, the payee of a check for $725 presented it to the bank for payment. The teller was about to pay it, when he discovered there was but $229.92 to the drawer's credit. The payee then demanded payment of this balance to him, which the bank refused. He then offered to deposit to the credit of the drawer a sum sufficient to make the check good if the bank would then pay it. This it also refused. Held, that it was the duty of the bank to pay it to him and indorse the amount paid on the check, and that the payee was entitled to the balance in the bank.

Payment by Check.—Where a creditor takes a check for a debt, the presumption is that it is only to be regarded as payment if cashed. People v. Baker, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 602; Smith v. Miller, 43 N. Y. 171; Small v. Franklin Mining Co., 99 Mass. 277; Taylor v. Williams, 11 Metc. (Mass.) 44; Heartt v. Rhodes, 66 Ill. 351; Blair & Hoge v. Wilson, 28 Gratt. (W. Va.) 165; Marrett v. Brackett, 60 Me. 527.

1. Mohawk Bank v. Broderick, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 304; s. c., 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 133; Harker v. Anderson, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 372; Godin v. Bank, 6 Duer (N. Y.), 76. In the Matter of Brown, 2 Story (C. C.), 502; Morse on Banking (2d Ed.), 372.

If a post-dated check falls due on Sunday, or on a legal holiday, payment cannot be demanded until the day following, and if the bank pays it before that time, it acts at its peril. Salter v. Burt, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 205.

A post-dated check is not entitled to days of grace. Lawson v. Richards, 6 Phila. Rep. (Pa.) 179; Champion v. Gordon, 70 Pa. St. 474.

4. Certified Checks.—The certification of a check by a bank is equivalent to an acceptance of a bill for that amount,<sup>1</sup> and binds the bank to hold sufficient funds of the drawer to meet the check.<sup>2</sup>

Memorandum Checks.—A memorandum check is defined by Putnam, J., in Franklin Bank v. Freeman, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 539, as "a contract by which the maker engages to pay the bona fide holder absolutely, and not upon a condition to pay if the bank upon which it be drawn should not pay upon presentation at maturity, and if due notice of the presentation and non-payment should be given. The word 'memorandum' written or printed upon the check describes the nature of the contract with precision. It is an express waiver, on the part of the maker of the check, of any objection against the claim of a bona fide holder that it had not been presented for payment, or if it were presented and not paid that he had had no notice of the non-payment of the bank therein named."

As between the bank and the payee a memorandum check is just like an ordinary check. The bank is not bound to pay any attention to the word "memorandum" or the abbreviation "mem." written on the check, or to recognize any contract as implied by them between the maker and payee which gives to the check any peculiar character. Morse on Banking, 371 (2d Ed.). Chancellor Walworth in Dykens v. Leather Manufacturers' Bank, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 612, observes: "The alleged custom of Wall Street, that an ordinary check upon a bank is to be converted into something contrary to its legal effect by writing 'mem.' in one corner thereof, certainly amounts to nothing. Indeed, the weight of the testimony is that this memorandum amounts to nothing more than an indication of an understanding that the check is not to be presented immediately for payment, so as to destroy the drawer's credit with the bank when he has not provided funds to meet the draft." See generally Cushing v. Gore, 15 Mass. 69; Ball v. Allen, 15 Mass. 433; Ellis v. Wheeler, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 18; Skillman v. Titus, 3 Vroom (N. J.) 96; American Emigrant Co. v. Clark, 47 Iowa, 672.

1. Barnes v. Ontario Bank, 19 N. Y. 159; Meads v. Merchants' Bank, 25 N. Y. 146; s. c., 82 Am. Dec. 331; Claffin v. Farmers', etc., Bank, 25 N. Y. 297; First Nat. Bank v. Leach, 52 N. Y. 350; Nolan v. Bank of N. Y., 67 Barb. (N. Y.) 33; Merchants' Bank v. State Bank, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 604, 648; Simpson v. Pacific, etc., Ins. Co., 44 Cal. 139; Hel- wege v. Hibernia Nat. Bank, 28 La. Ann. 520.

In Merchants' Bank v. State Bank, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 604, 647, Mr. Justice Swayne says: "By the law merchant of this country the certificate of the bank that a check is good is equivalent to acceptance. It implies that the check is drawn upon sufficient funds in the hands of the drawee, that they have been set apart for its satisfaction, and that they shall be so applied whenever the check is presented for payment. It is an undertaking that the check is good then and shall continue good, and this agreement is as binding on the bank as its notes of circulation, a certificate of deposit payable to the order of the depositor, or any other obligation it can assume. The object of certifying a check, as regards both parties, is to enable the holder to use it as money. The transferee takes it with the same readiness and sense of security that he would take the notes of the bank. It is available, also, to him for all the purposes of money."

2. Stevens v. Corn Exchange Bank, 3 Hun (N. Y.) 151; Willets v. Phoenix Bank, 2 Duer (N. Y.) 121, 129; Farmers & Mechanics' Bank v. Butchers & Drovers' Bank, 16 N. Y. 125; s. c., 69 Am. Dec. 678; Rounds v. Smith, 42 Ill. 245.

The practice of certifying checks is now so thoroughly established that its legality can no longer be questioned. In Merchants' Bank v. State Bank, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 604, 647, the court say: "The practice of certifying checks has grown out of the business needs of the country. They enable the holder to keep or convey the amount specified with safety. They enable persons not well acquainted to deal promptly with each other, and they avoid the delay and risks of receiving, counting, and passing from hand to hand large sums of money. It is computed by a competent authority that the average daily amount of such checks in use in the city of New York, throughout the year, is not less than one hundred millions of dollars. We could hardly inflict a severer blow upon the commerce and business of the country than by throwing a doubt upon their validity."

In First Nat. Bank v. Leach, 52 N. Y. 350, the court say: "The theory of the law is that where a check is certified to be good by a bank, the amount thereof is then charged to the account of the drawer in the bank certificate account. Every well-regulated bank adopts this practice to protect itself. . . . It follows that, after a check is certified, the drawer of the check cannot draw out the funds then in the bank necessary to meet the certified check. That money is no longer his."

A certificate that a check is "good" operates as an engagement of the bank to pay the debt as its own. Meads v. Merchants' Bank, 25 N. Y. 143; Bickford v. First Nat. Bank, 42 Ill. 238.

Certification Discharges the Drawer.—By certifying a check the bank becomes the principal debtor, and the drawer is discharged. Andrews v. German Nat. Bank, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 217; Essex Co. Bank v. Bank of Montreal, 7 Biss. (C. C.) 193; First Nat. Bank v. Leach, 52 N. Y. 350; Freund v. Importers', etc., Bank, 12 Hun (N. Y.) 537; First Nat. Bank v. Whitman, 94 U. S. 343, 345.

In First Nat. Bank v. Leach, 52 N. Y. 350, the court say: "The law will not permit a check, when due, to be thus presented, and the money to be left with the bank for the accommodation of the holder without discharging the drawer."

But in Illinois it has been held that certifying a check to be "good" is nothing more than an acknowledgment that the drawer has funds on deposit to meet it, and a promise by the bank upon which it is drawn to pay it when presented, and the drawer is not thereby discharged. Bickford v. First Nat. Bank, 42 Ill. 238; Rounds v. Smith, 42 Ill. 245; Brown v. Leckie, 43 Ill. 497; Wood v. Surrells, 89 Ill. 109. See also Andrews v. German Nat. Bank, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 218.

How a Check may be Certified.—No particular form of certification is necessary. Ordinarily the bank officer writes on the check the word "good" or its equivalent, and sometimes adds his name or initials. See Barnet v. Smith, 10 Fost. (N. H.) 256; First Nat. Bank v. Whitman, 94 U. S. 343, 345; Rounds v. Smith, 42 Ill. 245, 255; Cooke v. State Nat. Bank, 52 N. Y. 96; Morse on Banking, 315.

In England the statutes of 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 78, § 2, requires a distinct promise, which must be in writing and signed. Dufaur v. Oxenden, 1 M. & R. 90; Corlett v. Conway, 5 M. & W. 655.

Verbal Acceptance.—A check may be accepted by parol; and it seems that on the presentation of a check to the cashier of a bank, his statement that it is "good" will amount in law to an acceptance.

Barnet v. Smith, 10 Fost. (N. H.) 256; National Bank v. National Bank, 7 W. Va. 544; Pope v. Bank of Albion, 59 Barb. (N. Y.) 226; Irving Bank v. Wetherald, 36 N. Y. 335. See also Espy v. Bank of Cincinnati, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 604.

In Pope v. Bank of Albion, 59 Barb. (N. Y.) 226, 238, the court say: "Any language, whether verbal or written, employed by an officer of a banking institution, whose duty it is to know the financial standing and credit of its customers, representing that a check drawn upon it is good and will be paid, estops the bank from thereafter denying, as against a bona fide holder of the check, the want of funds to pay the same. This doctrine should be most rigidly applied as against the banks."

A promise made by a bank to the drawer to pay his checks, and communicated to the holder who takes the checks on the faith of the promise, is binding upon the drawee. Nelson v. First Nat. Bank of Chicago, 48 Ill. 36.

But the bank is not liable unless the holder has taken the check on the faith of such promise. Carr v. Nat. Security Bank, 107 Mass. 45; First Nat. Bank v. Pettit, 41 Ill. 492.

Where a check is sent to the bank for information, the response of the teller that the check is "good" will be limited to the signature of the drawer and the state of his account, and will not extend to the genuineness of the payee's name or the amount of the check.

Espy v. Bank of Cincinnati, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 604, 619. Mr. Justice Miller said: The bank "is held by the law to know the drawer's signature and the state of his account. He is no more bound to know or to answer beyond these two matters than the party who presents [the check] for information. . . . For such information as the bank was willing to give, and did give, it was, no doubt, responsible, because it had reason to believe that the other party would act upon it. But only to this extent and only on this principle is it liable." See also Parke v. Roser, 67 Ind. 500.

Where a check is drawn upon a bank by a drawer who has no funds on deposit to pay the check, the bank is not liable upon its verbal promise to pay; it is a promise to pay the debt of another, and void under the Statute of Frauds. Morse v. Massachusetts Nat. Bank, 1 Holmes (C. C.), 209.

Statute of Limitations.—The statute of limitations does not begin to run against a check marked "good" until payment has been actually demanded at the bank.

What Certification Imports.—It has been held, in New York, that certifying a check imports merely that the signature is genuine, and that it is good for the amount for which it is drawn, but the genuineness of the body of the check, either as to payee or amount, is not thereby guaranteed.<sup>1</sup>

ing-house and refused. The holder of such a check does not stand in a different position from that of an original depositor. Presenting a check and having it certified is not a demand for the money deposited. Girard Bank v. Bank of Penn. Township, 39 Pa. St. 92; s. c., 80 Am. Dec. 507.

In the case just cited, the check was certified Oct. 7, 1852; the drawer's funds were drawn out Oct. 10, 1854, and the check was not presented for payment until Sept. 3, 1859. Held, that the bank was liable. See also Bank of British No. America v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 91 N. Y. 106.

1. Marine Nat. Bank v. Nat. City Bank, 59 N. Y. 67; s. c., 17 Am. Rep. 305; Clews v. Bank of New York, etc., 89 N. Y. 418; Security Bank v. Nat. Bank, 67 N. Y. 458; s. c., 23 Am. Rep. 129; White v. Continental Bank, 64 N. Y. 316; Nat. Bank of Commerce v. Nat. Mechanics' Banking Ass'n, 46 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 378; s. c., 55 N. Y. 211; 14 Am. Rep. 232; Willets v. Phoenix Bank, 2 Duer (N. Y.), 121, 129. See also Espy v. Bank of Cincinnati, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 604; Parke v. Roser, 67 Ind. 500. Compare Louisiana Nat. Bank v. Citizens' Bank, 28 La. Ann. 189; s. c., 26 Am. Rep. 921.

In Marine Nat. Bank v. Nat. City Bank, 59 N. Y. 67, the plaintiff certified a check which had been altered by changing the date, name of payee, and raising the amount, and subsequently paid the same to defendant. Held, that the amount could be recovered back as for money paid by mistake.

In Clews v. Bank of New York, etc., 89 N. Y. 418, the court say: "When the defendant certified the check to be good, it assumed a liability like that of an acceptor of a draft. By the certification it guaranteed the genuineness of the drawer's signature, and represented that it had funds of the drawer in its possession sufficient to meet the check, and it engaged that those funds should not be withdrawn from it by the drawer, to the prejudice of any bona fide holder of the check; and the certification did not impose upon the defendant any further or greater responsibility. It did not import that the body of the check was genuine or that the funds on deposit with it were absolutely applicable to the payment of the precise check certified. When, therefore, a check has been raised by some person without authority before certification, the certifying bank cannot be called upon in consequence of its certification to pay the amount of the raised check; and when a bank has thus certified a raised check by mistake and subsequently pays the money thereon without any culpable negligence on its part, it can recover the amount thus paid as money paid by mistake."

The amount paid by mistake upon a raised check may be recovered where the alteration is made after certification, unless the holder has suffered in consequence of the mistake. Nat. Bank of Commerce v. Nat. Mechanics' Banking Ass'n, 55 N. Y. 211; Clews v. Bank of New York, etc., 89 N. Y. 418.

See, however, Louisiana Nat. Bank v. Citizens' Bank, 28 La. Ann. 189, where it was held that a bank is liable to pay to a subsequent bona fide purchaser the amount of a check, which it has certified, notwithstanding the check was fraudulently raised from a smaller amount, if raised before certification.

As the certification imports a guaranty of the drawer's signature, the bank will be liable to a bona fide holder of a certified check which turns out to be a forgery. Farmers & Mechanics' Bank v. Butchers & Drovers' Bank, 16 N. Y. 125; Hagen v. Bowery Nat. Bank, 64 Barb. (N. Y.) 197; s. c., 6 Lans. (N. Y.) 490; Commercial, etc., Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 30 Md. 11.

In Hagen v. Bowery Nat. Bank, 64 Barb. (N. Y.) 197, the defendant certified a check drawn upon it as being good. The plaintiff took the check in the ordinary course of business, for value, and in good faith. The check proved to be a forgery. Held, that the bank was liable. An advertisement of the forgery of a check, if not brought home to the holder, can have no effect whatever upon his right to recover thereon. Hagen v. Bowery Nat. Bank, 64 Barb. (N. Y.) 197.

Checks Certified by Mistake.—If the bank certifies the check to be good by mistake, under the impression that the drawer had funds on deposit, and notifies the holder in sufficient time to prevent any loss in consequence of the error, it seems the bank may be discharged from liability on its certificate. Irving Bank v. Wetherald, 36 N. Y. 335; s. c., 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 323; Second Nat. Bank v. Western Nat. Bank, 51 Md. 128; s. c., 34 Am. Rep. 300. See also Meredith v. Haines, 14 W. N. C. (Pa.) 364.

5. Forged Checks.—Forgery of Signature.—The bank is bound to know the signature of its depositor, and if it pays out money on a forged check it cannot charge the depositor with the amount, but as against him must bear the loss itself.<sup>1</sup>

1. Price v. Neal, 3 Burr. 1355; Bass v. Cline, 4 Maule & S. 13; Smith v. Mercer, 6 Taunt. 76; Bank of Commerce v. Union Bank, 3 N. Y. 230; Laborde v. Consolidated Assoc., 4 Rob. (La.) 190; s. c., 39 Am. Dec. 517; Weissner v. Denison, 10 N. Y. 68; National Park Bank v. Ninth Nat. Bank, 46 N. Y. 77; Frank v. Chemical Nat. Bank, 84 N. Y. 209; Commercial, etc., Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 30 Md. 11; Hardy v. Chesapeake Bank, 51 Md. 562; Bernheimer v. Marshall, 2 Minn. 78; Mackintosh v. Eliot Nat. Bank, 123 Mass. 393; First Nat. Bank v. Ricker, 71 Ill. 439; People's Savings Bank v. Cuppa, 91 Pa. St. 315.

In Price v. Neal, 3 Burr. 1355, decided in 1762, the drawee had accepted and paid two bills of exchange, which had been forged by one Lee, who, as the reporter observes, "has been since hanged for forgery." The drawee sued the holder to recover back the money paid. Held, that the plaintiff could not recover. Lord Mansfield said: "It was incumbent upon the plaintiff to be satisfied that the bill drawn upon him was the drawer's hand before he accepted or paid it; but it was not incumbent upon the plaintiff to inquire into it. . . . The plaintiff lies by for a considerable time after he has paid these bills, and then found out that they were forged, and the forger comes to be hanged. He made no objection to them at the time of paying them. Whatever neglect there was, was on his side."

In Hardy v. Chesapeake Bank, 51 Md. 562, 585, the court, after stating the well settled rule that the relation between banker and customer is that of debtor and creditor, and that the money received on deposit becomes the funds of the bank, say: "There is no question of trust, therefore, between the parties, but their relation is purely a legal one; and if the bank pays money on a forged check, no matter under what circumstances of caution, or however honest the belief in its genuineness, if the depositor himself be free of blame, and has done nothing to mislead the bank, all the loss must be borne by the bank, for it acts at its peril, and pays out its own funds, and not those of the depositor. It is in view of this relation of the parties, and of their rights and obligations, that the principle is universally maintained, that banks and bankers are bound to know the signatures of their customers, and that they pay checks purporting to be drawn by them at their peril."

In Mackintosh v. Eliot Nat. Bank, 123 Mass. 393, the bank paid three checks purporting to be signed by the plaintiff, which had, however, been forged by his clerk. The forgery was committed on a blank form, taken from the depositor's check-book, which was lying about in his office during the day, and the checks were stamped with plaintiff's hand stamp. The clerk was allowed to fill up checks, and had been introduced by plaintiff to the bank as a proper person to receive money on his checks. Held, that these facts did not exempt the bank from liability for the loss. See also Bank of Ireland v. Trustees, etc., 5 H. L. Cas. 410.

Identification.—A bank is also bound to ascertain that the party presenting the check is the one entitled to receive payment, under penalty of refunding the amount either to the party really entitled or to the drawer. Millard v. Nat. Bank of the Republic, 3 McArthur (C. C.) 54; Seventh Nat. Bank v. Cook, 73 Pa. St. 483; s. c., 13 Am. Rep. 751; Johnson v. First Nat. Bank of Hoboken, 6 Hun (N. Y.) 124; Welsh v. German Am. Bank, 73 N. Y. 424; Thomson v. Bank of British N. America, 82 N. Y. 1.

In Seventh Nat. Bank v. Cook, 73 Pa. St. 483, a check was drawn to Cook; Barnes, his clerk, indorsed Cook's name without his authority and received the money. The bank deducted the amount of the check from the drawer's account and settled with him on that basis. Held, that Cook could recover the amount of the check from the bank.

Effect of Paying Forged Check to bona-fide Holder.—If a bank pays a forged check to a holder without fault, who, in ignorance of the fraud, pays value for it, the money cannot be recovered back. Commercial & Farmers' Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 30 Md. 11; Nat. Bank of Commerce v. Grocers' Nat. Bank, 35 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 412; Salt Springs Bank v. Syracuse Sav. Inst., 62 Barb. (N. Y.)

Where, however, the loss can be traced to the fault or negligence of the drawer (or holder) it will be fixed upon him.<sup>1</sup>

101; First Nat. Bank v. Ricker, 71 Ill. 439; Bank of St. Albans v. Farmers & Mechanics' Bank, 10 Vt. 141; Bernheimer v. Marshall, 2 Minn. 78. See also Bank of Commerce v. Union Bank, 3 N. Y. 230; Goddard v. Merchants' Bank, 4 N. Y. 147; Weisser v. Denison, 10 N. Y. 75. where this rule is recognized.

In Commercial, etc., Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 30 Md. 11, H., a stranger of respectable appearance, opened an account with the former bank, and deposited a check on the latter bank for $4600, purporting to have been drawn by A. to the depositor's order. On the following day it was sent through the clearing-house, and the drawee bank pronounced the check genuine and charged it to A.'s account. H., two days after opening his account, called at the Commercial Bank with his bank-book, filled up a check for $4500, payable to his order, which was paid by the teller after inquiry as to his identity and the state of his account. One week afterwards the check deposited by H. was discovered to be a forgery, and notice thereof was given to the Commercial Bank and repayment of the money demanded. Upon refusal the First National Bank, having refunded to A. the amount of the forged check, sued the Commercial Bank to recover the amount thus paid. Held, that the bank was bound to know its depositor's signature, and that the plaintiffs were not entitled to recover. The court say: "There is no reason why the loss as between parties thus equally innocent and equally deceived, but where one is bound to know and act upon his knowledge, and the other has no means of knowledge, should be thrown upon the latter in exoneration of the former. The safest rule for the commercial public, as well as that most consistent with justice, is to allow the loss to remain where by the course of business it has been placed."

1. De Ferret v. Bank of America, 23 La. Ann. 310; Smith v. Mechanics' Bank, 6 La. Ann. 610; First Nat. Bank v. Ricker, 71 Ill. 439. 446; Hardy v. Chesapeake Bank, 51 Md. 585; National Bank of North America v. Bangs, 106 Mass. 441; Young v. Grote, 4 Bing. 253.

A forged check payable to the order of a merchant in Texas was presented by him to the bank for payment. He was in good standing and well known to the bank, and having indorsed the check, it was paid. The merchant had once before received a check signed by the same party, but with a different name, and did not communicate this fact to the bank. As soon as the party whose name had been forged examined his bank statement—about five or six weeks afterwards—the forgery was discovered and the payee immediately notified. Held, that the payee had been guilty of negligence in not informing the bank of the suspicious circumstances attending the execution of the check, and that the bank could recover from him the amount thereof. Rouvant v. San Antonio Nat. Bank, 63 Tex. 610.

In First Nat. Bank v. Ricker, 71 Ill. 439. the holder of a forged check, which he had received innocently, afterwards acquired knowledge of facts which threw suspicion upon the genuineness of the drawer's signature, and demanded payment without disclosing such facts. The teller informed him he did not certainly know the signature to the check, and would only pay it upon condition that the holder would indorse it. The holder accordingly indorsed it and received the money thereon, and within a few hours the bank discovered the forgery. Held, that the bank could recover the money thus paid, and that it was the holder's duty to have communicated to the bank suspicions he may have had as to the spurious character of the check.

In De Ferret v. Bank of America, 23 La. Ann. 310, the plaintiff had a bookkeeper who kept his cash accounts, had charge of his bank-book, and made his deposits. The bookkeeper drew a check on the bank for $2500, to which he forged plaintiff's signature. As the amount exceeded plaintiff's deposit, the bank notified him of that fact. Upon being shown the check, he said he had not signed it, but did not say it was a forgery, and continued the bookkeeper in his employment until a week afterwards, when the bookkeeper drew another check on the bank for $1700, forging the plaintiff's signature, which the bank paid on presentation. Plaintiff upon discovering the second forgery denounced the act, and brought suit to recover the balance of his bank account, including these checks. Held, that the act of the plaintiff in ratifying the forgery of the first check exonerated the bank from liability for having paid it, and that by afterwards keeping the bookkeeper in his confidential employ he misled the bank and threw it off its guard, and excused it for paying a subsequent check similarly drawn, and that the plaintiff must bear the loss. The court say: "The peculiar facts and circumstances of this case, taken together, must relieve the bank from the stringent rule that the depository must take care to pay none but the checks or drafts of the depositor himself or his acknowledged special agent, and this is a proper case to apply the equitable principle that where one of two innocent parties must suffer, it should be he who was the cause or occasion of the confidence and consequent injury of the other."

In Gloucester Bank v. Salem Bank, 17 Mass. 33, 41, Parker, J., says: "If the loss can be traced to the fault or negligence of either party, it should be fixed on him. Generally, where no fault or negligence is imputable, the loss has been suffered to remain where the course of business has placed it." See also National Bank v. Tappan, 6 Kan. 466.

Where plaintiff's clerk received checks from certain debtors, payable to their order, and forged their indorsements and negotiated them, and they were paid by the defendant, plaintiffs, on a subsequent discovery of the forgery, brought suit against the defendant, and were held entitled to recover. Johnson v. First Nat. Bank of Hoboken, 6 Hun (N. Y.), 124.

In Levy v. Bank of United States, 4 Dall. (Pa.) 234; s. c., 1 Binn. (Pa.) 27, the plaintiff deposited in the bank a check purporting to be drawn by one of its customers, which was entered on his bank book as cash, and passed to his credit on the books of the bank. Later in the day the check was discovered by the bank to be a forgery, and the plaintiff was notified thereof and asked to make the amount good. In a suit by the depositor to recover the sum, held, that entering the check as cash was equivalent to payment, and the bank must bear the loss.

In Minnesota, it has been held that, upon payment of a forged draft, the drawee and holder both being chargeable with negligence, and both acting in good faith, the loss must fall upon the drawee. Bernheimer v. Marshall, 2 Minn. 78.

But in Ohio the rule has been laid down that where the parties are equally in fault, and money is paid upon a mutual mistake of facts, in respect to which both were equally bound to inquire, it may be recovered back. Ellis v. Ohio Life Ins. & Trust Co., 4 Ohio St. 628.

Rule in Pennsylvania.—The law that a voluntary payment of a check to a bona fide holder for value cannot be demanded back, has been changed in Pennsylvania by the act of April 5th, 1849 (Pamphlet Laws, 426), and in that State a bank paying money on a forged check can recover it back. Tradesmen's Nat. Bank v. Third Nat. Bank, 66 Pa. St. 435; Chambers v. Union Nat. Bank, 78 Pa. St. 205; Corn Exch. Bank v. Nat. Bank of the Republic, 78 Pa. 233; Union Nat. Bank v. Chambers, 9 Phila. 131.

It has been held in Massachusetts that where the payee takes a check, drawn payable to his order, from a stranger or other third person without inquiry, although in good faith and for value, and gives it credit by indorsing it before receiving payment on it, the bank may recover back the money paid to him, if it proves to be a forgery. Nat. Bank of North America v. Bangs, 106 Mass. 441.

In Young v. Grote, 4 Bing. 253, the customer of a banker delivered to his wife certain printed checks signed by himself, but with blanks for the sums, and requested her to fill up the checks according to the exigency of his business in his absence. She filled a check up so carelessly as to be easily changed by her husband's clerk from £50 to £350. The bank having paid the check, it was held the customer must bear the loss, the court saying: "If it be the fault of the customer that the banker pays more than he ought, he cannot be called on to pay again."

Discovery and Notice of Forgery.—To entitle the drawee to recover back money paid on a forged check, the forgery must be discovered within a reasonable time, and notice of the forgery given as soon as discovered. Ellis v. Ohio Life Ins. & Trust Co., 4 Ohio St. 628; First Nat. Bank v. Tappan, 6 Kans. 456; Bank of Commerce v. Union Bank, 3 Coms. (N. Y.) 230, 236. See also Weiser v. Denison, 6 Seld. (N. Y.) 68, where Allen, J., says: "Mere lapse of time in the abstract, however long, will not bar the rights of the party to allege the forgery, provided he does it within a reasonable time after it is discovered." Notice on the day next succeeding the discovery of the forgery is within a reasonable time. Third Nat. Bank of St. Louis v. Allen, 59 Mo. 310. In Chambers v. Union Nat. Bank, 78 Pa. St. 205, the forgery was not discovered for two weeks after payment, when notice was at once given by the bank and payment demanded. Held, that the demand was in time. Two months' delay in giving notice after discovering the forgery has been held to prevent the drawee from recovering. Bank of St. Albans v. Farmers & Mechanics' Bank, 10 Vt. 141. See also Cocks v. Masterman, 9 Barn & C. 92; Canal Bank v. Bank of Albany, 1 Hill (N. Y.), 287; Frank v. Chemical Nat.

Fraudulent Alterations after Signature.—A fraudulent alteration in a material particular made in the body of the check after signature constitutes a forgery, and vitiates the check even in the hands of a bona fide holder for value.<sup>1</sup>

6. Damages for Wrongful Dishonor of Checks.—The wrongful dishonor by the bank of its depositor's check is a breach of duty, and entitles him to bring an action against the bank for damages.<sup>2</sup>

Bank, 45 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 452; Welsh v. German-American Bank, 73 N. Y. 424; United States v. Nat. Park Bank, 6 Fed. Rep. 852; Redington v. Woods, 45 Cal. 406.

If the drawee bring suit against the party to whom he has paid the check without giving him notice of the forgery, he will not be entitled to recover. United States v. Central Nat. Bank, 6 Fed. Rep. 134. And the drawee must also return or offer to return him the check, otherwise he cannot recover. Redington v. Woods, 45 Cal. 406.

1. Wade v. Withington, 1 Allen (Mass.) 561; Belknap v. Nat. Bank of North America, 100 Mass. 376; Mahaiwe Bank v. Douglass, 31 Conn. 170; Vance v. Lowther, 1 Ex. Div. 176; 16 Moak's Eng. Rep. 583.

Raised Checks.—As between the bank and the depositor, payment of a check which has been fraudulently altered in amount is the loss of the bank, unless the check has been so carelessly drawn as to afford opportunity for alteration. Young v. Grote, 4 Bing. 253; Smith v. Mercer, 6 Taunt. 76; Hall v. Fuller, 5 Barn. & C. 750; Coles v. Bank of England, 10 Ad. & Ell. 449; Bank of Ireland v. Trustees, 5 H. L. C. 410; Mahaiwe Bank v. Douglass, 31 Conn. 170; Wade v. Withington, 1 Allen (Mass.), 561; Belknap v. Nat. Bank of N. A., 100 Mass. 376.

In Hall v. Fuller, 5 Barn. & Co. 750, the check of a depositor was fraudulently altered from £3 to £200 after issue, and was paid by the bank at the latter amount. Held, that the bank was only entitled to charge £3 to the depositor.

Bayley, J., said: "If, unfortunately, the banker pays money belonging to the customer upon an order which is not genuine, he must suffer; and to justify the payment he must show that the order is genuine, not in the signature only, but in every respect. The bank, however, is not bound to know the handwriting in the body of the check, and if it pays by mistake a raised or altered check, the excess over the true amount may be recovered back. Redington v. Woods, 45 Cal. 406; Third Nat. Bank v. Allen, 59 Mo.

310; Canal Bank v. Bank of Albany, 1 Hill (N. Y.), 287; Nat. Park Bank v. Ninth Nat. Bank, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 87; s. c., 46 N. Y. 77; Coghill v. American Ex. Bank, 1 N. Y. 113; Bank of Commerce v. Union Bank, 3 Coms. (N. Y.) 230; Nat. Bank of Commerce v. Nat. Mechanics' Banking Ass'n, 55 N. Y. 211; Merchants' Bank v. Exchange Bank, 16 La. 457.

Alteration in Date.—The change in the date of a check, whereby the time of payment is accelerated, is a material alteration, and when made without the consent of the drawer, destroys its validity. Crawford v. West Side Bank, 100 N. Y. 50; Vance v. Lowther, L. R. 1 Exch. Div. 176.

Forged Indorsements.—The bank in paying a check is only bound to know the signatures of the drawer and the person who presents it for payment, and if it be shown that the signatures of the indorsers preceding that of the one receiving payment are forgeries, the bank cannot on that account be held to a second payment. Levy v. Bank of America, 24 La. Ann. 220; s. c., 13 Am. Rep. 124. See also Vanbibber v. Bank of Louisiana, 14 La. Ann. 481; Dodge v. Nat. Exchange Bank, 20 Ohio St. 234; Morgan v. Bank, 1 Duer (N. Y.), 434.

The holder by indorsing the check warrants the genuineness of all prior indorsements. Turnbull v. Bowyer, 40 N. Y. 456. See also Harris v. Bradley, 7 Verg. 310; Jones v. Ryde, 5 Taunt. 488.

2. Buchall v. Third Nat. Bank, 15 W. N. C. (Pa.) 174; Saylor v. Bushong, 100 Pa. St. 23; National Machine Bank v. Peck, 127 Mass. 298; Fogarties v. Bank, 8 Am. L. Reg. (O. S.) 93; Viets v. Union Nat. Bank, 101 N. Y. 563; Citizens' Nat. Bank v. Importers' Nat. Bank, 44 Hun (N. Y.), 386; Rolin v. Stewart, 14 C. B. 595; Marzetti v. Williams, 1 Barn. & Ad. 415.

In National Machine Bank v. Peck, 127 Mass. 298, Gray, C. J., said: "So long as the balance of account to the credit of the depositor exceeds the amount of any debt due and payable by him to the bank, the bank is bound to honor his check, and is liable to an action by him if it does not."

Measure of Damages.—The depositor, by proving special loss, may recover special damages from the bank for its breach of duty; but if unable to do so, he may recover such temperate damages as will be a reasonable compensation for the injury he has sustained.<sup>1</sup>

7. Check-holder's Right to Sue the Bank.—Whether the check-holder may sue the bank upon its refusal to pay the check, although holding sufficient funds of the drawer, is a question upon which there is a conflict of authority. The weight of authority, however, seems to be against the check-holder's right of action.<sup>2</sup>

An agent who has improperly obtained and deposited in his private account funds of an undisclosed principal may recover damages from the bank for refusal to honor his check upon them. Tassell v. Cooper, 9 C. B. (67 Eng. C. L. Rep.) 509.

1. Rolin v. Stewart, 14 C. B. (78 E. C. L. R.) 595; Boyd v. Fitt, 14 Irish Common Law (N. S.), 43; Larios v. Bonany y Gurety, L. R. 5 P. C. 346; Prehn v. Royal Bank of Liverpool, L. R. 5 Exch. 92. See also Birchall v. Third Nat. Bank, 15 W. N. C. (Pa.) 174; s. c., 19 Central L. j. 390, and note by Eugene McQuillin, Esq.

In Marzetti v. Williams, 1 Barn. & Ad. 415, plaintiff drew a check on his banker, who refused to pay it, although sufficient funds had been deposited to meet the check four hours before it was presented. The check was paid on the following day. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to nominal damages, although no actual damage was proved.

In Rolin v. Stewart, 14 C. B. 595, three checks of plaintiffs were refused payment by their banker when they had sufficient funds in his hands to meet them. There was no evidence that plaintiffs had sustained any special damage. Lord Campbell, C. J., charged the jury that they ought not to limit their verdict to nominal damages, but should give the plaintiffs such temperate damages as they should judge to be a reasonable compensation for the injury they must have sustained from the dishonor of their checks. Verdict for plaintiffs for £500, which was reduced by agreement to £200. Held, that the jury had not been misdirected. Williams, J., said: "I think it cannot be denied that, if one who is not a trader were to bring an action against a banker for dishonoring a check at a time when he had funds of the customer's in his hands sufficient to meet it, and special damage were alleged and proved, the plaintiff would be entitled to recover substantial damages. And when it is alleged and proved that the plaintiff is a trader, I think it is equally clear that the jury, in estimating the damages, may take into their consideration the natural and necessary consequences which must result to the plaintiff from the defendant's breach of contract; just as in the case of an action for a slander of a person in the way of his trade, or in the case of an imputation of insolvency on a trader, the action lies without proof of special damage."

In Birchall v. Third Nat. Bank, 15 W. N. C. (Pa.) 174, plaintiff drew two checks on the bank defendant, which were refused payment through an error of defendant's clerk in balancing plaintiff's account. There was no proof of special damage. Hare, P. J., in charging the jury, said: "Inasmuch as the bank has the use of the money, it undertakes a duty. When there is evidence that there is enough deposit to meet a check drawn, and such check was not paid on presentation, and no sufficient explanation is given for non-payment, there is sufficient for a jury. The difficulty is not so much whether the bank is liable, but as to the measure of damages. If there was anything to indicate that the conduct of the bank was wilful, or that it delayed to make the reparation, such as it could make, there, undoubtedly, another element would arise for the jury to mulct the bank; but there is no such case here. . . . The mere fact that plaintiff was obliged to bring suit, if he ought to obtain any compensation; the mere fact that he was disturbed in his business—might be reason to apply to the jury to give him compensation for it; but the serious question is: What is this injury, the real harm he suffered? It has been said that the smaller the check, the greater the injury. I confess it does not strike me in that light; it is altogether a question of circumstances." Verdict for plaintiff for $1000, which the court subsequently reduced to $600.

2. It is held, on the one hand, that there is no right of action in such case, because there is no privity of contract between the check-holder and the bank until the check is presented and accepted. This doctrine seems to be supported by the weight of authority, and is maintained by the supreme court of the United States and the courts of Pennsylvania, New York, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Indiana, and several other States. It is also the settled rule in England. Bank of the Republic v. Millard, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 152; First Nat. Bank v. Whitman, 94 U. S. 343; Seventh Nat. Bank v. Cook, 73 Pa. St. 483; Saylor v. Bushong, 100 Pa. St. 23; Chapman v. White, 6 N. Y. 412; Etina Nat. Bank v. Fourth Nat. Bank, 46 N. Y. 82; Duncan v. Berlin, 60 N. Y. 151; Carr v. National Security Bank, 107 Mass. 45; Creveling v. Bloomsburg Nat. Bank, 46 N. J. Law. 255; Nat. Commercial Bank v. Miller, 77 Ala. 168; Case v. Henderson, 23 La. Ann. 49; National Bank of Rockville v. Second Nat. Bank, 69 Ind. 479; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 236; Griffin v. Kemp, 46 Ind. 172; Harrison v. Wright, 100 Ind. 515; Bank v. Merritt, 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 177; Bank v. Keese, 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 200; Colorado Nat. Bank v. Boettcher, 5 Col. 185; Mayer v. Chattahoochee Nat. Bank, 51 Ga. 325; Bush v. Foote, 58 Miss. 5; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Coates, 79 Mo. 168; Dickinson v. Coates, 79 Mo. 250; Coates v. Doran, 83 Mo. 337; Hopkinson v. Foster, 19 Eq. Cas. L. R. 74; Wharton v. Walker, 4 Barn. & Cress 163; Warwick v. Rogers, 5 Mann. & G. 374; Schroeder v. Central Bank, 34 L. T. R. (N. S.) 735.

The doctrine upon which this class of decisions is founded is well stated in Bank of the Republic v. Millard, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 156, where Mr. Justice Davis says: "On principle, there can be no foundation for an action on the part of the holder, unless there is a privity of contract between him and the bank. How can there be such a privity when the bank owes no duty and is under no obligation to the holder? The holder takes the check on the credit of the drawer in the belief that he has funds to meet it; but in no sense can the bank be said to be connected with the transaction. If it were true that there was a privity of contract between the banker and holder when the check was given, the bank would be obliged to pay the check, although the drawer, before it was presented, had countermanded it, and although other checks, drawn after it was issued, but before payment of it was demanded, had exhausted the funds of the depositor. If such a result should follow the giving of checks, it is easy to see that bankers would be compelled to abandon altogether the business of keeping deposit accounts for their customers. If, then, the bank did not contract with the holder of the check to pay it at the time it was given, how can it be said that it owes any duty to the holder until the check is presented and accepted."

There are cases, on the other hand, which assert a contrary doctrine upon the ground of an implied promise by the bank to the check-holder, arising from the well-known usages of the banking business. That the check-holder may sue the bank for improperly dishonoring the check is the rule in Illinois, Iowa, and South Carolina. Munn v. Burch, 25 Ill. 35; Brown v. Leckie, 43 Ill. 497; Fourth Nat. Bank v. City Nat. Bank, 68 Ill. 308; Union Nat. Bank v. Oceana Co. Bank, 80 Ill. 212; Ridgely Nat. Bank v. Patton, 109 Ill. 479, 485; Nat. Bank of America v. Indiana Banking Co., 114 Ill. 483; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Ritzinger, 20 Bradwell (Ill.), 27; Roberts v. Corbin, 26 Iowa, 315; Fogarties v. State Bank, 12 Rich. Law (S. Car.) 518; s. c., 78 Am. Dec. 468. See also Lester v. Given, 8 Bush (Ky.), 357; McGrade v. German Sav. Inst., 4 Mo. App. 330; Zelle v. German Sav. Inst., 4 Mo. App. 401; McGregor v. Loomis, 1. Disney (Ohio), 247, 255; Ancona v. Marks, 7 Hurl. & N. 686; Senter v. Continental Bank, 7 Mo. App. 532.

In Munn v. Burch, 25 Ill. 35, 40, Caton, C. J., says: "Universal custom shows us what the contract of all the parties is. It shows us that the banker, when he receives the deposit, agrees with the depositor to pay it out on the presentation of his checks, in such sums as those checks may call for, and to the person presenting them; and with the whole world he agrees that whoever shall become the owner of such check shall, upon presentation, thereby become the owner and entitled to receive the amount called for by the check, provided the drawer shall at that time have that amount on deposit. . . . Surely every sound lawyer will at once perceive a privity of contract between the banker and the holder of the check, created by the implied promise held out to the world by the banker on the one side, and the receiving of the check for value and presenting it on the other."

In Union Nat. Bank v. Oceana Co. Bank, 80 Ill. 212, payment was refused because the drawer of the check had ordered the bank not to pay it. Held, that the bank was liable to the holder for the amount of the check.

CHEMIST—CHEROKEE—CHEVISANCE—CHICORY.

CHEMIST. See note 1.

CHEROKEE.—The name of a tribe of Indians now settled in the Indian Territory.<sup>2</sup>

CHEVISANCE.—A bargaining or perfecting of a bargain. A bargain or contract. An unlawful or usurious bargain or contract.<sup>3</sup>

CHICORY.—A plant whose root is used as an adulterant of coffee.<sup>4</sup>

Scott, C. J., said: "The principle of all the cases in this court on the subject is, that when a depositor draws his check on his banker, who has funds to an equal or greater sum than his check, it operates to transfer the sum named to the payee, who may sue for and recover the amount from the bank, and that a transfer of the check carries with it the title to the amount named in the check to each successive holder. After the check has passed to the hands of a bona fide holder it is not in the power of the drawer to countermand the order of payment."

Implied Acceptance.—If the bank impliedly promise to pay the check, the holder may sue if payment be refused. Thus, where a depositor settled his account with the bank, and left the exact amount of an outstanding check for its payment, and the bank tacitly retained the money and settled on that basis, it was held liable to the holder on the implied acceptance. Saylor v. Bushong, 100 Pa. St. 23.

Placing a check on the cancelling fork by the cashier of the bank is not such an acceptance as will prevent him from correcting the mistake and declining to pay the check upon discovering that the drawer's funds are insufficient. Nat. Bank of Rockville v. Second Nat. Bank, 69 Ind. 479.

Authorities for Checks.—Morse on Banking (2d Ed.); Daniel on Negotiable Instruments; Bolles on Banks.

1. In an action for penalties under 55 G. 3, c. 194, s. 20, for practising as an apothecary, by attending, advising, and furnishing medicines without certificate, the defence was that defendant was a chemist and druggist, and therefore protected by sec. 28, which enacts that nothing in the statute shall affect the business of a chemist and druggist in "the buying, preparing, compounding, dispensing, and vending drugs, medicines," etc.; but all persons using, or who shall use, that business may use, exercise, and carry on the same as fully and amply as the same was used, etc., by chemists and druggists before the passing of the act. Held, that defendant, to bring himself within this clause (if available), was bound to show by evidence that druggists and chemists did in fact attend, advise, and furnish medicines before the statute was passed. And a verdict found for the defendant on the ground that no evidence had been given on this point by plaintiffs was set aside on motion for new trial. Semles per Coleridge, J., and held by Patterson-J., that the words of sec. 28 do not exempt druggists and chemists intending to practise as apothecaries. Apothecaries Co. v. Greenough, 1 Ad. & El. N. S. (41 E. C. L. R.) 799.

2. Land described as "Cherokee land" is not necessarily land ceded to the Cherokee nation of Indians by the treaty of December, 1835. Ephraim v. Garlick, 10 Kan. 280.

3. Burrill's L. D.: "An end or order set down between a creditor and creditor; an indirect gain in point of usury." Repalje & Lawr. L. D.

"Now I take it that any dealing by chevisance [used in the Bankrupt Act of 13 Eliz. c. 7] was really and truly the same thing as the business of a scrivener, so far as dealing in money was the object of the trade of a scrivener; that is, a person who dealt in money and was called a money-broker. The statute 21 Jac. I. uses the words 'trade or profession of a scrivener.' The old word 'chevisance' being then out of use, it had become doubtful whether scrivener was included in the act, and therefore these words were introduced." In re Warren, 2 Sch. & Lef. 423.

4. Under an act imposing a duty on ground chicory, it is not error for the court to say to the jury that ground chicory is the same thing as burnt chicory, as chicory root cannot be ground until it is burnt, and burnt chicory is not an article of commerce until it is ground. Whether or not an article imported is something other than ground chicory, is a question for the jury. Arthur v. Herald, 10 Otto (U. S.), 75.

CHIEF.—Highest in rank or office; principal.<sup>1</sup>

CHILD—CHILDREN. (See also ADOPTION OF CHILDREN; BASTARDY; DEVISE; LEGACY; PARENT AND CHILD; SEDUCTION; WILLS.)—The living offspring of human parents, either before or after birth.<sup>2</sup> A young person of either sex. The limits of the age of childhood are undefined.<sup>3</sup> A descendant in the first

1. Webster, e.g., Chief Justice, Chief Baron, etc.

Under an act requiring an affidavit verifying the return of issues of unstamped bills and notes by bankers, a manager of a bank is within the term "chief clerk." "Both in a joint-stock and in a private bank, every one employed, whether he is called manager or secretary, in reality is nothing more than a clerk, and the heads of the separate departments may properly be called chief clerks." The Queen v. Greenland, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 65.

The business of calico-printing consists of four processes: bleaching, printing, dyeing, and finishing. Three of these, viz., bleaching, dyeing, and finishing, were carried on at one branch of an establishment, and the printing at another. It was held that the former was an "establishment where the chief process of printing was carried on," within the meaning of a statute regulating the labor of children. They both made up one establishment, the principal object of which was printing, the other processes being incidental. Hoyle v. Oram, 12 C. B. (N. S.) 124.

2. In Statutes.—Concealment of Birth or Child-murder.—"This offence cannot be committed unless the child had arrived at that stage of maturity at the time of birth that it might have been a living child. . . . No specific limit can be assigned to the period when the chance of life begins, but it may perhaps be safely assumed that under seven months the great probability is that the child would not be born alive." Erle, J., in Reg. v. Berriman, 6 Cox C. C. 388. Whether the child had been alive was left to the jury as a question of fact in Reg. v. Hewitt, 4 F. & F. 1101. But Martin, B., "saw nothing to limit the word 'child' in the statute to a child likely to live or likely to die; but that as soon as the foetus had the outward appearance of a child it was sufficient." Reg. v. Colmer, 9 Cox C. C. 506; Bishop on Statutory Crimes, 772.

Procuring or Attempting Abortion.—"Quick with child" means having conceived: "with quick child" is when the child has quickened. Reg. v. Wycherly, 8 C. & P. 262 and n. But it is said that the term "quick with child" means that the woman has felt the child alive and quick within her; and where a woman in the fourth month of her pregnancy swore that she had not felt the child move within her, she was held not to have been quick. 3 Camp. 76; Comm: v. Parker, 9 Metc. (Mass.) 263. And the distinction made in Reg. v. Wycherly was distinctly repudiated in State v. Cooper, 2 Zab. (N. J.) 52, where it was said: "The terms are synonymous, both importing that the child had quickened in the womb and that the period had arrived when the life of the infant, in contemplation of law, had commenced."

The expression "pregnant with child" in a statute applies to every stage of pregnancy from earliest conception to actual expulsion from the womb. State v. Howard, 32 Vt. 400. And a "woman with child" is equivalent to a "pregnant woman." Eckhardt v. People, 22 Hun, 525; s. c., 83 N. Y. 462.

3. A female ceases to be a "child" and becomes a "woman" within the meaning of an act prescribing punishment for rape, at the age of puberty. Hence a female seventeen years old is a woman, not a child. Blackburn v. State, 22 Ohio St. 102.

In an act defining aggravated assault, "child" is not synonymous with minor. It means one of tender years, and is to be taken in the sense in which it is understood in common language, reference being had to the comparative size and strength of the assaulted and assaulter. A boy fourteen years old, weighing 125 pounds, is not a child. McGregor v. State, 4 Tex. App. 599; Allen v. State, 7 Tex. App. 298.

Poor Children.—A person over twenty-one years of age is not a "poor child" within an act relating to the binding out of such. The King v. Inhabitants of St. John Bedwardine, 5 B. & Ad. 169.

A devise in trust "for feeding, clothing, and educating the poor children belonging to the congregation of St. Peter's, etc.," was held void for uncertainty in Dashiell v. Atty-Gen., 5 H. & J. (Md.) 392; s. c., 9 Am. Dec. 572.

degree, of either sex,<sup>1</sup> born in lawful wedlock,<sup>2</sup> of human parents. The word "children" is usually confined to immediate descend-

1. "Children has a legal signification, . . . never permitting the term 'sons' to be substituted for it, unless such shall be the plain intention of a testator in his will in favor of sons to the exclusion of daughters." Weatherhead's Lessee v. Baskerville, 11 How. 329.

2. Bastards are Not Children.—As a general rule, bastards are not within the meaning of the terms "child" and "children" when used in a will. Hill v. Crook, L. R. 6 H. L. 265; Paul v. Children, L. R. 12 Eq. 116; Ellis v. Houston, L. R. 10 Ch. Div. 236; Cartwright v. Vawdry, 5 Ves. 530; Bell v. Phyn, 7 Ves. 453; Heater v. Van Auker, 14 N. J. Eq. 159; Van Voorhis v. Brintnall, 23 Hun (N. Y.), 260; Gardner v. Heyer, 2 Paige (N. Y.), 11; Shearman v. Angell, 1 Bail. Eq. (S. Car.) 351; C. C. La. 3556.

This rule is subject to exception only when it is absolutely necessary to construe the words "child" or "children" to include illegitimate children, in order to effectuate the intention of the testator, or where there is an obvious intention to be gathered from the will itself that the terms should include illegitimates. Hill v. Crook, L. R. 6 H. L. 265; Palmer v. Horn, 84 N. Y. 516.

Accordingly, where a legacy was left in trust for the child or children of A., the illegitimate children of A. took nothing, though he had none others. Harris v. Lloyd, 1 T. & R. 310. And this is the case although the testator knew that there were none others, it being possible that children coming properly within the description should be born. Godfrey v. Davis, 6 Ves. 44; Dorin v. Dorin, L. R. 7 H. L. 568. And so long as there are legitimate children to take, bastards can never come under the designation "children." Ellis v. Houston, L. R. 10 Ch. Div. 236; Bagley v. Mollard, 1 Russ. & M. 581; Collins v. Hoxie, 9 Paige (N. Y.), 81. And this holds good where the parents of the bastard married after her birth, and concealed her illegitimacy from her and the world, but had other children subsequently. Cartwright v. Vawdry, 5 Ves. 530; Heater v. Van Auker, 14 N. J. Eq. 159. In the last case the court said: "Under a devise or bequest to 'children' as a class, natural children are not included, unless the testator's intention to include them is manifest, either by express designation or necessary implication." Collins v. Hoxie, 9 Paige (N. Y.), 11.

Extrinsic evidence is not admissible to show the testator's intention to include bastards in the general designation. Gardner v. Heyer, 2 Paige (N. Y.), 11; Shearman v. Angell, 1 Bail. Eq. (S. C.) 351; s. c., 23 Am. Dec. 166. In Shearman v. Angell, the legitimate half-brothers and sisters of the testator, who was himself a bastard, took to the exclusion of his full sister, also a bastard.

A manifest intention to include illegitimates in the designation of "children" was held to appear in a case where the mother of the children mentioned had only illegitimate children, she having gone through the ceremony of marriage with the husband of her deceased sister, and having had all her children by him. Hill v. Crook, L. R. 6 H. L. 265.

Bastards are generally admitted to take as a class where they are the only children and have acquired the name of children by reputation. Beachcroft v. Beachcroft, 1 Madd. 430; Hill v. Crook, L. R. 6 H. L. 265. And it seems also where there are legitimate children and the mother is named. Wilkinson v. Adam, 1 V. & B. 422. A bastard cannot acquire such a reputation before birth. Under a bequest "to such child or children as A. may happen to be enroute of by me," a child of which she was at the time pregnant cannot take; non constat that it was "by him." Earle v. Wilson, 17 Ves. 528.

The term "children" embraces those born out of lawful wedlock who are legitimized by the subsequent marriage of their parents, or by a statute which provides that the children of a marriage null in law shall be legitimate. Carroll v. Carroll, 20 Tex. 731. And see Drain v. Violet, 2 Bush (Ky.), 155.

Where a testator left property "to my beloved wife C., and after her death to my surviving children;" and after his death a woman J. claimed to have been married to him before C., and brought suit for dower and recovered: held, the term "children" in the will only included those by C., and not those by J. Gelston v. Shields, 16 Hun, 143; s. c., 78 N. Y. 275. See 2 Jarman on Wills, c. 31.

In statutes of descents and distribution the words "child" and "children" are held to mean legitimate children only. Blacklaws v. Milne, 82 Ill. 505; Porter's Heirs v. Porter, 7 How. (Miss.) 106; s. c., 40 Am. Dec. 55. Contra, Heath v. White, 5 Conn. 228; Dickinson's App., 42 Conn. 491. And in Kentucky it has been decided that in such a statute the word "children" is ants—those of the first generation; it does not include grandchildren or more remote descendants.<sup>1</sup> It is consequently, when not confined to those born in lawful wedlock, but includes all who are by law capable of inheriting; and that a bastard recognized by his father and made capable of inheriting by an act of the legislature came within the term. Drain v. Violet, 2 Bush (Ky.), 155. So an illegitimate is not within an act making provision for a child or children, whose parent has neglected or omitted to provide for them in his will. Kent v. Barker, 2 Gray (Mass.), 535. Contra, Est. of Wardell, 57 Cal. 484. A bastard is not a child within an act giving an action for damages to children for the death of a parent. Dickinson v. N. E. R. Co., 2 H. & C. 735.

In an act providing for the descent of the property of bastards, where it is enacted that "in case of the death of any such illegitimate person, leaving no widow, surviving husband, or descendants, then the property shall descend to and vest in the mother and her children," etc. "Children" includes illegitimates. Rogers v. Weller, 5 Bis. (C. C.) 166.

In an order under a poor law, adjudicating upon the settlement of a woman and her children, specifying a bastard among children is a misdescription. The Queen v. Overseers of Birmingham, 8 Q. B. 410.

In Connecticut the common law on this subject has been completely overthrown, and bastards are held to be children. Heath v. White, 5 Conn. 228; Hughes v. Knowlton, 37 Conn. 423; Dickinson's App., 42 Conn. 491.

1. Grandchildren are Not Children.—Children, both in common and legal parlance, does not include grandchildren, but embraces only the first generation of offspring of the ancestor named. Radcliffe v. Buckley, 14 Ves. 576; Ingraham v. Meade, 3 Wall. Jr. (C. C.) 32; Adams v. Law, 17 How. (U. S.) 417; McGuire v. Westmoreland, 36 Ala. 594; Willis v. Jenkins, 30 Ga. 167; Walker v. Williamson, 25 Ga. 549; Wharton v. Silliman, 22 La. Ann. 343; Taylor v. Mosher, 29 Md. 458; Churchill v. Mosher, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 466; Phillips' Devises v. Beall, 9 Dana (Ky.), 1; Sheets v. Grubb, 4 Metc. (Ky.) 339; Yeates v. Gill, 9 B. M. (Ky.) 204; Hughes v. Gill, 12 B. M. (Ky.) 121; Hopson v. Com to Use of Shipp, 7 Bush (Ky.), 641; Brokaw v. Peterson, 15 N. J. Eq. 174; Feit's Ex'rs v. Vanatta, 21 N. J. Eq. 84; Jackson v. Staats, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 337; s. c., 6 Am. Dec. 376; Marsh v. Hague, 1 Edw. (N. Y.) 174; Tier v. Pen- nell, 1 Edw. (N. Y.) 354; Mowatt v. Carow, 7 Paige (N. Y.), 328; Ward v. Sutton, 5 Ired. Eq. (N. C.) 421; Mordecai v. Boylan, 6 Jones Eq. (N. C.) 366; Boylan v. Boylan, Ph. Eq. (N. C.) 160; Dickinson v. Lee, 4 W. (Pa.) 82; Hallowell v. Phipps, 2 Wh. (Pa.) 376; Castner's App., 88 Pa. St. 478; Stinton v. Boyd, 19 Ohio St. 30; s. c., 2 Am. Rep. 369; Tillinghast v. D'Wolfe, 8 R. I. 69; Thompson v. Ludington, 104 Mass. 193. But in wills the word "children" may include grandchildren in two cases: "First, the case of necessity, where the will would remain inoperative, unless the sense is extended; next, where the testator has clearly shown by other words that he does not use the word 'children' in the proper sense, but means it in a more extensive signification." Radcliffe v. Buckley, 10 Ves. 195; Reeves v. Brymer, 4 Ves. 692; Royle v. Hamilton, 4 Ves. 437; Scott v. Nelson, 3 Port. (Ala.) 452; s. c., 29 Am. Dec. 266; Osgood v. Lovering, 33 Me. 464; Churchill v. Lovering, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 466; Phillips' Devises v. Beall, 9 Dana (Ky.), 1; Hughes v. Beall, 12 B. M. (Ky.) 121; Dunlap v. Shreve, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 334; Brokaw v. Peterson, 15 N. J. Eq. 174; Prowitt v. Rodman, 37 N. Y. 42; Denny v. Clossie, 4 Ired. Eq. (N. C.) 102; Mowatt v. Carow, 7 Paige (N. Y.), 328; Dickinson v. Lee, 4 W. (Pa.) 82; Castner's App., 88 Pa. St. 478; Tipton v. Tipton, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 253; Walker v. Williamson, 25 Ga. 549.

The exceptions are stated more in detail in New Jersey and New York, where it is held that "children" may include more remote descendants, "where it appears there are no persons in existence who would answer to the description of children, in the primary sense of the word, at the time of making the will; or where there could not be any such at the time or in the event contemplated by the testator; or where the testator has clearly shown by the use of other words that he used the word 'children' as synonymous with descendants, or issue, or to designate or include . . . grandchildren." Feit's Ex'rs v. Vanatta, 21 N. J. Eq. 84; Palmer v. Horn, 20 Hun. 70; s. c., 84 N. Y. 516; Matter of Patton, 41 Hun. 497. "It can acquire a more extensive meaning only from the context in which it occurs, or from its use in a case where the person using it must know that there neither then is nor can afterwards be any person within the first generation to whom it can be applied." Willis v. Jenkins, 30 Ga. 167.

used in a deed or will, a word of purchase.<sup>1</sup>

It has been accordingly said that the word "children" cannot include grandchildren, "when there are persons to answer the description of children, unless there be some ambiguity in the language rendering it necessary, or unless the testator's intent expressed in other parts of the will could not otherwise be satisfied." Tillinghast v. D'Wolf, 8 R. I. 69.

It is even held, that so long as there are children, grandchildren cannot take under that designation. Ward v. Sutton, 5 Ired. Eq. (N. C.) 421; Mordecai v. Boylan, 6 Jones Eq. (N. C.) 366; Boylan v. Boylan, Ph. Eq. (N. C.) 160. And conversely that they can where there are no children. 2 Washburn on R. E. 655.

In statutes of descents and distribution, the words "child" and "children" do not include grandchildren or other descendants more remote than the first degree. Est. of Curry, 39 Cal. 529; Bigelow v. Moring, 103 Mass. 287; Poang v. Gadsden, 2 Bay (S. C.), 293; Burgess v. Hargrave, 64 Tex. 110. But it was said in the last case that these words might be differently construed, in order to give effect to a clear intention of the legislature. "Illegitimate child" in an act giving such a right of inheritance from the mother does not include grandchildren. Curtis v. Hewins, 11 Metc. (Mass.) 294. But the term "children" in a statute providing that advancements made to children during the life of an intestate shall be deducted from the shares of such children, does include grandchildren. Storey's App., 83 Pa. St. 89.

"Children" in 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 7, making children liable for the maintenance of their poor parents, does not apply to grandchildren. Maund v. Mason, L. R. 9 Q. B. 254. But it does include grandchildren, in pension acts, where children are to receive the pension in case there is no widow. Walton v. Cotton, 19 How. (U. S.) 355. And also in an act providing that in case of the death of a settler before he receives a patent, his interest in the land taken up shall go to his wife and children or heirs. Cutting v. Cutting, 6 Sawy. 396; s. c., 6 Fed. Rep. 259.

In a life-insurance policy in which the beneficiaries are "Mrs. M. R. and children," the last word does not include grandchildren. Russell v. Russell, 64 Ala. 500; Cont. L. I. Co. v. Webb, 54 Ala. 688. And it is equally exclusive of grandchildren when used in the by-laws of a benevolent association to designate beneficiaries. Winsor v. O. F. Benev. Assoc., 13 R. I. 149.

As used in the Louisiana Code of 1875, the term "children" is defined as follows: "Under this name are comprehended not only the children of the first degree, but the grandchildren, great-grandchildren, and all other descendants in the direct line. Natural children, even though recognized, make no part of the children properly so called, unless they have been legitimated." C. C. § 3556.

Step-children.—The term "children" in a will does not include step-children. It is confined to persons of the blood of the testator or the one named as parent. This rule may be controlled by a manifest intention to the contrary. In re Hallett, 8 Paige (N. Y.), 375; Barnes v. Greenzabach, 1 Edw. (N. Y.) 41; Lawrence v. Hebbard, 1 Bradf. (N. Y.) 252.

Adopted Children.—A devise to children does not include adopted children, although the parent named had none other. Schafer v. Enew, 54 Pa. St. 304. It was held otherwise in Sewall v. Roberts, 115 Mass. 262, where an adopted child was held to come within the word children used in a deed made many years before the adoption, a statute having endowed such a child with all the "legal consequences and incidents of the natural relation of parent and child." And an adopted child is entitled to the proceeds of a life-policy payable to the wife of the insured, if she survive him, otherwise to their children. Martin v. Aetna L. Ins. Co., 73 Me. 25.

1. The word "children," being confined to issue in the first degree, consequently, when used in a deed or will, applies, primarily, to a specific and determinable class; it is a designatio personarum, and indicates, not heritable succession, but individual acquisition. It is a word, not only of limitation, but of purchase. Wild's Ca. 6 Co. 17; Bussar v. Bradford, 2 Atk. 220; Oates v. Jackson, 2 Str. 1172; Dewitte v. Dewitte, 11 Sim. 41; Ginger v. White, Willes, 348; Hampton v. Holman, L. R. 4 Ch. D. 183; Dunn v. Davis, 12 Ala. 135; Furlow v. Merrill, 23 Ala. 705; Est. of Utz, 43 Cal. 201; Beacroft v. Strawn, 67 Ill. 28; Johnson v. Johnson, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 331; Turner v. Patterson, 5 Dana (Ky.), 295; Anable v. Patch, 3 Pick. 360; Tucker v. Stites, 39 Miss. 196; Fales v. Currier, 55 N. H. 392; Stokes v. Tilly, 9 N. J. Eq. 130; Rogers v. Rogers, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 503; In re Sanders, 4 Paige (N. Y.), 293; Murphy

Definition.

v. Harvey, 4 Edw. (N. Y.) 131; Chrystie v. Phyle, 19 N. Y. 344; Taylor v. Gould, 10 Barb. 388; Armstrong v. Moran, 1 Bradf. (N. Y.) 514; Guthrie's App., 37 Pa. St. 9; Chew's App., 37 Pa. St. 23; Schafer v. Enew, 54 Pa. St. 304; Daley v. Koons, 90 Pa. St. 246; Affolter v. May, 19 W. N. C. (Pa.) 44; 11 Eastern Rep. 654; Perry v. Calhoun, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 551; Stubbs v. Stubbs, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 43; Bowers v. Bowers, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 293; Moon v. Stone's Ex'r, 19 Gratt. (Va.) 130.

To this rule there is no exception in the case of deeds. Melsheimer v. Gross, 58 Pa. 412; Wolford v. Morgenthau, 91 Pa. St. 30. But in a will it may be construed a word of limitation equivalent to "issue," "heirs" or "heirs of the body," where there is a clear intent to so use it—to be gathered from the words of the testator himself. "Conjectures, doubt, and even equilibrium of apparent intention are not sufficient." The intention must be rendered clear by the words of the testator. Guthrie's App., 37 Pa. St. 9; In re Sanders, 4 Paige (N. Y.), 293; Wild's Ca., 6 Co. 17.

"Children" was accordingly held to be a word of limitation in Grigg v. Bradley, 16 East, 299; Jones v. Davies, 4 B. & Ad. 43; Parkman v. Bowdoin, 1 Sumn. (C. C.) 359; Echols v. Jordon, 39 Ala. 24; Dunlap v. Shreve, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 334; Moran v. Dillihay, 8 Bush (Ky.) 434; Lachland v. Downing, 11 B. M. (Ky.) 32; Jordan v. Roach, 32 Miss. 482; Jones's Ex'r v. Jones, 13 N. J. Eq. 236; Halderman v. Haldeman, 40 Pa. 29; Merryman v. Merryman, 5 Munf. (Va.) 440; Smith v. Fox, 11 Va. L. J. 375.

"Children" was held to mean "issue," where it was used interchangeably with that word. Voller v. Caster, 4 E. & B. 173; s. c., 28 Eng. L. & Eq. 267; Wyth v. Blackman, 1 Ves. Sr. 196; Dalzell v. Welch, 2 Sim. 319.

In a bequest to A. and his children, where A. had no children either at the time the will was made or when it went into effect, "children" was held to be a word of purchase. Vanzant v. Morris, 52 Ala. 285. See, generally, 1 Roper on Legacies, 68 sq.; 2 Jarman on Wills, c. 30; and 2 Wash. on R. E. 654.

An allegation that certain named persons "are his only legitimate children" is not a sufficient averment that they are the only heirs at law of the decedent. Martin's Heirs v. Martin, 22 Ala. 86.

In a clause of a will providing that an amount of money be paid to the wife of testator for the support of herself and children until the final division of the estate, "children" means all the children, including those who have married and ceased to be members of the family as well as those who have remained such. Hollingsworth v. Hollingsworth, 65 Ala. 321.

CHILD.

Definition.

Child and Children.—Under a power to appoint to the use of "such child and children, etc.," an exclusive appointment to one child is good. Swift v. Gregson, 1 T. R. 432.

A Child's Part. in an interstate act which gives a widow such a share, imports as large a share as any child has. Davis v. Duke, C. & N. 361.

Any Child in a statute is not confined to any particular class of children. Overseers of Manchester v. Guardians of St. Pancras, L. R. 4 Q. B. D. 409.

Benefit of Children. See BENEFIT.

Eleven Children.—Where property was left by will to "my eleven children," and at the testator's death one of the eleven was dead, her children took her share. Lawrence v. Hebbard, 1 Bradf. (N. Y.) 252.

Family of Minor Children.—A guardian of one minor child is a guardian of a family of minor children under a State constitution and laws giving to such a one a homestead. Rountree v. Dennard, 57 Ga. 629; s. c., 27 Am. Rep. 401.

Our Child or Children.—Testator left it to his widow how and in what manner she might think proper to dispose of the estate in reference to our child or children. He left one child. Held, that he was sufficiently named within an act requiring the naming or providing for children in wills. Beck v. Metz, 25 Mo. 70.

Pregnant with a Child.—Testator, contemplating death, devised his estate to his wife for life, remainder to his nephews, with the condition that "in case my said wife should at my decease be pregnant with child or children," then the property was to go to such child or children. He lived for twenty years, and in the mean time a child was born to him. It was decided that this child did not take by implication under the will. Blakiston v. Haslewood, 10 C. B. 544.

Seventh or Youngest Child.—Where there was a bequest to the seventh or youngest child of A., and between the date of the will and the testator's death A.'s seventh child died and an eighth and several others were born, the youngest and not the eighth took. West v. Ld. Primate of Ireland, 3 Brown Ch. 148.

Three Children.—Where a legacy of a specific sum was left to each of the three children of A., and A. had four children, all born before the date of the will, each of

CHILDISH—CHINESE—CHOCOLATE—CHOICE—CHOOSE.

CHILDISH.—Like a child; of weak mind.<sup>1</sup>

CHINA.—Porcelain.<sup>2</sup>

CHINESE.—Pertaining to China.<sup>3</sup> (See also INTERNATIONAL LAW.)

CHIP.—A piece of wood, stone, or other substance separated by an axe, chisel, or any cutting instrument; <sup>4</sup> a fragment; a small piece.<sup>5</sup>

CHOCOLATE.—A paste composed of the roasted kernel of the Theobroma cacao, ground, and mixed with other ingredients—usually a little sugar, cinnamon, or vanilla.<sup>6</sup>

CHOICE.—The voluntary art of selecting or separating from two or more things that which is preferred; the determination of the mind in preferring the thing to another; election; the thing chosen.<sup>7</sup>

CHOOSE.—To make choice of; to select; to take by way of preference from two or more things offered; to elect.<sup>8</sup>

the four was held to be entitled to the amount specified. Garvey v. Hibbert, 19 Ves. 125.

Younger Children.—In a family settlement where primogeniture prevails, a daughter, though first born, is within the term "younger children," if there is a son. Beale v. Beale, 1 P. Wms. 244; Heneage v. Hunlock, 2 Atk. 457. An only surviving younger child may take under a bequest to younger children; and a second child, having become the eldest by the death of the first, is excluded. Ld. Lincoln v. Pelham, 10 Ves. 166.

1. "The term 'childish' certainly expresses a degree of reasoning intelligence." A childish person may make a good deed. Mulloy v. Ingalls, 4 Neb. 120.

2. Pictures painted by hand on porcelain are to be classified under acts imposing import duties, not as decorated china or porcelain, but as paintings. Arthur v. Jacoby, 13 Otto (U. S.), 677.

3. "Chinese subjects visiting or residing in the United States," as used in a treaty with China, means "those traveling for instruction or from curiosity, or engaging in some legitimate avocation, and whose ingress may not be lawfully prohibited by reason of some objection personal to themselves, and not dependent upon their nationality." It does not include lewd women, who are forbidden to land in a State, without reference to nationality. Ex parte Ah Fook, 49 Cal. 402.

4. Webster.

5. Chip—Cheap—Chipping—signifies the place to be in a market town, as Chipperham, Chipping-Norton, Chipping-Wicomb. Wharton.

6. Webster.

In Statute—Distinction between "Chocolate" and "Confectionery."—For tariff purposes Congress has at all times since the act, May 2, 1792, intended to preserve the distinction between "chocolate" and "confectionery." Under the act June 6, 1872 (17 Stat. 231), § 1, chocolate, eo nomine, is dutiable at the rate of five cents per pound, and although put up in a particular form and sold as "confectionery," is not subjected to the duty imposed on the latter article by act June 30, 1864, § 1 (13 Stat. 202). Arthur v. Stephani, 6 Otto, 125.

7. Webster.

In Wills.—Where in a will a testator bequeathed "to my son John the choice of one of my two tracts of land, and the other tract to be sold and the money to be divided between my two daughters," it was held that the son took a fee, amongst other reasons, because the testator intended a preference to the son, giving him a choice. Clake v. Mikell, 3 Dessaus. (S. Car.) 168; State v. Thompson, 14 S. & R. (Pa.) 100.

8. Webster.

In Wills.—Under a devise to a party of premises for life, provided he chooses to reside therein, and then to A. B. in fee, it is not necessary to complete A. B.'s right to the premises, on the death of the devisee for life, that such devisee should have actually resided in the premises; the intention to reside there being evidence that such intention would have been carried into effect had circumstances permitted, is sufficient. Sampson v. Donn, 2 Chit. Rep. 529.

In Statute—Chosen to Office.—Where in a statute providing that "if any person

CHOSE—CHOSEN FREEHOLDERS—CHOSSES IN ACTION.

CHOSE.—A thing, suit, cause; personal property.<sup>1</sup> It is a chattel personal, and is either in possession or in action. It is used in divers senses, of which the four following are the most important:<sup>2</sup>

Chose local,<sup>3</sup> a thing annexed to a place, as a mill, etc.

Chose transitory, that which is movable, and may be taken away, or carried from place to place.

Chose in action. See CHOSE IN ACTION.

Choses in possession,<sup>4</sup> where a person has not only the right to enjoy, but also the enjoyment of the thing.

CHOSEN FREEHOLDERS.—A board of county officers in New Jersey, having charge of the finances of the county, and composed of persons chosen by and representing the several town, or townships of the county. (See also COUNTY, OFFICERS.)

CHOSSES IN ACTION. (See also ASSIGNMENTS; DONATIO CAUSA MORTIS; EXECUTION; HUSBAND AND WIFE; MARRIED WOMEN.)

Definition, 235.

Basis of the Right, 235.

Form of the Action, 236.

Assignment, 236.

1. Definition.—A chose in action is a right of proceeding in a court of law to procure the payment of a sum of money.<sup>5</sup> Promissory notes, bills of exchange, debts, policies of insurance,<sup>6</sup> and annuities<sup>7</sup> are examples. The term is used in contradistinction to choses in possession, which are chattels, of which one is in possession or control, such as coin, wheat, books, and the like.

2. Basis of the Right.—One view has restricted the term to rights of action for money arising under contracts;<sup>8</sup> but while it comprehends these, whatever the contract, it is undoubtedly of much broader significance, and includes the right to recover pecu*chosen* or appointed to office . . . dies, . . . the court may declare the office vacant," and appoint a person to perform the duties of the office, a person dies after he has been chosen an officer at an election, but before the votes are counted, the court has authority to declare the office vacant, and to fill the vacancy. State v. Hunt, 54 N. H. 431.

In Indictment.—Where a statute provided that an indictment should state that the grand jurors were "chosen, selected, and sworn," and the word "chosen" was omitted, it was held that the omission was not fatal. The words "chosen" and "selected" having in common parlance the same meaning, the omission of "chosen" was of no practical importance. Renget v. State, 1 Neb. 365.

1. Webster.

2. Wharton.

3. This answers probably to the res immobilis of the civil law.

4. Taxes and customs are a chose in possession if paid, a chose in action if unpaid. The king acquires and the subject loses as property in them the instant they become due. 2 Black. Comm §408. Patents, copyrights, trade-marks, and similar rights are generally classed as incorporeal personal property. Rapalje.

5. Rap. & Lawrence's Law Dict. 206. See also Haskell v. Blair, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 534; Gillett v. Fairchild, 4 Denio (N. Y.), 80; People v. Tioga C. P., 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 75; Ramsey v. Erie R. Co., 57 Barb. (N. Y.) 398; 1 Chit. Gen. Pr. 99.

6. Ex parte Ibbetson, 8 Ch. D. 519.

7. 2 Bl. Com. 389; Hargrave's note to Co. Litt. 144 b.

But not a deed for land. Sheldon v. Sill, 8 How. (U. S.) 441.

8. 1 Bouv. Dict. 311, where a chose in action is defined to be a right to receive or recover a debt, or money, or damages for breach of contract, or for a tort connected with contract, but which cannot be enforced without action, citing Com. Dig, niary damages for a wrong inflicted either upon the person or property.<sup>1</sup>

3. Form of the Action.—It does not matter what the form of the action, legal or equitable, which is necessary to maintain the right. While it was otherwise considered once, it is now said to be a chose in action, even though the remedy is to be obtained only from equitable sources. Thus the right to sue for a trust fund misapplied by the trustee is an equitable chose in action.<sup>2</sup>

4. Assignment. (See also the general heading ASSIGNMENTS.)—With the exception of negotiable instruments, choses in action are not, at the common law, assignable so as to give the assignee the legal and equitable rights of the assignor.<sup>3</sup> He cannot sue in his own name,<sup>4</sup> though equity early allowed him to sue in the name of the assignor,<sup>5</sup> and this is now a rule both in courts of law and equity.<sup>6</sup> He takes the chose in action, unless it be a negotiable instrument, subject to the defences of the debtor at the time of notice of the assignment to the latter,<sup>7</sup> but not to those subsequently arising;<sup>8</sup> and in the United States, where the debtor, after notice of the assignment, expressly or impliedly agrees with the assignee to pay him the claim, the latter may institute suit upon it in his own name.<sup>9</sup>

Statutes have, however, been enacted in many States of the Union enlarging the number of assignable choses in action as well as the rights of the assignee; and in England the matter is regulated by the Judicature Act of 1873, c. 25, § 6, by virtue of which an absolute assignment of a legal chose in action, followed by notice in writing to the debtor or other person from whom the

1. Gillett v. Fairchild, 4 Denio (N. Y.), 80; McKee v. Judd, 12 N. Y. 622; Wms. Pers. Prop. 4.

2. Wms. 6.

3. Gardner v. Adams, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 297; Thalhimer v. Brinckerhoff, 20 Johns (N. Y.) 380.

4. Greenby v. Wilcox, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 1; Lenox v. Roberts, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 373.

5. Buck v. Swazey, 35 Me. 41, 52; Welch v. Mandeville, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 236; Caldwell v. Meshew, 44 Ark. 564.

6. Skinner v. Somes, 14 Mass. 107; Jessel v. Ins. Co., 3 Hill (N. Y.), 88; Bispham's Equity, 226.

An assignor cannot prevent the assignee from suing in the assignor's name. The Leona, 62 Tex. 35.

7. Bishop v. Holcomb, 10 Conn. 444; Warren v. Copelin, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 594; Beebe v. Bank of New York, 1 Johns. (N. Y.) 529; Murphy v. Bowery Bank, 30 Hun (N. Y.), 40; Bush v. Lathrop, 22 N. Y. 535; Brashear v. West, 7 Pet. (U. S.) 608; Kamena v. Huelbig, 8 C. E. Greene (N. J.), 78; Martin v. Richardson, 68 N. Car. 255; Boardman v. Payne, 29

Iowa, 339; Jeffries v. Evans, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 119; Barney v. Grover, 28 Vt. 391; Lane v. Smith, 103 Pa. St. 415; Andrews v. McCoy, 8 Ala. 920; Kleeman v. Frisbie, 63 Ill. 482; Marshall v. Cooper, 43 Md. 61.

Where a party agrees to give his attorney a part of a claim, no matter how collected, and subsequently assigns it to a party ignorant of his agreement, who compromises it, the assignee is bound by the agreement. Fairbanks v. Sargent, 9 N. East. Repr. (N. Y.) 870.

8. Stewart v. Kirkland, 19 Ala. 162; Reservoir Co. v. Chase, 14 Conn. 123; Bartlett v. Pearson, 29 Me. 9; Webb v. Steele, 13 N. H. 230; Blake v. Buchanan, 22 Vt. 548; Mowry v. Todd, 12 Mass. 281; Fay v. Jones, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 340; Small v. Browder, 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 212; Miller v. Kreiter, 76 Pa. St. 78; Conant v. Bank, 1 Ohio St. 298.

9. Tiernan v. Jackson, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 597; Currier v. Hodgdon, 3 N. H. 82; Skinner v. Somes, 14 Mass. 107; Clark v. Thompson, 2 R. I. 146; Barger v. Collins, 7 H. & J. (Md.) 213; Bucklin v. Ward, 7 Vt. 195.

choses in action is due, has the effect of passing the legal right to the same to the assignee from the date of the notice, subject to any equities affecting it. And promissory notes, bills of exchange, and bank checks are by the law merchant, as well as by numerous statutory enactments, made an exception, to a very great extent, to the foregoing rules. These the holder may assign before maturity to a bona fide purchaser by generally recognized modes, with the effect of freeing the same from the equities existing between the original parties, and of conferring both the legal and equitable title on the purchaser. (See also BANK CHECKS; BILLS OF EXCHANGE; PROMISSORY NOTES; AND NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENTS.)

An assignment of a chose in action will not be sanctioned either in a court of law or equity where it is opposed to any rule of law, sound morals, or public policy.<sup>1</sup>

So mere personal actions which do not survive the person are not assignable,<sup>2</sup> though they are where they do survive, even though they be for a tort committed.<sup>3</sup> The mode of the assignment is not material. No particular form is essential, and it may

1. Milwaukee & Minnesota R. v. Milwaukee & Minnesota R., 20 Wis. 183; Gardner v. Adams, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 297; Marshall v. Means, 12 Ga. 61; Dayton v. Fargo, 45 Mich. 153; Prosser v. Edmunds, 1 Younge & Coll. Exch. Rep. 481; Albright v. Teas, 37 N. J. Eq. 171.

Right to Sue to Set Aside Trustee's Sale.—A right to prosecute a suit in equity to set aside a trustee's sale on the ground of fraud is not assignable. Jones v. Babcock, 15 Mo. App. 149.

Part of Debt.—Though not good at law, an assignment of a part of a fund or debt will be enforced in equity. James v. City of Newton, 23 Cent. Law Jour. (Mass. Case) 489 and note; Peugh v. Porter, 112 U. S. 737; Fordyce v. Nelson, 91 Ind. 447; Canty v. Latterner, 31 Minn. 239. Compare Geist's Appeal, 104 Pa. St. 351.

Future Earnings.—Wages to be earned under an existing contract are assignable, even though the contract be indefinite as to time and amount. Wade v. Bessey, 76 Me. 413; Rio Grande Extension Co. v. Coby, 7 Colo. 299.

But an assignment of all the wages the assignor may earn in the future, without limit as to time or amount, is invalid when the assignor is not engaged in any employment, or even under contract for employment. Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Woodring, 9 Atl. Rep. (Pa.) 58; Kennedy v. Tiernay, 14 R. I. 528.

Expectancies.—An assignment by a son of his expectancy in his father's estate, freely and voluntarily made for a good consideration, is valid. Steele, Admr., v. Frierson, 3 S. West. Repr. (Tenn.) 649. Contra, Alves v. Schlesinger, 81 Ky. 290.

Contract with Public Officials.—A contract made by bridge commissioners of a county to pay a certain sum of money for a bridge described therein, and for the erection thereof upon the completion of such bridge as fast as the money is collected by the tax collector, is assignable. Smith v. Hubbard, 2 S. West. Repr. (Tenn.) 569.

Mechanics' and Other Liens.—A mechanic's lien, although inchoate, is assignable. McDonald v. Kelly, 14 R. I. 335.

So is an attorney's for services on a judgment. Sibley v. Pine Co., 31 Minn. 201.

2. Comegys v. Vasse, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 213; Devlin v. Mayor, 63 N. Y. 15; Lattimore v. Simmons, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 184; Smith v. Sherman, 58 Mass. 408.

An unliquidated claim for a personal injury is not assignable. Stewart v. Houston & Texas Cent. R. Co., 62 Tex. 246. Nor is one for slander. Miller v. Newell, 20 S. Car. 123.

3. North v. Turner, 9 Serg. & R. (Pa.) 244; Lazard v. Wheeler, 22 Cal. 142; Jordon v. Gillen, 44 N. H. 424; Grant v. Ludlow, 8 Ohio St. 37; Williams v. Ingersoll, 89 N. Y. 508; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Goodbar, 88 Ind. 213.

A right of action for infringements of a patent is assignable. Shaw v. Colwell Lead Co., 20 Blatchf. C. Ct. 417. And so is one for injury to cattle. Galveston, etc., R. Co. v. Freeman, 57 Tex. 156.

be either by writing or words indicating such an intention when founded upon a sufficient consideration;<sup>1</sup> and indeed it is held that acts merely, as the delivery of written evidence of a debt, may be sufficient.<sup>2</sup>

CHRISTIAN.—One who professes to believe or is assumed to believe in the religion of Christ; especially one whose inward and outward life is conformed to the doctrines of Christ. One who is born in a Christian country or of Christian parents. Pertaining to the Church.<sup>3</sup>

CHRISTIANITY. See RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES.

1. Pass v. McCrea, 36 Miss. 143; Kimball v. Donald, 20 Mo. 577; Ford v. Stuart, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 342; Kessel v. Albetis, 56 Barb. (N. Y.) 362; Laimon v. Smith, 7 Gray (Mass.), 150; Dunn v. Snell, 15 Mass. 481; Grover v. Grover, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 261; Gage v. Dow, 59 N. H. 383; Tingle v. Fisher, 20 W. Va. 497; Garnsey v. Gardner, 49 Me. 167; Wiggins v. McDonald, 18 Cal. 126; Patten v. Wilson, 34 Pa. St. 299; McWilliams v. Webb, 32 Iowa, 577; Spiker v. Nydegger, 30 Md. 315; Noyes v. Brown, 33 Vt. 431; Shannon v. Hoboken, 37 N. J. Eq. 123; Thompson v. Spies, 13 Sim. 469; Burn v. Carvalho, 4 My. & Cr. 690; Cook v. Black, 1 Hare, 390; Chowne v. Baylis, 31 Beav. 351; Row v. Dawson, 1 Vesey, 331; Gurnell v. Gardner, 9 Jurist (N. S.), 1220; Riccard v. Pritchard, 1 K. & J. 277, 279; Field v. Megaw, 4 L. R. (C. P.) 660.

A writing in form, "For value received I hereby sell, assign, transfer, and set over unto A B all my right, title, and interest in and to the balance due me on sale of goods, etc., to C D in the sum of $2558.80, less a payment of $144.98, leaving due from C D to me the full sum of $2413.84," is an absolute assignment. Wallingford v. Burr, 17 Neb. 137.

A owed B on account, and B owed C on account, and desired further credit. The three agreed that what A owed B should be paid by him to C on B's account, and then C trusted B on further account. Held, that this was an oral assignment to C of B's debt against A, with constructive delivery and sufficient consideration to satisfy the law. White v. Kilgore, 77 Me. 571.

But a sight draft, directing the drawee to charge the amount to a certain account, does not constitute an assignment of the fund. Whitney v. Eliot Bank, 137 Mass. 351; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 316. See also Lewis v. Traders' Bank, 30 Minn. 134.

2. Mowry v. Todd, 12 Mass. 281;

Jones v. Witter, 13 Mass. 304; Runyan v. Mersereau, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 534; Clark v. Rogers, 2 Me. 147; Lacey v. Lacey, 7 Pa. St. 251; Futt v. Couzins, 50 Mo. 152; Noyes v. Brown, 33 Vt. 431; Shannon v. Hoboken, 37 N. J. Eq. 123; Taft v. Bowker, 132 Mass. 277.

But an agreement to pay a collector a certain part of a sum for collecting it is not an equitable assignment, and gives the collector no right of action against the debtor. Plater v. Meag, 30 Fed. Rep. 308.

Nor is an order not accepted, and not in the hands of a banker, an assignment. Poole v. Carhart, 32 N. W. Repr. (Iowa) 16.

3. Webster.

It is used in an ecclesiastical sense—Christian church, Christian doctrine. Christianitatis curia, the court Christian, or ecclesiastical judicature, as opposed to the civil court or lay tribunal. Burrill.

In Constitution.—In New Hampshire it has been held that the term Christian in the constitution of the State is used in its ordinary sense, and designates one who believes or assents to the truth of the doctrines of Christianity, as taught by Jesus Christ in the New Testament. It includes Protestants and Roman Catholics, but not Mahometans, Jews, Pagans, or Infidels. The political or conventional use of the word, denoting one who assents to the truth of the doctrines of the religion of Christ, or who, being born of Christian parents or in a Christian country, does not profess any other religion or belong to any of the other religious divisions of men, is the sense in which the word is ordinarily used in constitutions and statutes and legal documents, and refers to those commonly known as nominally Christians, rather than to those professing the faith of some particular church, who are termed Christians in the theological or sacred sense of the term. Hale v. Everett, 53 N. H. 9.

CHRISTIAN NAME—CIDER—CIPHER—CIRCUIT.

CHRISTIAN NAME.—The name given at the font, distinct from the surname. It has been said from the bench that a Christian name may consist of a single letter.<sup>1</sup>

CHUCK-A-LUCK.—The name given to a game of chance in Kentucky.<sup>2</sup>

CHURCH. See RELIGIOUS SOCIETIES.

CIDER.—A drink made from the juice of apples.<sup>3</sup>

CIPHER.—To use figures or to practise arithmetic. To designate by character; to represent.<sup>4</sup>

CIRCUIT.—A division of the country appointed for a particular judge to visit for the trial of causes or for the administration of justice.<sup>5</sup>

1. Wharton.

A person can have but one Christian name, and an indictment containing two Christian names was quashed. Rex v. Newman, 1 Ld. Raym. 562.

2. Montee v. Comm., 3 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 132.

3. Webster.

In Contracts.—Where a contract was made between A and B, whereby A having a quantity of apples agreed to sell his cider to B at a certain price per hogshead, to be delivered at T. at a future time, and to lend such pipes as he had for the use of the cider to be manufactured on his, A's, premises and to be paid for before it was removed, and A in pursuance delivered a quantity of juice expressed from the apples to a servant hired by B to manufacture the cider on A's premises, and before the cider was completely manufactured it was seized by the excise officers, because the place where it was deposited had not been entered, and was condemned in the Exchequer as B's property, together with the casks, and in assumpsit for goods sold and delivered brought by A against B it appeared that the word cider, at the place where the contract was made, meant the juice of the apples as soon as it was expressed; it was thereupon held that the contract must be construed to have been for the sale of cider in that sense of the word, and that the property passed to B as soon as the apple-juice was delivered to his servant. Studdy v. Sanders, 5 B. & C. 628.

In Statute.—The effect of a statute of Illinois declaring that spirituous, vinous, and malt liquors were intoxicating was to render it unnecessary to prove it on a trial; but "cider" not being a fluid belonging to either of the classes mentioned, is not intoxicating by the legislative enactment, and in a prosecution for selling cider as an intoxicating liquor, proof should be made that such fluid is intoxicating. Feldman v. City of Morrison, 1 Bradw. (Ill.) 460.

Where a statute declares that "ale or cider and all wines shall be considered intoxicating liquors, within the meaning of this act," sales of unfermented cider may be indicted and punished as sales of "intoxicating liquor." An averment of the sale of intoxicating liquor is sustained by proof of the sale of unfermented cider. Comm. v. Dean, 14 Gray (Mass.), 99. The provision of St. 1868 (Mass.), c. 14, § 21, that the term "intoxicating liquor" in said statute shall be construed to include cider applies to an indictment under the Gen. Stats. c. 87, § 7, for keeping a liquor nuisance. Comm. v. Smith, 102 Mass. 144.

4. Webster.

"To Cipher", Not Equivalent to the General Rules of Arithmetic.—Where a statute requires that when a child shall be bound out by the overseer of the poor "the indenture shall contain an agreement on the part of the person to whom such child shall be bound that he will cause such child to be instructed . . . in the general rules of arithmetic," an indenture containing a clause that the master "will teach the child or cause it to be taught . . . to cipher" is not a sufficient compliance with the stipulation of the statute. People v. Hoster, 14 Abb. Prac. (N. S.) (N. Y.) 414.

5. Bouvier Law Dict.

In England, circuits are divisions of the country for judicial business. There are seven, formerly eight, of these judicial circuits, namely, the Northern, North-eastern, Midland, Southeastern, Oxford, Western, and North and South Wales (the last being divided into two divisions), into which the judges went originally twice a year, viz., in the vacations after Hilary and Trinity Terms. In recent

CIRCULAR—CIRCUMSTANCES—CITATION.

CIRCULAR.—A circular letter, or paper, often printed, copies of which are addressed to various persons; as a business circular, a political circular.<sup>1</sup>

CIRCUMSTANCES.—The condition of things surrounding or accompanying an act, event, or transaction; relative facts, as distinguished from a principal fact of which they may be corroborative or the reverse.<sup>2</sup>

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE. See EVIDENCE; PRESUMPTIVE EVIDENCE.

CITATION.—A summons to appear, applied particularly to process in the spiritual, probate, and matrimonial courts;<sup>3</sup> a times the judges go oftener, and at no precisely fixed periods. Two judges go on each of the circuits and hold court. Wharton, 3 Bla. Comm. 58; 3 Steph. Com. 221. County-court circuits were created by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 95.

In the United States.—Circuit court is in many of the States a name for a court of general original jurisdiction, clothed with power to try by judge and jury the issues of fact in ordinary actions, but subject to a review of its determinations in the supreme court of the State or other appellate tribunal. Abbott. The English custom is still retained in some of the States, as in Massachusetts, where the judges sit in succession in the various counties of the State, and by the arrangement of terms the full bench of the supreme court makes a circuit of the State once a year.

1. Webster Dict.

Circular Notes.—Similar instruments to "letters of credit." They are drawn by resident bankers upon their foreign correspondents in favor of persons traveling abroad. The correspondents must be satisfied of the identity of the applicant before payment; and the requisite proof of such identity is usually furnished upon the applicant's producing a letter with his signature by a comparison of the signature. Brown L. Dict.

Circulating Medium.—This term is more comprehensive than "money," as it is the medium of exchanges, or purchases and sales, whether it be in gold or silver coin or any other article. Rapalje & L. L. Dict.

2. Rapalje & Lawrence Law Dict.

Insolvent Circumstances.—By "insolvent circumstances" is meant that a person is not in a condition to pay his debts in the ordinary course, as persons carrying on trade usually do. Bayly v. Schofield, 1 Man. & Sel. 350.

Circumstances Raising a Presumption of a Grant of Land.—Time may be a circumstance, independent or disconnected, on which the presumption of a grant may be raised. Campbell v. Smith, 3 Hals. (N. J.) 151. See this case for comment on Lord Ellenborough's reported dicta in Bentley v. Shaw, 6 East, 208, that less than twenty years' enjoyment may or may not afford a presumption of a grant according as it is attended with circumstances to support or rebut the right.

In Statute—Circumstances of Terror.—Where a statute concerning forcible entries and detainer denounces all entries into premises, at the time in the actual peaceable possession of another, if made with violence and strong hand, whether such entry be by the actual breaking into the house situate on the premises, or by any kind of violence or "circumstances of terror," and a large number of men were employed to take possession of premises in the possession of another, though he had no house on them and was not personally present, and they entered hurriedly at daylight, tore down one fence and put up another and a shanty, and fired off a pistol-shot to celebrate its completion; held, that there were sufficient "circumstances of terror" to make the entry a forcible one. Gray v. Collins, 42 Cal. 152.

3. Wharton.

In Ecclesiastical Law.—Citation is the beginning and foundation of the whole cause, and an invalid citation can produce no effect (unless cured by the appearance of the impugnant in person, or his lawful proctor). Gail reduces the requisites of a good citation to six, viz., the insertion of the name of the judge, of the promovent, of the impugnant, of the cause of suit, of the place, and of the time of appearance; to which may be added, the affixing the seal of the court, and the name of the register or his deputy. 1 Brown Civ. & Adm. Law, 453, 454.

reference to authorities in support of an argument, opinion of a court, or other legal document.<sup>1</sup>

CITE.—To call or summon. Therefore, first, to notify a party of a proceeding against him or call him to appear and defend; and, second, to quote or refer to authorities in support of a proposition in jurisprudence.<sup>2</sup>

It is the judicial act by which the defendant is commanded to appear in the suit. 1 Phillim. Ecc. L. 1253, 1280.

In Other English Practice.—The process issued in divorce, probate, admiralty, and other actions. It is usually the original process, wherever used, and is somewhat analogous to the writ of capias or summons at common law or the subpoena in chancery. It is also used to call upon a person who is not a party to an action or proceeding to appear before the court in that action or proceeding. Abbott Law Dict.; Rapalje & Lawrence's Law Dict.

In Scotch Practice.—The calling of a party to an action by an officer of the court, under a proper warrant. Bell Dict.

In American Practice.—A process used in orphans', surrogates', probate, and sometimes in other courts to secure the attendance of parties and persons having an interest in the proceedings. It has been defined "an official call or notice to appear in court," and as a general rule it is issued and served upon a particular individual, who is thereby made a party to the proceedings. This is so in the case of citations to minors, to the creditors of poor debtors, to trustees, executors, and administrators, and to persons who have fraudulently concealed or embezzled the estate of insolvent debtors, and in other instances. Arnold v. Sabin, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 529.

It is also used to remove causes in certain instances into the United States supreme court on writ of error.

1. Citation of Authorities.—The quoting, production, or reference to constitutional provisions, acts of legislatures, decisions of courts, or text-books of law for the purpose of sustaining a proposition or rule of law contended for.

Method of Citation.—In the United States the laws of the general government are generally cited by their date, as Act of Sept. 24, 1789, § 35, or Act 1819, c. 170; 3 Story U. S. Laws, 1722; or by the section of the Revised Statutes of 1878 or its supplements. The same practice prevails in most of the States, especially when the date is important. Where it is not, reference is frequently made to the revised code of laws or the official publication of the laws, as Va. Rev. Code, c. 26; N. Y. Rev. Stat. (4th Ed.) 400. Bouvier. Books of reports and text-books are generally cited by the number of the volume and page, as 3 Am. & Eng. Enc. of Law, 217; or where the paragraphs are numbered or the book divided into sections, by reference to the number of the paragraph or section, as Bishop's Statutory Crimes, § 514; reports being cited either by name of the reported or the number of the series, as 11 Ont. 150, or 107 Pa. St. 150. The civilians on the continent of Europe, in referring to the Institutes, Code, and Pandects or Digest, usually give the number not of the book but of the law, and the first word of the title to which it belongs. The American writers give the number of the book, title, law, and section. For example, Inst. 4, 15, 2 signifies Institutes, book 4, title 15, and section 2; Dig. 41, 9, 1, 3, means Digest, book 41, title 9, law 1, section 3; Dig. pro dote or ff pro dote signifies section 3, law 1, of the book and title of the Digest or Pandects entitled pro dote. The code is cited in the same way. The Novels are cited by their number, with that of the chapter and paragraph; for example, Nov. 185, 2, 4 for Novella Justiniani 185, capite 2, paragrapho 4. Novels are also quoted by the collation, the title, chapter, and paragraph, as follows: In 'Authentico Collatione, titulo 1, cap. 281. The Authentics are quoted by their first words, after which is set down the title of the Code under which they are placed; for example, Authentica cum testator, Codice ad legem fascidian. Bouvier; Mackelvey Civ. Law, § 65; Domat Civ. Law, Cush. Index.

2. Abbott's Law Dic.

CITIZENSHIP. (See also ALIENS; CONFLICT OF LAWS; CONSTITUTIONAL LAW; NATURALIZATION, etc.)

Definition, 242.

Citizenship Acquired by Birth, 242.

Rights of Children Born out of the Jurisdiction of the United States, 244.

Effect of Alien Women Marrying Citizens, 244.

Indians, 245.

Citizenship Acquired by Naturalization, 246.

United States Statutes Regulating Naturalization, their Provisions, and Procedure Thereunder, 247.

Rights of Former Slaves—The Fourteenth Amendment—The Civil Rights Act, 249.

Treaties and Legislation Affecting Chinese, 250.

Rights of States to Legislate Regarding Citizenship, 250.

Rights of Citizens of States, under the United States Constitution, in other States than that of their Domicile, 252.

Property Rights as Affected by Citizenship, 254.

Expatriation, 256.

1. Definition.—Citizenship is the state of being vested with the rights and privileges of a citizen.<sup>1</sup>

A citizen is a person, native or naturalized, who has the privilege of voting for public officers, and who is qualified to fill offices in the gift of the people; also, any native-born or naturalized person of either sex, who is entitled to full protection in the exercise and enjoyment of the so-called private rights.<sup>2</sup> One who under the constitution and laws of the United States has a right to vote for representatives in Congress and other public officers, and who is qualified to fill offices in the gift of the people. Any person born in the United States, or naturalized person born out of the same, who has not lost his right as such—including men, women, and children.<sup>3</sup> A citizen is one who owes to government allegiance, service, and money by way of taxation, and to whom the State in turn grants and guarantees liberty of person and of conscience, the right of acquiring and possessing property, of marriage and the social relations, of suit and defence, and security in person, estate, and reputation.<sup>4</sup>

2. Citizenship Acquired by Birth.—Natural citizenship is created by birth within the jurisdiction of the United States.<sup>5</sup> In England, if the parent be under the actual obedience of the king, and

1. Webster's Dict.

2. Webster's Dict.

3. 1 Bouvier's L. Dict.

4. Amy v. Smith, 1 Litt. (Ky.) 332.

In monarchical governments, by subject is meant one who owes permanent allegiance to the sovereign. 2 Bouvier's L. Dict.

5. Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal Constitution. Lynch v. Clarke, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 584, 639; In re Look Tin Sing, 21 Fed. Rep. 905; s. c., 17 Chicago Leg. News, 57.

Before the adoption of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution, Lynch v. Clarke, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 584, 639, was the leading case, that held that birth within the jurisdiction of the United States created citizenship. In this case the complainant was born in 1819 in New York, of alien parents, during their temporary sojourn in said State. In the first year of her age her parents left this country, taking her with them, and never returned. It was held that the complainant was a citizen of this country by birth. This decision was based on the fact that this was the doctrine of the common law with respect to all persons born within the king's allegiance, and was therefore the law of the colonies, and then became the law of each State when independence was declared, and so continued until the adoption of the United States constitution; after the adoption of the constitution the exclusive jurisdiction of this subject of citizenship passed to the United States government, and the same doctrine has there remained, and thus became the common law of the United States when the union was consummated; that it is the common-law rule of the United States, and not of the individual States separately considered; this doctrine is national, and not for the individual States; that it is general under the United States constitution, a system of national jurisprudence.

Consonant with this doctrine is the decision of In re Look Tin Sing, 21 Fed. Rep. 905; s. c., 17 Chicago Leg. News, 57, on the question of citizenship. The decision was rendered by Justice Field of the United States supreme court, sitting as circuit judge in the ninth circuit. Sawyer, U. S. circuit judge, Sabin, and Hoffman, U. S. district judges, concurred. The learned justice construes the words in the Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal constitution, "subject to the jurisdiction thereof," and holds that the previous doctrine, before the amendment, except as applied to Africans and their descendants, was, that birth within the dominion and jurisdiction of the United States, of itself created citizenship; that the Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal constitution was adopted as an authoritative declaration of this doctrine as to the white race, and also to do away with the exceptions as to the negroes and their descendants. He decides that a Chinese, born of alien parents within the dominion and jurisdiction of the United States, who resides therein, and not engaged in any diplomatic official capacity under the Chinese government, is a citizen of the United States.

The facts in this case were these: The petitioner belonged to the Chinese race, and was born in California in 1870. In 1879 he went to China, and returned to San Francisco in 1884, and sought to land in said city, claiming that he was a natural-born citizen of the United States. His parents resided in California, and had lived there twenty years, and have always been subject to the commands of the Chinese government. His father sent the son to China with the intention of his returning. His father was a merchant, and not in any diplomatic or other official capacity under the Chinese government. The petitioner had no certificate, as required by the acts of 1882 and of 1884; and so the United States district-attorney, on behalf of this government, objected to his landing in the United States for want of said certificate. The learned justice concludes: "And no citizen can be excluded from this country except in punishment for crime. Exclusion for any other cause is unknown to our laws, and beyond the power of Congress. The petitioner must be allowed to land, and it is so ordered." It was decided in this case that jurisdiction excepts from citizenship children born of ambassadors, whose residence, by a fiction of public law, is regarded as a part of their own country.

Children capable of becoming citizens are citizens. The nationality of the parents is never a question. The question is, May the parents be naturalized? State v. Clarborn, 1 Meigs (Tenn.), 331.

One born in a foreign country is a citizen, if at the time of his birth his father was a citizen of the United States. Oldtown v. Bangor, 58 Maine, 353.

The United States supreme court hold that the main object of the opening sentence of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal constitution was to settle the question, upon which there has been a difference of opinion throughout this country and in the United States courts, as to citizenship, and to put it beyond a doubt that all persons, white or black, and whether formerly slaves or not, born or naturalized in the United States, and owing no allegiance to any other power, should be citizens of the United States, and of the State in which they reside. That this section of the amendment contemplates two sources of citizenship, and only two: Birth and naturalization; that "subject to the jurisdiction thereof" means completely subject to the political jurisdiction of the United States, and owing them direct and immediate allegiance. Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U. S. 94; Slaughter-house Cases, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 36; Strander v. W. Virginia, 100 U. S. 303.

The United States supreme court was asked to decide whether children born within the United States, of alien parents, were citizens, and the court refused to answer, though this was not the question in point. Minor v. Happersett, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 162.

A person born in Massachusetts before the Revolution, who withdrew into other parts of the British provinces before independence was declared, but returned during the war, still held his citizenship. Had he remained away until after the treaty of peace, he would have been a British subject, because there was but one allegiance before the Revolution.

the place of the child's birth be within the king's obedience as well as in the dominion, the child becomes a subject of the realm.<sup>1</sup>

(a) Rights of Children Born out of the Jurisdiction of the United States.—All children heretofore born or hereafter born out of the limits and jurisdiction of the United States, whose fathers were or may be at the time of their birth citizens thereof, are declared to be citizens of the United States; but the right of citizenship shall not descend to children whose fathers never resided in the United States.<sup>2</sup>

(b) Effect of Alien Women Marrying Citizens.—Any woman who is now or may hereafter be married to a citizen of the United States, and who might herself be lawfully naturalized, shall be deemed a citizen.<sup>3</sup>

Phipp's Case, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 394. note; McIlvain v. Coke, 4 Cranch (U. S.), 209; Gardner v. Ward, 2 Mass. 244; Kilham v. Ward, 2 Mass. 236; Martin v. Comm., 1 Mass. 347; Comm. v. Chapman, 1 Dall. (Pa.) 53; Cagnet v. Pettit, 2 Dall. (Pa.) 234.

Contrary to this doctrine, it was held that a person born before independence and before that time voluntarily withdrew to other parts of the British dominion, was a citizen of Massachusetts, even if he never returned, because his allegiance accrued to the State in which he was born, which was the lawful successor of the king, which made him a subject by birth. Ainslie v. Martin, 9 Mass. 454.

The nationality of the parent is held as the test of the child's citizenship by some authorities. Ludlam v. Ludlam, 26 N. Y. 356; Cockburn's Nationality, c. 1, sec. 4. p. 13; c. 6, sec. 2, pp. 187, 188.

In Inglis v. Trustees of Sailors' Snug Harbor, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 99, it was held that two things usually create citizenship: first, birth locally within the jurisdiction of the United States; and secondly, birth within the protection and obedience of the sovereign. In speaking of Ainslie v. Martin, 9 Mass. 454, the court held that it was not authority—not even in its own State.

These principles were established:

1. If the defendant was born before July 4, 1776, he is an alien, and hence disabled from taking real estate by inheritance.

2. If he was born after July 4, 1776, and before September 15, 1776, at the time when the British took possession of New York, he would be a citizen.

3. If he was born after the British took possession of New York, and before the evacuation on November 25, 1783, he would be an alien.

4. If the grand assize shall find that the father and his son, the demandant, did, in point of fact, elect to become and to continue British subjects, and not American citizens, the demandant is an alien, and of course cannot inherit real estate. The following cases sustain the doctrine of this decision: Orser v. Hoag, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 79; Jackson v. White, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 313; Shanks v. Dupont, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 242; 1 Harp. Eq. (S. Car.) 5; Palmer v. Downer, 2 Mass. 179, note; Kilham v. Ward, 2 Mass. 236; Inhabitants, etc., v. Inhabitants, etc., 16 Mass. 230; Trimble v. Harrison, 1 B. Mon. (Ky.) 140; Moore v. Wilson, 10 Verg. (Tenn.) 406.

The doctrine of election of persons to become citizens of annexed territory, or to return to the mother-country, is recognized and adopted in Jones v. McMasters, 20 How. (U. S.) 8; McKinney v. Saviego, 18 How. (U. S.) 235; Quintana v. Tomkins, 1 New Mexico, 29; Carter v. Territory, 1 New Mexico, 317; State v. Primrose, 3 Ala. 546; Horrold's Case, 1 Clark (Pa.), 214; Dubois' Case, 2 Mart. (La.) 185.

By the Declaration of Independence, inhabitants of other parts of the British dominion, as to the United States, became alien enemies. Com. v. Bristow, 6 Call (Va.), 60.

1. Calvin's Case, 7 Co. 1.

2. U. S. Rev. Stat. sec. 1993; Ludlam v. Ludlam, 26 S. Y. 356; Oldtown v. Bangor, 58 Maine, 353; State v. Adams, 45 Iowa, 100.

3. U. S. Rev. Stat. sec. 1994. If the husband at the time of the marriage is an alien and then becomes naturalized, his wife also becomes a citizen. Leonard v. Grant, 6 Saw. C. C. 603; White v. White, 2 Met. (Ky.) 185; Kelley v. Owen, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 496; Burton v. Burton, 1 Keyes (N. Y.), 559. These last two decisions were made in conformity to the

(c) Indians.—Indians, born members of any of the Indian tribes within the United States, which still hold their tribal relations, are not citizens. They are not citizens even if they have separated themselves from their tribe and reside among white citizens of a State, but have not been naturalized, or taxed, or recognized as citizens by the United States, or by any of the States.<sup>1</sup> act of Congress, February 10, 1885, sec. 2, which provides that if any woman who might be lawfully naturalized under the existing laws should marry or should be married to a citizen of the United States, shall be deemed and taken to be a citizen. 10 U. S. Stat. at Large, p. 604, sec. 2. The court, in Kelley v. Owen, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 496, say that this act is construed liberally to mean that the husband need not be a citizen at the time of the marriage, but that any free white woman already married to an alien becomes a citizen by the naturalization of her husband. If she subsequently marries an alien her status is discussed in Pequignot v. City of Detroit, 16 Fed. Rep. 211.

By act of 1804, March 26, it was provided that if any alien who had taken the first steps as required by act of 1802 dies before he has taken out his final papers of naturalization, his widow and children shall be considered as citizens.

In Shanks v. Dupont, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 242, it was held that the marriage of a feme sole with an alien produced no dissolution of her native allegiance. Same doctrine expressed in Inglis v. Trustees, etc., 3 Pet. (U. S.) 99.

In England the nationality of the wife follows that of her husband, and changes when his changes. 33 Vict. c. 14, 10; Cockburn's Nationality, c. 6, sec. 4, p. 211.

Before the passage of the act of Congress of Feb. 10, 1885, it was held that a marriage where both husband and wife were aliens, and the husband afterwards became an American citizen, but the wife never came to this country, she could not have dower. Greer v. Sankston, 26 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 471.

In some of the States a non-resident widow at the time of her husband's death is not entitled to dower. Pratt v. Tefft, 14 Mich. 191; Bennett v. Harms, 51 Wis. 251; Wisconsin Stat., sec. 2160. But generally the rule is the residence of a widow in another State of the Union at the time of her husband's death will not divest her of dower right. Jones v. Gerock, 6 Jones Eq. (N. C.) 190.

1. Elk v. Wilkins, 112 U. S. 94; s. c., 17 Chicago Leg. News, 72.

In this case an Indian brought suit in the circuit court of the United States for the district of Nebraska, against the registrar of one of the wards of the city of Omaha, for refusing to register him as a voter therein. The plaintiff based his action on the first clause of the first section of the Fourteenth Amendment to the constitution of the United States, which says "all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside;" and on the Fifteenth Amendment, which provides that "the right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude." The court held that though the plaintiff surrendered himself to the jurisdiction of the United States, the United States government had not accepted his surrender. He had never been naturalized, or in any way recognized or treated as a citizen, either by the State or national government. "Subject to the jurisdiction thereof," means completely subject to the political jurisdiction of the United States, and owing them direct and immediate allegiance. Indians born within the territorial limits of this government, owing immediate allegiance to their respective tribes, are no more born within the United States and "subject to the jurisdiction thereof," within the meaning of the Fourteenth Amendment of the Federal constitution, than the children of subjects of foreign nations, born within the dominion of those governments, or the children born within the United States of ambassadors or other public ministers of foreign nations. The complainant not being a citizen by birth, can only become a citizen in the second way, that is, by naturalization by or under some treaty or statute. The action was dismissed.

It has generally been held that Indians are not citizens. They being within the territorial limits of the United States, are not really foreigners; but they are alien nations, distinct political communities, with whom the United States deal as they see fit, either by treaty made by the President and Senate, or by act of Congress in the ordinary forms of legislation. They are in a state of pupillage, resembling that of a ward to his guardian. General acts of Congress do not apply to Indians, unless so expressed as to clearly manifest an intention to include them. Cherokees v. Georgia, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 1; Worcester v. Georgia, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 515; U. S. v. Rogers, 4 How. (U. S.) 567; U. S. v. Holliday, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 407; New York Indians Case, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 761; Cherokees' Tobacco Case, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 616; U. S. v. Whiskey, 103 U. S. 44; Crow Dog's Case, 109 U. S. 556; Goodell v. Jackson, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 693; Hastings v. Farmer, 4 N. Y. 293.

3. Citizenship Acquired by Naturalization.—Congress has sole power to establish uniform rules of naturalization.<sup>1</sup> The acquirement of

The alien and independent condition of the Indians cannot be put off at their own will, without the consent of the United States. To become citizens they must comply with some treaty providing for their naturalization, or by some statute authorizing individuals of special tribes to assume citizenship by due process of law. Wilson v. Wall, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 83; Karrahoo v. Adams, 1 Dill. C. C. 344; in 1855 treaty the Wyandotta, 10 Stat. 1159; in 1861 and 1866, with the Pottawatomies, 12 Stat. 1192; in 1862, with Ottawas, 12 Stat. 1237; in 1839, act of Congress Brothertown Indians. Treaties containing powers for the naturalization of some of the Indians were made with the Delawares in 1886, in 1867 with various tribes in Kansas and with the Pottawatomies, and in April, 1868, with the Sioux. 14 Stat. 794; 15 Stat. 513. A treaty provided for the naturalization of members of the Ottawa, Miami, Peoria, and other tribes and their families. 15 Stat. 517. By act of Congress of July 15, 1870, c. 296, sec. 10, it is provided that if at any time thereafter any of the Winnebago Indians in the State of Minnesota should desire to become citizens, they could do so by complying with the provisions. In New York in 1876 an Indian was allowed to vote. He was born in New York, one of the remnants of a tribe which had ceased to exist as a tribe in the State. By a statute of the State, a native Indian might purchase, take, hold, and convey lands; and whenever he should have become a freeholder to the value of one hundred dollars, should be liable to taxation and to the civil jurisdiction of the courts, in the same manner and to the same extent as a citizen. N. Y. stat.

1843, c. 87. As to condition of the remnant of tribes in Massachusetts, see Danzell v. Webquish, 108 Mass. 133; Pells v. Webquish, 129 Mass. 469; Mass. Stat. c. 184; 1869, c. 463.

An Indian born a member of an independent political community and Indian tribe is not subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, nor born in its allegiance. McKay v. Campbell, 2 Sawyer C. C. 118.

The Indians in Oregon, not being born subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, are not citizens thereof. U. S. v. Osborne, 6 Sawyer C. C. 406.

It is admitted that an Indian is a competent witness against a white man. Coleman v. Doe, 4 Sm. & M. (Miss.) 40.

By act of Congress of March 3, 1843, c. 101, it is provided for a division of lands belonging to the Stockbridge Indians in Wisconsin to be divided among them individually, and patents to be issued to such individuals in severalty and in fee. Such Indians are then deemed citizens of the United States, with all the privileges and duties attached thereto, and the powers and usages of those Indians as a tribe thenceforth to cease.

A person half-white and half-Indian blood has been denied citizenship. In re Camille, 6 Sawyer C. C. 511.

In the case of Elk v. Wilkins, 119 U. S. 94, Justices Harlan and Woods dissented from the majority opinion, and argued that the plaintiff was born in the territory of the United States, under the dominion and within the jurisdictional limits thereof; that he had acquired a residence in one of the States with her consent, was subject to taxation and other duties imposed upon citizens, and was a citizen. If he did not acquire national citizenship, then the Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal constitution had failed to protect the Indian race. "There is still in this country a despised and rejected class of persons, with no nationality whatever, who, born in our territory, owing no allegiance to any foreign power, and subject, as residents of the States, to all the burdens of government, are yet not members of any political community, nor entitled to any of the rights, privileges, or immunities of citizens of the United States." This was the conclusion of their dissenting opinion.

1. At one time it was a question whether this power of naturalization beuniformity excludes legislation by the States on naturalization. It is competent for Congress, after establishing uniform rules, to give to the State courts jurisdiction under them.<sup>1</sup>

(a) United States Statutes Regulating Naturalization—Their Provisions and Procedure Thereunder.—The provisions of the United States statutes are: Any alien, except Chinese, may be naturalized and become a citizen of the United States on the following conditions:

1. The applicant shall declare on oath or affirmation before some State court of record, having a seal and clerk, and having common-law jurisdiction, or before a United States district or circuit court, or before a clerk of any of the said courts, two years at least before his admission, that it is his intention to become a citizen of the United States, and to renounce forever his allegiance to his own sovereignty, which must be in peace with the United States at the time.

2. At his final admission to citizenship he shall declare on oath or affirmation before some of the courts aforesaid that he will support the United States constitution, and that he renounces all allegiance to any foreign sovereign, and especially to his own, whereof he was a subject before his application for citizenship.

3. He must prove by at least two witnesses who are citizens that he has resided within the United States five years at least, and within the State or Territory where the court is located at least one year; that during that time he has been a good moral person, attached to the principles of this government, and is well disposed in this regard.

4. He must also renounce all titles to nobility, if he has any.

5. Any alien [except a Chinese] who is a minor, who shall have resided within the United States three years next preceding his arriving at his majority, and who shall continue to reside therein to the time of making application for citizenship, may, after reaching his majority, and having resided in the United States at least five years, including the three years of his minority, be given citizenship without any preliminary declaration.

6. Any alien [except a Chinese] who is twenty-one years of age or over, enlisting in the armies of the United States, either in the regular or the volunteer, and who shall be honorably discharged therefrom, can be admitted to citizenship without the preliminary declaration of his intentions, but he must prove one year's residence in the United States.

longed exclusively to Congress, and whether the States did not possess concurrent authority. While the State cannot exclude those citizens naturalized by the act of Congress, yet the States may adopt citizens upon easier terms than Congress does. Collett v. Collett, 2 Dall. (Pa.) 294.

This doctrine is, however, no longer held. The power of naturalization operates exclusively as soon as it was exercised by Congress. U. S. v. Villato, 2 Dallas (Pa.), 370; Chirac v. Chirac, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 269.

This power belongs exclusively to Congress, on the ground of there being a direct incompatibility in the exercise of it by the States. Houston v. Moore, 5 Wheat. (U. S.) 1.

1. State v. Penney, 10 Ark. 621.

7. The children of parents duly naturalized, being under the age of twenty-one years at the time of such naturalization, shall, if residing in the United States, be considered as citizens.

8. If an alien who shall have declared his intentions shall die before he is actually naturalized, his widow and children shall be considered citizens on taking the oath prescribed by law.

9. No alien who shall be a citizen, denizen, or subject of any country, state, or sovereign with whom the United States shall be at war at the time of his application shall be then admitted to be a citizen of the United States.<sup>1</sup>

1. U. S. Rev. Stat., title 30.

By act of Congress of 1872, sec. 29, 17 Stat. at Large, 268, any alien seaman may become naturalized. He must declare his intentions before a competent court, and then serve three years on a merchant vessel of the United States. Then he will receive the protection of the United States as a citizen from the time of filing his declaration.

A court of record without a recording officer is not competent to receive an alien's preliminary declaration to become naturalized. Ex parte Cregg, 2 Curtis C. C. 98; State v. Whittemore, 50 N. H. 245.

The clerk may receive the preliminary declaration of intention, as it is a ministerial duty. Butterworth's Case, 1 Wood, B. & M. C. C. 323.

To admit to citizenship is a judicial act, and cannot be delegated to the clerk. Clark's Case, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 444; The Acorn, 2 Abb. U. S. 434; McCarty v. Marsh, 1 Seld. (5 N. Y.) 263.

As to what constitutes a record of naturalization, see In re Coleman, 15 Blatchf. C. C. 406.

A married woman may be naturalized without the consent of her husband. Priest v. Cummings, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 617.

The residence and good moral character of the applicant cannot be proved by affidavits taken out of court; the witnesses must be present in court for examination. In re —, an alien, 7 Hill (N. Y.), 137.

The naturalization of the father ipso facto makes the son, then residing in the United States and a minor, a citizen. State v. Penney, 10 Ark. 621.

The mode to be pursued to become naturalized is substantially as follows:

The applicant exhibits his certificate of having made the preliminary oath to the clerk of the court. The clerk then prepares a written deposition for the witnesses, setting forth their knowledge of the applicant's residence and of his good moral character, also a deposition for the applicant, which provides and sets forth that he renounces all allegiance to every foreign sovereignty, and especially that of his native country, and that, if he has any titles of nobility, he renounces them, and that he will support the constitution of the United States. Then the judge of the court examines each of them under oath. If the examination proves satisfactory, the judge makes an order in writing for the admission to citizenship of the applicant. The depositions are subscribed and sworn to publicly in court before or in the presence of the judge. All these papers, including the certificate of the intention, constitute the record of the proceedings. The final certificate under the seal of the court, signed by the clerk, is given the applicant, setting forth his naturalization according to the law of the land. This certificate is conclusive evidence of his admission as a citizen. In case of a minor the previous declaration is dispensed with; otherwise the mode is the same.

A person duly naturalized is entitled to all the privileges and immunities of natural-born subjects, except that a residence of seven years is required to enable him to hold a seat in Congress, and no person except a natural-born citizen is eligible to the office of governor in some of the States, or President of the United States. 2 Kent Com. 66.

A naturalized person can hold and receive lands as a citizen. His naturalization takes away any defect of blood, and he may inherit as if native-born. It has no retroactive effect that will enable him to take, as heir, lands, the descent of which was cast before his admission to citizenship. Vaux v. Nesbit, 1 McCord Ch. (S. Car.) 372; People v. Conklin, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 67; Heeney v. Trustees, etc., 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 360. Or vest an estate. Keenan v. Keenan, 7 Rich. (S. Car.) 345.

Naturalization will confirm a title previously acquired by purchase or devise.

(b) Rights of Former Slaves—The Thirteenth, Fourteenth, and Fifteenth Amendments—The Civil Rights Act.—The former slaves have been emancipated by the Thirteenth Amendment to the Federal constitution, which provides: "Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction."<sup>1</sup> They were enfranchised by the Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal constitution; the first clause of the first section reads: "All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside."<sup>2</sup> The first section of the Fifteenth Amendment to the Federal constitution provides: "The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude."<sup>3</sup> The Civil Rights Act provides that all persons born within the United States and not subject to any former power are citizens, excluding Indians not taxed.<sup>4</sup>

Jackson ex dem. of Doran v. Green, 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 333; Harley v. State, etc., 40 Ala. 689.

Unless naturalization is complete, and final papers issued, it confers no right of inheritance. A mere declaration of intention to be a citizen is not sufficient. McDaniel v. Richards, 1 McCord (S. Car.), 187.

In England there are natural-born subjects, denizens, and aliens. A denizen is a person who has obtained letters-patent to make him an English subject. He holds a kind of middle position between an alien and a natural-born subject, and partakes of both of them. He acquires the privileges of a natural-born subject pursuant to 7 and 8 Vict. c. 66. He cannot be of the Privy Council or either house of Parliament, or have any office of trust, civil or military, or have any grant of lands, etc., from the crown. 2 Step. Com. 417; 1 Bl. Com. 374; Stat. 12 W. III., c. 3.

The English naturalization law of 1870, 33 Vict. c. 14, amended by 35 and 36 Vict. c. 39, provides: 1. That aliens shall have the capacity of British subjects to hold and inherit real and personal property within the realm; 2. That naturalized aliens may divest themselves of their status as British subjects, and resume their original nationality; 3. That British subjects may renounce their allegiance. By the law of Parliament, affirmed in resolution of the House of Commons in 1691, it was resolved that no alien, not being denizen or naturalized, hath any right to vote in elections of members of Parliament. Westminster Election, 12 Commons Journal, 367.

An alien who obtains letters-patent giving him the status of a denizen becomes a subject as to his freedom, but he cannot inherit. He cannot vote, even though qualified in other respects, at elections of members of Parliament. No alien or denizen can be elected a member of Parliament. Lex Parliamentaria, 182; Mitchell's Case, 3 O'M. & H. 19.

A naturalized subject can be elected to Parliament if qualified by an act of Parliament. Ferriere's Case, 3 O'M. & H. 86.

The crown can confer a title of knighthood upon an alien. Forsyth's Const. Law, 329.

In England it was established in 1774:

1. That a country conquered by English arms became a dominion of the king;
2. That the conquered inhabitants, once received under the king's protection, became subjects, and are to be so considered, and not as enemies. Chapman v. Hall, Cowper. 204.

1. 13 U. S. Stat. at Large, 775; proclaimed ratified Dec. 18, 1865.

2. 15 U. S. Stat. at Large, 706; proclaimed ratified July 28, 1868.

3. 16 U. S. Stat. at Large, p. 1131; proclaimed ratified March 30, 1870.

4. U. S. Rev. Stat. sec. 1992; act of Congress of April 9, 1866.

The Thirteenth and the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States constitution raised the colored race from the condition of inferiority and servitude in which most of them had previously

(c) Treaties and Legislation Affecting Chinese.—A person born within the dominion and jurisdiction of the United States, of Chinese parents, is a citizen;<sup>1</sup> but no alien Chinese can become naturalized citizens of the United States.<sup>2</sup>

4. Rights of States to Legislate Regarding Citizenship.—If the States choose to exercise the power of naturalization as an original one, they must abide by the rule which Congress makes.<sup>3</sup> No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction stood, into perfect equality and rights with all the other persons within the jurisdiction of the States.—Ex parte Virginia, 100 U. S. 339.

The pervading purpose of the amendments was to establish the freedom of the slave race, their protection as citizens; to prohibit discrimination against any race. Slaughter-house Cases, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 36; Strander v. West Virginia, 100 U. S. 303.

With respects to citizenship and civil rights the colored race is placed upon a level with the white, as provided by the United States constitution and sections 1977 and 1978 of the United States Statutes. Virginia v. Rives, 100 U. S. 313.

The Civil Rights Act (14 Stat. 27) was intended for the protection of citizens of the United States in the enjoyment of certain rights, without discrimination on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude. U. S. v. Cruikshanks, 92 U. S. 542.

The purpose of these amendments would seem to apply to all races as well as to the colored race. They forbid all class legislation, and insure an equal protection by the law of the land. Ah Kow v. Nunan, 5 Sawyer C. C. 552; Parrott's Chinese Case, 6 Sawyer C. C. 349; In re Ah Chong, 6 Sawyer C. C. 451. Compare State v. Ah Chew, 16 Nev. 50.

2. In re Look Tin Sing, 21 Fed. Rep. 905.

1. By act of May 6, 1882, the right of Chinese laborers to come to the United States was suspended for ten years. By the same act the State and the United States courts are forbidden to admit Chinese to citizenship. Before this statute it was held that an alien Chinese could not be naturalized and admitted to citizenship. In re Ah Yup, 5 Sawyer C. C. 155. Who are Chinese laborers, is a question difficult of solution. As to this question, see In re Ah Lung, 18 Fed. Rep. 28, which decision is diametrically opposed to United States v. Douglas, 17 Fed. Rep. 634.

The Chinese Restriction Act of Congress of July 5, 1884, amending the act of May 6, 1882, "to execute certain treaty stipulations relating to Chinese," has this provision: That every Chinese person other than a laborer, entitled to enter the United States under the treaty between our government and China, or under that act, shall obtain from the Chinese government or of the government of which he is a subject, its permission to come within the United States, authenticated by its certificate containing various particulars of himself and family, so as to clearly identifying him; and whilst such certificate is only prima facie evidence against the United States, it is made the sole evidence permissible on the part of the person producing it to establish his right to enter into the United States. Chap. 220, sec. 6; Stat. 1883-4, 115.

As to Chinese rights in the United States, see Ah Kow v. Nunan, 5 Sawyer C. C. 552; Parrott's Case, 6 Sawyer C. C. 349; In re Ah Chong, 6 Sawyer C. C. 451; In re Look Tin Sing, 21 Fed. Rep. 905.

3. Ex parte Knowles, 5 Cal. 300.

Before the present constitution of the United States was adopted, several of the States exercised the power to naturalize and admit to citizenship. Goodell v. Jackson, 20 Johns. (N. Y.) 693; State v. Managers, etc., 1 Bail. (S. Car.) 215; State v. Ross, 7 Yerg. (Tenn.) 74.

This power of naturalization now lies exclusively with Congress, and deprives the States individually of the power of naturalizing aliens according to their own will and pleasure, and thereby give them the rights and privileges of citizens in every other State. If each State could naturalize upon one year's residence, when the act of Congress requires five, of what use is the act of Congress, and how does it become a uniform rule? 1 Kent Com. 424. See further on this subject, note 1, page 246.

the equal protection of its laws.<sup>1</sup> The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any of the States on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude.<sup>2</sup>

1. Second clause, sec. 1, of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal constitution.

2. Sec. 1, Fifteenth Amendment to the Federal constitution.

Sovereignty, for protection of the rights of life and personal liberty within the respective States, rests alone with the States. The Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States prohibits a State from depriving any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, and from denying to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the law, but it adds nothing to the rights of one citizen as against another. United States v. Cruikshanks, 92 U. S. 542.

The United States and State governments are distinct from each other, and each has citizens of its own who owe it allegiance, and whose rights within its jurisdiction it must protect. The right of citizenship under the United States government is different from that under the State, and vice versa. Slaughter-house Cases, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 36.

The Fourteenth Amendment to the Federal constitution secures to the emancipated race all the rights that any race enjoys in the jurisdiction of the United States. It gives protection of the United States in the enjoyment of such rights whenever they should be denied by any of the States. The amendment gave citizenship and its privileges to persons of color, and denied to the State the power to withhold from them its protection. It confers the right to exemption from unfriendly legislation against the colored race. Any State statute which denies to colored citizens the right and privileges of participating in the administration of the law as jurors, because of their color, though qualified in other respects, is a discrimination which is forbidden by the amendment. Strander v. W. Virginia, 100 U. S. 303.

The act of Congress (18 Stat. part iii. 336) says no citizen shall be excluded from jury duty on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude, which statute is sustained by the Thirteenth and the Fourteenth Amendments.

The Fifteenth Amendment forbids the States or the United States from giving preferences to one citizen of the United States over another on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude. Before its adoption a State could exclude citizens of the United States from voting on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude. If citizens of one race have certain qualifications, are permitted to vote, then if another race have the same qualifications they must be allowed to vote. The Fifteenth Amendment does not confer the right of suffrage, but invests citizens of the United States with the right of exemption from discrimination in the exercise of the elective franchise on account of their race, color, or previous condition of servitude, and empowers Congress to enforce that right by appropriate legislation. Congress can punish only when there is a wrongful refusal to receive the vote of a qualified elector at such election because of his race, color, or previous condition of servitude. This amendment has invested the citizens of the United States with a new constitutional right, which is exemption from the discrimination in the exercise of the elective franchise, on account of race, etc. The right to vote in the States comes from the States, but the right from the prohibited discrimination comes from the United States. U. S. v. Reese, 92 U. S. 214; Minor v. Happersett, 21 Wall. U. S. 162.

A trial by jury in suits at common law pending in State courts is not a privilege or immunity of national citizenship which the States are forbidden to abridge by the Fourteenth Amendment. Walker v. Sauvinet, 92 U. S. 90.

A mixed jury in a particular case is not essential to the equal protection of the laws. This is a right to which any colored man is entitled—that in the selection of jurors to pass upon life and liberty there shall be no exclusion of race, and no discrimination against him because of his color. But a colored person has no right to have a jury composed of colored men exclusively. Virginia v. Rives, 100 U. S. 313.

There is a distinction between local rights of citizenship within a State and citizenship of the United States. United States citizenship can be conferred only by United States naturalization laws. But each State, in the exercise of its local and reserved sovereignty, may place foreigners or other persons on a footing with its own citizens as to political rights and privileges to be enjoyed within its own dominions. But State regulations do not make the person on whom the right is conferred a citizen of the United States, entitled to the privileges and immunities of citizens of other States. Dred Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. (U. S.) 393.

5. Rights of Citizens of States, under the United States Constitution, in other States than that of their Domicile.—The citizens of each State shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States.<sup>1</sup>

In some of the States, aliens, after having declared their intentions to become citizens are allowed to vote as citizens. Cooley's Const. Lim. (4th Ed.) 753.

These States, by conferring on aliens the right to vote, give them an equal voice with every citizen of the United States. Ex parte Wehlitz, 16 Wis. 443; Dred Scott v. Sandford, 19 How. (U. S.) 393.

The right to vote, however, is not a necessary incident of citizenship. Minor v. Happersett, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 162; Robinson's Case, 131 Mass. 376.

Each State has the right to prescribe the qualifications of its voters. Naturalization does not confer on the individual naturalized the right to vote. The qualifications which an elector is required to have, in congressional election, depend entirely on the laws of the State in which the elective franchise is exercised, and is purely dependent upon the municipal regulations of the State. It is not necessary to determine whether the voter is a citizen of the United States. Spragin's v. Houghton, 2 Scam. (3 Ill.) 377.

An alien otherwise qualified may vote at elections of borough officers in Pittsburg. Stewart v. Foster, 2 Binney (Pa.), 120.

Judge Sharswood says: "It is a common error to connect the elective franchise inseparably with citizenship, as if elector and citizen were convertible terms. In regard to the persons who shall exercise this franchise in each State, it is determined entirely by the constitution and laws of the State. They may confer the privilege on aliens, negroes, Indians, women, and children. Even in regard to the choice of representatives in Congress and electors of president of the United States, the Federal constitution leaves the matter entirely in the hands of the State." 1 Sharswood's Bl. Com. 376, note.

The provisions of the Illinois constitution of 1848 allowed all the white male inhabitants, including aliens, to vote on equality with the citizens, provided they were residents. Art. 6. sec. 1.

To be a citizen of a State, the person must have all the requirements to the exercise of any civil or political rights which are established by the State constitution and laws in regard to its citizens. If a property qualification or a period of residence is required in order to vote, it must be fulfilled. Murray v. McCarty, 2 Munf. (Va.) 398.

1. "Under this clause the citizen of any State is to be regarded, for the purpose of holding, enjoying, devising, or inheriting real estate in any other, as a native thereof." Leading Cases of Real Prop. 494.

Under this provision the citizens of all other States have the right to go into any State and carry on business; to hold property and be protected like the citizens in their rights; the right to enforce personal privileges, and to be exempt, in property and person, from taxes or burdens which the property or persons of citizens of the same State are not subject to. Corfield v. Coryell, 4 Wash. C. C. 380; Campbell v. Morris, 3 H. & McH. (Md.) 554; Crandall v. State, 10 Conn. 343; Oliver v. Mills, 11 Allen (Mass.), 281. There are, however, many rights and privileges which depend upon actual residence, such as the right to vote, to have the benefit of the exemption laws, to take fish in the waters of the State, and the like. Cooley's Const. Lim. (4th Ed.) 498.

The State of Virginia can prohibit the citizens of other States from planting oysters in a stream in that State where the tide ebbs and flows. The right can be granted to its own citizens exclusively. Such a right is not a privilege or immunity of general but of special citizenship. It does not belong of right to the citizens of all free governments, but only to the citizens of Virginia. They own it by citizenship and domicile united. McCready v. Virginia, 94 U. S. 391.

A corporation aggregate is not a citizen within the meaning of the clause of the United States constitution which declares "the citizens of each State shall be entitled to all the privileges and immunities of citizens of the several States." Ducat v. City, etc., 48 Ill. 172; Paul v. Virginia, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 168; Bank of U. S. v. Earle, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 519.

"Immunities" and "privileges" do not mean the right to hold office or to vote. They mean that all citizens of the United States shall have the right to acquire property and hold it, and this property shall be protected and secured by the laws of the State in the same manner as the property of the citizens of the State is protected. That this property shall not be subject to any burdens or taxes not imposed on the property of citizens of the State. Campbell v. Morris, 3 H. & McH. (Md.) 554; Wiley v. Parmer, 14 Ala. 627; Oliver v. Mills, 11 Allen (Mass.) 268; People v. Thurber, 13 Ill. 554; Cincinnati, etc., Insurance Co. v. Rosenthal, 55 Ill. 85; Manufacturing Co. v. Aetna Ins. Co., 2 Paine (C. C.), 501.

As to these rights of citizens of the several States, see United States v. Cruikshanks, 92 U. S. 542; Paul v. Hazleton, 37 N. J. L. 106; Bartemeyer v. Iowa, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 129; Murray v. McCarty, 2 Munf. (Va.) 393; Bradwell v. State, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 130; Lemmon v. People, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 270; Jeffersonville, etc., R. Co. v. Hendricks, 41 Ind. 71; Amy v. Smith, 1 Litt. (Ky.) 326; Sears v. Commissioners, etc., 36 Ind. 267; Crandall v. State, 10 Conn. 340; Fire Department v. Helfenstein, 16 Wis. 142; Com. v. Towles, 5 Leigh (Va.), 743; Haney v. Marshall, 9 Md. 194; Ins. Co. v. Com., 5 Bush (Ky.), 68; Slaughter v. Com., 13 Gratt. (Va.) 767; State v. Midbury, 3 R. I. 138; People v. Coleman, 4 Cal. 46; Butler v. Farnsworth, 4 Wash. C. C. 101; 4 s. c., N. E. Rep. (Ind.) 160; License Cases, 5 How. (U. S.) 582; Thorpe v. Railroad Co., 27 Vt. 149.

A State cannot impose, for the privilege of doing business, a greater license tax upon non-residents than upon residents. Ward v. Maryland, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 418.

A law imposing a license fee upon drummers for selling imported goods, which is not required of agents selling goods manufactured within the State, is invalid. Webber v. Virginia, 103 U. S. 344; Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275; New Orleans v. Boat Co., 33 La. Ann. 647; Higgins v. Lime, 130 Mass. 1; Robbins v. Taxing District, etc., 19 Chicago Leg. News (U. S. S. C.), 217, March 19, 1887. This last case involved these facts: There was in force a statute of Tennessee in the taxing district of Shelby county (formerly city of Memphis), which imposed on all drummers and others in like business outside of the State a license for selling merchandise, etc., within said district. Sabine Robbins, of Ohio, was fined for selling in this district without a license. He appealed to the State supreme court, which sustained the decision of the lower court. Then he carried the case to the United States supreme court, which held the law unconstitutional. The court held that this law of Tennessee was an attempt to regulate commerce among the States, that interstate commerce in the United States must be regulated by one system, and not by a multitude of State regulations. They hold that the constitution of the United States gives Congress the exclusive power over interstate commerce whenever the subjects of it are national in their character or admit of one uniform system of regulation, as was decided in Cooley v. Board, etc., 12 How. (U. S.) 299, and virtually involved in the case of Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 1, and affirmed in many recent decisions, such as Brown v. Maryland, 7 How. (U. S.) 283; Crandall v. Nevada, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 35; Ward v. Maryland, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 418; Tax Cases, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 232; Henderson v. Mayor, etc., 92 U. S. 259; Railroad Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465; Mobile v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691; Gloucester, etc., v. Pennsylvania, 114 U. S. 106; Wabash R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557.

Where the power of Congress is exclusive, but fails to legislate in this regard, the subject shall be free from restrictions or impositions, and the States must not act in this matter except as to local concerns, and any legislation by the States otherwise is repugnant to such freedom. In confirmation of this the following cases are in point: Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 1; Passenger Cases, 7 How. (U. S.) 283; Tax Cases, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 232; Railroad Co. v. Husen, 95 U. S. 465; Welton v. Missouri, 91 U. S. 275; County, etc., v. Kimball, 102 U. S. 691; Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622; Walling v. Michigan, 116 U. S. 446; Pickard v. Pullman, etc., 117 U. S. 34; Wabash R. Co. v. Illinois, 118 U. S. 557.

The State can, by virtue of its police power, provide for the security of the lives, limbs, health, and comfort of its citizens and the protection of their property. It can provide for the internal regulation of its domestic affairs, such as the regulation of highways, canals, railroads, and other commercial facilities when they do not affect interstate affairs. A State can impose taxes on all property within its limits, but it cannot impose taxes upon persons passing through the

6. Property Rights as Affected by Citizenship (See also notes under section 5, ante.)—Every citizen of the United States is capable of holding and acquiring title to land by purchase, provided he is under no disability so he cannot contract, and all citizens may take by descent or devise.<sup>1</sup> An alien cannot acquire title to real property by descent, or by other mere operation of law.<sup>2</sup>

This common-law rule as to aliens has been greatly modified or abolished by the several States.<sup>3</sup>

State, or coming into it temporarily, especially if connected with foreign or interstate commerce. It cannot impose taxes upon property imported from abroad or from another State, which has not become a part of the mass of property therein. It cannot discriminate against property from other States. The business of a drummer is not a privilege. The people of this country are citizens of the United States as well as of individual States, and have rights under the constitution of the United States independent of the individual States, and free from any molestation from them. When the goods are imported into the State and become a portion of the great mass of property, then the State can impose a tax on them in like manner as other goods of similar character are taxed. Brown v. Houston, 114 U. S. 622; Machine Co. v. Gage, 100 U. S. 676. But the sale of such goods cannot be taxed before they are imported into the State, as that would be taxing interstate commerce itself. Interstate commerce cannot be taxed even if the State should tax in like manner its domestic commerce. Tax Cases, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 232. Negotiating for the sale of goods which are in another State for the purpose of importing them into the State where the sale is made is interstate commerce.

If selling goods by sample by drummers is injurious to the local affairs of the individual States, Congress has the exclusive power to provide a remedy.

"The confusion into which the commerce of the country would be thrown by being subject to State legislation on this subject would be but a repetition of the disorder which prevailed under the Articles of Confederation." Three of the justices dissent from this decision, and hold that the license fee was demanded for the privilege of selling goods by sample within the State; that the fee is exacted from all alike who do that kind of business unless they have "a license house of business" in the said district, thus showing no discrimination between its own citizens or citizens of other States. Osborne v. Mobile, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 481.

The supreme court of Tennessee decided that the license is only required of "drummers and all persons not having a licensed house of business in the taxing district offering for sale or selling goods, wares, or merchandise therein by sample," and that this means nothing more than that any person who sells by sample shall pay the tax, which is the correct interpretation. "It will be time enough to consider whether a non-resident can be taxed for merely soliciting orders without having samples when such a case arises. That is not this case." Chief Justice Waite and Justices Field and Gray.

1. 2 Bouvier's Inst. No. 1995.

2. Calvin's Case, 7 Co. 25 a.

These statutes must be strictly construed, as they are in derogation of the common law. Spratt v. Spratt, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 393.

The following is the summary of the law up to January 1, 1887, as to aliens taking by purchase or descent and transmitting by inheritance as a native citizen:

Alabama.—Resident alien placed on same footing as a citizen.

Arkansas.—Resident aliens have the same rights as to realty as citizens.

California.—All restrictions removed, except the alien must make his claim of property within five years of the accrual of his title.

Colorado.—Aliens have the same rights as citizens as to realty.

Connecticut.—Resident aliens and Frenchmen are given same property rights as citizens.

Dakota.—No restrictions as to property rights.

Delaware.—No restrictions as to resident aliens, who have made the preliminary oath of citizenship.

District of Columbia.—An alien may inherit from a natural citizen such lands as he acquired by deed or will before naturalization.

Florida.—No property restrictions imposed on aliens.

Georgia.—Aliens, except enemies, have all the rights of citizens as to realty.

Illinois.—No property restrictions: aliens are placed on an equal footing with citizens.

Indiana.—An alien can acquire title to land by descent or devise. If a non-resident, he can hold land acquired by descent five years after the settlement of the inheritable estate.

Iowa.—Aliens may acquire, inherit, hold and dispose of real or personal property, and all distinctions between aliens and citizens in this respect are abolished.

Kansas.—Aliens have same property rights as citizens.

Kentucky.—Aliens, not enemies, after the preliminary oath of citizenship, hold as citizens do.

Louisiana.—No law forbidding aliens holding and transmitting real estate.

Maine.—No restrictions.

Maryland.—No restrictions except to alien enemies.

Massachusetts.—Aliens may take, hold, and transmit real estate as citizens.

Michigan.—Aliens have the same rights to realty as citizens.

Minnesota.—An alien has same rights as citizens as to realty.

Mississippi.—No restrictions.

Missouri.—No restrictions.

Montana.—No law on the subject.

Nebraska.—No distinction between aliens and citizens.

Nevada.—No restrictions except as to Chinese.

New Hampshire.—No restriction to resident aliens.

New Jersey.—No restriction upon alien friend.

New Mexico.—No restrictions.

New York.—By act of 1874, an alien is enabled to take land by descent from alien citizen. Devises to aliens are void. But a resident alien after filing with the Secretary of State a deposition declaring his intention of becoming a citizen may take, hold, sell, and mortgage real estate as if he was a citizen, for six years, but not to devise or lease real estate until he is admitted to citizenship. The devisee or grantee of the realty of a resident alien who has died after the devise or grant may hold same, whether citizen or alien; but if an alien, he must file a declaration of his intention of becoming a citizen. Letters testamentary or of administration cannot be granted to non-resident aliens.

North Carolina.—No restrictions.

Ohio.—An alien can inherit and transmit as a citizen.

Oregon.—No restrictions imposed.

Pennsylvania.—Aliens, except enemies, may purchase land not exceeding five thousand acres, nor in net annual income twenty thousand dollars, the same as citizens. Aliens may take, hold, without limit, realty acquired by devise or descent. Titles derived through aliens prior to April 26, 1869, were confirmed by an act of that date. By act of 1881 conveyances of realty liable to escheat before inquisition has been taken against the same are indefeasible in the grantee as to any right of escheat in the State.

Rhode Island.—No restriction as to aliens holding realty.

South Carolina.—No distinction between citizens and aliens as to the purchase, enjoyment, or descent of property.

Tennessee.—Aliens have the same rights as citizens.

Texas.—Aliens may take and hold real or personal property by devise or descent, in the same manner in which citizens of the United States may take and hold real or personal property by devise or descent within the country of such aliens.

Utah.—Aliens resident take by descent and inherit as citizens. Non-resident aliens must claim an inheritance in the estate of the deceased within five years after the death of the person from whom he claims succession.

Vermont.—No prohibition against aliens holding realty. No law for the forfeiture of aliens' estates; still the power exists as a right of sovereignty, but has never been exercised.

Virginia.—Aliens, except enemies, have the same property rights as citizens.

Washington.—All aliens [except Chinese] have the same property rights as citizens.

West Virginia.—Aliens, except enemies, have the same property rights.

Wisconsin.—No restrictions as to property rights.

It has been argued that fixing the status of the alien as to property rights belonged to the United States, because they have exclusive control of the relations between this country and foreign nations. State v. Railroad Co., 25 Vt. 433.

But this right conferred by States upon aliens to hold, by purchase, descent, and devise, realty, does not confer the right of citizenship. Montgomery v. Dorion, 7 N. H. 475; Etheridge v. Doe ex dem. of Malempor, 18 Ala 565.

The power of the United States to provide by treaty for rights and privileges to be allowed to aliens, with regard to realty, has been recognized. Hauenstein v. Lynham, 100 U. S. 483; People v. Gerke, 5 Cal. 381. But this right was

7. Expatriation.—Expatriation is renouncing one's allegiance to his native country.<sup>1</sup> Expatriation is forsaking one's country, with a renunciation of his allegiance, with the intention of becoming a permanent resident and citizen of another country.<sup>2</sup>

CITY. (See also MUNICIPAL CORPORATION.)—In England, a city was an incorporated town which was or had been the see of a bishop.

In the United States this definition has never been applicable, and a city may be defined as an incorporated town, invested by the sovereign power with the highest grade of municipal duties and privileges, and having the power to legislate upon, decide, and control local and subordinate matters pertaining to its respective locality.<sup>3</sup>

CIVIL.—Pertaining to a city or State, or to a citizen in his relations to his fellow-citizens or to the State, as civil rights, civil government.<sup>4</sup> Pertaining to an organized community; reduced to questioned in Siemssen v. Bofer, 6 Cal. 250.

The policy adopted by the United States in this respect has been to stipulate that aliens, subjects of the sovereignty with whom the treaty is made, shall be allowed to sell their lands, and within a certain time be allowed to withdraw the proceeds of such sales. When the time designated has expired under the treaty, if the property remains unsold, the State may take advantage of the forfeiture. Yeaker's, etc., v. Yeaker's, etc., 4 Met. (Ky.) 33.

1. Webster's Dict.

2. Wharton's L. Dict.

The doctrine of the common law was that natural-born subjects owe an allegiance to the sovereign which they cannot absolve; that natural allegiance was primitive and intrinsic, perpetual and indelible, and cannot be divested without the consent of the prince to whom it was first due. 1 Bl. Com. 370; 1 Hale's P. C. 68; Foster's Cr. L. 17, 59, 184. At one time the United States held the same doctrine. Murray v. Betsey, 2 Cranch (U. S.), 64; Talbot v. Janson, 3 Dall. (Pa.) 133; Shanks v. Dupont, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 242.

Congress has enacted that expatriation is a natural right of all persons. U. S. Rev. Stat. secs. 1999, 2000, 2001. Alsberry v. Hawkins, 9 Dana (Ky.), 178.

A British subject ceases to be such on becoming naturalized in a foreign State. 33 Vict. c. 14, sec. 6.

3. The general principles of law affecting the government of strictly municipal corporations, such as cities, towns, and villages, can best be considered under the title MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.

4. The word has a variety of applications; but in almost all one may readily trace the idea of the character, privileges, or peculiarities of the ancient citizen. Thus it is now used in opposition to what is military; again, in contrast with barbarous, uncivilized, or rustic; and in turn as the opposite of that which is ecclesiastical or priestly; and it may designate that which is for the individual in distinction from the government. But in all these uses it presents the citizen as the standard with which the other is compared. Abbott's Dict.

As Opposed to Criminal in Statute.—Where a statute required all process upon recognizances in criminal cases to conclude "against the peace and dignity of the commonwealth of Kentucky," and a scire facias issued on a recognizance to keep the peace did not so conclude, the omission was held fatal on demurrer. The court say: This is very clearly not a civil case, but in our opinion should be considered as embraced by the expression "in all criminal cases" as used in the statute. Applegate v. Comm., 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 12.

In Massachusetts, a complaint by a woman under the bastardy act accusing a man of being the father of her bastard child, though in some respects in the form of a criminal proceeding, was held to be in substance and effect a civil suit. Wilbur v. Crane, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 284.

In New Jersey, it is held that where in statutes passed at various times from 1798 to 1882 the phrase "every suit of a civil nature at law" was used, the legislature intended not to include actions for statutory penalties. The court says,

Definition. CIVIL ACTION—CIVIL DAMAGE ACTS. Statutes.

order; subject to government, as civil society.<sup>1</sup> (See also CIVIL RIGHTS; CIVIL DAMAGE ACTS; MUNICIPAL LAW.)

CIVIL ACTION.—In the Civil Law.—A personal action which is instituted to compel payment, or the doing of some other thing which is purely civil.<sup>2</sup>

At Common Law.—An action which has for its object the recovery of private or civil rights, or compensation for their infraction.<sup>3</sup> (See also ACTION.)

CIVIL CORPORATION. See CORPORATION.

CIVIL DAMAGE ACTS. See also INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

Statutes, 257.

Constitutionality, 257.

Who Liable, 258.

Dealer Liable for Sale by Agent or Servant, 258.

Intoxication Produced by Several Sellers, 258. [260.

Liability of Owner of Premises, Injuries for which Damages may be Claimed, 261.

Injuries to the Person, 261.

Injuries to Property, 262.

Injuries to Means of Support, 262.

Death, 265.

Compensation for Nursing, 267.

Actual and Exemplary Damages, 267.

Mitigating Circumstances, 268.

Who has a Right of Action, 269.

What Bars the Action, 270.

Evidence, 271.

1. Statutes.—In several States statutes have been passed giving to various parties, as husbands, wives, children, parents, guardians, employers, and others who have sustained injury in person or property or means of support by any intoxicated person, or in consequence of the intoxication, habitual or otherwise, of such person, the right of action in his or her name against any person who has, by selling or giving away intoxicating liquors, caused the intoxication in whole or in part; and this right of action is in many States extended against the owners of the premises on which such intoxicating liquors are sold.<sup>4</sup>

2. Constitutionality.—These acts have been held to be constitutional; and even the fact that the seller has been licensed to sell intoxicating liquors does not abrogate the right of the State to make him subject to an action for damages resulting from intoxication produced by intoxicating liquor sold or given by him.<sup>5</sup>

While the term civil may be applied to the form of litigation in contradistinction to that which is criminal, it may also with propriety be applied to the nature of litigation as growing out of the relations of citizens inter sese, rather than their relations to the State. Koch v. Vanderhoof, 9 Atl. Repr. 773; 11 E. Repr. 531.

1. Webster's Dict.

2. Pothier Introd. Gen. aux Cont. 119.

3. Bouvier's Law Dict.

4. See the various statutes.

5. Bedore v. Newton, 54 N. H. 117; Schaler v. State, 49 Ind. 460; Hornling

v. Wendell, 57 Ind. 171; Jackson v. Reeves, 53 Ind. 231; Moran v. Goodwin, 130 Mass. 158; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 443; Kreiter v. Nichols, 28 Mich. 496; Volans v. Owen, 74 N. Y. 526; s. c., 30 Am. Rep. 337; Baker v. Pope, 2 Hun (N. Y.), 556; Bertholf v. O'Reilly, 74 N. Y. 509; s. c., 30 Am. Rep. 323; Met. Bd. of Excise v. Barrie, 34 N. Y. 657; Phelps v. Racey, 60 N. Y. 11; Franklin v. Schermerhorn, 15 N. Y. Supr. Ct. 112; State v. Ludington, 33 Wis. 107; Wightman v. Devere, 33 Wis. 570; Werner v. Edmiston, 24 Kans. 147; Stanton v. Simpson, 48 Vt. 628.

3. Who Liable.—Dealer Liable for Sales by Agent or Servant.—

The right of action for damages is not confined to cases where the liquor-dealer made the sale himself, but extends to cases where the sale was made by his agent even against his express orders. And the servant or agent will in such a case also be personally liable.<sup>1</sup>

Intoxication Produced by Several Sellers.—It will be no defence to the seller that the intoxication which caused the injury was produced in part by liquor sold by others.<sup>2</sup>

1. Peterson v. Knoble, 35 Wis. 80; Smith v. Reynolds, 3 Hun (N. Y.), 128; Keedy v. Howe, 72 Ill. 133; Fentz v. Meadows, 72 Ill. 540; Kreiter v. Nichols, 28 Mich. 496; Kehrig v. Peters, 41 Mich. 475, 478; Bodge v. Hughes, 53 N. H. 614; Barnaby v. Wood, 50 Ind. 405.

Where the sale was made by the son of the saloon keeper, the latter was held liable. Worley v. Spurgeon, 38 Iowa, 465.

A master is liable if his servant, in the course of his master's business, sells intoxicating liquor, after notice requesting the master not to do so, to a person who has the habit of drinking intoxicating liquor to excess, although the master has instructed the servant not to make a sale to such person, and the sale is without the knowledge and consent of the master. George v. Gobe, 128 Mass. 289; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 376; Keedy v. Howe, 72 Ill. 133.

Where A, however, sells to B and B to C, and C becomes intoxicated and injures D, D can recover of B, but not of A. Bush v. Murray, 66 Me. 472.

There must be proof of the fact that the liquor was obtained with the consent of the seller or his servant. Where the party who became intoxicated was an employee in a brewery, and simply took the liquor without the consent of the owner or his servants, the owner will not be liable. And taking pay for the liquor consumed will not act as a ratification and make it a sale. Kreiter v. Nichols, 28 Mich. 496.

2. Woolheather v. Risley, 38 Iowa, 486; Sibila v. Bahnney, 34 Ohio St. 399, 409; Hackett v. Smelsley, 77 Ill. 109; Roth v. Eppy, 80 Ill. 283; Bryant v. Tidgewell, 133 Mass. 86.

The statute in effect declares the act of producing intoxication a wrong, and makes every one who has contributed to it by furnishing intoxicating liquor a wrongdoer, and liable. Elshire v. Schuyler, 15 Neb. 561.

Each person who, by selling, bartering or giving intoxicating liquors, contributed in part to the intoxication causing the injury complained of, is liable to the full extent of the injury; and all such persons may be joined, or any one may be sued. Fountain v. Draper, 49 Ind. 441; Emory v. Addis, 71 Ill. 273; Boyd v. Watt, 27 Ohio St. 259; Rose v. Perkins, 9 Neb. 304; s. c., 31 Am. Rep. 409; Kearney v. Fitzgerald, 43 Iowa. 580; Bodge v. Hughes, 53 N. H. 614; Werner v. Edmiston, 24 Kans. 147, 153. Compare Jackson v. Brookins, 5 Hun (N. Y.), 530.

There being evidence tending to prove that the deceased was intoxicated on the fatal day, and it being contended on the part of the defendants that he was not intoxicated, notwithstanding such evidence, because they had not sold him enough liquor to make him intoxicated, held, that it was not error on the part of the court to instruct the jury that "it was not necessary on the part of the plaintiffs to prove that the defendants sold all the liquor that may have produced the intoxication," etc., nor to allow counsel for the plaintiffs to urge to the jury that, rather than reject the evidence before them of the intoxication of the deceased, they might presume that he obtained and drank liquor elsewhere which also contributed to his intoxication. Kerkow v. Bauer, 15 Neb. 150.

In an action by a wife against two persons for injury to her means of support, resulting from the habitual intoxication of her husband, caused by intoxicating liquors sold and furnished him by the defendants, and where, from the facts found, it appears that the defendants each sold intoxicating liquors to the husband, and that they were in no way connected in business, and that neither of them was in any way interested in the sales made by the other; but that the husband of the plaintiff, during the time in which the sales were made, was habitually intoxicated, and that the sales were made by both defendants with knowledge of this fact, and the sales thus made contributed to keep up said habit. Held, that the defendants were jointly liable. Rantz v. Barnes, 40 Ohio St. 43.

The rule will be different, however, when the drunkenness complained of does not consist of a mere simple fit of intoxication, contributed by two or more. In such a case the action is not joint, but several, and each is only liable for the injury produced by his own acts. Hitchner v. Ehlers, 44 Iowa, 40; La France v. Krayner, 42 Iowa, 143; Flint v. Gauer, 66 Iowa, 696; Ennis v. Shiley, 47 Iowa, 552; Engleken v. Webber, 47 Iowa, 558; Jewett v. Wanshura, 43 Iowa, 574.

An instruction that if defendant sold beer to plaintiff's husband, which with beer sold him by others produced "fits of intoxication," he was liable for all the damage caused thereby, was erroneous. The persons furnishing the liquor were not joint wrong-doers, but each was severally liable for the damage caused by his own acts. Richmond v. Shickler, 57 Iowa, 486.

In an action under the Civil Damage Act to recover damages to means of support by reason of intoxication, caused by liquors sold continuously during a period of three years, to a person in the habit of becoming intoxicated, the defendant may offer evidence to show that during the same period such person became intoxicated by liquors which he purchased of other persons, and it was for the jury to say whether such sales by others produced independent intoxication or not. Kirchner v. Myers, 35 Ohio St. 85; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 598. Compare Brannon v. Silvernail, 81 Ill. 434.

Where a joint action will not lie against several sellers, it follows that a settlement with one will not bar an action against another. Jewett v. Wanshura, 43 Iowa, 574.

Where the damages complained of arise from incapacity for business and loss of estate caused by habitual intoxication, and it becomes impossible to separate the damages caused by others from those caused by the defendant, the latter is liable for all such damages, if the natural and probable consequences of his illegal acts were to cause such injury. Boyd v. Watt, 27 Ohio St. 259; Kearney v. Fitzgerald, 43 Iowa, 80; Steele v. Thompson, 42 Mich. 594. Compare Huggins v. Kavanagh 52 Iowa, 368.

In Boyd v. Watt, 27 Ohio St. 259, the court sustained the following propositions: 1. If the defendant was the sole cause of the intoxication, he was liable for all the damages resulting. 2. If some of the injury was caused by others, he was not liable for damages resulting from their illegal sales. 3. If the damages could not be separated, then he was liable for all injuries to which he had contributed by his illegal sales.

In such an action, where the husband is an habitual drunkard, and has been under the influence of liquor most of the time for two years before the action was commenced, the refusal of an instruction that "if the jury find from the evidence the defendant sold plaintiff's husband intoxicating liquors at a time when he was sober, and that at such times he did not become intoxicated, they should not consider such sales in determining the amount of plaintiff's recovery," is not error. It is enough if the liquors sold by the defendant were the direct cause, either in whole or in part, of the intoxication. Jockers v. Borgman, 29 Kans. 109; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 625.

Where a person while drunk broke his leg at about five or six o'clock in the afternoon, and there was no evidence to show that he had been drinking in defendant's saloon after ten or eleven o'clock in the forenoon, it was held error to refuse defendant to show how long it usually takes an intoxicated person to become sober again. Any evidence tending to show that the person had become sober before the accident, or was made drunk by liquor obtained from some one other than defendant, is admissible and proper. If the person intoxicated had recovered from the effects of the liquor sold him by defendant, and was sober at the time of breaking his leg, or if he became sober and then got drunk on liquor procured from others before the accident, then the defendant will not be liable. Brannon v. Adams, 76 Ill. 331; Barks v. Woodruff, 12 Ill. App. 96.

But in such a case it will be error to instruct the jury that if they find that there was time between the drinking and the act which produced the injury for the intoxicated person to become sober, the seller was not liable. The proper question to be considered was whether the drinker had in fact so recovered. King v. Haley, 86 Ill. 106.

Although the several parties may be individually sued for damages, there can be only one satisfaction for the injury. Kearney v. Fitzgerald, 43 Iowa, 580; Putney v. O'Brien, 53 Iowa, 117; Emory v. Addis, 71 Ill. 273.

But where separate actions were brought against different defendants for alleged injuries to a wife's "means of support" from the intoxication of her husband, the petitions in form being identical, it was held that the fact that the plaintiff in one case received a sum of money in satisfaction and discharge of her cause of action was no defence in the other case, if in fact the intoxications were separate and distinct. Miller v.

Liability of Owner of Premises.—An action for damages will lie not only against the seller of intoxicating liquors, but also against the owner or lessee of the premises on which the sale was made, provided the owner or lessee had knowledge of the fact that the premises were used for the sale of intoxicating liquors.<sup>1</sup>

Patterson, 31 Ohio St. 419. See also Jackson v. Noble, 54 Iowa, 641.

Evidence that the plaintiff had commenced another similar action against another liquor-dealer for damages accruing during the same period is inadmissible. Ward v. Thompson, 48 Iowa, 588.

1. Bertholf v. O'Reilly, 74 N. Y. 509; s. c., 30 Am. Rep. 323; Granger v. Knipper, 2 Cin. (Ohio) 480; Bowers v. Pomeroy, 21 Ohio St. 184; English v. Beard, 51 Ind. 489; McGee v. McCann, 69 Me. 79; Schroder v. Crawford, 94 Ill. 357; Hackett v. Smelsley, 77 Ill. 109.

It is immaterial whether the sale is made by the liquor-seller himself, or his bar-tender or agent, against his instructions and without his knowledge or authority. Smith v. Reynolds, 15 N. Y. Supr. Ct. 128; Keedy v. Howe, 72 Ill. 133.

The action against the owner or lessee of the premises may be brought against him alone, or against him and the seller jointly. La France v. Krayner, 42 Iowa, 143; Jackson v. Brookins, 5 Hun (N. Y.), 530.

In Buckham v. Grape, 65 Iowa, 535, it was held that in such cases the property owner should be made a party to the original action, so as to make the judgment binding upon him.

The provision of the statute which holds the owner of real estate liable for sales of intoxicating liquors does not apply to the owner of property who himself sells liquor therein, but applies to owners who permit others to occupy and use the property for such purposes, and in such case the complaint must show that the owner had knowledge that intoxicating liquors were to be or had been sold therein. Barnaby v. Wood, 50 Ind. 405.

A married woman who owns a building in which intoxicating liquors are sold by her husband, and who has knowledge that such business is carried on by him, is liable under said act. A hotel was owned by defendant M., the wife of I. When she took title, which was before the passage of said act, she and her husband went into possession. She had general charge of the house, except of the bar, and knew that intoxicating liquors were there sold. Held, that the fact that possession was taken before the act was passed did not exempt her from liability; that the presumption was that the possession originally taken was continued in view of the laws of the State thereafter enacted; and that the question whether M. had given permission for the occupation of the building, with knowledge that liquors were to be sold, was properly submitted to the jury. Mead v. Stratton, 87 N. Y. 493; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 386.

In order to the establishment of a lien upon the building in which intoxicating liquors are unlawfully sold, the consent of the owner to the unlawful sales need not be shown by any positive and affirmative act, but may be inferred from circumstances, and from knowledge of the illegal sales under such conditions as properly to call forth a protest, and a failure to make any objection. Loan v. Etzel, 62 Iowa, 429; Putney v. O'Brien, 53 Iowa, 117.

To make the owner of the premises liable, it must be proved that liquor was sold and the sale took place with his knowledge and consent. A failure to find out the facts and mere inactivity to prevent such sales is not sufficient. State v. Abrahams, 6 Iowa, 117; Myers v. Kirt, 57 Iowa, 421; Cobleigh v. McBride, 45 Iowa, 116; State v. Shanahan, 54 N. H. 437.

The owner of the premises is entitled to a trial by jury, to decide whether he consented to or had knowledge of the use of the premises for the sale of liquor. Loan v. Hiney, 53 Iowa, 89.

The statutes generally provide that where the lessor of the premises on which the liquor is unlawfully sold acquires knowledge of this fact, he may maintain an action for forcible entry and detainer, and the court may restore possession of the premises, and it is not necessary that such forfeiture should have been first declared by a court of superior jurisdiction. When the landlord seeks to avoid a lease on account of the sale of intoxicating liquor, the seller cannot prevent such avoidance by showing a payment of rent in advance for the entire term. McGarvey v. Puckett, 27 Ohio St. 669; Justice v. Lowe, 26 Ohio St. 375.

But the provision of a statute which declares certain contracts void, does not

3. Injuries for which Damages may be Claimed.—*Injuries to the Person.—The statutes generally give a right of action for three different kinds of injuries, viz., injury to the person, to property, and to means of support. Where damages are claimed for injuries to the person, actual injury must be proved. Where no actual violence by the husband, no physical injury to the person or health of the wife, is shown, she cannot recover. Mental anguish, disgrace, loss of society or companionship, are not sufficient.<sup>1</sup> apply to a contract whereby the lessor in good faith rented or leased his premises, and without any knowledge on his part that the rented or leased property should be used in whole or in part for the sale of intoxicating liquors. Zink v. Grant, 25 Ohio St. 352.

Where the liquor has been unlawfully sold on part of the leased premises, it works a forfeiture of the lease of the whole. McGarvey v. Puckett, 27 Ohio St. 669; People v. Bennett, 21 N. Y. Supr. Ct. 63.

A provision in a statute which declares that real estate not owned by the judgment debtor shall be held liable for the payment of the judgment, is not designed to create a lien on such property, but to authorize it to be subjected to the payment of the judgment in a suit against the owner instituted for the purpose. Until the commencement of such suit the judgment creditor acquires no interest in the property, and if before the suit is brought the property has been sold and conveyed, it cannot be subjected to the payment of the judgment. Bellinger v. Griffith, 23 Ohio St. 619.

In an action by a woman for damages occasioned by the unlawful sale of intoxicating liquors to her husband, where the owner of the saloon building was not made a party, and it was not sought to create a lien upon the building for the damages, a description of the saloon property in the petition was mere surplusage, and plaintiff was not limited to the proof of damages occasioned by sales made in the building so described. Gustafson v. Wind, 62 Iowa, 281.

In an action for damages against the liquor-seller and the owner of the property on which the liquor is sold for damages done by the intoxicated party, it is not necessary that the intoxicated party should be made a party to the suit. English v. Beard, 51 Ind. 489; Mitchell v. Ratts, 57 Ind. 259.

1. Mulford v. Clewell, 21 Ohio St. 191; Wightman v. Devere, 33 Wis. 570; Jackson v. Noble, 54 Iowa, 641; Koerner v. Oberly, 56 Ind. 234; s. c., 26 Am. Rep. 34; Schlusser v. State, 55 Ind. 82; Fentz

v. Meadows, 72 Ill. 540; Keedy v. Howe, 72 Ill. 133; Kellerman v. Arnold, 71 Ill. 632; Meidel v. Anthias, 76 Ill. 241; Freese v. Tripp, 70 Ill. 496; Brautigam v. White, 73 Ill. 561. See also Kerkow v. Bauer, 15 Neb. 150.

Abuse of the wife by cursing her while under the influence of liquor is not an element of damages; but there must be actual personal violence. Albrecht v. Walker, 73 Ill. 69; Welch v. Jugenheimer, 56 Iowa, 11.

Where an intoxicated husband called his wife a prostitute and threatened to kill her, held, in the absence of proof that his conduct impaired her health, not to constitute a ground for the recovery of actual damages in her action against the liquor seller, and evidence thereof to be inadmissible as a ground of exemplary damages. Calloway v. Laydon, 47 Iowa, 456; s. c., 29 Am. Rep. 489.

Damages are recoverable at the suit of a wife against a saloon-keeper for selling liquor to her husband against her protest when he knows the husband to be an habitual drunkard, if the husband while drunken with the liquor so sold him commits an assault and battery on the wife. Wilson v. Booth, 57 Mich. 249.

So where an intoxicated person, in flourishing a pistol, shot and wounded another, the latter was held to have a cause of action against the persons causing the intoxication by selling spirituous liquors to the person doing the injury. King v. Haley, 86 Ill. 106; s. c., 29 Am. Rep. 14. See Schafer v. State, 49 Ind. 460.

An action for damages may be maintained by one prevented from following his usual occupation by being beaten and wounded by an intoxicated person against the one who sold the liquor which caused the intoxication, and against the owner of the premises on which the liquor was sold. English v. Beard, 51 Ind. 489.

Trespass for assault and battery may be maintained against four persons who separately sold liquor to one B. in violation of law, to recover damages occasioned by an injury to the person of the plaintiff done by B. while in a state of

Injury to Property.—Where a person squanders money or chattels, or destroys or injures other property, belonging to his wife or any other party, while intoxicated, an action for damages by the owner of the property will lie against the party who sold the liquor which produced the intoxication to the amount of the value of the property destroyed, or the amount of the injury.<sup>1</sup>

Injury to Means of Support.—Wherever any one is legally under obligation to support another, as a husband his wife or parents their children, the statutes provide that if in consequence of intoxication or habitual drunkenness of the husband or parent those dependent on them for support are injured in such support the persons so injured shall have a right to an action for damages against the seller of the liquor producing the intoxication or habitual drunkenness.<sup>2</sup> intoxication produced by liquor so furnished to him. Bodge v. Hughes, 53 N. H. 614.

Where an intoxicated husband, without actual violence, but by threatening and abusive language and intimidation, drove his wife out of the house and kept her out for several hours, held, that there was a physical injury and suffering sufficient to sustain an action under the statute. Peterson v. Knoble, 35 Wis. 80; Ward v. Thompson, 48 Iowa, 588.

1. Mulford v. Clewell, 21 Ohio St. 197; Woolheather v. Risley, 38 Iowa, 486; McEvoy v. Humphrey, 77 Ill. 388.

So may the amount paid for the liquor be recovered; and this is specially the case where sales extending over a period of time have produced habits of habitual drunkenness. The right of recovery extends to the executors or administrators of the estate of a deceased habitual drunkard. Kilburn v. Coc, 48 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 144; Ward v. Thompson, 48 Iowa, 588. Compare Friend v. Dunks, 37 Mich. 25; s. c., 39 Mich. 733.

In an action under a statute for injury to her property a wife may recover against the vendor of the liquor by reason of the sale of her chattels by her husband without first demanding the chattels of the vendee or notifying him that she claims them to be her property. Mulford v. Clewell, 21 Ohio St. 191.

It will be sufficient that the property for which a wife claims damages is hers as between herself and her husband, no matter what it would have been as between herself and her husband's creditors. So where a wife has a horse which she claims and uses as her own, with the knowledge of her husband, and he sells it and squanders the proceeds, she may recover the value. Woolheather v. Risley, 38 Iowa, 486.

Where with plaintiff's knowledge and consent his son took his horse and buggy, apparently with the intention to visit a friend at a place some four miles away, and instead went to defendant's saloon near by, where he purchased and drank whiskey several times at the bar, and then drove to a neighboring village and drank again, and returned to the first saloon, drinking again on his return, and became intoxicated, and the horse died soon after he returned home, the jury found that the horse died from overdriving by the plaintiff's son, and that his treatment of the horse was caused by his intoxication. Held, that the plaintiff could recover the value of the horse from defendant. Bertholf v. O'Reilly, 74 N. Y. 509; s. c., 30 Am. Rep. 323.

An unlicensed liquor-dealer furnished on Sunday intoxicating liquor to A. until he was helpless and unconscious, and in that condition placed him in his sleigh, to which was attached a quiet horse of the plaintiff which A. had in use. An accident, induced by the inability of A. to manage the horse, caused the latter to run away, whereby the horse was killed. Held, that the liquor-seller was liable for the value of the horse. Dunlap v. Wagner, 85 Ind. 529; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 42.

2. Hill v. Berry, 75 N. Y. 229; Volans v. Owen, 74 N. Y. 526; s. c., 30 Am. Rep. 337; Elshire v. Schuyler, 15 Neb. 561.

The injury to the means of support must be proved, and such proof is a question for the jury. Volans v. Owen, 74 N. Y. 526; s. c., 30 Am. Rep. 337; Stevens v. Cheney, 36 Hun (N. Y.), 1; Decker v. Stauring, 57 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 495.

In Wightman v. Devere, 33 Wis. 570, 578, the court said: "It may not be easy to give a precise definition of the phrase 'means of support,' but we suppose it relates to whatever the husband might have earned, or made by his labor and attention to business, and contributed to the support of his family."

The phrase "means of support" in its general sense embraces all those resources from which the necessities and comforts of living are or may be supplied, such as lands, goods, salaries, wages, and other sources of income. In its limited sense it signifies any resource from which the wants of life may be supplied. Schneider v. Hosier, 21 Ohio St. 98, 112.

Ordinary labor is a "means of support." A wife has an interest in the labor of her husband and its proceeds, especially when that labor is necessary for her support, and consequently also in his capacity to labor. Any deprivation of her rights or interest in the proceeds of his labor, or his capacity to labor, is an injury to her in her means of support. Schneider v. Hosier, 21 Ohio St. 98, 113.

If, upon the trial in such a suit, the death of the plaintiff's husband is shown, and that his death was occasioned by intoxication produced by liquors sold or given to him by the defendant, in the absence of any proof to the contrary the jury will be warranted in inferring therefrom an injury to the plaintiff's means of support. That will be sufficient to shift the burden of proof, and entitle the plaintiff to at least nominal damages. Flynn v. Fogarty, 106 Ill. 263.

Evidence that the intoxication of the husband led to the loss of his situation and inability to get other employment is admissible in a suit by his wife against a liquor-dealer who sold him the liquor causing the intoxication. Roth v. Eppy, 80 Ill. 283.

The liability of the seller in actions under these statutes for injury in the "means of support" is not confined to cases of injury resulting from drunkenness immediately and during its continuance, but extends as well to cases where the injury results from insanity, sickness, or inability induced by intoxication. Mulford v. Clewell, 21 Ohio St. 191, 197.

In such an action it is competent to offer evidence that the husband is an habitual drunkard, and the jury may consider this fact among others, if the wife has been injured in her means of support by the defendant in selling or giving to her husband intoxicating liquors. Where evidence had been introduced tending to prove that the husband had no means of support for his family, excepting his own labor; that owing to his intoxication he had neglected his business and did not support his wife, as he ought to have done, and could have done if he had been sober, and that she had become an object of public charity,—an instruction that the wife was entitled to recover for any actual damage to her means of support, caused in whole or in part by liquor sold to her husband by the defendant, causing his intoxication, was based upon sufficient evidence. Jockers v. Borgman, 29 Kan. 109, s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 625.

In order to sustain her action under the statutes for injury to her "means of support" it is not necessary for the wife to show that she has been at any time in whole or in part without present means of support. It is enough that the means of her future support have been cut off, or diminished below what is reasonable and competent for a person in her station in life, and below what they otherwise would have been. And the rule of damage in such case should be, not the amount of loss occasioned to the husband's estate, but the diminution, if any, thereby resulting to her means of present and future support. Mulford v. Clewell, 21 Ohio St. 191, 197; Woolheather v. Risley, 38 Iowa, 486; Confrey v. Stark, 73 Ill. 187; McCann v. Roach, 81 Ill. 213.

Railroad contractors had in their employ a number of hired hands with teams, wagons, and other implements. Part of them became drunk, unable themselves to work, and preventing the other hands and teams from working to advantage. Held, that they could recover from the one who sold the liquor damages for injury to their property and means of support. Duroy v. Blinn, 11 Ohio St. 331.

In Hackett v. Smelsley, 77 Ill. 109, the court held that "the right of support is not limited to the supplying of the bare necessities of life, but embraces comforts that are suitable to the wife's situation and the husband's condition in life. Because the wife may be able-bodied and can earn a livelihood, it does not follow that she does not suffer injury in means of support by loss of her legal supporter. Nor does it so follow where she may have independent means of her own. There are always independent means of support. No one is absolutely dependent on another for means of support, for where there is absence of other means it is provided by public authority." Hackett v. Smelsley, 77 Ill. 109.

In an action by a married woman, for herself and minor children, for damages for loss of means of support caused by the sale of intoxicating liquors to her husband, producing his intoxication and failure to provide for his family, after proof of facts tending to show that before such intoxication he provided for and supported his family, and that afterwards, and during the time of the intoxication, he failed to support the family, it is not error to allow the wife to testify as to the amount necessary to support the family in ordinary comfortable circumstances, suitable for people in her condition. Such testimony would not be competent as establishing the measure of damages, but would be competent as tending to inform the jury as to the value of the means of support of which the plaintiff in the action had been deprived. Warrick v. Rounds, 17 Neb. 411.

Where a wife sues for damages on account of being deprived of her means of support through the sale to her husband of intoxicating liquors, evidence that she was supported by her own labor and by the county was material. One of the material facts which plaintiff was required to establish is that during the period in question she was not supported by her husband; and this evidence tended to establish this fact by showing the sources from which her support came. Fox v. Wunderlich, 64 Iowa, 187.

On the trial of such case it is competent to prove the physical condition and health of deceased, his habits of industry, his avocation, the monthly or annual product of the same, and whether any and all of the plaintiffs are of such tender age as to render them entirely dependent upon their parents for support. Kerkow v. Bauer, 15 Neb. 150; Flynn v. Fogarty, 106 Ill. 263.

But what the widow may have done, or what expenditure she may have made, since his death, in respect to the business in which her husband had been engaged, would afford no ground of presumption as to what he would have done in the event he had lived. So where, in such a case, it appearing the plaintiff's husband was a farmer, the plaintiff was permitted to prove that since her husband's death she had expended considerable sums in ditching upon the farm, and having rails split, and fencing made, it was held that proof of such expenditures should not have been allowed, as it afforded no criterion by which to determine the extent to which the plaintiff's means of support had been permanently diminished by her husband's death. The plaintiff was also permitted, in giving her testimony, to detail to the jury the inconveniences she had labored under since her husband's death—how she had to go to town on cold days, and the fact of one of her girls having to work out, and also to speak of the mangled condition in which she found her husband shortly after the injury which was the immediate cause of his death; how she fainted away, and his dying remark to her, "Mary, I can't see you any longer,—I am getting blind." All this was improper, as having no bearing on the issue as to the extent of injury to the plaintiff's means of support by the death of her husband, and only calculated to enhance the damages through sympathy for the plaintiff and prejudice against the defendant. Flynn v. Fogarty, 106 Ill. 263. See Huggins v. Kavanagh, 52 Iowa, 368.

It may be different, however, if the husband, when sober, is physically incapable of performing any work or labor or of attending to any business or profession, or was of such indolent and shiftless habits that he in fact made his wife support him. Wightman v. Devere, 33 Wis. 570, 579.

To what extent the plaintiff has been injured is a question for the jury, who may take in consideration all the circumstances connected with the case. Ludwig v. Sager, 84 Ill. 99; Dunlavy v. Watson, 38 Iowa, 400.

But evidence of a judgment recovered against other parties for injuries occurring at the same period is admissible to show the extent of the injuries. Engleken v. Webber, 47 Iowa, 558. Compare Ennis v. Shiley, 47 Iowa, 552.

Where an action is brought for the loss of support, not for the loss of the society or companionship of deceased, proof of the lack of affection, sympathy, or respect for deceased on the part of the adult plaintiff is inadmissible. Kerkow v. Bauer, 15 Neb. 150.

Where a person not previously drawing support becomes under the poor-laws dependent upon a town through injuries sustained in consequence of intoxication, such town cannot recover from the seller of the liquor for the support furnished him. S., while intoxicated, and in consequence of such intoxication, had his feet frozen, and came upon the town for support. Held, that the town could recover no reimbursement from the liquor-dealer. Hollis v. Davis, 56 N. H. 74.

The rule of law, that where damages are suffered from the wrongful act of another the person suffering the injury must make all reasonable exertions to protect himself from the consequences of such wrongful acts, has no application to actions by a married woman for herself and children for loss of means of support caused by the wrongful sale of intoxicating liquors to the husband and father. Warrick v. Rounds, 17 Neb. 411.

Death.—If death ensues as the natural and legitimate result of the intoxication, it is covered by the language of the statute.<sup>1</sup>

To entitle a party to an action for damages for injuries to "means of support" such party must be legally dependent upon the intoxicated person for such "means of support." If the marriage of an alleged wife claiming such damages is void because she has another husband living, she cannot claim the benefit of the statute. Kearney v. Fitzgerald, 43 Iowa, 580.

Under a statute giving an action to one "dependent" on the deceased, a plaintiff claiming to be his widow must show a lawful marriage, and one claiming to be his child must show his legitimacy. Good v. Towns, 56 Vt. 410; s. c., 48 Am. Rep. 799.

The action given to the "parent" of a minor to whom intoxicating liquor has been sold may be maintained by the mother of the minor, without proof that he has no father. McNeil v. Collinson, 130 Mass. 167.

A husband may maintain an action for injury to his "means of support" by the intoxication of his wife caused by defendant. Moran v. Goodwin, 130 Mass. 158; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 443. But in Nebraska, where a husband does not inherit from the wife, a husband cannot maintain an action for the death of his wife, unless as executor, where there are next of kin entitled to the amount to be recovered. Warren v. Englehart, 13 Neb. 283.

The defendant sold liquor to the son-in-law of the plaintiff, who became intoxicated thereby, and in consequence thereof drove a team behind which he and plaintiff's wife were riding, so recklessly as to upset the wagon and break the wife's arm. In an action by the husband to recover for the loss of her services and expenses of medical attendance, nursing, etc. Held, that he was entitled to recover. Aldrich v. Sager, 9 Hun (N. Y.), 537.

1. All injuries are covered that are consequent upon the intoxication. If death were excluded, then the minor and temporary injuries would be provided for, while the greatest and most permanent of all would be excluded. Jackson v. Brookins, 5 Hun (N. Y.), 530; Davis v. Standish, 26 Hun (N. Y.), 608; Smith v. Reynolds, 8 Hun (N. Y.), 128; Quain v. Russell, 8 Hun (N. Y.), 319; Mead v.

Stratton, 87 N. Y. 493; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 386; Kerkow v. Bauer, 15 Neb. 150; Schmidt v. Mitchell, 84 Ill. 195; s. c., 25 Am. Rep. 446; Flynn v. Fogarty, 106 Ill. 263; Emory v. Addis, 71 Ill. 273; Schroder v. Crawford, 94 Ill. 357; s. c., 34 Am. Rep. 236; Bedore v. Newton, 54 N. H. 117; Rafferty v. Buckman, 46 Iowa, 195; Schneider v. Hosier, 21 Ohio St. 98, 107.

In an action under the Civil Damage Act for injury to means of support in consequence of intoxication, a recovery may be had where the intoxication caused the death of the intoxicated person, and in estimating the damages the condition of the family and the estate may be considered; but exemplary damages are not proper. Roose v. Perkins, 9 Neb. 304; s. c., 31 Am. Rep. 409. But see Davis v. Justice, 31 Ohio St. 359; s. c., 27 Am. Rep. 514, where it was held that in an action under the Civil Damage Act for injury to means of support in consequence of intoxication which caused the death of the intoxicated person damages resulting from the death cannot be recovered. See also dissenting opinion of Boynton, J., in same case, 27 Am. Rep. 518. See also Hayes v. Phelan, 4 Hun (N. Y.), 733; s. c., 5 Hun (N. Y.), 335; Brookmire v. Monaghan, 15 Hun (N. Y.), 16; Barrett v. Dolan, 130 Mass. 366; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 456; Harrington v. McKillop, 132 Mass. 567; Hackett v. Smelsley, 77 Ill. 109; Kirchner v. Myers, 35 Ohio St. 85; s. c., 35 Am. Rep. 598.

The father of the minor plaintiff, while intoxicated by liquor sold him by the defendant, murdered the plaintiff's mother, and committed suicide. The plaintiff was dependent on his father for support. Held, that the defendant was liable under the Civil Damage Act. Neu v. McKechnie, 95 N. Y. 632; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 89.

In this case it was held that the cause of action is neither taken away nor mitigated, because the injury also constitutes a crime. The jury were not to inquire whether either "the homicide or suicide were the natural, reasonable, or probable consequences of the defendant's act." It is enough if, while intoxicated in whole or in part by liquors sold by the defendants, those acts were committed, if by reason of them, or either of them, the plaintiff's means of support were affected to his injury.

Death must be the immediate consequence of the intoxication to make the liquor-seller liable. Flynn v. Fogarty, 106 Ill. 263.

Where in an action under the Civil Damage Act, it appeared that the defendant sold liquor to plaintiff's husband, whereby he became intoxicated, got in an affray, and was wounded; that by reason of the husband's reckless disregard of the surgeon's direction the wound became so dangerous as to lead the surgeon to amputate the leg, whereupon the husband died. Held (1), that if the death was occasioned by the disregard of the surgeon's directions the defendant was not liable; (2) that if the amputation was in fact unnecessary, and was the immediate cause of the death, the defendant was not liable, although the surgeon acted in good faith and with ordinary skill. Schmidt v. Mitchell, 84 Ill. 195; s. c., 25 Am. Rep. 446.

In Davis v. Standish, 26 Hun (N. Y.), 608, it was held, however, that the jury was not confined to an inquiry as to whether intoxicating liquor was the immediate cause of the death; that if it was the proximate cause it justified a verdict for the plaintiff.

Evidence offered by defendants to prove that on the fatal night, on account of its unusual darkness, another person in that vicinity lost his way, and still another had great difficulty in keeping it; also, that deceased had on a former occasion, on a bright moonlight night, lost his way, etc.,—was properly rejected. Kerkow v. Bauer, 15 Neb. 150.

The seller of intoxicating liquor to a husband, who becomes intoxicated thereby, and in consequence of his abusive language is killed by a third party, is not liable in damages to the wife for the death. Shugart v. Egan, 83 Ill. 56; s. c., 25 Am. Rep. 359.

Where the complaint alleged that the defendant unlawfully sold intoxicating liquor to the decedent during his lifetime, and whilst he was intoxicated, thereby causing him to become so intoxicated and so insensible of his surroundings as to go upon a railroad track, where he was run over and killed by a train of cars, thus depriving the plaintiff of her means of support, it was held that the decedent's death was not the natural, necessary, or probable result of such unlawful sale, and therefore the complaint was bad on demurrer for want of sufficient facts. Collier v. Early, 54 Ind. 559.

On the same principles it was held that the widow of a deceased person who came to his death as the result of injuries received by him from a fall whilst intoxicated could not maintain an action for damages therefor against a person who had unlawfully sold her deceased husband the liquor which caused the intoxication. Backes v. Dant, 55 Ind. 181.

Where a husband became grossly intoxicated, and while being hauled home in his wagon received injuries by means of a barrel of salt falling upon him, from which injuries he died, his widow had no right of action under this statute, because the immediate cause of the injury to the plaintiff was the death of the deceased, and his intoxication only the remote cause. A person is answerable for the consequences of his fault only so far as they naturally result from it, and may therefore be foreseen; and in this case the parties selling the liquor could not have anticipated that on his way home the intoxicated man would be fatally injured by the salt barrel. Krach v. Heilman, 53 Ind. 517. Collier v. Early, 54 Ind. 559; Backes v. Dant, 55 Ind. 181; Krach v. Heilman, 53 Ind. 517, were criticised and distinguished in Dunlap v. Wagner, 85 Ind. 529; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 42.

In an action under the statute it appeared that plaintiff's husband drank intoxicating liquors at the hotel kept by defendant I., and became so much intoxicated that he had to be helped into his buggy when he started for home. He was found dead, with his leg caught under the foot-bar of the buggy, and his head hanging over between the body of the buggy and the wheel, so that it had been beaten by the wheel. Held, that the evidence sufficiently established that the intoxication was the proximate cause of the death. Mead v. Stratton, 87 N. Y. 493; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 386.

Where a wife sued jointly several liquor-dealers to recover damages for the death of her husband, who had been an habitual drunkard, and lost his life from an accident resulting from his intoxication, it was held that such damages only as were in legal contemplation the result of the act of selling could be recovered; that the fact of his being an habitual drunkard could not be deemed in a legal sense the cause of his death, although but for that he might not have drunk the liquor which intoxicated him on the day of his death; and that the dealers who contributed to his habitual intoxication could not be jointly sued with those who caused the particular intoxication resulting in his death. Tetzner v. Naughton, 12 Ill. App. 148.

Compensation for Nursing.—In addition to damages for injuries to person, property, or means of support, some of the statutes provide that any one who by sale or barter or gift of intoxicating liquor causes the intoxication of another shall pay a reasonable compensation to any one who may take charge of and provide for such intoxicated person, and a stated sum per day in addition thereto for every day such intoxicated person shall be kept in consequence of his intoxication. In some of these States this provision refers to "sales," in others only to "unlawful sales."<sup>1</sup>

5. Actual and Exemplary Damages.—Generally the statutes provide not only for actual damages, but also for exemplary damages. To entitle a party to exemplary damages, actual damages must, however, be proved. There can be no recovery unless there be some injury; the right of action does not spring from the relationship alone, and in the absence of actual damage.<sup>2</sup>

1. See the various statutes. Brannan v. Adams, 76 Ill. 335; Fountain v. Draper, 49 Ill. 441, 444; Gonfrey v. Stark, 73 Ill. 187; Werner v. Edmiston, 24 Kan. 147; Wightman v. Devere, 33 Wis. 570; Krach v. Heilman, 53 Ind. 517.

A physician who professionally treats a person who is injured while intoxicated does not "take charge of and provide for" such person within the meaning of the statute. Samson v. Greenough, 55 Iowa, 127.

2. Ganssly v. Perkins, 30 Mich. 492; Roth v. Eppy, 80 Ill. 283; Hackett v. Smelsley, 77 Ill. 109; Confrey v. Stark, 73 Ill. 187; McEvoy v. Humphrey, 77 Ill. 388; Freese v. Tripp, 70 Ill. 496; Brautigam v. While, 73 Ill. 561; Fentz v. Meadows, 72 Ill. 540; Keedy v. Howe, 72 Ill. 133; Boyd v. Watt, 27 Ohio St. 259; Schneider v. Hosier, 21 Ohio St. 98, 112; Duroy v. Blinn, 11 Ohio St. 331; Jockers v. Borgman, 29 Kan. 109; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 625; Fox v. Wunderlich, 64 Iowa, 187; Gilmore v. Mathews, 67 Me. 517. Compare Roose v. Perkins, 9 Neb. 304; s. c., 31 Am. Rep. 409; Koerner v. Oberly, 56 Ind. 284.

Whether exemplary damages should be allowed or not is a question exclusively for the jury. Goodenough v. McGrew, 44 Iowa, 670.

Where it appeared that the wife had notified the defendant not to sell liquor to her husband, and that she sent $50 by her husband to buy a horse, and that the defendant, in disregard of such notice, sold him liquor, upon which he became intoxicated, and that he was arrested and put in the calaboose, and that when he got out he had spent about $29, the jury gave a verdict of $200 against the defendant, upon which judgment was rendered. Held, that actual damages being shown to the extent of $29, the jury had the right to give exemplary damages, as the sale to the husband after notice was without excuse or palliation, and therefore the damages were not excessive. McEvoy v. Humphrey, 77 Ill. 388.

Actual damages must be as nearly commensurate with the actual injury as the case will permit; and exemplary damages should be given in those cases, and only in those cases, where the plaintiff has some personal right to complain of a wanton and wilful wrong, which the wrongdoer, when he committed it, must be regarded as having committed against the plaintiff herself, in spite of the injury he must have known she was likely to suffer by it. In an action by the wife to recover for injuries resulting to her from sales of intoxicating liquors to her husband, where the evidence shows that the husband had been intemperate, and the wife had supported herself and partly supported him ever since a time prior to the passage of the law in question, a charge to the jury which directed them in giving damages to estimate the loss of the sober, intelligent society of the husband, and the loss of "means of support," etc., is inappropriate; for while the defendants should be held liable for the injury they have actually inflicted, their liability must be measured by the effects produced upon the husband and wife as they were, not as they might have been. Ganssly v. Perkins, 30 Mich. 492; Friend v. Dunks, 39 Mich. 733.

Exemplary damages cannot be imposed on a liquor-seller if it does not appear that any request or suggestion had been made to him to refuse liquor to the injured person, or that he knew that the latter had any family. Steele v. Thompson, 42 Mich. 594.

But where such request has been made.

Mitigating Circumstances.—The seller may prove in his defence all circumstances which may serve in mitigation, not of the actual, exemplary damages will be allowable. Schneider v. Hosier, 21 Ohio St. 98, 103; Brautigam v. While, 73 Ill. 561.

In order to establish her right to exemplary damages, the plaintiff may show the number and age of her children if she also shows that defendant had a knowledge of the fact that she had such children, and that they were in danger of being injured or compelled to leave home. Ward v. Thompson, 48 Iowa, 588.

Exemplary damages might be recovered when the evidence showed a state of facts which would warrant the assessment of such damages. Whether there are any circumstances of aggravation in the conduct of the defendant which justified the giving of exemplary damages is a question for the jury upon all the proofs of the case. Wightman v. Devere, 33 Wis. 570, 581; Rawlins v. Vidvard, 34 Hun (N. Y.), 205; Schneider v. Hosier, 21 Ohio St. 98, 112; Kreiter v. Nichols, 28 Mich. 496; Kehrig v. Peters, 41 Mich. 475, 480; Schimmelpfenig v. Donovan, 13 Ill. App. 47.

Where plaintiff's husband had become a confirmed drunkard, had lost a lucrative business in which he was earning five dollars a day, and had squandered valuable property, while plaintiff had forbidden him to sell any more liquor to her husband, the jury rendered a verdict of $2000 exemplary damages in addition to $10,000 actual damages. The court held that if the verdict had been larger it could not have been disturbed. Jewett v. Wanshura, 43 Iowa, 574.

The jury have power to give exemplary damages, but they clearly should not be allowed to do so in ordinary cases where nothing is proved but the simple sale of a single glass of liquor under ordinary circumstances. Exemplary damages should only be given when there are circumstances of abuse or aggravation in the case proved on the part of the vendor of the liquor. Franklin v. Schermerhorn, 8 Hun (N. Y.), 112, 115; Freese v. Tripp, 70 Ill. 496; Kellerman v. Arnold, 71 Ill. 632.

The Civil Damage Statute expressly authorizes the recovery of damages coextensive with the injury, and likewise exemplary damages. But exemplary damages are not to be allowed under the act, unless the conduct of the defendant is wilful, wanton, reckless, malicious, oppressive, or otherwise deserving of condemnation beyond the mere actual damage. Evidence, however, that the defendant sold intoxicating liquors to a person who was in the habit of being intoxicated, after notice from the wife not to sell, and that he sold intoxicating liquors to such person while in a state of intoxication, are grounds of exemplary damages, and proof of such remonstrance or notification may be given, although it was made more than two years prior to the commencement of the action. Jockers v. Borgman, 29 Kan. 109; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 625; Kadgin v. Miller, 13 Ill. App. 474.

Where it appeared that defendants sold the liquor without a license, and that they had been so selling for a long time, held, that submission to the jury of the question of exemplary damages, and an allowance thereof, was proper. Neu v. McKechnie, 95 N. Y. 632; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 89; Davis v. Standish, 26 Hun (N. Y.), 608.

A sale of liquor to a husband who was intoxicated, and was to the knowledge of the liquor-seller in the habit of becoming intoxicated, will be a good ground for exemplary damages in favor of the wife. Weitz v. Ewen, 50 Iowa, 34.

And the fact that the liquor was sold on a Sunday, in violation of the statute, may be considered by the jury when the question of exemplary damages is submitted. Sibila v. Bahney, 34 Ohio St. 399, 410.

So may evidence of sales made after commencement of the pending suit be submitted to the jury for the sake of assessing exemplary damages. Bean v. Green, 33 Ohio St. 444.

In a civil action for damages for an act also punishable as a criminal offence, it was held that exemplary damages were not recoverable by reason of the constitutional provision that no person shall be put twice in jeopardy for the same offence, and that a statute authorizing such damages was void. So held where there was evidence that the sales were made after nine o'clock in the evening, and on Sunday, contrary to law. Koerner v. Oberly, 56 Ind. 284; s. c., 26 Am. Rep. 34. See also Struble v. Nodwift, 11 Ind. 65; Schaffer v. Smith, 63 Ind. 226; Albrecht v. Walker, 73 Ill. 69. Compare Jockers v. Borgman, 29 Kan. 109; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 625.

Exemplary damages may lie under the Civil Damage Acts for sales of liquor made by defendant's employees as well as by himself. He is liable not only for his personal acts, but for his recklessness or wilfulness in neglecting to guard against sales that he knew would injure those entitled to bring suit. Kehrig v. Peters, 41 Mich. 475.

but of exemplary damages. As that he had given strict orders to his servants not to sell liquor to the inebriate, or that the liquor was obtained by tricks and artifices.<sup>1</sup>

6. Who has a Right of Action.—The statute contemplates that any person injured may recover actual damages, but actions under the statute are strictly confined to persons who are injured in some way; or, in other words, the statute does not give an action to any of these persons merely from their relationship, where their actual damages would be purely nominal. It is to be observed that injuries received from the intoxication of strangers are embraced in the same clause with those suffered from the intoxication of wards, relatives, or husbands and wives, and that persons who may have no blood or marital connection with the intoxicated person are also grouped together.<sup>2</sup>

1. Where the evidence showed that the defendant tried to prevent the husband from getting liquor at his place, had often refused to sell him, and had ordered his clerk not to sell to him; and that the husband had procured it through others, concealing his name; and where there was no evidence to show in what manner the plaintiff had been injured in her "means of support,"—the court held, that there was no foundation laid for exemplary damages. The only instruction given being based upon exemplary damages, a verdict of $300 was set aside. Bates v. Davis, 76 Ill. 222; Brantigan v. While, 73 Ill. 561; Keedy v. Howe, 72 Ill. 133; Fentz v. Meadows, 72 Ill. 540; Schneider v. Hosier, 21 Ohio St. 103; Kreiter v. Nichols, 28 Mich. 496.

Evidence to the effect that the intoxicated party had procured liquors at other places than defendant's which contributed to his intoxication may be received in mitigation. Hemmens v. Bentley, 32 Mich. 88.

Where several parties have a claim for damages against a liquor-dealer resulting from the same sale of intoxicating liquor, exemplary damages can be awarded only once, and a judgment given for actual and exemplary damages which has been satisfied may be given in evidence. Secor v. Taylor, 41 Hun (N. Y.), 123.

2. See Gansley v. Perkins, 30 Mich. 492, 495, and the various statutes.

In New York the court said: "The act is too vague and inexplicit, and presents much difficulty in its practical operation, for the construction of the courts. The legislature, I think, intended to give a single right of action, and single damages to one person; but a right of action is given or may arise to a husband or wife and each of their children, be they ever so many, as well as to the other persons named in said section." Franklin v.

Schermerhorn, 8 Hun (N. Y.), 112. In this case the husband of the plaintiff was a cripple, and could earn but little for the support of his family, consisting of plaintiff and four children, and he received quarterly pension of fifty-four dollars, and on the day he received it got intoxicated in part at the defendant's house, and thereby lost or had stolen from him fifty dollars. Held, that under the statute the plaintiff, as wife, was only entitled to recover her proportionate share, or one fifth thereof.

An action can be maintained by the widow and infant children, jointly or severally, whose husband and father has lost his life in consequence of intoxication, against any and all persons, jointly or severally, who sold, gave, or furnished any intoxicating liquor which was drunk by him on the day or about the time of such intoxication. Kerkow v. Bauer, 15 Neb. 150. Compare McGee v. McCann, 69 Me. 79.

An action was brought by the plaintiff, a minor, by his mother, as his general guardian, to recover damages for injury to his means of support occasioned by the death of his father by means of intoxicated liquors sold to him by a lessee of the defendant. Upon trial the defendant offered, but was not allowed, to prove that the mother, who was the general guardian of the plaintiff, had already recovered a judgment against the defendant for the sum of $2000 for damages sustained by the death of the same party caused by the same intoxication, and that the said sum had been paid to her. Held, that the evidence was properly excluded, as no claim was made in this case for any exemplary damages. Secor v. Taylor, 41 Hun (N. Y.), 123. Citing Mullen v. Christien, 22 Week. Dig. (N. Y.) 59.

The right of action vests at the time of the injury, and the intervening death of

What Bars the Action.—Where a wife contributes to the intoxication of her husband by providing the liquors herself, or drinking with him, she can sustain no action against the seller of the liquor for damages for injuries received in consequence of such intoxication.<sup>1</sup>

the husband will not divest a "wife" of her right of action for the injury because at the time of the bringing of the action she is his "widow." Hackett v. Smelsley, 77 Ill. 109; Schneider v. Hosier, 21 Ohio St. 116; Jackson v. Brookins, 5 Hun (N. Y.), 530.

The intoxicated person himself has no right of action against the seller of the liquor producing the intoxication for money stolen from him while drunk, Brooks v. Cook, 44 Mich. 617; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 282.

Neither can the seller of the liquor recover from an intoxicated person damages for a trespass committed under the influence of liquor which he sold to him. Aldrich v. Harvey, 50 Vt. 162.

1. Engleken v. Hilger, 43 Iowa, 563; Kearney v. Fitzgerald, 43 Iowa, 580; Elliott v. Barry, 34 Hun (N. Y.), 129. See Hackett v. Smelsley, 77 Ill. 109.

If, however, such drinking either at the bar or at home was not voluntary on her part, or if she bought and took intoxicating liquors to their home, not with a view of her own drinking, but for the sole purpose of keeping her husband at home and keeping him from squandering his time and money in saloons, or where she purchased and used liquors only for medicinal purposes, and gave the same to her husband for that purpose, she would forfeit none of the benefits which the statute gives. Kearney v. Fitzgerald, 43 Iowa, 580; Ward v. Thompson, 48 Iowa, 588.

The fact that the wife accompanied her husband to various places and gatherings, and drank liquors with him, and that the husband kept liquors in his house, and drank the same at home with his wife's knowledge and approval, and that all of such drinking on the part of the husband was with her knowledge and consent, is proper to be considered by the jury on the question of damages, especially as the statute allows exemplary damages in such an action. But such facts do not constitute a bar to the action, and it is proper to prove by the wife in rebuttal that the husband compelled her to accompany him to such places. Hackett v. Smelsley, 77 Ill. 109.

Where the evidence shows that the plaintiff's husband became a confirmed drunkard, and that he visited the saloons almost daily; that the plaintiff forbade the defendant selling any liquor to her husband, and that a day or two thereafter plaintiff and her husband went to defendant's saloon, when plaintiff's husband called defendant out, telling him his wife wanted to see him, and defendant claims that plaintiff then countermanded her previous order, and directed him to sell her husband whatever he wanted, it was held that the jury had a right to find from the testimony that the defendant drew reasonable inferences from the facts which he knew, and hence that he had knowledge that plaintiff did not act voluntarily. Jewett v. Wanshura, 43 Iowa, 574.

Where a wife knows the fact that her husband has purchased a jug of whiskey, and is drinking immoderately, and has it in her power to prevent him from drinking in such quantity as to injure him, by breaking the jug or pouring out its contents, and is not prevented from doing so through fear, but permits him to use it in great excess, from which death ensues, she must be considered as a willing party to his conduct, and instrumental in bringing the loss upon herself. Reget v. Bell, 77 Ill. 593.

The fact that the wife has upon former occasions consented to the sale of liquor to her husband will not defeat her claim, if she did not consent to the sale complained of, and her giving him money to purchase liquor with, does not show that she contributed to the intoxication in the absence of proof that the money was so used. Rafferty v. Buckman, 46 Iowa, 195.

Where a wife voluntarily signed a petition for a person applying for a dramshop license she did not thereby consent that the party obtaining the license under the petition should sell intoxicants unlawfully, or in violation of the statute; and such act on her part is no bar to an action brought by her against the dramshop-keeper, under the Civil Damage statute, for causing the intoxication of her husband, nor is evidence of such act competent in mitigation. Jockers v. Borgman, 29 Kan. 109; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 725.

The Statute of Limitations in actions for damages under the Civil Damage laws commences to run from the time of the sale of the liquor causing the intoxication, not from the time when the injury was sustained. Emmert v. Grill, 39 Iowa, 690.

7. Evidence.—In general it will be true, that if the jury do not find that defendant's act in supplying liquor was so closely connected with the injury for which the action was brought as to have been effective in causing it, they cannot find for the plaintiff.<sup>1</sup>

1. Steele v. Thompson, 42 Mich. 594; Schlosser v. State, 55 Ind. 82; Ditton v. Morgan, 56 Ind. 60; Schwarm v. Osborn, 59 Ind. 246; Welch v. Jugenheimer, 56 Iowa, 11; Squires v. Young, 58 N. H. 192; Neuerberg v. Gaultier, 4 Ill. App. 348; Barks v. Woodruff, 12 Ill. App. 96; Brannan v. Adams, 76 Ill. 331.

In an action under the Civil Damage Act the jury must be satisfied by a preponderance of evidence that defendant contributed to the intoxication of the plaintiff's husband in an appreciable degree. Chase v. Kenniston, 76 Me. 209; Hall v. Barnes, 82 Ill. 228.

There can be no recovery unless it be shown that the liquor sold either caused or contributed to the husband's intoxication. Fox v. Wunderlich, 64 Iowa, 11; Welch v. Jugenheimer, 56 Iowa, 187.

A wife cannot recover damages from a liquor-seller simply upon proof that he is a liquor-seller, and that her husband had been in his store and was seen to come out in a state of intoxication. Lovelan v. Briggs, 32 Hun (N. Y.), 477.

But where it was proved that defendant was a "saloon-keeper," and that he sold plaintiff's husband liquor, it may be proved by circumstantial evidence that the liquor was intoxicating. McDougall v. Giacomini, 13 Neb. 431.

Where the alleged injury is to the plaintiff's means of support, the evidence must be confined to such injury. Hackett v. Smelsley, 77 Ill. 109; Elshire v. Schuyler, 15 Neb. 561. And where the complaint is made for selling to one who is in the habit of becoming intoxicated, evidence must show that the buyer had such habit. Ferrell v. State, 48 Ind. 118.

Where the statute provides for damages for the sale of liquor to an habitual drunkard, there must be evidence to prove that the one to whom the liquor was sold was habitually intoxicated to the knowledge of the seller, although he was not drunk at the time of the sale. Such knowledge may be proved by general reputation. Fountain v. Draper, 49 Ind. 441, 448; Markert v. Hoffner, 4 Am. L. Rec. (Ohio) 670.

Where defendant introduced testimony to show that plaintiff's husband had been a confirmed toper for years, long before defendant engaged in the business of selling liquor, and that such condition was in no manner created by any act of defendant, evidence of sales more than two years prior to the beginning of the action was properly admitted as rebutting testimony. Gustafson v. Wind, 62 Iowa, 281.

In an action by a wife against a liquor-seller to recover damages for injury suffered by her, and resulting from the intoxication of her husband, alleged to have been caused by the defendant by selling him intoxicating liquors, the complaint need not aver the kind of intoxicating liquor so sold, nor that the defendant had no license, nor that such liquor was sold on his premises, nor that the husband was intoxicated or in the habit of becoming so at the time of such sale. Walser v. Kerrigan, 56 Ind. 301. See also Horn v. Smith, 77 Ill. 381.

The testimony of an eye-witness that a man at the bar of a saloon was furnished with a glass containing liquor that looked liked beer, and that he paid for it, and was presently thereafter very much intoxicated, is evidence tending to show that intoxicating liquor had been sold to him. Wilson v. Booth, 57 Mich. 249.

In such an action the husband will be a competent witness for the wife. Davenport v. Ryan, 81 Ill. 218.

Some of the statutes require that notice be given to the liquor-seller not to furnish any more liquor to the inebriate before cause of action will accrue. Under such statute a notice will be sufficient when it is substantially conformed to the requirements of the statute. Tate v. Donovan, 143 Mass. 590; Kennedy v. Saunders, 142 Mass. 9.

In an action for injury to means of support by a wife, it appeared that the husband had done work for defendant amounting to $145.50, and that upon a settlement but a small sum was found due, and that the husband was a habitual drunkard, and frequently got liquor of the defendant, which contributed to his dissipation, idleness, and waste of time, and that the wife was compelled to mortgage her property to pay taxes, doctor's bills, and for the support of the family. Held, that it was but fair inference that the sale of liquor by the defendant to the husband produced injury to the means of support of his family, and that the jury were warranted in so finding. Horn v. Smith, 77 Ill. 381.

Proof that the husband of plaintiff bought liquor at defendant's store will not shift the burden of proof that said liquor did not produce the intoxication upon defendant. Macleod v. Geyer, 53 Iowa, 615.

A wife cannot obtain damages from a liquor-seller for being injured by falling on a slippery sidewalk while following her intoxicated husband to see where he obtained liquor. Johnson v. Drummond, 16 Ill. App. 641.

In an action by a wife for damages sustained by the intoxication of her husband, alleged to be caused by liquor sold to him by the defendant, the defendant is not responsible for all damages caused to the plaintiff by any habits of intoxication to the formation or confirmation of which the defendant contributed, unless the liquor sold by the defendant caused, in whole or in part, the intoxication complained of. Bryant v. Tidgewell, 133 Mass. 86.

Where a bar-tender, after selling liquor to a customer, engages in a dispute with him and throws a glass at him, but missing his mark, hits and injures a third person, the sale of the liquor was not considered the proximate cause of the injury. Lueken v. People, 3 Ill. App. 375.

Evidence having been given tending to prove that the person to whom intoxicating liquor was sold was in the habit of getting intoxicated, and that he resided in the neighborhood of the vendor, it is competent to give his general reputation in that behalf in evidence as a circumstance tending to prove the vendor's knowledge of such habit. Adams v. State, 25 Ohio St. 584.

The statement of a physician who was in the habit of getting intoxicated, made at the times of his purchases of liquor, that he wanted it for a patient and for medical purposes, does not, in the absence of proof to the contrary, raise the presumption that it is a sale to the patient. Boyd v. Watt, 27 Ohio St. 259.

To make the seller liable it is not necessary that he should compel the purchaser to drink, or use any artifice to cause him to drink, or that he should know that such person would get drunk. Barnaby v. Wood, 50 Ind. 405.

Whenever damages are claimed under these statutes direct proof is necessary to show that the provisions of the statute have been violated. It has even been held that actual injury must be proved beyond a reasonable doubt. Mason v. Shay, 3 A. L. Rec. (Ohio) 435. Compare Lyon v. Fleahmann, 34 Ohio St. 151.

In Illinois it was held that the Civil Damage Act, being of highly penal character, should receive a strict construction. Fentz v. Meadows, 72 Ill. 540; Meidel v. Anthis, 71 Ill. 241; Freese v. Tripp, 70 Ill. 496.

The liability imposed by the Civil Damage Acts may be imposed irrespective of the question whether the sale or giving away of the liquor was lawful or unlawful, or of any question of negligence on the part of the landlord or tenant. Neither is this liability restricted to the results of intoxication from liquors sold or given away, to be drunk on the premises of the seller. Bertholf v. O'Reilly, 74 N. Y. 509, 513. See Sibila v. Bahney, 34 Ohio St. 399, 407. Compare Baker v. Beckwith, 29 Ohio St. 314.

The liquor-dealer's license to sell liquor is not admissible in evidence on the defence. Roth v. Eppy, 80 Ill. 283. See Moran v. Goodwin, 130 Mass. 158; McNeil v. Collinson, 128 Mass. 313.

Where the defendant was licensed by an incorporated town to sell ale, wine, and beer, and gave a bond with surety to pay any damage any person might sustain by reason of his sale of beer or liquor, the surety would be liable thereunder for all damages recoverable, whether compensatory or exemplary, not exceeding the amount of the bond. Richmond v. Shickler, 57 Iowa, 486; Day v. Frank, 127 Mass. 497.

The Civil Damage Acts are not retrospective, and evidence of sales at a time prior to the passage of the act cannot be received. Dubois v. Miller, 5 Hun (N. Y.), 332. See McCann v. Roach, 81 Ill. 213.

Neither can evidence be received to prove sales subsequent to the commencement of the suit. Kearney v. Fitzgerald, 43 Iowa, 580. But see Bean v. Green, where it was held that such evidence may be received and considered by the jury, but only in assessing exemplary damages.

The N. Y. Civil Damage Act has no extra-territorial effect. Where a resident of Vermont came to New York, got drunk, went home again, and did damage to A.'s property, held that A. could not recover from the seller of the liquor in N. Y. Goodwin v. Young, 34 Hun (N. Y.), 252.

CIVILIZATION.—The art of civilizing or the state of being civilized; refinement; culture.<sup>1</sup> A law; an act of justice or judgment which renders a criminal process civil; performed by turning an information into an inquest, or the contrary.<sup>2</sup>

CIVILITER.—Civily; opposed to criminaliter or criminally.<sup>3</sup>

CIVILITER MORTUIS.—Civily dead. The legal punishment or extinction of a person's rights and capacities among his fellow-members of society.<sup>4</sup>

CIVIL RIGHTS. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.

CLAIM.—Claim is a challenge by a man of the propriety or ownership of a thing which he has not in possession, but which is wrongfully detained from him.<sup>5</sup> In its ordinary sense a claim imports the assertion, demand, or challenge of something as a right, or it means the thing thus demanded or challenged.<sup>6</sup> The possession of a settler upon wild lands belonging to the

1. Webster's Dict.

Civilization is a term which covers several states of society. It is relative, and has not a fixed sense; but in all its applications it is limited to a state of society above that among the Indians of whom we are speaking (Miami tribe). It implies an improved and progressive condition of the people living under an organized government, with systematized labor, individual ownership of the soil, individual accumulations of property, humane and somewhat cultivated manners and customs, the institution of the family, with well defined and respected domestic and social relations, institutions of learning, intellectual activity, etc. We know historically that the North American Indians are classed as savage and not as civilized people; and that in fact it is problematical whether they are susceptible of civilization. Per Perkins, J., 19 Ind. 56.

2. Harris.

3. Bouvier's Law Dict.

The term, with its opposite, criminaliter, occurs in the civil law, from which source they were introduced (most probably through Bracton) into the law of every land. Burrill. It is used to distinguish civil actions from criminal prosecutions. The distinction between answering civiliter and criminaliter for acts injurious to others is this: In the latter case the maxim actus non facit reum nisi mens sit rea applies; but in the former the intent is immaterial if the act done is injurious to another. Haycraft v. Creasy, 2 East, 104. In a man's civil character or position, or by civil in opposition to criminal process; as sheriffs who execute process at their peril are answerable civiliter for what they do upon it; or a man may, without his own fault, be possessed of a horse which has been stolen, but nevertheless he is answerable civiliter to the true owner of it. Brown. Bush v. Steinman, 1 Bos. & Pul. 409.

4. Abbott's Law Dict.

A man is said to be civilly dead when he has been attainted of treason or felony, and in former times when he abjured the realm or went into a monastery. The 33 & 34 Vict. c. 23 provides that after the passing of that act no confession, inquest, verdict, conviction, or judgment of or for any treason or felony, or felo de se, shall cause any attainder or corruption of blood or any forfeiture or escheat. Wharton. In New York it seems that a person convicted of felony and sentenced to imprisonment in the State prison for life is civiliter mortuis. Trent v. Wood, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 228; Platner v. Sherwood, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 118; Graham v. Adams, 2 Johns. Cases (N. Y.), 408.

A person attainted under the Attainder Act of 1799 is civiliter mortuis. Jackson v. Cablin, 2 Johns. Rep. (N. Y.) 248. But a person found to be an habitual drunkard is not civilly dead, so as to transfer his rights and responsibilities to his trustees as administrators. Steel v. Young, 4 Watts (Pa.), 459.

5. Stowell v. Lord Zouch, Plowd. 359.

6. Fordyce v. Goodman, 20 Ohio St. 14; s. c., 4 Sandf. Ch. 381; Scott v. Perley, 98 Mass. 511; Douglass v. Beasley, 40 Ala.

Definition.

CLAIM.

Definition.

147. Where in a statute the words "damage" and "claim" were used, the court, in discussing the general signification of the terms, says: "'Damage' and 'claim' are words having a well-defined meaning in statutes and legal instruments. And for so much as they rightfully convey, for so much is the city (defendant) bound. 'What is a claim? It is, in just judicial sense, a demand of some matter, as of right, made by one person of another, to do or forbear to do some act or thing as a matter of duty.'" Prigg v. Pennsylvania, 16 Peters (U. S.), 615. The plaintiffs may claim no more of the city (defendant) than the law will give them as a matter of right. . . . The parties are remitted then to the settled rules of law to find how great is the right, how onerous the duty." Coster v. Mayor of Albany, 43 N. Y. 413. A claim is the means by or through which the claimant obtains the possession or enjoyment of the thing sought. It is the means to an end, and not the end itself. It is true the word may somewhat stand for the subject claimed; and so may cause for effect. The distinction between the two is somewhat important, notwithstanding. Therefore, before assignment a widow had no estate in the lands of her husband; her right is a mere chose in action, which cannot be sold upon execution at law. Until that time it is strictly a claim. Lawrence v. Miller, 2 Comst. (N. Y.) 254.

Counter-claim.—The word "claim" has been considered a "word of art." (Counter-claim, has been styled an "elegant compound," like "counter-demand," "counter-security," etc.) And its popular signification and use would hardly include recoupment in every case. A counter-claim must be a cause of action, a "cross demand." The defendant can have no "claim," properly speaking, arising solely out of the plaintiff's cause of action. Kneedler v. Sternbergh, 10 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 72; Bates v. Rosekrans, 37 N. Y. 409.

Claims Includes Notes.—Where an agreement stipulated that "neither party would take any advantage of the Statute of Limitations having run, or being about to run, upon the other's claims, but would thereafter settle without any objection on that account," and a party to the agreement sought to recover on two notes, against which the statute had run, it was held the notes were included in the time claims, and were clearly within the agreement of the parties excepting them from the effect of the Statute of Limitations. Noyes v. Hull, 28 Vt. 645.

Claims and Effects.—A power of attorney to sell "claims and effects" cannot be construed to authorize the sale of land or real estate. De Cordova v. Knowles, 37 Tex. 19.

Claims and Demands—In a Deed.—Where a deed contained a covenant to save harmless certain premises against all actions, suits, claims, and demands whatsoever, both in law and equity, which might be made, etc., by H. W. P. or T. B. W. P., breaches, 1st, that H. P. P. claimed to have a right and title to the premises, entered and cut trees, etc.; 2d, that certain title-deeds relating to the premises were withheld by A. W. at the instance and through the claim and demand of T. B. W. B.; held, that the acts upon which the breaches were assigned were claims in law within the meaning of the covenant. Fowle v. Welsh, 1 Barn. & Cr. 29.

In a Will—Bank Stock not Embraced.—Where a testator, after several legacies of bank stock and other stock and money, concluded his will: "The remainder of my worldly substance, consisting of furniture, bedding, etc., I give to my two daughters, to be divided between them. . . . These, with all money of mine that may remain in bank at the time of my death, with all claims or demands of whatever nature, I give to my two daughters," and testator had several shares of bank stock and other stock not specifically bequeathed, held, that they did not pass under the above bequest. Delamater's Es., 1 Whart. (Pa.) 262.

Arbitration of.—Where by the terms of a submission to arbitrators they were to hear proofs and allegations of and concerning all claims arising out of the partnership, and for a final settlement of all differences between the parties, an award will not be set aside, although the arbitrators open an account which had been settled as an account stated twenty-three years previous to the submission, notwithstanding the opening of such account was objected to on the hearing. Emmet v. Hoyt, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 410.

Lawful Claims.—A bond reciting a conveyance of land and covenanting to indemnify and save harmless the obligee against all actions brought for the recovery of the land, and against all costs and expenses in consequence, is an indemnity only against all lawful claims, and the breach assigning the bringing of a suit, and without alleging title in the party prosecuting, will not give a right to recover. Luddington v. Pulver, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 404.

Indemnity against Claims.—In an action on a contract to indemnify and save harmless against the claim or demand of a third person, the plaintiff must show that he has been actually damaged. Aberdeen v. Blackmar, 6 Hill (N. Y.), 324; Lloyd v. Dimmack, 26 W. R. 458.

Definition.

In Constitutions.—The constitution of Ohio provides that no money shall "be paid on any claim, the subject-matter of which shall not have been provided for by pre existing law, unless such . . . claim be allowed by two thirds of the members elected to each branch of the general assembly." The act of March 30, 1864, providing for the appointment of commissioners to examine claims growing out of the "Morgan raid," and prescribing their duties, was not passed by a two-thirds vote. The commissioners having allowed plaintiff's claim on mandamus by him against the auditor of the State to compel payment, it was held that under the provisions of the constitution (supra) the claim could not be paid out of the State treasury till allowed by the concurrent votes of two thirds of the members elected to each branch of the general assembly. The court say: "The word as here used (in the constitution) is by implication limited to claims against the State of a pecuniary character. . . . Claims for the payment of money may be preferred against the State on various grounds. They may be either of a legal or of an equitable character. . . . All such demands against the State for the payment of money, whatever be their character or origin, are, we think, claims within the meaning of the constitution." Fordyce v. Godman, 20 Ohio St. 114.

The act of the legislature of New York, passed December 14, 1847, to release the prior lien of the State on the Hudson & Berkshire Railroad, does not violate the 4th section of the 7th article of the constitution of New York of 1846, which forbids the release or compromise of the claims of the State against any incorporated company, to pay the interest and redeem the principal of the stock of the State theretofore loaned or advanced to such company, and provides that such claims shall be fairly enforced. The constitution only requires that claims originating in loans of State credit, made before its adoption, and the securities taken on such loans shall be held as the property of the State, and be managed for its direct pecuniary benefit, and shall not be released, reduced, or surrendered for the benefit of the borrowing corporations, in disregard of the pecuniary interest of the State in its distinct and single character of a creditor of the corporation.

CLAIM.*Definition.

With these restrictions the exercise of the ordinary legislative discretion in the management of the claims is not prohibited. Darby v. Wright, 3 Blatchf. (U. S. C. C.) 170.

In Acts of Congress.—When Extends to Bounty Land.—The word "claim," in the 1st section of the act of March 3, 1823 (adjudging every person guilty of felony who shall transmit to or present at, or cause to be transmitted to or presented at, any office or officer of the Government of the United States, any deed, writing, etc., in support of or in relation to any claim, with intent to defraud the United States, etc.), is not limited to a demand for money, but extends to such a claim to bounty land. United States v. Wilson, 4 Blatchf. (U. S. C. C.) 385.

When Not within Act of Congress declaring all Transfers and Assignments Absolutely Null and Void unless made After Allowance of Claim.—The term "claim," as used in section 3477 of the Revised Statutes, does not include claims for supplies furnished the Oregon expedition to protect the emigrants of 1854, at least after the act of Congress providing for their payment. Dowell v. Griswold, 4 Sawy. (U. S. C. C.) 217.

In City Charter—Torts not Included.—A provision that no action shall be maintained against the defendant city "upon any claim or demand" until it shall first have been presented to the common council for allowance, held not to include actions for personal torts. Kelly v. Madison, 43 Wis. 638.

In Statute.—States—When Synonymous with Demand.—In an "act to regulate the settlement of the estate of deceased persons," the words claimant and claim are used as synonymous with the words creditor and legal demand. Gray v. Palmer, 9 Cal. 616. So in a probate act. McCausland's Es., 52 Cal. 568. But the word "claims," as used in the act, does not embrace mortgage liens. Fallon v. Butler, 21 Cal. 25. But a note secured by a mortgage is a claim against the estate. Ellis v. Polhemus, 27 Cal. 350.

Synonymous with Cause of Action.—The word "claim" and the phrase "cause of action" relate to the same thing and have one meaning. When the plaintiff has a "claim" for damages (under a right given in a city charter), when it is stated in a complaint, it is technically a "cause of action." Minick v. City of Troy, 83 N. Y. 516.

Limitation of.—Under Kentucky statute claim means a verbal, written, or other intimation of the demand, either express or by some distinct communication that the debt exists. Pea v. Wagoner, 5 Hayw. (Tenn.) 14; Johnson v. Dew, 5 Hayw. (Tenn.) 69. In California a verbal allowance of a claim against an estate by an executor or administrator gives the claimant no cause of action. Pitte v. Shipley, 40 Cal. 154. In Missouri the statute barring "claims" applies to fees of circuit attorneys omitted in original cost bills, and demanded on supplementary cost bills. Missouri v. Draper, 48 Mo. 56.

United States Government; also the lands themselves so possessed.<sup>1</sup>

In Attachment Act.—A statute which provides that in attachment proceedings "any person claiming property, etc., may interplead," includes only those who claim to own the property attached. A garnishee of a debt has no such claim.

In Tort and Contract.—"Claim," as used in the New York Code, authorizing an attachment, does not apply to a tort. Saddlesvene v. Arms, 32 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 280. An affidavit for a capias which sets out a claim against defendant by reason of his having, as superintendent of a railroad company, collected moneys belonging to the company, and failed on demand to account for and pay over the same, makes out a case of an action "arising upon contract," within the meaning of that phrase in the Michigan statute. In re Stephenson, 32 Mich. 60. In a Wisconsin statute the word "account" refers only to demands arising out of some express or implied contract, or of some fiduciary relation, and "claim" and demand, in the same statute, are said to refer only to such accounts. Stringham v. Supervisors, 24 Wis. 594.

In Relation to Land and Land Titles.—An unassigned dower interest in land is neither a title nor an estate in the scientific sense of those terms, but is an adverse "claim," which the holder may be called upon to defend under the statute relating to the quieting of titles. Benoist v. Murrin, 47 Mo. 537. Under the California revenue act of 1861, a person's "claim to and possession of" lands, or his "claim to" or his "possession of" such lands, may be assessed for taxation. The term "claims" means not only an assertion of title to, but an actual possession of the land claimed. People v. Frisbee, 31 Cal. 146. In Iowa, to constitute an adverse possession under the statute, it is not necessary that the party must have taken and held possession under color of title. Such possession is sufficient if taken and held under a claim of title. The terms are not synonymous. To constitute the former a paper title is requisite in the party claiming, but the latter may exist wholly in parol. Hamilton v. Wright, 30 Iowa, 480.

In Pleading.—In Wisconsin a statement in an affidavit of appellant's attorney that "appellant claims and alleges" certain facts, is not evidence of such facts. Amory v. Amory, 26 Wis. 152. In Alabama the complaint must contain an averment of the ownership by plaintiff of the claim. Douglass v. Beasley, 40 Ala. 142.

"Claiming Under."—On a purchase of lands which were under mortgage the purchaser paid the principal and interest due on the mortgage and took a conveyance, in which mortgagor and mortgagee joined, of the premises, and of the mortgagor's equity of redemption and all the residue of his interest. Held, that the purchaser was a person "claiming under" a mortgage within stat. 7 W. IV. and 1 Vict. c. 28; and that the twenty years' limitation under stat. 3 & 4 W. IV. c. 27, s. 2, ran from the paying off of the mortgage and interest. Doe v. Massey, 17 Ad. & Ell. 374.

Under Whom They Claim.—A covenant in a deed by the grantors that the land is free from all incumbrances done or suffered by "those under whom they claim," refers to those from whom they derive title, while a similar covenant against the acts of "all claiming under him" would probably be construed to have a different signification, and would not be held to include a vendee of the entire estate of the grantor. Williamson v. Hall, 62 Mo. 405.

See, generally, Camp v. Grant, 21 Conn. 41; Olcott v. Wood, 14 N. Y. 32; Fellmes v. Clay, 4 Ad. & Ell. (N. S.) 319; Queen v. Guardians, etc., L. R. 9 Q. B. 383.

1. Claims on Public Lands.—When used in connection with public lands, "claim" has a known and definite signification. It refers to the settler's right or improvement on a tract of land, the fee of which is in the government. Bauman v. Torr, 3 Iowa, 571.

The possessory claims of settlers on the public lands have been recognized as valid, and as proper subject-matter of sale and transfer. To constitute a valid claim to unsurveyed public lands the claim must be so plainly enacted and designated as to be distin-

CLAIMANT—CLAIM OF COMISANCE—CLANDESTINE.

CLAIMANT.—A person who makes a claim in an administrative capacity. The plaintiff in the old action of ejectment was called the "claimant."<sup>1</sup> A person authorized and admitted to defend a libel brought in rem against property.<sup>2</sup>

CLAIM OF COMISANCE.—In Practice.—An intervention by a third person demanding jurisdiction of a cause which the plaintiff has commenced out of the claimant's court.<sup>3</sup>

CLAIM OF LIBERTY.—A suit or petition to the queen in the court of exchequer to have liberties and franchises confirmed there by the attorney-general.<sup>4</sup>

CLANDESTINE.—Withdrawn from public notice for an evil purpose; kept secret; hidden; private.<sup>5</sup> guished from adjacent lands. Sergeant v. Kellogg, 10 Ill. 273.

A "claim" on the public lands is a good consideration for a contract. Starr v. Burgess, 1 Mow. (Ia.) 438.

In the possession of occupants the public lands of the United States are treated as the property of the individuals occupying them as much as if they owned them in fee, except that no disposition of them can be made so as to affect in any way a title that may be derived from the United States, and it would seem that in an action of ejectment for the possession of a "claim" it is only necessary for the plaintiff to deduce a regular title from the first occupant (unless his claim has been abandoned), who is considered as the fountain of the title, which will prevail, unless opposed by a government title, when it vanishes. Tenney v. Saunders, 5 Ill. 527.

A contract concerning an interest in a claim is treated as personalty, and pertains to the administrator of the estate, and the right or interest will descend to the heir of the decedent. Stewart v. Chadwick, 8 Iowa, 463. A party selling such a "claim" warrants the title; and if the title fails he is liable at least for the purchase-money and interest. Bauman v. Torr, 3 Iowa, 571.

1. Rapalje's Law Dict.

2. Bouvier's Law Dict.

Bona Fide Claimant is one who supposes that he has a good title and knows of no adverse claim. Morrison v. Robinson, 31 Pa. St. 459.

In Statute.—To make one a "claimant" of property within the meaning of a section of an act, giving the claimant the same right to attack a fi. fa. for want of payment of taxes as the defendant had, so as to file the counter affidavit there provided for, he must put in a claim to the property under the claim laws of the State. Adams v. Worrill, 46 Ga. 295.

Under a claim for property act, the person of whose claim the sheriff is notified (in accordance with the act) is "the claimant," and none other is permitted to sue on the bond in the name of the sheriff. Stewart v. Ball, 35 Md. 209.

Public Lands — Pre-emptioner not a Claimant.—A claimant of public land within the meaning of the third section of the act of Congress granting a right of way over the public lands to the Union and Central Pacific R. Cos. is one who has an interest in the land recognized by the laws of the United States. One who is a pre-emptioner, but has not paid for the land, is not such claimant. Western Pac. R. Co. v. Tevis, 41 Cal. 489.

Pension Acts.—Where the offence described in an act of Congress is "withholding from a pensioner or other claimant the whole or any part of the claim allowed or due said pensioner or claimant," an indictment thereunder charging the defendant with withholding certain money which he as agent had received from the United States by the collection of claims for "pay and bounty" and "arrearage of pay and bounty" cannot be sustained. The word "claimant" in the act means a person who under the act of July 4, 1864, has a claim before the pension office. United States v. Bencke, 8 Otto (U. S.), 447.

3. Bouvier's Law Dict.

4. Wharton's Law Dic.

5. Webster's Dict.

Clandestine Mortgages.—Statute of 4 & 5 Wm. & Mary, c. 16. A.D. 1692, enacted that if any person having once mortgaged his lands for a valuable consideration shall again mortgage the same lands

CLASS.—A number of persons or things ranked together for some common purpose, or as possessing some attribute in common.<sup>1</sup>

CLAUSE.—A part of a treaty; of a legislative act; of a deed; of a will or other written instrument. A part of a sentence.<sup>2</sup> or any part thereof to any person, the former mortgage being in force, and shall not discover in writing to the second mortgagee the first mortgage, such mortgagor so again mortgaging his lands shall have no relief or equity of redemption against the second mortgagee. But this act is not to bar of her dower any widow who does not legally join her husband in such second mortgage. Wharton.

In Statute.—"Clandestinely Provided"—Construction of a statute to prevent parish officers from clandestinely providing a premium, to bind out poor children without the sanction of the justices. King v. Inhabitants of St. Paul, 10 Barn. & Cress. 12.

1. Bouvier's Law Dict.

In a Libel.—An action for a libel does not lie for publication alleged to affect the individual characters of persons and the trade or business carried on by them, if on its face it does not point at the individuals intended otherwise than that they pursue a particular trade or business in a specified section of a city; the publication affecting a class of persons, no individual of that class is entitled to sustain an action for the publication. White v. Delavan, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 49.

Official Bond.—Where a statute directs an official bond to be payable to a class of official persons, it may and ought to be taken to them by their name of office; and in that name they may sue on it. Justices v. Armstrong, 3 Dev. (N. Car.) 284.

In Statute.—Where a section of a statute extends the word "person" to a class of persons as well as to individuals, the poor of a parish are a class of persons within the meaning of that section. College of St. Mary Magdalen v. Atty.-Gen., 6 H. L. Cases, 189.

Statute Relating to Classes.—When Public or Private.—A statute relating to persons or things as a class is a general law; one relating to particular persons or things of a class is special. Wheeler v. Philadelphia, 77 Pa. St. 338; Ingram v. Foot, 1 Ld. Raym. 708; Deir v. Manningham, 1 Plowd. 60.

Sec. 7, art. 5, of the constitution of Pennsylvania, prohibiting local or special legislation, does not prevent classification of municipal corporations with reference to taxation, and the act of May 23, 1874, classifying cities according to their population is constitutional.

2. Bouvier's Law Dict.

It has been suggested that a clause must mean something self-contained and independent, which when presented on paper would have a meaning by itself, without reference to the context. I do not know any law which says that that is the necessary meaning of the word "clause." When I read an enactment speaking of a devise, that is to say, speaking of a will or any clause in a will, I naturally infer that the word "clause" there means some collocation of words in the will which, when removed out of the will, will leave the rest of the will intelligible. I know no rule which says that the clause itself must be capable of being read as a document by itself if taken alone. The main object is to see if that which you obliterate, which you claim the right to obliterate, de jure under the statute, is something in the first place which you can obliterate de facto; because if the obliteration cannot be made de facto, then of course the statute allowing it to be made must be inoperative. Earl Cairns, Lord Chancellor, in Swinton v. Bailey, L. R. 4 App. Cases, 77, where it was held that J. E. having made a will in which he devised his house, lands, and tenements to his mother "Elizabeth E., her heirs and assigns forever," and he afterward struck his pen through the words "her heirs and assigns forever," that this was under the 7th section of the Statute of Frauds (29 Car. II. c. 3) a valid revocation by obliteration of a clause in his will, and that the word "clause" in the first part of said section may properly be read "part."

In Statutes.—The word depends largely for its meaning on the connection in which it is employed. It signifies less than "purview," yet not necessarily less than a sentence viewed grammatically. As in grammar the word "clause" denotes a part of a sentence, and qualifying words are required to show the particular part and how much; so in legal language it is believed to indicate a part of a statutory provision, the particular part and how much to appear from the context. Bishop Stat. Crimes, § 53.

Interpretation Clause.—A clause in a statute which has for its object to render

CLAY.—A soft earth which is plastic, or may be moulded with the hands, consisting of alumina, the characterizing ingredient to which it owes its plasticity, and silica with water. It is the result of the wearing down and decomposition in part of rocks containing aluminous minerals. Earth in general, as representing the elementary particles of the human body.<sup>1</sup>

CLEANSE.—To render clean; to free from filth, pollution, infection, guilt, or the like; to clean.<sup>2</sup>

CLEAR.—Free from indistinctness or uncertainty; easily understood; perspicuous; plain. Without diminution; in full; net. Free from impediment, obstacle, embarrassment, or accusation.<sup>3</sup>

the meaning plainer. Ordinarily it occupies one section, sometimes at the beginning, sometimes at the end. Bishop Stat. Crimes. §§ 54, 55.

Enacting Clause most frequently refers to the main body of a statute or some leading provision, excluding its provisos; it may or may not include an exception. Bishop Stat. Crimes, § 57.

Saving Clause.—A saving in a statute is only an exemption of a special thing out of the general things mentioned. Dwar. Stat. 513; Halliwell v. Bridge-water, 2 Anderson, 190.

Repealing Clause.—The common form is where an act says in terms that such a statute, clause of a statute, or provision of the common law is repealed. Bishop Stat. Crimes, § 151 et seq.

Appeal Clause.—A clause showing to what places the operation of the act shall extend; a clause showing from what date the operation of the act is to commence, and how long it shall continue in force. Dwar. Stat. 511. See, generally, Bishop Crim. Proc. § 634; Stat. Crimes, §§ 52-60, 82, 126, 196.

Clause Irritant.—By this clause in a deed or settlement the acts or deeds of a tenant for life or other proprietor, contrary to the conditions of his right, become null and void; and by the resolute clause such right becomes resolved and extinguished. Bell Dict.

Clause Rolls or Close Rolls.—Rolls preserved in London, containing the records of writs close—litera clause. Burrill's Law Dict.

1. Webster's Dict.

Clay Pits and Mines.—Where appellants were rated to the poor for clay-pits which were excavations under ground from whence glass-house pot-clay and fire-brick clay were extracted. A perpendicular shaft was sunk from the surface of the land for the purpose of raising the clay out of the strata, which was done by a steam-engine and other mining apparatus; the excavations were like those that are made for working coal and metallic mines, and the mode of raising the clay was the same as that used in a coal-mine, it was held that the pits so assessed were clay-mines, and therefore not ratable. King v. Brettle, 3 Barn. & Adolph. 424.

2. Webster's Dict.

An act of Parliament authorizing persons to repair and cleanse a navigable river does not authorize them to make a passage to a new wharf on the river. Partheriche v. Mason, 2 Chitty, 658.

3. Webster.

In Defining Proof.—When such terms as clear, precise, explicit, unequivocal, and indubitable are used by the courts in defining the requisite proof of a particular fact to be made out by verbal testimony, it is meant that a conviction shall be fastened in the minds of jurors as strong as verbal testimony is able to convey. It is meant that witnesses shall be found to be credible; that the facts to which they testify are distinctly remembered; that details are narrated exactly and in due order, and that their statements are true. Absolute certainty is, of course, out of the question. The court below charged in regard to an alleged parol agreement to reform a written instrument that said agreement should be made out by "clear, precise, and indubitable proof." Held, that these words, restrained by their inherent limitations, could do no harm. Spencer v. Colt, 89 Pa. St. Rep. 314.

"Clearly Convinced."—In Collin v. Barr, 64 Ala. 543, it is said: "Reasonable conviction or satisfaction of the mind is the proper measure of proof in civil cases. 'Clearly convinced' lays down too exacting a rule."

"Clearly Established."—The words "clearly established by satisfactory proof" are equivalent to the expression "established by satisfactory proof beyond a reasonable doubt." People v. Warden,

8 Pac. Coast L. Jour. 191. In that case the court said: "How can a fact be said to be clearly established so long as there is a reasonable doubt whether it has been established at all? There can be no 'reasonable doubt' of a fact after it has been clearly established by satisfactory proof. 'Clearly,' according to Webster's definition of it, means 'in a clear manner, without obscurity, without obstruction, without entanglement or confusion, without uncertainty,' etc. And that is doubtless the sense in which it is popularly understood. The definition of 'a reasonable doubt,' given by Mr. C. J. Shaw, which has been generally approved by the courts, is as follows: 'It is that state of the case which, after the entire comparison and consideration of all the evidence, leaves the jurors in that condition that they cannot say they feel an abiding conviction to a moral certainty of the truth of the charge, . . . a certainty that convinces and directs the understanding and satisfies the reason and judgment of those who are bound to act conscientiously upon it.' Comm. v. Webster, 5 Cush. 320. A juror would have no excuse for saying that he did not 'feel an abiding conviction to a moral certainty' of the truth of a fact which had been 'clearly established by satisfactory proof.' Such proof in any case would convince and direct the understanding and satisfy the reason and judgment of a conscientious juror."

In Reference to Lands and Estates—Clear Yearly Rent.—In asserting an estate to be of any clear yearly rent, the parties should attend to the meaning of the word "clear" in an agreement between buyer and seller, which is free from all outgoing, incumbrances, and extraordinary charges not according to the custom of the country, as tithes, poor-rates, church-rates, etc., as these are natural charges on the tenant, but subject nevertheless to the land tax and all other outgoing, which, according to such custom, ought to be paid by the landlord. Sugd. V. & P. (14th Ed.) 222.

Clear Deed.—A covenant to make a clear deed when the title is equally well known by the vendor and the vendee is performed by the delivery of a deed conveying such title as the vendor hath, although it may be but a life estate; for he who purchases a tract of land knowing the title to be defective, takes the risk upon himself. Rohr v. Kindt, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 563.

Clear of all Incumbrances.—If there be a contract for the sale of lands and the bargainor agree to "make a warranty deed free and clear of all incumbrances," this agreement is not satisfied by the making of a deed with covenants of general warranty and freedom from incumbrances unless the grantor had the absolute, entire, and unincumbered estate in the land at the time of the conveyance. 2 Greenl. (Me.) 22; 11 Am. Dec. 30.

Clear Title.—A contract to convey "by a deed conveying a clear title that parcel of land on the corner of A and B streets, and owned by the vendors," is not satisfied by the tender of a warranty deed conveying "that parcel of land on the corner of A and B streets now owned by the grantors" if there is an incumbrance on the land. Roberts v. Bassett, 105 Mass. 409.

A contract of executors not in pursuance of their official duty to sell and convey, with a clear and satisfactory title, land of the testator's estate the title to which is in the heir, subject to the payment of the testator's debts and legacies and charges of the administration, is not necessarily void, but binds them individually; and if the terms of the contract imply that the title is to come from more than one source, and may require more than one deed of conveyance, and the executors sell the land under license of the probate court, and then to pass the title tender to the other party, a quitclaim deed of it from the purchaser at the sale, with a warranty deed from the heir, such party cannot avoid the contract either on the ground of its original execution by the executors in their official name or on the ground of his dissatisfaction with the form of their making title in its fulfilment. Dusel v. Jordan, 104 Mass. 407.

Clear of Assessments.—Where there is a covenant on the part of the grantees to pay the ground rent free and clear of all assessments, they are not allowed to deduct the same from the rent due to the ground landlord. Peart v. Phipps, 4 Yeates (Pa.) 386.

Clear of Expense.—Where a vendor proposed a price for land clear of all expenses, it was held that the purchaser should bear the expense of making out the title, the law imposing on him the expense of the conveyance. Stratford v. Bosworth, 2 Ves. & B. 341.

Clear of Charge.—Under the words "clear of charge or reprise" the jointure cannot be limited clear of land tax. The word "clear" should be construed in a power as it would be in an agreement between buyer and seller, that is, clear of all outgoing, etc., which do not, according to the custom of the country, fall on the tenant. Tyrconnell v. Ancaster, Ambler, 239; Arran v. Crisp, 12 Mod. 54.

er," when used in a jointure, at the time of making the jointure its continuance. Tyrconnell v. Peter, 2 Ves. Sr. 499.

Clear Land.—In the absence of limitation, the term "to clear," is understood to mean removing timbers from land, to remove all the timber of every size except the stumps; and parol evidence is not admissible to explain a written conveyance. Temper v. Pound, 10 Ind. 32.

Where a contract requires that a party clear, grub, and pile the brush, all in good order, on all the detached piece of land, through which a road runs, it is erroneous to admit evidence that it was not usual in the neighborhood to grub such ravines, or that the land would be better without having been grubbed, especially when the contract is upon his right under the deed to have such grubbing done. The word "clear" in such connection does not mean to brush too small to be grubbed, or to large trees. Holmes v. Stumhill, 412.

The words "clearing land," in the absence of limitation, mean removing from all the timber of every size, but not including taking out the stumps; and where a contract for all the timber about trees on certain land, the grantor to pay a stipulated price for the same, and so much per cord for wood, cut and hauled off by him, "and the acres of the white land to be cleared and hauled off" by him by a certain day, the brush of whatever he should pile as cut, simply taking the valuable timber off and piling up the brush from that, leaving smaller standing, is not sufficient. Seavey v. Clark, 110 Ind. 494; 9 West. Rep. 416; 11 N. E. Rep. 518.

"Clear Out" a Highway means more than to clear it out for all purposes to which it is dedicated. It means to have the easement, the right of passage; that they have a right to permit to be maintained. All obstructions to it must be removed; but beyond the rights of the owner of the soil are not impaired. Winter v. Peterson, 10 N. J. L. 528.

Clear.—A city owning a passage-way, a lot on one side of it, and a lot in the rear, conveyed to B the lot on the side, bounding it on the one side by said city except for a back passage-way to the lot in the rear, "or for any other purpose which the city may choose to appropriate said passage-way to." The deed also gave the grantee the right to build over the passage-way, leaving it five feet wide in the clear. The city then quitclaimed to A, the owner of the land on the other side of the passage way, the right to pass over it, describing it as five feet wide, as appurtenant to his estate; and afterwards conveyed to B the lot in the rear, and quitclaimed to him all the rights of the city in the passage-way. Held, that A could maintain a bill in equity against B to restrain him from building over the passage-way by placing a wall in it, whereby its width was made less than five feet, it appearing that the passage-way could be built over without such wall at an expense not much larger than by the mode proposed. Tucker v. Howard, 122 Mass. 529.

In Wills—Annuities.—A devise of an annuity clear for A. means free from taxes. Hodgworth v. Crowley, 2 Atk. 376.

An annuity was given by a will clear of all deductions, and was directed to be paid out of certain sums of stock standing in testator's name. Held, that it was not subject to the legacy duty. Dawkins v. Tatham, 2 Sim. 492.

Where a testator directs his executors and trustees to pay certain annuities and legacies "clear of the property tax and all expenses attending the same," the legacy ought to be paid by the executors out of the assets of the testator, and the annuitants and legatees are entitled to receive the full amount of their respective legacies and annuities without any deduction in respect of legacy duty. Courtoy v. Vincent, 1 Turn. & R. 433.

In Contract.—A contract stating that all small remnants must be "cleared," means taken away. Pettit v. Mitchell, 4 M. & G. 838.

Where a party agreed to deliver so many bushels of "first quality clear barley," the contract not stating whether the barley was to be delivered in sacks or bulk, i.e., loose, held, that evidence was properly admitted to show a usage of trade to deliver in sacks. Robinson v. United States, 13 Wall. 363.

In Constitution.—Where a constitution makes "the clear proceeds of all fines collected . . . for any breach of the penal law" a part of the school fund, in a suit for their recovery it is not necessary to allege in the declaration that the fines had been determined or set apart by any tribunal or law of the State. Wisconsin v. Casey, 5 Wis. 322.

In Statute.—Where a statute provides that "any person . . . having an estate

CLEARANCE.—A certificate given by the collector of a port, in which it is stated that the master or commander (naming him) of a ship or vessel named and described, bound for a port named (and having on board goods described, in case the master requires the particulars of his cargo to be stated in such clearance), has entered and cleared his ship or vessel according to law.<sup>1</sup> (See also SHIPPING.) A certificate of the discharge of obligations or dues.<sup>2</sup>

CLEARING-HOUSE.—An office organized by the banks of a city where their representatives may meet daily, adjust balances of accounts, and receive and pay differences.<sup>3</sup> The object of its members is to effect at one time and place the daily exchanges between the banks composing the association and the payment of the balances resulting from such exchanges. There are also stock-exchange clearing houses which undertake to clear quantities of stocks.<sup>4</sup> (See also BILLS AND NOTES; BANKS AND BANKING; PRESENTMENT.)

of inheritance or freehold in the town where he dwells of the clear yearly value of ten dollars, and taking the rents and profits thereof three years successively, . . . shall thereby gain a settlement therein;" and one who has such an estate mortgages it in fee to secure a sum, the interest of which being deducted from the annual income reduces it below ten dollars within the three years, gains no settlement. Groton v. Roxborough, 6 Mass. 50; Marsh v. Hammond, 103 Mass. 146; Taylor v. Milnesfield, 3 El. & Bl. 724; Willcut v. Calnan, 98 Mass. 76.

Clear Days.—Where a rule of court provided for the delivery of paper books four clear days before the day appointed for argument, it was held that Sunday was to be counted as one of the four days between the delivery of paper books and the day of argument, except it is the last day. Hodgkins v. Hancock, 14 M. & W. 120.

By 49 G. III. c. 68, s. 5, ten clear days of the intention to appeal is required. Held, that the ten days are to be taken exclusively both of the day of serving the notice and the day of holding the sessions. King v. Herefordshire, 3 Barn. & Ald. 581.

1. Bouvier's Law Dict.

2. Section 23 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98 enacts that "whosoever shall forge . . . any acquittance or receipt for money . . . shall be guilty of felony." A. was secretary of a friendly society which had branches in various towns. Any member who had paid all his dues, on going from one of these towns to another, was entitled to a document called a "clearance," which admitted him to membership at any place where a branch of the society existed. The qualifications for membership were the payment of an entrance fee, a time of probation, and certain general payments which were made to the secretary, whose duty it was at once to hand them over to the treasurer. A clearance had to be signed by the secretary and by two other officers of the society. . . . A. gave a clearance to C., to which he was entitled, but to which he had forged the names of the two officers whose signatures besides his own were necessary for the validity of the clearance. The clearance certified that the bearer, C., was a member of the branch society granting it, and had paid all dues and demands, and then it authorized any other branch to receive C. as a clearance member. Held, that the clearance was not an "acquittance or receipt" for money within the act. Queen v. French, Law Rep. 1 C. C. 217.

3. Abbott.

4. Dos Passos Stockbrokers, 277.

Clearing-houses are established in all large cities. They may be legally incorporated, but commonly are private associations organized by the banks which form their members.

Mode of Operation.—The plan pursued is thus described: At a certain hour every morning, usually at ten o'clock, the deputy of each bank attends at the clearing-house, bringing with him all checks upon other banks which have been received by his own bank since the same hour of the preceding day. Each bank has its box or drawer, and the messengers of all the other banks distribute all the checks which they have in their possession, placing each of them in the drawer or box of the particular bank upon which it is drawn. Each bank is then credited on the books of the clearing-house with the amount of checks upon other banks which it has brought in for collection, and is debited with the amount of the checks drawn upon it which all the other banks have brought. If the former amount exceeds the latter the bank is then declared to have gained "the amount of the excess;" but if the latter amount exceeds the former the bank is declared to have "lost" the amount of the difference. The total of the losses must be precisely the total of the gains. At a later hour in the same day the losing banks are obliged to bring into the clearing house the sums which they have respectively lost; and shortly afterward the gaining banks come and receive from the officers of the clearing-house, out of the funds thus furnished by the losers, the amounts of their respective gains. The computation of how much each bank has brought in against others, and of how much the others have brought in against it, is performed by skilful clerks in a few minutes. So soon as it is finished an officer of each bank takes from its drawer or box all checks against it, and carries them to his own bank to be examined for the purpose of seeing whether any of them must be dishonored. A time is set within which each bank is expected to examine all checks and to refuse such as it refuses to pay. Morse on Banks and Banking, 450, 451.

Effect of Clearing-house Regulations and Usages.—Its usages and rules, if not in conflict with law, may, by the implication of tacit adoption in the contract of members, bind them in the same way that a general usage of trade may bind those who deal with reference to it, and who are therefore held impliedly to adopt it. But those who are not bound by such usages, and have not contracted with reference to them, have no right to avail themselves of them to create an obligation against those who are parties to their adoption, and bound by them inter sese only. Overman v. Hoboken City Bank, 1 Vroom (N. J.), 61. In this case the plaintiff, on the 29th of October, 1859, deposited in the Bank of Commerce in New York a check drawn by Andre & Bro. on the defendant bank, which was located in New Jersey. The Ocean Bank of New York was the agent in that city of the defendant, and through it defendant received and paid checks drawn on it. The Bank of Commerce and the Ocean Bank were members of the New York Clearing House. On the 31st (the 30th being Sunday) the Bank of Commerce presented the check to the Ocean Bank at the clearing-house. The rules of the clearing-house required any check which was not to be honored to be returned before 10 A.M. on the day following that on which it was received through the clearing house. The defendant retained the check without notice of non-payment until November 2d, when it was returned to the Bank of Commerce with notice of non-payment. Andre & Bro. failed on the 1st of November. The plaintiff claimed to recover the amount of the check on the ground that by virtue of the above-mentioned rule of the New York Clearing House the defendant was responsible if its agent the Ocean Bank did not return the check to the Bank of Commerce before ten o'clock on the next morning after it was presented, but the court held it not bound by the rule, and that plaintiff could not recover.

Effect of a Settlement through Clearing-House.—A settlement made by two banks through the clearing-house, in which checks are presented and exchanged, and a balance between them is struck, will be final and conclusive if either fails to give notice of inability to meet the balance against it on the general adjustment, before the hour when banks usually pass checks to the credit of their depositors. The mutual credits thus given cannot be recalled by either one to the detriment of the other. Bluffer v. Louisiana National Bank, 35 La. Ann. 251.

On the 20th of December, 1868, H. presented himself at the defendant bank, to whose officers he was unknown, and stated that he desired to open an account, and presented a check for $4600.15, purporting to have been drawn by A. upon the plaintiff bank. The amount of the check was entered as cash in a bank-book furnished H. by defendant. On the following morning the check was sent to the clearing-house, and thence was taken to the plaintiff bank, where it was passed as genuine, charged to the account of A., and credited to the defendant bank. On the 22d of December, H. called at defendant bank and drew $4500. On December 29th, plaintiff discovered the check to be a forgery, and demanded repayment of the check from defendant; but the latter denied its liability beyond the $100.15 still remaining to the credit of H. The plaintiff having refunded to A. the amount of the forged check, brought suit against the defendant. Held, that the plaintiff was bound to know the signatures of its depositors, and that the sending of the check deposited by H.

through the clearing-house by the defendant, and its failure to communicate to plaintiff the fact that it was received from a stranger, was not such negligence as would throw the loss upon defendant. No ruling was made by the court upon the question of an alleged usage among banks not to receive checks from strangers without identification, nor on an alleged well-established usage of the banks in Baltimore to the effect that when one bank sends to the clearing-house a check on another bank payable to the order, and purporting to be indorsed by the payee, the bank sending it guarantees the indorsement of the check to be genuine. Comm. & Farmers' Nat. Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 30 Md. 11; Stuyvesant Bank v. Mechanics' Bank, 7 Lans. (N. Y.) 197.

In an action against the indorser of a promissory note, payable at the plaintiff bank and discounted by another bank, it appeared that when the note became due, the last-named bank charged it to the plaintiff bank, and sent it through the clearing house for payment; that the plaintiff's teller by mistake, thinking that the maker of the note was in funds at the plaintiff bank, stamped the word "paid" on the face of the note; that the mistake was soon discovered, and, before the close of banking-hours on the same day, both the other bank and the indorser were notified of it and the note was duly protested; and that a dispute between the two as to whether the rules of the clearing-house had been complied with was terminated by a payment of the amount of the note to the other bank by the plaintiff, without any waiver of its legal rights, and at the trial the other bank disclaimed all title or interest in the note. The judge, who tried the case without a jury, found that the note was stamped by mistake as paid; that this act did not amount to a payment of the note, and was not intended as such; that the money paid by the plaintiff to the other bank was not intended and did not operate as a payment of the note; and that the plaintiff had sufficient title and ownership of the note to enable it to bring the action. Held, that the defendant could not avail himself of the rules of the clearing-house to which he was not a party in defence of the action. Manufacturers' Nat. Bank v. Thompson, 129 Mass 438.

On Member Banks.—B., as agent of a bank, sold goods pledged to the bank as collateral security for the payment of his promissory note, and wrongfully deposited the money received therefrom to his own account in the bank; and against the balance thus produced he drew a check on the bank, which was paid by that bank to another bank through the clearing-house, of which both banks were members. The president of the bank on which the check was drawn, suspecting that B. was financially embarrassed, discovered that no payment had been made by B. on account of the goods entrusted to him for sale, and looking at the condition of B.'s bank account, directed the return of the check to the bank to which it had been paid after one o'clock of the day of such payment. The rules of the clearing-house provided that whenever checks which were not good should be sent through the clearing-house, the banks receiving them should return them to the senders as soon as it should be found that they were not good, "and in no case shall they be retained after one o'clock." Held, that the check was paid under such a mistake of fact that the bank paying it could recover the amount from the bank to which it was paid, if the latter had not changed its position between one o'clock and the return of the check. If a bank is entitled to maintain an action to recover back the amount of a check paid by mistake to another bank through the clearing-house, the fact that the latter bank has credited the amount to the account of the customer depositing it does not render the depositor instead of such bank liable to the action. Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Nat. Bank of the Commonwealth, 139 Mass. 513.

In Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Nat. Eagle Bank, the rules of the clearing house fixed a time before noon for making exchanges at the clearing-house, and a time between noon and one o'clock for paying balances there. The practice under the rules was for the exchanges and payments to be made according to tickets accompanying vouchers presented for exchange, and not from an examination of the vouchers in detail. And by further rules it was provided that errors in the exchanges should be adjusted directly between the banks; and that whenever checks which were not good should be sent through the clearing-house, the banks receiving them should return them to the senders as soon as it should be found that they were not good, "and in no case shall they be retained after one o'clock." Held, that the payment of a check through the clearing-house was provisional until one o'clock, to become complete only if the check was retained after that hour; and that if by any mistake of fact a check so paid, but not good, was retained until after one o'clock, the payment of it was to be treated as a payment made under a mistake of fact to the same extent and subject to the same right of reclamation as if it had been made without the intervention of the clearing house. 101 Mass. 281; Nat. Bank of North America v. Bangs, 106 Mass. 441.

But a stricter rule was laid down by the United States Circuit Court in Illinois. C. deposited certain collaterals with P. K. & Co., bankers and members of the Chicago Clearing House, with the understanding that he should have a right to draw checks on them to within ten per cent of the value of the securities. On August 5, 1881, C. drew his check for $4000, which was deposited with the defendant bank, also a member of the clearing-house, on the morning of August 6th. Under the rules of the clearing-house, each member was required to pay its balances to the clearing-house by twelve o'clock, and any check which was found not to be good when returned from the clearing-house to the bank against which it was drawn was to be returned to the bank which collected it through the clearing-house, by half-past one o'clock of the same day. When C.'s check came from the clearing-house into P. K. & Co.'s bank, his account was examined, and the collaterals deemed sufficient to pay that check and others drawn on them by him, and they were handed over to the book-keeper, to be charged into his account. At forty-two minutes past one, P. K. & Co. heard that C. had failed, when a second examination was had, and it was found that a mistake had been made, whereupon the check was sent to defendant bank and payment demanded at fifteen minutes before two o'clock, and refused. P. K. & Co. brought suit against defendant to recover the amount of the check as money paid under a mistake. Held, that they could not recover.

In Fernandez v. Glynn, 1 Camp. 426 n., Lord Ellenborough held that a usage among the banks in the clearing-house at London to return checks at any time before five o'clock even if they had been cancelled, provided the words "cancelled by mistake" was noted upon them, was binding, and amounted to a refusal to pay, though, had it been a bill sent for acceptance and accepted, no change of circumstances could have altered that fact.

Liability of a Bank Acting as a Clearing-house.—Defendant had a department for the general clearance of contracts between its customers for the purchase and sale of gold, known as the "clearing-house." Clearances were made each day by means of statements furnished by dealers to defendant of purchases and sales made by them, defendant acting simply as mutual agent for the parties. On a day when many members of the clearing-house had failed to perform their contracts, and when there was great confusion in regard to them, O. & Co., plaintiff's assignor, presented two separate statements, one in the morning and one in the afternoon. In the first was an item of a transaction between O. & Co. and a firm which failed on the morning of that day. It was not usual to present more than one statement during the same day. When O. & Co. called upon defendant for the balances shown to be due that firm by the statements, they were advised by its president that, owing to the confusion in business, he could not tell how the statements stood, and that the bank would only pay approximate balances, reserving a margin to secure defendant against failures. Defendant accordingly paid $30,000 on the second statement, leaving $10,000 unpaid thereon, and paid nothing on the first. In an action to recover the balances shown by the statements, held, that to entitle plaintiff to recover, it was necessary for it to show a clearance by defendant of the statements, and that a balance had been struck in favor of O. & Co., which made out a demand in the nature of an account stated; that the statements were to be taken and considered together as but one statement; but that, if considered separately, there was no such clearance of either as bound defendant, and that plaintiff was not entitled to recover. Nat. City Bank v. N. Y. Gold Exchange Bank, 101 N. Y. 595.

Presentment through Clearing-house a Legal Presentment in England.—If a bill of exchange is accepted, "payable at Mess. A. B. & Co.," who are bankers in the city of London, a presentment of the bill for payment to their clerks at the clearing house is sufficient. Reynolds v. Chetel, 2 Camp. 596.

Clearing-house Due-bill.—A clearing-house due-bill is not a mere certificate of deposit creating a contract of bailment, but is as negotiable an instrument as a check payable to bearer, or as a promissory note payable to order or bearer; is absolutely unfettered by any special condition or stipulation; is also "simple" in terms, "certain" in amount, and manner of payment "unconditional," and subject to no "contingency." When

CLERICAL. See note 1.

CLERK. See MASTER AND SERVANT.

CLIENT. See ATTORNEY AND CLIENT, Vol. I. p. 942.

CLOTHES. See note 2.

such a due-bill has been given to the bank and through it to the other banks, said bank is entitled to require from the owner of the due-bill, by whom it has been lost, a good and sufficient indemnity bond before payment of said due-bill. Dutton v. Merchants' Nat. Bank, 16 Phila. 94; Grant's Law of Banking; Morse's Banks and Banking; Bolles' Banks and their Depositors.

1. Clerical Error.—Where a judgment in a suit against executors was rendered de bonis propriis, it was allowed to be amended to de bonis testatoris, after a writ of error had been sued out and decided that such an error so corrected cannot afterwards prevail in an appellate court. Speed's Exrs. v. Hana, 1 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 16.

The erroneous teste of a fi. fa. by a clerk, though executed, is amendable. Baker v. Smith, 4 Yeates (Pa.), 185; McCormick v. Meason, 1 S. & R. (Pa.) 97.

Where, in the fi. fa. or vend. ex. under which land was condemned and sold to plaintiff, said plaintiff was named as executrix of William McDowell instead of William Dowell, it is only clerical error which would be amended at any time. Cluggage v. Duncan, 1 S. & R. (Pa.) 109.

An omission in a levari facias of the command to levy the debt, is a clerical mistake, and may be amended after error brought by the lower court, or if it will not, by the upper. Peddle v. Hollinshead, 9 S. & R. (Pa.) 277.

Where blanks were left in a habeas corpus by the inadvertency of the clerk, and there was a precept to amend by, amendments were allowed. Benner v. Frey, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 366; Com. v. Parker, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 550.

While clerical errors may be amended in a criminal as well as a civil case, the finding by a jury that defendant was guilty of writing and publishing "a bill of scandal," where the indictment was for writing and publishing a libel, was reversed because defendant was not found guilty of the offence charged in the indictment. Sharff v. Commonwealth, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 514.

The fact of whether an entry was made before a certain date, the record being defective in having no date, is to be decided by the jury. The party will not be injured by the omission of the clerk, provided the entry were made in time. Jack v. Eales, 3 Binn. (Pa.) 101.

2. In Will.—A bequest of all "my linen and clothes" was held to pass body linen only. Hunt v. Hart, 3 Brown's Ch. 311.

"When a person is found making her will (although it is true she does not appoint executors), and the only bequest she makes is a gift of her 'personal property, consisting of money and clothes,' the strong presumption is that she did not intend only to do that which she might have effectually done by giving her 'money and clothes' simply. It appears to me there is no falso demonstratio here, there is simply an imperfect enumeration. The testatrix was a markswoman, and not very cognizant of the force of particular expressions." Held, that the whole of the property passed. Dean v. Gibson, L. R. 3 Eq. Cas. 713.

Ready-made Clothing.—On a note made payable in ready-made clothing, the clothing may be called for in parcels, but the payee has no right to call for a garment made for a customer at a stipulated price. There must be a demand and refusal before action can be brought. Vance v. Bloomer, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 196.

Taking Clothes from Dead Body.—The taking of articles of dress from the body of a dead person, animus furandi, is a felony, as they vested in and were the property of some one, and consequently words charging such an offence would be actionable. Worson v. Sayward, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 402.

Larceny of Wife's Clothes.—Coleridge, J., charging a jury, said: "I think that if she (the wife) elopes with an adulterer, who takes her clothes with them, it is larceny to steal her clothes, which are her husband's property, just as much as it would be a larceny to steal her husband's wearing apparel, or anything else that was his property." Reg. v. Tollett Car & M. 112. Contra, Reg. v. Fitch, Dears. & B. 187.

Prosecutor gave prisoner his waistcoat to take to his washerwoman. Prisoner delivered and received it back as his own. The jury having found that he had no animus furandi when he took it, declared him not guilty. Erskine, J., having charged that his getting back the waistcoat from the washerwoman was so lar-

D ON TITLES. See BILL TO REMOVE CLOUDS FROM Vol. II. p. 298.

S. See SOCIETIES.

See ABBREVIATIONS, Vol. I. p. 15.<sup>1</sup>

H. See CARRIAGE; CART.<sup>2</sup>

—A mineral; any substance composed of the ingredients of which coal is composed, and used for fuel, in commercial usage. The common understanding may be known as coal.<sup>3</sup>

He gave it to her as his own. Evans, Car. & M. 632.

Where a contract was entered into under a firm name of "I. M. & Co.," having in fact no partner in the city of Philadelphia, it was held that the contract was not void under the New York statute which forbids the use of the words "& Co.," when it represents an actual partner, in an action brought in New York by said Stoddart, governed by the lex loci contractus. Stoddart v. Key, 62 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 137.

There is an exemption from toll was granted by statute of certain vehicles, but not from stage-coach, stage-wagon, or stage-carriage conveying passengers or goods for pay, it was held that a stage-wagon employed in carrying goods from a canal wharf to persons in the neighborhood and from such persons to a company, was not a stage-wagon and therefore not excluded from the tolling clause. The word "stage" was held to mean the idea of travelling to and from places. Queen v. Ruscoe, 8 Ad. 7.

On Platform of Railway Coaches. Negligence to attempt passing from one coach to another on a railroad train as to prevent recovery of administrator on an insurance policy including indemnity to an assured who died in consequence of negligence. Sawtelle v. Railroad Assur. Co., 15 Blatchf. (U. S.) 6.

RECORDING, Vol. I. p. 107.

Insurance Policy.—It is proper to call a witness who is acquainted with the composition of "patent fuel" whether it is embraced under the word "coal" in a policy of insurance, if he did not deal in coal or patent fuel as a merchant or an underwriter. A commercial usage that it was common to the parties at the time the contract was made, and it must be shown that the character of the fuel had been so known either by other ingredients than coal, or by the process to which it had been subjected, that the general term coal, according to the common understanding of that name, would not apply to it. Howard v. Great West Ins. Co., 109 Mass. 384.

Patent fuel, composed of coal-dust, mixed with three per cent pitch and lime, is not liable to duties imposed on "coals" imported into the port of London, notwithstanding there is no purpose to which ordinary pit coal can be applied to which coal dust, without the admixture of pitch and lime, could not also be applied. London v. Parkinson, 10 C. B. (70 E. C. L. R.) 227.

Coal Privileges.—A common practice prevails among the owners of coal lands to grant what is called "coal privileges;" that is, to grant the right of mining and taking out all the coal lying under a certain piece of ground, or a given number of acres, either at a specified rate per bushel, or so much by the acre. Peterson v. Kler, 2 Pittsb. (Pa.) 109.

Refined Coal or Earth Oils in Policy.—Insured made application for insurance, and the agent inspected the premises, was informed and knew that kerosene oil was used for lighting. The policy which the agent gave to insured contained the condition that if refined coal or earth oil was used or stored without written consent the policy was void. Held, that kerosene, in a commercial sense, was a refined coal or earth oil, and that it could not be supposed without imputing bad faith to defendant that the use of kerosene for lighting was intended to be prohibited, as it would have rendered the policy void from the beginning, and also that defendant waived the condition requiring consent in writing, and was estopped from setting up a forfeiture for breach thereof. Bennett v. N. Brit. & Merc. Ins. Co., 81 N. Y. 293; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 301.

Where an inclosure act provided that nothing therein was to interfere with the rights of the lord of the manor as to the mines, minerals, and quarries, and gave him power to make or grant wagon roads

COAST.—That part of the land bordered by the sea. The term "coasting trade" is applied to commercial intercourse carried on by means of navigable rivers as well as the sea.<sup>1</sup> for "leading, carrying, and conveying the coals and the produce of any other mines and minerals from or under any other lands and grounds whatsoever," it was held that he might haul coke on a railroad constructed by him under the power given, and that the produce of any other mines and minerals meant the produce of mines and minerals before mentioned, and not of those other than coals. Bowes v. Baron Ravensworth, 15 C. B. 512, 80 E. C. L. R.

Coal Mines.—The express mention in a statute of coal-mines is a virtual exclusion of all other mines, and consequently all other mines, even though operated in the same manner as coal-mines, are not ratable to the relief of the poor under st. 43 Eliz. c. 2. Rex v. Sedgely, 2 B. & Ad. 65.

Coals Worked Out.—Where a lease was made of a colliery, by which the owners were to have a certain quantity of coals at the mouth of the pit, and the lessees, on suit being brought for non-fulfilment of covenant, filed their plea that the coals were worked out, and it appeared that there was some coal left in the pit, but it would cost more than it was worth to work it, the court held the covenant absolute, and the plea to be no answer. 7 B. & S. 243.

Workable Coal Seam.—B licensed A to dig fire-clay under his (B's) lands for 21 years. He demised to C subsequently all coal mines and seams, and all iron-stone or fire-clay found in connection with such coal-seams "as are workable as coal-seams" on the same lands. A expended considerable money on a pit to get at the fire-clay connected with a certain coal-seam. B gave notice that he intended to work said seam, and C filed his bill to restrain him. Held, that the evidence having shown that said coal-seam was workable at a profit when both the coal and the fire-clay were taken into account, the said seam was comprised in C's lease; that A's license was not exclusive; that C had first possession of the seam, and A could not restrain him; and that no knowledge could be imputed to the lessor of the extent of A's business, or that he would require all the fire-clay in the land during his term. Carr v. Benson, L. R. 3 Ch. App. 524.

1. Coasting Trade.—The terms "coasting trade" mean "commercial intercourse carried on between different districts in different States, between different districts in the same State, and between different places in the same district, on the sea-coast, or on a navigable river." The act of legislature of New York, granting to Livingston and Fulton the exclusive navigation of all the waters within its jurisdiction, with boats moved by fire or steam, for a term of years, is repugnant to that clause of the constitution of the United States which authorizes Congress to regulate commerce, so far as that act forbids vessels licensed, according to law, for carrying on the coasting trade, from navigating those waters by means of fire or steam. North River Steamboat Co. v. Livingston, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 713.

The phrase "coasting trade" cannot be applied to ferrying across a river, and Congress has no authority to require a license to carry on a ferry over a river at a place entirely within the limits of the State. U. S. v. Morrison, 1 Newb. 24.

Vessels trading between England and Guernsey and Jersey have been decided not to be coasting vessels. Shepherd v. Hills, 11 Exch. 55. Held, that an act for the more effectual regulation of pilots and pilotage of ships and vessels on the coast of England extended to the river Thames. Bennett v. Morda, Holt N. P. 359.

Atlantic Coast in Insurance Policy.—In the printed part of the policy the assured warranted that it would not use (among other places) ports and places in Texas, except Galveston, nor foreign ports and places in the Gulf of Mexico. By a written memorandum on the margin the vessel was to be employed in the coasting trade on the United States Atlantic coast, and was permitted to use gulf ports not west of New Orleans. The vessel was lost in the gulf, west of New Orleans, not far from Morgan City, Louisiana, which is west of New Orleans, while on her voyage to that place from Maine. The assured could not recover, the meaning of the policy excluding the Gulf of Mexico, and the permission to use the gulf ports not west of New Orleans not extending the coasting trade through the gulf. New Haven Steam Saw-mill Co. v. Security Ins. Co., 7 Fed. Rep. 847.

Flying Coastwise.—The terms "plying coastwise" and "coasting trade" indicate vessels engaged in the domestic

C.O.D. (See also ABBREVIATIONS, Vol. I. p. 15.)—Collect on delivery. Where goods are shipped, marked "C.O.D.," the contract of the common carrier is not only to safely carry and deliver the goods to the consignee, but also to "collect on delivery," and return to the consignor, the charges, price, or value due the consignor on the goods; and the consignor may sue on such contract where neither the goods nor the charges thereon are returned to him.<sup>1</sup> trade, or plying between port and port in the United States, as contradistinguished from those vessels engaged in the foreign trade, or plying between a port of the United States and a port of a foreign country. Blackwell v. Walker, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 557; Gibbons v. Ogden, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 1. Accordingly, vessels plying between San Francisco and Sacramento, and San Francisco and Stockton, are liable to the payment of harbor-dues to the city and county of San Francisco. San Francisco v. Cal. Steam Nav. Co., 10 Cal. 504.

The jurisdiction of district courts of the United States, ascertained by act of Congress of 1794, extends a marine league from the coasts or shores, extending to low-water mark. Shoals covered with water are not part of the coast or shore. Soult v. L'Africaine, Bee, 204.

"It would not be unreasonable to assume for domestic purposes connected with our safety and welfare the control of the waters on our coasts, though included within lines stretching from quite distant headlands. . . . It is certain that our government would be disposed to view with some uneasiness and sensibility, in the case of war between other maritime powers, the use of waters of our coasts far beyond the reach of cannon-shot, as cruising ground for belligerent purposes. 1 Kent's Commentaries, 29-31.

See INTERNATIONAL LAW.

1. United States Express Co. v. Keefer, 59 Ind. 264; American Merchants' Union Express Co. v. Schier, 55 Ill. 140; State v. Intoxicating Liquors, 73 Me. 278; Collender v. Dinsmore, 55 N. Y. 206; American Express Co. v. Lesem, 39 Ill. 312; Wagner v. Hallack, 3 Colo. 184.

Receipt.—So where the carrier's agent gives a receipt in which these letters, C.O.D., are used, the company is bound by the contract. Am. Ex. Co. v. Lesem, 39 Ill. 312.

Refusal of Goods by Consignee.—On refusal of the consignee to receive the goods, and the storing of the same by the carrier pending instructions from consignor, the liability of the carrier is that of warehouseman only. Gibson v. Am. Merchants' Un. Exp. Co., 1 Hun (N. Y.), 387; Weed v. Barney, 45 N. Y. 344.

Connecting Lines.—Where goods are shipped C.O.D., and there are intermediate carriers, this direction, C.O.D., means to collect of the ultimate consignee, and intermediate carriers are not called upon to advance the amount on their receipt of the goods. But where packages were marked "C.O.D. $375, From Turner's Express, Boston, Mass.," and receipt by defendant, the first or intermediate carrier, read: "Rec'd of Phelan & Collender [describing goods], marked

A. King.

Clifton House.

"C.O.D. $375, Windsor, N. S.
"From Turner's Express, Boston, Mass."

it was held that the contract must be read: "Collect on delivery $375 from Turner's Express, Boston;" and that evidence could not be given to show a custom under which a different meaning should be given, since the letters C.O.D. had come to have a well understood meaning in the community. Collender v. Dinsmore, 55 N. Y. 206.

Explaining Meaning.—Evidence may be given to show what the meaning of C.O.D. is; but they being letters familiar and ordinary, no other than the usual meaning can be given them, neither by proof of custom, previous dealing, nor otherwise. Am. Exp. Co. v. Leesen, 39 Ill. 312; Collender v. Dinsmore, 55 N. Y. 206.

Previous Dealings.—Where goods are sent C.O.D., it is not competent for the company to prove by parol that goods which had on prior occasions been sent by the same consignor to the same consignee, and the receipt given therefor using the same letters, were delivered to the consignee without payment being first required, upon an understanding to that effect between him and the consignor, as such an arrangement in regard to prior transactions did not preclude the company from contracting not to deliver the goods until the money was paid, and

CODE—CODIFICATION.—A general collection or compilation of laws by public authority. The word is used frequently in America to signify a concise, comprehensive, systematic re-enactment of the law, deduced from both its principal sources, the pre-existing statutes, and the adjudications of courts, as distinguished from compilations of statute law only.<sup>1</sup> Codes, such as here described, have been adopted and are now in use in many of the States. They are for the most part modelled upon that of New York State.

such proof would change the legal import and effect of the written contract, which cannot be done by parol. Am. Express Co. v. Lesem, 39 Ill. 312.

Vendor and Vendee—Title.—In State v. Intoxicating Liquors, 73 Maine, 278, liquors sent into the State of Maine were seized by the State government before delivery by the express company to the buyer. Afterwards it was ascertained that they were not liable to confiscation. They had been shipped C.O.D., and were claimed by the buyer, and by no one else. The court, Peters, J., said: "The title passed to the vendee when the bargain was struck. Any loss of the property by accident would have been his loss. The vendor had a lien on the goods for his price. The vendor could sue for the price, and the vendee, upon a tender of the price, could sue for the property. 2 Kent's Com. 492; Merrill v. Parker, 24 Maine, 89; Wing v. Clark, 24 Maine, 366; Chase v. Willard, 57 Maine, 157." The seller not appearing and making claim, the goods were ordered to be given up to the buyer, who had a greater right to them than had the State.

Transportation Charges.—C.O.D. does not concern these. A. M. U. Express Co. v. Schier, 55 Ill. 140; Am. Express Co. v. Lesem, 39 Ill. 312.

Judicial Notice.—In 1873, 13 Collender v. Dinsmore, 55 N. Y. 205, Allen, J., said: "The letters 'C.O.D.', followed by an amount in dollars, have come to be very well understood in the community and by the public, but perhaps could not, without the aid of extrinsic evidence, be read and interpreted by the courts; that is, their meaning may not be considered as judicially settled, or so well understood that judicial notice can be taken of the purpose for which those letters were used. . . . It was certainly competent to explain them, and thus remove all ambiguity by parol evidence."

But not so as to give them a different meaning than their popular one. In that case the explanatory evidence was given at the trial, so that the remarks just quoted are not a square authority on the question whether in the absence of such evidence the court will notice judicially the meaning of the letters.

In State v. Intoxicating Liquors, 73 Maine, 278, decided in 1882, Peters, J., said: "These initials have acquired a fixed and determinate meaning, which courts and juries may recognize from their general information. . . . What is notorious needs no proof."

In U. S. Exp. Co. v. Keefer, 59 Ind. 263 (1877), it was considered that the letters "have acquired such a fixed and determinate meaning that courts and juries, from their general information, will readily understand what is meant thereby, when they are used as the appellees have used them [a use in no sense peculiar] in their complaint. If the complaint were defective, for the want of an averment of the meaning of those letters, the defect would be one which could be reached by a motion to make more specific, and which would certainly be cured by the verdict. A motion in arrest of judgment would not reach such a defect in the complaint, if it were conceded to be defective in this particular."

1. Revision.—The general rule is, that when any statute is revised, or when one statute is framed from another, some parts being omitted, the parts omitted are to be considered as annulled. For it must be presumed that the legislature has declared its entire will. Sedg. on Stat. p. 429; M. & O. Railroad v. Weiner, 49 Miss. 725. See Coode's Treatise on Legislative Expression (Lond. 1845), reprinted in Brightly's Purdon's Penna. Digest; in England, Gael's Legal Composition, Lond. 1840.

CODICILS. (See also WILLS.)

Definition and Origin, 291.Construction of Will and Codicil, 292.Revocation of Will by Codicil, 296.Presumptive Revocation of Codicil byDestruction of Will, 299.Republication and Confirmation of Will by Codicil, 301.

1. Definition and Origin.—The term "codicil" in the sense in which it is now universally used in the English and American law, may be defined to be some addition to or qualification of one's last will and testament. The term is derived from the Latin codicillus, a diminutive of codex, and literally imports a little code or writing—a little will or testament.<sup>1</sup> It may add to or subtract from, alter, explain, confirm, revive, or republish any will with which it can be incorporated. There may be many codicils, but there can be but one will.<sup>2</sup> All the codicils form a part of the will, and must be ex-

1. 1 Redfield on Wills (4th Ed.), 287; 1 Bouv. Dict. (15th Ed.) 328.

In the Roman civil law codicil was defined as an act which contains dispositions of property in prospect of death without the institution of an heir or executor. 1 Redfield, 287; 2 Domat, by Strahan, 485, pt. 2, book 4, sec. 1, art. 1; Inst. § 2, 1, 2, tit. Codicillo. The early English writers define the term much in the same way. 2 Swinburne, pt. 1, sec. 5, pl. 2.

Godolphin defines it to be "the just sentence of our will touching that which we would have done after our death without the appointment of an executor." Godolphin, pt. 1, c. 16.

By the Roman civil law, and a similar rule obtained in the canon law and in the early English law, it was considered that no one could make a valid will or testament unless he appointed an executor, as that was of the essence of the act. This was attended with great formality and solemnity, in the presence of seven Roman citizens as witnesses. Hence a codicil was termed an "unsolemn testament." Swinburne, pt. 1, sec. 5, pl. 4; Godolph., pt. 1, ch. 1, § 2; pt. 1, ch. 6, § 2.

Woodward v. Lord Darcy, Plowd. 185, where it was said by the judges that without an executor a "will is null and void," which has not been regarded as law in England for some centuries.

By the civil law there were two kinds of codicils: one where no testament existed, and which embraced the disposition of property only, without creating any such trusts and confidences as it is common to institute in formal testaments, and which in fact more nearly resembled what we now call a donatio mortis causa or nuncupative will than anything else in force among us, except that they were in writing. The other form of codicil by the civil law was where a prior testament did exist, the codicil having relation to the testament and forming part of it, and to be construed in connection with it, much in the same way codicils are in the present day. 1 Redfield (4th Ed.), 288, citing 2 Strahan's Domat, 487, pt. 2, book 4, tit. 1, sec. 1, art. 5; Inst. 1, 16, D. de jure codic.

Codicils owe their origin to the following circumstances: Lucius Lentulus dying in Africa left codicils, confirmed by anticipation in a will of former date, and in these codicils requested the Emperor Augustus, by way of fidei commissum or trust, to do something therein expressed. The emperor carried this will into effect, and the daughter of Lentulus paid legacies which she would not otherwise have been legally bound to pay. Other persons made similar fidei commissa, and then the emperor, by the advice of learned men, sanctioned the making of codicils, and thus they became clothed with legal authority. Inst. 225; Bouv. L. Dict. tit. Codicil.

The form of devising by codicil is abolished in Louisiana. Code, 1563. And whether the disposition of the property be made by testament under this title or under that of institution of heir, of legacy, codicil, donatio mortis causa, or under any other name indicating the last will, provided it be clothed with the forms required for the validity of a testament, it is, as far as form is concerned, to be considered a testament. Code, 1563; Brown Civil Law, 292; Domat. Lois Civ. liv. 4, t. 1, § 1; Leçons Élément du Dr. Civ. Rom. tit. 25; Bouv. L. Dict. tit. 25.

2. Jarman on Wills (5th Ed.), 27 n.; Williams on Executors (6th Am. Ed.), 9; ecuted with the same formalities.<sup>1</sup>

2. Construction of Will and Codicil.—A codicil is part of the will to which it is attached or refers, and it and the original will must be taken and construed as one testament.<sup>2</sup> The annexation need

4 Kent Com. 531; Metcalf, J., in Tilden v. Tilden, 13 Gray (Mass.), 103, 108; Johns Hopkins University v. Pinckney, 55 Md. 365.

Although in a codicil regularly executors may not be instituted or primarily appointed, yet executors may be substituted or added by a codicil. Godolph. pt. 1, c. 1, sec. 3; Swinb. pt. 15, pl. 5.

This rule has been carried to the extent of enabling two persons to prove a will and codicil, one of whom was named as sole executor in the will, and the other as sole executor in the codicil. Mullin, P. J., in Wetmore v. Parker, 7 Lans. (N. Y.) 121, 129.

1. 4 Kent Com. 531; Tilden v. Tilden, 13 Gray (Mass.), 103.

If a codicil be imperfectly executed, it is said that it is of no force as a part of the will; and acquires no additional validity by being admitted to probate, and recorded by the surrogate as a part of the will, he having no authority to act upon such a case. If the proceeding were in solemn form, with due notice to all parties to appear and contest the probate, it may be questionable how far parties can go behind the decree of the court. Burhans v. Haswell, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 424. But where a testator provided by his will for the emancipation of slaves, and his will was sufficient for that purpose, and by a codicil changed the terms of emancipation by reducing the amount to be paid by the slaves, it was held that the codicil affected only the personalty of his estate, and was valid, although signed by one witness only, though two witnesses were necessary to emancipate slaves. Orchard v. David, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 376.

Unattested Codicil.—A codicil signed, and containing an unsigned attestation clause in the handwriting of the testator, is incomplete and invalid. Power v. Davis, 3 McArthur (D. C.), 153.

It has been held, however, that a codicil in the handwriting of the testator, found with his will, reciting the changes and alterations he intended to make in it as to his personal estate, was a good and valid testamentary disposition of such estate, though not signed by him nor attested by witnesses. Brown v. Tilden, 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 371.

2. A strong illustration of this principle may be found in the case of Sherer v.

Bishop, 4 Bro. C. C. 55, where the testator gave the residue of his personal estate among such of his relations only as were mentioned in that his last will. He afterwards made a codicil which he directed to be taken as part of his will, and a second by which he gave legacies to two of his relations, but gave no such direction; and it was held by Lord Commissioner Eyre (dubitantibus Ashurst and Wilson, JJ.) that as every codicil was part of the testamentary disposition, though not part of the instrument, the relations named in the second codicil were entitled to a share in the residue. This decision has been considered as carrying the principle too far.

In Hall v. Severne, 9 Sim. 517, 518, the testator, by his will, gave pecuniary legacies to several persons, and directed his residue to be divided amongst his before-mentioned legatees, in proportion to their several legacies thereinbefore given. By a codicil, which he directed to be taken as a part of his will, he gave several pecuniary legacies to persons, some of whom were legatees under his will, and declared that the several legacies mentioned in the codicil were given to the therein-mentioned legatees in addition to what he had given to them, or any of them, by his will. It was held by Shadwell, V. C., that none of the legatees under the codicil were entitled to share in the residue in respect of their legacies under the codicil. Where a testator devised property to the children of B. in like manner, as they were entitled under the will of B., it was held that the testator referred to the will and codicils of B., as the whole together must be taken to be his will. Pigott v. Wilder, 26 Beav. 90.

In Fuller v. Hooper, 2 Ves. Sen. 242, and Supplement by Belt, 333, where the testator gave legacies to all her nephews and nieces, except those hereinafter named, and desired her executors to look upon all memoranda in her hand as parts of or a codicil to her will, and then bequeathed the residue to the children of her sisters; and by a codicil gave legacies to some other nephews and nieces, Lord Hardwicke held that the nephews mentioned in the subsequent part of the will, and not those mentioned in the codicil, were excluded from the first-mentioned legacies, because the testatrix meant to refer, not not be physical, provided the language of the codicil is sufficiently clear to identify the will referred to.<sup>1</sup> Where the testator refers to the codicil to his former wills, and provides that if he die within a certain period one of them shall go into effect, if otherwise, the codicil will belong to whichever will goes into operation of the will or testament, but to the particular instrument.

In a case where the residue was given to the executors by will, and a codicil directed that A. should also be executor, and that the will should take effect as if his name had been inserted therein as executor, the testator was held not entitled to a share of the residue. Hillersdon v. Grove, 21 Beav.

See also Early v. Benbow, 2 Coll. 481; Day v. Croft, 4 Beav. 561; Warwick v. Hawkins, 5 De G. & Sm 481; In the Trusts of Howard, L. R. 1 P. & D. 636; Die v. McDoual, 4 Ves. 610; Fahrney v. Alsinger, 65 Pa. St. 388; Brownell v. Wolf, 3 Mason (U. S.), 494; Lessee v. Esser v. Curry, 3 Wash. (C. C.) 481; Wells v. White, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 481; Van Cortland v. Kip, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 446; Negley v. Sard, 20 Ohio, 310; Wiley v. Tribber, 16 Beav. 510. Willon Executors (6th Am. Ed.), 9, and cases cited.

Where a testator copies and republishes his will and the several codicils, and in his attestation styles them "codicils," he does not thereby become part of the will, but they remain codicils and constitute separate instruments, and a bequest of the residue of his estate by the will, "to the legatees," will be confined to such legatees as are therein named, and to such legatees as are substituted by codicil for those named in the will, and will not extend to those to whom legacies are left by codicil. Alsop's App., 9 Pa. St. 374; Riley's App., 9 Pa. St. 374.

Van Cortland v. Kip, 7 Hill (N. Y.), 446. See also opinion of Lord Commissioner Eyre in Barnes v. Crowe, 1 Ves. 486; Van Kleeck v. Dutch Church, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 457; Snowhill v. Snowhill, 1 Zab. (N. J.) 447.

Harvey v. Chouteau, 14 Mo. 587; a. c., 12 Mo. Dec. 120. the testator made an olographic will in duplicate, sending one to A in St. Louis and one to B in Louisiana. He subsequently made a codicil in duplicate, taken down by a notary public, and duly witnessed and executed. In it he referred to the olographic will thus: "I have made an olographic will, which is made in duplicate, one of which has been placed in the hands of A of St. Louis, in the State of Missouri, and the other deposited in the hands of B of the parish of Jefferson, one of my executors appointed by said will." "If the codicil had been attached by a wafer to the original olographic copy sent to A., I presume that there would have been no room for doubt. A list of decisions for more than one hundred and thirty years sustains this point. What is the difference between this wafer annexation of a codicil, which may not mention the previous will otherwise than by reciting that 'this is my codicil to my last will,' and the case before us, where the fact of making his olographic will in duplicate, and the statement of the fact to whom he had sent the duplicates, appear on the face of the codicil? In this case the codicil, by the manner in which it refers to the original olographic will, affords a specimen of internal annexation morally as strong, if not stronger, than the physical annexation of wafer, wrapper, and tape."

3. A testator, by an instrument termed a codicil to his will, made distinct bequests and devises, and further referring to the former wills, the latter of which contained certain charitable bequests, provided that if he died within three calendar months of the execution of said latter will the former should go into effect; otherwise the latter should be his will. Testator died within three calendar months of the execution of the latter will. Held, that the former will took effect, and that the codicil was to be considered as part thereof. "The codicil did not fall with the latter will, and the legatees and devisees therein named were entitled to the benefits conferred upon them thereby. After the death of the testator the three writings were connected together, and all of them admitted to probate. As he died before the 1st of March, the writing of January 13th did not take effect as a will. Bradish's App., 74 Pa. St. 69. The question now is, Did the codicil become inoperative and fall with that writing, or did it become a supplement to the will of November 20th, 1871? Although a subsequent will without a revoking clause will repeal a prior will, yet it does not preclude a testator

In interpreting a will and codicil, the general rule is that the whole will takes effect so far as it is not inconsistent with the codicil, and the provisions of the latter are to be so construed, if it can fairly be done, as to make it harmonize with the body of the will.<sup>1</sup> It is the established rule not to disturb the dispositions of the will further than is absolutely necessary for the purpose of giving effect to the codicil.<sup>2</sup> by appropriate writing from reinstating the prior one. A codicil may revoke by implication the posterior of the wills, by expressly referring to and recognizing the prior one as the actually subsisting will of the testator. 1 Jarman, 189. Here the codicil does not stop with that implication. With both wills in his mind he refers to each distinctly, and in unmistakable language the testator declares, in a certain contingency, the earlier one to be his last will and testament. That contingency has occurred. When the testator executed the codicil he was uncertain which one of the former writings would take effect as his will. It depended on the contingency of his dying before the time specified. There was no intimation that it should not take effect in either case. The clear intent was that it should have full effect and attach itself to whichever writing became operative as a will. The codicil was to become part of that writing, and the two constitute the whole will. Any presumption that the codicil and the writing of January 13th were both executed at the same time is clearly rebutted by the reference in the codicil to the latter as a writing then existing." The dictum in Bradish's App., 74 Pa. St. 69, that the codicil was to be taken as a part of the later will, overruled. Bradish v. McClellan, 100 Pa. St. 607.

In New York this case arose: The decedent executed a will in June, 1861, and another will March 16, 1863; also a codicil March 28, 1863, which declared itself a codicil to a will bearing date June 21, 1861. The will of June, 1861, was found among the papers of his lawyer with the seal and signature cut out: the day of the month had never been filled up. The will of March 16, 1863, and codicil of March 28, 1863, were proved as duly executed. Held, that the codicil could not be attached to the will of March 16, 1863; it declared itself to be a codicil to the will of June 21, 1861. The testator, by the codicil, republished that will as his last will, thereby revoking the will of March 16, 1863. He did not thereby revive the will which he designated as that of June 21, 1861. The effect was to revoke and abrogate both wills, and the codicil could not stand alone as a testamentary disposition. Intestacy decreed. Pinckney's Will, 1 Tuck. (N. Y. Surr.) 436. See 2 R. S. 63, § 40, and post, § 5 n.

1. Robertson v. Powell, 2 H. & C. 762; Lease v. Knight, 11 L. T. N. S. 134.

2. Jarman on Wills (3d Eng. Ed.) [160]; Conover v. Hoffman, 1 Bosw. (N. Y.) 214; Tilden v. Tilden, 13 Grav. 108, 109; Holden v. Blaney, 119 Mass. 421; Wetmore v. Parker, 7 Lans. (N. Y.) 121, 127; Lovat v. Leeds, 2 Drew. & Sm. 62; Hinchcliffe v. Hinchcliffe, 2 Drew. & Sm. 96; Molyneux v. Rowe, 8 De G. M. & G. 368; Davis v. Bennett, 30 Beav. 226.

Even where the will names one person executor, and the codicil names another sole executor, it was held the provisions were not inconsistent, and that both persons named executors were entitled to probate of both papers. Greaves v. Price, 32 L. J. Prob. 113.

Where it is apparent that the equality of shares given to several sons by a will was intended to be preserved by a codicil, that construction should, if possible, be given to the codicil which will effectuate such intention. Wheeler v. Fellowes, 52 Conn. 238.

Two papers executed by a married woman, having a power of appointment, the first professing to dispose of all her property by deed or gift, and the second expressing a wish that the donee should pay certain bequests out of it, and which papers were afterwards spoken of together as her will, were admitted to probate as such. Webb in re, 3 Sw. & Tr. 482. See also Nickalls in re, 4 Sw. & Tr. 40; 34 L. J. Prob. 103; 13 W. R. 1047. Compare also Birks v. Birks, 13 L. T. N. S. 193.

The principle is well illustrated by the recent case of Reichard's App., 8 Atl. Rep. 382. Subject to previous paragraphs of his will, John Reichard by "Item D, paragraph 8," devised and bequeathed to John Reichard, Jr., and other trustees and executors, one sixth of his property "in trust, . . . to receive the annual income or profit arising therefrom, and to pay over the same . . . to my daughter

An erroneous recital in a codicil that a gift had been made in particular form does not extend such bequest beyond its legitimate operation according to the terms of the will.<sup>1</sup> ma, for and during her natural life, from and after the death of my said sister, in trust to pay said net annual income . . . to the child or children of said daughter, who shall be living at the time of her death, and the issue of said child or children . . . until they shall severally . . . attain the age of twenty-one years; and upon the first to pay over, convey and deliver to said child or children . . . as they respectively attain the age of twenty-one years, his . . . respective share of the said income. By a codicil, "Item D, paragraph 8, wherein by my will I have appointed my executors to collect and receive the annual income and profit arising from the one-sixth part of my estate, and pay over the same to my daughter during her natural life, is hereby revoked, and instead thereof my said daughter, and instead thereof my said daughter's . . . are hereby directed to pay to my said daughter Helena, now married with J. H. Suyver, as soon as conveniently can after my death, the twelfth and last paragraph of my will is hereby revoked." Held, that the codicil revoked only the part of the will which referred to Helena's life estate, and that the one sixth should be held in trust, to pay the same to those entitled to it under the intestate laws, and after her death in trust for her children, as provided in the unrevoked part of the will. The testator having in his will given to A. B. the interest on $10,000 during her life, expressing the impulse which induced the bequest with unusual solemnity and force, afterwards made a codicil, which contained no clause expressing the revocation of this gift, but which did express terms revoke one bequest and another, giving in lieu of the first interest in all his realty. The will contained a clause which, if standing alone, might have been construed as disposing of all other personal property not coming to the testator, not otherwise disposed of by the preceding clauses of the will, and the same clause expressly confirmed the will in every respect. Held, that the legacy of A. B. was not revoked by the codicil. The will and codicil were to be construed together, and in ratifying his will in all other respects he meant to confirm all such provisions of the will as were not plainly revoked or altered by the codicil. It was not his purpose, as the appellants contend, to make an absolute disposition of his entire property by the codicil, thus leaving no part of the original testamentary paper operative, except the clause appointing the executors. This would be to give the codicil the effect of a new will out and out, and not as the testator meant it to be—merely an addition or supplement to his original will. Johns Hopkins University v. Pinckney, 55 Md. 365.

1. In re Smith, 2 Johns. & H. 594.

It seems to be well settled that a mere recital in a will or codicil of the fact of having made a particular legacy may create such legacy if there is nothing to which the description can refer in the will. Sir Wm. Grant in Smith v. Fitzgerald, 3 V. & B. 8.

But commonly it is of no force to alter what has been done. Re Arnold's Est., 33 Beav. 163, 171; McKenzie v. Bradbury, 35 Beav. 617.

But where the codicil provided that an annuity of £30 given in the will should be increased to an annuity of £50, the will having in fact given only a legacy of £30, it was held that the legatee should take the annuity. "The plain meaning of the words of the codicil is to say that the plaintiff was to have an annuity of £50. For some reason or other the testatrix wished to increase her bounty to that amount. The words as they stand would give A. B. an annuity of £50; and if so, it is for those who assert that there has been a mistake to point out what the mistake is, and how it is to be cured. The mistake lies in the words 'immediate annuity of;' but because the testatrix has misdescribed a legacy as an annuity, I cannot hold that by 'an annuity of £50' she meant a 'legacy of £50.' If she had said 'and I increase the £30 left by will to A. B. to an annuity of £50,' there could have been no difficulty. I must therefore strike out the erroneous words, and leave the codicil as it would stand without them. The result is that the plaintiff would take an annuity of £50." Ives v. Dodgson, L. R. 9 Eq. 401.

A disposition by codicil of "all my real and personal estate and effects" was held on the context not to include a fund of personal estate specifically disposed of by the will. In re Arrowsmith, 2 De Gex, F. & J. 474.

A codicil appended to declare the meaning of a particular clause of a will cannot be construed to pass other property than that embraced in such clause.<sup>1</sup> Upon the same principle it is an established rule of construction, that an additional legacy given by a codicil is attended with the same incidents and qualities as the original legacy, and that a devise upon condition that the devisee shall "comply with what is enjoined upon him in this will" must be construed, prima facie, to be upon condition that the devisee shall also comply with what may be enjoined upon him by any codicil.<sup>2</sup> Nevertheless it must be borne in mind that a codicil will stand even if inconsistent and repugnant to a clause in the will, and that in so far as it is inconsistent with the will it will operate as a revocation.<sup>3</sup>

3. Revocation of Will by Codicil.—A codicil revokes so much of the will as is inconsistent with it;<sup>4</sup> but as a general rule it will not be held to be inconsistent beyond the clear import of its language.<sup>5</sup> And where a devise is clear, it is incumbent upon those who contend that it is not to take effect by reason of a revocation in a codicil, to show that the intention to revoke is equally clear and free from doubt as the original intention to devise.<sup>6</sup> Indeed, it may

1. McCutchen v. Marshall, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 220.

2. Metcalf, J., in Tilden v. Tilden, 13 Gray (Mass.), 103, 108, citing 4 Dane Abr. 550; 4 Kent Com. (6th Ed.) 531; 1 Jarman on Wills, 160; 1 Roper on Legacies (2d Am. Ed.), 873-875; 2 Williams on Executors, 1403 et seq.; Doe v. Latham, Busbee L. 365.

3. Flood v. Howser, 1 Nott & M. 321; Bosley v. Wyatt, 14 How. (U. S.) 390.

4. Bosley v. Wyatt, 14 How. (U. S.) 390; Larrabee v. Larrabee, 28 Vt. 274.

Thus where the testator had devised his real estate to A, and subsequently by codicil said, "I acknowledge B to be my next of kin, and heir at law of all my real and personal property," it was held a revocation. Parker v. Nickson, 9 Jur. N. S. 451.

Where, however, a testator made a devise to A, of certain property, and also of the use of other property for the life of A., and then to his heirs in fee, held, that a codicil revoking that part of the will wherein any part of his estate was devised to A., and in lieu thereof bequeathing him the income thereof, applied only to that part of the will devising property to A. absolutely; and that that part of the will giving A. a life estate, with remainder to his heirs in fee, was not revoked. Homer v. Brown, 16 How. (U. S.) 354.

A testator directed all his real and personal property to be sold and converted into money by his executors, and one third thereof he gave to his wife. A codicil which reserved from sale a part of such real property until her death, and secured to her the use of it during her life, was held not to revoke by implication the bequest to her; and where a part of such personal property consists of stocks which were by the codicil to be reserved from sale, and the dividends to be paid over as they accrued "to the heirs" of the testator, it was held that such codicil did not revoke the bequest of the will. Collier v. Collier, 3 Ohio St. 369.

A legacy bequeathed to a granddaughter by a codicil in lieu of a devise in the will to the mother, who had since deceased, is a revocation of the original devise to the mother. Brownell v. De Wolf, 3 Mas. (C. C. Rep.) 486.

It should be observed that between a codicil and a subsequent will there is this difference of construction: a codicil is a republication and ratification.

5. 1 Redfield on Wills, 362 n.; 1 Jarman, 160, n. 2; Wetmore v. Parker, 52 N. Y. 461.

6. Doe d. Hearle v. Hicks, 8 Bing. 479; Cleoburey v. Beckett, 14 Beav. 587, per Romilly, M. R.; Williams v. Evans, 1 El. & Bl. 739. See also Patch v. Graves, 3 Drew. 348, 376; Robertson v. Powell, 2 H. & C. 762; Butler v. Greenwood, 22 Beav. 303; Norman v. Kynaston, 29 Beav. 96; s. c., 3 De G. F. & J. 29; Molyneux v. Rowe, 8 De G. M. & G. 368; Kellett v. Kellett, L. R. 3 H. L.

be stated generally as a canon of construction, that a clear gift cannot be cut down by any subsequent words, unless they show an equally clear intention.<sup>1</sup> But in applying the rule, it is sufficient that the subsequent words indicate the testator's intention to cut the gift down with reasonable certainty, and the rule does not mean that you are to institute a comparison between the clauses as to lucidity.<sup>2</sup> It may also be said to be an established principle, that an expressed intention to make an alteration in a will in one particular negatives by implication an intention to alter it in any other respect.<sup>3</sup> The codicil may revoke the provisions of the will 167; Williams v. Evans, 1 El. & Bl. 727; Evans v. Evans, 17 Sim. 86; 1 Jarman on Wills (3d Eng. Ed.), 168 et seq.; Ives v. Harris, 7 R. I. 413; Quincy v. Rogers, 9 Cush. 295, 296; In re Arrowsmith's Trusts, 2 De G. F. & J. 474; Lemage v. Goodban, L. R. 1 P. & D. 57; Wetmore v. Parker, 52 N. Y. 450; Pickering v. Langdon, 22 Maine, 430; Tilden v. Tilden, 13 Gray (Mass.), 108; 4 Kent. 531; Jenkins v. Maxwell, 7 Jones Law, 612; Conover v. Hoffman, 1 Bosw. 214; Boyd v. Latham, Busbee (Law), 365; Homer v. Shelton, 2 Met. (Mass.) 202; Nelson v. McGiffert, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 158; Bosley v. Bosley, 14 How. (U. S.) 390; Kane v. Astor, 5 Sandf. (N. Y.) 467; Brant v. Wilson, 8 Cowen (N. Y.), 56; Alt v. Gregory, 8 De G. M. & G. 221; Joiner v. Joiner, 2 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 68; Bradley v. Gibbs, 2 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 113; Read v. Manning, 30 Miss. 308; Larrabee v. Larrabee, 28 Vt. 274; Pillsworth v. Mosse, 14 Ir. Ch. 163; Collier v. Collier, 3 Ohio N. S. 369; Clarke v. Butler, 1 Mer. 304; Hill v. Walker, 4 Kay & J. 166; Kermode v. MacDonald, L. R. 3 Ch. App. 584; Robertson v. Powell, 9 L. T. N. S. 543.

1. Williams on Executors (6th Am. Ed.), 221.

A testator gave to his four sons, including J., "each an equal share of the balance of my estate;" and in a codicil directed his executors to pay J.'s share "unto my daughter-in-law M., the wife of my said son J., her heirs and assigns at the time distribution is made to my other heirs." Held, that the codicil revoked the bequest to J., and that M. took J.'s full share without liability for J.'s debts to the estate. "It is not a case of legal substitution whereby one person becomes substituted to the right of another by operation of law, but it is a case of change in the intention of the testator, whereby he suffered one person to drop out of his will and another to fall in. The very change of intention contradicts the idea of mere substitution. J. was left to stand where he stood before, a debtor to the estate, and M. was given the bequest in her own right, not his." Bartholomew's App. 75 Pa. St. 169.

Where a will gives the testator's entire estate to one for life, and a codicil provides legacies to others in absolute and unambiguous terms, the codicil changes the will to that extent, and the legacies are payable at the usual time, unaffected by the life estate. Beardsley v. Selectmen of Bridgeport, 3 Atl. Repr. (S. C. Conn.) 557. See also as to the use of words, Boyd v. Boyd, 2 Fed. Rep. 138.

Where a testator by his will divides his property among his six children, to five of whom he has made advancements differing largely in amount, and directs that the amounts advanced to each shall be considered as so much towards his or her share of his estate, and by a codicil executed a few days later provides that "all sums of money given to my children in my said will, and all sums paid to them by my executors under said will, are given to them, and are paid to them, for the benefit of their heirs respectively, and are not to be in any way liable for their debts, or taken by their respective creditors, if any, in any way or form," the codicil will not be construed as depriving the children of their ownership, or as establishing a trust for their heirs, but as annexing a condition to such ownership, to which no legal effect could be given. Potter v. Merrill (Mass.), 9 N. E. Repr. 572.

2. Williams on Executors (6th Am. Ed.), 220.

3. Quincy v. Rogers, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 296.

These principles are well illustrated in the leading case of Wetmore v. Parker, 52 N. Y. 461. The will of C., among other bequests, contained one to the U. F. Academy of $10,000, to be expended in the erection of a new building, etc., and one to the R. D. Church of $10,000, to be expended in the erection of a church edifice. The residuary clause of the will gave the residue of the estate to the sev-either by expressly declaring such to be the intention of the testator, or by making a new disposition of the estate different from that made by the will, but in the latter case the disposition to be effectual as a revocation must be valid.<sup>1</sup> A gift of the residue in eral legatees thereinbefore named, in proportion to the amounts of the specific bequests. In a codicil C. stated that she had advanced $3000 upon the legacy to the U. F. Academy, and therefore she revoked so much thereof. She also stated that it appearing probable that the purpose of the bequest to the R. D. Church would soon be accomplished, and having concluded to give at that time $3000, she therefore revoked the legacy to said church. "The question is whether it was the intention of the testatrix, by these revocations, to deprive the Dutch Church of all share in the residuary estate, and to restrict the Female Academy to the proportion of the residue represented by $7000 instead of $10,000. The primary object in construing wills is to ascertain and carry out the intention of the testator, and various rules have been adopted to accomplish this object. From the nature of the subject, these rules must be quite general, because no two wills can be found precisely alike in language and surrounding circumstances. It is a general rule, that a codicil will not operate as a revocation beyond the clear import of its language. 1 Redfield on Wills, 362, and note; 1 Jarman, 160, n. 2; 8 Cowen, 56. Another rule is that an expressed intention to make an alteration in a will in one particular, negatives by implication an intention to alter it in any other respect. 9 Cush. 296. It is always important to scrutinize with care the language employed not only in the particular parts, but in every part of the instrument, in order as far as practicable to ascertain the operation and intent of the mind using it. After a careful examination and considerable reflection, I have arrived at the conclusion that the two codicils do not operate to cut off or impair the right of the Academy or the Dutch Church to share in the residue under the seventh clause of the will. First as to the Female Academy. The two bequests are not dependent. The reference to the first, in the last, designates the legatee and the amount, but as legacies they are independent. They are for different purposes; one for particular, the other for general purposes. We are justified in inferring that the testatrix had two objects in view: one to aid in completing and furnishing the building, the other to contribute towards a fund for permanent support. The first bequest would necessarily be expended at once; the latter might and ordinarily would be permanently invested. By the terms of the will the Female Academy was designated as a residuary legatee for an amount made certain by mere arithmetical calculation, as effectually as if the name and amount were written out. This is confessedly the legal construction and effect of the will. Was it changed by the testatrix? I think not. She paid $3000 upon the specific legacy in her lifetime, and revoked so much of it in language carefully confined to that alone. If she had intended to affect the other bequest, we are to presume that she would have said so. Her will and codicils bear evidence of particularity of expression as to every testamentary arrangement, and within the rule referred to, the alteration of one bequest negatives an intent to alter the other. Suppose she had paid the whole ten thousand while she lived. Would it tend to show an intent that the other should not take effect? So far from it, it would evince a continued testamentary friendship. The act of payment and revocation are one, and must be construed together; the latter was made to perpetuate evidence of the former. The reasons for revocation apply only to the specific legacies, showing that the testatrix regarded them as independent. The right of the Dutch Church to the residuary legacy is substantially the same, and for the same reasons." Wetmore v. Parker, 52 N. Y. 461-463; Colt v. Colt, 32 Conn. 122. See also Kiver v. Oldfield, 4 De G. & J. 30.

1. Jones v. Jones, 2 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 387.

The testator may rely either upon his express declaration to effect the revocation, in which case the validity or invalidity of the subsequent disposition made by the codicil is immaterial, or he may rely upon the subsequent disposition itself to effect the revocation; and in the latter case, although the codicil profess an intention to make a disposition of the whole estate different from the will, if the disposition is only in part effectual, the revocation is merely pro tanto. Thus a codicil to a will "unqualified by revoking" a bequest given in the body of the will, and in addition containing a bequest, will operate as a revocation, although it cil revokes a gift of residue in the will.<sup>1</sup> But where there is a codicil of the residue of a particular fund only, and a subsequent codicil a general gift of residue, as the two are not necessarily inconsistent the latter will not revoke the former.

A power of sale in a will is not revoked by a different disposition made of the estate by codicil, unless there is some inconsistency between the exercise of the power and some part of the will.<sup>2</sup> A codicil which ineffectually intends to revive a prior will which the testator has destroyed, does not operate as a revocation of an intermediate will, if it is not inconsistent therewith and does not show any intention to revoke.<sup>4</sup>

Presumptive Revocation of Codicils by Destruction of Will.—The presumption is prima facie dependent upon the will; and where the will and the codicil to it are shown to have been in existence, and the will is destroyed, the burden of proof is upon the party setting up the codicil to show that it was the testator's intention to have the codicil operate separately from the will; otherwise, the presumption is that the destruction of the will was intended as a revocation.

The intention of the testator may be determined with reasonable certainty from the frame of the codicil. If it be entire and independent in itself alone, and especially where it contains an effectual disposition of all or most of the testator's estate, and was carefully preserved by the testator in a place where he must, and naturally have been aware of its existence, it will afford proof as to the bequest it contains. Congregation's App., 5 Atl. 1752.

On the other hand, a codicil which in its terms revoke a former will made in a manner wholly different from the will, only operates as a revocation of the will, notwithstanding that the codicil professes to dispose of the estate differently from the will. Hillson, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 56. See also Lee v. Larrabee, 28 Vt. 274; 48 Pa. St. 50.

As to partial revocation by codicil, see Hancock, 2 My. & C. 606; Cahnal, 4 De G. & S. 533; Reeds, 2 Dr. & Sm. 62; Philips, 7 Sim. 446; Murray v. D. & War. 143; Wells v. D. & War. 1020; Hillerson v. Grove, 18; Fry v. Fry, 9 Jur. 894; Powell, 2 Coll. 262; Sandford, 1 De G. & S. 67; Ives v. D. & C. 34; Daly v. Daly, 2 J. & M. 52; Boulcott v. Boulcott, 2 35; Alt v. Gregory, 2 Jur. N.

Wicke v. Douglass, 7 Cl. & Fin. 1. A codicil giving to a residuary legatee a certain sum of money will not revoke the residuary bequest to such legatee. Stultz v. Kiser, 2 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 538.

8. Inglefield v. Coghlan, 2 Coll. 247, Evans v. Evans, 17 Sim. 108.

On the other hand, a codicil which gives as a reason for bequeathing a legacy to the testator's grandson that he had disinherited him, the fact being that he had not disinherited him, but had given him a large legacy by the will, does not revoke the legacy in the will, but is itself rendered void by the mistake. Mordecai v. Boylan, 6 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 365.

8. Conover v. Hoffman, 1 Abb. N. Y. App. Dec. 429.

4. Williams on Executors (6th Am. Ed.), 220, and cases cited.

6. 1 Redfield on Wills, § 23 a, p. 11, citing Grimwood v. Cozens, 2 Sw. & Tr. 364; Dutton in re, 3 Sw. & Tr. 66.

But the rule of presumptive revocation of the codicil by the revocation of the will does not obtain under the English statute, 1 Vic. Ch. 26. Under that statute there must appear to have been an intention to revoke the particular instrument. Savage in re, L. R. 2 P. & D. 78. See also Black v. Jobling, 1 P. & D. 685.

very strong presumption of an intention to have it operate; but where these circumstances are wanting, or others indicating a contrary purpose exist, it may require different consideration, as where the dispositions of the codicil are so complicated with and dependent upon those of the will as to be incapable of a separate and independent existence.<sup>1</sup>

Where it appears from the manner of cancelling the will and not cancelling the codicil, or from extrinsic evidence, that the testator intended only to revoke the will and let the codicil remain in force, probate will be granted of that alone.<sup>2</sup> If the codicil is substantially independent of the will, it is not necessarily affected by its revocation.<sup>3</sup>

1. 1 Redfield on Wills (4th Ed.), 311.

Where the testator made provision for an illegitimate child and its mother by a codicil, which he declared should be taken as part of his will, such child being born after the making of the will, the will not being found at the decease of the testator, it was held that the codicil should be treated as unrevoked, there being nothing to show an intention to revoke it, and its provisions being in favor of those to whom the testator owed a moral duty, but one not recognized by the municipal law, and the provisions of the codicil having no dependence upon those of the will. Tagart v. Squire, 1 Curteis, 289; 1 Jarman, 131, and cases cited; 1 Redfield, 312.

It seems to be the general rule in the ecclesiastical courts to involve the codicils in the revocation of the will, unless a contrary intention can fairly be gathered, either from the structure of the codicils or from extrinsic evidence. Medlycott v. Assheton, 2 Add. 229; Coppin v. Dillon, 4 Hagg. 362; 1 Jarman, 131, and notes.

2. Harris in re, 3 Sw. & Tr. 485; 10 Jur. N. S. 684.

3. Ellice in re, 33 L. J. Prob. 27. See also Coulthard in re, 11 Jur. N. S. 184; and Goods of Grieg, L. R. 1 P. & D. 72.

A codicil depending upon the body of the will for explanation or execution cannot be established as an independent will when the will itself has been revoked. Youse v. Forman, 5 Bush (Ky.), 337; Pinckney's Will, 1 Tuck. (N. Y. Sur.) 436.

Revocation of Will by Destruction of Codicil.—Testator made his will, and sometime afterwards executed a codicil to the same, and deposited the codicil in the hands of the party in whose favor the codicil had been made. The testator afterwards married, and while visiting at the house of the party in whose favor the codicil was made called for it, remarking that "those papers were of no force now. I have somebody else to leave my property to." The codicil was produced, and the testator destroyed it by throwing it into the fire. The court held that the destruction of the codicil was limited merely to the revocation of the codicil, and that to cancel or revoke the will the cancellation or destruction must be directed against the whole will. "In the case before us it was physically impossible that the act of destruction in question—the burning of the codicil—could have been directed against the will, inasmuch as the will was not present, but in a different custody. And yet the court instructed the jury that if the testator intended at the time of destroying the codicil thereby to revoke the will, in that case the destruction of the codicil was a revocation of both the will and the codicil. If this be correct, it must be either because a codicil is so essential a part of a will that its revocation necessarily involves the revocation of the will (a ground too palpably wrong to require discussion, and not assumed by the appellee's counsel nor by the circuit court), or because the destruction of a codicil, without any the slightest destruction of the will, or any attempt to destroy it, or even an intent to destroy it, must have the effect of revoking the will if so intended by the testator. This last proposition, it seems to me, requires but little consideration after what has been already said. To place it in the strongest light for the appellees, let us suppose that the testator, at the time of burning the codicil, expressly declared that he did it with intent thereby to revoke the will. Could it have that effect? The will itself was in nowise cancelled or destroyed, but remained perfect and entire, indestructible and intangible by the act in question.

publication and Confirmation of Will by Codicil.—From the fact that the codicil is a part of the will to which it is attached or that the execution of the codicil per se operates as a republication of the will, and the two are to be regarded as but one instrument speaking from the date of the codicil.<sup>2</sup> A codicil attached to a particular will ipso facto has the effect to republish that particular will, and also to revoke all intervening wills between the date of that particular will and the date of the codicil, unless the language of the codicil indicates a different purpose.<sup>3</sup>

It is not obvious that, if revoked, it can be given effect by the sole efficacy of the testator's parol declaration, directly or indirectly, in violation of the statute. . . . The intention to revoke must concur with the act of revocation, but cannot go beyond it, and is limited by law to the act itself. It is not to confound the intent to do the physical act of cancellation or destruction with the intent to produce the legal effect of revocation. The intent to do the physical act with the act itself, it then becomes an act of revocation; and when the intent to revoke concurs with the act of revocation, it then becomes an act of revocation. When the concurrent physical act and intent to do the physical act only, we have merely a partial act of revocation, and as regards the testator designs to do no more, thus the question is presented, whether a partial act of revocation can be treated as a total revocation? a question answered by merely stating it."

Adm. v. Hobbs, 1 Robinson 100; 2 A. C. 39 Am. Dec. 263.
Adm. v. Cunningham, 39 Am. Dec. 263.
Mon. (Ky.) 390.

The effect of the cases is to give an effect to the codicil per se, and independent of any intention, so as to bind the will to the date of the making of the will speak of that date, in which case it will repel that which the codicil draws the will down to its own date, in the very terms of the will and makes it operate as if it were executed in those terms. Lord Ellenborough, C. J., in Goodtitle v. Meredith, 2 M. & S. 5, 13 (the substance of which is given above), was approved. "That such was the rule in England prior to the passage of the statute 1 Vict. ch. 26, and in this State until April 8, 1833, when our present Statute of Wills was enacted, is conceded by the appellant; but it is insisted that by those enactments the law has been changed, and that now a codicil must contain an expressed intent to revoke the will to which it is annexed, or to which it refers, in order to have that effect, or contain an expressed intent to revoke a former will, in order to work its revocation, unless the dispositions made by the codicil are inconsistent with those of the former will. The 22d section of the British statute is as follows: 'No

Movers v. White, 6 Johns. Ch. 375; Van Cortlandt v. Kip, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 593; Payne v. Payne, 18 Cal. 291; Murray v. Oliver, 6 Ire. Eq. (N. Car.) 55; Rose v. Drayton, 4 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 260; Stover v. Kendall, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 557; McCurdy v. Wiall, 7 Atl. Rep. (N. J.) 566.

3. Neff's App., 48 Pa. St. 501. In this case the testator made his will in 1850, revoking all former wills. In August, 1857, he made another will, signed by him, but not witnessed. In October, 1857, he made a codicil to the first will revoking some of its provisions, and spoke of it as the "foregoing will." It was held a republication of the first will, as of the date of the codicil.

Strong, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "That the effect of a codicil, duly executed, is to republish the will to which it refers, whether the codicil be annexed to the will or not, is the doctrine of all the authorities. The legal presumption of intended republication may indeed be rebutted by the language of the codicil; but in the absence of any expressed intent to the contrary, it always operates as a new adoption of the will, and a republication at the time when the codicil was made. Upon so plain a subject it seems almost superfluous to refer to authorities." The language of Lord Ellenborough in Goodtitle v. Meredith, 2 M. & S. 5, 13 (the substance of which is given above), was approved. "That such was the rule in England prior to the passage of the statute 1 Vict. ch. 26, and in this State until April 8, 1833, when our present Statute of Wills was enacted, is conceded by the appellant; but it is insisted that by those enactments the law has been changed, and that now a codicil must contain an expressed intent to revoke the will to which it is annexed, or to which it refers, in order to have that effect, or contain an expressed intent to revoke a former will, in order to work its revocation, unless the dispositions made by the codicil are inconsistent with those of the former will. The 22d section of the British statute is as follows: 'No

While no precise form of words is necessary to republish the will, nor is it necessary that the codicil be indorsed upon or attached to it,<sup>1</sup> it is essential that the codicil distinctly recognize will or codicil or any part thereof, which shall be in any manner revoked, shall be revived otherwise than by the re-execution thereof, or by a codicil executed in manner hereinbefore required, and showing an intention to revive the same; and where any will or codicil which shall be partly revoked and afterwards wholly revoked, shall be revived, such revival shall not extend to so much thereof as shall have been revoked before the revocation of the whole thereof, unless an intention to the contrary shall be shown.' It is argued that since this statute a codicil to a will does not revive it or republish it so as to make it a revocation of another will made prior to the codicil, if it does not contain an expressed intention to work such republication or revocation. Such, however, is not the construction given to the statute in England. . . . True, a codicil must show an intention to revive in order to work a revival; but it necessarily shows such an intention unless it be disclaimed. A codicil is a written alteration of a will or addition to it, executed in the manner required by law. The act of executing it involves an intention that it shall operate as part of a will. It is unmeaning unless it does. It therefore necessarily evinces a design that the will of which it is made a part shall be a will; that if it has been revoked, it shall have new life. . . .

"The 13th section of the Pennsylvania Wills Act of 8th of April, 1833 (P. D. ), enacts that 'no will in writing concerning any real estate shall be repealed, nor shall any devise or direction therein be altered, otherwise than by some other will or codicil in writing, or other writing declaring the same, executed and proved in the same manner as is hereinbefore provided, or by burning, canceling, etc.' The 14th section makes similar provisions in regard to wills respecting personal estate, adding, however, to the words in which repeals and alterations may be made the instrumentality of a nuncupative will. A will, then, is a legitimate mode of repealing another will or altering its devises or directions. So is a codicil. So is another writing, not a will or codicil, declaring a repeal or alteration. So is burning and cancellation, and, in case of personalty, so is a nuncupative will. An intent to revoke an existing will, and consequently a revocation, may be shown in either of these ways; and in these respects there is no change of the law as it was under the act of 1705. True, a republication by parol is no longer possible, but that was because of other provisions of the act which define the mode in which alone a will may be made. They have no bearing upon the question now under discussion, for republication by a codicil is not parol republication. The sole object of the 13th and 14th sections of the act of 1833 was to prevent the possibility of revoking or altering wills by parol, except by destruction or cancellation, and this it did by requiring the intent of the testator to be manifested in writing. But it did not undertake to define what construction should be given to a written manifestation.

"It is still the law, then, as it always was, that a codicil to a will is a republication of it, unless the contrary intent be avowed by the testator, and that it makes the will republished to speak from the date of the codicil, to use the language of Lord Abinger in Doe ex dem. York v. Walker, 12 M. & W. 597. The will must be construed 'as if the testator had inserted in the codicil all the words of the will.'" See also Powell on Devises, vol. i. p. 611, n. 1, Jarman's Edition; 1 Jarman on Wills, 723, where the English cases are collated; Houblon in re, 11 Jur. N. S. 549; Thomson in re, 11 Jur. N. S. 960; S. C. L. R. 1 P. & D. 8; 1 Redfield on Wills, § 29, pl. 3 and 4.

If a codicil refers to one of two existing wills by a wrong date, as "July 1, 1792," when the date in fact was the 21st, it appearing from the other circumstances in the case, and the fact that the other will was dated the 18th of July, 1796, that it must have been intended for the 21st, it will not defeat the republication. Jansen v. Jansen, cited in Rogers v. Pittis, 1 Add. 38; 1 Redfield on Wills, § 29, pl. 4.

Of course where it appears from the terms of codicil that it was not intended to operate as a republication of the will, it cannot have that effect. 1 Redfield on Wills, § 29, pl. 4, and cases cited.

Omission to mention a codicil in an act of republication, in which other codicils made prior to that act are mentioned, implies a revocation of it; but this may be rebutted by circumstances showing a contrary intention. Wickoff's App., 15 Pa. St. 281; s. c., 53 Am. Dec. 597.

1. Sir John Strange, M. R., in Potter v. Potter, 1 Ves. Sr. 437, 442; Vernon v. Vernon, 1 Com. 381; Jackson v. Hur-

the existence of the will,<sup>1</sup> and be itself executed with due solemnity, for all the purposes embraced in the latter,<sup>2</sup> and that the will referred to be identified.<sup>3</sup> To establish the identification parol evidence is admissible.<sup>4</sup> If there be more than one will, the fact that the codicil was attached to one of them is regarded as very effective to show that the codicil was intended as a republication of that particular one.<sup>5</sup> The natural presumption is that a codicil is made as a part of the testator's last will, if there be two in existence at the time; but if one of them have been cancelled or revoked, so as to be no longer in existence as a valid, operative instrument, the codicil will be presumed to have been intended to form part of the will then in existence and in force. Where there are numerous codicils, the effect of the later ones is to republish the earlier ones.<sup>6</sup> A codicil by referring to a revoked will in adequate terms may have the effect of reviving it,<sup>7</sup> and it has even been held that a codicil duly executed, if attached to a paper which was never signed, attested and published as a will, will have the effect of giving force and operation to the whole as one will.<sup>8</sup> To the same principle may be referred the rule that lock, Amb. 487; Doe v. Davy, Cowp. 158; Barnes v. Crowe, 1 Ves. Jr. 486; Harvey v. Chouteau, 14 Mo. 587; s.c., 55 Am. Dec. 120.

1. 1 Redfield on Wills, § 23 a, pl. 5; Coale v. Smith, 4 Pa. St. 376.

2. Beall v. Cunningham, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 390; 1 Redfield on Wills, § 23 a, pl. 6.

It has been held that a memorandum indorsed upon the will and signed by the requisite number of witnesses is a good republication, although the testator did not himself sign it. Reynolds v. Shirley, 7 Ohio, 39.

3. Tonnele v. Hall, 4 Comst. (N. Y.) 140.

4. Thus where a codicil began, "This is a codicil to my last will and testament," extrinsic evidence was admitted to show that no other document had been found to answer the description. Ellen v. Maddock, 11 Moore P. C. C. 427; 1 Redfield, § 21, pl. 16.

5. Barnes v. Crowe, 1 Ves. Jr. 490; Rogers v. Pittis, 1 Add. 41.

6. Guest v. Willasey, 3 Bing. 614; 12 J. B. Moore, 2.

A testator made five codicils to his will, in the fourth, of which he revoked the three preceding, and in the fifth he confirmed the will "and four codicils." Held, that by reviving the four codicils no other result could follow but that the fourth should nullify the three first. Unless this was so, the fourth would cease to have its legitimate operation. This decision is grounded upon the same principle as the rule that the republication of a will only sets up the will as it then exists, and will not restore legacies revoked, adeemed, or otherwise vacated. In Goods of Thompson, L. R. 1 P. & D. 8.

It is not competent for the will, when executed in due form, to provide for the payment of such legacies as may thereafter be given by codicils informally executed, since all such papers are testamentary, and must be so treated, thus referring their operation to the effect of the probate. Rose v. Cunynghame, 12 Ves. 29; Whytall v. Kay, 2 My. & K. 765; 1 Redfield on Wills, § 23 a, pl. 6. See also Wilkinson v. Adam, 1 Ves. & Bea. 422.

7. Beall v. Cunningham, 39 Am. Dec. 469; s. c., 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 390.

But the intention to revive the will must be clear upon the face of the codicil, either by express words or by necessary implication, conveying to the mind of the court with reasonable certainty the existence of such an intention. Mere reference to the will by date or any ordinary implication will not be sufficient. Steele et als. in re, L. R. 1 P. & D. 575.

An olographic will once revoked can be republished only by a written instrument, setting forth the testator's intentions, and duly attested by the statutory number of witnesses, or by a paper written by the testator himself, and deposited by him as required for the original will, and such subsequent writing would be construed to be a codicil. Love v. Johnston, 12 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 355; Sawyer v. Sawyer, 7 Jones L. (N. Car.) 134.

8. In 1827 the decedent procured a proof of the execution of the codicil obviates the want of proof of the execution of the will itself.<sup>1</sup>

A will which is invalid to pass real estate for want of the requisite number of witnesses may be confirmed by a duly attested codicil.<sup>2</sup> The charge of undue influence in the execution of the will may also be overcome by proof of the due execution of a codicil after the testator is removed from the alleged influence.<sup>3</sup> A codicil which is an express confirmation of the will may also pass real estate acquired between the date of the will and the codicil.<sup>4</sup> A will altered after execution, if republished by a codipaper to be drafted as his will, but took it to his house until recovery from a fractured arm. There was no evidence that the paper was ever signed or attested. In 1832 he procured a codicil to be written on the same paper, calling and treating the paper as his will. The codicil was signed and attested. It was held that the codicil had the effect of giving force and validity to the unexecuted draft, and that both instruments went into operation as a single testament.

"The counsel for the appellants . . . contend that though a codicil, duly executed, may operate as a republication of a revoked will, which has been duly executed as such, yet it cannot have the effect to bring into operation, as a will, a paper which has never been signed or executed as a will. We can see no difference in principle in the cases. If a codicil so attaches itself to and forms a part of a revoked will as to revive and give force and effect to it as such, we cannot perceive why it may not be so attached to and engrafted upon any other paper which the testator may choose to treat as his will. In either case it is a question of intention. If the testator, by the alteration of parts of his will, by a codicil, may be construed to intend to recognize the parts unaltered, and the whole subject to the alteration as his will, why may he not by referring to an unsigned and unaltered paper as his will, and treating it as such, be construed to adopt the parts unaltered, and the whole thus altered, as his last will and testament. If the codicil can so engraft itself upon and draw within its operative influence a revoked will as to amount to a republication, we cannot perceive why it may not engraft itself upon and draw within its operative influence any instrument which the testator may treat as his will, so as to amount to a publication of the whole as his will. The reason that would sustain the republication in the one case would equally sustain the publication in the other, and each rests upon the recognized intention of the testator, plainly implied from the execution of the codicil, referring to the paper as his will." Beall v. Cunningham, 39 Am. Dec. 469; 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 390.

1. Storm's Will, 3 Redf. (N. Y.) 327; See Allen v. Maddock, 11 Moore P. C. 427.

The execution of the codicil cures all defects in the execution of the original instrument. McCurdy v. Wiall, 7 Atl. Rep. (N. J.) 566.

Under the New York Revised Statutes (2 R. S. 63, § 40), which require a declaration by the testator at the time of making or acknowledging the subscription that the instrument so subscribed is his last will and testament, a codicil executed as a codicil and not as a will cannot give effect to an invalid will. Nor can it be admitted to probate as a will. Proctor v. Clarke, 3 Redf. (N. Y.) 445.

This provision has not changed the rule that a codicil executed with all the formalities required by the statutes for the execution of wills operates as a republication of the will to which it refers, so far as not changed by the codicil. Brown v. Clark, 77 N. Y. 369.

2. Stover v. Kendall, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 557.

3. O'Neal v. Farr, 1 Rich. L. (S. Car.) 80.

4. Brownell v. De Wolf, 3 Mas. (C. C. Rep.) 486.

The rule in the English court of chancery is that a codicil makes the will speak from its own date, and it will, as a republication, take in lands purchased up to the date of the codicil. A clear intent will, however, prevent the application of the rule, as if the codicil should say, "I am now dealing with the property given by will, and with none other." Money-penny v. Bristow, 2 Russell & M. 117; Movers v. White, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 375; William v. Lancaster, 3 Russell, 108; Yarnold v. Wallis, 4 Y. & Coll. 160; Hughes v. Turner, 3 My. & K. 666; 4 Kent Com. (5th Ed.) 510.

cil, annexed and referring to it, is made valid, and it may be shown by parol evidence that the alterations were made before the execution of the codicil.<sup>1</sup>

COERCION. See DURESS.

COFFEE-HOUSE.—A house of entertainment, where guests are supplied with coffee and other refreshments, and where men meet for conversation.<sup>2</sup> The term is also used—rarely, however—in the sense of an inn.

COFFER.—A chest or trunk; especially one used for keeping money or other valuables.<sup>3</sup>

In Virginia it has been declared that the addition of a codicil is not sufficient to operate as a devise of lands purchased by the testator between the date of the will and the date of the codicil, there being no words in the codicil to show such to be the intention of the testator. Kendall v. Kendall, 5 Munf. (Va.) 272.

In Richardson v. Richardson, C. W. Dud. 184, it was held that to operate as a republication of the will a codicil must be either annexed to it at the time of its execution or expressly confirm it. But see Dunlap v. Dunlap, 4 Desauss. (S. C.) 305; Jones v. Hartley, 2 Wharton (Pa.), 103.

1. Burge v. Hamilton, 72 Ga. 568. See also Linnard's App. 93 Pa. St. 313.

Under the rule that a codicil republishes the will as of the date of the codicil, it has been held that where children are not named in the will, but are named in the codicil, this will prevent the children from taking under a statute which provides that children take a certain proportion of the estate by statute if they are not mentioned in the will. Payne v. Payne, 18 Cal. 291.

A codicil expressed to take effect upon an event which does not happen is entitled to probate if it refer to the will by date, upon the ground that it amounts to a republication of the will. 1 Redfield on Wills, § 23 a, pl. 10, citing Mendes Da Silva in re, 2 Sw. & Tr. 315.

2. Webster.

A coffee-house is not an inn, within the meaning of a policy of insurance against fire, enumerating the trade of an innkeeper, with others, as double-hazardous. So held of Grigsby's coffee-house, where country visitors to London lodged as in an inn. Lord Ellenborough said: "Horses, wagons, and coaches come to an inn; there are stables and out-houses attached to it; people are going to these with lights at all hours; hence there is an increased danger of fire, and the trade of an innkeeper is considered double-hazardous. But the trade of a coffeehouse keeper is of a very different description." Doe d. Pitt v. Laming, 4 Campbell, 73, 76, approved, N. Y. Eq. Ins. Co. v. Langdon, 6 Wendell (N. Y.), 627; Rafferty v. New Brunswick Fire Ins. Co., 3 Harrison (N. J.), 483.

Innkeeper's Lien on Goods of Guest.—A house of entertainment in London, where beds, provisions, etc., are furnished at so much per night, for all persons paying for the same, but which was merely called a tavern and coffee-house, and was not frequented by stage-coaches and wagons from the country, and which had no stables belonging to it, is to be considered an inn, and the owner is subject to the liabilities of innkeepers, and has a lien on the goods of his guest for the payment of his bill, and that even where the guest did not appear to have been a traveller, but one who had previously resided in furnished lodgings in London. So held in an action of trover brought by a former guest for goods detained by the landlord for money due for lodging and entertainment, in which action a nonsuit was sustained by the court after argument. Thompson v. Lacy, 3 Barn. & Ald. 283.

A mere eating-house is not an inn, nor is the proprietor liable as an innkeeper; and although the defendant may carry on in another part of his premises the business of an innkeeper, yet a person who enters the restaurant for a meal is not a guest or traveller entitled to the protection afforded against innkeepers. Carpenter v. Taylor, 1 Hilton (N. Y.), 193; People v. Jones, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 311; Sto. on Bailments, § 475, and note 6. So as to a mere boarding-house. Carpenter v. Taylor, 1 Hilton (N. Y.), 193.

Pleading.—To charge hotel-keeper as innkeeper, he must be declared against as an innkeeper. Jones v. Osborn, 2 Chitty's Reports, 484.

See TAVERN; HOTEL; INN; RESTAURANT; Bishop on Statutory Crimes, § 297.

3. Webster.

In an Indictment.—"An indictment de quatuor riscis et cessis, Angliæ, chests

COGNATE.—Relatives by the mother's side or by females. Cognatio, relationship through females.<sup>2</sup>

COGNIZANCE.—1. Judicial knowledge or jurisdiction; the hearing a matter judicially; the right to take notice of and determine a course.<sup>3</sup> 2. (a) An acknowledgment or confession, as an acknowledgment of a fine.<sup>4</sup> (b) The acknowledgment of the defendant, in replevin,<sup>5</sup> that he took the goods, with the allegation and coffers, is good, because synonymous." Bacon's Abr., Indictment (G), 3; 2 Hale P. C. 183.

1. In the common law it has no technical sense; but as a word of discourse in English it signifies, generally, allied by blood, related in origin, of the same family. Bouvier's Law Dict.

As shown by Burrill, it is used by civil-law writers sometimes for relatives generally, including those both by father and mother, and this even in the same paragraph where it is used in its technical sense of relatives by the mother, thus causing difficulty in translation. See Taylor's Explanation, Civil Law, 314.

2. 2 Bl. Com. 235.

In the canon law consanguinity is distinguished from affinity. 4 Reeves Hist. Eng. Law, 56-58. As including affinity. 4 Reeves Hist. Eng. Law, 56-58. Agnate, relations by the father. 2 Bl. Com. 235.

3. Webster.

Burder v. Veley, 12 Ad. & Ellis, 259.

Cognizance of Pleas.—A privilege granted by the crown to a city or town, to hold pleas of all contracts, etc., within the liberty of the franchise; and when a person is impleaded for such matters in the courts of Westminster, the mayor, etc., of such franchise may ask cognizance of the plea, and demand that it shall be determined before them.—Termes de la Ley.

Judicial Cognizance.—Knowledge upon which a judge is bound to act without evidence. See JUDICIAL NOTICE.

Cognizance, in a statute giving cognizance of all capital and other crimes, is a word of the largest import, embracing all power, authority, and jurisdiction. Webster v. Commonwealth, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 400.

"Cognizance and Control" properly relate to administrative, executive, or judicial authority, and are not commonly used to confer legislative authority. Earl, J., dissenting opinion in Matter of Zborowski, 68 N. Y. 101; but held by the court in that case, that "cognizance and control" given by New York act of 1865 to the Croton Aqueduct Board, and by act of 1870 to their successors the Department of Public Works, meant, in view of former legislation, power to direct the making of sewers.

In Federal Judicature.—In 1838, the United States Supreme Court held that "powers" and "cognizance," as used in the acts of Congress establishing the judicial system of the United States, are not each of the same meaning, but that "powers" denotes the process, the mode of proceeding, while "cognizance" denotes jurisdiction; though in general speech the words have the same meaning as applied to courts of justice. Kendall v. U. S., 12 Peters, 636.

4. See 2 Bl. 350, where he describes conveyance of land by fine, which was usually an action of covenant for breach of a pretended agreement to convey. After the licentia concordandi, or leave to agree the suit, came the concord, or cognizance, itself, which is usually an acknowledgment from the deforciant (or those who keep the other out of possession) that the lands in question are the right of the complainant. "And from this acknowledgment, or recognition of right, the party levying the fine is called the cognitor, and he to whom it is levied the cognisee. This acknowledgment must be made either openly in the court of common pleas, or before one of the judges of that court, or before commissioners empowered by a writ of dedimus potestatem, or before justices of the assize. The judges and commissioners are bound by 18 Edw. I. st. 4 to take care that the cognitors are of full age and understanding; and if any be a married woman, she must be examined privately to see whether she acts willingly without compulsion." Quoting Blackstone.

5. In replevin, if the defendant pleads some matter confessing the taking, but showing lawful title or excuse, such pleading is not (as it would be in other actions) called a plea in bar, but an avowry or cognizance; the former term applying to the case where the defendant sets up a right or title in himself; the latter being used when he alleges the right or title to be in another person, by whose command he acted. Comyn's Digest, Pleader, Replevin, 3 K. 13, 14. The answer he did it legally, by command of another person who had a right to distrain. (c) The acknowledgment or "badge worn by a master or dependent, to indicate the person or party to which he belonged. 'Wearing the liveries and cognizance of their master.'"<sup>2</sup>

COGNOVIT. (See also JUDGMENT.)—Cognovit Actionem, a written confession of judgment signed, but not sealed, by the defendant or his attorney, and given to the plaintiff after declaration filed. In substance it acknowledges the demand of the plaintiff to be just, and authorizes him to enter judgment for a specified sum either absolutely or upon specified condition.<sup>3</sup>

An avowry or cognizance is called plea, and then follow replication, rejoinder, etc.; the ordinary name of each being thus postponed by one. See Tyler's Stephen's Pleading, 203, 204.

In cognizance in replevin demands of the goods, it must set up a good title. "In replevin the avowant is as if actor, and must therefore make a good title." Lord Hardwicke, in Wright v. Birkmire, cas. temp. Hardricks, 1 Brown v. Bissett, 1 Zabriskie, 100. The court said: "But there is a distinction between a just title in trespass and an avowry in replevin. There is a difference when a man claims by virtue of an authority to exercise a right or control over the property of another, and when it is claimed defensively, and relied on as an excuse. In replevin, the sheriff's return does not seek simply to excuse the trespass, but he is an actor, sets up a title, seeks to have a return, and to make a good title in omnibus." See Goodman v. Aylin, Yelverton, 100. Same effect; also Stephens v. Strange, 847.

Accordingly, where the New Jersey statute regarding attachments against delinquent and absent debtors, though requiring an affidavit by the plaintiff to justify the attachment, did not require indorsement of the affidavit on the return, yet nevertheless in replevin the plaintiff could not rely on the usual rule of regularity of process must be preserved.

He must in his avowry aver that the plaintiff's in the attachment proceeding made and filed an affidavit pursuant to the statute. So in Stephens v. Strange, 847, defendant in replevin having avowed as bailiff of a house for an amercement, it was held on demurrer to be an ill avowry, because it was not averred that the defendant was guilty. See Horton v. Hendon, 1 Hill, 118; Noble v. Holmes, 5

Hill, 194; Sturbridge v. Winslow, 21 Pick. 87.

But since, where authority may be given generally and verbally, it may be pleaded in general terms (Stephen on Pl. 304), a bailiff may make cognizance as bailiff where the seizure was for rent in arrear, or as damages feasant, without showing any warrant for that purpose. Mathews v. Cary, 3 Mod. 138.

Quare Clausum Fregit.—In this action, plaintiff cannot traverse command by a third person as owner, averred in defendant's cognizance, for to do so would be to admit the truth of the rest of the plea, viz., that the third person was owner; and this would be fatal, because if another than plaintiff owns the land the plaintiff has no standing in court. Trevillian v. Pyne, 1 Salkeld 107.

Making Cognizance rather than Avowry is mistake so immaterial that it will not be noticed even on special demurrer thereto. Brown v. Bissett, 1 Zabriskie (N. J.), 49. So where avowry is made instead of cognizance. Wheadon v. Sugg, Cro. Jac. 373.

1. 3 Bl. Com. 150.

2. Webster.

3. Burrill L. D.; Rep. & Law. L. D.; Adams' Gloss.; 1 Tidd Pr. 559.

The condition is usually that the defendant will be allowed a certain time within which to pay the debt or damages and costs. Wharton's L. L.

A cognovit differs from a warrant of attorney in that the latter is given before suit brought, and is under seal.

"A cognovit is a mere acknowledgment of an account, and there is no mutuality;" but if terms be added there is, and it becomes an agreement within the provisions of a stamp act. Ames v. Hill, 2 B. & P. 150.

A cognovit is not discharged by the bankruptcy of the defendant. "The court observed that a cognovit is a mere acknowledgment of the amount of damages, and where a man acknowledges the cause of action the plaintiff may sign judgment at any time. This was not like a warrant of attorney." Wyborne v. Ross, 2 Taunt. 68.

COHABIT—COHABITATION. (See also ADULTERY; BIGAMY; DIVORCE; MARRIAGE).—To cohabit is primarily to dwell with another in the same place.<sup>1</sup> Derivatively, it means to dwell constantly together as husband and wife. There is a diversity of opinion as to the amount of constancy and the intimacy of the relation which are requisite.<sup>2</sup>

A bond in which it is agreed that it shall be lawful for the obligees to commence an action, proceed to judgment, and upon the judgment issue execution, and that the judgment should be security for the payment of whatever should become due, is in legal effect a cognovit actionem. Hurst v. Jennings, 5 B. & C. 650.

For the English practice, see 3 Geo. IV. c. 39, sec. 3; 6 & 7 Vict. c. 66; 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, sec. 136; 32 & 33 Vict. c. 62, sec. 24, by the latter of which, in order that a cognovit may be valid, there must be present at its execution an attorney of one of the superior courts in behalf of the defendant, named by him and attending at his request, to inform him of the nature and effect of the cognovit, and who shall subscribe it as a witness to its due execution, stating in the attestation that he is such an attorney.

1. Worcester. The word is never used in this sense in a criminal statute. Canon v. U. S., 116 U. S. 55. And see Brinckle v. Brinckle, 12 Phila. (Pa.) 232.

2. "The legal idea of cohabitation is that which carries with it a natural belief that it results from marriage only. To cohabit is to live or dwell together; to have the same habitation; so that where one lives and dwells there does the other live and dwell always with him." Yardley's Est., 75 Pa. St. 207. "The primary meaning of the word 'cohabit' is to dwell with some one—not merely to visit or see them. It includes more than that. Worcester defines the word thus: 'to dwell with another in the same place.' Webster's definition is 'to dwell with; to inhabit or reside in the same place or country. To dwell or live together, usually or often applied to persons not legally married.'" Calef v. Calef, 54 Me. 365. There must be a living together in the same house as husband and wife. Sullivan v. State, 32 Ark. 187; Bush v. State, 37 Ark. 215. "Cohabiting means a living together in one house; a boarding and tabling together; it carries with it the idea of a fixed residence." It is an unwarrantable extension of the meaning of the term to include persons travelling together. Ohio v. Connaway, Tappan (Ohio), 58.

Mere sexual intercourse does not constitute cohabitation. Taylor v. State, 36 Ark. 84.

"By cohabiting must be understood as dwelling or living together—not a transient and single unlawful interview." Comm. v. Calef, 10 Mass. 153; Comm. v. Bradley, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 553. "Cohabitation does not mean merely living together; it means living together as husband and wife. The mere act of a man and woman living together and carrying on an illicit intercourse is wholly insufficient to raise a legal presumption of marriage, as it often happens that such cohabitation takes place where the intercourse of the parties is clearly meretricious." Brinckle v. Brinckle, 12 Phila. (Pa.) 232; Calef v. Calef, 54 Me. 365. Consequently cohabitation does not mean simply sleeping together in the same bed. Dunn v. Dunn, 4 Paige (N. Y.), 425.

In the interpretation of statutes imposing a penalty upon the commission of adultery a somewhat different construction is put upon the word. "Whilst one such interview would not, repeated adulterous meetings at any given place, or even at different places,—as, for instance, at houses of assignation,—would perhaps be such cohabiting as would constitute the offence of adultery." Swancoat v. State, 4 Tex. App. 105. "A 'state of cohabitation' evidently means something different from simply living together as man and wife, which is not unlawful." Park v. State, 4 Tex. App. 134. But see Ohio v. Connaway, Tappan (Ohio), 58.

On the other hand, sexual intercourse is not a necessary element of cohabitation. Under the Edmunds Act, by which it is made a misdemeanor to "cohabit with more than one woman," it was decided "that the court properly charged the jury that the defendant was to be found guilty if he lived in the same house with the two women, and at their respective tables, one third of his time or thereabouts,

COIN. (See also CONSTITUTIONAL LAW; COUNTERFEITING; LEGAL TENDER.)—A piece of metal stamped with certain marks and made current at a certain value. It differs from money as the species differs from the genus.<sup>1</sup> To fit metal to circulate as money by dividing it into pieces of exact fineness and weight, and stamping with devices adapted to prevent counterfeiting or abstraction of any part.<sup>2</sup> and held them out to the world, by his language or conduct or both, as his wives, and that it was not necessary it should be shown that he and the two women or either of them occupied the same bed or slept in the same room, or that he had sexual intercourse with either of them."

"This meaning of the phrase 'cohabit with more than one woman' in the statute is in consonance with a recognized definition of the word 'cohabit.' In Webster 'cohabit' is defined thus: '1. To dwell with; to inhabit or reside in company or in the same place or country; 2. To dwell or live together as husband and wife.' In Worcester it is defined thus: '1. To dwell with another in the same place; 2. To live together as husband and wife.' The word is never used in its first meaning in a criminal statute; and its second meaning is that to which its use in this statute has relation." Cannon v. U. S., 116 U. S. 55. Miller and Field, JJ., dissented from this opinion, the former saying: "I know of no instance in which the word cohabitation has been used to describe a criminal offence where it did not imply sexual intercourse." This case was followed in Ex parte Snow, 7 Sup. Ct. Repr. 556. In England "matrimonial cohabitation" has been used in distinction from "matrimonial intercourse," to signify living together in the same house without copula. Foster v. Foster, 1 Hagg. Const. Rep. 144; Orme v. Orme, 2 Add. Ec. 823.

It is not necessary, in order to cohabit as husband and wife, that the parties should claim to be husband and wife. Lyerly v. State, 36 Ark. 39. And it seems that notoriety is not a necessary incident of cohabitation, it having been held that in an indictment for lewdness it is not a sufficient averment of the publicity of the acts charged to allege that A and B "did live, use, and cohabit together as man and wife." State v. Moore, 1 Swan (Tenn.), 136.

Where there was a proviso in a deed granting an annuity that it should cease if the lady to whom it was granted should "associate, continue to keep company with or cohabit or criminally correspond with J. F.," all intercourse whatever, though most innocent, even mere calling like any other visitors, was held to be within these terms. Lord Dormer v. Knight, 1 Taunt. 417. See note to Bishop on Mar. & Div. § 777.

1. Wharton's Law Lexicon.

2. Abbott's Law Dictionary.

"The word coin is one of well-settled meaning. The primary sense of the noun, according to Dr. Webster, is 'the die used for stamping money,' and the undisputed signification of the verb, according to most if not all the lexicographers, is 'to stamp metal and convert it into coin.' In Wharton's Law Lexicon (ad verbum) it is said: 'Strictly speaking, coin differs from money as the species differs from the genus. Money is any matter, whether metal, paper, beads, shells, etc., which has currency as a medium in commerce. Coin is a particular species, always made of metal, and struck according to a certain process called coining.' It was argued at the bar—I do not know whether seriously or not—that printing was stamping, and these notes might therefore literally be said to be coined. No such use of the word in any author has been shown. We may say, figuratively, to coin a story, meaning to invent one, but never to coin the book in which it is printed." Sharswood, J., in Borie v. Trott, 5 Phila. (Pa.) 403.

"A coin is a piece of metal stamped and made legally current as money. A counterfeit coin is one in imitation of the genuine. The coins known to the law are those authorized to be issued from the mints of the United States, and those of foreign countries current here." U. S. v. Bogart, 9 Ben. (C. C.) 314.

A Collective Noun.—"Coin is a word collective, which contains in it all manner of the several stamps and portraits of money. "Termes de la Ley; Comm. v. Gallagher, 16 Gray (Mass.), 240. In this case, in an indictment for larceny, it was held that "copper coin of the value of two dollars and seventy five cents does not legally mean a copper coin, but more than one, and as many as are necessary to constitute the alleged value."

To Coin Money.—"To coin money clearly means to mould into form a me-

COINAGE—The business or function of coining money.<sup>1</sup> The great mass of metallic currency in circulation.<sup>2</sup>

COLLAR. See note 3.

COLLATERAL—That which is by the side of, assists, co-operates with, is made or given in addition to, some other thing which is presented as the principal.<sup>4</sup> tallic substance of intrinsic value and stamp on it its legal value, so as to encourage and facilitate its free circulation and assure stability in the currency." Robertson, J., in Griswold v. Hepburn, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 29; Thayer v. Hedge, 22 Ind. 306. "The coining of money has never been construed as including the issue of a paper currency. Coin and coinage are understood to be the stamping of metal in some way so as to give them currency, but it is not applied to any other material." Meyer v. Roosevelt, 25 How. (Pr.) 105.

Coins, Gold, Silver, and Copper.—Chinese coin, known in China as "copper cash," made of copper and lead, is not "coins, gold, silver, or copper" within the customs laws, unless intended to be used here as a part of the currency. It is otherwise chargeable with duty as "copper, when old and fit only to be remanufactured." Crocker v. Redfield, 4 Blatchf. (C. C.) 378.

Instrument Adapted for Coining.—This phrase applies to any instrument that may be used in the formation of any part of the coin. A die for stamping one side of a coin is such. Comm. v. Kent, 6 Metc. (Mass.) 221.

To Pay in Current Coin.—Where manufacturers employed a man to make stocking heels at 7d. per dozen, he to find the labor and work on their premises, using their machine, and it was contracted that settlements should be made weekly, and from the sum due the plaintiff were to be deducted the rent of frame, fines, charges for gas, heat, etc., it was held that this was not a contract to pay wages otherwise than in the current coin of the realm. Archer v. James, 2 B. & S. 61.

1. Abbott's Law Dict.; Meyer v. Roosevelt, 25 How. Pr. 105.

2. Abbott's Law Dict. "Coinage of the United States" is the exact legal equivalent of "coins coined at the mint of the United States." U. S. v. Otey, 31 Fed. Rep. 68.

3. Under an act which authorizes "any person to kill any dog or dogs found and being without a collar" it is lawful to kill a dog if he is out of the enclosure of his owner, without a collar, although under the immediate care of the owner. Colt v. Barnard, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 260.

4. Collateral Ancestors.—Uncles and aunts, brothers and sister of lineal ancestors. See Bank v. Walker, 3 Barb. Ch. (N.Y.) 446.

Collateral Assurance.—One which is independent of, but subordinate to, an assurance or agreement affecting the same subject-matter. Rapalje & Lawr. L. D. That which is made over and above the deed itself. Abbott's Law Dict.; Bouv. Law Dict.

Collateral Consanguinity.—The relation of those who are descended from the same ancestor, but not one from the other. 2 Bl. Com. 203.

Collateral Descent.—Descent to collateral kindred. See Lessee of Levy v. McCartee, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 102.

Collateral Estoppel.—The collateral determination of a question by a court having general jurisdiction of the subject. Bouv. Law Dict.; Small v. Leonard, 26 Vt. 209.

Collateral Facts.—Facts not directly involved or connected with the principal issue or matter in dispute. Rapalje & Lawr. Law Dic.; Bouv. Law Dict. Those facts which are incapable of affording any reasonable presumption or inference as to the principal fact or matter in dispute. Such facts are inadmissible as not tending to prove the issue. Greenleaf on Ev. § 52; Taylor on Ev. (8th Eng. Ed.) p. 304 sq.

Collateral Inheritance Tax.—A tax levied upon the collateral devolution of property by will or under the intestate law.

Collateral Issue.—(1). A question which is not immediately or mediately a matter in dispute in the proceeding. Rapalje & Lawr. Law Dict.

(2). The issue raised when a convicted criminal pleads anything allowed by law in bar or stay of execution, as that he is not the person found guilty, or a pardon or pregnancy, which must be tried at once, for which purpose a jury is empanelled. Wharton's Law Lex.; 4 Bl. Com. 306.

Collateral Kindred or Collaterals.—Those who are descended from a common ancestor and not one from the other.

Collateral Limitation.—A limitation in the conveyance of an estate which gives an interest for a specified period, but

COLLATION—COLLATIO BONORUM. (See also ADVANCE-HOTCHPOT.)—A bringing together of goods or property common fund; especially of property received of a decedent by way of advancement, for the purpose of a more equitable division among the heirs.<sup>1</sup>

In ecclesiastical law, collation is the conferring or bestowing of a benefice by the bishop, where he has himself the right of patronage.<sup>2</sup>

The right of enjoyment to depend on a collateral event, as a limitation to a man and his heirs, tenants of the life of Dale, or to a woman during widowhood. 4 Kent Com. 129; 1 Washb.

Collateral Promise.—A promise to be liable for the payment of the debt of another person, having immediate respect to the original liability, and no new consideration moving to the promisor to pay or answer for such liability. Elder v. Warfield, 7 Md. 395. "The terms original and collateral promise are convenient to distinguish between the cases, the direct and leading object of the promise is to become the surety or guarantor of another's debt, and those in which though the effect of the promise is to discharge the debt of another, yet the object of the undertaker is to subvert some interest or purpose of his own." The former is within the section of the Statute of the latter is not. Nelson v. Metc. (Mass.) 396; 2 C. C. 37; 148; Clay v. Walron, 9 Cal. If the promise is made by one in name to pay for goods or money to or services done for another, it is his own contract on consideration, and is called original, binding on him without writing. The language is 'Let him have goods, or do service for him, and I will see you paid,' or 'I promise he will pay,' or 'If he does not pay, this is collateral, and though for good consideration, it is void by the Statute of Frauds.' Stone v. Walker, (Mass.), 615.

Collateral Security.—A separate obligation is attached to another contract guaranteeing its performance; also a security of property, or of other contract, to insure the performance of a contract. Bouv. Law Dict. Lochrane v. Solomon, 38 Ga. vin v. Sherman, 9 Ia. 331. Collateral security in bank phraseology means security additional to the obligation of the borrower. er v. Nat. Mech. Bank, 2 Abb.

(C. C.) 416. "The use of the term collateral security, when a debtor transfers to his creditor an article of value or an evidence of debt, is intended to express that it is not received in payment of the principal debt, and that it is not an additional right to which the creditor is absolutely entitled. It is merely a concurrent security for another debt, whether antecedent or newly created, and is designed to increase the means of the creditor to realize the principal debt which it is given to secure." Munn v. McDonald, 10 Watts (Pa.), 270.

Under an act which provides that "no person is entitled to a mechanic's lien who takes collateral security on the same contract," the taking of a mortgage from the debtor upon the same property covered by the lien and for the same debt is not taking of collateral security on the same contract. Gilcrest v. Gottschalk, 39 Ia. 311; Mervin v. Sherman, 9 Ia. 331.

Property or contracts transferred as collateral security are called "collateral."

Collateral Warranty.—Warranty as to an estate made by one who was ancestor to the heir thereof, either actually or by implication of law, in respect to other property, but who could not have been so in respect to the estate in question. Bouv. Law Dict. Warranty made where the heir's title to the land neither was nor could have been derived from the warranting ancestor. 2 Bla. Com. 301; 4 Kent Com. 469; 2 Washb. on R. P. 668 37; Challis on R. P. 249; Den v. Crawford, 3 Halst. (N. J.) 106.

1. Cooper's Justinian, 574. "The collation of goods is the supposed or real return to the mass of the succession which an heir makes of property which he received in advance of his share or otherwise, in order that such property may be divided together with the other effects of the succession." Succession of Cucullu, 9 La. Ann. 96; Destrehan v. Destrehan, 4 Mart. N. S. (La.) 557. It corresponds to the hotchpot of the common law, which is supposed to have been derived from it. 2 Bla. Com. 517; 4 Kent Com. 419; The Ship Henry Ewbank & Cargo, 1 Sumn. (C. C.) 421.

2. 1 Bla. Com. 391; 2 Bla. Com. 22.

In maritime law, collation means contribution or average.<sup>1</sup>

A comparison of two things by putting them together.<sup>2</sup>

COLLECT — COLLECTIBLE — COLLECTION — COLLECTOR.—To collect is to gather into one body or place, especially to gather money or revenue from debtors; to demand and receive.<sup>3</sup>

1. Adams' Gloss.; Loccen. De Jur. Mar. lib. ii. c. 8. § 1.

2. Collatio Signorum, or Sigillorum, the mode of testing the genuineness of a seal by comparing it with one known to be genuine. Adams' Gloss.; Bracton, 389 b, 398 b; Fleta, lib. vi. c. 34, § 5.

3. Webster.

Collect.—A power to collect assets given by statute to a receiver authorizes him to collect, sell, and do whatever is necessary should be done to convert the property into money, in order to apply it to the payment of claims. Fling v. Goodall, 40 N. H. 219.

A power given in a city charter to levy and collect a special tax, does not carry with it a power to collect it by a sale of the property on which it is assessed. The power to collect may be enforced by action in the courts. McInerney v. Reed, 23 Iowa, 410.

A direction in a will to an executor to "collect" and "pay over" the residue of the testator's estate, "without sacrificing too much by forcing the sale thereof," gives to the executor the power to sell by implication. Going v. Emery, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 107; s. c., 26 Am. Dec. 645.

Where one is authorized "to collect, receive, and apply to his own use all or any part of the money due," he has a power coupled with an interest, and is not a mere agent empowered to collect debts. "He is not by any construction of the instrument restrained in the mode of collection. It would be a narrow construction of the instrument to confine him to the receipt of money only." Thorp v. Smith, 2 Watts (Pa.), 389.

Collected.—A tax is "collected" when it has been paid by those on whose property it has been levied. Fitzpatrick v. Flagg, 5 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 213.

Where a mortgage is given for a fine adjudged to the State in a criminal prosecution, the judgment is not "paid and collected" so as to preclude an appeal. Floyd v. State, 32 Ark. 200.

Collectible—Where a note is guaranteed to be "good and collectible after due course of law," if the holder means to resort to the guaranty, he must prosecute with due diligence all the parties to the note. Moakley v. Riggs, 19 Ins. (N. Y.) 69; s. c., 10 Am. Dec. 196. But where note was guaranteed simply to be good and collectible, it was held not to be necessary to first exhaust legal remedies against the makers of the note. There can be other evidence that the note was not capable of collection. Marsh v. Day, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 321; Sanford v. Allen, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 473. In the former case suit had been begun. In French v. Marsh, 29 Wis. 649, however, it was held necessary under like circumstances to prove due diligence in attempting to collect the note by action commenced within a reasonable time after maturity, and that the insolvency of the maker did not excuse the want of such an attempt. In McDoal v. Yeomans, 8 Watts (Pa.), 361, insolvency was held to excuse the want of an attempt to collect the note from the maker by process. And see Wheeler v. Lewis, 11 Vt. 265; cases infra, under COLLECTION.

Collection.—The power to enforce the "collection of fines, forfeitures and penalties," conferred on State's attorneys, includes the right to receive and give receipts therefor, that shall operate as full discharge to the parties paying the same; and also the right to receive the amount of any judgment that may have been rendered for any such fine, etc., and to execute an acquittance therefor. People v. Christerson, 59 Ill. 157.

"I guarantee the collection of this note" is equivalent to a guaranty that it is collectible by due course of law, and the guarantor is not liable until an attempt to collect it by process from the makers has been made. Cumpston v. McNair, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 457; Loveland v. Shepard, 2 Hill (N. Y.), 139; Dyer v. Gibson, 16 Wis. 557; and see White v. Case, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 543.

For Collection.—See BANKS AND BANKING; CHECKS; ENDORSEMENT.

Common carriers doing business between certain points, and not undertaking personally for the carriage of goods to farther points, but merely engaging to forward them to their destination by the established lines of transportation, are not liable upon the receipt for a bill of goods "for collection" from a person beyond the terminus, in the absence of a special contract creating an additional obligation upon the failure of the other

COLLECTION AGENCIES. See BANKS, Vol. II., p. 111.

COLLEGES. See EDUCATION; SCHOOLS, etc.

COLLIERY.—The place where coals are dug.<sup>1</sup> "Colliery is, however, a word sufficiently wide to include all contiguous and connected veins and seams of coal which are worked as one concern, without regard to the closes and pieces of ground under which they are carried. See Hodgson v. Field, 7 East, 620. Indeed, it is apparently wide enough to include the engines and machinery in the 'contiguous and connected veins,' as well as those veins themselves. Webster, in defining 'colliery,' refers to 'coalery,' and he defines 'coalery' as a coal-mine, coal-pit, or place where coals are dug, with the engines and machinery used in discharging the water and raising the coal."<sup>2</sup> carriers, to whom in the ordinary course of business the bill was intrusted for collection, to pay over the amount received by them upon the same. Lowell Fence Wire Co. v. Sargent, 8 Allen (Mass.), 189.

Collector.—In a statute providing the mode of execution against a municipal corporation, collector "means the officer having the legal custody of and power to distribute the funds of such corporation." Gabler v. Elizabeth, 13 Vr. (N. J.) 79.

A collector of taxes is a public officer within the meaning of an embezzlement act. State v. Walton, 62 Me. 106.

"Decision of the collector," in the 14th sec of the act of Congress of June 30, 1864, which makes the same conclusive unless appealed from within thirty days, etc., is synonymous with "ascertainment and liquidation of the duties by the proper officers of the customs," used in the same section. U. S. v. Cousmery, 7 Ben. (C. C.) 251.

1. Carey v. Bright, 58 Pa. St. 85.

2. Quoted from MacSwinney on Mines, p. 25.

In Carey v. Bright, 58 Pa. St. 85, Sharswood, J. said: "Neither was there any error in declining to affirm the seventeenth point, that the sale by Kirk, Baum, Ogle, Clark, and Gross to the defendants below of all their interest in the shaft and slope collieries 'included all the movable property belonging to and used at these places in the mining of coal, and that the word "colliery" is a collective compound including many things, and is not limited to the lease and fixtures of a tunnel, drift, shaft, slope, or vein from which the coal is mined.' According to the most approved lexicographers, to whose works courts must resort for the meaning of words which have no settled legal construction, a colliery is 'a place where coals are dug.' Johnson, Webster, ad verbum. No question appears to have been raised as to whether the articles in dispute were or were not fixtures. It is probable that many things about a colliery, although not actually affixed to the freehold, may come within that category, like the rolls of an iron-mill, or the machinery of a manufactory, whether fast or loose, which is necessary to constitute it, and without which it would not be a mill or manufactory at all. Voorhis v. Freeman, 2 W. & S. 116. But the mere loose movables about such an establishment, in the absence of any usage or general understanding, would no more pass than would the tools of a mechanic by the sale of his shop." See Bainbridge on Mines (4th Ed.), 401, for a discussion of transfer of machinery, etc.

But judgment was reversed because of the refusal of evidence offered on the trial, to show that "the term 'colliery' embraces all the movable property at the mines used or placed there to be used in the working of them, and that it has been so understood for twenty-five years (1868) by all engaged in mining in Schuylkill county."

Seams of Coal.—In Hodgson v. Field, referred to in MacSwinney on Mines, 7 East, 620, Lord Ellenborough said: "The deed speaks of an intended colliery. It seems that the object of the grant was to drain the water from such intended colliery, the local extent and limits of which intended colliery we have no means of defining; but judging from the nature of such works, there seems no reason to give them any other or narrower limit than the boundaries of the continued property of the grantee, under which the intended colliery might be prosecuted by him, without regard to the closes and

COLLIERY—COLOR—COME—COMFORT.

COLLISION. See SHIPPING.

COLLUSION. See DIVORCE; FRAUD, etc.

COLOR in law means not the thing itself, but only an appearance thereof; as color of title means only the appearance of title.<sup>1</sup>

COME—COMING.—To move toward or into; to approach;<sup>2</sup> to appear in court.<sup>3</sup>

COLOR OF TITLE. See ADVERSE POSSESSION, Vol. I. p. 225.

COMFORT.—The word embraces whatever is requisite to give security from want, and furnish reasonable physical, mental, and spiritual enjoyment.<sup>4</sup>

COMMENCEMENT OF A BUILDING is the first labor done on the ground which is made the foundation of the building, and to form part of the work suitable and necessary for its construction.<sup>5</sup> pieces of ground under it which might be carried, and who might of course be expected to follow the coal through all the contiguous and connected veins and seams of coal which belonged to him." It was held, accordingly, that the grant of the right to maintain rough pits for the intended colliery authorized the use of the pits so long as coal was dug from any part of the colliery, whether under the tract where the deed mentioned that the mine was to be opened, or not.

Working a Colliery.—Under statute 18 & 19 Vic. c. 108, s. 4, requiring the ventilation of every colliery while the same is worked, the penalty imposed by the act for violation of its provisions will be imposed upon an agent who fails to ventilate during the suspension of work between Saturday night and Monday morning. Cockburn, C. J., said: "As the present case proves, the result of such neglect is that bad air collects in the workings, and the men who first enter the colliery afterwards are exposed to unnecessary danger, and are compelled to resort to a most hazardous operation for the purpose of restoring the ventilation."

English Legislation.—See consolidation and amendments by the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1872.

Ejectment will lie for a coal-mine. Comyn v. Kyneto, Cro. Jac. 150; Lawson v. Williams, cited Cro. Jac. 150; Comyn v. Wheatly, Noy, 121. Or for a coal-pit. Wyld's Case, cited Noy, 121.

1. Broughton v. Haywood, 61 N. Car. 383.

2. Webster.

"Come to person . . . from the part of his father" in an intestate act includes coming by gift and devise as well as by descent. Shippen v. Izard, 1 S. & R. 222.

Come to Reside.—One who goes to a place with his family to spend the summer at the residence of his father, does not "come to reside" so as to render him liable to perform militia duty. Comm. v. Swan, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 194.

Come to Settle.—Under an act which provides that any one can gain a settlement who comes to settle on a tenement of a certain value, the coming must be animo morandi or manendi: it may be for a temporary purpose, but there must be an intention to settle. One who went to a town to sell a load of hay, and was detained there by a broken limb, did not come to settle. The King v. Inhab. of St. James, etc., 10 East. 29; The King v. Inhab. of Hooe, 4 East, 362. It is not necessary that the settler should reside upon the tenement. The King v. Churchwardens, 6 B. & C. 70.

Coming to Market.—In an act forbidding forestalling this means "on its way to market," with the intent to be there offered for sale in market hours; it is not necessary that there should be a market actually holding at the time of the purchase in order to constitute the offence. Boteler v. Corp. of Washington, 1 Cr. (C. C.) 676.

3. The word is used in this sense in the introduction to a plea. It is taken from the style of the entry of the proceedings on the record. It formed no part of the viva voce pleading, and is not considered as in strictness constituting a part of the plea. Steph. on Pldg. 431 n.; 1 Chitty Pldg. 411.

4. Forman v. Whitney, 2 Keyes (N. Y.), 168.

5. Pennock v. Hover, 5 Rawle (Pa.), 308. See Brooks v. Lester, 36 Md. 70; Jean v. Wilson, 38 Md. 296.

COMMERCE. See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW; INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS OR DRUMMERS. (See also AGENCY.)

1. Definition.—Where an agent simply exhibits samples of goods kept for sale by his principal, and takes orders from purchasers for such goods, which goods are afterward to be delivered by the principal to the purchasers, and payment for the goods is to be made by the purchasers to the principal on such delivery, such agent is generally called a "drummer" or commercial traveller.<sup>1</sup>

2. Powers and Duties of Commercial Agents.—Commercial agents may be clothed with general and special powers, and their authority as once established is presumed to continue till notice to the contrary appears.<sup>2</sup>

1. City of Kansas v. Collins, 34 Kans. 434; State v. Miller, 93 N. Car. 511.

2. Diversy v. Kellogg, 44 Ill. 114.

A principal is bound by the acts of his travelling agent done within the scope of his authority, and the principal will also be responsible for the unauthorized acts of such agent where the conduct of the principal justifies a party dealing with the agent in believing that such agent was acting within and not in excess of the authority conferred on him. Where such agent is held out to the world as one having the authority of a general agent, any private instructions or limitations not communicated to the persons dealing with such agent will not affect them nor relieve the principal from liability where the agent oversteps such limitations. Banks v. Everest, 35 Kans. 687.

An agent who merely solicits orders for goods, sending them to his principal to be filled, has no implied authority to receive payment for the goods sent by the principal to fill such orders. An order solicited by and given to such agent does not constitute a sale, either absolute or conditional, of the goods ordered, but is a mere proposal, to be accepted or not, as the principal may see fit. McKindley v. Dunham, 55 Wis. 515; Clark v. Smith, 88 Ill. 298; Abrahams v. Weiller, 87 Ill. 179; Reynolds v. Ferree, 86 Ill. 570.

A travelling salesman of a wholesale house may be regarded by those who deal with him as a general agent, and his acts within the scope of his business will bind his principals, although in violation of their printed instructions to him, unless the parties dealing with him have notice of the limitations upon his authority. A contract of a drummer not to sell a certain class of goods to any other merchant in a town except the purchaser, is within the apparent scope of his authority, and binding upon his principal. Keith v. Herschberg Optical Co., 48 Ark. 138.

Where a bill of goods is sent to the purchaser by the vendors upon an order procured by an agent of the latter, together with a bill thereof in the name of such vendors, payment to such agent in the absence of any proof of authority in the agent to collect, or of any prior dealings between the purchaser and the vendors, is no defence to an action by the vendors for the price of such goods. Korneman v. Monaghan, 24 Mich. 36; Butler v. Dorman, 68 Mo. 298; s. c., 30 Am. Rep. 795; Law v. Stokes, 32 N. J. L. 250; Seiple v. Irwin, 30 Pa. St. 513; Greenhood v. Keator, 9 Ill. App. 183; Hogarth v. Wherley, 14 Eng. (Moak) 474. Compare Hoskins v. Johnson, 5 Sneed (Tenn.), 469; Collins v. Newton, 7 Baxt. (Tenn.) 269; Putnam v. French, 53 Vt. 402; s. c., 38 Am. Rep. 682.

In Trainer v. Morison, 78 Me. 160, it was held that an agent who has authority to contract for the sale of chattels has authority to collect pay for them at the time, or as a part of the same transaction, in the absence of any prohibition known to the purchaser. Knowledge of this prohibition may be inferred from the circumstances of sale, or from customary usages of trade known to the parties. Persons dealing with an agent have a right to presume that his agency is general, and not limited, and notice of the limited authority must be brought to their knowledge before they are bound to regard it. The notice of the limited authority of the agent, in this case, printed at the top of the bill accompanying the goods sold and not seen by the purchasers, is not so prominent as to hold them at fault in not observing it. Citing Capel v. Thornton, 3 Car. & P. 352; Greeley v. Bartlett, 1 Me. 173; Goodenow v. Tyler, 7 Mass. 36; Methuen Co. v. Hayes, 33 Me. 169; Kinsman v. Kershaw, 119 Mass. 140; Putnam v. French, 53 Vt. 402; Wass v. M. M. Ins. Co., 51 Me. 537.

The purchaser from a commercial agent is bound to ascertain the agents' powers, and in the absence of actual authority the agent's statement that he had authority is not binding upon the principals. The purchaser has no right to act on anything that did not proceed from the principals, either as actual authority or in some form of binding admission. Korneman v. Monaghan, 24 Mich. 36.

A commercial agent will, however, have the power to collect when such power is either directly or impliedly given to him by his principal, as where he has possession of the goods and delivers them. Sumner v. Saunders, 51 Mo. 89; Brooks v. Jameson, 55 Mo. 505; Rice v. Groffman, 56 Mo. 434; Seiple v. Irwin, 30 Pa. St. 513; Harris v. Simmerman, 81 Ill. 413.

The rule that the authority of an agent to sell goods imports the authority to receive the proceeds of the sale is limited to cases where there are circumstances or appearances which give color to the belief in the purchaser that the authority exists. An agent to sell goods who has possession of them and delivers them to the purchaser has authority to collect the purchase price; but if he is merely employed to sell, and has no possession of the goods, he has no authority to receive the price; and payment to him will not discharge the purchaser unless there is a known usage of trade or course of business to justify him in making it. Meyer v. Stone, 46 Ark. 210.

Where the travelling salesman of a corporation has power to make a contract in its name, take payments thereon, receive a bond for its fulfilment, and settle with the other party to the contract, his agency is sufficiently established to charge the corporation with notice of what was said and done in respect to liability on the bond at the time of the settlement. Columbus Sewer Pipe Co. v. Ganser, 58 Mich. 386.

A commercial traveller sold his samples and converted the proceeds to his own use. In a suit by his principal against the vendee to recover the value of the samples, the court charged the jury that if the sale of the samples was embraced within the real or apparent scope of the agent's authority, his principal would be bound by the sale and could not recover. The evidence showed the extent of the agent's authority was to exhibit the samples and solicit, receive, and forward orders for merchandise. Held, the law announced by the court was correct; but as there was no evidence of usage enlarging the authority of a commercial agent, and as an agent authorized to sell on credit has no authority to collect the price in the name of his principal, the court below erred in its instruction so far as it related to apparent authority. Kohn v. Washer, 64 Tex. 131.

Orders or subscriptions taken by a book canvasser are contracts between the publisher and the buyer or subscriber. The canvasser will only be liable on them as a guarantor, or where bad faith is shown. He has no right to cancel any of these orders or to transfer them to another publisher. Stoddard v. Warren, 7 Repr. (U. S.) 517.

A drummer is not protected from the penalty denounced by a statute against persons selling goods without license, which requires "that every person acting as a 'drummer' in his own behalf, or for another person or firm, who shall sell, or attempt to sell, goods, wares, or merchandise of any description by wholesale, with or without samples, before soliciting orders, or making any such sales, shall pay the treasurer of the State a tax of $100 and obtain a license, which shall be effective for a year next after its date, and be used by not more than one person at one time, and shall be in the possession of the person while doing business under this section in this State to secure his protection," unless he shall be in the actual possession of the license while doing business. In this case the license was mailed to defendant but not received by him at the time the sale was made. Lewis v. Dugar, 91 N. Car. 16; State v. Smith, 93 N. Car. 519; State v. Long, 95 N. Car. 582.

A law imposing a tax upon drummers and all persons not having a regular licensed house of business in a taxing district and selling goods by sample has, however, been held unconstitutional and void. Robbins v. Taxing Dist. of Shelby Co., 120 U. S. 489. See dissenting opinion of Waite, C. J., in same case.

Same principle sustained in Corson v. Maryland, 120 U. S. 502.

If the legislature of a State frames a law relating to merchants and sample merchants with the intention to discriminate against non-residents in favor of residents, and against goods in other

MISSION OF LUNACY. See LUNACY.

MISSION MERCHANTS OR FACTORS. (See also AGENCY.)

n, 317.
319.
Conferred, 319.
nt Defined by Usage, 319.
Sell in their Own Name, 320.
Sell on Credit, 320.
not Barter or Pledge, 321.
ors' Acts, 323.
er to Insure, 324.
er to Warrant, 324.
cation of Authority, 324.
25.
t Obey Instructions, 325.
e of Sale, 326.
e of Sale, 327.
2, 327.
Protect His Own Interests
er Demand, 327.
ure of Damages, 329.
ication, 329
t Act in Good Faith, 330.
t Use Reasonable Skill and ligence, 330. [331.
ot Delegate his Authority,

Must Account, 332.
Factor's Rights, 333.
Lien, 333.
Lien of Purchasing Factor, 335.
Goods Must be in Factor's Possession, 335.
How Lost, 337.
Waiver, 337.
Principal's Personal Security, 338.
Lien a Personal Privilege, 339.
Bankrupt Acts—Fiduciary Debts,
Commissions, 339. [339.
Del Credere Commissions, 340.
Principal Debtor or Surety, 340.
To be Indemnified, 341. [342.
Relation of Factor to Third Parties,
May Sue in His Own Name, 342.
Factors of Foreign Principals,
Rights of Principals, 344. [343.
Principal May Follow his Goods as Long as they can be Distinguished, 344.
Factor of Several Principals, 345.
Factor is a General Agent, 345.

Definition.—A commission-merchant or factor is an agent for of goods in his possession or consigned to him. The commission-merchant" and "factor" are synonymous, and ne who receives goods, chattels, or merchandise for sale, e, or other disposition, and who is to receive a compensahis services, to be paid by the owner or derived from the he goods.<sup>1</sup>

d by sample in favor of goods n the State for sale, and if the has this practical effect, then sions are null and void, and all d prosecutions under them are ut the legislature has a right inate against sample merchants of merchants, the State being mistress of her own policy in ng what classes she shall lay a x upon, and what classes she pt from such taxation, and in ow lightly or how heavily she e such a tax. Exp. Thornton, ep. 538. See Webber v. Vir-
U. S. 350; Welton v. State, 91
; State v. Browning, 62 Mo.
Taylor, 58 Miss. 478; Walling on, 116 U. S. 446; Machine Co.
oo U. S. 676. Compare Single- sch, 4 Lea (Tenn.), 93.
mercial traveller is neither a r a merchant, so as to make ct to the payment of taxes under a city ordinance; nor will a single sale and delivery of goods by such agent, or by any other person, out of the samples exhibited, or out of any lot of goods, constitute such agent or other person a pedler or a merchant. Kansas v. Collins, 34 Kans. 436; Exp. Taylor, 58 Miss.

478; Com. v. Jones, 7 Bush (Ky.), 502;
Com. v. Farnum, 114 Mass. 267. Com- pare Morrill v. State, 38 Wis. 428.

A commercial agent travelling for his principal at a stated salary per year commits no violation of duty by taking gratuitously orders for goods upon a house in whose service he had formerly been engaged, he not having solicited them, and it not appearing that such orders were in any way prejudicial to the interests of his employers. Gelger v.
Harris, 19 Mich. 209.

1. Perkins v. State, 50 Ala. 154; Gra- ham v. Duckwall, 8 Bush (Ky.), 12; Bar- ling v. Corrie, 2 B. & Ald. 143. See
Blood v. Palmer, 11 Me. 414; s. c., 26

Am. Dec. 547; Ward v. Brandt, 11 Martin (La.), 331; s. c., 23 Am. Dec. 352; Higgins v. Moore, 34 N. Y. 418; Ladd v. Arkell, 37 N. Y. Superior Ct. 35; Duguid v. Edwards, 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 288; Hopkirk v. Bell, 3 Cranch (U. S.), 454; Slack v. Tucker, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 321; Winne v. Hammond, 37 Ill. 99; Taylor v. Wells, 3 Watts (Pa.), 65; Lawrence v. Stonington Bank, 6 Conn. 521; Cotton v. Hiller, 52 Miss. 7.

The term "factor" is seldom used in the United States. 1 Parsons on Contr. (7th Ed.) 100.

The factor must be a specialist pursuing the particular business as a trade. One who undertakes to sell a piece of goods out of his line of business is not therefore a factor. Wharton on Agency, § 735.

If a person has the possession of goods at the time of sale, and he sells them upon credit for a commission, it is sufficient to constitute him a factor within the definition, viz.: An agent employed to sell personal property intrusted to his possession, by or for his principal, for a compensation, commonly called "factorage" or "commission." Edgerton v. Michels, 66 Wis. 124.

A party agreeing with the owners to receive coal shipped to him for sale, hoist from the vessel and put the same on dock, pay the lake freight, and charge the cost of hoisting and putting the coal on the dock, and the lake freight paid by him, against the coal, and who is to receive for docking, screening, selling and delivering the coal, including his commissions, the sum of $1.50 per ton on all coal delivered at any point outside the yard requiring carting and $1.00 per ton on all coal delivered at the yard, and an additional commission of fifty per cent of the net profits on sales, and who agrees to guarantee payment on all sales, advance on the coal as it is shipped $3.00 per ton of the invoice price, to be drawn for at sight on bills of lading, and to pay the shippers as the coal is sold the balance of the proceeds of the sale, and who agrees not to sell the coal below the market price, and to render monthly statements of accounts of sales, will be as to the coal shipped to him a factor or commission-merchant. Burton v. Goodspeed, 69 Ill. 237.

He is called a supercargo if authorized to sell a cargo which he accompanies on the voyage. 1 Beawes Lex. Merc. (6th Ed.) 47.

A partnership having for its object to sell goods consigned to them for a commission may be considered factors.

Bro

75

V

wro

this

wor

mei

cur

feet

and tho

$12

not hav

lett

to b

D.

ven

shij

van

carj

W.

The

the

Co.

god for

Co.

me

sigi

mei

at a g

at l

Wh

A

a fa

a d

tur

liat

age

tor

ing

Shi

We

Col

liar

Sto

He

Da

A

imj

son

sai

a d

usu

dis

ter

cir

pos

aut

con

mo

pre

Powers of Commercial Agents.—How Conferred.—The authority of commercial agents is conferred like the authority of agents in general, either under seal, by power of attorney; in writing, by a deed of appointment or by correspondence; by parol or by implication.<sup>1</sup>

Extent of Power Defined by Usage.—The extent of the power of a factor is, like that of a broker, largely defined by usage. When a particular power is by usage conceded to factors the law recognizes it.<sup>2</sup>

But the broker is in a different position. He is not trusted with the possession of the goods and is not authorized to sell in his own name; and if he does so in his own name he acts beyond the scope of his authority, and his principal is not bound. Baring v. Corrie, 2 Q. B. 143; Saladin v. Mitchell, 45 Ill. 143; Black v. Tucker, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 321; Moore v. Moore, 34 N. Y. 417, 420; Wells on Contr. 91.

A factor, unlike a broker, can only sell goods in his possession or under his possession. A factor gave the following note: "Galveston, Nov. 4, 1872. Received for account of N. from S. 450 bales of cotton, at basis of 15½ cents for ordinary." There was no further possession of the goods until fifteen days later. Held, that there was no sub-sale, the usage of trade under the cotton market allowing only sales for the factor's designation of goods. Harbert v. Neill, 49 Tex. 301. Compare Neill v. Billingsley, 49 Ill. 301.

A broker may act for both parties, and bind them by bought and sold notes. A factor can bind only the seller, and his note will not bind the buyer, so as to carry a transaction out of the Statute of Quinnell v. Evans 6 H. & N. 660. Though a factor is generally designated as an agent who sells goods for his principal on commission, those agents who buy goods for another and receive a commission for their services are also factors. When purchases are made on the strict account of another, the general character of a factor applies to him who buys and to him who sells on commission, and is intrusted in connection with the possession and apparent ownership of the property. Brooks v. Wend, 26 N. Y. 367; Stevens v. Robins, 12 Mass. 182; Wells on Agency, § 34.

See AGENCY (APPOINTMENT OF), § 336; 1 Bell Comm. (4th Ed.) B. 1, ch. iv. § 4, art. 410; Belew v. Jones, 34 Ill. 342; Deahler v. Beers, 32 Ill. 342; 83 Am. Dec. 274.

2. Johnson v. Osborne, 11 Ad. & El. 549; Masted v. Paine, L. R. 4 Ex. 81, 403; Coles v. Bristowe, 17 W. R. 105; Jackson Ins. Co. v. Partee, 9 Helsk. (Tenn.) 296; Cotton v. Miller, 52 Miss. 7; Randall v. Kehler, 60 Me. 97; Phillips v. Moir, 69 Ill. 135; Hatcher v. Comer, 73 Ga. 418; Kauffman v. Beasley, 54 Tex. 563; Goodenow v. Tyler, 7 Mass. 96; s. c., 5 Am. Dec. 22; Dwight v. Whitney, 45 Pick. (Mass.) 179; Roosevelt v. Doherty, 129 Mass. 303; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 356; Frank v. Jenkins, 22 Ohio St. 597.

He has an implied authority to do whatever is usual and necessary to effect the sale, and it is for the jury to decide what is usual. Bayliffe v. Butterworth, 1 Exch. 425; Schuchardt v. Allens, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 959; Randall v. Kehler, 60 Me. 97; Upton v. Suffolk Co. Mills, 11 Cush (Mass.) 586; Smith v. Tracy, 36 N. Y. 79; Andrews v. Kneeland, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 354; Van Alen v. Vanderpool, 6 Johns. N. Y. 70; Palmer v. Hatch, 46 Mo. 585.

Where goods are shipped to a consignee, and on account of an accident to the vessel carrying the goods it becomes necessary to execute a general average bond to the owners of the vessel, such consignee or factor has the right, and it is his duty to execute the bond, so as to carry out the instructions of his principal in regard to the shipment and sale of the goods. Hardee v. Hall, 12 Bush (Ky.), 327. But it is upon the factor to prove that his principal has knowledge of such usage, or that he assented to that method of doing his business. Farmers', etc., Bank v. Sprague, 52 N. Y. 605; Bliss v. Arnold, 8 Vt. 252; s. c., 30 Am. Dec. 467; Duguid v. Edwards, 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 288; Banning v. Bleakley, 27 La. Ann. 257.

A person, however, who deals in a particular market must be taken to deal according to the known general and uniform custom or usage of that market; he who employs another to act for him in that particular place or market must be taken as intending that the business to be done will be done according to the usage and custom of that place or market,

May Sell in Their Own Name.—Factors may sell in their own name the goods of their principals, and they may buy goods in like manner; and in each case the principal will be bound by their acts in the same way and to the same extent as if his own name were used.<sup>1</sup>

May Sell on Credit.—Where the usage of trade justifies it, a factor may sell either for cash or on credit; but where he sells on credit he is held to a very close examination of the credit of parties to whom he sells, and to the exercise of reasonable care as to the security when he takes negotiable paper in payment, and he will not be liable in case of loss where he has exercised such care.<sup>2</sup> whether the principal in fact knew of the usage or custom or not. Bailey v. Bensley 87 Ill. 556; Lyon v. Culbertson, 83 Ill. 33; U. S. Life Ins. Co. v. Advance Co., 80 Ill. 549.

Under the custom of trade in Chicago, a commission man to whom grain is consigned may dispose of the warehouse receipt given him for the same, although directed by the consignor not to sell, but to hold the grain for further orders, if he keeps on hand, ready for delivery when called on, other receipts for a like quantity and grade of grain. The receipts do not represent the consignor's property, but are merely evidences of debt to the consignee. If in such case the commission man, after losing the identity of the grain and disposing of the receipt, fails to keep warehouse receipts for the same amount and grade, it will not amount to a conversion of the grain. The only effect will be to bar his charges for storage and insurance. Bailey v. Bensley, 87 Ill. 556.

A factor, to whom wheat is consigned for storage in an elevator and for sale, may, in the absence of particular instructions, store it in a mass with other wheat of the same grade and quality. He is not responsible to his principal by reason of the established grades of grain being different in the market where he is to sell from the grades at other places. Davis v. Kobe, 30 N. Western Repr. (Minn.) 662.

1. Story on Ag. § 110; 3 Chitty Com. Law, 193; Blood v. Palmer, 11 Me. 414; s. c., 26 Am. Dec. 547; Slack v. Tucker, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 321; Graham v. Duckwall, 8 Bush (Ky.), 12.

2. Leverick v. Meigs, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 645; Van Alen v. Vanderpool, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 69; s. c., 5 Am. Dec. 192; Robertson v. Livingston, 5 Cow. (N. Y.) 473; Leland v. Douglass, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 490; Rich v. Monroe, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 602; Chandler v. Hogle, 58 Ill. 46; Foster v. Waller, 75 Ill. 464; Burton v. Goodspeed, 69 Ill. 237; Parker v. Fergus, 43 Ill. 437; Winne v. Hammond, 37 Ill.

99; McConnico v. Curzen, 2 Call (Va.), 358; s. c., 1 Am. Dec. 540; Daylight Burner v. Odlin, 51 N. H. 56; s. c., 12 Am. Rep. 45; James v. McCredie, 1 Bay (S. Car.), 294; s. c., 1 Am. Dec. 617; Greeley v. Bartlett, 1 Greenl. (Me.) 172; s. c., 10 Am. Dec. 54; Pinckham v. Crocker, 77 Me. 563; Goodenow v. Tyler, 7 Mass. 36; s. c., 5 Am. Dec. 22; Hapgood v. Batcheller, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 576; Roosevelt v. Doherty, 129 Mass. 301; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 356; Clark v. Van Northwick, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 343; Byrne v. Schwing, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 199; Laussatt v. Lippincott, 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 386; May v. Mitchell, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 365; Ernest v. Stoller, 5 Dill. (U. S.) 438; Burrill v. Phillips, 1 Gall. (U. S.) 360; Forrestier v. Boardman, 1 Story (U. S.) 43; Marshall v. Williams, 2 Biss. (U. S.) 255.

A factor may sell his principal's goods upon credit if there be no usage nor instructions to the contrary. But if a factor makes sales to irresponsible parties through want of care and diligence, or is not attentive to his principal's interests after the sale, he is liable to the principal for any loss sustained because of such neglect. Pinkham v. Crocker, 1 New Engl. Repr. 336.

Where he takes notes in payment payable to himself, exercising due care, and the purchaser becomes insolvent, the factor is not liable for the loss. Greeley v. Bartlett, 1 Greenl. (Me.) 172; s. c., 10 Am. Dec. 54; Goodenow v. Tyler, 7 Mass. 36; s. c., 5 Am. Dec. 22; Gorman v. Wheeler, 10 Gray (Mass.), 362; Leach v. Beardslee, 22 Conn. 404.

But he is bound to use due diligence in its collection, and if by a want of diligence on the part of the factor the note is lost, he will be personally liable for the amount. Folsom v. Mussey, 8 Greenl. (Me.) 400; s. c., 23 Am. Dec. 522; Arrott v. Brown, 6 Whart. (Pa.) 9.

Where a factor who has agreed not to sell on credit except to responsible par-

Cannot Barter or Pledge.—Factors have no incidental authority to barter the goods of their principals, or to pledge such goods for advances made to them on their own account or for debts due by themselves. The party receiving such pledge and advancing his money acquires no title as against the principal, and it is of no consequence that the pledgee is ignorant of the factor's not being the owner.<sup>1</sup> ties, and to take no paper except good, first-class collectable paper, and such as he is willing to guarantee, takes paper which he knows to be worthless, he makes himself a guarantor of the paper, and the principal need not return the paper to him as a condition precedent to judgment against him on such guaranty. Clark v. Roberts, 26 Mich. 506.

A factor or commission-merchant, while not a guarantor of the responsibility of the persons with whom he deals, is held to the same degree of care and diligence which a reasonably prudent man would exercise in the management of his own affairs. Housel v. Thrall, 25 N. Western Repr. (Neb.) 612.

A factor who takes notes in his own name for goods of his principal, and discounts them for his own accommodation, makes them his own, and will be liable to the principal for the amount of the sales in the event of the insolvency of the purchaser. Myers v. Entriken, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 44; s. c., 40 Am. Dec. 538; Morris v. Wallace, 3 Pa. St. 319; Goodenow v. Tyler, 7 Mass. 36; s. c., 5 Am. Dec. 22; Johnson v. O'Hara, 5 Leigh (Va.) 456.

And where he takes a bond for a simple contract debt due to him for goods sold on commission, and includes in the same a debt due to himself, he makes himself responsible to his principal for the amount of the goods, as he has deprived him of the means of pursuing his claim against the debtor by extinguishing the debt due by simple contract. Jackson v. Baker, 1 Wash. (U.S.) 394.445.

All securities taken by the factor in payment for his principal's goods, even if taken in his own name, belong to the principal, and do not pass to the factor's assignees in case of his insolvency. Thompson v. Perkins, 3 Mason (U. S.), 232; Kip v. Bank of N. Y., 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 63; Messier v. Amery, 1 Yeates (Pa.), 533; Goodenow v. Tyler, 7 Mass. 36; s. c., 5 Am. Dec. 22.

Where a factor has been induced by fraud to part with the goods of his principal to an insolvent purchaser, who before discovery of the fraud has placed them in such a condition that it is difficult, if not impossible, to follow them, and where the factor, acting in good faith, takes security for the price, and thus affirms the sale, he is acting within the scope of his powers, and his principal is bound. Joslin v. Cowee, 52 N. Y. 90.

Where a factor who has sold on credit takes at the expiration of the credit a note in payment payable to himself, he becomes personally liable. Hosmer v. Beebe, 2 Mart. N. S. (La.) 368.

Where usage or instructions authorize only a sale for cash, a factor cannot sell on credit. Harbert v. Neill, 40 Tex. 143; Kauffmann v. Beasley, 54 Tex. 563; Johnson v. Totten, 3 Cal. 343; s. c., 58 Am. Dec. 412.

1. Story on Agency, § 113; Paley on Ag. (Dunlap's Ed.) 213; Patterson v. Tash, 2 Strange, 1178; Gray v. Agnew, 95 Ill. 315; Wheeler, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Givan, 65 Mo. 89; Bowie v. Napier, 1 McCord (S. Car.), 1; s. c., 10 Am. Dec. 641; First Nat. Bank v. Nelson, 38 Ga. 391; Victor S. M. Co. v. Heller, 44 Wis. 265; McCreary v. Gaines, 55 Tex. 485; Kauffman v. Beasley, 54 Tex. 563; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 818; Kennedy v. Strong, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 128; Rodriguez v. Heffernan, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 417; Walther v. Wetmore, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 7; Urquhart v. M'Iver, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 103; Bonito v. Mosquera, 2 Bosw. (N. Y.) 401; Odiorne v. Maxcy, 13 Mass. 178; Kinder v. Shaw, 2 Mass. 398; Nowell v. Pratt, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 111; Michigan State Bank v. Gardner, 15 Gray (Mass.), 362; Florence Sewing Machine Co. v. Warford, 1 Sweeney (N. Y.), 433; Macky v. Dillinger, 73 Pa. St. 85; Laus-sat v. Lippincott, 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 391; Newbold v. Wright, 4 Rawle (Pa.), 195; Hayes v. Campbell, 55 Cal. 421; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 43; Wright v. Solomon, 19 Cal. 64; s. c., 79 Am. Dec. 196; Horr v. Barker, 11 Cal. 393; s. c., 70 Am. Dec. 791; Hutchinson v. Bours, 6 Cal. 383; Chicago Taylor Printing Press Co. v. Lowell, 60 Cal. 454; Bott v. McCoy, 20 Ala. 578; s. c., 56 Am. Dec. 223; Voss v. Robertson, 46 Ala. 483; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Trenholm, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 520; Allen v. St. Louis Nat. Bank, 7 Sup. Ct. Repr. 460; Mechanics', etc., Ins. Co. v. Kiger, 103 U. S. 352;

Van Amringe v. Peabody, 1 Mas. (U. S.) 440; Evans v. Potter, 2 Gall. (U. S.) 12; Warner v. Martin, 11 How. (U. S.) 209; Kelly v. Smith, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 290; Steiger v. Third Bank, 2 McCrary (U. S.), 494.

In Hutchinson v. Bours, 6 Cal. 385; Horr v. Barker, 11 Cal. 93; s. c., 70 Am. Dec. 791, and Glidden v. Lucas, 7 Cal. 26, the application of this rule was restricted to "technical" factors.

Local usage will be no defence against a pledge of goods by a factor. Newbold v. Wright, 4 Rawle (Pa.), 213.

As to Barter, see Guerreiro v. Peile, 3 B. & A. 646; Wing v. Neal, 2 Atl. Repr. (Me.) 881; Potter v. Dennison, 5 Gilm. (Ill.) 590.

Where notes are executed to a factor, and goods are shipped to him to be sold and the proceeds applied to the payment of the notes, a pledgee who takes the notes and the goods as collateral for advances, with notice that the pledgor is a factor, is bound to apply the proceeds of the goods to the payment of the notes; and these facts constitute a defence to an action on the notes by the pledgee against the maker. St. Louis Nat. Bank v. Ross, 9 Mo. App. 399.

The fact that the consignor invoiced the goods to the person so making the pledge, as purchaser, and not as factor, and that the consignor so directed for the purpose of concealing the fact that the goods were to be sold on commission from an association of which the consignor was a member, and which prohibited the sale of such goods on commission, would not operate to estop the owner from claiming the goods as against the pledgee, the latter having no knowledge of such facts at the time he received the pledge, and his action in respect thereto having in nowise been influenced by their existence. Gray v. Agnew, 95 Ill. 315.

A factor does not lose the power to sell by pledging the goods of his principal for his own debt; and if he afterwards sells and delivers the goods to a bona fide purchaser, and, the goods not being removed, the pledgee sells them and receives the proceeds, the latter is liable therefor on demand to the purchaser in an action of assumpsit. Nowell v. Pratt, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 111.

The purchase of property by a factor in his own name makes him to all the world the apparent owner, and as far as affects the rights of third persons, his power over the goods is unlimited, and he has the right to sell or pledge. Leet v. Wadsworth, 5 Cal. 404.

A factor cannot deliver the goods of his principal in payment of his own debts, or sell them in an irregular manner so as to pass title, and that not even where he has a lien on the goods to the full extent of their value. Benny v. Rhodes, 18 Mo. 147; s. c., 59 Am. Dec. 293; Benny v. Pegram, 18 Mo. 191; s. c., 59 Am. Dec., 298; Wheeler & Wilson Mfg. Co. v. Given, 65 Mo. 89; Warner v. Martin, 11 How. (U. S.) 209.

But he may pledge to the extent of a lien he has on the goods for expenses, advances, and commissions, the payment of duties or other charges justified by the usage of trade. Warner v. Martin, 11 How. (U. S.) 209; Evans v. Potter, 2 Gall. (U. S.) 12; Blair v. Childs, 10 Heisk. (Tenn.) 199; Compare Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Trenholm, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 520; Walther v. Wetmore, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 7.

Where a principal draws a sight draft upon his factor before the latter has sold the goods consigned, a pledge by the factor to secure a loan with which to meet the draft is valid. Boyce v. Bank of Commerce, 22 Fed. Repr. 53.

Although a factor has no right to pledge the goods of his principal, yet the amount sought to be recovered of an innocent pledgee of the factor by the consignor must be reduced by the sum due from him to the factor. If the pledgee has acted in good faith, the measure of damages is the actual loss sustained by the consignor, and therefore the amount due to the factor by the consignor must be deducted from his demand against the pledgee. First Nat. Bank of Louisville v. Boyce, 78 Ky. 42; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 198.

Where goods were entrusted to a merchandise broker to sell not below a fixed price, and to deliver them and receive payment, and he deposited them in accordance with a usage with a commission merchant, connected with an auctioneer, taking his notes for them, and some of them were afterward sold below the price named, it was held that the deposit bound the principal, and that he could not bring trover for the goods. Laussatt v. Lippincott, 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 386.

A factor who has pledged his principal's goods cannot disaffirm his own tortious act. The violation of his authority is injurious to the principal alone, and he may ratify or confirm the act at his pleasure; but the factor is estopped by his act, and cannot be allowed to allege his own violation of authority to set aside the transfer or to recover the goods,

Factors' Acts.—In England and in most of the States, acts have been passed for the protection of third parties who in good faith, without any intention to defraud, advance money on the goods consigned to the factor. Some of those acts protect a third party only where he deals with the factor, not knowing that he is not the real owner of the property. Some protect him only for actual advances and not for antecedent debts, others protect him under all circumstances. These acts, however, do not affect the liability of the factor as to his principal, nor restrict the right of the principal to recover his goods upon payment of the advances.<sup>1</sup> and he may not subsequently sell the goods and so enable the vendees to set aside the contract of pledge. Bott v. McCoy, 20 Ala. 578; s. c., 56 Am. Dec. 223.

Though a factor cannot pledge the goods of his principal as his own, yet he may deliver them to a third person as security, with notice of his lien, and as his agent to keep the possession for him in order to preserve that lien. Where A consigned a vessel and cargo to B at Liverpool, and advised him that he should make him secure for the acceptance of his bills, and sent him a power of attorney to sell the vessel, with directions to sell her in England, but if that could not be done, to procure a freight, or load her with as much salt as the funds of A were equal to, and send her to New York; and B loaded the vessel with coals, and having under the power from A executed a bill of sale of the vessel to C, of New York, and sent the vessel and cargo to C, with directions to reconvey and deliver them to A on his paying the balance due to B for advances; otherwise, to sell them and place the proceeds to the credit of B, paying over the balance that might remain to A, who was also informed by B of the transfer and consignment to C. A refused to accept the vessel and cargo from C, contending that B had made the vessel his own. It was held that B, not having followed the orders of A in relation to the cargo, it belonged to B, and that A was not bound to accept it, nor liable for any charges attending it; that the vessel being intended as security to B, he had a lien upon her for his advances; and that the assignment of C, being merely for the purpose of preserving that lien, and not an absolute sale, A was bound to accept the ship, and pay the premium for insurance and all the advances made by B for repairs, etc. Urquhart v. M'Iver, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 103.

Where a principal receives money arising from sale of goods by his factor, the factor having previously pledged the goods without authority to the plaintiff, this will not be regarded as a confirmation of the sale and as a disaffirmance of the pledge if the principal was ignorant of the source from which the money came at the time he received it. Bott v. McCoy, 20 Ala. 578; s. c., 56 Am. Dec. 223.

1. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 39, and the statutes of the various States. Jennings v. Merrill, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 9; Stevens v. Wilson, 3 Denio (N. Y.) 472; Cartwright v. Wilmerding, 24 N. Y. 521; First Nat. Bank v. Shaw, 61 N. Y. 283; Kinsey v. Leggett, 71 N. Y. 387; Covell v. Hill, 6 N. Y. 374; Wilson v. Nason, 4 Bosw. (N. Y.) 155; Bonito v. Mosquera, 2 Bosw. (N. Y.) 401; Howland v. Woodruff, 60 N. Y. 73; Walther v. Wetmore, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.), 7; Florence S. M. Co. v. Warford, 1 Sweeney (N. Y.), 433; Mechanics, etc., Bank v. F. & M. Bank, 60 N. Y. 40; Macky v. Dillinger, 73 Pa. St. 85; Steiger v. Third Nat. Bank, 2 McCrary (U. S.), 494; Mechanics, etc., Insurance Co. v. Kiger, 103 U. S. 352; Evans v. Potter, 2 Gall. (U. S.) 13; Van Amringe v. Peabody, 1 Mason (U. S.), 440; Kelly v. Smith, 1 Blatchf. (U. S.) 290; Brooks v. Hanover Nat. Bank, 26 Fed. Repr. 301; Allen v. St. Louis Nat. Bank, 7 Supr. Ct. Repr. 460; Price v. Wisconsin, etc., Ins. Co., 43 Wis. 267; Victor, etc., Co. v. Heller, 44 Wis. 265; Davis v. Russell, 52 Cal. 611; Voss v. Robertson, 46 Ala. 483; Stollenwerck v. Thatcher, 115 Mass. 224; Michigan State Bank v. Gardner, 15 Gray (Mass.), 362; Nickerson v. Darrow, 5 Allen (Mass.), 419; Ullman v. Barnard, 7 Gray (Mass.), 554.

The factors' acts protect only factors. Factors' clerks, warehousemen, bailees, are not factors within the meaning of the acts, and are not protected by them. Zachrisson v. Ahman, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 68; Covill v. Hill, 4 Denio (N. Y.), 323; Manufacturers, etc., Bank v. Farmers, etc., Bank, 2 Th. & C. (N. Y.) 395.

Power to Insure.—Although factors are under no obligation to insure the property of their principals, unless compelled by direct orders or the usage of trade, they are at liberty to do so, and to charge the latter with the premiums.<sup>1</sup>

Power to Warrant.—A factor has implied power to warrant, where the goods he sells are usually warranted as to quality and quantity.<sup>2</sup>

Revocation of Authority.—The authority of a factor, like that of any other agent, is revocable at any time except when coupled with an interest. Where the factor has made advances or incurred expenses, his power is irrevocable to the extent of his lien for such expenses or advances.<sup>3</sup>

1. Shoenfeld v. Fleisher, 73 Ill. 404; Schaeffer v. Kirk, 49 Ill. 251; Brisban v. Boyd, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 17; De Forest v. Fulton Fire Ins. Co., 1 Hall (N. Y.) 84; Lee v. Adsit, 37 N. Y. 78; Etna Ins. Co. v. Jackson, 16 B. Monr. (Ky.) 242; Duncan v. Boye, 17 La. Ann. 273; Randolph v. Ware, 3 Cranch (U. S.) 503.

Where he is bound to insure and neglects it, he becomes the insurer himself, and may charge the premiums. De Tastett v. Croustillat, 2 Wash. (U. S.) 132; Gordon v. Wright, 29 La. Ann. 812; Shoenfeld v. Fleisher, 73 Ill. 404; Waters v. Monarch, F. & L. Ins. Co., 5 El. & Bl. 870.

Where he has insured, but fails to collect the insurance money after loss, he becomes liable himself as insurer. Gordon v. Wright, 29 La. Ann. 812.

If a factor, without instructions to that effect, is in the habit of insuring goods consigned to him, and without the knowledge of the consignor he deviates from his custom, he will be held liable for consequent loss. Where such custom is known to the consignor by uniform charges for insurance in his accounts rendered, the factor will be deemed to have continued the practice until he gives notice of the change. Area v. Milliken, 35 La. Ann. 1150.

A contract by agents with their principal, respecting property delivered to the agents for sale, required the latter to "take out a policy or policies of insurance for the benefit" of the principal, and to pay the expense of the same. It further provided that any property unsold eight months after its consignment to the agents should be subject to the order of the principal. The contract was construed as not requiring the agents to keep the property insured, but only to insure it for a reasonable time, not exceeding eight months. Hence the agents were not liable for the value of such property destroyed by fire, without their fault, three years after its consignment to them under such contract. Milburn Wagon Co. v. Evans, 30 Minn. 89.

Where a factor solicits consignments and states that the goods will be insured as soon as received, this will not him an insurer. It will be sufficient if he insures in good and reliable companies, and if they afterward fail not be liable in case of loss. Johnson v. Campbell, 120 Mass. 449.

The factor may insure in his own name, and where he has done so he may in case of loss recover the insurance for his principal. Sargent B. & Ald. 277; Upsaricha East, 332; Shack v. Anthon 573; Johnson v. Campbell 449.

2. Schuchardt v. Allen, 1 359; Skinner v. Gunn, 9 Po. 359; Bradford v. Bush, 10 Ala. 359; Jameson, 6 Fred. L. (1) 359; Palmer v. Hatch, 46 Mo. 51; McClenahan, 9 Ill. 85; Kehlor, 60 Me. 37; Upton v. Mills, 11 Cush (Mass.) 5; Tracy, 36 N. Y. 79; Nelson v. Hill (N. Y.) 336.

But a factor cannot bind himself by submitting to arbitration damages arising out of an implied warranty of the thing sold. Carnochan v. Bailey L. (9. Car.) 179; 1 Dec. 668.

3. Bell v. Hannah, 3 Bax. 359; Mooney v. Musser, 45 Ind. 359; Smith, 56 Mo. 314; Nelson v. R. Co., 2 Ill. App. 11; McGraw, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 48.

Express or tacit revocation by principal, or by death, bankruptcy, will have no effect to deprive the factor of the benefit of his authority in extricating himself

Duties of Factors.—Must Obey Instructions.—Commercial agents, other agents, must obey the instructions of their principals. If they do not, they will be liable in damages for loss which may be caused by such disobedience.<sup>1</sup> already begun, or from consequence of his having acted; or to dealers who have relied on his authority for the benefit of the transactions they have previously entered into, or even to disturb transactions into, while he still appeared to have authority undiminished. 1 Bell (Ed.) p. 489.

The authority of a factor is retained if he makes a sale before notice of revocation reaches him, and delivers the goods, the purchaser acquires the goods in preference to one to whom the principal has sold without notice. Jones v. Hodgkins, 61 Me. 389; Torre v. Thiele, 25 La.

v. Arnold, 8 Vt. 252; s. c., 30 Vt. 467; Bigelow v. Walker, 24 Vt. 58 Am. Dec. 156; Howatt v. Munf. (Va.) 34; s. c., 7 Am. 1; Pulsifer v. Shepard, 36 Ill. 51; Field v. Goodhue, 3 N. Y. 62; v. Littlefield, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 15; v. Root, 7 N. Y. 186; Scott v. 31 N. Y. 676; Marfield v. 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 360; Milbank v. 21 N. Y. 386; Day v. 13 Ga. 508; Gray v. Bass, 42 Heinkin v. Barbrey, 40 Ga. 249; v. Comer, 73 Ga. 418; Cotton v. 52 Miss. 7; Capes v. Phelps, 55 Ann. 562; Maggoffin v. Cowan, 55 N. 554; Poindexter v. King, 21 697; Weed v. Adams, 37 Conn. 55; v. Pease, 99 Mass. 555; v. Wade, 2 Baxt. (Tenn.) 480; Stewart, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 137; Gibney, 59 Md. 131; Field v. 10, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 141; Mar-Williams, 2 Biss. (U. S.) 255; Brook, 20 Fed. Repr. 611; McGraw, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 479; v. Pomeroy, 13 Mo. 620; Connett, 11 Mo. 88; Barks-rown, 1 Nott & M. (S. Car.) v. Campbell, 1 Bay (S. Car.), ine, etc., Co. v. Heintzman, 17 S. 56.

Instructions must be positive. Mann v. Laws, 117 Mass.

If a factor has received cotton to which a bill is drawn against it, and he receives order to sell before or after maturity of the bill, he must obey, and if he does so he will be held liable for any loss accruing thereby. Johnson v. Wade, 2 Baxt. (Tenn.) 480.

Even where they disobey through mistake they are liable if loss occurs. Rundle v. Moore, 3 Johns. Cas. 37.

Or where the factor's motive is to promote the interests of his principal. Guy v. Oakley, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 333; Hatcher v. Comer, 73 Ga. 418.

Usage or custom will be no defence where the factor disobeys his instructions. Hall v. Storrs, 7 Wis. 253; Barksdale v. Brown, 1 Nott & M. (S. Car.) 517; Hatcher v. Comer, 73 Ga. 418.

A commission-merchant, in giving terms on which sales would be made by him, wrote: "Will charge you 5 per cent, and send you the proceeds in cash." He sold the goods on a sixty-days' note. The maker failed, and it was held that the commission-merchant was liable, he having violated the terms of sale. Sheffield v. Linn, 28 N. Western Repr. (Mich.) 761.

When he is instructed to insure he must do so. De Tastett v. Crousillatt, 2 Wash. (U. S.) 132; Shoenfeld v. Fleisher, 73 Ill. 404; Thorne v. Deas, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 84.

If a firm indebted to factors shipped to them cotton, with instructions to sell the same and apply the proceeds to the debt, and the factors failed to do so, and their debtors were thereby injured, the latter could recoup the amount of such damage against a suit on the debt. Hatcher v. Comer, 73 Ga. 418.

Where a commission-merchant in Omaha, doing business in San Francisco, caused commission goods to be consigned to another person in San Francisco, that person being one whom the consignor had stated to him he (the consignor) would have no dealings with, such commission-merchant could not release himself from liability resulting from the loss of the consigned property on the ground that the person to whom the goods were shipped was a sub-agent, for whose acts he could not be held responsible. And the fact that the goods were consigned to the objectionable person by the consignor would not change the application of this rule; it being shown that the commission-merchant was purchasing other goods of the consignor at the same time, and causing them to be shipped to such person in the same way. Housel v. Thrall, 25 N. Western Repr. (Neb.) 612.

Place of Sale.—Goods consigned to a factor are supposed to be sold at the place of residence of the factor, unless special instructions or the usage of trade direct differently.<sup>1</sup>

A consigned several lots of goods to B at different times, to be sold by B for A's account, at prices fixed in the invoices. On two certain days, B reported to A that he had sold the goods then on hand at prices below those limited in the invoices, both of which sales were promptly repudiated by A, by telegram and letter, and the reported sales were thereupon cancelled by B. Subsequently, B wrote to A, asking him to allow sales on the present market. A refused to give permission for such sales, and offered to pay back advances made on the goods by B and withdraw the consignment, if B was not willing to wait. Afterwards B, without further correspondence with A, sold the goods at prices less than he was authorized to do. A refused to approve the sale; and upon B declining to cancel the same, brought an action against him for breach of the contract. At the trial, B offered evidence to show that, in previous transactions between the parties, A had ratified sales by B at lower prices than those limited in the invoices. Held, that this evidence was properly excluded. Loehnerberg v. Atherton, 141 Mass. 578.

Factors at Kansas City were instructed by their principal to place the proceeds of a sale of cattle to his credit in the E. bank in Denver. The factors deposited the money in the M. Bank in Kansas City to the credit of the E. Bank. The M. Bank failed before the money was transmitted to the E. Bank. Held, that the factors were liable for the loss, in the absence of a usage between the banks in the two cities of transmitting money in this way. Ernest v. Stoller, 5 Dillon (U. S.) 438.

Where a factor is directed to sell for a fixed price at a certain day, and if not sold to ship, the factors have no right to take an order on the day named, to be accepted the next day. Scott v. Rogers, 4 Abb. Dec. (N. Y.) 157.

The owner of a horse placed him in the hands of a commission-merchant for sale. The commission-merchant exchanged him for another horse and $25 in money. Held, that his authority as commission-merchant ceased and his liability to account to the owner accrued when that exchange was made; that the owner was not liable for losses arising from subsequent exchanges, nor for the board of horses after the first exchange. Wing v. Neal, 1 New Eng. Repr. 665.

Where a purchasing factor buys for his principal at a price exceeding the limit prescribed, and the principal upon learning the fact repudiate the purchase, the title to the goods becomes absolute in the factor, and none passes to the principal for whom the purchase was made. The Sally Magee, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 451.

Where a factor agreed with his principal to purchase for him 50,000 bushels of wheat, in consideration that the latter would immediately forward to him by express $10,000, and the residue to pay for such purchase in four or five days, and where the principal wholly failed to forward the money though the factor had immediately purchased 20,000 bushels of the wheat, held, that the factor was under no obligation to purchase the residue of the 50,000 bushels. Rice v. Montgomery, 4 Biss. (U. S.) 75.

A factor purchased wheat for his principal, the latter agreeing to put up ten cents per bushel as a margin, and to put up more margin in case of a decline in price, the factor in the mean time to store the wheat and to hold it to secure his advances, until ordered to sell. The price did decline, and the factor asked for more margin or for instructions in regard to a sale, which the principal did not give, whereupon the factor sold the wheat at a loss. Held, that the factor had a right to sell, no margin being put up after demand. Moeller v. McLagan, 60 Ill. 317; Hornsby v. Fielding, 10 Heisk. (Tenn.) 367; Kraft v. Fancher, 44 Md. 204.

But such a factor cannot sell to protect himself from loss until reasonable notice given to his principal, or such notice as is required by the usages of trade; and where he sells against orders while there are sufficient margins in his hands and loss results, he will be liable to make good the loss and to return the full amount deposited as margins. Denton v. Jackson, 106 Ill. 433; Larminie v. Carley, 114 Ill. 196.

1. Phillips v. Scott, 43 Mo. 86; Kauffman v. Beasley, 54 Tex. 563; Wallace v. Bradshaw, 6 Dana (Ky.), 382; Phy v. Clark, 35 Ill. 377.

Where a factor reship goods consigned to him by his principal without the latter's advice, and the goods are sold at a loss, the factor will be liable for the difference in the price for which they were sold and the market value of the goods in the first port. Grieff v. Cowguill, 2 Disn. (Ohio) 58.

Time of Sale.—In the absence of special instructions, a factor is required to sell goods consigned to him within a reasonable time after he has received them; and if he fails to do so, and the goods depreciate on his hands, he will be liable for the value.<sup>1</sup>

Price.—A factor is not justified in selling at a price below that fixed by his principal from the single fact that he has made advances on the property.<sup>2</sup>

May Protect his Own Interests After Demand.—But if it becomes necessary for him to disobey his instructions and sell for a lower price in order to protect his interests and prevent the loss of his advances and other expenses, he may make a demand upon his principal for reimbursement; and in case such reimbursement is not made, he may sell at any time for the best price he can get, unless he is restrained by a special agreement.<sup>3</sup>

1. Atkinson v. Burton, 4 Bush (Ky.), 299.

Where, not being limited to a certain price, he sells them when in the exercise of a sound discretion, and the price they bring does not equal the amount of his advances, the principal will be liable for the difference. Given v. Lemoine, 35 Mo. 110.

2. George v. McNeill, 7 La. 124; s. c., 26 Am. Dec. 498; Hilton v. Vanderbilt, 82 N. Y. 591; Marfield v. Goodhue, 3 N. Y. 62; Gray v. Bass, 42 Ga. 270.

And where he has made advances on the goods consigned to him, even to an amount beyond their value, he is yet bound to obey the instructions of his principal as to the time of sale; and if, being instructed to sell immediately, he refuse the first offer in expectation of a more favorable market, and afterward sell at less than the offer, he is liable, though he acted in perfect good faith. Bell v. Palmer, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 128; Howland v. Davis, 40 Mich. 545.

3. Blot v. Boicean, 3 N. Y. 78; s. c., 51 Am. Dec. 345; Milliken v. Dehon, 27 N. Y. 364; Blackmar v. Thomas, 28 N. Y. 67; Marfield v. Goodhue, 3 Comst. (N. Y.) 62; Frothingham v. Everton, 12 N. H. 239; Parker v. Brancker, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 40; Davis v. Kobe, 30 N. Western Rep'r. (Minn.) 662; Porter v. Patterson, 15 Pa. St. 229; Howland v. Davis, 40 Mich. 545; Butterfield v. Stephens, 59 Iowa, 596; Hallowell v. Fawcett, 30 Iowa, 491; Howard v. Smith, 56 Mo. 314; Mooney v. Musser, 45 Ind. 115; Brown v. McGraw, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 479; Feild v. Farrington, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 141; Bell v. Hannah, 3 Baxt. (Tenn.) 47; Hornsby v. Fielding, 10 Heisk. (Tenn.) 367; Beadles v. Hartmus, 7 Baxt. (Tenn.) 476; Whitney v. Wyman, 24 Md. 131; Ward v. Bledsoe, 32 Tex. 251; Cotton v. Hiller, 52 Miss.

7; Weed v. Adams, 37 Conn. 378. Compare Smart v. Sanders, 5 M. G. & S. 895.

Where goods were consigned to a factor for sale, without instructions as to the price for which they were to be sold, and the factor advanced money to the consignor to an amount greater than the value of the goods, and, after such advances, the consignor instructed the factor not to sell for less than a certain price, as he could do better by having the goods returned, and the factor thereupon informed the consignor that the goods had not been sold, and that it was doubtful whether they could be sold at the price fixed, and that he would await further instructions, stating that, if the consignor wished to remove the goods, an account of the advances would be rendered, and the amount could be remitted at the time the goods were ordered to be removed, to which the consignor made no response; held, that after the lapse of a reasonable time the factor might sell the goods for the best price he could get in the market. Mooney v. Musser, 45 Ind. 115.

And even a previous demand may not be necessary where it would be impracticable or useless, as where the principal lives in another country or is insolvent. Brown v. McGraw, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 479.

He may in such a case, however, sell only as much of the goods as is necessary to cover the advances and expenses. Butterfield v. Stephens, 59 Iowa, 596; Weed v. Adams, 37 Conn. 378; Fordyce v. Peper, 16 Fed. Repr. 516.

Where a factor has made large advances to his principal upon the property consigned for sale, and the property becomes doubtful security for his reimbursement, and the principal refuses or neglects to comply with his reasonable demands to repay or secure him for such advances, the factor may, after reason.

able notice to his principal, in good faith, and with reasonable discretion, sell the property, although directed by the principal to hold it longer. Davis v. Kobe, 30 N. Western Repr. (Minn.) 662.

A factor who has made advances on the credit of the goods consigned to him for sale has a right to sell enough to reimburse his advances, unless restrained by some agreement with his consignor. If a cotton factor for a sufficient consideration agrees to hold the cotton of a consignor until the opening of the market the next year, he is bound to do so; and if he sells the cotton before that time without the consent of the consignor, he is liable for the difference between the price at the time he sold and the price at the time he was authorized to sell. For-dyce v. Peper, 16 Fed. Repr. 516. Compare Smart v. Sanders, 5 Man. G. & S. 895; De Comas v. Prost, 3 Moore P. C. N. S. 158.

Where a factor advanced money on a consignment of goods under an agreement that if the consignor should fail, in case of a decline in the price, to pay him a stipulated sum, the factor should be at liberty to sell at private or public sale or otherwise, such agreement may be enforced. Milliken v. Dehon, 27 N. Y. 364.

Where a factor who has made advances on a consignment of goods in his hands receives order from his principal to sell at once, he may disregard the order if the state of the market is such that the goods would not bring sufficient to cover his advances. Blair v. Childs, 10 Heisk. (Tenn.) 199; Weed v. Adams, 37 Conn. 378; Howland v. Davis, 40 Mich. 545.

Where factors have made large advances on account of a consignment, the principal cannot by any subsequent orders control their right to sell at such time as in the exercise of a sound discretion and in accordance with the usages of trade they may deem best to secure indemnity to themselves and to promote the interests of the consignor. Feild v. Farrington, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 141; Rice v. Brook, 20 Fed. Repr. 611; Brown v. McGrau, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 479; Talcott v. Chew, 27 Fed. Repr. 273; Butterfield v. Stephens, 59 Iowa, 596; Cotton v. Hiller, 52 Miss. 7; Gihon v. Stanton, 5 Seld. (N. Y.) 476; Blackman v. Thomas, 28 N. Y. 67; Howard v. Smith, 56 Mo. 314; Denny v. Rhodes, 18 Mo. 147; Phillips v. Scott, 43 Mo. 92. Compare Ward v. Bledsoe, 32 Tex. 251.

Except as to such surplus as is not necessary for the reimbursements of the advances. Nelson v. Chicago, etc., R.

Co., 2 Ill. App. 180; Bell v. Hannah, 59 Tenn. 47; Howard v. Smith, 56 Mo. 314.

Under extraordinary circumstances a factor may disobey his principal's orders where the interests of the latter are protected by such disobedience. So where an order to a commission-merchant was given to sell at once, accepting a certain offer, he will be justified in refusing an offer to sell upon credit to a party whom he knows to be irresponsible, and he will not be liable in damages if the goods depreciate upon his hands before he can make a sale. Durant v. Fish, 40 Iowa, 559. And see Joslin v. Cowee, 52 N. Y. 90; Drummond v. Wood, 2 Cai. (N. Y.) 310; Lawler v. Keaquick, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 174; Judson v. Sturgis, 5 Day (Conn.) 556.

Or where the goods were of a perishable nature he may sell them at the best price he can get at once, even if he had instructions to sell only at a stipulated price, where a postponement of the sale would cause total or greater loss. Story on Ag. § 141.

A owned several lots of grain, which he had pledged as security for various loans, and which he consigned to his factor B to sell, with instructions to sell for a sum greater than the amount of the loans. One of the lots consisted of three boat-loads of corn which was pledged for a loan of $23,000. One of the boat-loads became heated, and to save it B took it out of pledge, assuming the payment of the whole $23,000. At the time the price of the corn was rising. Held, that this was within the authority of B; and even if he had not the authority, the emergency was such as to justify him in the act, and he was not liable to A for a loss resulting from the sale of the damaged corn. Jervis v. Hoyt, 5 Th. & C. (N. Y.) 199.

An agent to buy and ship wheat to Nashville shipped a quantity to Sander's Ferry, on the Cumberland River. The boat containing it sank when near its destination, and the agent sold the wheat to the carrier. Held, that the emergency did not authorize the sale. Foster v. Smith, 2 Cold. (Tenn.) 474.

A factor with orders not to sell below a certain price is not liable for a sale at a lower price, where a higher price than that at which the sale was made could not have been obtained at any time between the time of sale and inception of the suit, and if in addition the sale made was rather to the advantage than to the detriment of the principal. But the principal may show that he was actually injured. George v. McNeill, 7 La. 124;

Measure of Damages.—Where a factor sells in disregard of his instructions, as where he sells while ordered to hold on to the goods or where he sells for a lower price than the one set on the instructions by the principal, the measure of damages will be the actual loss sustained by the principal, which is the difference between the price for which the goods are actually sold and the price which they would have been obtained between the time of sale and the inception of the suit, perhaps down to the time of the trial,—not the difference in the price set by the principal and the one obtained. Where no loss has been sustained the principal will be entitled to nominal damages only.<sup>1</sup>

Ratification.—An unauthorized sale by a factor may be ratified by the principal either expressly or impliedly, as by receiving without objection the proceeds of the sale.<sup>2</sup>

16 Am. Dec. 498; Blot v. Boiceau, 1 N. Y. 78; s. c., 51 Am. Dec. 345. Where the principal's orders are not explicit, the factor is allowed to sell at his best discretion according to the current of trade. Geyer v. Decker, 1 Pa. 487; Mann v. Laws, 117 Pa. 293; Bessent v. Harris, 63 N. Y. 442; Jervis v. Hoyt, 5 Th. & C. 199; Brown v. McGraw, 14 Pet. 480.

In the absence of special instructions to sell for fair value or market price, if he sells or falsely accounts at a lower price, he is liable to make adequate compensation for the property. W v. Walker, 24 Vt. 149; s. c., 58 Am. Dec. 156. See Adams v. Capron, 186; s. c., 83 Am. Dec. 566.

Where one sends corn to a factor whose sole business it is to sell corn, the presumption is that the corn is sent to be sold, no instructions having been given; and if sold at a lower price than the true market value, and the proceeds remitted to the sender and apparent owner, the factor has performed his duty in the transaction. Dows v. McCleary, 14 Ill. 37.

A factor received cotton from his principal with order to sell immediately. He did not sell, but wrote to his principal, advising him to wait for a better market, and asking for immediate instructions. The principal did take no notice of the letter, sent no instructions, but repeated his order for an immediate sale. Held, that the factor was liable only for delay after the principal's last letter. McLendon v. Wilson, 41.

Blot v. Boiceau, 3 N. Y. 78; s. c., 51 Am. Dec. 345; Hinde v. Smith, 6 N. Y. 466; Mills v. Gould, 10 J. N. Y. 123; Romaine v. Van Allen, 1 N. Y. 315; Davendorf v. Wert, 42

Barb. (N. Y.) 229; Frothingham v. Everton, 12 N. H. 239; Gray v. Bass, 42 Ga. 270; Dalby v. Stearns, 132 Mass. 230; Maynard v. Pease, 99 Mass. 555; For- dyce v. Peper, 16 Fed. Repr. 516; Anstill v. Crawford, 7 Ala. 335; Ainsworth v. Partillo, 13 Ala. 460. And see Whelan v. Lynch, 60 N. Y. 469.

Where the consignment is of articles which have no market value, as antique paintings, statues, vases, etc., it seems that the principal may insist upon the prices named in the instructions without regard to the market. Blot v. Boiceau, 3 N. Y. 78; s. c., 51 Am. Dec. 345.

Where a factor to buy makes a purchase against his principal's orders and a loss occurs, he will be held only for actual, not for speculative damages. So where the owners of a brig sent her to Leghorn with orders to his factors to load her with tiles and wrapping-paper and send her to Havana, and the factors loaded her only with wrapping paper, which was sold at Havana at a loss, the factors were held liable in damages, the amount of damages being estimated by the difference in the price of the tiles at Leghorn and at Havana at the time of the transaction. Bell v. Cunningham, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 69.

2 Meyer v. Morgan, 51 Miss. 21; s. c., 24 Am. Rep. 617; Peters v. Ballistier, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 495; Woodward v. Suydam, 11 Ohio, 363; Cairnes v. Bleecker, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 304; Bredin v. Dubarry, 14 S. & R. (Pa.) 30; Marshall v. Williams, 2 Biss. (U. S.) 255; Richmond Mfg. Co. v. Starks, 4 Mas. (U. S.) 296; Bray v. Gunn, 53 Ga. 144; Curtis v. Gibney, 59 Md. 131.

After a long delay in the sale of wool consigned to a factor, if the consignor, with full knowledge of the facts, and uninfluenced by concealment or fraud on

Must Act in Good Faith.—A factor is required to act with the utmost good faith toward his principal in the discharge of his duties.<sup>1</sup>

Must Use Reasonable Skill and Diligence.—Factors are required to act with reasonable skill and diligence in the business entrusted to them. They must bestow such care upon it as prudent and careful business people are in the habit of bestowing upon their own affairs.<sup>2</sup> his factor's part, authorizes the latter to sell at his discretion, he thereby ratifies the action of the factor in not having sold before. Rice v. Brook, 20 Fed. Repr. 611.

Where a party directed a commission-merchant to sell a lot of wheat for him at not less than $1.05 per bushel, with the privilege to the seller to deliver the same at his option at any time during the current year, and the merchant sold the same at $1.02½ per bushel, and immediately notified the principal, who made no reply, and expressed no intention to disaffirm the sale until about a month afterward, when wheat was considerably advanced, held, that a ratification of the sale was properly inferred from the circumstances. Searing v. Butler, 69 Ill. 575; Hurd v. Marple, 2 Bradw. (Ill.) 402.

See AGENCY (RATIFICATION), vol. i. p. 429 et seq.

1. Babcock v. Orbison, 25 Ind. 75; Shaw v. Stone, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 228, 248.

A stipulation in a mortgage given to secure a pre-existing debt drawing the highest conventional rate of interest and containing no covenant for advances, that the mortgagor would ship the mortgagee, who was a cotton factor, 700 bales of cotton for sale on commission, and that the mortgagor would pay the mortgagee commissions at the rate of $1.25 per bale on the 700 bales whether shipped or not, is without consideration and void; and if the cotton is not shipped the factor cannot charge commissions for selling it. Norman v. Peper, 24 Fed. Repr. 403.

A factor who advances money on a consignment is still the agent of the consignor, and must act in good faith, so as to promote the latter's interest as well as to indemnify himself. Rice v. Brook, 20 Fed. Repr. 611.

He may not himself become the purchaser of his principal's goods unless the principal consents or afterward ratifies the sale. Wadsworth v. Gay, 118 Mass. 44; Keighler v. Savage Mfg. Co., 12 Md. 383; s. c., 71 Am. Dec. 600.

Neither can a factor to purchase buy his own goods for his principal. Tewksbury v. Spruance, 75 Ill. 187.

Where goods consigned to a factor for sale are purchased by himself, the consignor may at his election either ratify or repudiate the sale, and may sue the factor as purchaser for goods sold and delivered. Wadsworth v. Gay, 118 Mass. 44.

He cannot act for both his principal and the buyer in the same transaction. Bensley v. Moon, 7 Ill. App. 415; Talcott v. Chew, 27 Fed. Repr. 273.

A factor cannot dispute his principal's title. Marvin v. Ellwood, 11 Paige (N. Y.), 365; Barnard v. Kobbe, 54 N. Y. 516; Bain v. Clark, 39 Mo. 352.

He cannot detain proceeds of a sale from his principal on account of claims of a third party against the principal in which he has no interest. Aubery v. Fiske, 36 N. Y. 47.

He may make no secret profit out of the transactions. So where he accepts bills drawn upon him by his principal, and settles with the holder of the bills in full payment thereof by giving him goods belonging to the consignment of less value than the amount of the bills, the profit arising from the transaction belongs to the principal. Hidden v. Waldo, 55 N. Y. 294; Payne v. Waterston, 16 La. Ann. 239.

2. Gorman v. Wheeler, 10 Gray (Mass.), 362; Parkhill v. Imlay, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 431; Van Alen v. Vanderpool, 6 Johns (N. Y.) 69; s. c., 5 Am. Dec. 192; Leverick v. Meigs, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 645; Millbank v. Dennistoun, 10 Bosw. (N. Y.) 382; Grieff v. Cowguill, 2 Disn (Ohio) 58; Leach v. Bush, 57 Ala. 145; Howatt v. Davis, 5 Munf. (Va.) 34; s. c., 7 Am. Dec. 681; Mummy v. Haggerty, 15 La. Ann. 268; Phillips v. Moir, 69 Ill. 155; Deshler v. Beers, 32 Ill. 368; Chandler v. Hogle, 58 Ill. 46; Folsom v. Mussey, 8 Greenl. (Me.) 400; s. c., 23 Am. Dec. 522; Greeley v. Bartlett, 1 Greenl. (Me.) 172; s. c., 10 Am. Dec. 54; McCants v. Wells, 3 S. Car. 569; Dickson v. Screven, 23 S. Car. 212; Babcock v. Orbison, 25 Ind. 75; Housell v. Thrall, 18 Neb. 484;

Cannot Delegate His Authority.—As a factor is employed for his superior skill and knowledge in the special branch of business in which he is engaged, he may not delegate his authority to others who are expressly or impliedly authorized to employ sub-agents.<sup>1</sup>

See W. Burton, 4 Bush (Ky.), 299; W. Castleman, 4 Bibb (Ky.), 282; W. Phillips, 1 Gall. (U. S.) 360; W. Farrington, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 141; W. Stoller, 5 Dill. (U. S.) 438; W. Walker, 24 Vt. 149; s. c., 38 Me. 156. Compare Foster v. Walter, 164.

Where an American merchant consigns goods to a London commission merchant which had a correspondent in London who was authorized to make advances upon such consignments, by drafts upon the London firm, if he would be responsible for all overdrafts, and where the correspondent made advances by drafts upon this London firm to the merchant upon the latter's agreeing to refund advances in excess of the net proceeds of the sale of goods, and where the advances were so largely in excess, that the merchant was liable by the correspondent against the merchant to recover this excess, it is held that if the London firm performed their duties as factors with due skill they have the right to be repaid to the full amount of their advances, and they may assert that right against their consignor, giving him credit for the proceeds of his consignment, or against their correspondent upon his assumption of that liability; and the merchant may be compelled to refund to either of the two other parties, but he can be held to make but one satisfaction. If the London firm were guilty of negligence or misconduct by which their consignment was lost, their right as well as the right of their correspondent to recover the excess of advances is only a single one, for the consignor may rely upon such negligence as a defence to any claim that either of them could make on the ground. The liability of the correspondent to the London firm is the true measure of his rights against the consignor, and his cause of action accrued against such consignor at the same time that he became liable to the London firm, and to such defences as the consignor may make on the ground of the correspondent's negligence or misconduct. See W. Capron, 21 Md. 186; s. c., 83 Me. 566.

Where a commission-merchant under the authority of his principal sold 5000 bushels of oats on time, and negligently failed to require a margin which in accordance with the rules of the board of trade he had the right to require, or to give his principal notice of such right; and where he also failed to advise his principal of the fact that he sold the oats to parties who were operating a corner, which to be successful required to be maintained for 32 days longer, held, that upon the failure of the buyers, whereby his principal lost the benefit of the contract, the latter was entitled to recover from the commission-merchant the amount of such loss. Howe v. Sutherland, 39 Iowa, 484.

The skill required of factors is limited to the special branch of business in which they are engaged. Thompson v. Woodruff, 7 Coldw. (Tenn.) 401.

Where advances are made by the consignee or commission-merchant on goods consigned, the consignor cannot direct a sale at his pleasure, but the consignee has the right to sell at such time as he sees proper, to the extent and in payment of his advances. If, however, the consignor orders a sale, and the consignee neglects to sell, not because he has made advances, but because he is negligent, then he cannot protect himself on the ground that he has made advances; but this is a question of fact for the jury. Butterfield v. Stephens, 59 Iowa, 596.

The factor will not be liable for losses through circumstances not under his control, as long as he uses the care and diligence which good business men of their order and place would bestow upon their own affairs. Parkhill v. Imlay, 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 431.

Where the factor acts according to the known usages of trade and business he will not be held liable. Phillips v. Moir, 69 Ill. 155; Randall v. Kehler, 60 Me. 37.

A factor is not liable for an error in judgment if he acts in good faith and with reasonable prudence. Millbank v. Denistown, 21 N. Y. 386.

A remittance by a factor in Buffalo to his principal in Illinois of a draft from a banker in Buffalo on a house in New York, on the day of sale and in compliance with the custom of commission-merchants at Buffalo, is such an exercise of due diligence as to exempt the factor from liability when the draft is not honored. Chandler v. Hogle, 58 Ill. 46.

<sup>1</sup> Loomis v. Simpson, 13 Iowa, 532; Merchants' Nat. Bank v. Trenholm, 12

Must Account.—A factor is bound to account to his principal for all goods in his hands, or for the proceeds when the goods are sold.<sup>1</sup>

Heisk. (Tenn.) 520; McMorris v. Simpson, 21 Wend. (N.Y.) 610; Desha v. Holland, 12 Ala. 513; s. c., 46 Am. Dec. 261; Grieff v. Cowguill, 2 Disn. (Ohio) 58.

This does not refer, however, to mere ministerial acts, nor to the necessary employment of subordinates. McMorris v. Simpson, 21 Wend. (N.Y.) 610.

At the death of the factor the authority comes to an end, and does not pass to his executors or administrators. Gage v. Allison, 1 Brev. (S. Car.) 495; s. c., 2 Am. Dec. 682.

Where, however, a factor is authorized either by direct instructions or by usage of trade to employ a sub-agent, such sub-agent is accountable directly to the principal. The factor's deed revokes the authority of the sub-agent, and the funds in the latter's hands belong to the principal, and not to the administrator. Jackson Ins. Co. v. Partee, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 296.

If a factor employs a sub-agent who sells the principal's goods for less than the amount of the factor's advances and expenses, the factor when he seeks to recover the deficiency from the principal must show that he faithfully imparted to his sub-agent the instructions under which he had authority to sell himself. Strong v. Stewart, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 137.

In Harralson v. Stein, 50 Ala. 347, it was held that the principle that an agent cannot delegate his authority is not of universal application to factors and commission-merchants, and can only be invoked by the principal when sought to be charged by the sub-agent.

1. Terwilliger v. Beals, 6 Lans. (N.Y.) 403; Keighler v. Savage Mfg. Co., 12 Md. 383; s. c., 71 Am. Dec. 600; Curtis v. Gibney, 59 Md. 131; Warriner v. People, 74 Ill. 846.

A factor is bound to account for the goods consigned to him to his consignor, unless the true owner appears and establishes his right to the goods or the proceeds. Bain v. Clark, 39 Mo. 352.

A factor cannot be arrested in an action for the proceeds of goods sold by him, where it appears that notes of third persons have been given to the plaintiff in settlement of the account between them, and that plaintiff has collected some of the notes and has not offered to return the others. Trunninger v. Busch, 7 Daly (N.Y.) 124.

When a factor receives his principal's money and retains it without giving notice to the principal until the currency in which it was received becomes worthless, he cannot relieve himself from liability for the loss by showing, merely, that he was not in default in an unreasonable detention of the money; he must also show that it remained in his hands as the property of the principal. If he mixes it with his own money, or uses it in his business, he is liable therefor. Thus, where a factor received in 1862 Confederate currency for his principal, and deposited it in bank to his own credit, giving no notice to the principal that he had received it, until some time after the Confederate currency had ceased to be of any value, held, that proof that he was not in default in his failure to give notice, and that he always had a balance in bank to his credit during the war, was not sufficient to relieve him from liability to his principal for the money. Pinckney v. Dunn, 2 S. Car. 314.

A factor who, by direction of his principal, invests the latter's funds in "cotton futures," is not accountable to the latter for the illegality of the transaction. Allen v. Whetstone, 35 La. Ann. 846.

A factor cannot be sued by his principal until after a demand for the goods or the money in his hands has been made, or after he has received instructions to remit. Burns v. Pillsbury, 17 N. H. 66; Cooley v. Betts, 24 Wend. (N.Y.) 203; Halden v. Crafts, 4 E. D. Smith (N.Y.) 490; Ferris v. Paris, 10 Johns. (N.Y.) 285; Brink v. Dolsen, 8 Barb. (N.Y.) 337; Levrick v. Meigs, 1 Cow. (N.Y.) 645, 664; Wright v. People, 61 Ill. 382. Compare Clark v. Moody, 17 Mass. 145.

The pledgee is the proper party to call a factor to account where he receives the goods with the understanding that he should dispose of them through a factor and credit the debtor with the amount of sales, and he accordingly commits them to a factor from whom he takes a receipt. Bigelow v. Walker, 24 Vt. 149; s. c., 58 Am. Dec. 156.

A factor or commission-merchant, having in his hands moneys arising from the sale of his principal's goods, is liable for interest on the balance due after demand made by the principal or his personal representative; but not until demand made, if he has promptly rendered an account of sales, unless a special usage of trade is shown, or a failure to remit according to instructions. Tyree v. Par-

Factor's Rights.—Lien.—Factors have a general lien upon any portion of the goods of their principal in their possession upon the price of such as are lawfully sold by them, and the charges given therefor, for the general balance of the accounts between them and their principal as well as for the charges and disbursements arising upon these particular goods.<sup>1</sup>

66 Ala. 424; Dodge v. Perkins, 9 (Mass.) 368; Clark v. Moody, 17 145. Compare Williams v. McCon-

4 Ala. 627. Where a factor's account is closed, and rendered at the end of the com-year and not objected to by his principal, showing a balance in the factor's account composed of accrued interest and principal on such balance, interest may be urged in any subsequent account-Sentell v. Kennedy, 29 La. Ann.

render a factor liable for conversion of goods, demand must be made while the goods or its proceeds are in his hands, and must be shown that he had notice of owner's rights, or of the want of consent of the party placing the goods in his hands. Roach v. Turk, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.)
s. c., 24 Am. Rep. 360; overruling
v. Pope, 5 Coldw. (Tenn.) 413.

Where a factor in remitting to his principal indorses a bill of exchange received for payment of goods sold, this raises a liability on his part toward the latter, and it may be shown that at the time of indorsement he intended to assume a personal liability. Sharp v.
T, 5 Whart. (Pa.) 288; s. c., 34 Am.
54.

Accepting the final account of a factor without objection discharges him from all liability to account for sales made on credit, the proceeds of which were not collected. Rion v. Gilly, 6
(La.) 417; s. c., 12 Am. Dec. 483.
Highler v. Savage Mfg. Co., 12 Md.
s. c., 71 Am. Dec. 600.

Where goods consigned to a factor are marked inadvertently so marked as to lead the factor as to the ownership, and he paid the proceeds over to the principal, he will not be held liable to the owner. Hays v. Warren, 46 Mo.

Story on Ag. § 376; 2 Kent Com.
Jarvis v. Rogers, 15 Mass. 389;
Durant, 7 Allen (Mass.), 408; s. c.,
11 Dec. 695; Weed v. Adams, 37
378; Matthews v. Menedger, 2 an (U. S.), 145; Gibson v. Stevens,
v. (U. S.) 384, 400; Peisch v. Dick-
Mason (U. S.), 9; Burrill v. Phil-
Gall. (U. S.) 360; The Frances, 8

Cranch (U. S.), 419; Winne v. Hammond,
37 Ill. 99; Eaton v. Truesdail, 52 Ill. 307;
Brown v. Combs, 63 N. Y. 598; Reynolds v. Davis, 5 Sandf. (N. Y.) 267;
Franklyn v. Sprague, 17 N. Y. Sup. Ct.
589; Knapp v. Alvord, 10 Paige Ch. (N.
Y.) 205; s. c., 40 Am. Dec. 241; Myer v.
Jacobs, 1 Daly (N. Y.), 33; Holbrook v.
Wright, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 169; s. c., 35
Am. Dec. 607; Bryce v. Brooks, 26
Wend. (N. Y.) 367; Hoy v. Reade, 1
Sweeney (N. Y.), 626; Patterson v. Mc-
Gahay, 8 Mart. (La.) 486; s. c., 13 Am.
Dec. 298; Cutters v. Baker, 2 La. Ann.
572; Lambeth v. Turnbull, 5 Rob. (La.)
264; s. c., 39 Am. Dec. 536; The General
Quitman v. Packard, 22 La. Ann. 70;
Smith v. Williams, 22 La. Ann. 268;
Maxen v. Landrum, 21 La. Ann. 366;
McKenzie v. Nevins, 22 Me. 138; s. c.,
38 Am. Dec. 291; Sewall v. Nichols, 34
Me. 582; Tift v. Newsom, 44 Ga. 600;
Schiffer v. Feagin, 51 Ala. 335; Martin
v. Pope, 6 Ala. 532; s. c., 41 Am. Dec.
66; Sawyer v. Lorillard, 48 Ala. 332; Jordan
v. James, 5 Ohio, 88, 99.

A factor who has received a consignment of cotton for sale from the guardian of a minor, knowing that the goods belong to the minor, has no lien on the proceeds for a private debt due him by the guardian. Succession of Norton, 24 La.
Ann. 218. And see Bell v. Powell, 23
La. Ann. 796.

Where the factor comes to the possession of the goods of his principal after the debt has been created, and could have had no influence in creating the debt, his claim of lien must be subordinate to the true state of the ownership, whether known to him or not. Barry v. Bonin-ger, 46 Md. 59.

The lien extends to the amount received from an insurance company with whom the goods have been insured by the factor for the benefit of his principal for loss sustained. Johnson v. Campbell, 120 Mass. 449.

But the bona fide holder of a draft drawn against the goods, shipped with bill of lading assigned, has a lien upon the goods in the hands of the consignee, and can recover from him the proceeds of their sale, even though the consignor is indebted to the consignee on a general account. Lee v. Bowen, 5 Biss. (U. S.) 154.

Factor accepting draft on the faith of goods consigned to him is making an advance on the goods, and has for the amount the same lien or privilege as though the money had been paid. Lambeth v. Turnbull, 5 Rob. (La.) 264; s. c., 39 Am. Dec. 536; Eaton v. Truesdail, 52 Ill. 307; Vail v. Durant, 7 Allen (Mass.), 408; s. c., 83 Am. Dec. 695; Nesmith v. Dyeing, etc., Co., 1 Curt. (U. S.) 130.

The claim of the factor upon property consigned to him can, however, never exceed the extent of his lien. He has but a limited right, which is sometimes called a special property, but is never regarded as a general ownership. United States v. Villalonga, 90 U. S. 35; Heard v. Brewer, 4 Daly (N. Y.), 136; Williams v. Tilt, 36 N. Y. 319; Jordan v. James, 5 Ohio, 88, 99; Hall v. Hinks, 21 Md. 406.

Goods belonging to the principal cannot be attached for the personal debts of the factor, even though he has possession and the right to sell, as long as he is under obligation to account for them or the proceeds to his principal. Loomis v. Barker, 69 Ill. 360; Holly v. Huggefords, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 73; s. c., 19 Am. Dec. 303; Blood v. Palmer, 11 Me. 414; s. c., 26 Am. Dec. 547.

An agreement to consign goods to an insolvent for sale is not fraudulent in law as to creditors, and vests no property in the consignee subject to levy where such agreement provides for sale not below invoice prices, which are to be paid to the consignor, the consignee to keep all over that and return the goods remaining unsold. McCullough v. Porter, 4 W. & S. (Pa.) 177; s. c., 39 Am. Dec. 68.

The rule that one who receives goods, and has an option to return the identical goods or others equivalent, is a purchaser and not a bailee, does not apply to factors who act throughout for their principals, although they fulfil their duty if they pay over the price instead of the identical goods. Blood v. Palmer, 11 Me. 414; s. c., 26 Am. Dec. 547.

A factor who has grain consigned to him, but who advances or pays no money on the same, but who accepts and pays drafts on general account, will not have such a property in the grain, either general or special, as to give him a right to maintain an action against the carrier for damages resulting from a delay in transportation, especially when it is provided by contract that the grain must first pass inspection. Cobb v. Ill. Cent. R. Co., 88 Ill. 394.

Under statutes, factors in Louisiana and Georgia may have a lien for money advanced to a planter to enable him to raise a crop, as well as for actual supplies. The General Quitman v. Packard, 22 La. Ann. 70; Smith v. Williams, 22 La. Ann. 268; Richardson v. Dinkgrave, 26 La. Ann. 651; Tift v. Newsom, 44 Ga. 600; Thomason v. Poullain, 54 Ga. 306. Compare Moore v. Gray, 22 La. Ann. 289; Bres v. Cowan, 22 La. Ann. 438.

But a factor can acquire no such lien in Louisiana, where the crops have been raised in Mississippi, where the statute does not provide for such a lien, and the crops were afterwards shipped to Louisiana. Delop v. Windsor, 26 La. Ann. 185.

And to have a right to the lien the party who makes the advances must allege in his affidavit that he is either a factor or a merchant. Gunn v. Pattishall, 48 Ga. 406.

But an agreement to consign and pay commissions on his entire crop to his factors was held not to be binding after their refusal to fulfil their stipulations as to paying certain drafts and taxes. Nalle v. Conrad, 30 La. Ann. pt. 1, 503.

A factor's lien extends to all sums for which a factor has become liable as a surety or otherwise for his principal, whether the suretyship has resulted from the nature of the agency, or it has been undertaken upon the footing of such a lien. But it does not extend to other independent debts contracted before and without reference to the agency. Story on Agency, § 376; Drinkwater v. Goodwin, Cowp. 251; Hammonds v. Barkley, 2 East. 227; Hidden v. Waldo, 55 N. Y. 294; Stevens v. Robins, 12 Mass. 182; Nudd v. Burrows, 91 U. S. 426; Hodgson v. Payson, 3 H. & J. (Md.) 339; s. c., 5 Am. Dec. 439.

A factor under a del credere commission made advances to his principal in the form of notes and acceptances, and failed. Held, that his receiver was entitled, as against the assignee and general creditors of the consignor, to retain the amounts arising from the sale of the goods, until such notes or acceptances were surrendered or destroyed. Franklyn v. Sprague, 17 N. Y. Sup. Ct. 580. See also Cabot v. Etting, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 437.

A factor agreed with a planter to pay to A. a certain sum upon receiving a certain number of hogsheads of sugar. Part of the sugar was received by the factor, but he had to pay and did pay certain liens on the other part aggregating to an amount which absorbed the entire proceeds of the latter portion. Held, that the factor was liable to A. only on the

Lien of Purchasing Factor.—A purchasing factor, like a factor for goods, has a lien on the goods in his hands not only for a claim for advances and expenses he may have against the identical goods, but also for a general balance of account.<sup>1</sup>

Goods must be in Factor's Possession.—A factor can only claim a lien on goods lawfully in his possession as a factor. Possession obtained by an illegal act or in bad faith sustains no lien.<sup>2</sup> on, and thereon only to the extent of the proceeds thereof. Moore v. Clapp, 10 Ann. 690.

lien upon the goods or moneys received as the proceeds of the goods to protect factors against loss upon acceptance and indorsements for their principals not lost when they mingle such with other funds in their hands; they have done so, the subsequent payment of their estate in insolvency will not enable the consignors to maintain an action therefor as long as the lien upon the acceptances and indorsements continues. Vail v. Durant, 7 (Mass.), 408; s. c., 83 Am. Dec.

where the factor has accepted the consignment with instructions to pay the proceeds to a particular person or for a specific purpose, he has no lien for a general balance. Goodhue v. McGraft, 3 La. Ann. 58; Frith v. Forbes, 4 F. & J. 409.

the debtors shipped to their creditors factors, cotton, with directions to accept and pay a note held by them, and the factors did sell the cotton and it was not enough to pay off the note, this was an extinguishment of the debt, and the creditors could not thereafter recover it. Hatcler v. Comer, 73 Ga. 418.

where he has received cotton for a tenant, knowing that one-half of the cotton belongs to the tenant and the other half to the landlord, and with instructions to sell to the landlord's credit when sold, he cannot apply it to payment of advances made to the tenants. Branch v. Huse, 55 Gl. 21.

money having been advanced by a factor to purchase cotton, upon the sale of such cotton being shipped to the person receiving the advances, he cannot direct the proceeds of cotton so sold to be applied to another debt. The creditor, as factor, had a factor's lien upon the cotton in his possession, it having been purchased with money advanced by him, and he therefore had the right to apply the proceeds of its sale to the payment of his advances. Frost v. Mathersbee, 23 S. Car. 354.

Story on Agency, § 34; Bryce v. Smith, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 367, 372;

Stevens v. Robins, 12 Mass. 182. Compare Williams v. Littlefield, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 363, 370.

Where commercial correspondents, on the order of a principal, make a purchase of property ultimately for him, but on their own credit, or with their own funds, and such course is contemplated when the order is given, they may retain title in themselves until they are reimbursed. This may be done by taking the bill of sale in their own name, and when the property is shipped, taking from the carrier a bill of lading in such terms as to show that they retain the power of control and disposition of it. This bill of lading confers upon the person in whose favor it is issued or to whom it is transferred, the title to the goods; and this although the transaction is not intended to give the permanent ownership, but to furnish security for advances of money or discount of commercial paper made upon the faith of it. Third persons dealing with property thus shipped, though acting in good faith, in the regular course of business, and paying value, are affected by and chargeable with constructive notice of the contents of the bill of lading. Farmers' & Mech. Bank v. Logan, 74 N. Y. 568; Farmers' & Mech. Bank v. Atkinson, 74 N. Y. 587.

A factor has no lien upon the goods of his principal when the general balance of account is against him; and in such case advances made by the factor in the business will be deemed to have been made in liquidation of his indebtedness pro tanto. McGraft v. Rugee, 60 Wis. 406; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 378; Weed v. Adams, 37 Conn. 378; Jordan v. James, 5 Ohio, 99; Enoch v. Wehrkamp, 3 Bosw. (N. Y.) 398; Beebe v. Mead, 33 N. Y. 587.

The burden of showing that a general balance against a factor is due to losses for which he is not responsible is upon the party asserting it, and it will not be presumed merely from the fact that the principal, after commencing an action to recover goods seized by the creditors of the factor, turns over to the factor the outstanding credits and accounts of the business. McGraft v. Rugee, 60 Wis. 406; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 378.

2. Bank of Rochester v. Jones, 4 N. Y.

497; s. c., 55 Am. Dec. 290; Winter v. Coit, 7 N. Y. 288; s. c., 57 Am. Dec. 522; Marine Bank v. Wright, 48 N. Y. 1; Thacher v. Hannahs, 4 Robt. (N. Y.) 407; Ryberg v. Snell, 2 Wash. (U. S.) 403; Hamilton v. Campbell, 9 La. Ann. 531; Brown v. Wiggin, 16 N. H. 312; Woodruff v. Nashville, etc., R. Co., 2 Head (Tenn.), 87; Oliver v. Moore, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 482; Elliot v. Bradley, 23 Vt. 217; Bruce v. Andrews, 36 Mo. 593; Byers v. Danley, 27 Ark. 77; Rice v. Austin, 17 Mass. 197; Allen v. Williams, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 297; Baker v. Fuller, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 318; Lewis v. Galena, etc., R. Co., 40 Ill. 281; Strahorn v. Union Stockyard Co., 43 Ill. 424.

The equitable lien of an agent for advances and commissions only continues in him so long as he has possession of the lands or title papers and the debt remains unbarred by the Statute of Limitations. Byers v. Danley, 27 Ark. 77.

The possession may be constructive, as by an assignment of bills of lading, warehouse receipts, or other documents which show an intention to vest the title to the goods in the factor. Davis v. Bradley, 28 Vt. 118; s. c., 65 Am. Dec. 226; Gibson v. Stevens, 8 How. (U. S.) 384, 399; Nesmith v. Dyeing, etc., Co., 1 Curt. (U. S.) 130; Heard v. Brewer, 4 Daly (N. Y.), 136; Dows v. Greene, 24 N. Y. 638; Holbrook v. Wight, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 169; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 607; Bank of Rochester v. Jones, 4 N. Y. 497; s. c., 55 Am. Dec. 290; Bailey v. Hudson River R. Co., 49 N. Y. 70; Hall v. Hinks, 21 Md. 406; Vallé v. Cerré, 36 Mo. 575; Lewis v. Galena, etc., R. Co., 40 Ill. 281; Strahorn v. Union, etc., Co., 43 Ill. 424.

The mere agreement to ship goods in satisfaction of antecedent advances will not in general give the factor or consignee a lien upon them for his general balance until they come to his actual possession; but if there is a specific pledge or appropriation of certain goods, accompanied with the intention that they shall be a security, or the proceeds as a payment, and they are deposited with a bailee, then the property is changed, and vests in the individual to whom they are to be delivered by the depository. Desha v. Pope, 6 Ala. 690; s. c., 41 Am. Dec. 76; Strahorn v. Union, etc., Co., 43 Ill. 424; Bruce v. Andrews, 36 Mo. 593.

In Bonner v. Marsh, 10 S. & M. (Miss.) 376; s. c., 48 Am. Dec. 754, it was held that a consignment of goods by bill of lading vests the property in the consignee only when made in pursuance of a prior contract with the consignor; but where without any special contract it is consigned to him as a factor to sell, and with the proceeds to pay a sum due him, if the property is seized under attachment against the consignor before it reaches the consignee, the bill of lading will vest no property in the consignee. See also Saunders v. Bartlett, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 316; Oliver v. Moore, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 482; Delop v. Windsor, 26 La. Ann. 185; Chaffraix v. Harper, 26 La. Ann. 22; Walter v. Ross, 2 Wash. (U. S.) 283; Bailey v. Hudson River R. Co., 49 N. Y. 70.

To give a factor a lien upon goods consigned to him, but not actually received, the consignment must be in terms to the factor, and as against creditors and subsequent purchasers of the consignor it is required that the consignee should have made advances and acceptances upon the faith of the particular consignments. Davis v. Bradley, 28 Vt. 118; s. c., 65 Am. Dec. 226.

Where the principal is indebted to the factor for advances, and has agreed to ship the goods to the latter for sale, from the proceeds of which the advances are to be paid, the factor has no security against the goods in preference to a bank discounting a bill of exchange, drawn by the principal against the factor on the faith of a bill of lading. Marine Bank v. Wright, 48 N. Y. 5; Davenport Nat. Bank v. Homeyer, 45 Mo. 145; Fifth Nat. Bank of Chicago v. Bayley, 115 Mass. 228; Newcomb v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 115 Mass. 230; Alderman v. Eastern R. Co., 115 Mass. 233.

Placing goods upon drays of an agent of factors for the purpose of having them transferred to their warehouse, places them in the factors' possession sufficiently to support their lien from that time. Burrus v. Kyle, 56 Ga. 24.

In some cases it has been held that delivery of goods to a common carrier for transportation to the consignee, in pursuance of an agreement to consign, previously made, is such a delivery to the consignee as will cause his lien to attach for advances made. Elliott v. Cox, 48 Ga. 39; Hardeman v. De Vaughn, 49 Ga. 596; Wade v. Hamilton, 30 Ga. 450; Nelson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 2 Bradw. (Ill.) 180.

Others hold that actual possession only will be sufficient, and that assignment of the bill of lading does not give such a constructive possession as to cause the lien to attach. Saunders v. Bartlett, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 316; Oliver v. Moore, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 482; Woodruff v. Nashville, etc., R. Co., 2 Head (Tenn.), 87.

The lien of a factor for advances and liabilities incurred does not extend only to the property consigned, but when sold to

How Lost.—Where the lien once attaches it can only be lost by an act of the factor. It cannot be defeated by a levy of an attachment of the goods against his principal, nor by a sale by the principal. If he is wrongfully deprived of the goods he can recover them.<sup>1</sup>

Waiver.—The factor can waive his lien by voluntarily surrendering the property to which it attaches.<sup>2</sup>

the proceeds of the sale in the hands of the vendee, and the securities therefor in the hands of the factor. Brander v. Phillips, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 121, 129; Brown v. McGrau, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 479; Daniel v. Swift, 54 Ga. 113; Brown v. Combs, 63 N. Y. 598; Houghton v. Matthews, 3 B. & P. 489.

A factor does not lose his lien upon a crop for advances made towards its cultivation, where he buys the crop at a sheriff's sale. The lien is then transferred from the goods to the proceeds. Howe v. Whited, 21 La. Ann. 495.

The factor in making advances to his principal must act in good faith in order to sustain his lien. Where he advanced money to his principal whom he knew to be insolvent, to enable him to buy cattle to be shipped to him for sale, the proceeds to be credited to the principal, it was held that such transaction created the relation of debtor and creditor, and that factor had no lien which would give him a preference over the other creditors of the bankrupt. Nudd v. Burrows, 91 U. S. 426.

But where a factor had a lien for supplies under a Georgia statute upon the growing crop of a planter made in 1872, and the planter in the fall and winter succeeding delivered to a warehouseman 19 bales of cotton, with instructions to apply the proceeds to debts due C. and D. and the balance to a debt due the factor for 1871, which was done, and subsequently the planter delivered other 19 bales to the warehouseman with instructions to apply the proceeds to his lien upon the crop of 1872, it was held that proof that the warehouseman was the general agent of the factor did not render the transaction as to the first 19 bales such a fraud upon the judgment creditors of the planter as to postpone the factor's lien upon the second 19 bales to judgment liens against the planter. Thomason v. Poullain, 54 Ga. 306.

Where the plaintiff, a commission-merchant, receives consignments from the defendant, a manufacturer, who is the owner of three different mills, run under three different names, one being carried on in the name of defendant, the plaintiff being ignorant that the three mills are owned by the defendant, and the accounts of the three concerns being kept separate, in an action brought by the plaintiff to recover the balance of an account with the mill run under the name of the defendant, where the answer is a general denial and payment, the defendant will not be allowed to show that a balance is due him upon the account between plaintiff and another of the mills which should be credited him in this suit, and such balance can only be availed of by way of set-off; and defendant cannot show that there were in the plaintiff's hands goods from the mill run in defendant's name which were not included in the account sued on. Talcott v. Smith, 8 N. Eastern Repr. (Mass.) 413.

1. Grieff v. Cowguill, 2 Cincinnati (Sup. Ct.), 58; 2 Disney (Ohio), 54; Brownell v. Carnley, 3 Duer (N. Y.), 9; Cook v. Kelly, 9 Bosw. (N. Y.), 358; Green v. Clarke, 12 N. Y. 343; Muller v. Pondir, 55 N. Y. 325; Bank v. West, 46 Me. 15; Lambeth v. Turnbull, 5 Rob. (La.) 264; s. c., 39 Am. Dec. 536; Maxen v. Landrum, 21 La. Ann. 366; Eaton v. Truesdail, 52 Ill. 307; Drinkwater v. Goodwin, Cowp. 251.

Where the lien attaches while the goods are in transit, the death of the principal during such transit does not defeat the lien where the factor has made actual advances or incurred expenses on the consignment. Hammond v. Barclay, 2 East, 227; Lemprierer v. Palsley, 2 T. R. 485.

But the principal may dissolve it by tendering the amount due. Scarfe v. Morgan, 4 Mees. & W. 270; Jones v. Tarleton, 9 Mees. & W. 675; Gage v. Allison, 1 Brev. (S. Car.) 495; s. c., 2 Am. Dec. 682; Beebe v. Mead, 33 N. Y. 587.

2. Lickbarrow v. Mason, 6 East, 21; Bligh v. Davies, 28 Beav. 211; Sawyer v. Lorrillard, 48 Ala. 332.

But where the delivery is conditional, and such that factor still retains control over the goods, the lien is not lost. Matthews v. Menedger, 2 McLean (U. S.), 145; Winne v. Hammond, 37 Ill. 99; Jordan v. James, 5 Ohio, 88; Cator v. Merrill, 16 La. Ann. 137; Owen v.

Principal's Personal Security.—In addition to the lien upon the goods of his principal, he also has a claim upon the personal security of his principal. The general lien of factors does not depend upon any express contract, but rests upon its manifest tendency to aid the interests of trade and commerce and to promote confidence and a liberal spirit on the part of factors in respect to advances to their principals. It is deemed to exist in all cases until the contrary presumption is clearly established. The factor may relinquish his lien on his principal's goods without at all affecting his personal remedy; and he may renounce his right to resort to the person and look alone to his lien for reimbursement of his advances.<sup>1</sup>

Iglanor, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 15; Gragg v. Brown, 44 Me. 157; Davis v. Bradley, 28 Vt. 118; s. c., 65 Am. Dec. 226; Baker v. Fuller, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 318; Archer v. McMechan, 21 Mo. 43; Bull v. Sigerson, 24 Mo. 53.

He also waives his lien by wrongfully selling or pledging the property. If he pledges the goods for his own debt, or suffers them to be attached, or otherwise parts with them voluntarily, the lien is lost, and the owner may trace and recover them, or he may sue in trespass if they are forcibly taken. Holly v. Huggeford, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 73; s. c., 19 Am. Dec. 303; Jarvis v. Rogers, 15 Mass. 389, 396.

Where a purchasing factor had transmitted two distinct orders for goods, and on the arrival of the first parcel delivered an invoice of the same to the principal, and accepted his draft for the amount thereof, payable at a future day. It was held that by so doing he had waived his lien, which otherwise would have existed on the first parcel for the price paid, or responsibility assumed on account of the second parcel, and upon his refusal to deliver up the first parcel an action of trover was held to lie against him. Bryce v. Brooks, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 367.

A neglect to enforce the lien on the part of the factor will work as a waiver. Grieff v. Cowguill, 2 Dis. (Ohio) 54.

But a warehouseman and factor who has made advances on cotton stored with him is not estopped from claiming reimbursement out of the proceeds of the sale thereof, from a mere omission to inform a purchaser of the cotton that he had such claim, and where the purchaser left the receipts for the cotton with the factor, with instructions to sell it for his account. Daniel v. Swift, 54 Ga. 113.

A factor against whom a judgment has been rendered in favor of his principal for the price of goods sold by the factor is thereby stopped from afterward suing the principal for expenses, freight advances and commissions upon the sale. McCroskey v. Mabry, 45 Ga. 327.

The factor's lien is special, and setting up another and untenable claim on the property defeats it. Winter v. Coit, N. Y. 288.

The factor may waive his lien by special contract at the time of the delivery of the goods. Schiffer v. Feagin, 51 Ala. 335; Tison v. Howard, 57 Ga. 410.

1. Martin v. Pope, 6 Ala. 532; s. c., 4 Am. Dec. 66; Beckwith v. Sibley, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 482; Burrell v. Phillips, Gall. (U. S.) 360; Peisch v. Dickson, Mason (U. S.), 9.

In Corlies v. Cummings, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 181, it was held that he must first have resort to the fund if it can be made available before the principal is liable.

A factor may sue in equity to enforce his lien, and is entitled to judgment in such suit for any deficiency after the sale of such goods. Whitman v. Horton, 4 N. Y. Superior Ct. 531; Gihon v. Stanton, 9 N. Y. 476; Strong v. Stewart, Heisk. (Tenn.) 137; Denney v. Wheelwright, 60 Miss. 733.

A factor to purchase is not bound in the first instance to resort to the goods purchased for payment of the purchase money advanced by him. Such advance is a loan to the principal, for which, together with his disbursements, charges and commissions, he may after demand immediately sue the principal having the lien on the goods as a collateral security. Hoy v. Reade, 1 Sweeny (N. Y.), 626.

A factor who receives consignments of goods under an agreement by which he is to advance to his principal money from time to time as the latter requires to charge him interest on the advance at a certain rate, to sell the goods consigned at the market price, to charge certain commission for selling, and, after

Lien a Personal Privilege.—The factor's right to a lien is a personal privilege and cannot be transferred, nor can the question be between any one but the principal and the factor.<sup>1</sup>

Bankrupt Acts—Fiduciary Debts.—There has been considerable difference of opinion as to whether a factor who retained the money of his principal was a fiduciary debtor within the meaning of the United States Bankrupt Acts of 1841 and 1867 (repealed in 1878), acts providing that all persons owing debts "which shall not have been created in consequence of a defalcation as a public officer or as executor, administrator, guardian, or trustee, or while acting in any other fiduciary capacity," might be declared bankrupts,<sup>2</sup> and that "no debt created by the fraud or embezzlement of the bankrupt, or by his defalcation as a public officer or while acting in any fiduciary character, shall be discharged in bankruptcy."<sup>3</sup>

Commissions.—A factor, like a broker, is entitled to a remuneration for his services in the form of a commission; but as a general rule no commissions are due before the whole service for which these commissions are to compensate are performed. But where the service is begun and an important part performed, and the factor prevented by some irresistible obstacle from completing it, and retaining advances, interest, and commission, to pay the balance to the principal, and if, upon settlement, after all the goods are sold, a balance is found due to the principal, the principal is to pay it, may, having made large advances to the principal on account of goods not sold, which have been on hand for several months, sue the principal for the amount of the advances already made, without waiting until all the goods are sold. Thompson v. Thompson, 126 Mass. 183; Metc. v. Lefavour, 11 Metc. (Mass.)

by giving personal security on a note for the advances and supplies furnished a planter, liable him to raise a crop secured by a Georgia statutory lien does not operate as a waiver of the lien. Story v. Story, 55 Ga. 56; Holly v. Huggefurd, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 328; 19 Am. Dec. 303; Ames v. Ames, 42 Me. 197; s. c., 66 Am. Dec.

extends, however, to the factor's expenses and administrators. Gage v. Gage, 1 Brev. (S. Car.) 495; s. c., 2 Dec. 682. 5 U. S. Statutes at Large, 440; Bouvier's Law Dict., title Bankrupt Laws. U. S. Rev. Statutes, § 5117.

In the following cases it has been decided that they come not within the meaning of these acts, and that therefore a factor or commission-merchant does not act in a fiduciary capacity. Chapman v. Forsyth, 2 How. (U. S.) 202; In re Smith, 9 Ben. (U. S.) 494; Zeperink v. Card, 11 Fed. Repr. 295; Grover, etc., S. M. Co. v. Clinton, 5 Biss. (U. S.) 324. Owsley v. Cobin, 15 Nat'l Bank Reg. 489; Kinne v. Graff, 17 Nat'l Bank Reg. 319; Woolsey v. Cade, 54 Ala. 378; s. c., 25 Am. Rep. 711; Anstill v. Crawford, 7 Ala. 335; Hayman v. Pond, 7 Metc. (Mass.) 328; Cronan v. Cotting, 104 Mass. 245; Chipley v. Frierson, 18 Fla. 639; Du Pont v. Beck, 81 Ind. 271; Curtis v. Waring, 92 Pa. St. 104; Scott v. Porter, 93 Pa. St. 38; s. c., 39 Am. Rep. 719; Kauffman v. Alexander, 53 Tex. 562; Commercial Bank v. Buckner, 2 La. Ann. 1023.

In the following cases a contrary view was held: Matteson v. Kellogg, 15 Ill. 547; Flagg v. Ely, 1 Edm. Sel. Cas. (N. Y.) 206; Whitaker v. Chapman, 3 Lans. (N. Y.) 155; Hardenbrook v. Collison, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 475; In re Seymour, 1 Ben. (U. S.) 348; In re Kimball, 2 Ben. (U. S.) 554; 6 Blatchf. 292; Treadwell v. Holloway, 12 Nat'l Bank Reg. 61; Lemcke v. Booth, 47 Mo. 385; s. c., 4 Am. Rep. 326; Gay v. Farran, 2 Cin. S. C. Rep. (Ohio) 426; Meador v. Sharpe, 54 Ga. 125; Jones v. Russell, 44 Ga. 460; Banning v. Bleakley, 27 La. Ann. 257; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 554; Desobry v. Tête, 31 La. Ann. 809; s. c., 33 Am. Rep. 232; Brown v. Garrard, 28 La. Ann. 870; Tate v. Laforest, 25 La. Ann. 187.

is himself without fault, it would seem that he may demand a proportionate compensation.<sup>1</sup>

Del Credere Commissions.—Sales by a factor with a guaranty of the price from the factor to the owner are common in all commercial countries. In Europe they are commonly called del credere contracts, and the commission charged by the factor and intended to cover not only his services in selling but his risk in insuring the payments is called a del credere commission. Such a contract need not be in writing.<sup>2</sup>

Principal Debtor or Surety.—Although formerly a different doc-

1. Parsons on Contr. (7th Ed.) 109.

The parties entered into a contract by which defendants agreed to sell the goods manufactured by plaintiff on commission. Plaintiff guaranteed to supply defendants with goods to at least the value of a sum specified, and in case of failure so to do defendants were entitled to the agreed commissions on that sum. Either party had the right to terminate the agreement by giving to the other a year's notice. In an action to recover proceeds of sales in defendant's hands, the referee found that plaintiff was led, by acts and assurances of defendants, to believe that they would only charge commissions thereafter on actual shipments and were induced thereby to refrain from giving notice of a termination of the agreement. Held, that defendants were estopped from claiming thereafter commissions under the guaranty in the contract. Belgian Glass Co. v. Pabst, 101 N. Y. 621.

Where an agent or commission-merchant purchases grain for his principal on his order to do so, he can only recover of the latter his commissions, unless he has actually paid for the grain, or the loss legally sustained by the seller, in which event he may also recover what he has thus been required to pay. It is not sufficient that the agent purchasing may be legally liable, but he must have sustained damage by actual payment. Brand v. Henderson, 107 Ill. 141.

A factor or other agent, who is guilty of fraud or gross negligence in the conduct of his principal's business, forfeits all claim to commission or other compensation for his services. And where he knowingly transmits to his consignor a grossly false and fraudulent account of sales, and does not enter the sales on his books until months after they were made, and then enters them falsely, no credit will be given to the factor or his books. Fordyce v. Peper, 16 Fed. Repr. 516; Dodge v. Tileston, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 328; Beall v. January, 62 Mo. 434; Smith v. Crews, 2 Mo. App. 269; Vennum v.

Gregory, 21 Iowa, 326; Talcott v. Chew, 27 Fed. Repr. 273; Segar v. Parrish, 20 Gratt. (Va.) 672; White v. Chapman, 1 Stark. 113.

A factor to whom goods have been consigned for sale is not entitled to commissions if he sells the goods and fails to render accounts, converting the proceeds to his own use. Brannan v. Strauss, 75 Ill. 234.

Nor where he violates his instructions as to the sale. Zurn v. Noedel, 113 Pa. St. 336; Larminie v. Carley, 114 Ill. 196.

Where a factor had made advances on the growing crop of a planter with the understanding that the entire crop should be shipped to him for sale, and the planter shipped part of the crop to another merchant, it was held that the factor could recover his commissions which he would have charged on the part of the crop shipped to the other merchant. Thornhill v. Picard, 24 La. Ann. 159.

2. 2 Parsons on Contr. (7th Ed.) 13; Couturier v. Hastie, 16 E. L. & Eq. 562; 8 Exch. 40; Grove v. Dubois, 1 T. R. 112; Swan v. Nesmith, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 220; Dalton v. Goddard, 104 Mass. 497; Bradley v. Richardson, 23 Vt. 720; Leverick v. Meigs, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 645; Cartwright v. Greene, 47 Barb. (N. Y.) 9; Wolff v. Koppell, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 458; s. c., 2 Denio (N. Y.), 368; Sherwood v. Stone, 14 N. Y. 268; Lewis v. Brehme, 33 Md. 412; Thompson v. Perkins, 3 Mas. (U. S.) 232.

A consignment of goods under a special contract, in which the consignee gives his acceptances for their value payable at sight and partly at a future day, and agrees to account for the whole price, to guarantee the sales, and to receive a commission of 20 per cent, with other stipulations making him primarily liable for the price of the goods, is a consignment on sale as distinguished from a consignment on del credere guaranty. Exp. Flannagans, 12 Bank. Reg. 230.

trine was held, it is now well settled that a factor under a del credere commission is not liable to his principal as a principal debtor. He merely guarantees the payment of the purchase-money, and recourse must be had to the buyer, on whose default only the factor is liable; not that the employer must sue the buyer before he sues the factor, but that he can sue the factor only because the buyer neglects or refuses to pay, and when he so neglects or refuses.<sup>1</sup>

To be Indemnified—A factor is also entitled to be indemnified by his principal for all losses he may have sustained without his fault, and in transactions made for his principal.<sup>2</sup>

1. 1 Parsons on Contr. (7th Ed.) 101; Story on Agency (9th Ed.) § 215; 1 Chitty on Contr. (11th Am. Ed.) 275; Wharton on Agency, § 784; Wolff v. Koppell, 5 Hill (N. Y.), 458; s. c., 43 Am. Dec. 751. See also opinion of Senator Hand in this case, 2 Denio, 368; Leverick v. Meigs, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 645; Sherwood v. Stone, 14 N. Y. 267; Holbrook v. Wight, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 169; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 607; Thompson v. Perkins, 3 Mas. (U. S.) 232; Bradley v. Richardson, 23 Vt. 720; Swan v. Nesmith, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 220; Morris v. Cleasby, 4 M. & Selw. 574; Couturier v. Hastie, 16 E. L. & Eq. 562; 8 Exch. 40. Compare Lewis v. Brehme, 33 Md. 412; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 190.

He guarantees the payment of the purchase-money, but where he collects it and remits to his principal in negotiable paper he will not be liable where through intervening insolvency of the maker it becomes worthless, unless he has been negligent in selecting the paper. Muller v. Bohlens, 2 Wash. (U. S.) 378; Sharp v. Emmet, 5 Whart. (Pa.) 288; s. c., 34 Am. Dec. 554; Leverick v. Meigs, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 645.

Unless he remits without previous authority or direction from his principal, or unless he guarantees the safe arrival of his remittance and the payment of the paper for an additional commission. Heuback v. Rother, 2 Duer (N. Y.), 227.

But where he takes worthless paper in payment he will be liable. Dunnell v. Mason, 1 Story (U. S.) 543.

If a del credere factor makes a remittance to his principal by bill of exchange before the expiration of the term of credit on which the goods were sold, it will be considered as a remittance of his own funds in discharge of a personal debt, and therefore at his own risk. Heuback v. Rother, 2 Duer (N. Y.), 227.

The title to the unpaid purchase-money for the principal's goods is in the principal not in the del credere factor. Moore v. Hillabrand, 37 Hun (N. Y.), 491.

Even in the case of bankruptcy of the factor. Merrill v. Thomas, 7 Daly (N. Y.), 393; Thompson v. Perkins, 3 Mas. (U. S.) 232.

A factor under a del credere commission is not by this fact relieved from the ordinary skill, care, and diligence required of other factors. Wharton on Agency, § 785.

Factors wrote to traders who proposed to consign goods to them for sale that they were satisfied that they were taking no risk in advancing 80 per cent on the invoice, and requested that the goods might be sent to them. After receiving the goods they wrote again asking if the consignors understood that the invoice prices were to be guaranteed. The consignors replied that they did not expect the factors to guarantee over 80 per cent, and drew on them for that amount. The factors paid the draft and then sold the goods for a sum which, after deducting their commissions and other charges, would yield less than 80 per cent of the invoice prices. Held, that in accounting with the consignors they were not entitled to be allowed any charges, by way of commissions or otherwise, which would reduce the proceeds of the goods to the consignors below 80 per cent. Dalton v. Goddard, 104 Mass. 497.

A del credere commission is not due where the factor made a sale on credit, but received cash in consideration of a reduction in price. Kingston v. Wilson, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 310.

2. Where a commission-merchant, by direction of his principal, sold for the latter 5000 bushels of wheat to be delivered at any time during the current year at the seller's option, and after an advance in the price the principal refused to stand to the contract, and the merchant settled with the buyer by paying him the difference between the contract

5. Relation of Factor to Third Parties.—May Sue in his Own Name.—Where a factor sells the goods of his principal he may sue for the price in his own name. This does not interfere, however, with the right of the principal also to enter suit, even where his name was not disclosed in the transaction.<sup>1</sup> price and the market value, the principal being unknown to the purchaser, it was held that the principal was liable to his agent for the sum so paid by him, and also for his commissions. Searing v. Butler, 69 Ill. 575.

A consignee who, after selling goods for his principal and remitting the proceeds, is obliged to take the goods back as not being equal to sample, cannot, without at once notifying his principal and demanding repayment, require to be indemnified for loss he may have sustained because he had to sell the goods at a lower price. Maxwell v. Andinwood, 15 Hun (N. Y.), 111. And see Beach v. Branch, 57 Ga. 362.

Where it is the usual course of business for a factor to accept bills drawn by his principal, and return them to him, to be used for raising money as he pleases, the factor's possession of such bills bearing the blank indorsement of the principal, is sufficient prima facie evidence of ownership to enable the factor to recover from the principal the money paid thereon at maturity in the absence of proof of unlawful diversion. Rice v. Isham, 4 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 37.

In an action against the defendant, a manufacturer, by a commission-merchant, to recover a balance due for advances on manufactured goods, the latter will be allowed to charge in his account for printing the goods, it appearing that this was done under the usage of commission-merchants, and was a necessary charge. Talcott v. Smith, 8 N. Eastn. Repr. (Mass.) 413.

<sup>1</sup> Girard v. Taggard, 5 S. & R. (Pa.) 19; Ilseley v. Merriam, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 242; s. c., 54 Am. Dec. 721; Earle v. De Witt, 6 Allen (Mass.), 520; Barry v. Page, 10 Gray (Mass.), 398; Lerned v. Johns, 9 Allen (Mass.), 419; Roosevelt v. Doherty, 129 Mass. 301; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 356; Toland v. Murray, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 24; Grinnell v. Schmidt, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 706; Ladd v. Arkell, 37 N. Y. Super. Ct. 35; Leverick v. Meigs, 1 Cow. (N. Y.) 645; White v. Chouteau, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 202; Taintor v. Prendergast, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 72; Hogan v. Shorb, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 458; Graham v. Duckwall, 8 Bush. (Ky.) 12; Burton v. Goodspeed, 69 Ill. 237; Leach v. Bush, 57 Ala. 145; Sadler

v. Leigh, 4 Camp. 194; Drinkwater v. Goodwin, Cowp. 251.

And the same principle holds good in a suit for damages for breach of contract. Groover v. Warfield, 50 Ga. 644. Or in a suit for trespass and tort committed on the goods while in his hands. Story on Agency, § 401 a. Wharton on Agency, § 755. United States v. Villalonga, 90 U. S. 35.

A factor may maintain trover or replevin where the goods are unlawfully taken from him. Holbrook v. Wight, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 169; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 607; Ladd v. Arkell, 37 N. Y. Super. Ct. 35; Villalonga v. U. S., 8 Ct. of Cl. 452.

Where a suit is brought by a factor on a contract made by him in the name of his principal, the defendant may avail himself of any defence he may have been entitled to had the suit been brought by the principal. Atkins v. Ambler, 2 Esp. 493.

But no set-off of a debt due the buyer from the principal can be allowed so as to defeat the factor's lien. The factor can recover to the extent of the lien in spite of the set-off. Drinkwater v. Goodwin, Cowp. 256.

The factor must, however, give the purchaser notice of his lien before the right of set-off attaches. Story on Agency, § 407; Drinkwater v. Goodwin, Cowp. 251; Atkins v. Amber, 2 Esp. 493; Coppin v. Walker, 7 Taunt. 237.

In a suit by the principal for the purchase-money for goods sold in his name, a debt from the factor to the vendee cannot be set off unless the factor had been held out as principal. Guy v. Oakley, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 331; Hogan v. Shorb, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 458; Browne v. Robinson, 2 Cal. Cas. (N. Y.) 341; Gordon v. Church, 2 Cal. Cas. (N. Y.) 299; Miller v. Lea, 35 Md. 396; s. c., 6 Am. Rep. 417; Merrick's Estate, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 9.

Although an undisclosed principal may maintain an action in his own name against one who has purchased his goods through a factor, yet the purchaser is entitled to all the equities and defences he would have had if the action had been brought in the name of the factor, where the principal has permitted his factor to act as the apparent principal in the transaction. Roosevelt v. Doherty, 129

Factors of Foreign Principals.—It has sometimes been said that a sale is made by a factor for a foreign principal the latter cannot sue for the price. This supposed exception has been put on the ground that in such case the presumption at law is that exclusive credit was given to the agent, and therefore the principal cannot be treated in any manner whatever as a party to the act. But the later and better opinion is that there is no such presumption, and that a principal, whether foreign or domestic, may sue to recover the price of goods sold by the factor, as it is made affirmatively to appear that exclusive credit was given to the agent by proof other than the mere fact that the principal resided in another State or country.<sup>1</sup>

1801; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 356; Hunt v. Knox, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 371; Page, 10 Gray (Mass.) 398; Lewis 124 Mass. 1, 7; Parker v. Aldson, 2 W. & S. (Pa.) 9; Gardner, 6 Ala. 187.

If the purchaser had reason to believe that the factor acted for a principal, and he knew that they were generally acting as commission merchants, no set-off can be set off on a suit by the principal for the purchase-money. Lea, 35 Md. 396; s. c., 6 Am. Rep. 17; Ladd v. Arkell, 40 N. Y. Ct. 150; Stewart v. Woodward, 183.

If one buys from a factor under the apprehension that he was a principal in the transaction, which misapprehension was not brought about by the factor, no such set-off will be allowed. Morris, 83 N. Car. 251.

A well-established rule of law that a factor creates a contract between the owner and the purchaser. If the purchaser pays the factor for goods so sold, such payment will discharge the purchaser from the demand of the owner, unless the latter had formerly paid the factor; but if the purchaser pays the owner, in accordance with the wishes and against the advice of the factor, such payment will be binding. Golden v. Levy, 1 Car. L. Repos. 527; s. c., 6 Am. Dec. 555; Munson, 7 Mass. 319; s. c., 5 Am. Dec. 47.

A factor cannot by settling with his principal avoid a liability to a third party for expenses incurred in forwarding the goods. Johnson v. McCampbell, 6 Baxt. 294.

A factor buying in his own name for an undisclosed principal makes himself personally liable, and this although the principal supposes the purchaser is acting for him. It is not sufficient to clear the factor from liability that the seller has the means of ascertaining the name of the principal; he must have actual knowledge. Cobb v. Knapp, 71 N. Y. 348; Raymond v. Crown and Eagle Mills, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 319; Nixon v. Downey, 49 Iowa, 166; Baldwin v. Leonard, 39 Vt. 260; Gillot v. Offor, 18 C. B. 913.

The principal when discovered may, however, also be held liable. Pentz v. Stanton, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 271; Taintor v. Prendergast, 3 Hill (N. Y.), 72; McGraw v. Godfrey, 14 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 397; Raymond v. Crown and Eagle Mills, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 319.

A principal is not liable to the seller for goods bought by his factor, in the factor's own name, where he has paid the price to the factor. McCullough v. Thompson, 45 N. Y. Super. Ct. 449.

A third party dealing with the factor may estop himself from using his remedy against the principal, as where he takes the factor's individual note, or where he in any other way indicates that he will look to the factor exclusively. Paige v. Stone, 10 Metc. (Mass.) 160; Trench v. Price, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 13.

Draft by consignor on his consignee for sum payable to third persons out of the proceeds of the goods when sold is a specific appropriation to the use of the latter, and binds the consignee to retain so much of the proceeds as is necessary to meet the draft; and the obligation of the consignee to the payee is not discharged by failure of the payee to present the draft for payment for several months, and an agreement in the meantime between the consignor and consignee for a new appropriation of the fund for the benefit of the latter. Lowery v. Steward, 25 N. Y. 239; s. c., 82 Am. Dec. 346.

1. Barry v. Page, 10 Gray (Mass.), 398; Bray v. Kettell, 1 Allen (Mass.), 80; New Castle Mfg. Co. v. Red River R.

6. Rights of Principals.—Principal May Follow his Goods as Long as They Can be Distinguished—Where a principal can trace his property into the hands of a factor, whether it be the identical article which first came to his hands, or other property purchased for the principal by the factor with the proceeds, he may follow it either into the hands of the factor or of his legal representatives, or of his assignees, if he should become insolvent, unless such representatives or assignees should pay away the same before notice of the claim of the principal.<sup>1</sup>

Co., 1 Rob. (La.) 145; s. c., 36 Am. Dec. 686; McKenzie v. Nevins, 22 Me. 138; s. c., 38 Am. Dec. 291; Rogers v. March, 33 Me. 106; Kirkpatrick v. Stainer, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 244; Taintor v. Prendergast, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 72; Oelricks v. Ford, 23 How. (U. S.) 49, 65; Green v. Kopke, 36 Eng. L. & Eq. 396.

See vol. i, p. 404.

1. Veil v. Mitchell, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 105; Thompson v. Perkins, 3 Mason (U. S.), 232; Warner v. Martin, 11 How. (U. S.) 209; Hourquebie v. Girard, 2 Wash. (U. S.) 212; Price v. Ralston, 2 Dallas (Pa.), 60; s. c., 1 Am. Dec. 260; Chesterfield Mfg. Co. v. Dehon, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 7; s. c., 16 Am. Dec. 367; Kelley v. Munson, 7 Mass. 319; Holly v. Huggefurd, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 73; s. c., 19 Am. Dec. 303; Blackman v. Green, 24 Vt. 17; Potter v. Denison, 10 Ill. 590; Fahnestock v. Bailey, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 48; s. c., 77 Am. Dec. 161; Beach v. Forsyth, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 499; Benny v. Rhodes, 18 Mo. 147; Benny v. Pegram, 18 Mo. 191.

A principal consigned wheat for sale to his factor, who accepted a draft against it. The factor sold the wheat and lent the money to S., who promised to return it before the draft was due. The draft was not paid. Held, that the principal could recover the money from S., as the proceeds of the wheat belonged to him until the draft was paid. Sheffer v. Montgomery, 65 Pa. St. 329. See Farmers', etc., Bank v. King, 57 Pa. St. 202; Pitts v. Mower, 18 Me. 361.

If the goods are in the factor's hands so as to make it appear that they were his property, the principal may lose the goods. Hamilton v. Bell, 10 Exch. 545; Livesay v. Hood, 2 Camp. 83; Shaw v. Harvey, 1 Ad. & El. 920.

Where a factor keeps the funds arising from his business, as such, separate from his individual funds, by depositing in bank, to a separate "brokerage account," the drafts received for goods sold for his customers, the fact that these drafts include his commissions on such sales is not such a mingling of his own with the trust fund as will prevent the owner of the goods sold from following the fund, nor such as will enable the factor's general creditors to reach it by attachment. Richardson v. St. Louis National Bank, 10 Mo. App. 246.

The relation between a commission agent for the sale of goods and his principal is fiduciary; and, in the absence of an express agreement or one implied by the course of business or dealing between them, giving the former the right to appropriate to his own use the proceeds of sales of his principal's goods, such proceeds belong to the principal, subject to the lien of the agent for commissions, advances, and other charges, and the principal may follow and reclaim them so long as the identity is not lost, subject to the rights of a bona fide purchaser for value. Where a firm of commission-merchants, which was insolvent, for the purpose of protecting its principals, opened a bank account in the name of the firm, with the word "agent" added, the bank having knowledge of such purpose, and deposited to the credit of that account the proceeds of sales of goods of a principal, and upon settlement gave to him a check for the balance belonging to him; held, that the bank had no right to charge against the account an individual debt of the firm, even with its consent; that the right of the principal was not affected by the fact that the agents used the specific proceeds of the sales and deposited other moneys to make up the amount so used; that such deposits, being substituted for the original proceeds, became impressed with the trust, and subject to the same equities. Also held, it was immaterial that the proceeds of sales of goods belonging to other principals were deposited in the same account; that, in the absence of proof to the contrary, the presumption was that the fund was adequate to protect all interests, and the check operated as a setting apart of so much to satisfy the claim of the principal.

Factor of Several Principals.—A factor may sell the goods of several principals in one sale, and has authority to take a note for the whole sum from the purchaser, and may hold the note for the benefit of his principals.<sup>1</sup>

General Agent.—A factor known as such is a general agent, and consequently his principal is bound by any contract he may make in the name in the line of his business, even where he violates his instructions.<sup>2</sup> whom it was delivered. Baker v. Nat. Exch. Bank, 100 N. Y. 31; Ex. Lewis, 14 Bankr. Reg. 543.

Where a factor becomes bankrupt the principal may recover his goods when unsold, or when sold, if the proceeds are deposited in other goods which can be discovered, or where the proceeds are kept separate from the goods of the factor, as where they are deposited in a separate bank account, or in separate bags. As long as the goods or proceeds can be discovered, they may be recovered by the principal. Scott v. Boardman, Willes, 400; Hall v. Boardman, 4 N. H. 38; Price v. Ralston, 2 U. S. 60; Denston v. Perkins, 2 Mass. 86; Chesterfield Mfg. v. Pick, (Mass.) 7.

The right of the principal to recover the goods or the proceeds is, however, lost if they cannot be traced. In such case the factor becomes personally liable. Ward v. Brandt, 11 Martin 31; s. c., 13 Am. Dec. 352.

Where an act of selling goods, obtained by an unauthorized agent, with no notice of the principal's title, will render a factor liable for a conversion. Roach v. Turk, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.)

Roosevelt v. Doherty, 129 Mass. 37; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 356; Goodenow v. Debon, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 7; Weston Manuf. Co. v. Searle, 15 Pick. 225; Hapgood v. Batcheller, 4 Mass. 573; Hamilton v. Cunningham Brock, (U. S.) 350; Corlies v. Cummings, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 181, Beawes (5th Ed.) 45.

A factor may sell his own goods with those of his principal, and take a note which includes the amount due for both. Good v. Batcheller, 4 Metc. 573.

Where a factor under an entire contract for a gross sum sells goods, some of which belong to himself and some to his principal, the principal cannot maintain an action against the purchaser for the value of his goods. Roosevelt v. Doherty, 129 Mass. 37; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 356.

But where he takes in payment one note for the whole payable to himself, he will not per se render himself liable. Each principal is left to his own remedy against the debtor in cases where the note does not work as an extinguishment of the debt. Corlies v. Cummings, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 181.

And even in cases where the original indebtedness is merged in the note, the relation of the factor and the principal is not changed. Goodenow v. Tyler, 7 Mass. 36.

The principal's goods in the hands of a factor are not subject to attachment for the factor's debts, even where he sells his own goods in connection with the goods of his principal. Whitfield v. Brand, 16 M. & W. 282; Carruthers v. Payne, 2 M. & P. 441.

Where according to a custom of trade the factor took one note in payment of goods belonging to several principals, and discounted it for the benefit of his principals, it was held that by this act he made himself personally liable. Johnson v. O'Hara, 5 Leigh (Va.), 456.

2. Story on Agency, § 131; Lobdell v. Baker, 1 Metc. (Mass.) 193; s. c., 35 Am. Dec. 358; Daylight Burner Co. v. Odlin, 51 N. H. 56; s. c., 12 Am. Rep. 45; Dias v. Chickering, 64 Md. 348; Higgins v. McCrea, 6 Supr. Ct. Repr. 557.

But a person dealing with a factor or broker is bound to know that by law a factor or broker, although a general agent, is not clothed with authority to pledge, deposit, or transfer the property of his principal for his own debts; and if he receives such a deposit or pledge the title is invalid, and the property may be reclaimed by the principal. And in such a case it is wholly immaterial whether the pledgee knew that the party with whom he was dealing was a factor or broker, or not. Story on Agency, § 225; Kauffman v. Heasley, 54 Tex. 563; Muller v. Pondir, 6 Lans. (N. Y.) 472.

COMMON.—1. A profit which a man has in the land of another; as to feed his beasts, catch fish, dig turf, cut wood, or the like. It is chiefly of four sorts: common of pasture, of piscary, of turbary, and of estovers. It may also be either appendant, appurtenant, or in gross.<sup>1</sup>

2. Belonging equally to more than one;<sup>2</sup> public,<sup>3</sup> ordinary.

1. 2 Bla. Com. 32. Commons are little known in the United States, though there are some regulations and decisions on the subject. 1 Bouv. Inst. 1644. There are a few instances in this country of true commons, where the right to the profits of certain public or proprietary land was vested in the inhabitants of a certain town or city. The law on the subject of these rights, which is only of little more than antiquarian or local interest and value, will be found in the following cases: Van Rensselaer v. Radcliffe, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 639; Watts v. Coffin, 11 Ins. (N. Y.) 495; Leyman v. Abeel, 16 Ins. (N. Y.) 30; Livingston v. Ten Broeck, 16 Ins. (N. Y.) 14; Rogers v. Jones, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 237; Smith v. Floyd, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 522; Westn. Univ. v. Robinson, 12 S. & R. (Pa.) 29; Carr v. Wallace, 7 Watts (Pa.), 394; Bell v. O. & Pa. R. Co., 25 Pa. St. 161; Alleghany v. O. & Pa. R. Co., 26 Pa. St. 355; Thomas v. Marshfield, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 364.

In many cities and towns of Massachusetts there were set apart at their foundation tracks of land for the general use of the inhabitants, which were variously called "commons," "common lands," "general fields," the title to which was a joint one in the inhabitants or proprietors. Rogers v. Goodman, 2 Mass. 475; Marshfield v. Hawkes, 14 Mass. 440; Folger v. Mitchell, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 396.

In White v. Smith, 37 Mich. 291, "common" was said to be land in a town or city belonging or dedicated to the public.

The term is also applied to the common fields of the French and Spanish villages of the Louisiana Territory. "The inhabitants of Upper Louisiana resided in villages almost exclusively and cultivated common fields, enclosed by only one fence; each person who cultivated the soil having assigned to him by the syndic of the town a certain portion of land to cultivate." These common fields were confirmed to the villages by act of Congress June 13 1812. See, in reference to them, Mackey v. Dillon, 7 Mo. 7; Swartz v. Page, 13 Mo. 603; Robbins v. Eckler, 36 Mo. 494; Harrison v. Page, 16 Mo. 182; State v. McReynolds, 61 Mo. 210; Fair v. Pub., Schl., 39 Mo. 59; Vasquez v. Ewing, 42 Mo. 247; Chouteau v. Eckhart, 2 How. (U. S.) 344; Mackay v. Dillon, 4 How. (U. S.) 421; Carondelet v. St. Louis, 1 Blk. (U. S.) 179; Glasgow v. Horitz, 1 Blk. (U. S.) 595; Dent v. Emmeger, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 358; Lovell v. Strobel, 89 Ill. 370; Hops v. Hewitt, 97 Ill. 498.

2. "Common control," in the first section of the act of Congress Feb. 4, 1887, to regulate commerce, means "a control to which each is alike subject, and by which rates are prescribed and bills of lading given for the carriage of goods over both routes as one." Ex parte Koehler, 30 Feb. Rep. 870.

3. A "common gaming table" was held to mean a public gaming table, in U. S. v. Smith, 4 Cr. C. C. 635.

Common School.—A public school, a free school; one not confined to a class, but open to all in a certain locality. Le Conteulx v. Buffalo, 33 N. Y. 333; Jenkins v. Andover, 103 Mass. 94; Roach v. The Board, 7 Mo. App. 567. "They are supported by general taxation, are open to all, free of expense, and are under the immediate control and superintendence of agents of each town and city." Merrick v. Inhab. of Amherst 12 Allen (Mass.), 508. A Roman Catholic orphan's asylum is not a common school. People v. Bradford, 13 Barb. (N. Y.) 400.

"Common" in this connection is said to have no reference to the studies to be taught. Roach v. The Board, 7 Mo. App. 567. On the other hand, it is held that common school has a well-settled signification, and is never applied to higher seminaries of learning, such as incorporated academies and colleges. Merrick v. Inhab. of Amherst, 12 Allen (Mass.), 508. "Without being able to give any accurate definition of a 'common school,' it is safe to say that common understanding is, it is a school that begins with the rudimental elements of an education, whatever else it may embrace, as contradistinguished from academies and universities devoted exclusively to teaching advanced pupils in the classics, and in all habitual.<sup>1</sup>

COMMON LAW.—The common law includes those principles, and rules of action applicable to the government and of person and property, which do not rest for their authority upon any express and positive declaration of the will of legislature.<sup>2</sup> branches of study usually in the curriculum of the colleges." Board of Education, 97 Ill. 378. These are used with this meaning in session "common-school educa-

Sewer.—A sewer laid by a city only to carry off sewage from streets and houses, but also to divert the flow of a brook, is a common sewer within the provisions of a charter authorizing the city to lay such. Bennett v. City of Boston, 110 Mass. 434.

The word is used in this sense in many phrases as common barrator, common drunkard, common gambler, common seller of intoxicating liquors, and common thief, which see the articles on the phrases to which they correspond. A common thief is one who has been convicted of larceny. What shall constitute a common thief is defined by statute. In Massachusetts every person who shall be convicted of larceny shall be considered a common thief. In Hoggett v. Commonwealth, 3 Metc. 1. In v. Hope, 22 Pick. 1. A similar definition is given to "common utterer of counterfeit coin." Murray v. Commonwealth, 13 Mass. 516; 4 Bl. Com. 100. In the term "common thief" has a meaning similar to the other parallel terms enumerated above. A former conviction is not necessary to constitute this; the act only requires that the thief shall be habitually and by practice a thief. World v. State, 50 Md. 49.

Assurances.—The legal evidence of the translation of property, by which every person's estate is assured and all controversies, doubts, and questions are either prevented or removed. There are of four kinds: by matter of deed, by matter of record, by custom, by devise. Whar. L. L.; 200.

An instrument whereby A acknowledged the receipt from B of four bushels of rye, to be sown, for which he was to turn four and one half bushels, and sell the crop without the restriction that B should be paid out of it, is an assurance within an act punishing the unlawful or malicious tearing of such. State v. Farraud, 3 Halst. (N. J.) 353.

Common Labor, in acts forbidding secular work on Sunday, means habitual or usual employment. Cincinnati v. Rice, 15 Ohio, 225; Voglesong v. State, 9 Ind. 112; Foltz v. State, 33 Ind. 215. The simple making of a contract is not common labor. Horacek v. Keebler, 5 Neb. 355; Bloom v. Richards, 2 Ohio, St. 368; Johnson v. Brown, 13 Kan. 529. Nor is gaming. State v. Conger, 14 Ind. 396.

Common Pleas.—All civil actions between subject and subject. 3 Bl. Com. 40. Such as are brought by private persons against private persons, or by the government where the cause of action is of a civil nature. Dallett v. Feltus, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 628.

Common Proceeding, in an act defining a civil action as "a common proceeding in a court of justice by one party against another for the enforcement or protection of a private right, or the redress or prevention of a private wrong," means "that kind of proceeding which is instituted and conducted in a manner common to other civil actions." Brown v. Crego, 29 Iowa, 323.

Common Tools of a debtor, which are by statute exempt from levy and sale on execution, do not include a lawyer's library. Lenoir v. Weeks, 20 Ga. 596.

§. 1 Kent's Com. 533.

A system of elementary principles and of general judicial truths which are continually expanding with the progress of society, and adapting themselves to the gradual changes of trade and commerce and the mechanic arts, and the exigencies and usages of the country. Peirce v. Proprietors of Swan Point Cemetery, 10 R. I. 227; s. c., 14 Am. Rep. 667.

State Courts.—In the several States of the Union the term "common law" means both the common law of England as opposed to written or statute law and the statutes passed before the emigration of the first settlers of America. Patterson v. Winn, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 241; Commonwealth v. Leach, 1 Mass. 61; Coburn v. Harvey, 18 Wis. 147; O'Ferrall v.

Definition.

COMMON LAW.

Definition.

Simplott, 4 Iowa, 341; Powell v. Brandon, 24 Miss. 343; State v. Cummings, 33 Conn. 260.

The common law constitutes the basis of the State jurisprudence except as modified by statute. Van Maren v. Johnson, 15 Col. 308; Bogardus v. Trinity Church, 4 Paige (N. Y.), 178; Horton v. Sledge, 29 Ala. 478; Sibley v. Williams, 3 Gill & J. (Md.) 62; Card v. Grimman, 5 Conn. 168. But only so far as it conforms or is applicable to our institutions and form of government. Boyer v. Sweet, 3 Scam. (Ill.) 120; Middleton v. Pritchard, 3 Scam. (Ill.) 510; Lindsley v. Coats, 1 Ohio, 245; Barlow v. Lambert, 28 Ala. 704; Wagner v. Bissell, 3 Iowa, 396; Stout v. Keyes, 2 Dougl. (Mich.) 184; Morgan v. King, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 9.

All the States except Louisiana have in some form or other adopted the common law. Sawyer v. E. Steamboat Co., 46 Me. 400. In Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Iowa, and Nevada by statute. O'Ferrall v. Simplott, 4 Iowa, 381; State v. Two-good, 7 Iowa, 252; Hamilton v. Kneeland, 1 Nev. 40; Crawford v. Chapman, 17 Ohio, 452; Dawson v. Coffman, 23 Ind. 220; Fisher v. Deering, 60 Ill. 114. The statute in Ohio was subsequently repealed. In California and Tennessee the courts have held that the common law governs, and that rules created by the English law since its adoption are to be disregarded. Porter v. State, Mart. & Yerg. (Tenn.) 226; Johnson v. Fall, 6 Cal. 359.

Whatever of the common law was brought over by the colonists, such statutes passed since the emigration since adopted in practice and such usages as probably originated from laws of the colonial legislature constitute the common law of Massachusetts except as changed by statute. Commonwealth v. Knowlton, 2 Mass. 530.

The courts of this country are bound to enforce all the clearly established principles of the common law not repealed by statute. Powell v. Brandon, 24 Miss. 343.

Federal Courts.—The courts of the United States conform to the law of the States where they are situated. People v. Folsom, 5 Cal. 374. A Federal court will look to the State where the controversy originated in deciding upon the assertion of a common-law right. Wheaton v. Peters, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 658; Kendall v. United States, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 524; Lorman v. Clarke, 2 McLean (U. S. C. C.), 568.

The Seventh Amendment to the constitution refers to the common law of England, and is used in distinction from equity or admiralty jurisdiction. Parsons v. Bedford, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 446; U. S. v. Wanson, 1 Gall. (U. S.) 20.

English Common Law.—Generally the English common law as used in the United States comprises the immemorial customs declared by the courts and particular local customs; the law merchant, or that part not defined by statute and the canon and ecclesiastical law. Eddie v. East India Co., 2 Burr. 1216; Barnett v. Brandão, 6 Man. & Gr. 630; Cook v. Renick, 19 Ill. 598; Donegan v. Wood, 49 Ala. 242; Crump v. Morgan, 3 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 9; Le Barron v. Le Barron, 35 Vt. 365.

Scope.—The common law develops new principles and extends old ones by analogy, so adapting itself to changes in times and circumstances. Jacob v. State, 3 Humph. 493; Hightower v. Fitzpatrick's Heirs, 42 Ala. 597.

Presumed Existence.—Unless the contrary is proved, the common law is presumed to exist in the original colonial States. Brown v. Pratt, 3 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 202; Stokes v. Maken, 62 Barb. (N. Y.) 145; White v. Knapp, 47 Barb. (N. Y.) 549; Crouch v. Hall, 15 Ill. 263; Titus v. Scantling, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 89; Walker v. Walker, 41 Ala. 353; Thompson v. Monrow, 2 Cal. 99; Shepherd v. Nabors, 6 Ala. 631. So, too, of States the population of which has been formed by emigration from the original States.

Louisiana, Florida, and Texas are accordingly exceptions. Norris v. Harris, 15 Cal. 226.

Permanency.—The common law, as established by decisions of courts, has the force of the law of the land, and cannot be changed by subsequent rulings, and even when wrongly applied, if rights have vested under such decisions, they will be sustained. Henry v. Bank of Salina, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 535; Sydnor v. Gascoigne, 11 Tex. 449; Lamp v. Hastings, 4 Greene (Iowa), 448; Fisher v. Horicon Iron & Mfg. Co., 10 Wis. 351; N. Y., etc., R. Co. v. Ketchum, 34 How. (N. Y.) 302; Thomason v. Dill, 34 Ala. 175; Gray v. Gray, 34 Ga. 449; Barn v. Wick, 6 Ohio St. 13; Dugan v. Hollins, 13 Md. 149.

While statutes which vary the common law take precedence over it in the decision of a case, no repeal of any established rule at the common law can be made by implication merely. Goodwin v. Thompson, 2 G. Gr. 329. So all acts altering or making any innovation on the common law must be strictly construed. Hooper v. Mayor of Baltimore, 12 Md.

Definition.*COMMUNICATE—COMMUNITY.*Definition.

COMMUNICATE.—To impart mediately or immediately;<sup>1</sup> to converse.<sup>2</sup>

COMMUNICATION.—That which is communicated or imparted.<sup>3</sup>

COMMUNITY.—A society of people living in the same place, under the same laws and regulations, and who have common rights and privileges.<sup>4</sup>

464; Keech v. Baltimore & Wabash R. Co., 17 Md. 82. When, however, the legal intendment of the legislature appears plainly and obviously in contradiction to the common law, the latter is done away with. State v. McGrew, 11 Iowa.

Unless made exclusive, the remedy provided by a statute is cumulative with one already existing at common law. People v. Craycroft, 2 Cal. 243; Candee v. Hayward, 37 N. Y. 653.

Proof.—Tradition, usage, reports, books of approved authority, furnish the proof of a rule at common law. Commonwealth v. Churchill, 2 Metc. (Mass.) 118. They are simply evidence, however, and must be clear and well established. Robert v. West, 15 Ga. 122; State v. Buchanan, 5 H. & J. (Md.) 358.

The rule of the common law once determined, the courts will take judicial notice of its introduction to this country and to the original States, except as modified by statute, and that it was put in force in the Northwest Territories by the ordinances of 1787. Statutes changing it are, however, under the same rule as all other statutes. Johnson v. Chambers, 12 Ind. 102.

For a fuller discussion of this subject, see Wait's Actions and Defences, vol. ii., p. 276.

1. Under a statute which makes a railroad company liable for any injury done to any building or other property by fire communicated by a locomotive engine, the liability of the railroad is not confined to cases where the very particles of fire which fall upon and kindle the flame in the building injured emanate directly from the engine, without the intervention of any other object; it includes all injury resulting from fire, originating in the engine and extending by natural and ordinary means. Hart v. Railroad Corp., 13 Metc. (Mass.) 99; Perley v. Eastern R. Co., 98 Mass. 418; Safford v. B. & M. R. Co., 103 Mass. 584.

2. A law requiring the officers in charge of a jury to be sworn not to communicate with the jurors nor to permit any one else to communicate with them, is sufficiently complied with where the officers are sworn not to converse with the jurors, etc. Scott v. State, 7 Lea (Tenn.), 232.

3. Webster.

Under a statute making it a misdemeanor to send an indecent letter and communication to a female, an indictment for sending an indecent letter or communication is not bad. "There is nothing incongruous or inconsistent in describing it as a letter and communication, for it was both." Lorison v. State, 9 Atl. Rep. (N. J.) 700.

A question, contained in interrogatories for the deposition of a witness outside the State, whether he had had any communications with the defendant on the subject-matter of the deposition, and if so what communications, does not include the ground covered by a second question, whether he had received or seen any letters respecting the same matter, and if so, what were their contents. The terms "communications" and "letters" did not mean the same thing. Amherst Bank v. Conkey, 4 Metc. (Mass.) 459.

4. Wharton's Law Lexicon.

Confidence of the Community.—A physician of a country village in an agreement transferring his practice and goodwill to another physician for a certain sum, stipulated "that no other physician, for the space of four years, will establish himself in this place as a competitor, unless the increased population of the place should warrant it, or unless the purchaser should commit some act which shall forfeit to him the confidence of the community." Held, that the agreement was not too uncertain and insensible to support an action. "The 'community,'" said the court, "by forfeiting whose confidence the plaintiff was to lose his right to recover against the defendant, interpreted according to the subject-matter, would probably be held to be the population residing in the village and its vicinity, among which the defendant practised his profession at the time of his contract with the plaintiff. Conduct on the part of the plaintiff, which should lead to a forfeiture of the confidence of the community in him, might reasonably be construed to be incompetency, immorality, or acts of such a nature as to induce reasonable persons to forbear employing him in the practice of his profession." Gilman v. Dwight, 13 Gray (Mass.), 356, 359.

COMMUNITY PROPERTY. (See also HUSBAND AND WIFE).Definition and Characteristics, 350.Origin and History, 354.Presumptions, 354.Rights, Powers, and Liabilities of the Husband, 357.Rights, Powers, and Liabilities of theWife, 360.Rights, Powers, and Liabilities of the Survivor, 361.Rights of the Heirs, 363.Rights of Creditors, 364.

1. Definition and Characteristics.—Community property includes the profits of all the effects of which the husband has the administration and enjoyment, either of right or in fact, of the produce of the reciprocal industry and labor of both husband and wife, and of the estates which they may acquire during the marriage, either by donations, made jointly with them both, or by purchases, or in any other similar way, even although the purchase be only in the name of one of the two, and not of both; because in that case the period of time when the purchase is made is alone attended to, and not the person who made the purchase.<sup>1</sup> Conventional community is that which is formed by express agreement in the contract by marriage.<sup>2</sup> Legal community is that which, in the absence of any agreement, exists by force of law as soon as the marriage relation is established.<sup>3</sup> The central idea of the community system

1. Clark v. Norwood, 12 La. Ann. 598.

2. La. Civ. Code, 2393.

3. Abb. L. Dict. 255.

What Is and What Is Not Community Property.—All property acquired by the husband or wife during marriage is community property. Hames v. Castro, 5 Cal. 109; Buchanan's Estate, 8 Cal. 507; Johnson v. Johnson, 11 Cal. 200; Tustin v. Fought, 23 Cal. 237; Johns v. Race, 18 La. Ann. 105; Succession of Fortin, 10 La. Ann. 739; City Ins. Co. v. The Lizzie Simmons, 19 La. Ann. 249; T. C. Ry. Co. v. Burnett, 61 Tex. 638; Durham v. Williams, 32 La. Ann. 162; Chapman v. Woodward, 16 La. Ann. 167; Fitzpatrick v. Pope, 39 Tex. 315; Parker v. Chance, 11 Tex. 513.

The increase of animals belongs to the community. Bonner v. Gill, 5 La. Ann. 629; Howard v. York, 20 Tex. 670; Bateman v. Bateman, 25 Tex. 270.

Property purchased during marriage, whether by the husband or wife, is community property, and not the separate estate of the purchaser, unless made with separate funds. Cox v. Miller, 54 Tex. 16. See also Althof v. Conheim, 38 Cal. 230; S. P. Martin, 52 Cal. 235; Hussey v. Castle, 41 Cal. 239; Peck v. Brummagim, 31 Cal. 440; Ewald v. Corbett, 32 Cal. 493; Buchanan's Estate, 8 Cal. 507; Johnson v. Johnson, 11 Cal. 201; Smith v. Smith, 12 Cal. 216; Meyer v. Kinzer, 12 Cal. 247; s. c., 73 Am. Dec. 539; Tompkins v. Tompkins, 12 Cal. 114;

Pixley v. Huggins, 15 Cal. 127; Burton v. Lies, 21 Cal. 87; Adams v. Knowlton, 22 Cal. 283; Riley v. Pehl, 23 Cal. 70; Succession of Planchet, 29 La. Ann. 520; Repplyer v. Gow, 1 La. 478; Bostwick v. Gasquet, 11 La. 537; Ford v. Ford, 1 La. 207; Forbes v. Forbes, 11 La. Ann. 326; Webb v. Peck, 7 La. Ann. 92; Troxler v. Colley, 33 La. Ann. 425; Smalley v. Lawrence, 9 Rob. 211; Tally v. Heffner, 29 La. Ann. 583; Dees v. Seale, 5 La. Ann. 688; Chapman v. Allen, 15 Tex. 278; Love v. Robertson, 7 Tex. 6; s. c., 56 Am. Dec. 41; Lott v. Keach, 5 Tex. 394; Houston v. Civil, 8 Tex. 240; Gilliard v. Chessney, 13 Tex. 337; Zorn v. Barber, 45 Tex. 519; Wheat v. Owens, 15 Tex. 243; Story v. Marshall, 24 Tex. 307; Smith v. Boguet, 27 Tex. 507; Routh v. Routh, 57 Tex. 589.

It is immaterial whether the property stands in the name of both of them. Ramsdell v. Fuller, 28 Cal. 37; Tally v. Heffner, 29 La. Ann. 583; Huston v. Curl, 8 Tex. 240. Or of the husband. Buchanan v. Buchanan, 8 Cal. 507; Succession of Planchet, 29 La. Ann. 520; Hughey v. Barrow, 4 La. Ann. 248; Lacroix v. Derbigny, 18 La. Ann. 27; Le Blanc v. Le Blanc, 20 La. Ann. 206; Zimpelman v. Robb, 53 Tex. 274. Or of the wife. Pixley v. Huggins, 15 Cal. 127; Donald v. Badger, 23 Cal. 393; Riley v. Pehl, 23 Cal. 70; Mott v. Smith, 16 Cal. 533; Troxler v. Colley, 33 La. Ann. 425; Beigel v. Lange, 19 La. Ann. 112; Love

v. Robertson, 7 Tex. 6; Wells v. Cochran, 13 Tex. 127.

The defendant before his marriage was in possession, without right, of a tract of land; and after his marriage he made a deed and gave up possession of a portion thereof to the rightful owners; and induced thereby, the owners conveyed the fee of a portion of said land to the defendant. Held, that the land thus acquired by the defendant was community property. Pancoast v. Pancoast, 57 Cal. 320.

Lands purchased in the name of the wife, and paid partly with her paraphernal funds under the administration of the husband, and partly with funds of the community, fall into the community. Burns v. Thompson, 1 Southern Rep'r (La.), 913.

It is not necessary to prove that property is in fact the product of the joint efforts of husband and wife, in order that it may be declared community estate. If it is acquired after marriage by efforts of the husband alone, but not by gift, devise, or descent, or by the exchange of his individual property, or from the rents, issues, and profits of his separate estate, it belongs to the community. Lake v. Lake, 4 Pac. Repr. (Nev.) 711.

Land purchased after the death of the wife and paid for with community funds becomes community property. The surviving husband and children hold as tenants in common. McAlister v. Farley, 39 Tex. 552.

A crop growing at the time of the dissolution of the marriage is community property. Harrell v. Harrell, 12 La. Ann. 549; Wilcox v. Henderson, 9 La. Ann. 347.

Separate and Community Property Distinguished.—No property acquired by the wife during coverture becomes her separate estate, except such as is derived by gift, devise, or descent; all acquired in any other manner is community property. Ezell v. Dodson, 60 Tex. 331.

In California property acquired after marriage becomes community property, unless it be acquired by gift, descent, devise, or bequest, or on the credit of the separate estate. Schuyler v. Broughton, 11 Pac. Rep. 719. But the rents, issues, and profits of the separate estate remain separate property. Shumway v. Leakey, 8 Pac. Rep. 12; In re Higgins, 4 Pac. Rep. 389.

Where a man purchased property at a partition sale, and paid for it by means of his heritable share, held, that it was his separate property, and that it did not become community as property acquired during marriage. Troxler v. Colley, 33 La. Ann. 425. See also Gravenberg v. Savoie, 8 La. Ann. 499; Morales v. Marigny, 14 La. Ann. 855. Compare Breaux v. Carmouche, 15 La. Ann. 588.

Where a husband bought property during the community, paying for it with his separate funds under circumstances clearly showing an intention to buy for his separate account, held, that the property was his separate estate. Young v. Young, 5 La. Ann. 611. See Bass v. Larche, 7 La. Ann. 104.

If a wife desires to have separate property distinguished from community, or to make an exception to the rules which govern purchases during coverture, she should purchase herself, or through an agent, and in her own name. Dees v. Seale, 5 La. Ann. 688; Squier v. Stockton, 5 La. Ann. 742; Shaw v. Hill, 20 La. Ann. 531. See also Stroud v. Humble, 2 La. Ann. 930; Ellis v. Rush, 5 La. Ann. 116; De Young v. De Young, 6 La. Ann. 787; Succession of Vanrensellaer, 6 La. Ann. 803; Metcalf v. Clark, 8 La. Ann. 286; Clark v. Norwood, 12 La. Ann. 598; Spalding v. Godard, 15 La. Ann. 277; Waterer v. Brumfield, 25 La. Ann. 210; Reid v. Rochereau, 2 Woods, 151; Denègre v. Denègre, 30 La. Ann. Pt. I. 275; Durham v. Williams, 32 La. Ann. 162; Troxler v. Colley, 33 La. Ann. 425; Merrick's Succession, 35 La. Ann. 296; McCay v. Boatner, 22 La. Ann. 435; Fisk v. Flores, 43 Tex. 340; McAfee v. Robertsson, 43 Tex. 591; Martin v. Martin, 52 Cal. 235; Lake v. Lake, 52 Cal. 428; Remington v. Higgins, 54 Cal. 620; Re Higgins, 65 Cal. 407.

In Texas the increase of all separate property, except the "increase of lands," is community property. Magee v. White, 23 Tex. 191; McIntyre v. Chappell, 4 Tex. 187; Love v. Robertson, 7 Tex. 6; a. c., 56 Am. Dec. 41; Cartwright v. Cartwright, 18 Tex. 626; De Blane v. Lynch, 23 Tex. 25; White v. Lynch, 26 Tex. 195; De Garca v. Galvan, 55 Tex. 56; Marx v. Lange, 61 Tex. 547; Braden v. Gose, 57 Tex. 37. But see Carr v. Tucker, 42 Tex. 330.

For a discussion of the meaning of the term "increase of land," see De Blane v. Lynch, 23 Tex. 25; Forbes v. Dunham, 24 Tex. 612; Portis v. Parker, 22 Tex. 702; Bateman v. Bateman, 25 Tex. 270; Carr v. Tucker, 42 Tex. 337; White v. Lynch, 26 Tex. 195.

In Smith v. Bailey, 1 S. W. Repr. 627, the court said: "Several principles well settled by this court come to our aid in passing upon this question. First, the profits arising from an investment of a married woman's property become the community estate of herself and husband. Braden v. Gose, 57 Tex. 41; Green v. Ferguson, 62 Tex. 529; Epperson v. Jones, 6 Tex. Law Rev. 86; Cleveland v. Cole (Galveston Term, 1886). Another principle, equally well settled, is that the wife's separate property may undergo mutations and changes, yet retain its separate character; but the proof to trace and identify it in its changed condition must be clear and satisfactory. Love v. Robertson, 7 Tex. 6; Rose v. Houston, 11 Tex. 326; Chapman v. Allen, 15 Tex. 278; Philipowski v. Spencer, 63 Tex. 604. It is also true that, to the extent that the wife's separate means enters into the purchase of other property, the latter is to be treated as her separate estate; and the same rules apply to the community property and the husband's separate estate." See also Claiborne v. Tanner, 18 Tex. 69; Braden v. Gose, 57 Tex. 37; Parker v. Coop, 60 Tex. 112; Schuyler v. Broughton, 11 Pac. Repr. (Cal.) 719.

Property purchased during coverture by a wife with the rents and profits of her separate estate are not subject to any marital rights of her husband. Woffenden v. Charouleau, 11 Pac. Repr. (Ariz.) 117.

Under the statute of 1865 the rents, issues, and profits of a married man's separate estate do not become common property with his wife. Lake v. Lake, 4 Pac. Repr. (Nev.) 711; Lake v. Bender, 18 Nev. 361.

In California the increase and profits of the separate estate of husband and wife are separate property. George v. Ransom, 15 Cal. 322; s. c., 76 Am. Dec. 490; Lewis v. Johns, 24 Cal. 629; s. c., 85 Am. Dec. 49; Spear v. Ward, 20 Cal. 674; Marlow v. Barlew, 53 Cal. 459; Beaudry v. Felch, 47 Cal. 183; Smith v. Smith, 12 Cal. 224; s. c., 73 Am. Dec. 533; Est. of Higgins, 65 Cal. 407. Compare Lewis v. Lewis, 18 Cal. 654.

Loans made to the wife upon the faith of her separate property are, in California, separate property. Schuyler v. Broughton, 11 Pac. Rep. (Cal.) 719.

But in Texas they are community property. Heidenheimer v. McKeen, 63 Tex. 229.

In Louisiana the increase of separate property becomes community property. Fisher v. Gordy, 2 La. Ann. 762; Webb v. Peet, 7 La. Ann. 92; Glenn v. Elam, 3 La. Ann. 611; Werner v. Kelley, 9 La. Ann. 60. But see Waterer v. Brumfield, 25 La. Ann. 210.

Where improvements are made on the separate estate of one of the spouses, during coverture, the community can only be allowed the actual cost of the improvements, although the property may have increased in value. Succession of McClelland, 14 La. Ann. 762; Depas v. Riez, 2 La. Ann. 30; Childers v. Johnson, 6 La. Ann. 634; Rice v. Rice, 21 Tex. 58.

If the husband use his separate funds to benefit and enrich the community, it will constitute a debt of the community in favor of the husband or his succession to the amount of the fund used. Denègre v. Denègre, 30 La. Ann. Part I. 275; Merrick's Succession, 35 La. Ann. 296.

Where a man, before marriage, purchased real estate, which increased in value afterwards, and upon which community funds were expended, held, that it was separate property which could be disposed of by will, but that this separate estate could be charged with the community money expended on it. Patton's Est. Myr. Cal. 241. See also Moore v. Stancet, 36 La. Ann. 819.

Merchandise which was not acquired by the wife, either by gift, devise, or descent, nor by the exchange of property thus acquired, nor by money derived through the sale of property thus acquired, but which was purchased by the wife with money borrowed upon the faith of her separate property as security, is not the separate property of the wife, but the community property of the husband and wife. The transaction is not equivalent to an exchange of the wife's separate property for the merchandise. Heidenheimer v. McKeen, 63 Tex. 229.

A wife furnished her husband with a bale of hay raised on community land, and a sum of money, both of which she supposed were separate estate, to purchase a piano for their daughter. He purchased the instrument, paying therefor in cash nearly all the money he had so received on account, and drew a draft on his commission-merchant, to whom the bale of hay, with other hay, had been consigned, for the balance. About fifteen years before that, the wife had received quite a large sum of money from her father's estate, but there was no evidence that that which had been expended on account of the purchase of the piano was a portion of that identical money, nor was there any evidence to show from what particular source she derived it. The inference drawn from the facts was that it was the proceeds of property in which the money acquired by the death of her father had been invested, and which had become community property. Neither was there any evidence to show out of what specific money the draft was paid. Held, that the piano was community property, and not the separate estate of the wife. Connor v. Hawkins, 2 S. W. Repr. (Tex.) 520.

The earnings of both husband and wife are community property. 61 Tex. 642; Isaacson v. Mentz, 33 La. Ann. 595; Mehner v. Dietrich, 36 La. Ann. 390; Prennergast v. Cassidy, 8 La. Ann. 96; Ford v. Brooks, 35 La. Ann. 157; Fuller v. Ferguson, 26 Cal. 547; Meyer v. Kinzer, 12 Cal. 252; s. c., 73 Am. Dec. 538. Compare Marlow v. Barlew, 53 Cal. 459; Fisk v. Flores, 43 Tex. 340.

If a wife purchases property with her earnings, it is community property, unless it is proven that the husband intended to give her the proceeds of her earnings; in such a case the property would be the separate property of the wife. Johnson v. Burford, 39 Tex. 242.

Where a husband took out a life-assurance policy in favor of his wife, held, that the proceeds do not become a part of the community, but belong exclusively to the wife and her heirs. Succession of Bofenschen, 29 La. Ann. 711. See also Webb's Est. Myr. Cal. 241.

Public Lands.—In Hodge v. Donald, 55 Tex. 344, the court said: "The policy of Texas has ever been to induce by grants of land both married and single men to immigrate and become citizens. In consonance with the objects sought, greater inducements have been held out to the former class, as shown by the increased amount of land given. Although the certificate or title, under the law, issued to the husband as the head of the family, yet in consideration of the joint toils, privations, and dangers undergone by the wife also, it has been repeatedly decided by this court that under our system it would constitute community property of the husband and wife, one half of which, charged with the debts of the community, would, on the death of the wife, descend to her children. Yates v. Houston, 3 Tex. 433; Wilkinson v. Wilkinson, 20 Tex. 237.

"This accords with the general policy of our law upon the subject of marital rights, and an exception to it should not be allowed unless the facts of the particular case clearly demand it. In some cases where the wife died soon after her arrival into Texas the subsequent grant to the husband has been held to be his separate property, and not community, as in Webb v. Webb, 15 Tex. 274.

"These cases will be found to be those in which the death of the wife occurred before there had been a sufficient compliance with the conditions upon which the land was offered to have then entitled either the husband or the wife to demand it, upon equitable principles or under the terms of the law; and the subsequent grant to the husband was held to be his separate property, upon the ground that the consideration passed from him alone, and not from both him and the deceased wife. In other cases, in which the death of the wife occurred subsequently to a substantial compliance with the conditions upon which the grant was offered, it has been decided that it was community property. Yates v. Houston, 3 Tex. 433; Wilkinson v. Wilkinson, 20 Tex. 237.

"The true test, as we deduce from the authorities, is this: First, Did the surviving husband receive the grant by reason of such emigration, settlement, and residence on his own part as would under the law entitle him to it independent of his status as a married man at the date of his wife's death? If so, it was his separate property.

"Second, Was the increased quantity of land over that to which a single man, not the head of a family, was entitled, given to the surviving husband by reason of the fact that at the date of the death of the wife he was then a married man? If so, then it was community property, and the half interest of the wife subject to the debts of the community would descend to her children." See also Rudd v. Johnson, 60 Tex. 91; Yates v. Houston, 3 Tex. 433; Manchaca v. Field, 62 Tex. 135; Allen v. Harper, 19 Tex. 502; Might v. McGinty, 37 Tex. 733.

It has been decided that a Mexican-land grant is a gift, and therefore the separate property of the donee; for the conditions attached to the grants are held not to be onerous, because the money and labor are expended on the land itself, and exclusively for the benefit of the grantee. Noe v. Card, 14 Cal. 578; Panaud v. Jones, 1 Cal. 514; Scott v. Ward, 13 Cal. 459; Fuller v. Ferguson, 26 Cal. 547; Wilson v. Castro, 31 Cal. 120. See also Hughey v. Barrow, 4 La. Ann. 248; Wilkinson v. American Iron Co., 20 Mo. 122.

Land granted by the republic to one because of his being a married man, was the community property of his wife and of himself, though the grant bore date after her death; one-half interest therein descended to her heirs, subject to the payment of community debts. Caruth v. Grigsby, 57 Tex. 259. See also Burris v. Wideman, 6 Tex. 232; Parker v. Chance, 11 Tex. 513; Thomas v. Chance, 11 Tex. 637; Wilkinson v. Wilkinson, 20 Tex. 237; Cannon v. Murphy, 31 Tex.

is that marriage creates a partnership in property between husband and wife, and that all property resulting from the labor of both or either of them, and all property vesting in them or either of them except by gift, devise, bequest, or descent, inures to the benefit of both of them; and though community property has not all the incidents of partnership property, it has many of them, and is commonly spoken of as partnership property.<sup>1</sup>

2. Origin and History.—The doctrine of community property has its origin in the civil law, but those States and Territories which have adopted it took it directly from the old French, Spanish, or Mexican law.<sup>2</sup> The doctrine is at present recognized by statute in California,<sup>3</sup> Louisiana,<sup>4</sup> Nevada,<sup>5</sup> Texas,<sup>6</sup> and in Arizona,<sup>7</sup> Idaho,<sup>8</sup> Montana,<sup>9</sup> and Washington.<sup>10</sup> Territories. It formerly existed in Missouri.<sup>11</sup> The various statutes are to a large extent declaratory of previously existing law, and are construed alike in the several States.<sup>12</sup> These statutes take effect only in the absence of agreement between the parties, as they may establish the property rights by contract.<sup>13</sup>

3. Presumptions.—All property acquired during the existence of 405; Wright v. McGinty, 37 Tex. 733; Carter v. Wise, 39 Tex. 273; Hodge v. Donald, 55 Tex. 344; Rudd v. Johnson, 60 Tex. 91.

Prima facie an unconditional certificate is the separate property of him to whom it issued, the conditional certificate having issued to him as a single man. Porter v. Burnett, 60 Tex. 220. See also Hodge v. Donald, 55 Tex. 344.

Where a wife, before her marriage, was the holder of a pre-emption right to land, which she paid for with funds loaned her upon her personal faith and credit, and, after her marriage, a patent was issued to her by the United States, the patent relates back to the date of her entry; and in an action for divorce, and a moiety of the land, brought by the husband, the land will be adjudged the separate property of the wife, free from all claim, interest, or control of the husband. Harris v. Harris, 12 Pac. (Cal.) 274. See also Simien v. Perrodin, 35 La. Ann. 931; Eslinger v. Eslinger, 47 Cal. 62.

A warrant was issued to a man during marriage, which authorized him to enter public lands already offered for sale. He located it on lands which were partly occupied by his family. These lands were not offered for sale until after his wife's death. He afterward purchased other lands under pre-emption claims acquired during the life of the wife. Held, that the lands were not community, and a purchaser from the husband without notice is unaffected by the equitable claims of the wife's heirs. Sexton v. McGill, La. Ann. 190.

1. De Blane v. Lynch, 23 Tex. 24; Wilkinson v. Wilkinson, 20 Tex. 24; Cartwright v. Hollis, 5 Tex. 163; Johnson v. Jones, 15 Tex. 143; Woodley v. Adams, 55 Tex. 526; Panaud v. Jones, 1 Cal. 514. Compare Baird v. Lemee, 23 La. Ann. 424.

2. Buchanan's Estate, 8 Cal. 507, 510; Fuller v. Ferguson, 26 Cal. 246; Meyer v. Kinzer, 12 Cal. 247; s. c., 73 Am. Dec. 439; Packard v. Arellanes, 17 Cal. 53; Saul v. Creditors, 5 Martin N. S. (La.) 569; s. c., 16 Am. Dec. 212; Morales Marigny, 14 La. Ann. 855; Hall v. Hall, 52 Tex. 298; Burr v. Wilson, 18 Tex. 370; Edrington v. Mayfield, 5 Tex. 36; Hall v. Dotson, 55 Tex. 522.

3. Buchanan's Estate, 8 Cal. 507, 520.

4. La. Civ. Code, 1875, § 2399 et seq.

5. Nevada C. L. 1873, § 151 et seq.

6. Texas R. S. 1879, §§ 1653, 1654, 2851, et seq.

7. Stiles v. Lord, 11 Pac. Repr. (Ariz.) 314.

8. Ray v. Ray, 1 Idaho N. S. 566.

9. Mon. Prob. C. 551.

10. Holyoke v. Jackson, 3 Pac. Repr. (Wash.) 841.

11. Childress v. Cutler, 16 Mo. 24, 40.

12. Buchanan's Estate, 8 Cal. 507.

13. Marlow v. Barlow, 53 Cal. 456; La. Civ. Code, 1878, § 2424; Nev. C. L. 1873, § 176; Le Breton v. Miles, 8 Page (N. Y.), 261; Desobry v. Schlater, 25 La. Ann. 425. Compare Cox v. Miller, Tex. 16; Green v. Ferguson, 62 Tex. 52.

community, and all property in the possession of either spouse during coverture, is presumed to be community property.<sup>1</sup> These presumptions may be rebutted, but it must be by clear and satisfactory evidence, and the burden of proof is upon the party alleging that the property is separate property.<sup>2</sup>

The court said in Wallace v. Campbell, 54 Tex. 87: "It has long been settled by this court that property acquired during coverture, by purchase or apparent title, whether the conveyance be in the name of the husband or wife, or will be presumed to be community property." See also Cox v. Miller, 54 Tex. 16; Connor v. Hawkins, 2 S. W. (Tex.) 500; Johnson v. Burford, 39 Tex. 42; Chapman v. Allen, 15 Tex. 278; Wheeler, 7 Tex. 20; Lott v. L., 5 Tex. 394; Huston v. Curl, 8 Tex. 42, s. c., 58 Am. Dec. 110; Gilliard v. Jessney, 13 Tex. 337; Claiborne v. L., 18 Tex. 69; Cook v. Bremond, 2 Tex. 457; Yates v. Houston, 3 Tex. 10; Scott v. Maynard, Dallam, 548; Ell v. Marr, 26 Tex. 329; Allen v. L., 19 Tex. 502; Veramendi v. L., 48 Tex. 531; Browder v. L., 61 Tex. 587; Smith v. Bailey, 7 Tex. Repr. (Tex.) 627; Smith v. Smith, 11 Tex. 216; s. c., 73 Am. Dec. 533; Ward, 13 Cal. 471; Tryon v. Sutcliffe, 13 Cal. 483; Burton v. Lies, 21 Cal. 233; Althof v. Conheim, 38 Cal. 233; L. v. Kinzer, 12 Cal. 247; s. c., 73 Am. Dec. 538; Pixley v. Huggins, 15 Cal. 131; Mott v. Smith, 16 Cal. 533; L. v. Ashenauer, 17 Cal. 581; Adams v. Bolton, 22 Cal. 288; McDonald v. L., 23 Cal. 398; Ramsdell v. Fuller, 24 Cal. 42; Shuler v. Savings and Loan, 1 W. Coast Repr. 125; Johnson v. L., 11 Cal. 205; Peck v. Vandenberg, 30 Cal. 11; Schuyler v. Broughton, 11 Pac. Repr. 719; Riley v. Pehl, 23 Cal. 40; Peck v. Brummagin, 31 Cal. 40; Alt v. Austin, 36 Cal. 691; Wedel v. L., 59 Cal. 507; Smalley v. Law, 9 Rob. (La.) 210; Ford v. Ford, 11 La. Ann. 9; Bryan v. Moore, 11 Mart. (La.) 13; 13 Am. Dec. 347; Webb v. Peet, 9 La. Ann. 9; Bachino v. Coste, 35 La. Ann. 570; Moore v. Stancet, 36 La. Ann. 290; Dominguez v. Lee, 17 La. Ann. 290; L. v. Gordy, 1 La. Ann. 763; Davidson v. Stuart, 10 La. Ann. 146; Corneau v. L., 19 La. Ann. 406; Provost v. Mahoussaye, 5 La. Ann. 610; Prenst v. Cassidy, 8 La. Ann. 96; Anderson v. Bradley, 10 La. Ann. 606; Forbes v. L., 11 La. Ann. 326; Murphy v. L., 2 So. Repr. (La.) 575; Burns v. L., 1 So. Repr. (La.) 913; Hart

v. Gottwald, 15 La. Ann. 13; Lake v. Lake, 4 West Coast Repr. (Nev.) 159; Lemon v. Waterman, 2 Wash. 485.

Community Property.—When the money which formed the consideration for the deed was money collected two years after marriage, due for services as a school-teacher performed by the wife, it will be presumed to be community property. The fact that the husband collected it, and made the deed to reimburse the wife without her knowledge, or that, as between themselves, he regarded the money as her separate property, would not change its character. Pearce v. Jackson, 61 Tex. 642.

2. Against Whom these Presumptions May be Rebutted.—Land conveyed to husband or wife, or both, by deed of purchase is presumed to be community property, and parol evidence is not admissible to explain or modify such deeds so as to ingraft upon the property after it has passed to innocent purchasers a trust to their detriment; though as between the parties to such deeds, their privies in blood, or purchasers without value or with notice, their legal import may be affected by parol evidence. Cooke v. Bremond, 27 Tex. 457; s. c., 86 Am. Dec. 626. See also French v. Strumberg, 52 Tex. 109; Kirk v. Navigation Co., 49 Tex. 213; Smith v. Boguet, 27 Tex. 507; Wallace v. Campbell, 54 Tex. 89; Parker v. Coop, 60 Tex. 111; McDaniel v. Weiss, 53 Tex. 263; Lorn v. Tarver, 45 Tex. 519; John v. Battle, 58 Tex. 591; Edwards v. Brown, 4 S. W. Repr. (Tex.) 380.

In California a purchaser from the husband of land deeded to the wife for a valuable consideration does so at his peril, and it may be shown that the property was the separate property of the wife. Moore v. Jones, 63 Cal. 12. See also Ramsdell v. Fuller, 28 Cal. 37; Alverson v. Jones, 10 Cal. 12.

Admissibility of Parol Evidence in Rebutting these Presumptions.—The court said in Schuyler v. Broughton, 11 Pac. Repr. (Cal.) 719. "It is true that the legal presumption which arises from the face of the deed may be overcome by extrinsic proof that the consideration paid was the separate funds of the wife. McDonald v. Badger, 23 Cal. 393; Tustin v. Faught, 23 Cal. 241; Landers v. Bolton, 26 Cal. 393." See also Peck v. Vandenberg, 30 Cal. 11; Peck v. Brummagim, 31 Cal. 440; Higgins v. Higgins, 46 Cal. 259; Dunham v. Chatham, 21 Tex. 244.

Parol evidence is admissible to show an understanding between the husband and wife, that real estate conveyed to her during coverture should be her separate property. T. & P. R. Co. v. Dunett, 57 Tex. 48.

It has been held, however, that the presumption that property is community cannot be rebutted by parol evidence that it is the separate property of the wife against bona fide purchasers from the husband for a valuable consideration. Cooke v. Bremond, 27 Tex. 457; s. c., 86 Am. Dec. 626.

Recitals in Deeds.—The fact that a deed of lands was made to a wife "for her separate estate," even if construed to mean that the consideration money was paid from her separate property, only creates a separate estate in her prima facie, and does not preclude one claiming under her husband from showing that the purchase-money was paid from community funds. McComb v. Spangler, 12 Pac. Repr. (Cal.) 347.

A deed which recited a consideration of money paid, as well as love and affection, was presumed to be a deed of community property. Tustin v. Faught, 23 Cal. 237.

In Louisiana a recital in a deed has no effect upon the presumption that it is a deed of community property. Forbes v. Forbes, 11 La. Ann. 326; Bachino v. Coste, 35 La. Ann. 570.

"Property conveyed to the wife during coverture, and limited by the terms of the deed to her sole and separate use, becomes the separate property of the wife, and this whether the consideration paid for its acquisition was with separate or community funds. In such case the intention to make such property the separate property of the wife is apparent on the face of the deed, charging all who have knowledge of its existence with notice." Morrison v. Clark, 55 Tex. 437.

Where Property is Purchased with the Separate Property of the Husband, but in the Name of the Wife.—Where it is shown that the consideration in a deed taken in the name of the wife was the separate property of the husband, the presumption is that it was the intention of the husband to make a gift of the property to his wife. Smith v. Strahan, 16 Tex. 314; s. c., 67 Am. Dec. 622; Dunham v. Chatham, 21 Tex. 244; Tucker v. Carr, 39 Tex. 98; Baldrige v. Scott, 48 Tex. 189.

It may be shown, however, that the husband made the purchase for his own benefit. Higgins v. Johnson, 20 Tex. 389; s. c., 70 Am. Dec. 394; Peck v. Vandenberg, 30 Cal. 11.

Conveyance by the Husband to the Wife.—The husband may convey his separate or the community property directly to his wife, and there is then no presumption that the property so conveyed is community, but it becomes the separate property of the wife. Fitts v. Fitts, 14 Tex. 444; Hall v. Hall, 52 Tex. 299; Story v. Marshall, 24 Tex. 307; Klumpke v. Baker, 10 Pac. Repr. (Cal.) 197; Kohner v. Ashenauer, 17 Cal. 581; Barker v. Koneman, 13 Cal. 10; Peck v. Brummagim, 31 Cal. 440; Fuller v. Ferguson, 26 Cal. 547; Hussey v. Castle, 41 Cal. 239.

A conveyance to the wife by the husband will not stand against a prior unrecorded deed. Pearce v. Jackson, 61 Tex. 642.

No third party can question the validity of a conveyance from the husband to the wife, unless he was a creditor of the husband before the conveyance was made, or was a subsequent purchaser without notice. The declarations of a husband, introduced in a suit to which the wife is a party, to impeach a conveyance made by him to his wife, when made after the execution of the deed, cannot constitute such proof as to form the basis of a judgment, even though no objection be made at the time of their introduction in evidence. De Garca v. Galvan, 55 Tex. 53.

A donation by the husband to the wife, or by the wife to the husband, may be revoked during the lifetime of the donor, but not after. Labbe's Heirs v. Abat, 2 La. 553; s. c., 22 Am. Dec. 151; Fuller v. Ferguson, 26 Cal. 546.

Declarations of the Husband.—For the purpose of showing that the money used in making a purchase was the separate money of the wife, declarations of the husband made prior to the conveyance by him are competent evidence. Moore v. Jones, 63 Cal. 12. See also Smith v. Strahan, 16 Tex. 314; s. c., 67 Am. Dec. 622; Johnson v. Burford, 39 Tex. 242; De Garca v. Galvan, 55 Tex. 53; Baker v. Baker, 55 Tex. 577.

The court remarked in Coats v. Elliot, 23 Tex. 613, that "the declarations of the husband are the weakest and most unsatisfactory kind of evidence."

Intention of the Parties.—The effect of a deed of community property depends on the intention of him or them who at the date of its execution have the right to control it. In arriving at that intention all contemporaneous circumstances and declarations are evidence of the most

4. Rights, Powers, and Liabilities of the Husband.—The husband and wife have equal interests in the community,<sup>1</sup> though during satisfactory character. Baker v. Baker, 55 Tex. 577. See also Hall v. Hall, 52 Tex. 299; Peters v. Clements, 46 Tex. 125; Johnson v. Burford, 39 Tex. 242; Dunham v. Chatham, 21 Tex. 244; Higgins v. Johnson's Heirs, 20 Tex. 389; s. c., 70 Am. Dec. 394; T. & P. R. Co. v. Dunett, 57 Tex. 53; Hatchett v. Connor, 30 Tex. 104; Smith v. Strahan, 16 Tex. 314; s. c., 67 Am. Dec. 622; Peck v. Brummagin, 31 Cal. 440; Higgins v. Higgins, 46 Cal. 259; Read v. Rahm, 65 Cal. 343.

Sufficiency and Burden of Proof.—The presumption that property purchased during marriage is community property is very cogent, and can only be repelled by clear and conclusive proof; but where it is established clearly and conclusively that the property was purchased with the separate money of one of the parties, it remains the separate property of the party with whose money it was purchased. Love v. Robertson, 7 Tex. 6; s. c., 56 Am. Dec. 41.

In Ramsdell v. Fuller, 23 Cal. 42, Sawyer, J., said: "It is much easier for the party purchasing the land to show affirmatively that the funds used were separate property of the party purchasing, than for others interested to show negatively that they were not. The evidence is peculiarly within the knowledge and control of such party. For these and other reasons, when the fact is required to be proved, the law throws the burden of identifying the funds as a part of the separate estate upon the party claiming the benefit of such estate." See also Higgins v. Higgins, 46 Cal. 259; McDonald v. Badger, 23 Cal. 393; s. c., 83 Am. Dec. 123; Adams v. Knowlton, 22 Cal. 283; Mott v. Smith, 16 Cal. 533; Smith v. Smith, 12 Cal. 216; s. c., 73 Am. Dec. 533; Meyer v. Kinzer, 12 Cal. 247; s. c., 73 Am. Dec. 538; Block v. Melville, 22 La. Ann. 147; Bachino v. Coste, 35 La. Ann. 570; Webb v. Peet, 7 La. Ann. 92; Fisher v. Gorde, 2 La. Ann. 762; Ford v. Ford, 1 La. Ann. 201; Lake v. Lake, 4 Pac. Repr. (Nev.) 711; Cox v. Miller, 54 Tex. 25; Coats v. Elliot, 23 Tex. 613; Castro v. Illies, 22 Tex. 479; s. c., 73 Am. Dec. 277; Dunham v. Chatham, 21 Tex. 244; Chapman v. Allen, 15 Tex. 283; Mitchell v. Marr, 26 Tex. 331; Zorn v. Tarver, 45 Tex. 519, 521; Huston v. Curl, 8 Tex. 239; Schmeltz v. Garey, 49 Tex. 61; Lott v. Keach, 5 Tex. 304; Scott v. Maynard, Dallam, 551; McAfee v. Robertson, 43 Tex. 591.

The language of the court in State v.

Voorhies, 2 Southern Repr. (La.) 36, was: "Apparently, the theory on which the defence rests is that it is enough to show that the husband inherited certain sums, and that from this circumstance must be deduced the fact that the community was pro tanto benefited and that he has remained a creditor for as much of the conjugal partnership; but this is a fallacy. The law demands substantial proof that the amounts were actually invested in the community by the husband, and the record is barren of all evidence that he has done so. The real estate acquired during the first community, and which was inventoried as part of its assets, does not appear, either on the face of the titles or otherwise, to have been paid for out of his separate funds. The price paid ought to have been traced back to the inheritance. This was essential to constitute him a creditor of the community. Babin v. Nolan, 6 Rob. (La.) 508; Stewart v. Pickard, 10 Rob. (La.) 18; Doğrin v. Wiltz, 11 La. Ann. 514; Succession of Viand, 11 La. Ann. 297; Downs v. Morrison, 13 La. Ann. 379; Belair v. Dominguez, 26 La. Ann. 605; Denègre v. Denègre, 30 La. Ann. 277; Succession of Merrick, 35 La. Ann. 296; Bachino v. Coste, 35 La. Ann. 570. The adverse opinion in the case of Falgout v. Daspit, 6 La. Ann. 174, is no authority, and must be considered as overruled."

Property acquired during a marriage in the name of the husband is presumed to belong to the community; nor will such presumption be rebutted by proof that he acquired the property with the money of his children by a former marriage; nor will such fact affect the title of the community to the property, though it may create a debt against it. Murphy v. Jury, 2 Southern Repr. (La.) 575.

Where at the time of the marriage the husband had much money and the wife nothing, and during the marriage relation the parties decreased in fortune, it was held that the statutory presumption that property acquired during marriage was community, was not rebutted unless the purchase money be explicitly traced to the husband's separate property. Schmeltz v. Garey, 49 Tex. 49.

1. "It is settled law in this [Texas] State that the interests of the husband and wife in the community property are equal, whether the deed be taken in the name of either, or the names of both. Veramendi v. Hutchins, 48 Tex. 531; Cooke v. Bremond, 27 Tex. 460; Mit- coverture the wife's rights are passive,<sup>1</sup> and he has full management and control of the property,<sup>2</sup> and may deal with it almost as if it were his own.<sup>3</sup> He is its sole representative, and is liable for its debts.<sup>4</sup> It is liable for his separate debts.<sup>5</sup> He has full power to dispose of it absolutely without her consent;<sup>6</sup> his sole deed passes community realty;<sup>7</sup> his sole signature assigns community promissory notes,<sup>8</sup> though standing in her name;<sup>9</sup> in his sole name he sues in ejectment,<sup>10</sup> and enforces a promissory note;<sup>11</sup> he may give the property away,<sup>12</sup> but not with the intent to defraud her of her chell v. Marr, 26 Tex. 330; Higgins v. Johnson, 20 Tex. 389. And there are decisions of our courts in which the title of the wife or of her heirs in the common estate, held in the name of the husband, is denominated a legal title. Johnson v. Harrison, 48 Tex. 268; Garner v. Thompson, 1 Tex. Law Rev. 286." Edwards v. Brown, 4 S. W. Repr. (Tex.) 380; Bell v. Schwarz, 56 Tex. 353; Zimpelman v. Robb, 53 Tex. 274; Wright v. Hays, 10 Tex. 130; s. c., 60 Am. Dec. 200; Yancy v. Batte, 48 Tex. 46; De Godey v. De Godey, 39 Cal. 157.

1. Wright v. Hays, 10 Tex. 130; s. c., 60 Am. Dec. 200.

2. Althof v. Conheim, 38 Cal. 230; Peck v. Brummagim, 31 Cal. 440; Mott v. Smith, 16 Cal. 535; Cheek v. Bellows, 17 Tex. 616.

3. Lord v. Hough, 43 Cal. 581; Pixley v. Huggins, 15 Cal. 127.

4. Kelly v. Robertson, 10 La. Ann. 313; Hawley v. Crescent City Bank, 26 La. Ann. 230; Ford v. Brooks, 35 La. Ann. 157; Chaffe v. McIntosh, 36 La. Ann. 824; Carter v. Conner, 60 Tex. 52.

5. McDonald v. Badger, 23 Cal. 393; Adams v. Knowlton, 22 Cal. 283; Tompkins v. Tompkins, 12 Cal. 114; Glasscock v. Green, 4 La. Ann. 146; Chauviere v. Fliege, 6 La. Ann. 57; Forbes v. Dunham, 24 Tex. 611; Jones v. Jones, 15 Tex. 143; Edrington v. Mayfield, 5 Tex. 363; Lott v. Keach, 5 Tex. 394.

6. Althof v. Conheim, 38 Cal. 230; Pixley v. Huggins, 15 Cal. 127; Van Maren v. Johnson, 15 Cal. 312; Wolf v. Wolf, 12 La. Ann. 520; Glenn v. Elam, 3 La. Ann. 611; Guice v. Lawrence, 2 La. Ann. 226; Trahan v. Trahan, 8 La. Ann. 455; Walters v. Jewett, 28 Tex. 192; Brewer v. Wall, 23 Tex. 588; Berry v. Wright, 14 Tex. 274.

A husband has the absolute power to dispose of the common property to the same extent and in the same manner as his separate property, until a legal separation has been effected by a competent court and a division made under the direction thereof. Ray v. Ray, 1 Idaho N. S. 566. Compare the following:

"Since the husband and wife, act of 1879, a husband cannot, without his wife joining, make a valid contract to sell community property; and if at the time of making the supposed contract the would-be purchaser knows it to be in breach of fiduciary duty, it is absolutely void, and cannot be the foundation of any liability whatever." Holyoke v. Jackson, 3 Pac. Repr. (Wash.) 841.

Code Wash. T. § 2410, prohibits a husband from selling or incumbering the community property of himself and wife. Held, that the contract of the husband to lease such property, made without the wife joining in the contract, is an incumbrance, within the meaning of the section, and, it appearing that the lessee knew that the land was community property, that the lease is void. Hoover v. Chambers, 13 Pac. Repr. (Wash.) 547.

7. "The husband may convey and incumber all community real estate which is not the homestead or has not been designated as the homestead. Mabry v. Harrison, 44 Tex. 286.

A married man, to whom was issued, as such, a land certificate for a league and labor of land, in 1838, transferred it during the lifetime of the wife by the following assignment: "I, for myself, my heirs, legal representatives and assigns, sell, relinquish, and dispossess myself of all my right, title, and interest for the within claim to Wm. M. Shepherd, his heirs and assigns." In a suit against the claimants of the entire league and labor under that assignment, brought by those claiming the community interest of the wife, held, (1) the certificate being community property, the husband's right to dispose of it was absolute; (2) his conveyance of "all his right" was a conveyance of the entire certificate. Poe v. Brownrigg, 55 Tex. 133; Mabry v. Harrison, 44 Tex. 286.

8. Hemmingway v. Matthews, 10 Tex. 207.

9. Pixley v. Huggins, 15 Cal. 127.

10. Mott v. Smith, 16 Cal. 535.

11. Wells v. Cochrum, 13 Tex. 127.

12. Lord v. Hough, 43 Cal. 581; Colton rights, in view of divorce or of death,<sup>1</sup> though her remedy in such case seems confined to a bill quia timet.<sup>2</sup> So he may give or assign community property to his wife to be her separate property where no fraud on creditors exists;<sup>3</sup> and the property and his widow are bound by his estoppel.<sup>4</sup> The husband cannot affect the interest of the wife by will, or by any instrument to take effect after his death;<sup>5</sup> and after the death of the wife he cannot dispose of the community except to pay the debts thereof or to the extent of his own interest.<sup>6</sup> Divorce proceedings alone do not affect his rights, though his abandonment of his wife may give her important powers.<sup>7</sup> In case of divorce the property is di*v. Colton*, 34 La. Ann. 858. Compare Bister v. Menge, 21 La. Ann. 216.

1. De Godey v. De Godey, 39 Cal. 164; Peck v. Brummagim, 31 Cal. 447; Smith v. Smith, 12 Cal. 216; s. c., 73 Am. Dec. 533; Cotton v. Cotton, 34 La. Ann. 857; Belden v. Hanlon, 32 La. Ann. 85; Edwards v. James, 7 Tex. 38; Scott v. Maynard, Dail. 548.

2. Probably an action would be maintainable by the wife, while the coverture exists, of the character of a bill quia timet, to procure an injunction to restrain the husband from carrying out a threatened fraudulent transfer of such property which would result in loss to her, or to compel the fraudulent donee or grantee, with notice of the fraudulent intent, to give security to satisfy any claim which she may be found to have to it on the settlement of the affairs of the community, when the marriage tie has been dissolved. Greiner v. Greiner, 58 Cal. 118.

3. Peck v. Brummagim, 31 Cal. 440; Morrison v. Seiler, 22 La. Ann. 327.

4. Ranny v. Miller, 51 Tex. 263.

5. Greiner v. Greiner, 58 Cal. 115; Guttman v. Scannell, 7 Cal. 455; Buchanan's Estate, 8 Cal. 510; Smith v. Smith, 12 Cal. 228; s. c., 73 Am. Dec. 533; Scott v. Ward, 13 Cal. 469; Payne v. Payne, 18 Cal. 301; De Godey v. De Godey, 39 Cal. 164.

Where a husband disposes by will of an entire tract of land owned by himself and his wife jointly as community property, allotting to the wife a certain portion including the homestead, which she would not have been entitled to except under the will, and she subsequently conveys the portion so allotted her, held, conclusive evidence that she knew of the disposition made by the will, and elected to take under it. Rogers v. Trevathan, 3 S. W. Rep'r (Tex.), 569. See also Morrison v. Bowman, 29 Cal. 348.

While the husband cannot dispose, by will, of his wife's community interest, yet if he attempts to do so, and she should elect to take under the will, she would be thereby estopped from afterwards asserting her right to the community. . . . The husband made a deed, conveying community land, which was not delivered. Held, that the wife who, as executrix, after the husband's death, refused to deliver the deed (there being no fraudulent intent on her part), could not be made liable to parties claiming under the deed for the value of their interest in the land lost thereby. Moss v. Helsley, 60 Tex. 426.

6. In the case of Johnson v. Harrison, 48 Tex. 268, it was said: "If there be community debts, the survivor of the community may appropriate community property to their payment; and his power to wind up the community affairs is so far recognized, that sales fairly made by him for that purpose will not be set aside. His power to sell is dependent on the existence of some claim against the community, and whoever purchases from him must see to it that the facts exist which authorize the sale. See also Robinson v. McDonald, 11 Tex. 385; Veramendi v. Hutchins, 48 Tex. 531.

On the death of the wife her interest in the homestead descends and vests in her heirs, subject to administration and to the right of the husband to wind up the community affairs. This right of the husband must be limited chiefly to paying the community debts, and a purchaser from him does not acquire the interest of the children of the marriage when there were no debts of the community to be paid. A sale to support the children will not be sufficient to pass title to their interest in the homestead. Bell v. Schwarz, 56 Tex. 353. See also Bennett v. Fuller, 29 La. Ann. 663; Billgery v. Billgery, 34 La. Ann. 287.

7. Lord v. Hough, 43 Cal. 581. Compare Texas R. S. 1879, § 2867.

"When the husband deserts the wife, ceases to discharge his marital duties, and contributes nothing to her support

vided;<sup>1</sup> a mere cause for divorce does not forfeit the rights of either party,<sup>2</sup> and after divorce the husband has no powers over the wife's interest.<sup>3</sup>

5. Rights, Powers, and Liabilities of the Wife.—The wife's rights over the community are as well defined and ascertained as those of the husband; though once called "a mere expectancy," her interest is equal to that of her husband, and she may protect herself by all the remedial processes afforded to any one.<sup>4</sup> During coverture she cannot dispose of the community without his consent; her mortgage thereof even as to her interest is void in California, though if she survives her husband it may be enforced against her and to the support of the children, the power to manage, control, and dispose of the community property for purposes of support is transferred to the wife. In such a case the discretion exercised by the wife in selling the community property will not be reviewed, unless it has been used to perpetrate a fraud on the husband's rights." Zimpelman v. Robb, 53 Tex. 274.

The abandonment of a wife by her husband perfects all her rights in and to the community property as effectually as if he were dead. Cullers v. James, 1 S. W. Rep'r (Tex.), 314; Slater v. Neal, 64 Tex. 222; Carothers v. McNese, 43 Tex. 224; Forbes v. Moore, 32 Tex. 199; Fullerton v. Doyle, 18 Tex. 12; Exell v. Dodson, 60 Tex. 331.

"The sentence of a husband to the penitentiary, and his confinement there, is equivalent to an abandonment of the wife, and authorizes her to manage and dispose of the common property, at least so far as to secure a support for herself and children." Slator v. Neal, 64 Tex. 222.

1. De Godey v. De Godey, 39 Cal. 157; Mann v. Mann, 24 La. Ann. 437; Rice v. Rice, 21 Tex. 58.

2. E., the second wife of her deceased husband, while living in another State, and before his removal to Texas, was guilty of such outrages toward him as rendered their living together insupportable. By mutual consent, the husband separated from her without a decree of divorce, and after removing to Texas with the children of his first marriage, he married a third time to one who was ignorant of the fact that he had then a wife living. Afterwards, during coverture with his third wife, he acquired real estate in Texas, and died. In a suit between E., claiming a community interest in the land thus acquired in Texas, and a child of the first marriage, held, (1) the matrimonial relation, when once formed, continues until terminated by death or judicial decree; (2) that relation when once established, secures to the wife a community interest in all the property that may be thereafter acquired by either of the parties, except such as may be obtained by gift, devise, or descent; (3) the rights of the parties resulting from the marriage relation are fixed by statutory law, and have remained unaffected by civil-law rules applicable to putative marriages since 1840, when the common law and the marital-rights system of Texas were both adopted by act of the republic of Texas; (4) the separation of E. from her husband did not, under the circumstances above stated, work a forfeiture of her subsequently acquired community rights to land purchased by him in Texas; (5) the rights in the estate of the last wife, who married in ignorance of the former subsisting marriage, are not involved in this decision. Routh v. Routh, 57 Tex. 589.

3. De Godey v. De Godey, 39 Cal. 157; Bennett v. Fuller, 29 La. Ann. 663; Ben-den v. Hanlon, 32 La. Ann. 85.

4. De Godey v. De Godey, 39 Cal. 157; Van Maren v. Johnson, 15 Cal. 308; Blanc v. Le Blanc, 20 La. Ann. 206; Zimpelman v. Robb, 53 Tex. 274; Wright v. Hays, 10 Tex. 130; s. c., 60 Am. Dec. 200; Caruth v. Grigsby, 57 Tex. 259.

A wife, under the liberal provisions of the constitution and laws of Texas for the protection of her separate property, may, in her own name, maintain a suit by attachment levied on community property belonging to herself and her husband, to secure payment of a debt which is her separate property due from the husband. To secure such a debt she is entitled to all remedial process afforded by the law to any one. While this is true, such a claim, sought to be enforced by attachment, should be closely scrutinized, to guard against fraud and collusion between husband and wife to defeat other creditors. Ryan v. Ryan, 61 Tex. 473.

5. Hemmingway v. Matthews, 10 Tex.

On her husband's death her rights spring into activity, and she has all the power of a feme sole over her interest;<sup>1</sup> so, under the various statutes she may, for cause, have a separation of property, partition of the community, or may be awarded alimony out of it. She may have a divorce with a division of the property.<sup>2</sup> So if her husband abandons her and refuses to support her, her rights in the community quicken into vigorous activity; she may deal with it in his place, and she may even in her own name convey real estate standing in his name, so that subsequent bona fide purchasers from him will get nothing.<sup>3</sup>

Rights, Powers, and Liabilities of the Survivor.—The survivor has at least one half of the community property after all the community debts are paid,<sup>4</sup> the community property being a primary fund for

<sup>1</sup> Remington v. Higgins, 54 Cal. 620, 12 Cal. 3d 334; Civ. Code, 1881, § 167; Pany v. Pany, 52 Cal. 334.

<sup>2</sup> Under the first and succeeding statutes the powers of the wife under a community property marriage have been made to cease with her widowhood; but while single she has all the rights and powers of a feme sole, and she may deal with herself personally as well as the community property. On a second marriage she ceases to be a free agent and is shorn of these powers, and she cannot convey the community property more than she could have conveyed in the legal estate. This is the policy of the statutes." Davis v. McCartney, 15 Cal. 584. See also Cordrer v. Cage, 15 Cal. 532; Orr v. O'Brien, 55 Tex. 149; Wright v. Abercrombie, 61 Tex. 60; Wood v. Arnold, 1 S. W. Repr. 173; Womack v. Shelton, 31 Tex. 173; Beckman v. Thompson, 24 La. Ann. 151; Dickson v. Dickson, 37 La. Ann. 915; Carite v. Trotot, 105 U. S. 751; Ray v. Ray, 1 Idaho N. S. 566; Hendricks v. Hendricks, 33 La. Ann. 1051; Compton v. Compton, 33 La. Ann. 685; Belden v. Belden, 32 La. Ann. 85; Succession of Succession of, 28 La. Ann. 151; Heyman v. Heyman, 27 La. Ann. 195; Meyer v. Smith, 27 La. Ann. 153; Webb v. Bell, 24 La. Ann. 153; Spires v. McKelvy, 23 La. Ann. 153; Alford v. Thorn, 15 La. Ann. 83; Alford v. Bordelon, 14 La. Ann. 618; Alford v. Barbin, 13 La. Ann. 474; Alford v. Brady, 11 La. Ann. 696; Alford v. Yarborough, 11 La. Ann. 533; Alford v. Kennedy, 11 La. Ann. 32; Wolf v. Wolf, 10 La. Ann. 273; Penn v. Crock, 10 La. Ann. 343; Jones v. Morgan, 6 La. Ann. 632; Davock v. Darcy, 6 Rob. 12; Longino v. Blackstone, 4 La. Ann. 13; Handy v. Sterling, 1 La. Ann. 13; Louis University v. Proud, 21 La. Ann. 525; Caulk v. Picont, 21 La. Ann. 277; Cal. Civ. Code, 1881, §§ 146-148; Nev. C. L. 1873, § 162.

<sup>3</sup> "From an examination of the cases it will be seen that the rule is well settled that when the husband abandons the wife and fails to provide for the family, this authorizes the wife to manage, control, and dispose of the common property so as to secure a support for herself and children. And it seems from the cases of Wright v. Hays, and Fullerton v. Doyle, that where the facts exist which would authorize the wife to assume the management, control, and disposition of the common property, she has the same unlimited power in these particulars as would the husband if present and in control of the property." Slator v. Neal, 64 Tex. 222; Wright v. Hays, 10 Tex. 130; s. c., 60 Am. Dec. 200; Fullerton v. Doyle, 18 Tex. 12; Forbes v. Moore, 32 Tex. 199; Carothers v. McNese, 43 Tex. 224; Zimpleman v. Robb, 53 Tex. 274; Walker v. Strongfellow, 30 Tex. 570; Cheek v. Bellows, 17 Tex. 613. See RIGHTS, etc., OF HUSBAND, note 7, p. 359.

<sup>4</sup> Broad v. Murray, 44 Cal. 228; Broad v. Broad, 40 Cal. 493; Tompkins v. Tompkins, 12 Cal. 114; Beard v. Knox, 5 Cal. 252; Payne v. Payne, 18 Cal. 291; Scott v. Ward, 13 Cal. 458; Hart v. Robertson, 21 Cal. 346; Cummings v. Chevrer, 10 Cal. 519; Kellar v. Blanchard, 21 La. Ann. 38; Cockburn v. Wilson, 20 La. Ann. 39; Moore v. Moore, 20 La. Ann. 159; Fleming v. Fleming, 18 La. Ann. 726; Waring v. Zunts, 16 La. Ann. 49; Chapman v. Woodward, 16 La. Ann. 167; Holmes v. Barbin, 13 La. Ann. 553; Holmes v. Dobbs, 15 La. Ann. 501; Succession of Fitzwilliams, 3 La. Ann. 489; Succession of Bunge, 4 La. Ann. 389; Salvy v. Chexnandre, 14 La. Ann. 567; Massey v. Steeg, 13 La. Ann. 350; Succession of Viand, 11 La. Ann. 297; Grayson v. Sanford, 12 La. Ann. 646; Succession of Planchet, 29 La. Ann. 520; Bell v. Schwartz, 56 Tex. 353; Carter

the settlement of community debts.<sup>1</sup> The survivor may generally settle up the community with or without statutory authority, and with or without going into court.<sup>2</sup> The survivor or the heirs of

v. Conner, 60 Tex. 52; Barrett v. Nash, Dallam, 497; Ellington v. Ellington, 29 Tex. 2; Conner v. Davis, 33 Tex. 208; Robinson v. McDonald, 11 Tex. 385; Wall v. Clark, 19 Tex. 321; Griffin v. Ford, 60 Tex. 501; Johnson v. Harrison, 48 Tex. 257.

1. Christmas v. Smith, 10 Tex. 123; Sanger v. Moody, 60 Tex. 96; Richey v. Hare, 41 Tex. 336; Johnson v. Harrison, 48 Tex. 257; Tompkins Estate, 12 Cal. 114; Durham v. Williams, 32 La. Ann. 162.

2. In Sanger v. Moody, 60 Tex. 96, the language of the court was: "Under the repeated decisions of this court it must be held as conclusively settled, that the survivor of the marital relation, without administration upon the estate of the deceased member in any of the modes expressly provided by statute, has power as survivor to sell the community property for the purpose of paying debts which are a charge upon it, and by law such property is charged with the payment of debts contracted during the marriage. Pasch. Dig. 4646.

"It has been properly held that the act of 1856 did not withdraw such power from the survivor; but that the act was intended to enlarge the powers of the survivor. Wenar v. Stenzel, 48 Tex. 489; Dawson v. Holt, 44 Tex. 178; Lumpkin v. Murrell, 46 Tex. 58.

"The act itself seems to recognize in the survivor such a power, and that its exercise will not be disturbed upon failure to comply with the act, unless upon complaint by some one having an interest in the estate. Pasch. Dig. 4649, 4650.

"And it would seem that, when those interested in an estate interpose no objection to the management and control of a community estate by the survivor without qualification under the statute, that purchasers from such survivor, if there be community debts bearing a reasonable proportion to the value of the property sold by a survivor, ought not to be disturbed in their titles acquired in good faith; for, in the absence of such interposition, purchasers may well believe that those interested in the estate are content that the survivor shall exercise the powers which he possesses to sell property to raise means with which to discharge debts which are a charge upon such property, and for which the survivor is liable personally, without reference to whether there be community property or not, and without the satisfaction of which heirs, as against the survivor, have no right, either legal or equitable, to take and hold any part of the common property."

See also Johnson v. Harrison, 48 Tex. 266; Veramendi v. Hutchins, 48 Tex. 552; Manchaca v. Field, 62 Tex. 135; Ford v. Cowan, 64 Tex. 129; Walker v. Howard, 34 Tex. 478; Hawley v. Crescent City Bank, 26 La. Ann. 230; Williams v. Fuller, 27 La. Ann. 634; Magee v. Rice, 37 Tex. 483.

The surviving husband or wife, upon giving bond as such, and taking possession of the community estate, becomes a trustee thereof for the creditors and distributees, and is vested with ample powers and a very broad discretion. Leatherwood v. Arnold, 1 S. W. Repr. (Tex.) 173.

"One owning community property with the wife, on her death sold it, without qualifying under the statute so as to administer it. He sold for the purpose of paying community debts, and afterwards qualified under the statute as survivor, and conveyed by deed the same property to the purchaser from his vendee in the first sale. In a suit between the heirs of his deceased wife and the party claiming title under the last deed, held, (1) The fact that the surviving husband may have parted with his individual interest by the first deed could not impair his right, after qualifying as survivor, to administer the residue of the community interest, title to which passed by the second deed (2) A verbal partition between the heir of the deceased wife and the party claiming under the deed, made before the surviving husband qualified, conferred no right on the heir to any portion set apart to such heir by the partition. The parties had no power to withdraw any portion of the property from administration by the husband. (3) It was the right of the surviving husband to sell for the payment of community debts, even though the property brought more than enough for that purpose. The right of the heir of the deceased wife to the interest in the excess derived by inheritance from the mother is secured by the bond of the surviving husband." Watkins v. Hall, 57 Tex. 1. See also Bell v. Schwartz, 56 Tex. 353; Woodley v. Adams, 55 Tex. 526; Cordier v. Cage, the deceased can assign their respective interests, but not by metes and bounds, as dissolution of the marriage turns the community into tenancy in common.<sup>1</sup> Either spouse may by will dispose of such part of the community as would go to his or her representatives, but neither can by will affect the interests of the other.<sup>2</sup> In Louisiana the surviving wife may enjoy the use of the community during widowhood,<sup>3</sup> and the survivor has a usufruct of so much of the community as may be inherited by his or her issue proceeding from the marriage.<sup>4</sup>

7. Rights of the Heirs.—Upon the death of either spouse the heirs of the deceased take one half of the community property subject to the payment of community debts, the survivor's homestead rights, and the survivor's right of administration.<sup>5</sup> They 44 Tex. 533; Orr v. O'Brien, 55 Tex. 149; Jordan v. Imthum, 51 Tex. 276; Long v. Walker, 47 Tex. 173; Green v. Griscom, 53 Tex. 432; Carter v. Conner, 60 Tex. 52; Primm v. Barton, 18 Tex. 206. Packard v. Arellanes, 17 Cal. 525; Cook v. Norman, 50 Cal. 633.

The statute (Pasch. Dig. 4648) which gave to the surviving husband power to sell the community estate after the filing of an inventory, on the death of the wife, must be strictly construed; and such filing could not give validity to a sale made after the death of the wife and before compliance by the husband with the terms of the statute. Griffin v. Ford, 60 Tex. 501. See also Kirkland v. Little, 41 Tex. 456.

On the granting of letters of administration to a third party, the wife's control over the community estate ceases, and the estate passes under the jurisdiction of the county court for administration and settlement; along with it also passes the liability for all debts that are a charge on such estate. Hollingsworth v. Davis, 62 Tex. 438.

By the marriage of the surviving widow she loses control of the community property, and execution upon the property in her hands, subject to administration, cannot be issued on a judgment against her in a suit brought before but rendered after the second marriage. Pucket v. Johnson, 48 Tex. 550.

In Louisiana the surviving wife has thirty days within which she must renounce or accept the succession of her husband. After this delay she still has the right to renounce, and the right continues until she is compelled by an action to make choice. Titche v. Lee, 22 La. Ann. 436. See also Monget v. Pate, 3 La. Ann. 269; Andrich v. Lamothe, 12 La. Ann. 76; Kelley v. Robertson, 10 La. Ann. 306.

The wife cannot renounce the succession if she takes an active concern in the effects of the community. Collins v. Babin, 16 La. An. 290; Ludeling v. Felton, 29 La. An. 719.

The interest of the widow in the community property after the husband's death is a vested one, but she cannot by her acceptance of the community take the administration out of the hands of the husband's executor or administrator any more than the heir could by a like acceptance. Succession of McLean, 12 La. An. 222.

1. Caruth v. Grisby, 57 Tex. 259; Good v. Combs, 28 Tex. 34; Broad v. Murray, 44 Cal. 228; Hickman v. Thompson, 24 La. Ann. 264; Dickson v. Dickson, 36 La. Ann. 453.

2. A married woman may dispose of her property by will, subject to the liability of her community property for the payment of community debts. Brown v. Prigden, 56 Tex. 124. See also Walker v. Howard, 34 Tex. 478; Greiner v. Greiner, 58 Cal. 115; Beard v. Knox, 5 Cal. 252; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 125; Buchanan's Estate, 8 Cal. 507; De Godey v. De Godey, 39 Cal. 157.

3. Boyle v. Sibley, 22 La. Ann. 446; Succession of Davis, 22 La. Ann. 497.

4. Forstall v. Forstall, 28 La. Ann. 197; Succession of Planchet, 29 La. Ann. 520.

5. The heirs of the wife become vested with a title to her share of the community property at the moment of her death; and though they receive it subject to the payment of the community debt, they are bound to await a liquidation of the community before resorting to an action to recover it. Tugwell v. Tugwell, 32 La. Ann. 848; Glasscock v. Clark, 33 La. Ann. 584, reaffirmed. Nor, in such action, petitory in its character, is the indebtedness of the community, or its financial condition when dissolved, a legitimate may apply to the court to restrain the survivor from wasting or improperly disposing of the property.<sup>1</sup> In Louisiana the heirs may accept or renounce the succession.<sup>2</sup> The heirs also have a claim for any separate property of the deceased which has been taken into the community or by the survivor.<sup>3</sup>

8. Rights of Creditors.—The community property is liable for the wife's ante-nuptial debts, but not on any contract of hers made during coverture, except for necessities.<sup>4</sup> It is likewise liable for all ante-nuptial and post-nuptial debts of the husband; as he can dispose of it absolutely, he can absolutely charge it with his debts.<sup>5</sup> subject of inquiry. Murphy v. Jury, 2 Southern Repr (La.) 575. See also Broad v. Murray, 44 Cal. 228.

The children of a deceased mother are tenants in common of the legal title with their father to the community property, with power in the father to convey or mortgage the whole estate so far as is necessary to provide for the debts of the community. Johnston v. San Francisco Savings Union, 63 Cal. 556; McAlister v. Farley, 39 Tex. 552.

As has been often said, heirs take community property charged with the debts against it; and if it be sold by the survivor for the purpose of paying community debts, or for the purpose of reimbursing the survivor for separate means used in discharge of such debts, then the purchaser will be protected in his purchase. Wilson v. Helms, 59 Tex. 680; Burleson v. Burleson, 28 Tex. 383; Johnson v. Harrison, 48 Tex. 257; Wenar v. Stenzel, 48 Tex. 484; Jones v. Jones, 15 Tex. 143. See also Morrison v. Covington, 2 La. Ann. 259; Sadler v. Kimbrough, 24 La. Ann. 534; Succession of Kerley, 18 La. Ann. 583.

On the death of the wife her interest in the homestead descends and vests in her heirs, subject to administration and to the right of the husband to wind up the community affairs. This right of the husband must be limited chiefly to paying the community debts, and a purchaser from him does not acquire the interest of the children of the marriage when there were no debts of the community to be paid. A sale to support the children will not be sufficient to pass title to their interest in the homestead. Bell v. Schwartz, 56 Tex. 353. See also Belcher v. Fox, 60 Tex. 527; Bell v. Schwartz, 37 Tex. 572; Jones v. Jones, 15 Tex. 143; Walker v. Young, 37 Tex. 519; Carter v. Conner, 60 Tex. 52; Ord v. De La Guerra, 18 Cal. 67; Smith v. Dorsey, 5 La. Ann. 381; Guillotte v. Lafayette, 5 La. Ann. 382.

In Louisiana a child cannot, since the passage of the laws of 1844, sue for her deceased father's community interest while her mother remains a widow. Day v. Collins, 5 La. Ann. 588.

Where a wife dies seized of community estate, and leaving children, her interest in such community estate descends to and vests wholly in her surviving children, to the exclusion of surviving grandchildren whose parents died before the ancestress did. Cartwright v. Moore, 1 S. W. Repr. (Tex.) 263.

1. After the surviving husband has regularly filed his inventory, if it appear that he is about to waste the property, the heirs may apply to the court and have their rights protected. Pasch. Dig. 4650. Griffin v. Ford, 60 Tex. 501. See also Hawley v. Crescent City Bank, 26 La. Ann. 230.

2. Stratton v. Rogers, 11 La. Ann. 380; Succession of Planche, 8 La. Ann. 575.

3. Smith v. Creditors, 21 La. Ann. 241.

4. The community property is liable for the sole debt of the wife contracted before marriage. Vlantin v. Bumpus, 35 Cal. 214; Van Maren v. Johnson, 15 Cal. 308. See also Remington v. Higgins, 54 Cal. 620; Taylor v. Murphy, 50 Tex. 291; Nash v. George, 6 Tex. 234; Portis v. Parker, 22 Tex. 699; Christmas v. Smith, 10 Tex. 123; Edrington v. Mayfield, 5 Tex. 363. Interest paid on a stock loan which was a personal debt of the wife was charged to the community. Barbet v. Roth, 16 La. Ann. 271.

5. The community is liable for debts of the husband contracted before marriage. Davis v. Compton, 13 La. Ann. 396; Portis v. Parker, 22 Tex. 699. See also Forbes v. Dunham, 24 Tex. 611; Jones v. Jones, 15 Tex. 143; Hawley v. Crescent City Bank, 26 La. Ann. 230; McDonald v. Badger, 23 Cal. 393; Adams v. Knowlton, 22 Cal. 283; Tompkins v. Tompkins, 12 Cal. 114; Lott v. Keach, 5 Tex. 394; Edrington v. Mayfield, 5 Tex. 363.

An attaching creditor of the community estate, or one who, through operation

COMMUNITY PROPERTY—COMMUTATION—COMPACT.

As an entirety, it is not liable for any debt contracted after the dissolution of the marriage.<sup>1</sup> All the debts for which it is liable must be settled before the survivor or the heirs of the deceased have personally any interest.<sup>2</sup> In Louisiana, if the widow accept the community, she or her estate is liable for one half of the debts, but if she renounce the same, neither she nor her estate can be held liable at all.<sup>3</sup> A judgment against both husband and wife can be enforced against the community property or against the separate property of either one; but if a mortgage has been given for the husband's debts which covers both community property and separate property of the wife, she may have the community property exhausted first.<sup>4</sup> Judgment creditors cannot have a part of the community property set aside by metes and bounds to satisfy their debts.<sup>5</sup> In a foreclosure suit against the community the wife should be made a party.<sup>6</sup>

COMMUTATION.—The change of a punishment to which a person has been condemned into a less severe one. This can be granted only by the authority in which the pardoning power resides.<sup>7</sup> of law, has acquired an apparent lien upon land which has been purchased in whole or in part with the separate means of the wife, does not occupy such position as will preclude the wife from proving her separate interest, and thereby having it protected. Such protection is accorded under like circumstances to a third party, and there is nothing in the marital relation that should prevent it from being extended to the wife. Parker v. Coop, 60 Tex. 111.

COMPACT.—An agreement; a contract; generally applied as between States or governments.<sup>8</sup>

1. Thezan v. Thezan, 28 La. Ann. 442.

2. Jones v. Jones, 15 Tex. 143; Tompkins v. Tompkins, 12 Cal. 114; Good v. Combs, 28 Tex. 34; Baird v. Lemee, 23 La. Ann. 424; Sadler v. Kimbrough, 24 La. Ann. 534; Hawley v. Crescent City Bank, 26 La. Ann. 230; Durham v. Williams, 32 La. Ann. 162; Dickson v. Dickson, 33 La. Ann. 1370.

3. Ludeling v. Felton, 29 La. Ann. 719; Reihl v. Martin, 29 La. Ann. 15. Compare Cocco's Succession, 32 La. Ann. 325.

4. Where a judgment is recovered against husband and wife jointly without any specific directions in the decree as to the estate out of which it is to be satisfied, it would seem that, as a general rule, it may be levied upon and be satisfied out of the property of either the husband or wife, or of the community. Howard v. North, 5 Tex. 290; s. c., 51 Am. Dec. 769. See also Abut v. Atkinson, 21 La. Ann. 239.

If by the terms of a trust deed the separate property of a wife be liable, all community property which is subject to the same lien must be exhausted before the separate property of the wife can be taken. James v. Jacques, 26 Tex. 321.

5. Good v. Combs, 28 Tex. 34.

6. Burton v. Lies, 21 Cal. 87.

7. Bouvier's Law Dict.

Commutation of Imprisonment allows a prisoner to acquire, by good behavior, a right to take a shorter term of imprisonment than that imposed by his original sentence. Abbott's Law Dict.

"A commutation," says Beatty, J., in Ex parte Janes, 1 Nevada, 321, "is the change of one punishment known to the law for another and different punishment also known to the law." It is not a conditional pardon, but the substitution of a lower for a higher grade of punishment, and is presumed to be for the culprit's benefit. In the Matter of Sarah M. Victor, 31 Ohio St. 206. See also Lee v. Murphy, 22 Gratt. (W. Va.) 789.

Commutation of Fares consists in selling a ticket for a term at a less price than the aggregate of daily fares for the term. Abbott's Law Dict.

8. Compact and contract are convertible terms. Canal Co. v. Railroad Co., 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 129.

As used in the prohibition upon the States to "enter into any agreement or compact with another State or with a COMPANY.—An association of a number of individuals for the purpose of carrying on some business or undertaking. The term is not synonymous with partnership, though an unincorporated company is generally a partnership; but is usually applied to those associations whose members are more numerous, their capital larger, and their enterprises greater. When these companies are authorized by the government they are called incorporated companies or corporations.<sup>1</sup> foreign power," in Const. U. S., I. X. 2, something more is meant by "compact" than by the word "treaty" in the preceding clause. The prohibition is designed to be more comprehensive, and forbid every agreement, written or verbal, formal or informal, positive or implied, by the mutual understanding of the parties. Holmes v. Jennison, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 572.

1. Bouv. Law Dict.

"The proper signification of the word 'company,' when applied to persons engaged in trade, denotes those united for the same purpose or in a joint concern. It is so commonly used in this sense, or as indicating a partnership, that few persons accustomed to purchase goods at shops where they are sold by retail would misapprehend that such was its meaning." Palmer v. Pinkham, 33 Me. 52.

An unincorporated company is "an association of individuals not forming a corporation, but carrying on business under a corporate name, and having certain qualities resembling those of incorporated companies." Rap. & Lawr. Law Dict.

A club is not a company within winding-up acts. In re St. James's Club, 16 Jur. 1075.

Incorporated Company in an embezzlement act was held to mean one composed of individuals associated together for private purposes. Coats v. People, 22 N. Y. 245.

Joint-stock Company and "corporation organized under general laws" are convertible terms in Massachusetts legislation. Atty.-Gen. v. Merc. Ins. Co., 121 Mass. 524.

Manufacturing Company—One which makes goods and wares from raw materials. A company which makes castings and machinery from melted pig and old iron is not an "iron-manufacturing company." The iron is manufactured before the castings are made. People v. Holdridge, 4 Lans. (N. Y.) 511.

An aqueduct company whose business it is to distribute water is not a manufacturing company. Dudley v. Aqueduct Corp., 100 Mass. 185.

Persons Composing the Company, in an act making such liable to the extent of their respective shares of stock for the debts of the company, are all persons who own stock. Rosevelt v. Brown, N. Y. 148.

Said Company.—A bond of indemnity given to the trustees of an incorporation insurance company, conditioned for the good conduct of a clerk while in the service of the said company, remains in force as long as the clerk serves the company, although there are changes among the individuals composing the company. It is otherwise in an ordinary partnership. Metcalf v. Bruin, 2 Camp. 422.

In an act incorporating a dock company the phrase "the dock or wharf owned by the said company" must be construed to mean by the individuals composing the said company. Steamship Co. v. Transportation Co., 3 C. E. (N. J.) 13. 511.

Ship's Company or crew does not include a mere passenger. U. S. v. Little, 1 W. & M. (C. C.) 221.

The Company—Where a person delivered a message to a telegraph company to be sent to a point beyond its terminus and the company sent the message to its terminus, where it was delivered by transmission to another company, upon the blank upon which the message was written there was a stipulation that "this company" would not be responsible for error or delay of any other company, and limiting the liability of "this company," held, in a suit against a second company, that "the company" meant the first company, and the limitation did not extend to the second. Squibb v. W. U. Tel. Co., 98 Mass. 232.

Trading or Other Public Company does not include a private partnership. Griffith, 12 Ch. Div. 655.

Transportation Company.—A company engaged in the removal of petroleum from place to place by means of pipes is a transportation company within a tax law. Columbia Conduit Co. v. Com., 90 Pa. 307.

Turnpike Company in a tax law includes a plank-road company. State v. Hain the state of being a companion ; fellowship ; society.<sup>1</sup>

COMPARATIVE NEGLIGENCE. (See also CARRIERS OF PASSENGERS; CONTRIBUTORY NEGLIGENCE; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS; NEGLIGENCE; RAILROAD COMPANIES.)

Definition of Comparative Negligence.
367.

Degrees of Negligence—Manner of Comparison. 368.

When Negligent Plaintiff Can Recover. 369.

When Negligent Plaintiff Cannot Recover. 370.

Plaintiff Must Have Exercised Ordinary Care. 371.

Preponderance of Negligence Insufficient. 372.

Fatal Injuries—Gross Negligence not Wilfulness. 372.

Immediate Cause—Its Relation to Comparative Negligence. 372.

When Not Applicable to Children. 373.

General Rules and Applications. 373.

Evidence of Custom to Determine Degrees. 373.

Not Error to Fail to Instruct as to Doctrine. 374.

Comparison of Negligence—Matter for the Jury. 374.

But Verdict May be Reviewed in Illinois Appellate Court. 374.

And if No Evidence to Support, Set Aside in Illinois Supreme Court. 374.

How the Doctrine Originated. 374.

Where it Prevails. 375. [375.

To Full Extent Only in Illinois, In a Modified Form in Georgia, But Not in Kentucky. 375. [375.

The Tennessee Rule. 375. [375.

Repudiated—Oregon and Kansas.

Definition.—Comparative negligence is that doctrine in the law of negligence by which the negligence of the parties is compared in the degrees of "slight," "ordinary," and "gross" negligence, and a recovery permitted, notwithstanding the contributory negligence of the plaintiff, when the negligence of the plaintiff is slight and the negligence of the defendant gross, but refused when the plaintiff has been guilty of a want of ordinary care contributing to his injury, or when the negligence of the defendant is not gross, but only ordinary or slight when compared under the circumstances of the case, with the contributory negligence of the plaintiff.<sup>2</sup>

J. L. 443; Haight v. State, 32 N. J.

Where in a deed granting an annuity there was a provision that it should be annulled if the annuitant "should associate, or be obliged to keep company with, or co-operate or criminally correspond with J. L. 443; Dormer v. Knight, 1 Taunt.

Rockford, etc., R. Co. v. Delaney, 198; s. c., 25 Am. Rep. 308; Winters v. Case, 5 Bradw. (Ill.) 486; C., B. & Q. R. Co. v. Johnson, 103 Ill. 512; 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 25; C., B. & Q. R. Co. v. Harwood, 90 Ill. 427; 10 Ill. 88; Wabash, etc., R. Co. v. State, 110 Ill. 114; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 359; Chicago & Alton R. Co. v. Johnson, 116 Ill. 206; City of Chicago v. Stearns, 105 Ill. 557; s. c., 2 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 594; Chicago, etc.,

R. Co. v. Goebel, 7 West. Rep. (Ill.) 689, 692; Chicago & Alton R. Co. v. Dillon, 17 Bradw. (Ill.) 355; C., B. & Q. R. Co. v. Rogers, 17 Bradw. (Ill.) 638; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Thorson, 11 Bradw. (Ill.) 631, 634; Garfield Mfg. Co. v. McLean, 18 Bradw. (Ill.) 447, 449; Gardner v. C. R. & P. R. Co., 17 Bradw. (Ill.) 262, 265; Calumet Iron & Steel Co. v. Martin, 115 Ill. 358; Galena, etc., R. Co. v. Jacobs, 20 Ill. 478; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Dimick, 96 Ill. 42; Moody v. Peterson, 11 Bradw. (Ill.) 185.

These cases when classified support all parts of the statement of the rule in the text, and in the two late cases, supra, of C., B. & Q. R. Co. v. Johnson, 103 Ill. 512; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 25, and Calumet Iron & Steel Co. v. Martin, 115 Ill. 358. The cases in Illinois now deemed authoritative on this subject are collected, and many of them discussed. See also Beach on Contribu-

2. Degrees of Negligence.—The comparison of the negligence of plaintiff and defendant must be made by determining whether, under the circumstances, the negligence of each is slight, ordinary or gross in the technical and legal sense of these terms, and comparing the degree in which the one has been negligent with the degree of negligence on the part of the other.<sup>1</sup> In making this comparison the circumstances of the case must be considered, and the comparison made in the light of the circumstances.<sup>2</sup> But tory Neg., pp. 82 and 83, note 4, and 55 Am. Dec., note p. 671, for reference to other cases.

1. In the case of C., B. & Q. R. Co. v. Johnson, 103 Ill. 512; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 225, 232, the supreme court of Illinois clearly and unequivocally state this doctrine, and define the legal meaning of the terms slight, ordinary, and gross negligence, saying: "In holding the plaintiff may recover in an action for negligence, notwithstanding he has been guilty of contributive negligence, where his negligence is but slight, and that of the defendant gross in comparison with each other, it must, of course, be understood that the terms 'slight negligence' and 'gross negligence' are used in their legal sense, as defined by common-law judges and text writers, for otherwise the terms would convey no idea of a definite legal rule. As defined by those judges and writers, these terms express the extremes of negligence. Beyond gross, or less than slight, there is no degree of negligence. 'Gross gross,' 'grosser gross,' and 'grossest gross,' and 'slight slight,' 'slighter slight,' and 'slightest slight,' are absurd and, in a legal sense, impossible terms. What is less than slight negligence the law takes no cognizance of as a ground of action; and beyond gross negligence the law, while recognizing that there may be liability for a trespass because of a particular intention to do wrong, or of a degree of wilful and wanton recklessness which authorizes the presumption of a general intention to do wrong, recognizes no degree of negligence. The definition of gross negligence itself proves that it is not intended to be the subject of comparison. It is 'the want of slight diligence.' Slight negligence is 'the want of great diligence,' and intermediate there is ordinary negligence, which is defined to be 'the want of ordinary diligence.'" The court then cites Story on Bailments, § 17; Shearman & Redfield on Neg. (2d Ed.) §§ 16, 17; Cooley on Torts, 631; Central Military Tract R. Co. v. Rockafellow, 17 Ill. 541; and a little further on say: "The word 'diligence,' as used in the definitions of the degrees of negligence to which we have referred, is synonymous with 'care.' This is shown by the text in Story immediately following the definitions quoted. It is then said: 'For he who is only less diligent than very careful men cannot be said to be more than slightly inattentive; he who omits ordinary care is a little more negligent than men ordinarily are; and he who omits even slight diligence fails in the lowest degree of prudence, and is deemed grossly negligent.'" By many Illinois lawyers the doctrines of the Johnson case were looked upon as revolutionary, if not abandoning, the rule of comparative negligence as previously understood and declared by the supreme court. Gilbert, Railroads and the Courts, 127-138. And Mr. Justice Dickey, while concurring in the result arrived at in the Johnson case, dissented from the reasoning of the court, and insisted that the terms "slight," "ordinary," and "gross negligence" should have their popular meaning, and that they had been so used in the Jacobs case (20 Ill. 478), in which the rule of comparative negligence was first enunciated. 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 235; s. c., 103 Ill. 512. But notwithstanding the criticisms to which it has been subjected, the Johnson case has been several times approved and followed in subsequent cases, and the rules laid down therein seem in harmony with the better considered cases in Illinois. Rockford, R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Delaney, 8 Ill. 196; s. c., 25 Am. Rep. 308; City of Chicago v. Stearns, 105 Ill. 557; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 594; C. B. & Q. R. Co. v. Harwood, 90 Ill. 427; I. C. R. Co. v. Hammer, 72 Ill. 351; E. St. L. F. & P. Co. v. Hightower, 92 Ill. 141.

2. "The terms 'slight' and 'gross negligence,' when used in an instruction do not sufficiently institute the comparison required to be made. The decision in the Johnson case, 103 Ill. 512, was not intended to eliminate from the doctrine of comparative negligence the very element that makes it available to the plaintiff, where both parties have been

When both parties have been negligent as to a particular act or omission, the relative degrees of their negligence cannot be changed by comparison.<sup>1</sup>

When Plaintiff Can Recover.—When, upon such a comparison of the negligence of the plaintiff and the defendant it appears that the contributory negligence of the plaintiff is "slight" and the negligence of the defendant "gross," as above defined,—that is, where a degree of negligence intervenes between the contributory negligence of the plaintiff and the "gross" negligence of the defendant,—the plaintiff is entitled to recover.<sup>2</sup> This doctrine was of negligence contributing to injury,—the relative degree of guilt of the respective parties,—as it has in subsequent cases been recognized, defined and upheld as still existing under the same limitations as before the Johnson case was decided." City of Chicago v. Earns, 105 Ill. 554; s. c., 2 Am. & Corp. Cas. 594.

An instruction which requires the jury to determine whether the negligence of the plaintiff was slight and that of the defendant gross, but does not require the jury to compare the negligence of the parties, or to determine from such comparison whether the one is slight and the other is gross, is erroneous. Chicago & Alton R. Co. v. Dillon, 17 Bradw. (Ill.) 355.

The jury must be told that to authorize recovery it must appear from the evidence that the negligence of the plaintiff is 'slight,' and that of the defendant is 'gross,' in comparison with each other." Harwood v. Q. R. Co., 80 Ill. 427. And there are many other cases enunciating the same rule, among which are: St. L. & T. Co. v. Manly, 58 Ill. 306; I. C. R. Co. v. Goddard, 72 Ill. 568; R. R. I. Co. v. Delaney, 82 Ill. 198; 55 Am. Rep. 308; C., B. & Q. R. Co. v. Van Patten, 64 Ill. 510; T., W. & A. Co. v. Spencer, 66 Ill. 528; I. C. R. Co. v. Hall, 72 Ill. 225; C. & N. W. Co. v. Dimick, 96 Ill. 42. Perhaps the clearest statement of this qualification is in the Johnson case (8 Am. & R. R. Cas. 233), where it is said: "Applying the measure of slight and gross negligence to the acts of the respective parties charged to have been negligent is of course always to be held in remembrance that the term 'negligence' is relative, 'and its application depends on the situation of the parties, the degree of care and vigilance required by the circumstances reasonably imposable." Cooley on Torts, 630. The rule is therefore, in the present instance, related to the measure of care, under the circumstances shown by the evidence to have existed, imposed upon the respective parties. It was to that measure of care that these instructions related, and if they had related to any other, they would, for that cause alone, have been erroneous."

1. "Surely it needs no demonstration that if, as to a particular act, the negligence of the plaintiff was ordinary, and that of the defendant gross, their relation is not changed by comparing them with each other. The same evidence that determines the one is gross and the other ordinary, fixes their relative degrees with reference to each other." C., B. & Q. R. Co. v. Johnson, 103 Ill. 512; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 234.

2. Assuming the terms "slight" and "gross" negligence to have been used in the Jacobs case, 20 Ill. 478, in their legal sense, that case, which was the first declaration of the law of comparative negligence, was also the first case to lay down the limitations governing the plaintiff's right of recovery where the law of comparative negligence prevails. In that case it was said: "We say, then, that in this, as in all like cases, the degrees of negligence must be measured and considered, and wherever it shall appear that the plaintiff's negligence is comparatively slight, and that of the defendant gross, he shall not be deprived of his action." 20 Ill. 496, 497. But whatever may have been the meaning of "slight" and "gross" negligence in the Jacobs case, a long line of recent Illinois cases, including the latest, fully support the text. "Even though the plaintiff is guilty of only slight negligence, he cannot recover unless defendant's negligence is gross, or the injury is wanton or wilful." Winchester v. Case, 5 Bradw. (Ill.) 486. And he cannot recover when his negligence is ordinary, and that of the defendant only gross, and not wilful. Illinois, etc., R. Co. v. Hetherington, 85 Ill. 510; Earlville v. Carter, 6 Bradw. (Ill.) 421.

intended to soften the rule of contributory negligence, which, the Illinois courts thought, denied the right of recovery when plaintiff's negligence contributed proximately to his injury in any degree, however slight;<sup>1</sup> and it does not prevent the plaintiff from recovering when his negligence, no matter what its degree, was not a proximate cause of his injury.<sup>2</sup> That is, where the negligence of the plaintiff does not proximately contribute to his injury the rule of comparative negligence has no application, and the ordinary rules of proximate and remote negligence are applied.<sup>3</sup>

4. When Plaintiff Cannot Recover.—In cases to which the doctrine of comparative negligence is applicable the plaintiff cannot recover

"The rule, as has often been announced, is that although the plaintiff may have been guilty of some negligence, still, if it is slight as compared with that of the defendant, which is gross, a recovery may be had." Chicago & N. W. R. v. Dimick, 96 Ill. 47; s. c., 2 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 201, 205; T. & W. R. Co. v. Grabbie, 88 Ill. 443.

"In a number of his (plaintiff's) instructions the jury are told that he may recover if his negligence was slight as compared with that of appellant. As we have seen, they should have required the jury to find, when compared, that appellee's was slight and appellant's gross. Both of these conditions must exist when the plaintiff is guilty of negligence before he can recover. His may have been slight as compared with that of appellant, and its not gross." I. C. R. Co. v. Hammer, 72 Ill. 351; E. St. L., P. & P. Co. v. Hightower, 92 Ill. 141; C., B. & Q. R. Co. v. Harwood, 90 Ill. 427; I. C. R. Co. v. Goddard, 72 Ill. 568; Rockford, etc., R. Co. v. Delaney, 82 Ill. 197; s. c., 25 Am. Rep. 308.

1. "It was formerly held that the plaintiff could not recover in any case where his own negligence had materially contributed in any degree to the injury. In the courts of this State the severity of that rule was relaxed many years ago." I. & St. L. R. Co. v. Evans, 88 Ill. 65; I. C. R. Co. v. Baches, 55 Ill. 389; St. L., A. & T. H. R. Co. v. Manly, 58 Ill. 306; C. & A. R. Co. v. Gretzner, 46 Ill. 83; C., B. & Q. R. Co. v. Lee, 68 Ill. 580; I. C. R. Co. v. Hammer, 72 Ill. 351; I. & St. L. R. Co. v. Stables, 62 Ill. 319; C., B. & Q. R. Co. v. Harwood, 90 Ill. 427.

2. Earlville v. Carter, 2 Bradw. (Ill.) 34; C., B. & Q. R. Co. v. Dougherty, 12 Bradw. (Ill.) 199; I. C. R. Co. v. Middleworth, 46 Ill. 497; Chicago & Alton R. Co. v. Becker, 76 Ill. 25; Tuff v. Warman, 5 C. B. N. S. 573; Greenland v. Chaplin, 5 Exch. 248; Trow v. Vt. Cent.

R. Co., 24 Vt. 487; Johnson v. Hudson River R. Co., 20 N. Y. 65; Murphy Deane, 101 Mass. 455; s. c., 3 Am. Rep. 390; Chicago & Alton R. Co. v. Pondrom, 51 Ill. 333; s. c., 2 Am. Rep. 305; 55 Am. Dec., note p. 668; Isbell v. Y. & N. H. R. Co., 27 Conn. 393; s. c., 71 Am. Dec. 28; Deering on Negligence § 17; Shearman & Redfield on Neg. (2d Ed.) § 25; Pierce on Railroads, 326, 327; 2 Thompson on Neg. 1151; Wharton on Neg. (2d Ed.) §§ 323-329.

3. This doctrine has not been in terms stated by the Illinois courts, but it follows as a necessary sequence of the cases of C., B. & Q. R. Co. v. Johnson, 111 Ill. 512; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 225; City of Chicago v. Stearns, 105 Ill. 554; s. c., 2 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 55; and Calumet Iron, etc., Co. v. Martin, 111 Ill. 358, unless it was intended by those cases, and especially the first cited, to make the rule of comparative negligence the sole and only test, and that a more stringent and harsh one than the ordinary rule of contributory negligence. But that such was not the intention of the court is apparent from the Stearns and Martin cases. Prior to the three cases referred to, the whole doctrine of comparative negligence was in an uncertain state, and in many cases "slight" and "remote" negligence were confused, and the rule of comparative negligence indiscriminately applied. Beach on Contributory Negligence, § 88. But the cases referred to so enunciate the law that there can be little doubt that in future cases the doctrine of comparative negligence will only be applied when the plaintiff's negligence has proximately contributed to his injury. Indeed, the converse of this proposition, namely, that when the plaintiff has been guilty of a want of ordinary care contributing to his injury the doctrine of comparative negligence has no application, has been many times stated, and is emphasized in both the Johnson and Martin cases.

negligence of the defendant was "slight" or "ordinary," and not "gross," although plaintiff's negligence contributing to the injury have been only slight when compared with the negligence of defendant under the circumstances of the case.<sup>1</sup>

Failure to Use Ordinary Care.—Nor can the plaintiff recover for injury, the result of mere negligence upon the part of the defendant, when his own failure to exercise ordinary care under the circumstances contributed to the injury.<sup>2</sup> When plaintiff fails to use

Winchester v. Case, 5 Bradw. (Ill.) 111; Boody v. Peterson, 11 Bradw. (Ill.) 111; C. R. Co. v. Hammer, 72 Ill. St. L. P. & P. Co. v. Hightower, 141; Rockford, etc., R. Co. v. ..., 82 Ill. 108; s.c., 25 Am. Rep. 308; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Goebel, West. Rep. 689, 692; Calumet Steel Co. v. Martin, 115 Ill. B. & Q. R. Co. v. Johnson, 103 s.c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. B. & Q. R. Co. v. Rogers, 17 (Ill.) 638; Gardner v. C., R. 1 & Co., 17 Bradw. (Ill.) 262, 265; ... etc., R. Co. v. Wallace, 110 s.c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. It is not needful to cite all the cases of this rule, as they are fully collected in the Martin case, supra.

This doctrine has been thought to overrule of comparative negligence, Johnson case, supra, has been held as precluding a plaintiff who exercised ordinary but not extraordinary care from recovering in cases where, under the doctrine of contributory negligence in its most absolute form, a recovery would have been had. Gilbert, Railroad Courts, 119, 120. But these courts have misapprehended the effect of the decision. In the Johnson case the following statement in plaintiff's instructions was held erroneous: "But if, from the evidence in this cause, it appears that the plaintiff's intestate, Johnson, was not exercising ordinary care, the plaintiff may recover, provided the jury believe that Johnson's negligence was slight and the negligence of the defendant gross in comparison with each other, then the verdict must be for the plaintiff." 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. The fallacy of this instruction, if once apparent, may be seen by the assumption that where a plaintiff failed to exercise ordinary care—he is guilty of ordinary negligence—his negligence may be slight when compared with that of the defendant. The negligence of both parties concurring in the same time and relating to the same omission must be judged by the same standard,—that, is the standard of care under the circumstances,—and it follows that the negligence of the plaintiff cannot be ordinary considered by itself and slight in comparison. "It cannot, then, legally be true that where the plaintiff fails to exercise ordinary care and the defendant is guilty of negligence only, the plaintiff's negligence is slight, and that of the defendant gross, in comparison with each other." C., B. & Q. Ry. Co. v. Johnson, 103 Ill. 512; s.c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 225, 233, 234. But it must be noted that the instruction held erroneous related only to the statement of the rule of comparative negligence. The supreme court in passing upon it expressly stated that "No question arises under these instructions with regard to the measure of care it would have been the duty of defendant to have observed if it had been within the power of the defendant to have avoided the consequences of the negligence of plaintiff's intestate." 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 231.

And this case and the doctrine stated in it are in perfect harmony with the rule that if the plaintiff exercised ordinary care, but was slightly negligent,—i.e., did not exercise extraordinary care,—he may recover if the defendant failed to exercise even slight care—i.e., was guilty of gross negligence. "Within the contemplation of that rule, where one has observed ordinary care with reference to the particular circumstances involved for his personal safety, he has, even if slightly negligent, observed all the care the law requires of him; and where, having observed this care, he is injured by the negligence of another, that other has been guilty of the degree of negligence for which the law charges responsibility. The injured person could do no more to entitle himself to redress, and no higher degree of culpability is essential to the liability of the person causing the injury; and so the two degrees of negligence, if the person exercising ordinary care has been at all negligent, when compared with each other, fall within the opposite extremes of negligence, legally considered." Calumet Iron & Steel Co. v. Martin, 115 Ill. 358.

ordinary care the rule of comparative negligence has no application.<sup>1</sup>

6. Preponderance of Negligence Insufficient.—It follows from these doctrines, and has been expressly held, that a mere preponderance of negligence upon the part of the defendant will not entitle the plaintiff to recover.<sup>2</sup>

7. Wilful Injury.—But even though the plaintiff may have been negligent in the highest degree he will not be precluded from recovering if the defendant wilfully injured him.<sup>3</sup> In such cases contributory negligence is not a defence.<sup>4</sup> And the terms "gross negligence" and "wilful negligence" should not be applied to wilful misconduct of the defendant, evincing that something more than mere negligence which implies a willingness or a purpose to injure.<sup>5</sup> Wilfulness and negligence are the opposites of each other. "Gross" negligence is not wilfulness.<sup>6</sup>

8. Proximate Cause.—When the rule of comparative negligence is applicable to a case plaintiff is not prevented from recovering because his "slight" negligence proximately contributed to his injury.<sup>7</sup> This is only true where a full degree of negligence inter-

1. "The exercise of ordinary care is an indispensable prerequisite to a right of recovery in any case upon the ground of mere negligence, and the doctrine of comparative negligence has no application except in cases where such care was exercised." Garfield Mfg. Co. v. McLean, 18 Bradw. (Ill.) 447, 449; Chicago & N. W. R. Co. v. Thorson, 11 Bradw. (Ill.) 631, 634, 635; C. B. & Q. R. Co. v. Rogers, 17 Bradw. (Ill.) 638; Abend v. T. H. & I. R. Co., 111 Ill. 203; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 616; Illinois, etc., R. Co. v. Hetherington, 83 Ill. 510.

2. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Dimick, 96 Ill. 42; I. C. R. Co. v. Goddard, 72 Ill. 568; Rockford, etc., R. Co. v. Delaney, 82 Ill. 198; s. c., 25 Am. Rep. 308; Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Evans, 88 Ill. 63; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Dunn, 61 Ill. 385; Illinois, etc., R. Co. v. Moffit, 67 Ill. 431; Joliet v. Seward, 86 Ill. 402; T. W. & W. R. Co. v. Grabble, 88 Ill. 443; C. & N. W. R. Co. v. Clark, 70 Ill. 278; I. C. R. Co. v. Hammer, 72 Ill. 351; Chicago R. Co. v. Mock, 72 Ill. 141. These cases, and others to the same effect, seem in harmony with the Jacobs case (20 Ill. 478), but modify, and in some instances overrule, intervening cases which seem to have recognized the doctrine that a mere preponderance of negligence upon the part of defendant would render him liable. Compare Peoria Bridge Association v. Loomis, 20 Ill. 251; s. c., 71 Am. Dec. 263; C. B. & Q. R. Co. v. Payne, 49 Ill. 503.

3. Illinois, etc., R. Co. v. Hetherington, 83 Ill. 510; Earlville v. Carter, 6 Bradw.

(Ill.) 421; Winchester v. Case, 5 Bradw. (Ill.) 486; St. L., A. & T. H. R. Co. v. Todd, 36 Ill. 414; C. B. & Q. R. Co. v. Johnson, 103 Ill. 512; Carter v. L., N. A. & C. R. Co., 98 Ind. 552; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 347, and 22 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 360; Ivens v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 103 Ind. 30; Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Galbraith, 63 Ill. 436.

4. Carter v. L., N. A. & C. R. Co., 98 Ind. 552, 554, 555; s. c., 8 and 22 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 347 and 360; Beach, Contributory Neg., § 17, p. 53 et seq.

5. "The words 'reckless' and 'wanton' do not mean 'wilful,' and express nothing more than mere negligence." T. H. & I. R. Co. v. Graham, 95 Ind. 286, 298.

"To say that an injury resulted from the negligent and wilful conduct of another, is to affirm that the same act is the result of two exactly opposite mental conditions. It is to affirm in one breath that an act was done through inattention, thoughtlessly, heedlessly, and at the same time purposely and by design." L., N. A. & C. R. v. Bryan, 107 Ind. 51, 54.

"To constitute wilful negligence the act done or omitted to be done must be intended. Peoria Bridge Assoc. v. Loomis, 20 Ill. 235; s. c., 71 Am. Dec. 263 265.

"The term 'wilful negligence,' if these words are to be interpreted with scientific accuracy, is a misnomer." Beach on Con. Neg., p. 67.

6. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. McGrath, 115 Ill. 172.

7. I. & St. L. R. Co. v. Evans, 88 Ill.

venes between the negligence of the plaintiff and that of the defendant.<sup>1</sup> And in all cases where the negligence of the parties is less than a full degree apart the ordinary rules of proximate cause and contributory negligence govern.<sup>2</sup>

9. When Not Applicable to Children.—The rule of comparative negligence is not applicable in the case of injuries to children so young as to be incapable of exercising ordinary care for personal security.<sup>3</sup> And where the child is manifestly so young as to be incapable of caring for its own safety, it will be held as a matter of law that it is not sui juris, and cannot be guilty of contributory negligence.<sup>4</sup> But where the child is old enough to be capable of exercising some degree of care, the question of negligence, whether comparative or contributory, is for the jury.<sup>5</sup> Ordinary care must be exercised by children who are of sufficient discretion to be deemed capable of negligence, but the care required is not that of an adult, but that of a careful child of similar age and capacity.<sup>6</sup>

10. Special Rules.—Evidence of a custom prevailing where plaintiff was employed is admissible to enable a jury to determine the degree of care exercised by the plaintiff in comparison with that of the defendant.<sup>7</sup> Where the rule of comparative negligence pre-

65; C., B. & Q. R. Co. v. Harwood, 90 Ill. 427; Galena, etc., R. Co. v. Jacobs, 20 Ill. 478.

1. Beach on Contributory Neg., pp. 77, 78; Rockford, etc., R. Co. v. Delaney, 82 Ill. 196; s. c., 25 Am. Rep. 308.

2. Aurora Branch R. Co. v. Grimes, 13 Ill. 585; Chicago & M. R. Co. v. Patchin, 16 Ill. 198; Dyer v. Talcott, 16 Ill. 300; Galena, etc., R. v. Yarwood, 17 Ill. 509; Galena, etc., R. v. Jacobs, 20 Ill. 478, 488, 491, 493, 496, 497; Galena, etc., R. Co. v. Fay, 16 Ill. 558; s. c., 63 Am. Dec. 323; C., B. & Q. R. Co. v. Dewey, 26 Ill. 255; s. c., 79 Am. Dec. 374; Garfield Mfg. Co. v. McLean, 18 Bradw. (Ill.) 447, 449; Abend v. T. H. & I. R. Co., 111 Ill. 203; s. c., 17 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 614; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 616; Myers v. Ind., etc., R. Co., 113 Ill. 386; s. c., 1 N. E. Rep. 899; Calumet Iron & Steel Co. v. Martin, 115 Ill. 358; C., B. & Q. R. v. Rogers, 17 Bradw. (Ill.) 638; C., B. & Q. R. Co. v. Johnson, 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 225; s. c., 103 Ill. 512. Compare Beach on Con. Neg. 85-87.

3. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Welsh (Ill.), 6 West. Rep. 540; s. c., 9 N. E. Rep. 197.

4. Mangam v. Brooklyn, etc., R. Co., 38 N. Y. 455; Ihl v. Railway Co., 47 N. Y. 317; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Gregory, 58 Ill. 226; Kay v. Pennsylvania R. Co., 65 Pa. St. 269; Pennsylvania Co. v. James, 81 Pa. St. 194; Walters v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 41 Iowa, 71; Norfolk, etc., R. Co. v. Ormsby, 27 Gratt. (Va.)

455; Hayes v. Michigan Cent. R. Co., 111 U. S. 228; s. c., 15 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 394.

5. Chicago & Alton R. Co. v. Becker, 76 Ill. 32; Rockford, etc., R. Co. v. Delaney, 82 Ill. 198; s. c., 25 Am. Rep. 310; Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Pitzer (Ind.) 109 Ind. 179; s. c., 25 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 313; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Vining's Adm'r, 27 Ind. 513; Railroad Co. v. Gladman, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 401; Railroad Co. v. Stout, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 657; St. Paul v. Kuby, 8 Minn. 154; Evansich v. Galveston, etc., R. Co., 57 Tex. 126; s. c., 44 Am. Rep. 586.

6. Railroad Co. v. Gladman, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 401; Railroad Co. v. Stout, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 657; Bransom's Adm'r v. Labrot, 81 Ky. 638; s. c., 50 Am. Rep. 193; I., P. & C. R. Co. v. Pitzer (Ind.), 109 Ind. 179; s. c., 25 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 313; Birge v. Gardner, 19 Conn. 507; s. c., 50 Am. Dec. 261; Kerr v. Furgoe, 54 Ill. 482; s. c., 5 Am. Rep. 146; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Murray, 71 Ill. 601; Hund v. Geier, 72 Ill. 393; Glover v. Gray, 9 Bradw. (Ill.) 329. And see note, 55 Am. Dec. 676; Dowling v. N. Y. Cent. R. Co., 90 N. Y. 670; s. c., 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 73; Barry v. N. Y. Cent. R. Co. 92 N. Y. 289; s. c., 13 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 615; O'Connor v. B. & L. R. Co., 135 Mass. 352; s. c., 15 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 362; Hynes v. San Francisco, etc., R. Co. (Cal.), 20 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 486.

7. Pennsylvania Co. v. Stoelke, 104 Ill. 201.

vails, it is not error for the court to fail to instruct as to that doctrine, where such instructions are not requested.<sup>1</sup> The question of comparative negligence is for the jury.<sup>2</sup> But in Illinois the intermediate appellate courts are authorized to review the facts as well as the law, while the supreme court reviews only questions of law. But where there is no evidence of "gross" negligence on plaintiff's part, or where the evidence establishes that plaintiff did not use "ordinary" care, the supreme court will deny a recovery as a matter of law.<sup>4</sup>

11. Comparative Negligence—How it Arose.—The doctrine of comparative negligence was first developed as a common-law doctrine by the courts of Illinois.<sup>5</sup> A somewhat similar rule had long prevailed in courts of admiralty.<sup>6</sup> And the distinctions between "slight," "ordinary," and "gross" negligence were familiar in the law of bailments.<sup>7</sup> But the scientific accuracy and practical

1. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. O'Connor, 9 N. E. Rep. (Ill.) 263, 266.

2. Ill. Cent. R. Co. v. Haskins (Ill.), 22 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 343, 345; Pennsylvania Co. v. Frana, 112 Ill. 398; Pennsylvania Co. v. Conlan, 101 Ill. 94; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 243; Chicago & Alton R. Co. v. Bonifield, 104 Ill. 224; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 493; Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Morgenstern, 106 Ill. 220; s. c., 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 228.

3. Ill. Cent. R. Co. v. Haskins (Ill.), 22 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 345; Chicago & Alton R. Co. v. Bonifield, 104 Ill. 224; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 495; Indianapolis, etc., R. Co. v. Morgenstern, 106 Ill. 220; s. c., 12 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 229; Calumet Iron & Steel Co. v. Martin, 115 Ill. 358; s. c., 3 N. E. Rep. 458.

4. C., R. I. & P. R. Co. v. Clark, 108 Ill. 114; s. c., 15 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 261; C., B. & Q. R. Co. v. Rogers, 17 Bradw. (Ill.) 638; C., B. & Q. R. Co. v. Johnson (Dickey, J.), 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 235; s. c., 103 Ill. 512; C. & N. W. R. Co. v. Seates, 90 Ill. 592; Pennsylvania Co. v. Rudel, 100 Ill. 603; Paleman v. Johnson, 84 Ill. 270; Simmons v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 110 Ill. 340.

5. Galena, etc., R. Co. v. Jacobs, 20 Ill. 478 was the first case in which the rule was formulated. Although the decision in that case seems to have arisen, so far as this doctrine is concerned, from a misconception of the law relating to contributory negligence, and the application of the maxim causa proxima et non remota spectatur,—Beach on Con. Neg. 79.—yet it has never since been departed from in Illinois, and has recently been clearly and accurately formulated and reaffirmed. C., B. & Q. R. Co. v. Johnson, 103 Ill. 512; s. c., 8 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 225; City of Chicago v. Stearns, 105 Ill. 554; s. c., 2 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 594; Calumet Iron & Steel Co. v. Martin, 115 Ill. 358; Abend v. T. H. I. R. Co., 111 Ill. 203; s. c., 53 Am. R. 616; s. c., 20 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 616; Hayward v. Miller, 94 Ill. 349; s. c., Am. Rep. 229.

But it may be doubted whether the and other recent cases, heretofore cited, have not placed the doctrine on such a basis that it becomes only another way of stating the common-law rule. Wharton on Neg. (2d Ed.) § 334 et seq.; Shearman & Redfield on Neg. (2d Ed.) §§ 25, 36, 37; Butterfield v. Forester, East, 60; s. c., 2 Thompson on Neg. 1104; Priest v. Nichols, 116 Mass. 4; Railroad Co. v. Jones, 95 U. S. 4; Kennard v. Burton, 25 Me. 39; s. c., Am. Dec. 249; Hughes v. Muscatine, Iowa, 672; Houston, etc., R. Co. v. G. bett, 49 Tex. 573; Kerwhacker v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 3 Ohio St. 172; Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Fitzpatrick, 35 Md. 32; Strong v. Sacramento, etc., R. Co., 61 Cal. 326; Griffin v. Willow, 43 W. 509; Creamer v. Portland, 36 Wis. 4; Otis v. Janesville, 47 Wis. 422; Hammond v. Mukna, 40 Wis. 35; Bridge Grand Junction R. Co., 3 Mee. & W. 244; Davies v. Mann, 10 Mee. & W. 5; s. c., 2 Thompson on Neg. 1105.

6. The Nautilus, 1 Ware, 529; T. David Dows, 16 Fed. Rep. 154; T. Sapphire, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 51; The Pennsylvania, 12 Fed. Rep. 914; The Atlas Ben. C. C. 27; s. c., 93 U. S. 302; 22 Cent. Law Journal, 166; The Explorer, 20 Fed. Rep. 135; The Wanderer, 20 Fed. Rep. 140; McCord v. The Tiber, 6 Biss. (S. C. C.) 409.

7. Coggs v. Bernard, 2 Lord Raymon peculiar modification of the doctrine of contributory negligence exists, but it is not comparative negligence.<sup>1</sup> The courts of most States deny the doctrine of comparative negligence;<sup>2</sup> and the supreme court of the United States adheres to the rule of contributory negligence.<sup>3</sup>

COMPARISON OF HANDWRITING is a comparison by the juxtaposition of two writings, in order, by such comparison, to ascertain whether both were written by the same person.<sup>4</sup>

R. Co. v. Fitzsimmons, 18 Kan. 34; s. c., 22 Kan. 686; s. c., 31 Am. Rep. 203; Central, etc., R. Co. v. Henigh, 23 Kan. 347; Mason v. R. Co., 27 Kan. 83; s. c., 41 Am. Rep. 405; s. c., 6 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 1; Begnette v. People's Transp. Co., 2 Or. 200; Halstin v. Oregon, etc., R. Co., 9 Or. 163.

Late cases say the doctrine of comparative negligence is not in force in either State, thus: "Besides, I do not concede that a party can recover in such a case when chargeable with any degree of negligence upon his part. If it directly contributes to the injury. A person may be negligent in any affair and still recover on account of the negligence of another party, but not when his negligence is the proximate cause of the injury. The law does not enforce contribution between joint tort feors. However slight the negligence upon the part of a plaintiff may be, if it be such that but for that negligence the misfortune could not have happened, he cannot recover; but if the injury would have happened if his want of care had not contributed thereto, there may be a liability." Hurst v. Burnside, 8 Pac. Rep. (Or.) 888, 891; Cassida v. Oregon, etc., R. & Nav. Co. (Ore.), 13 Pac. Rep. 438, 441.

"This court has not adopted what is generally called the rule of comparative negligence." Kansas Pac. R. Co. v. Peavy, 29 Kan. 169; s. c., 11 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 260, 268; Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Morgan, 31 Kan. 77; s. c., 13 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 499, 501.

1. Beach on Contributory Neg. 97; Whirley v. Whiteman, 1 Head (Tenn.), 610; Nashville, etc., R. Co. v. Carroll, 6 Heisk. (Tenn.) 347, 367. The rule in Tennessee is, that negligence on the part of the plaintiff contributing to his injury as a proximate cause thereof will bar a recovery, but that although guilty of some negligence, yet if he could not by the exercise of ordinary care have avoided the consequences of defendant's negligence, he may recover, but his negligence will be taken into consideration in mitigation of damages.

and this rule does not permit a recovery in any case where the parties are equally blamable. East Tenn., etc., R. Co. v. Fain, 12 Lea (Tenn.), 35; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 102, 105; L. & N. E. Co. v. Fleming, 14 Lea (Tenn.), 128; s. c., 18 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 347; East Tenn., etc., R. Co. v. Humphrey, Adm'r, 12 Lea (Tenn.), 200; s. c., 19 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 472; Jackson v. Nashville, etc., R. Co., 13 Lea (Tenn.) 491; s. c., 49 Am. Rep. 663; East Tenn., etc., R. Co. v. Stewart, 13 Lea (Tenn.) 431; s. c., 21 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 614, 617. And the Tennessee statutory provision regarding the lookout required to be kept on railroad trains should not be overlooked in this connection. Code of Tenn., § 4643; 15 Am. & Eng. R. R. Cas. 477, note; Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Burke, 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 45; Smith v. Nashville, etc., R. Co., 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 58; s. c., 6 Heisk. (Tenn.) 174; Railroad Co. v. Walker, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 383; Hill v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 823. These and all similar cases must be considered in the light of the statute.

2. O'Keefe v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 32 Iowa, 467; Lake Shore, etc., R. Co. v. Miller, 25 Mich. 274, 278; T. H. & I. Co. v. Graham, 95 Ind. 286, 293, 294; L. N. A. & C. R. Co. v. Falvey, 104 Ind. 409, 434; L. S. N. R. Co. v. Norton, 1 Pa. St. 465; s. c., 64 Am. Dec. 67; Potter v. Warner, 91 Pa. St. 367; Wilcox v. Hudson River R. Co., 24 N. Y. 43; Pennsylvania Co. v. Richter, 42 N. J. 180; Gothard v. Alabama, etc., R. Co., 67 Ala. 114; Potter v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 21 Wis. 377; s. c., 22 Wis. 61; Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Gorbett, Texas, 573; Marble v. Ross, 124 Mass. 44; Digby v. Kenton Iron Works, Bush (Ky.), 166.

3. Railroad Co. v. Stout, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 660; Railroad Co. v. Lockwood, Wall. (U. S.) 357.

4. Stark. Ev., part iv. p. 654.

Duncan, J., said, in Com. v. Smith, Serg. & R. (Pa.) 568 (1819): "Comparison of handwriting is where other witnesses prove a paper to be the hand-

COMPELLED.—Forced; constrained; obliged; necessitated irregularly.<sup>1</sup> of a party, and the witness is deto take the two papers in his hand, re them, and say whether they are not the same handwriting. The s collects all his knowledge from rison only; he knows nothing self; he has not seen the party nor held any correspondence with istinguished from Quasi Comparisons.

Edward, J., said, in Travis v. Brown
St. 12): "Now this is as distinct parate a thing from that comparihich a witness called to testify to riting makes between the writing tion and the exemplar in his mind, external, visible, and tangible ob-distinct from a mental impres-memory. It is the distinction n what is objective and what is ive."

and.—The English law was against g proof by comparison as a gene, though it was otherwise in the istical courts. See Bouvier's Dic-
"Comparison of Handwriting," thorities there cited. Exception however, where other writings ed to be genuine were already in the Another "exception" likewise ex-here the writings sought to be were so old that living wit-could not be procured, but were d enough to prove themselves.
to Clark & Fin., Fitzwater Peer- se, it was said that this com-could not be made by persons ompared the other ancient docu-or the mere purpose of testifying, tain other cases, holding or ing the contrary, were disapproved, however, at the present day. in ses, 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, s. 27; in d cases, 28 & 29 Vict. c. 18, s. 8.
e handwriting in dispute may be ed with any writing, proved to the tion of the judge to be genuine, by tresses, and their evidence sub-to the jury on the question of the riting in dispute.

ies.—In this country there is no nity. Many States follow the old law, and prohibit comparison ritings not relevant to the issue; permit it. Some which did prohibi-allow it under legislation.

ness.—Recourse may be had as rt testimony to Lawson on Expert inion Evidence. As to other mate 1 Greenl. Ev., § 576 et seq.; 2 on Ev., ch. vii.

Printed Matter.—In an early Pennsylvania case—McCorkle v. Burns, 5 Binney, 340—the jury were allowed to infer from a comparison of the types and devices of two newspapers that they were printed by the same person. McCorkle v. Burns,
6 Am. Dec. 420.

1. Web. Dict.

In Statute.—"It is a maxim of the law, that what one may be compelled to do by suit, he may do without suit. No good purpose would have been subserved by withholding payment until suit and judgment; but payment without suit saved useless litigation and unnecessary costs. We are of opinion that where the officer is liable to the judgment creditor, and the latter claims payment of him, which is accordingly made, the payment is compulsory within the spirit and intent of the statute. All the analogies of the law, it seems to us, favor this construction. The case is totally unlike those that have been cited by counsel for the appellants, in which it has been held that a party who voluntarily pays an illegal claim against him cannot recover back of the party to whom it is paid, and that such a payment will be regarded as voluntary, unless made to release the person or property from process, a threatened action being insufficient to render the payment compulsory.
The Town of Ligonier v. Ackerman, 46
Ind. 552, and cases there cited. An important difference between those cases and that in judgment is found in the difference between an illegal and a legal claim. The law does not compel the payment of the former while it does of the latter." Burbank et al. v. Slinkard et al., 53 Ind. 495.

Sec. 8, R. C. 1855, p. 1456, Missouri.
"No such security shall be compelled in any action to pay more than his due proportion of the original demand, etc."
Vaughan v. Haden et al., 37 Mo. 179.

In Contract.—By contract made in this State, A engaged "to repay to B, of New Hampshire, any moneys, not exceeding 1500 dollars, which B should legally be compelled to pay to C on account of money received of C on account of and in part pay for money due on D's bond to B." C recovered of B, in an action brought in New Hampshire, a larger sum than 1500 dollars. Held, that the words "legally compelled" meant compulsion by legal process, without reference to the laws of any particular State; that as the particular ground of the recovery

COMPENSATION. (See also ELECTION; RAILROADS; REWARD.)—A recompense or reward for some loss, injury, or service, especially when it is given by statute.<sup>1</sup> Amends for a loss or privation. As compared with consideration and damages, compensation, in its most careful use, seems to be between them. Consideration amends for something given by consent, or by the owner's choice. Damages are amends exacted from a wrongdoer for a tort. Compensation is amends for something which was taken without the owner's choice, yet without commission of a tort.<sup>2</sup>

In C's action did not, and was not required to appear by the record of the judgment, it might be shown by parol evidence, etc. Parker, Admr., etc. v. Thompson, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 429.

1. Rapalje & Lawrence Law Dict., 2 Dall (U. S.) 304, 315; Searcy v. Grow, 15 Cal. 117.

2. Thus one should say, consideration for land sold; compensation for land taken for a railway; damages for a trespass. But such distinctions are not uniform. Land damages is a common expression for compensation for lands taken for public use. Abbott's Law Dict. See Lloyd or Ingram on Compensation.

Compensation consists in remuneration for loss of time, necessary expenditures, and for permanent disability. Parker v. Jenkins, 3 Bush (Ky.) 591.

Compensation is a mode of extinguishing a debt, and takes place, by mere operation of law, where debts equally liquidated and demandable are reciprocally due. Dorvin v. Wiltz, 11 La. Ann. 520.

Compensation is that return which is given for something else. Searcy v. Grow, 15 Cal. 117, 123; 8 Stockt. (N. J.) 106; 9 Vr. (N. J.) 155.

Compensation is of three kinds: legal, or by operation of law; compensation by way of exception, and by reconvention. Stewart v. Harper, 16 La. Ann. 181.

The phrase "compensation" differs from salary. One who is county collector and treasurer is entitled to but one compensation. Kilgore v. People, 76 Ill. 548.

In Statute.—As used in Ohio State constitution, compensation defines the money that must be paid to satisfy a wrong or injury inflicted; and such money must cover the extent of the injury, irrespective of the value of the property taken. Symond v. Cincinnati, 14 Ohio, 175.

Compensation, in a statute providing a mode of determining compensation for land taken for public use, means an equivalent for the value of the land.

Anything beyond that is more than compensation; anything short of it is less. New Jersey R. & T. Co. v. Suydam, 17 N. J. L. 25, 47. Compare Van Schaick v. Delaware, etc., Canal Co., 20 N. J. L. 249, 252.

Compensation, as used in a constitutional provision that private property shall not be taken for public use unless just compensation be made therefor, means compensation must be in money. Any benefit to the remaining property of the owner, arising from public works for which a part has been taken, cannot be considered as compensation. Alabama, etc., R. Co. v. Burkett, Ala. 83.

Just Compensation.—The term "just compensation" for injury to property taken by a railroad excludes from consideration the general enhancement of the value of other property of the same owner. The cash value and the actual damage are the true standard by which to determine the compensation to which in such cases the party is entitled. Brown v. Beatty, 34 Miss. 227; Isom v. Miss. Cent. R. Co., 36 Miss. 300. See 14 Ala. 192; 46 Ala. 579.

Benefit to the adjacent property of the owner whose land is taken for a public use, is, in so far, compensation for the taking, within the meaning of the constitution; and, if it equal the loss of damage from the taking, it is a just compensation. Betts v. City of Williamburgh, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 255.

When the word "just" is used (as Nev. Const. art. 1, § 8) to intensify the word "compensation," something more than the mere market value should be deemed intended. Virginia, etc., R. Co. v. Henry, 8 Nev. 165.

In an agreement to pay a solicitor just and reasonable compensation for services rendered by him as such, means neither more nor less than taxable costs. Culley v. Hardenbergh, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 508.

Of Brokers.—The compensation which a broker receives for his services is ordinarily a commission on the price of the thing sold or exchanged. Thomas v. Thomas, 4 E. D. Sm. (N. Y.) 423; Keys v. Johnson, 68 Pa. St. 423; Hill v. Hill, 62 Ill. 216; Morgan v. Morgan, 4 E. D. Sm. (N. Y.) 636; Child v. Butler, 1 E. D. Sm. (N. Y.) 150; W. v. Silliman, 53 N. Y. (8 Sick.) 615.

Executor, etc.—In England, an executor or administrator can recover no compensation for his personal services in discharge of his duties, even if he has benefited the estate to the neglect of his own affairs. Brocksopp v. Barnes, 10 Q. B. 90; Barrett v. Hartley, L. R. 2 Q. B. 89.

The rule is, that no compensation can be charged against the trust estate beyond the amount of actual disbursements. Collins v. Carey, 2 Beav. 128.

An attorney or solicitor, who is an executor and renders professional services to the estate, cannot recover compensation. Moore v. Frowd, 3 My. & K. 373; Burge v. Britton, 2 Hare, 373.

In this country executors and administrators have never been required to perform their duties gratuitously, and compensation should be refused only in case of wilful default, or gross negligence causing loss to the estate. Smith v. Ward, 38 Ala. 695; Barney v. Barney, 16 How. (U. S.) 542; Adams v. Westbrook, 41 Miss. 385; Frey v. Frey, 17 N. J. Eq. 71; Morris v. Morris, 11 Va. 293; Estate of Isaac, 30 Ala. 505; Sullivan v. Herrera, 7 Hun 309; Estate of Nicholson, 1 Nev. 309.

Even unfaithful administration does not deprive an executor of a right to compensation for his services so far as they have been beneficial to the estate. Jennison v. Hapgood, 10 Pick. 77; Tiner v. Christian, 27 Ark. 37; Finch v. Ragland, 2 Dev. (N. C.) 37; Gould v. Hayes, 19 Ala. 438.

Compensation for services as executor, and as trustee in regard to the money, will not be allowed to the person. Valentine v. Valentine, 10 Ch. (N. Y.) 430; Holley v. S. G., 10 Ch. 284. An executor who is tenant for life of the estate of the testator is, however, entitled to commissions. Blount v. Hawkins, 4 Jones (N. C.) 161. See Ex parte Wither, 3 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 13.

Guardians—A guardian should be allowed no compensation where he has neglected his duties and done his ward wrong. McCahan's Appeal, 7 Ark. 56; Reed v. Ryburn, 23 Ark. 47. He will be allowed compensation for taking care of the trust fund while he himself is the borrower of it. Farwell v. Steen, 46 Vt. 678.

Of Officers.—Office has been defined to mean "public employment," and its legal meaning to be, an employment on behalf of the government in any station of public trust, not merely transient, occasional, or incidental, usually for a certain compensation. Smith v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 37 N. Y. 518. The legislature may increase the duties without enhancing the compensation or may diminish the compensation without lessening the duties. Conner v. Mayor, 5 N. Y. 285; State v. Davis, 44 Mo. 129; Hyde v. State, 52 Miss. 665; Wilcox v. Rodman, 46 Mo. 322; Sharpe v. Robertson, 5 Gratt. (Va.) 518.

If extra services be performed by direction of the proper authority having no connection with the duties of the office, the officer may be allowed compensation therefor. United States v. Austin, 2 Cliff. 325; United States v. Chassell, 6 Blatchf. 421.

Compensation as a clerk. Tenney v. State, 27 Wis. 387.

Of Receivers (q.v.).—Where his compensation is not prescribed by statute, it is, in general, governed by the same rule that is applied to other persons who hold a fiduciary position. Daniell v. Ch. Pr. 1581; Day v. Croft, 2 Beav. 49; Neave v. Douglass, 36 L. J. Ch. 756; Grant v. Bryant, 101 Mass. 569; Jones v. Keen, 115 Mass. 179; Magee v. Cowperthwait, 10 Ala. 966.

Of Servants.—Where a person is hired for a compensation fixed by agreement of the parties for a specified time, and he continues to serve in the same capacity after the expiration of the term, the law will presume, in the absence of other proof, that he is to receive compensation at the same rate. Grover & Baker S. M. Co. v. Bulkley, 48 Ill. 189; Vail v. J. L. F. Mfg. Co., 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 564; Smith v. Velie, 60 N. Y. 106. In an action to recover compensation for services rendered, the employer is entitled to show, by way of recoupment of damages, loss sustained by him through the negligence of the employee. Stull v. Hall, 20 Wend. 51; Stoddard v. Treadwell, 26 Cal. 291; Wilson v. Wall, 34 Ala. 301.

In Contract.—The right of compensation may be excluded by express contract. Cordingly v. Cheeseborough, 3 Giff. 496. But a condition excluding compensation for errors is sometimes construed so as to extend to small unintentional errors only. Whittemore v. Whittemore, L. R. 8 Eq. 503. May

COMPENSATION—COMPETENCY—COMPETENT.

In Civil Law.—A reciprocal liberation between two persons who are both creditors and debtors of each other.<sup>1</sup>

COMPETENCY.—The fact of being competent.

COMPETENT.—Able; fit; qualified; authorized or capable to act.<sup>2</sup> (See also EVIDENCE; WITNESS.)

be excluded by a revision of contract. Duddell v. Simpson, L. R. 2 Ch. App. 102; Mauser v. Fletcher, L. R. 10 Eq. 213; L. R. 6 Ch. App. 91.

Compensation for Delay, in performance of contract. DeVisme v. DeVisme, 1 Mac. & G. 346; Enraght v. Fitzgerald, 2 Ir. Eq. 87. See 2 Dru. & W. 43; Mayo v. Purcell, 3 Manuf. (Va.) 243; Brown v. Wallace, 2 Bland. (Md.) 585; 2 Lead Cas. Eq. (4th Ed.) 1057.

Distinction between Compensation and Profits.—Where there was a right to a share of the proceeds of a whaling voyage, a compensation merely for services rendered in the adventure did not constitute a partnership in the profits of the voyage. Coffin v. Jenkins, 3 Story (C. C.), 108. See Moon v. Smith, 19 Ala. 774; Randle v. State, 49 Ala. 14; Stoullings v. Baker, 15 Mo. 481; Loomis v. Marshall, 12 Conn. 69; Dwinel v. Stone, 30 Me. 384; Lewis v. Greider, 51 N. Y. 231; Wiggins v. Graham, 51 Mo. 17; Campbell v. Dent, 54 Mo. 325; Bendel v. Hettrick, 3 Jones & Sp. (N. Y.) 405.

The general rule is that compensation for service, in the form of commission or percentage of the profits, or a share of the product of a business, does not constitute the party entitled thereto a partner. Brockway v. Burnap, 16 Barb. (N. Y.) 309; Good v. McCartney, 10 Tex. 193; Ambler v. Bradley, 6 Vt. 119; Miller v. Bartlett, 15 S. & R. (Pa.) 137; Edwards v. Macy, 62 Pa. St. 374; Lewis v. Greider, 51 N. Y. 231.

1. It resembles in many respects the common-law set-off. The principal difference is that common-law set-off must be pleaded to be effectual, whereas compensation is effectual without any such plea. 2 Bouvier Inst. n. 1407. It may be legal, by way of exception, or by reconvention. 8 La. 158.

It takes place by mere operation of law, and extinguishes reciprocally the two debts as soon as they exist simultaneously, to the amount of their respective sums. It takes place only between two debts having equally for their object a sum of money, or a certain quantity of consumable things of one and the same kind, and which are equally liquidated and demandable. It takes place whatever be the cause of the debts, except in case, first, of a demand of restitution of a thing of which the owners have been unjustly deprived; second, of a demand of restitution of a deposit and a loan for use; third, of a debt which has for its cause aliments declared not liable to seizure. La. Civ. Code, 2203, 2208. Dorvin v. Wiltz, 11 La. Ann. 520.

As to the doctrine of compensation with reference to questions of equitable election, see ELECTION.

2. Abb. L. Dict.

Competent Authorities, in the ratification of a treaty referring to grants made by the king or his "competent authorities," were held equivalent to the words "lawful authorities" in the treaty itself, and to mean "those persons who exercised the granting power by the authority of the crown." U. S. v. Clarke, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 449; Mitchel v. U. S., 9 Pet. (U. S.) 735.

Competent Clerk.—Where a committee was authorized to employ a "competent clerk," and it was contended that this language authorized the employment of something more than a mere clerk, viz., of a "person learned in the law and fully competent to grapple with and solve all intricate and perplexing questions of law which might arise in the performance of those duties," it was held that this inference was unwarranted, and that "the use of the adjective in that connection does not change the character of the employment." Tenney v. State, 27 Wis. 392, 393.

Competent Court, in an act allowing any court to commit to prison one who makes default in payment of a debt due "in pursuance of any order or judgment of that or any other competent court," means "a court acting within the local limits of its existing jurisdiction, and with reference to persons within those limits, against whom, therefore, a warrant of the court for committal could be enforced." Washer v. Elliott, 1 C. P. D. 176.

Competent Evidence means that which the very nature of the thing to be proven requires, as the production of a writing where its contents are the subject of inquiry. Chapman v. McAdams, 1 Lea (Tenn.), 504.

Competent Jurisdiction, in a statute

COMPLAIN—COMPLAINANT—COMPLAINT.

COMPLAIN.—To make a formal assertion of injuries; to bring accusation; to make a charge.<sup>1</sup>

COMPLAINANT.—One who makes a complaint.<sup>2</sup> The plain- in a chancery proceeding.<sup>3</sup>

COMPLAINT.—In criminal law the allegation made to a per officer that some person, whether known or unknown, has n guilty of a designated offence, with an offer to prove the fact a request that the offender may be punished.<sup>4</sup> iding that the validity of a sale shall be avoided on account of irregularity e proceedings if it were authorized "court of competent jurisdiction," not mean jurisdiction of the subject- er and not of the parties. "The s 'competent jurisdiction,' in their l signification, embrace the person ell as the cause." Conwell v. Smith, d. 359.

Competent Party. in a special act, de- . Bowes v. Haywood, 35 Mich.

Competent Persons.—One person named mutual consent was held not to be ppetent persons respectively ap- ed by the parties" within the mean- of an agreement. Harvey v. Grab- 5 Ad. & El. 75.

Competent to Dispose by Will.—Where ct imposed a duty in the case of a on "competent to dispose by will of ntinuing interest," it was held that e words had reference to the interest e property, and not to the personal ity. "The word 'competent' has eanings, and as in my judgment it ean one thing or the other, and ot mean both, we must ascertain in b of the two senses the legislature used it. Now the very language of 1st section imports that the compe- y relates to the property and not the of the party, because he must be etent to dispose of a continuing est; that is, possessing such an est in the estate as to have the power sposing by will of a continuing in- t." Atty -Gen. v. Hallett, 2 H. & 74; Wilberf. Stat. L. 140.

With or other Competent Proof in a stat- y direction is satisfied by swearing e facts on information and belief. e v. Halliday, 1 Coms. (N. Y.) 330. Competent, as used in a probate ith reference to an administrator eld to mean not addicted to drunk- ss, not imprudent, or wanting in rity or understanding. In re Estate abecco, 23 Cal. 476.

One who is a drinking man "and of no account," who has been arrested for vagrancy and punished for disorderly conduct, is not "competent" within the meaning of that term in a policy of insurance providing for reference in case of dispute to "two disinterested and competent men." Etna Ins. Co. v. Stevens, 48 Ill. 33.

1. Webster.

2. Webster.

3. Bouvier.

4. Webster.

Act Complained of.—In an action- against a justice of the peace for an act done by him in execution of his office (false imprisonment) the commitment is the act complained of, not the quashing of the conviction on the application of the party imprisoned. Haylocke v. Sparke, 1 Ell. & B 484.

Neglect to make Complaint.—Where a statute provides that "any grand juror who, after he is sworn, shall neglect to make seasonable complaint of any crime committed within the town where he lives, which shall come to his knowledge, shall forfeit two dollars," a breach of the peace had been reported to a grand juror who, acting in good faith, and in the belief that the offence was too trivial for a criminal prosecution, declined to make complaint. Held, that he was not liable to the penalty. Watson v. Hall, 46 Conn. 204.

Complaints.—The term "complaints" is a technical one, descriptive of proceedings before magistrates. A complaint may be made before one magistrate and the warrant therein returned to another for hearing. Commonwealth v. Davis, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 436.

Where criminal prosecutions originate under a statute on complaint, one under oath or affirmation is implied, as a part of the technical meaning of the terms. Campbell v. Thompson, 16 Maine, 117.

But the requirements of the complaint under the statutes of the several States and at common law differ. Bishop Stat.

COMPLETE—COMPLETING—COMPLETION.—To bring to a state in which there is no deficiency; entire; perfect; fulfilment; accomplishment.<sup>1</sup>

Crimes, § 242, and §§ 403, 407; Bish. Crim. Proc. I §§ 152, 230-232.

In order that the defendant may be apprised of the supposed offence he is to answer, and the magistrate what facts he is to try and adjudicate, and that the conviction or acquittal may be deducible in evidence to prevent a subsequent proceeding for the same offence, the complaint should be a formal charge. 2 Chit. Gen. Prac. 155.

Complaint must be in Writing.—A complaint, if oral, must be reduced to writing and spread upon the records as the foundation of the action of a board of tax assessors, and a mere recital that oral complaint was made to such board, without setting out the complaint, is not sufficient. State v. Dodge County, 20 Neb. 595. In this case the court say: "Webster defines the word 'complaint' to mean in law a 'form of legal process which consists of a formal allegation or charge against a party, made or presented to the appropriate court or officer, as for a wrong done or a crime committed; in the latter case generally under oath.' Now, supposing the alleged oral complaint to have been made to a proper party, the substance of it must be reduced to writing as a basis for the action of defendants. In the record presented to us there is no complaint, formal or informal, and the record of the defendants fails to show the existence of such an instrument. We have their naked assertion that such oral complaint was made. This, however, falls far short of showing the existence of a complaint."

When Complaint Includes Indictment.—Where a statute provided that a penalty might be incurred on complaint before any court of competent jurisdiction, the defendant contended that the word "complaint" was technical, and the language of the statute exclusive, and that it did not authorize an indictment. The court held that the import of the term "may" as used in the statute was permissive. The method of prosecution in the superior court is by indictment, but in the police court it is by complaint the words "may be" covered on complaint before any court of competent jurisdiction, and one half of the amount of fine imposed shall go to the complainant or informer, are used in reference to the appropriation of the fine in cases where there is a complainant, and not for the purpose of excluding the jurisdiction of the superior court in cases where no person desires to obtain a part of the fine. Comm. v. Haynes, 107 Mass. 197.

Where Complaints of Suffering Admissible.—Where the nature and extent of the injury inflicted by the act of the accused are a subject of inquiry, the injured person's complaints of suffering and of the res gesta are admissible. Bishop Crim. Proc. I.; Livingston v. Comm., 14 Grat. 592; Reg. v. Johnson, 2 Car. & K. 304; Stein v. State, 37 Ala. 123; Kearney v. Farrell, 28 Conn. 317; Illinois, etc., R. v. Sutton, 42 Ill. 438; Howe v. Plainfield, 41 N. H. 135.

Thus in rape anything which the woman said or did of the res gesta of her ravishment will be admissible in evidence. It is competent to show that she complained of it to suitable persons. It is of special practical importance that the complaint was recent, and explanations of any delay are competent. Bishop Crim. Proc. II. § 963.

The fact that a wife testified before the grand jury in obedience to a subpoena upon the question of her husband's adultery does not show a complaint made by the wife under a statute providing that "no prosecution for adultery shall be commenced but on the complaint of the husband or wife." State v. Stout, 32 N. W. Rep. 372; Bishop Stat. Crimes, § 688.

"Such complaint" in statute construed. Sweetman v. Guest, L. R. 3 Q. B. 262.

1. Webster.

In Statute—Act of Congress.—The clause of the judiciary act of 1789, ch. 20, § 16, which declares "that suits in equity shall not be sustained in either of the courts of the United States, in any case where plain, adequate and complete remedy may be had at law," is merely affirmative of the general doctrine of courts of equity, and in no sense intended to narrow the jurisdiction of such courts. Rean v. Smith, 2 Mason. 270.

Completely Issued and Negotiated—In a Plea.—Where in an action on a note the plea alleged that after the note "was completely issued and negotiated" by one B. and defendant, plaintiff altered it in a material part, the court, after a verdict for defendant, without deciding whether the note was in point of law issued, supposing the plaintiffs and B.

Not suppose it complete, though defendant did, granted a new trial, with leave to amend the plea. Gardner v. H., 5 Ell. & Bl. 84.

Complete Purchaser.—A complete purchaser is one who has paid the purchase-money, and who, although he has not obtained a conveyance of the legal title, is entitled to call for it. Preston v. Preston, 75 Va. 949.

Where land is sold, part of the purchase-money paid in cash, and notes for the balance, if these notes be transferred without indorsement or guarantee the purchaser's equity becomes complete against his vendor, the land is subject to levy and sale at the instance of any creditor other than the vendor, and the purchaser of the notes who takes them by mere delivery is nothing more than an ordinary creditor, and is not entitled to be first paid from the proceeds of the land under the code of Georgia. Part v. Reviere, 1 S. E. Rep. 222.

Mallock v. Kinglake it was contended that the words "completion of purchase" meant where the land was conveyed, but the court said they "only mean payment of the rest of the purchase-money," and it was therefore held that the purchase-money and interest might be sued for without previously tendering a conveyance. 10 Ad. & El. 50, 56.

Complete Cargo—By a charter-party a cargo was described to be of the burden of 100 tons, and the freighter covenanted to load a full and complete cargo. Held, that the loading of the goods equal in number of tons to the tonnage described in the charter-party was not a performance of this covenant, but that the charter was bound to put on board as much goods as the ship was capable of receiving with safety. Hunter v. Fry, 2 L. & Ald. 421.

The charter party provided that the ship should proceed to the port of loading and load "a full and complete cargo of iron ore, say about 1100 tons." The charterer provided a cargo of 1080 tons, the actual capacity of the ship being 1210 tons.

Held, that the words "say about 1100 tons" were not mere words of estimation, but words of contract, and that the charterer's undertaking was not to load the ship up to her actual capacity; that 3 per cent was a fair amount in excess over 1100 tons to allow in estimating what was a full and complete cargo of about 1100 tons, and consequently the cargo actually provided fell short of the charterer's obligation by 53 tons. Morris v. Levison, 2 C. P. Div.

By a charter-party defendant agreed to load on board a vessel at Trinidad "a full and complete cargo of sugar, molasses, and other produce." Held, that evidence was admissible of a custom at Trinidad to load sugar in hogsheads and molasses in puncheons; and therefore that a full and complete cargo of sugar and molasses so packed was a compliance of the contract. Cuthbert v. Cumming, 10 Exch. 809, 11 Exch. 405.

Complete Inventory.—An inventory attached to a general assignment for the benefit of creditors in these terms: "The entire stock of goods, wares, and merchandise in the show-houses, . . . consisting of dry-goods, shoes, hats, boots, caps, . . . (enumerating articles at length) in all to the value of $7600, and choses in action," is full and complete within the meaning of the code of Tennessee, requiring the inventory to be full and complete. Rosenbaum v. Moller, 4 S. W. Rep. 10.

Machinery to be Furnished Complete—In Contracts.—The phrase in an agreement, "in consideration of machinery to be furnished, complete, in the mill," includes not only the cost of the machinery, but the labor and material necessary to place it in proper position for use. Grove v. Miles, 58 Ill. 338.

A, after inspection of the separate parts, bought of B soap frames, which were by the contract warranted to be "new frames, with all nuts and bolts complete and perfect." In an action for breach of warranty, the declaration alleged that the defendant warranted the frames to be fit for the purpose of making soap; and at the trial it was proved and found by the jury that though new, and having the proper number of bolts and nuts, the frames were not reasonably fit for the purpose of making soap. Held, that the evidence sustained the declaration. Mallan v. Rudloff, 17 C. B. (N. S.) 588.

When House is Completed—In Contract.—A written order for the delivery of lumber to be used in building the house of the drawee, and which he promises to pay for "when the house is completed," becomes due when the house is substantially finished by any one, although the drawee knew that the person to whom the order requested him to deliver the lumber was building the house under a contract, and it is not completed according to the terms of the contract. Russell v. Barry, 115 Mass. 300.

Contract.—Land upon which a block of houses was in process of building was conveyed in mortgage, and a third person agreed in writing with the mortgagee to cause the houses to be fully completed without unnecessary delay, guaranteeing that they and all things appurtenant thereto should be fully completed to the acceptance of the mortgagee. At the time of this agreement the houses, which were built upon marsh land upon piles of the usual length for that territory, were all finished except the papering, painting, and the like. They had then settled somewhat to the knowledge of both parties, but no objection to the foundation was known by either party to exist. After they had been finished they settled further, and it became necessary for the mortgagee to protect himself to raise them and substitute new and longer piles. Held, that the third person was not liable on the guaranty for the insufficiency of the foundations. Hyannis Savings Bank v. Moors, 120 Mass. 459.

Street Completed.—A street was laid out in 1804 with an agreement by the owners of land taken therefor not to claim compensation, and that the street need not be "completed" until it was deemed expedient to do so. In 1831 the proper authorities voted that the order of 1804, laying out said street, "be carried into execution, so far as the same remains unfinished," and some work was done under that vote. Held, that the street was thereby "completed" within the meaning of the original laying out, and was from that time so far an existing way that damages could be recovered under the statute for lowering the grade thereof in 1850, notwithstanding the agreement of 1804 not to claim compensation for the land. Fernald v. Boston, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 574.

By a statute in 1803, annexing to Boston that part of Dorchester now known as South Boston, the selectmen of Boston were authorized to lay out such streets in South Boston as in their judgment would be for the common benefit of the proprietors of the land and of the town of Boston, provided that no compensation should be allowed the proprietors for such streets as should be laid out within twelve months from the passage of the act; and provided, also, that the town of Boston should not be obliged to complete the streets so laid out sooner than they might deem expedient. In pursuance of this authority the selectmen within twelve months laid out various streets over the entire territory of South Boston, and among others a very long street denominated Second Street, which subsequently became distinguished into two parts, namely, Second Street east and Second Street west of Dorchester Street. The mayor and aldermen in 1831 adopted an order that Second Street west of Dorchester Street should be made passable, and subsequently passed orders in 1834 and 1836, appointing committees to "cause Second Street at South Boston to be repaired and put in good order," "to be properly graded . . .," in pursuance of which that part of Second Street known as Second Street west had been completed and used as a highway; no part of Second Street east, though occasionally used as a highway, had not been ordered to be completed and made passable, unless included in the above orders. In an action against the city of Boston to recover damages for an injury occasioned by a defect in Second Street east, it was held that in order to render the defendant liable it must appear only that the way had been laid out, but that the mayor and aldermen by an official act had determined upon its completion; that is, when the same should be graded, fitted for travel, and opened for use. Benman v. Boston, 5 C. (Mass.) 1.

When Railroad Completed.—A condition precedent in a bond that the road is to be completed to a certain village was substantially complied with when it was made to the suburbs of that village in such a manner as to bear daily traffic on it, carrying all the freight and travelers that offer, although some portions of the work is intended to be replaced by other and better materials. O'Neil v. Ring, 3 Jones L. (N. C.) 517. The court says in this case: What did the parties mean when they used the word "completed" in the bond? Did it mean that in every particular, for ever minute, the road should be perfect before the defendant's liability to pay should arise? Did they use the word in its full critical sense that no piece of rot or unsound sill should be found in the whole line of road? Or did they use it in its plain common sense meaning? Que hæret in litera hæret in costice is an ancient maxim of the common law, whence the rule that the law in such a case is satisfied with a substantial performance of the condition. Wherefore, it is said in the contract that the road shall be completed to Green Court-house, and it is shown that the whole village is called by that name, that the road is brought to the suburbs of the village, that part of the condition is complied with; and where it is sh-

COMPLETE—COMPOSITION WITH CREDITORS.

COMPOSITION WITH CREDITORS (See also ACCORD AND SATISFACTION; ASSIGNMENT FOR BENEFIT OF CREDITORS; BANKRUPTCY; DEBTOR AND CREDITOR.)

Definition, 385.

Generally, 386.

How Effected, 387.

Authority of Partner, 387.

Agreement of Creditors to Join in Deed, 389.

Composition with Portion of Creditors, 387.

Effect of Failure to Obtain Assent of

All or a Certain Portion of the Creditors, 390.

Debtor Must Act in Good Faith, 391.

What Debts are Included, 392.

Retention of Sureties, 395.

Duty and Liability of the Debtor, 395.

Secret Agreements with Creditors, 396.

Securities for Preference Void, 398.

New Promise, 399.

1. Definition.—A composition is an agreement, made upon a sufficient consideration, between a debtor and creditor, by which the creditor accepts part of the debt due him in satisfaction of the whole.<sup>1</sup> that the whole of the road is finished so as to authorize the company to carry freight and passengers, and to demand and receive pay therefor, we hold that the condition of the bond is complied with, and that in the language used the road is completed to Greenville Courthouse.

In Contract in Aid of a Railroad.—The word "completed," when used in a contract in aid of a railroad, may have a different meaning from what it would have in a contract for the construction of a road. In a contract for construction it would mean a completion in accordance with specifications; but in a contract like the one in suit (ut supra) it is not likely the parties have any such completion in mind, and a less perfect construction may satisfy its intent, provided the road is in condition to be opened for regular passenger and freight traffic, and is actually in use. The purpose of such a contract . . . is accomplished when the road is thus put in condition for regular business." Tower v. Detroit, L. & L. M. R. Co., 34 Mich. 338.

In De Graff v. St. Paul & Pac. R. Co. the court says. "The word 'completing' has substantially the same signification as the word 'constructing.' A railroad is completed or constructed when that is done which is necessary to make it a railroad—when it is fitted for use as a railroad. That is to say, where it is made ready and put in proper condition for the placing and running of regular trains upon it, or for operation, as it is usually termed. In this its natural and ordinary sense the word 'completing' does not include the equipment of the road with rolling-stock or putting it in operation." 23 Minn. 146.

Where an act provides that a railway shall be completed in five years, but the context shows the words are not compulsory, and no duty is imposed upon the company to make the line, the case is not affected by the fact that the company has completed a part of the line. York & Midland R. Co. v. Queen, 1 El. & Bl. 863; McCandless's App., 70 Pa. St. Rep. 210.

Canals Completed—In Statute.—In Newell v. People, 7 N. Y. 130, in construing a statute providing that "the remainder of the revenue of the State canals after . . . shall be applied in each fiscal year to the completion . . ." of certain canals "until the said enlargement and the said canals shall be completed," it was contended that by the expression "until the said canals shall be completed" was to be understood the time when the canals are constructed and ready for use. The court said. "I incline to think this interpretation is too limited and contracted. The verb to complete, like many others, is used with some indefiniteness of signification, and the idea conveyed by it frequently depends upon the connection in which it is to be found, or the object to which it refers. The connection here is where provision is made for the disposition of the remainders, and the direction given for their application; and it is declared that they shall be applied as long as the application shall be necessary to such completion, or until the application is complete. This, in my judgment, was the sense in which the words in question were intended to be used."

1. Bouv. Law Dict.

2. Generally.—The rule that an agreement to accept, in satisfaction and discharge of a liquidated debt, a sum less than the amount due, is not valid, has no application when such an agreement forms part of a composition in which several creditors mutually stipulating to withdraw or withhold suits, and that they will release to their common debtor a part of their claims upon payment of a certain other part. Such an agreement is binding between each creditor and the debtor, the undertaking of the other creditors to give up a part of their claim being a good consideration for each creditor.<sup>1</sup>

1. Perkins v. Lockwood, 100 Mass. 249; Eaton v. Lincoln, 13 Mass. 424; Farrington v. Hodgdon, 119 Mass. 453; Sage v. Valentine, 23 Minn. 102; Williams v. Carrington, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 514; Blair v. Wait, 69 N. Y. 113; Fellows v. Stevens, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 294; Paddleford v. Thatcher, 48 Vt. 574; Pierce v. Jones, 8 S. Car. 273; Good v. Cheeseman, 2 B. & Ad. 328; Steinman v. Magnus, 11 East, 390; Pfleger v. Browne, 28 Beav. 391; Gillfillan v. Farrington, 12 Ill. App. 101; Way v. Langley, 15 Ohio St. 392.

In the latter case the court say: "The binding force and validity of a composition agreement made in good faith between an embarrassed debtor and his creditors, and fully carried into execution, cannot at this late day be questioned. Notes to Cumber v. Wane, 1 Smith's L. C. 443-4." Compare Murray v. Snow, 37 Iowa, 410.

But the composition will not be effective to discharge the debtor unless the amount agreed upon is actually paid. Re Hurst, 13 Bankr. Reg. 455.

The reason for upholding such an agreement is that the rights and interests of other parties become involved in the arrangement, and this affords a new and legal consideration for the promise. It would be contrary to good faith for a creditor who has secured the advantage of such an arrangement to disregard its obligations by proceeding to enforce the balance of his demand, and the debtor is entitled to avail himself of this consideration in defence. Perkins v. Lockwood, 100 Mass. 249.

A covenant in a composition deed whereby the creditors, "severally and each for himself, agree" to release and discharge the debtor, is valid; such an agreement is mutual, and mutually binding on all who sign it. It is not necessary that the agreement should express the mutuality when it may be implied from the nature of the agreement. Horstman v. Miller, 3 J. & S. (N. Y. Sup. Ct.) 29.

The execution of a composition is to be deemed contemporaneous and of one general influence and one general consideration, so it cannot be said as to the last creditor who signs it is no mutuality. Hall v. Merrill, 9 Pr (N. Y.) 116.

Where the creditors of a failing debtor contract with a third person to sell and assign to him their claims at a certain percentage, in the absence of proof that such third person was acting merely as agent of the debtor, the transaction will be considered as a purchase and sale, a compromise; and a creditor who has assigned his claim, cannot enforce the balance of the indebtedness. It is sufficient proof simply that some of the creditors received more than the stipulated percentage for their claims. Goldenberg v. Hoffman, 69 N. Y. 322.

Nor does the acceptance of a payment for which a receipt is furnished, given, with an agreement to give a further payment for an additional amount, at a future time, operate as a composition, unless other creditors are thereby induced to enter into compromises, without their engagement. Williams v. Carrington, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 515.

So a written agreement between a debtor and a part of his creditors, without consideration, and not under seal, wherein they agreed to give him a respite for one year, during which they would not sue him, obtain judgment against him, or molest him by legal proceedings, or issue execution against his property, is merely an agreement for forbearance, and not binding. Hart v. Patterson, 57 Pa. St. 346.

And a mere agreement of a creditor with his debtor to accept a certain percentage of the debt in full satisfaction thereof, "provided that no other creditor shall receive more than the same percentage of his claim," is void for want of consideration. Perkins v. Lockwood, 100 Mass. 249.

the fact that a debtor has made an assignment of all his property for the benefit of all his creditors does not preclude him from dealing in good faith with certain creditors by paying a certain part of their claims, with the assistance of a third party.<sup>1</sup>

How Effected.—It is not essential that the compromise agreement should be in writing; each creditor may make a separate parol agreement for the purpose of carrying the compromise into effect, after the agreement is once made no creditor can withdraw without the consent of the debtor,<sup>2</sup> and although the debts are by specialty the composition does not require a seal.<sup>3</sup>

Authority of Partner.—If one of several partners assent to a deed executed by a debtor of the firm in favor of his creditors, the firm is bound by the deed; and the doctrine that one partner has no implied authority to bind his copartners by an instrument under which he has no application to such a case.<sup>4</sup>

Agreement of Creditors to Join in Deed.—A creditor who agrees to take a composition from his debtor, on the faith of which the debtor executes a deed of assignment of all his property to a trustee for the benefit of his creditors, will be held to his agreement, and will not be allowed by refusing to execute such deed to sue the debtor for the whole of his demand.<sup>5</sup> He can recover of

Osdyke v. Nixon, 8 N. E. Rep. 11.

Chemical National Bank v. Kohner, 17 N. Y. 189; Fellows v. Stevens, 24 (N. Y.) 294.

van Bokkelen v. Taylor, 62 N. Y. 574. See also Paddleford v. Thatcher, 574. Compare Fellows v. Stevens, 24 (N. Y.) 294.

Well's Lindley on Partnership, 277; v. Marquand, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 17; Each v. Ollendorf, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 17; Ellis v. Evans, 20 Wend. (N. Y.) 17; Malley v. Whitney, 4 Mason (U. S.), 17.

Cutler v. Rhodes, 1 Esp. 236; Heath v. Crookshanks, 2 T. R. 24; Brady v. Camp, 147; Bradley v. Greg-Camp, 383; Anstey v. Marden, 1 Pull. 124; Norman v. Thompson, 55; Woods v. Roberts, 2 Starkie, 55; Fellows v. Stevens, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 294; Therasson v. Peterson, 4 Abb. 396; Chemical Bank v. Brown, 85 N. Y. 189; Brown v. Stack-N. H. 478. See Cutler v. Reynolds, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 598.

It is not, in equity, necessary that a partner should execute a creditor's deed; if he does some act which amounts to an assent, he is entitled to the benefit of it, though it is not sufficient in him merely to assent and take no part in the matter. Wells v. Mount, 24 Beav. 642.

A partner, being insolvent, by agreement stipulated to assign his property immediately, the creditors consenting that the business should be carried on for their benefit until the next Michaelmas, and that then the property should be divided among them; the insolvent assigned his effects; at the next Michaelmas several of the creditors who had signed this instrument agreed that the business should be carried on by the trustees for a further time. Held, that a creditor who had signed the first agreement, but who had not in any way concurred in the second, could not maintain an action against the insolvent for a debt existing at the time of the first agreement. Cork v. Saunders, 1 B. & A. 46.

The agreement may sometimes be inferred from the fact that the creditor receives the composition paid under the deed. A debtor, who was indebted to the plaintiff as well as other creditors, executed a deed of composition securing to all his creditors 10s. in the pound. The plaintiff withheld their consent to the deed. The composition under the deed was paid to the plaintiffs, who kept the money without stating on what account it was received, or without giving an acknowledgment for it. They afterwards claimed to have received it on account of their original debt. The deed was bad. Held, that the plaintiffs were precluded from saying that they had received the money on account of the original debt, and that it must be taken to have been paid as composition under the deed. Kitchin v. Hawkins, 12 Jur. N. S. 928.

the debtor only that proportion of the debt fixed in the agreement.<sup>1</sup>

But a mere assurance on the part of a creditor that he will unite in any arrangement which the other creditors might make, looking to a future period for the making of such an agreement, and reserving a locus penitentiæ, is not evidence of an accord of creditors which supplies the valuable consideration upon which alone rests the validity of a composition.<sup>2</sup> And where the debtor gives his consent to the withdrawal of a creditor who has signified his assent to a composition, the agreement is not a bar to an action for the recovery of the original indebtedness.<sup>3</sup>

But where, by the terms of a composition agreement, the creditors agree to accept notes indorsed by a particular person, and that person dies, they are not bound to accept any other indorser. Where, in such a case, the debtor wrote to his creditors notifying them of the death of the proposed indorser, and suggesting B. as a substitute, and closed his letter as follows: "Should you deem his indorsement sufficient, please advise me promptly." Held, that a creditor who did not signify his intention until notes indorsed by B. had been accepted by the other creditors was not bound to accept such notes, and, having refused to do so, is at liberty to sue on his original cause of action. Danzig v. Gumersell, 27 Fed. Rep. 185.

And a composition agreement by a bankrupt, whereby he gave his creditors his notes secured by a policy on his life, with a provision that the agreement should be forfeited if he failed to pay the insurance premiums, as he did fail, is no bar to an action on the original indebtedness by a creditor who had refused to accept the note which had been deposited in court for him. Pupke v. Churchill, 16 Mo. App. 334.

1. Mellen v. Goldsmith, 47 Wis. 573; Reay v. White, 1 C. & M. 748.

But in Loney v. Bailey, 43 Md. 10, certain creditors were held entitled to recover the full amount of their claims, under the following facts: A bill was filed by one member of a firm against his co-partners, praying the appointment of a receiver, and for the adjustment of the partnership affairs. The creditors were not parties. A receiver was appointed, who took charge of all the partnership effects, and reported to the court a proposition of a party to purchase the entire stock of goods and debts due the firm for a certain price, and prayed the court to authorize the sale. With this report was filed an agreement between the partners and a large number of the creditors, wherein the proposed sale was assented to and recommended; and by said agreement the creditors, executing the same under their hands and seals, covenanted and agreed with the partners that, in consideration that the latter would assent to the sale, and of the dividends to be received from the proceeds thereof, the former did and would forever acquit, charge, and release the firm, and the several members thereof individually, from any and all balance or balances which might remain due on their several claims. The partners all assented to the sale. It was authorized, and the receiver was directed to give the usual notice to the creditors of the firm to file their claims properly authenticated, on or before a certain day, preparatory to a proper distribution of the assets of the firm. Under this notice certain creditors, who had signed the agreement aforesaid, filed their claim and received a dividend thereon. Prior to receiving such dividend the same creditors instituted an action at law to recover the amount of their claims. Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the full amount of their claims, less the dividend received thereon; the filing of the claim under the circumstances, and the receipt of the dividend did not bind the plaintiffs to abide by and perform the agreement between the defendants and certain other of the creditors.

2. Bishop on Insolvent Debtors, 1 Hartell v. Morgan, 1 Pitts. (Pa.) 354.

A creditor cannot be said in any sense to have acceded to the provisions of a compromise deed unless he has put himself in the same situation with regard to the debtor as if he had actually executed the deed. Forbes v. Limond, 4 Deane, Mac. & G. 298.

3. Fellows v. Stevens, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 294.

Agreement Held Not a Bar.—Where a plaintiff, the drawer of a bill accepted by the defendant, agreed with him and

An agreed composition cannot be set up in bar of the debt unless the debtor has performed or offered to perform his part of the agreement.<sup>1</sup>

6. Composition with a Portion of the Creditors.—An agreement entered into between a debtor and any number of his creditors less than the whole number to take a composition for their debts, is binding upon those who enter into the agreement;<sup>2</sup> but such an agreement entered into between a debtor and a single creditor is void for want of consideration.<sup>3</sup>

And in order, therefore, that the agreement should be inoperative unless all the creditors sign it, such a condition should be expressly est of his creditors to take a composition of 8s. in the pound, to be secured by promissory notes to be given by the defendant, payable on days certain; and that he should assign to the creditors certain debts, upon which they should execute a general release; and the assignment was executed, and all the creditors except the plaintiff received their composition and executed the release, and the plaintiff might have received his notes if he had applied for them, but it did not appear that the defendant had ever tendered them to the plaintiff, or that he had ever applied for them; and the plaintiff afterwards, and after the days of payment of the notes had expired, sued the defendant on the bill of exchange: held, that he was not precluded by the agreement from recovering. Cranley v. Hilary, 2 M. & S. 120.

So where the plaintiff attended a meeting of the defendant's creditors, and concurred in certain resolutions for the execution of a release to the defendants, their executing an assignment of all their effects to trustees for distribution amongst their creditors, and the defendants and trustees at first disputed the amount of the plaintiff's debt, but subsequently altogether refused to allow him to come in under the deed, held, that having signed the preliminary resolutions was, under the circumstances, no bar to his right to sue the defendants for his original debt. Garrard v. Woolner, 11 M. & Scott, 327.

The defendant being in difficulties, called a meeting of his creditors, one of whom was the plaintiff, and proposed a composition to them, which, however, was not arranged. A witness, who was clerk to an accountant employed by the defendant, proved that he afterwards showed to the plaintiff a composition paper, which had already been signed by one of the creditors, and asked him to sign it also. The paper purported to be a memorandum, by which each of the undersigned creditors, in consideration of the agreement therein contained on the part of the others, agreed with the others, and also with the defendant, to accept a composition of 10s. in the pound. The plaintiff being informed that L., one of the creditors, had not signed, said that he would not sign until L. had done so. The witness left the plaintiff on the understanding that he was to get L., and then that he (the plaintiff) would sign. The witness did get L. to sign, but the plaintiff could not be induced to keep his promise, and never did sign. Held, in an action by the plaintiff to recover the amount of his debt, that these facts did not constitute any defence, as no such agreement can operate as a defence if made merely between the debtor and a single creditor; and also that there was no agreement with the plaintiff, as the composition paper was expressly confined to those who had signed it. Boyd v. Hind, 1 H. & N. 938; 26 L. J. Exch. 164.

1. Flack v. Garland, 8 Md. 188.

2. Norman v. Thompson, 4 Exch. 755; Brown v. Dakeyne, 11 Jur. 39; Good v. Cheeseman, 3 B. & Ad. 328; Devon v. Ham, 17 Ind. 472; Renard v. Tuller, 4 Bosw. (N. Y. Sup. Ct.) 107; Eaton v. Lincoln, 13 Mass. 424. See Lanes v. Squires, 45 Tex. 382.

3. Pierson v. McCahill, 21 Cal. 122; Greenwood v. Liddbetter, 12 Price, 183.

But where a judgment creditor agreed with his debtor that if the latter would, when his land was sold under the execution, make no attempt to have a home-stead exempted, or to open the judgment under the provisions of a relief law applicable to the case, the former would either rebate a portion of his judgment, or if he became the purchaser of the property, convey a portion of it to the debtor, held, that the agreement was neither fraudulent per se, nor in derogation of the rights of junior judgment creditors. Parkerson v. Sessions, 40 Ga. 171.

declared or be clearly deducible from unambiguous language;<sup>1</sup> and verbal declarations made by the parties at the time when the deed was executed to show that it was to be void unless signed by all are not admissible.<sup>2</sup>

7. Effect of Failure to Obtain Assent of All or a Certain Portion of the Creditors.—An agreement for a composition entered into by one creditor, in contemplation and consideration of a general composition being entered into by all the creditors, is not binding on him if the others refuse to come in.<sup>3</sup> But where a deed is entered

1. Bishop on Insolvent Debtors, 450; Renard v. Tuller, 4 Bosw. (N. Y. Sup. Ct.) 107.

A composition deed recited that, "Whereas, C. G. Harger and Son, bankers, are indebted to their several creditors in diverse amounts, but by reason of sundry losses and disappointments were unable to pay and satisfy our demands in full," held, that the words "their several creditors" were not synonymous with all their creditors, and did not imply that the compromise was not to become binding until all had signed, and that there was no ambiguity which rendered parol evidence admissible to show that the deed was intended to be inoperative unless signed by all the creditors. Strickland v. Harger, 16 Hun (N. Y.) 465.

2. Lewis v. Jones, 4 Barn. & Cress. 506; Acker v. Phoenix, 4 Paige (N. Y.), 305.

But where a release called by the parties a "conditional release" was executed in contemplation of a composition of creditors, it was held to be competent to show by parol a condition that all releases to be executed should be binding only in case all the creditors came into the arrangement. Tutt v. Price, 7 Mo. App. 194.

3. Reay v. Richardson, 2 C. M. & R. 422; Chase v. Bailey 49 Vt. 71; Cobleigh v. Pierce, 32 Vt. 788, Green v. Schriver, 53 Pa. St. 259, Shenandoah M. E. Church v. Robbins 81 Pa. St. 361; Laird v. Campbell, 100 Pa. St. 159; Turner v. Comer, 6 Gray (Mass.), 530; Walker v. Mayo, 1 Mass. 42; Kinsing v. Bartholomew, 1 Will. (U. S.) 155.

Where there was a proviso "that if any of the creditors should refuse to execute or otherwise consent to the deed within six months from the date thereof, it should be void;" and some of the creditors did not execute the deed, but there was no evidence of their refusing to do so,—such non-execution was held not to be a refusal within the meaning of the proviso, and did not make the deed void. Holmes v. Love, 5 D. & R. 56; 3 B. & C. 242.

A debtor agreed to assign all his property in trust for his creditors, upon the usual covenants, and to be void if not signed before a given day by all the creditors, and the trustees sold the property and paid sixteen shillings in the pound and a creditor had not executed within the given time mentioned, nor would the debtor execute. Held, that an action could not be maintained by a creditor who had executed until it was ascertained that the other creditor would not execute. Tatlock v. Smith, 6 Bing. 33.

But if creditors agree to accept a dividend by way of composition the debtor covenants to pay if all his creditors shall come into the arrangement, one who has accepted his dividend cannot bring suit against the debtor on the original demand by reason of another creditor not having signed the composition paper. Chittenden v. Woodburg, 52 Vt. 562.

So a creditor who signed a composition on the condition that all the creditors should sign, cannot avoid his agreement where all had signed, except one with a claim of $2.50. Fahey v. Clarke, 80 Ky. 613.

Liability of Sureties.—Previously to the execution of a composition deed, it was agreed, in the presence of a surety for the payment of the composition, that it should be void unless all the creditors executed it. A creditor, at the same interview, but subsequently to such agreement, executed the deed in the ordinary way, and without saying anything at the time of the execution. The deed was then delivered to one of the creditors, who was to get it executed by the rest. Held, that the condition previously expressed, although not introduced into the act of delivery, was sufficient to make this a delivery of the deed as an escrow, and that all the creditors not having executed it, the surety was not bound thereby. Johnson v. Baker, 4 B. & A. 440.

A composition between creditors and a debtor and his surety stipulated that the surety should indorse certain notes of the debtor, provided that all creditors to amounts exceeding $200 should sign into with a clause that if certain debtors do not sign, it shall be null and void, if such creditors accept the composition or the security for it, though they do not actually sign the deed, it is valid and good.<sup>1</sup> Where a release to an insolvent debtor provides that it shall stand null and void, if not agreed to by all his creditors, he must prove that all such creditors have assented to the composition,<sup>2</sup> and such an agreement applies to secured as well as unsecured creditors.<sup>3</sup>

3. Debtor Must Act in Good Faith.—A composition between a debtor and a creditor is sustained only where the most scrupulous good faith has been observed by the debtor in reference to the transaction; and where a debtor fraudulently procures a composition with his creditors by means of false representations as to the amount of his property in pretending to be insolvent, the contract is void and the creditor may recover the whole debt.<sup>4</sup> The creditor, that this indorsement of the notes was a waiver of the condition as to a debtor who was ignorant of any failure in the fulfilment of the condition, or of the fact that the agreement had been procured through a fraudulent bonus, Attmore v. O'bear, 58 Mo. 280.

The court distinguished this case from of Doughty v. Savage, 28 Conn.

There the composition agreement, made by the plaintiffs and other creditors of G., contained a condition that it should be binding unless signed by all. Composition notes were delivered to the plaintiff under the agreement indorsed by the defendant as surety for G. The agreement was not signed by all the creditors, but the fact was not known to the defendant when he indorsed the notes. Held, that he could set up in his defence non-compliance with the condition. Suit brought upon the notes indorsed by him.

Falconbury v. Kendall, 76 Ind. 260, where the plaintiff entered into a written contract to execute his notes to the creditors of B to a certain amount of their claims, on the consideration, among others, that all the creditors should sign such contract, agreeing to release B from liability on his indebtedness. A executed notes to the creditors of B except one who did not sign the agreement, who instituted suit thereon to compel payment by A of the amount of his claim thereunder. Held, that until all the creditors had assented to the agreement no right of action accrued against A; and that an allegation, in a complaint on such a composition agreement, that the creditors had assented to all the conditions of the contract on their part, is not equivalent to an allegation that all the creditors had assented to the agreement.

1. Jolly v. Wallis, 3 Esp. 228.

2. Lower v. Clement, 25 Pa. St. 63; Durgin v. Ireland, 14 N. Y. 322; Babcock v. Dill, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 577; Cutter v. Reynolds, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 596.

3. Kinsing v. Bartholew, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 155.

4. Seving v. Gale, 28 Ind. 486; Jackson v. Hodges, 24 Md. 468; Hester v. Cahn, 73 Ill. 296; Monger v. Kett, 111 Md. 558; Irving v. Humphry, 104 N. Y. 284; Vine v. Mitchell, 1 Moody & R. 337.

Plaintiff held a claim against a firm, in which B. was a partner, upon which this suit was pending, and also an individual claim against B. The latter having become insolvent, proposed to his creditors to transfer all his property to trustees, to be divided among his creditors, if those holding claims to the amount of three fourths of his indebtedness would assent and join in a release. Plaintiffs, on being applied to, to assent to the compromise and sign the composition deed, refused, on the ground that they would thereby release the firm. Upon being assured by B. that he was only a special partner, plaintiffs consented to transfer the individual claim to R., with the understanding that he should execute the deed and release as creditor, holding any dividends received in trust for them. B., by the partnership agreement, was a special partner, but, by reason of irregularity in the proceedings, he had incurred the liability of general partner, which fact he knew at the time, but did not disclose to plaintiffs. The proposed compromise agreement was carried out. Held, that the case did not fall within the rule prohibiting a creditor, who is a party to a composition deed, or who assents thereto, from reserving a portion of his itors are not bound to look for information elsewhere, and any material misrepresentation on the part of the debtor will avoid the compromise.<sup>1</sup> If in consequence of a debtor representing to one of his creditors that if he will agree to accept a composition for his debt all the other creditors will do the same, such creditor does not agree, the agreement is not binding upon him if that representation is untrue.<sup>2</sup> Where, by means of false and fraudulent representations upon the part of the debtor the creditor is induced to compromise a debt, the debtor representing that another had agreed to accept such compromise, upon discovering the falsity of such representation, the creditor may maintain an action against the debtor to recover the damages thereby sustained.<sup>3</sup>

9. What Debts are Included.—Where a creditor signs a deed of composition, leaving the amount of his debt in blank, he binds himself to all existing debts;<sup>4</sup> and a creditor who signs a composition deed, and inserts in it an amount as due him, cannot maintain claim from the operation of the compromise, or stipulating for a secret advantage over the other creditors; and that the compromise agreement was no defence, and did not discharge B. Almon v. Hamilton, 100 N. Y. 527.

1. Irving v. Humphry, Hopk. (N. Y.) 284. In this case the debtor overstated the amount of his confidential debts, which were to be allowed a preference under the compromise, and the agreement had been acted upon, and the creditors had received the benefit of it, the court refused to set aside releases given by the creditors, except so far as to give them the benefit of all the property of the debtor. But a compromise made by a debtor with his creditor may not be assailed on the ground that the debtor omitted to disclose his financial condition. Where he is not questioned in regard thereto, and does nothing to mislead, he is not bound to make any such disclosure. Graham v. Meyer, 99 N. Y. 611.

2. Cooling v. Noyes, 6 T. R. 263; Reay v. Richardson, 2 C. M. & R. 422; Lewis v. Jones, 4 B. & C. 506.

But where the composition is effected by a third person, who advances his money to accomplish it, it seems that fraudulent representations made by the debtor to induce creditors to become parties will not invalidate the compromise; at all events, if the creditor desires to rescind he must restore to the third party the amount he has received under the agreement. Bishop on Insolvent Debtors, 456; Babcock v. Dill, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 577.

3. Whiteside v. Hyman, 10 Hun (N. Y.), 218.

4. Harrhy v. Wall, 1 B. & A. 101; Margetson v. Aitkin, 3 C. & P. 338. But not to any debts which may afterward accrue to the creditor. Lipman v. Lowitz, 78 Ill. 252.

A composition with creditors bars an action by one for breach of contract, for which he made no provision on signing, as he should have done so if he had wished damages therefor. Textor v. Hutchings, 62 Md. 150.

Proof of a parol agreement made at the execution of a composition deed, under which the holders of a note agreed to receive a certain percentage of a debt due from the makers, that it should not embrace the note, is inadmissible upon the ground that it contradicts the written instrument; and also that such an agreement would be a fraud upon the other creditors, and void. Perry v. Armstrong, 39 N. H. 583; Meyer v. McKee, 19 Ill. App. 109.

The creditors of A and B by a composition deed agreed to accept from A and B, "ten per cent of the amount due us and each of us from said A, and said A and B in full settlement and discharge of our debts against them, said ten per cent to be paid within thirty days." The plaintiff, one of A's creditors who joined in the deed, held a note and account against him, which were then due. He also held another note, which would not become due until after the expiration of the thirty days, on which A's name appeared as indorser. Held, that this last note was not included in the composition deed. Hamblen v. Ratigan, 119 Mass. 153.

If the creditor induces others to agree to the composition, on the faith of his an action against the debtor for a demand that existed, but not taken into account at the time of the composition, though deed specifies that the property conveyed by the debtor is to be divided among the creditors in proportion to their several debts.<sup>1</sup> representation that he is not the owner of other bills, or that the bills for which he accepts the composition are the bills of the debtor which he holds, cannot afterwards sue the debtor upon

Blackstone v. Wilson, 26 L. J. 229.

Russell v. Rogers, 10 Wend. (N. Y.)

In this case A. signed a composition deed, and released his debtor from all demands, and afterwards sued him for breach of covenant in discharging a judgment that he had, before the composition, rendered to A., and it appeared that the cause of action accrued previously to the release. The release was held to bar the action, though the sum set opposite to A. in the composition deed was wholly different demand.

arrangement with creditors for an extension of the time of payment of their debts was signed by B., "provided I have the same indorsers for $3500." B. gave up notes to the amount of $3500, and received new notes therefor, and brought suit on another note not included in the sum. Held, that the agreement did not apply to the note sued on. Garrison v. Papin, 30 Mo. 243.

Deed of composition with creditors contained a provision for the payment of borrowed money and accommodated notes, and then all notes which were actually given in course of business, and which had been extended by the holders thereof. On exceptions taken to the claim of a creditor allowed as if borrowed money, upon the ground that it was not borrowed money "within the terms of the deed," held, that the words of the deed, "borrowed money," included, in ordinary sense, all sums of money loaned by a creditor to a debtor, without regard to the mode, or the existence of any security, or evidence of indebtedness, and being nothing in the context to alter the meaning of the words, it was held that the deed was not exceptant to establish any satisfactory proof that the terms had acquired and were used in a special or peculiar sense. Murray v. Murray, 24 Md. 520.

Creditors signed an agreement "to accept twenty-five per cent of the amount of the indebtedness as set against our respective claims, said seventy-five per cent to be paid in two, four, and six months from December 15," the contract to take effect "provided all merchandise indebtedness accept the same settlement." A., one of the creditors, held three notes of the debtor, two of which he had previously sold, taken back under false representations by the purchaser, and at the time he signed the above agreement was, with the knowledge of the debtor, endeavoring to force the purchaser to take the notes back, which was done before December 15. Held, in an action by A. upon the note not sold, that A., not being in possession or having control of the two notes sold, the debtor was not obliged as to them to tender the settlement notes; and as to the note in suit, the debtor was not obliged to tender a settlement note of seventy-five per cent on that note after the transfer of the other two notes, which the debtor had paid to the purchaser. Farrington v. Hodgdon, 119 Mass. 453.

C., an insolvent debtor, made a compromise with his debtors for twenty-five cents on the dollar. H., a creditor, signed the composition deed, putting down his claim at $25,000, when it was in fact $45,000. There was no evidence of an actual fraudulent intent on H.'s part; but there was a fraud on the part of C. upon all the creditors in making a false representation as to his liabilities and assets. In a suit by H. against C. to recover the balance of his whole claim above the twenty-five per cent received, held, (1) that C.'s fraud vitiated the release against all the creditors; (2) that, supposing H. to have had a fraudulent intent in representing his claim as less than it was, yet this was a fraud on the other creditors and not on the debtor; and while it would have destroyed H.'s right to avail himself of the benefit of the compromise agreement, yet it would not preclude him from setting up the debtor's fraud as vitiating the compromise so far as the debtor was seeking the benefit of it; (3) that in the absence of evidence of intent, the conduct of H. was not necessarily fraudulent. Huntington v. Clark, 39 Conn. 540.

And where a creditor of an insolvent debtor had with other creditors signed an agreement to accept twenty-five per cent of their claims, the amount of the creditor's claim being stated in connection with his signature, it was held that, in the absence of any proof of fraud on the other creditors, a receipt afterwards given by the creditor for his percentage, and also parole evidence, were admissible to show that the amount for which the creditor signed the composition was that of his unsecured claims, and that the agreement was not intended to apply to another secured claim. Hartford & N. Y. Transp. Co. v. Hartford Bank, 46 Conn. 569.

A creditor who unites with others in releasing their common debtor is bound to protect the latter against a prior assignee of his claim,<sup>1</sup> and where a debtor makes out lists of his indebtedness and proposes to pay, and his creditors accept a certain per cent thereof, and payments are made accordingly, he cannot recover from one of his creditors a part of the sum so paid him on the ground of an alleged mistake as to his liability, except on clear and satisfactory proof of the mistake.<sup>2</sup>

If, when the creditor accepts the composition, the debtor has a claim against him, the debt which is released is the balance after deducting the counter-claim.<sup>3</sup>

E. executed a deed, by which he conveyed his stock in trade and other property to trustees, in trust to sell and dispose of the same, "and apply the proceeds to the payment of certain promissory notes, given to said creditors and indorsed by J., his wife," to the amount of thirty cents on each dollar owed by said E. to his several creditors; then, after the payment of said notes, to deliver up to E. all that may remain of said property, to his use, discharged of said trust, "said creditors hereby agreeing to grant said E. a full discharge from all indebtedness upon the payment of said notes as aforesaid." The several creditors of E. signed this deed, placing against their names respectively the amount of their debts on account of which they had received the notes of E. indorsed by his wife, to the amount of thirty per cent. P, a creditor, who held a promissory note made by E., dated before and payable after the date of the deed, signed the deed, and against his signature was a certain sum, which was the amount of a book account due him, not including the note. For the amount of such account he had received notes of E. indorsed by his wife, but he never received any such notes for thirty per cent of the note above named. Held, in an action on the note by P. against E. that it was not barred by the deed. Preston v. Etter, 140 Mass. 465. See also Holmes v. Vinert, 1 Esp. 131, Britton v. Hughes, 15 Com. L. R. 488.

1. Harloe v. Foster, 53 N. Y. 385.

The plaintiff was indebted to the de fendant in £50 upon a bill of exchange drawn by the latter upon and accepted by the former. Before the bill arrived at maturity the plaintiff called a meeting of his creditors, which was attended by him on the part of the defendant. At the meeting it was agreed that the several creditors of the plaintiff should receive a composition of their debts; and accordingly a deed of composition and release was prepared and executed (among others) by B. on behalf of the defendant, and the amount of the composition was afterwards paid to the defendant. The holder of the plaintiff's acceptances afterwards sued the plaintiff thereon, and compelled him to pay the amount, with £6 13s. for interest, and £2 10s. for costs. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover from the defendant the amount of the bill and interest. Hawley v. Beveridge, 6 Scott N. R. 837.

But where a creditor held several notes of his debtor, and indorsed one of them to a third party, and afterwards and while said indorsed note belonged to the indorsee, made a composition agreement with his debtor, whereby he released and discharged him from all debts and sums of money then due, and owing from said debtor to him, stating the aggregate amount of such indebtedness, held, that this agreement would not affect the right of the creditor to collect from the debtor whatever sum he might afterwards have to pay, as indorser of the note, so indorsed before the execution of the composition agreement. Lipman v. Low, 78 Ill. 252.

And if a creditor, who is also an indorser of the debtor's note, executes a composition deed, and afterwards takes up the note, his right to recover upon it is not affected by the composition. Nichols v. Tracy, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 278.

2. Jones v. Wright, 71 Ill. 61.

3. Faza Kerly v. McKnight, 6 El. Bl. 795.

10. Retention of Sureties.—If a deed of composition with the principal debtor be voluntarily executed by the creditor without reservation, the surety will be discharged.<sup>1</sup> But if the deed contain reservation of remedies against the surety he will still be held.<sup>2</sup>

A necessary consequence of a reservation in a composition deed of a creditor's remedies against a surety is the continuance of the surety's right to be indemnified by the principal debtor, and this right will not be held to be abandoned unless a contract to abandon is proved.<sup>3</sup>

11. Duty and Liability of the Debtor.—The creditors are entitled to a strict construction of the composition instrument, and the terms and provisions of the deed must be strictly complied with by the debtor to be a bar to an action by the creditor for his whole debt. It is not enough that it be shown that the creditor may eventually receive from the debtor's property the full amount of his composition claim, if it is to be procured by a violation of the terms of the composition.<sup>4</sup> Unless, therefore, the debtor pay the amount provided for by the composition deed, on the day appointed, the original debt is revived.<sup>5</sup>

De Colyar on Guarantees, 362; Wilson v. Lloyd, L. R. 16 Eq. 60; Ex parte
Denning, Buck, 517; Boulton v.
Boulton, 18 Ves. 20; Duffy v. Orr, 5 Bligh
805; Ex parte Gifford, 6 Ves. 805;
Carstairs v. Buck, 560; Davidson
v. McGregor, 6 M. & W. 755; North v.
Field, 13 Q. B. 536.

Under the Bankrupt Act of June 22, 1843, a composition only exonerated the debtor, and did not discharge his sureties. Mason & H. Organ Co. v. Ban- croft, 4 Cent. L. J. 295; Guild v. Butler, Mass. 498.

In Thomas v. Courtney, 1 B. & A. the creditors of an insolvent agreed by instrument (not under seal) that they would accept in full satisfaction of their debts 12s. in the pound, payable in instalments, and would release him from all demands; one of the creditors, who signed for the whole amount of his debt, held at the time, as a security for it, a bill of exchange drawn by the debtor and accepted by a third person, the money due on this bill having been previously paid by the acceptor, it was held that the creditor might retain it, the instrument of composition not containing any stipulation for giving up securities, and the effect of it not being to extinguish the original debt.

Kearsley v. Cole, 16 M. & W. 128;
North v. Wakefield, 13 Q. B. 536; Kirby
Turner, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 242;
Hubbell v. Carpenter, 5 N. Y. 171.

A creditor, holding a security for his debt, may stipulate to have the benefit of it in addition to the amount of the composition offered by a debtor to his creditors; but he must either hold himself entirely aloof from the other creditors, or distinctly communicate with them on the subject, if he at all acts in common with them. Cullingworth v. Lloyd, 2

Beav. 385.

3. Close v. Close, 4 De G., Mac. & G.,
176; Hubbell v. Carpenter, 5 N. Y. 171.

4. Smythe v. Graydon, 29 How. Pr.
(N. Y.) 11; Haggerty v. Simpson, 1 E.
D. Smith (N. Y.), 67; Warbury v. Wil- cox, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 118; Hadley Falls
Bank v. May, 29 Hun (N. Y.), 404.

The debtor cannot set up the composition deed as a defence against the claim of any one creditor, unless he shall aver and prove that he performed it as towards all the creditors who were parties to it, not only towards the one who afterwards brings suit. Evans v. Gallantine, 57 Ind.
367.

5. Penniman v. Elliott, 27 Barb. (N.
Y.) 315; Mackenzie v. Mackenzie, 16
Ves. 372.

It is incumbent on the debtor to tender the notes agreed to be taken as a composition in order to bar the original claims, unless the creditors, by their acts, dispense with such tender. Stewart v.
Tipton, 56 Cal. 52.

Where, at a meeting of the creditors of A, it is agreed that a composition of 6s. in the pound should be accepted, and that promissory notes for the amount "shall be given within fourteen days, the creditors consenting thereto within that time," and A is sued for a debt due to one of the parties to the agreement, unless A can

But the mere fact that the composition notes were not given for the exact time agreed upon,<sup>1</sup> or that they were not tendered by the debtor until some time after the date agreed to be given for the notes,<sup>2</sup> is an immaterial variation, and not such a breach of the composition deed as to exempt the creditor from its obligation.

And if the creditor receive the amount provided for by the deed, after the day appointed, knowing that it was offered as payment of the compromise, this is a waiver of the forfeiture.<sup>3</sup>

Although a debtor, compounding with his creditors, give them the security of a third person for payment of part of the stipulated dividend, he is not discharged upon payment of that part only, if the residue continues unpaid.<sup>4</sup>

12. Secret Agreements with Creditors.—A creditor who unites with others in a composition deed enters into an obligation thereby, not only with the debtor, but with the other creditors who are parties; and any separate agreement by which he secures to himself advantages not enjoyed by the others, is a fraud upon them and void.<sup>5</sup> Such an agreement is void, although the effect of it is show a delivery or a tender of the notes he is liable for the whole debt. Oughton v. Trotter, 2 N. & M. 71.

So where a creditor has agreed to a composition, but failed to execute the release and apply for the composition notes, he is not precluded from recovering the amount of his original indebtedness, if it is shown that the debtor did not tender him the notes. Cranley v. Hillary, 2 M. & S. 120.

Where creditors, in consideration of a debtor assigning all his stock in trade and book debts to a trustee for the benefit of his creditors, agreed to execute releases as soon as the property should realize £238, held, that by this agreement the creditors had still a right of action, though they had taken a security from a purchaser of the stock to the amount of £223. Wiglesworth v. White, 1 Stark. 218.

But where a creditor, entitled to certain payments at stated periods, does not receive them accordingly, but is paid irregularly, and after calling attention to the irregularity receives further payments in the same way, but without objection, he has waived his right to insist that the terms should have been strictly complied with. Browning v. Crouse, 40 Mich. 339.

1. Renard v. Tuller, 4 Bosw. (N. Y.) 107.

2. Hall v. Merrill, 9 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 116.

Where it is provided that if any of the composition notes be not paid at maturity the original indebtedness shall revive, a mere notice that the notes will not be paid will not excuse a due presentment for payment, the other creditors being parties to the contract. Green v. McArthur, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 450.

3. Penniman v. Elliott, 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 315.

4. Walker v. Seaborne, 1 Taut. 326.

5. Townsend v. Newell, 22 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 164; Patterson v. Boehm, 4 P. St. 507; Lee v. Sellers, 81* Pa. St. 47; Lawrence v. Clark, 36 N. Y. 128; Prineo v. Higgins, 12 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 33; Wiggins v. Bush, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 30; Hughes v. Alexander, 5 Duer (N. Y.) 488; Williams v. Carrington, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 515; Carroll v. Shields, 4 E. 1; Smith (N. Y.), 466; Eldridge v. Stren, 2 J. & S. (N. Y.) 491; Bartleman Douglass, 1 Cranch (U. S.), 450; Fenn v. Dickey, 1 Flip. (U. S.) 34; Smith Owens, 21 Cal. 11; Bliss v. Mattison, N. Y. 22; Russell v. Rogers, 10 Wen (N. Y.) 473; Van Brunt v. Van Brunt, Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 14; Moses v. Katzeberger, 1 Handy (Ohio), 46; Way Langley, 15 Ohio St. 392; Goodwin Blake, 3 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 107; Trumb v. Tilton, 21 N. H. 128; Doughty Savage, 28 Conn. 146; Baldwin v. Roseman, 49 Conn. 105; Breck v. Cole, Sandf. (N. Y.) 79; Cockshott v. Benae, 2 T. R. 763; Howden v. Haigh, 3 P. D. 661; Leicester v. Rose, 4 East. 37; Jackson v. Lomas, 4 T. R. 166; Knig v. Hunt, 5 Bing. 429; Higgon v. Pitt, Exch. 312; Watts v. Hyde, 10 Jur. 12; Wood v. Barker, 11 Jur. N. S. 9; Geere v. Mare, 2 H. & C. 339; Smith to secure to the creditor the payment of more money than the other creditors were to receive, but only further security for the same sum.<sup>1</sup>

A creditor who is thus deceived has the right to consider the contract as rescinded, and sue on his original demand.<sup>2</sup> He may

Mann, 9 Ex. Ch. 535; Danglish v. Bennett, 8 B. & S. 1; Hart v. Smith, 38 Q. B. 25.

It is immaterial that all other creditors executed the deed before such creditor agreed to become a party on receiving security for the additional sum. Patterson v. Boehm, 4 Pa. St. 507.

Where the plaintiff, before signing a composition deed, by which the creditors of the defendant agreed to take the defendant's bills at long dates for their respective debts, stipulated without their knowledge for a bill of exchange, to be indorsed to him by the defendant for a larger sum, the whole agreement between the plaintiff and defendant is void, being fraudulent upon other creditors; the latter cannot recover upon the defendant's bills for the amount of the composition money, even although he received nothing on the bill indorsed to him by the defendant. Howden v. Hogg, 3 P. & D. 611.

And if, upon a composition between a debtor and his creditors, one accepts the composition, and, in addition, agrees that the debtor shall keep up a policy on his life for the ultimate payment of the remainder of the debt, such an agreement is void, unless every creditor assents, and the policy belongs to the representative of the debtor. Pfleger v. Browne, 12 Nev. 391.

But the mere fact that the debtor intends to pay some of his creditors unitarily in the composition deed in full, from his earnings, and that he therefore obtains no discharge from them, does not vitiate a discharge given by another creditor in consideration of payment of a fair percentage if there is no agreement made with creditors to be ultimately paid, tending to defraud the others, and the percentage paid to all is as much as the entire assets will justify. Argall v. Clark, 43 Conn. 160.

And where an insolvent has been legally released from his obligations by a composition with his creditors, the debt due of such creditors, who accepted the composition on the written condition that none of the other creditors should receive better terms, is not revived by the payment by the insolvent, after such release, of additional sums to other creditors. Re Sturgis, 16 Bankr. Reg. 304.

So where notes of the debtor, with the indorsement of a third person, were given for a portion of the debt, and accepted as satisfaction of the whole, and the creditor before accepting the same knew of an additional payment to another creditor, Held, that he could not thereafter claim the settlement was invalid. Bower v. Metz, 54 Iowa, 394.

1. Leicester v. Rose, 4 East, 372.

But in Feise v. Randall, 6 T. R. 146, it was agreed by a deed of composition between a trader and his creditors that the trader should give them his bills, accepted by a friend for ten shillings in the pound, payable in certain portions at fixed periods, and his own promissory notes for the remaining five shillings, and that the creditors should be at liberty to take his own notes only for their full demands, if they pleased. One of the creditors who signed the deed took bills from the debtor, accepted by his friend, for the whole fifteen shillings in the pound, payable at the same respective times as the bills agreed to be given by the deed of composition. The payment of these bills was resisted upon the ground that it was a security beyond that agreed for, and greater than the other creditors obtained; but the transaction was adjudged fair, the creditor not receiving by it more than the others.

2. Kahn v. Gumbert, 9 Ind. 430; Smith v. Stone, 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 310; Clarke v. White, 12 Pet. (U. S.) 178; Case v. Gerrish, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 50; Partridge v. Messer, 14 Gray (Mass.) 180; Saul v. Buck, 72 Ga. 254; Townsend v. Newell, 22 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 164; Brownsville Mfg. Co. v. Lockwood, 3 McCreary (U. S.), 608. Compare Page v. Carter, 16 N. H. 254.

A made a composition with his creditors, and received back from B, one of said creditors, his notes, the evidence of his indebtedness to B, and wrote across their face "paid." Under a secret agreement with certain of the creditors, A made to them payments in excess of the amounts named in the deed of composition. B brought suit upon the notes. Held, that he could maintain his action; that he was excused by the facts from making profert of the notes, and that A could not be heard to object that they were not filed with the petition. Com-sue for and recover the full amount of his original indebtedness less the amount received under the composition agreement. It is not essential to the right of action that the creditor should first rescind the composition agreement, and return the money he has received under it.<sup>1</sup>

But if a stranger, without the knowledge of the debtor, give his note to a creditor for an additional sum to induce him to sign a composition deed, this will not invalidate it, although the debtor subsequently pay the note.<sup>2</sup>

13. Securities for Preference Void.—If one of the creditors, before executing a composition deed, obtain from the debtor security for the residue of his demand, that security is void, because it is a fraud on the rest of the creditors. The principle is that in such cases each creditor must act openly. As the other creditors may have been induced to come into terms upon a belief that all were to be on the same footing, any private agreement for greater benefit to one is a fraud upon the rest, and hence invalid.<sup>3</sup>

Commerce Bank v. Haerber, 8 Mo. App. 171.

An attorney of a debtor, employed to effect a composition with the latter's creditors, gave his personal promise in writing, and afterwards paid to one of the creditors a sum in excess of the amount agreed on and accepted by the other creditors. Held, (1) that the knowledge of the attorney in the matter of giving such preference was, in law, the knowledge of the principal, and (2) that the failure of the attorney to disclose to another creditor the fact of such preference was the concealment of a material fact, and invalidated the composition. Bank of Commerce v. Haerber, 88 Mo. 37.

But for one creditor to secure fifty per cent in cash at once instead of seventy per cent on time, will avoid the deed; so held where the taking of the cash payment so embarrassed the debtor as to make it impossible for him to meet his payments to the other creditors as they matured. Bean v. Amsinck, 10 Blatch. (U. S.) 361.

1. Hefter v. Cahn, 73, Ill. 296; Enneking v. Stahl, 9 Mo. App. 390; Crandall v. Cochran, 3 Thom. & C. (N. Y.) 203; Beach v. Ollendorf, 1 Hill. (N. Y.) 41; Smith v. Solomon, 7 Daly (N. Y.), 216.

Where at the time of payment under a composition deed, the plaintiffs, in pursuance of a previous arrangement, received a sum of money from the debtor without the knowledge of the other creditors, larger than the amount stipulated in the deed, held, that in an action by the plaintiffs against the debtor, upon the original obligation, on the ground that the deed was fraudulently procured by the latter, the acceptance of the money was not a bar to the action. Elfelt v. Snow, 2 Saw. (U. S.) 94.

2. Babcock v. Dill, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 577. Compare Commerce Bank v. Haerber, 11 Mo. App. 475.

But where a party refused to sign a composition agreement to accept of his debtor a composition of ten shillings in the pound, but the debtor's brother offering to supply him with coals to the amount of the other ten shillings, he signed the composition agreement, and the other creditors knew nothing of the coal transaction, held, that he could not recover upon his promissory note for the amount of the ten shillings' composition. Knight v. Hunt, 5 Bing. 429. See also Solinger v. Earle, 82 N. Y. 393.

3. Bigelow on Fraud, 342; Fay v. Fay, 121 Mass. 561; Sternberg v. Bowma, 103 Mass. 325; Lawrence v. Clark, 36 N. Y. 128; Bliss v. Mattison, 45 N. Y. 2; Breck v. Cole, 4 Sand. (N. Y.) 7; Hughes v. Alexander, 5 Duer (N. Y.) 48; Eldridge v. Strenz, 2 J. & Sp. (N. Y.) 49; Case v. Geinsh, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 49; Priner v. Higgins, 12 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 33; Carroll v. Shields, 4 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 466; Crandall v. Cochran, 3 Th. & C. (N. Y.) 203; Fenner v. Dickey, 1 Fla. (U. S.) 34; Jackson v. Davison, 4 Bar. & Ald. 695; Wells v. Girling, 1 Brad. B. 452; Steinman v. Magnus, 11 East. 393; Leicester v. Rose, 4 East. 380; Mason v. Stock, 6 Ves. 300; Ex parte Saller, 15 Ves. 55; Lewis v. Jones, 4 B. C. 511; Cockshott v. Bennett, 2 T. 763; Howden v. Haigh, 3 P. & D. 66; Wells v. Girling, 4 Moore, 78; Geere v. Mare, 2 H. & C. 339.

CREDITORS—COMPOUNDING OFFENCES.

Such an agreement is void, not only for the excess, but in toto, being in fraud of third persons.<sup>1</sup>

And so money paid by the debtor under such a fraudulent agreement may be recovered back from the creditor in an action for money had and received.<sup>2</sup>

4. New Promise.—A debt released upon an accord and satisfaction by a composition assented to by all the creditors is extinguished, and can neither sustain a suit nor form the consideration of a new promise.<sup>3</sup>

COMPOUNDING OFFENCES. (See also ACCESSORY; CONTRACTS.)—1. Definition.—Compounding a Felony is the act of a party immediately aggrieved who agrees with a thief or other person that he will not prosecute him on condition that he returns him the stolen goods, or who takes a reward not to prosecute.<sup>4</sup>

Held with reference to a mortgage. Man v. Gamble, 26 N. J. Ex. 494; Rey v. Hunt, 119 Mass. 279.

Moses v. Katzenberger, 1 Handy 46; Howden v. Haigh, 11 A. & 663.

Bishop on Insolvent Debtors, 465; Th v. Cuff, 6 M. & S. 160; Horton v. Th, 11 M. & W. 492; Atkinson v. Th, 6 H. & N. 778; Gilmour v. Th, 49 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 198; Th v. Higgins, 12 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.)

Defendants holding as security for a debt due to them from D. a policy of assurance effected by D., refused to join in a composition deed, by which D. was to be released from his debts on paying 8s. the pound, unless D. assigned the policy to them; D. assigned it, and the defendants then executed the composition deed. Held, that such assignment was a fraud, and D. having become bankrupt, that his assignees were entitled to recover from defendants the money they had received on the policy, notwithstanding the 8s. in the pound never paid. Alsager v. Spalding, 4 L. N. C. 407.

It is in Solinger v. Earle, 82 N. Y. 393, the doctrine that where a debtor himself or a near relative, out of compassion for him, pays money exacted by a creditor as a condition of his signing a composition, he may be regarded as having acted under duress, and is not equally bound with the creditor, so that he may recover it back, is doubted. The court held that it cannot, at least, be invoked in favor of one remotely related by marriage to the debtor. The facts were that the plaintiff, who was a brother-in-law of the firm of N. & Co., to induce the defendants, who were creditors of that firm, to unite with the other creditors in a composition of its debts, secretly agreed to and did give them his promissory note for a portion of their debt beyond the amount to be paid by the composition agreement. Defendants transferred the note before due to a bona fide holder, and plaintiff was compelled to pay. Held, that the agreement was a fraud upon the other creditors; that it was not divested of its fraudulent character by the fact that it was made, not by the debtor, but by a third person, and that an action was not maintainable to recover back the amount so paid.

8. Evans v. Bell, 15 Lea (Tenn.), 569; Stafford v. Bacon, 1 Hill (N.Y.), 532.

4. Bonvier's L. D., title Compounding a Felony; State v. Duhammel, 2 Harr. (Del.) 532; Bothwell v. Brown, 51 Ill. 234; Chandler v. Johnson, 39 Ga. 85.

Where a party is robbed and he knows the felon and takes his goods again or otherwise amends upon agreement not to prosecute, such compounding was anciently called "theft bated" and a party so compounding the felony was considered an accessory to the fact. 4 Black. Com. 133.

The bare taking again of a man's own goods which have been stolen (without favor shown to the thief) is no offence. Hawk. P. C. b. 1, c. 59, s. 7; Bothwell v. Brown, 51 Ill. 234; Taylor v. Cottrell, 16 Ill. 93.

The holder in good faith of a forged note, received from the forger as collateral security, may lawfully deliver it to the forger upon payment being made by him; and although such delivery necessarily puts it in the power of the forger to destroy or suppress the paper, and to that extent to hinder and prevent his prosecution, and although such necessary consequence must be presumed to be intended by the holder of the paper when he so delivers it, yet such delivery is not the compounding of a felony. And in this case, where the alleged forger paid the notes by the sale and transfer to the holder thereof of certain personal property, held, that such sale could not be set aside by an attaching creditor of the alleged forger, on the ground that the consideration thereof was illegal, and that the transaction was therefore void, and vested in the transferee no title to the property. Deere v. Wolff, 65 Iowa, 32.

2. Compounding a Misdemeanor.—The offence of compounding is not restricted to compounding felonies. Compounding a misdemeanor is also indictable.<sup>1</sup>

An attorney who had collected money for his client neglected to pay it over and was threatened with criminal proceedings, a warrant for his arrest being taken out. The attorney then gave his note with security for the amount. Held, that the note was not given to compound an offence, although a refusal to pay over by an attorney was made a misdemeanor by statute. The statute allows the injured party to receive his own from the wrongdoer. Ford v. Cratty, 52 Ill. 313.

A deed to P. was given after J.'s release from arrest made upon a charge of P. and his partner that J. while in their employ had committed embezzlement of their money. J. confessed having taken about $1500 from them. Held, although the deed to B. may have been given in part in consideration of the withdrawal of the criminal complaint, there was another consideration, i.e., the moneys embezzled, which is enough. There was no proof of any unconscionable advantage taken; and, moreover, this suit is against innocent purchaser for value without notice. Wilcox v. Daniels, 3 Atl. Repr. (R. I.) 204.

But accepting a promissory note signed by a party guilty of larceny as a consideration for not prosecuting is sufficient to constitute a compounding of a felony, although the note is illegal and void, and may never be paid. Com. v. Pease, 16 Mass. 91.

It is not necessary that the benefit of the consideration should come to the one making the agreement not to prosecute. If the defendant corruptly exacted a consideration for an agreement not to prosecute a felony to which he was knowing, he is guilty although he took the consideration for another. State v. Ruthven, 58 Iowa, 121.

Neither a justice of the peace, prosecuting witness, nor prosecuting attorney has power to compromise a felony. Ivinson v. Pease, 1 Wy. Ter. 277.

By duress of imprisonment on a criminal charge, with threats of future prosecution if a certain sum of money be not paid him, and promise to dismiss the prosecution on such payment being made, A. induces B. to procure for him negotiable promissory notes for said sum from X., a friend of B., and then causes the prosecution to be dismissed, and B. is charged. B. thereupon gives X. his (B.'s) own notes secured by mortgage for the same amount, and X. pays his notes to A. when due. B. is not guilty of said offence; the complaint against him fails to charge him with any offence; the warrant on which he was arrested is void on its face; and both complaint and warrant are colorable only. Held, that the facts do not show any compounding of a felony. Heckman v. Swartz, 50 Wis. 26.

The mere fact that the defendant was an officer does not shield him from being indicted under a charge of compounding a felony. State v. Ruthven, 58 Iowa 121.

It is not compounding a felony for an official to account for moneys as received from his predecessor, and himself assure their payment upon the latter's assurance that he will make the amount good if the accounts are incorrect. Van Ness Hadsell, 54 Mich. 560.

A party indicted for compounding larceny and agreeing to withhold evidence cannot plead the acquittal of the person charged with the larceny in bar of his own conviction. But neither is the record of a conviction of the criminal conclusive proof against the compounder. Such evidence may be rebutted. People v. Buckland, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 50; Maybee v. Avery, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 35; State v. Duhammel, 2 Harr. (Del.) 53; Biddulph v. Ather, 2 Wils. 23.

1. Russell on Crimes (9th Am. Ed.), 21; Jones v. Rice, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 440; Edcombe v. Rodd, 5 East, 301; McMahon v. Smith, 27 Conn. 221; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 67; Pearce v. Wilson, 111 Pa. St. 14; s. c., 56 Am. Rep. 243.

A judgment confessed by warrant attorney, in consideration of stifling prosecution for forgery, is void, and it was error for the court to refuse to open such judgment and permit the defendant to show the illegal consideration, although they were parties thereto. Bredin's A.

Pa. St. 241; s. c., 37 Am. Rep.

There can be no recovery by one for injury and services, the purpose and policy of whose employment was to obstruct the administration of justice, by inducing State witnesses, and by inducing the State's attorney to hold back in discharge of his official duty in prosecuting the defendant charged with adultery. W. v. Tucker, 53 Vt. 338; s. c., 38 Rep. 684.

The statutes, however, provide that a person is committed or indicted for assault and battery, or other misdemeanor, for which the party injured may obtain remedy by civil action, if the party appears before a magistrate or court and acknowledges satisfaction for the injury sustained, a stay of proceedings is ordered. Partridge v. Hood, 120 Mass. 403; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 524; Noble v. Bles, 13 S. & R. (Pa.) 319, 322.

The law of Oregon allows misdemeanor to be compromised, but in compromise of prosecution for larceny it is unlawful. The person whose property has been stolen to exact or receive from the thief committing the larceny anything more than the property stolen or its value and the necessary expense of recovering it. Saxon v. Conger, 6 Oreg.

An acknowledgment of satisfaction does not entitle the defendant to be discharged, but leaves it to the discretion of the magistrate or court whether a stay of proceedings is consistent with the interests of public justice. Partridge v. Hood, 120 Mass. 403; s. c., 21 Am. Rep. 524; W. v. Dowdican's Bail, 115 Mass. 133; W. v. Hunter, 14 La. Ann. 71; McDanate, 27 Ga. 419; Statham v. State, 507, Bone v. State, 18 Ark. 109. An offence for an assault and battery or misdemeanor, except in certain cases, may be compromised either before indictment, but not after conviction. People v. Bishop, 5 Wend. (N.Y.) 578; Price v. Summers, 5 N. J. L. 578.

The right to stifle a prosecution does not depend on the question whether the offence is a felony or a misdemeanor. All authorities hold that an agreement to compound a felony will not be enforced, but any security based upon such a transaction is void. But as to misdemeanors a distinction has been made. Authorities hold that those misdemeanors which are personal in their nature, between the parties, such as based upon a common assault, unaccompanied with riot or intent to kill, may be compromised. McMahon v. Smith, 47

Conn. 221; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 67; Sharon v. Gager, 46 Conn. 189; Mathison v. Hanks, 2 Hill (S. Car.), 625; Maurer v. Mitchell, 9 W. & S. (Pa.) 69; Robinson v. Crenshaw, 2 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 276; Merrill v. Fleming, 42 Ala. 234; Moog v. Strang, 69 Ala. 98; Price v. Summers, 2 South. (N. J.) 578; Holcomb v. Simpson, 8 Vt. 141. But where the offence is in whole or in part of a public nature, nearly all the authorities hold that no agreement to stifle a public prosecution for it can be valid. Fay v. Outley, 6 Wis. 42; Prough v. Entriiken, 11 Pa. St. 81; Sharp v. Philadelphia Warehouse Co., 14 Phila. (Pa.) 513; Jones v. Rice, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 440; Com. v. Johnson, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 454; Hinesborough v. Sumner, 9 Vt. 23; Bowen v. Buck, 28 Vt. 308; Shaw v. Reed, 30 Me. 105; Shaw v. Spooner, 9 N. H. 197; Clark v. Ricker, 14 N. H. 44; Kimbrough v. Lane, 11 Bush (Ky.), 556; Peed v. McKee, 42 Iowa, 649; Buck v. First Nat. Bank, 27 Mich. 293; Gardner v. Maxey, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 90; Kier v. Lehman, 6 C. B. 308.

A promissory note given in consideration of an agreement not to prosecute under the bastardy act is valid. Maxwell v. Campbell, 8 Ohio St. 265; Holcomb v. Simpson, 8 Vt. 141; Maurer v. Mitchell, 9 W. & S. (Pa.) 69; Wyant v. Leshner, 23 Pa. St. 338; Harter v. Johnson, 16 Ind. 271; Parker v. Way, 15 N. H. 45; Allyn v. Allyn, 108 Ind. 327.

Plaintiff having commenced an action against defendant, her husband, for divorce a vinculo, and having examined a witness conditionally, who testified to the acts of adultery charged, in consideration of his executing to her father, for her benefit, a note for $1000, agreed to and did discontinue the action without costs. In an action upon the note, held, that it was given for a good consideration, and was valid; that the transaction could not be regarded as against public policy. Adams v. Adams, 91 N. Y. 381; s. c., 43 Am. Rep. 675.

The defendant kept a box of smoking tobacco on his counter for the gratuitous use of the public. The plaintiff was in the habit of filling his pipe therefrom, as was known to the defendant. The defendant by way of joke put gunpowder with that tobacco, and the plaintiff, filling his pipe therefrom, was injured by the explosion. The plaintiff made a claim against the defendant for damages, and the defendant executed to him the note in suit therefor. Held valid. Parker v. Enslow, 102 Ill. 272; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 588.

A note given in settlement of damages claimed for criminal intimacy with the wife of the payee, on consideration that the payee should never after refer to or speak of such intimacy, was held valid. Wells v. Sutton, 85 Ind. 70.

3. Compounding Information on Penal Statutes is an offence of equivalent nature in criminal causes, and is besides an additional misdemeanor against public justice by contributing to make laws odious to the people.<sup>1</sup>

4. Contracts made in Consideration of Compounding an Offence Enforceable.—No contracts, as promissory notes, bonds, mortgages or other securities, of which the offence of compounding is the consideration either in whole or in part, can be enforced.

Where the offence is in part of a public nature, as a crime, an agreement to forbear bringing a civil action for damages may be a good consideration for a note and mortgage if no promise or understanding is involved not to prosecute for or give evidence of the crime. Breathwit v. Rogers, 32 Ark. 758. But it is doubtful whether an agreement to satisfy the private damage inflicted by an assault will be valid if embracing a stipulation not to prosecute for the offence against the public peace. 1 Smith L.C. (8th Am. Ed.) 735, citing Jones v. Rice, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 440; Corley v. Williams, 1 Bailey (S. Car.) 588; Gardner v. Maxey, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 90; Wells v. Thompson, 50 Ala. 84; Peeds v. McKee, 42 Iowa, 689; Haines v. Lewis, 54 Iowa, 301; Kimbrough v. Lane, 11 Bush (Ky.) 556; Morrill v. Goodenow, 65 Me. 178; Partridge v. Hood, 120 Mass. 403; Lyon v. Waldo, 36 Mich. 345; Lindsay v. Smith, 78 N. Car. 328; Bank v. Kirk, 90 Pa. St. 49; Bredin's Appeal, 92 Pa. St. 241; Cain v. Southern Expr. Co., 1 Baxt. (Tenn.) 315.

In Vanover v. Thompson, 4 Jones (N. Car.), 485, it was held that all contracts founded upon agreements to compound felonies, or to stifle prosecutions of "any kind," are void, and cannot be enforced. See Lindsay v. Smith, 78 N. Car. 328; s. c., 24 Am. Rep. 463; Garner v. Qualls, 4 Jones (N. Car.), 223.

In Lindsay v. Smith, 78 N. Car. 328; s. c., 24 Am. Rep. 463, the court said, "A party cannot take care of his private interest by depriving the State of a witness or an active prosecutor, which is the means relied on for the conviction of offenders; much less can he pollute the very fountains of criminal justice by suppressing an indictment already instituted against him." Citing Thompson v. Whitman, 4 Jones (N. Car.), 47; Ingram v. Ingram, 4 Jones (N. Car.), 188; Blythe v. Lovinggood, 2 Ired. (N. Car.) 20.

A contract will not be declared void and the cause be reversed on the ground that the only consideration therefore is the compromise of a felony, where it does not clearly appear from the evidence whether the consideration for the contract was a forbearance to prosecute criminally or in a civil action for damages. Malli v. Willett, 57 Iowa, 306; Wilkins v. Riley, 47 Miss. 306.

Where an assignee of a bankrupt appropriated money received as assets, and gave a note to his co-assignee in consideration that the co-assignee should not press proceedings instituted against him for the protection of the creditors, such note was held to be valid. Ash v. Fisher, 124 Mass. 414.

A note given for the suppression of prosecution is not necessarily for an illegal reason without good consideration, unless it appears that the prosecution was for a criminal offence. Soule v. Bonney, 128 Me. 128.

The public always has an interest in the fair trial of causes, so that not only the furtherance of agreements to suppress testimony are void. Fallows v. Taylor, 7 T. R. 475; Swan v. Chandler, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 97; Hoyt v. Macon, 2 Col. 50.

1. 4 Blacks. Com. 136; 1 Russell's Crimes, 197; Keir v. Leeman, 9 Q. B. 392; Hinesburgh v. Sumner, 9 Vt. 2.

It is, however, in the discretion of the court to allow an informer or plaintiff to bring a popular action on a penal statute to compound upon such terms as they may think fit; and it is a general rule in the exercise of this discretion to require, as one of the terms of granting leave to compound, that a moiety of the penalty given to the informer be paid, unless under special circumstances, when leave to discontinue on payment of the costs only will be granted. Bradway v. Le Worthy, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 251; Minton v. Woodworth, 11 Jo. (N. Y.) 474. See Sneed v. Com., 61 Ky. 338.

2. Com. v. Pease, 16 Mass. 91; Com. v. Johnson, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 454; Boyd v. Wood, 1 Bay (S. Car.) 239; Corley v. Williams, 1 Bailey (S. Car.) 588; Mason v. Hanks, 2 Hill L. (S. Car.) 10; Smith v. Pinney, 32 Vt. 282; Pierce v. Kibbee, 51 Vt. 559; Bowen v. Buck

308; Mattocks v. Owen, 5 Vt. 42; Sburgh v. Sumner, 9 Vt. 23; s. c., 31 Dec. 599; Bailey v. Buck, 11 Vt. Plumer v. Smith, 5 N. H. 553; s. c., m. Dec. 478; Shaw v. Spooner, 9 s. c., 32 Am. Dec. 348; Clark v. Coker, 14 N. H. 44; Coburn v. Odell, H 553; Ozanne v. Haber, 30 La. Pl. 2, 1384; Cameron v. McFar- 2 Law Rep. (N. Car.) 415; s. c., 6 Dec. 566; Lindsay v. Smith, 78 N. 328; s. c., 24 Am. Rep. 463; King v. nants, 71 N. Car. 469; Raguet v. Ohio, 76; Den v. Moore, 5 N. J. 7; Steuben County Bank v. Mathew- 5 Hill (N. Y.), 249; Pearce v. Wil- 11 Pa. St. 14; s. c., 56 Am. Rep. Nat. Bank of Oxford v. Kirk, 90 St. 49; Porter v. Jones, 6 Coldw. 313; Cain v. Southern Exp. Co., mn. 315. Allison v. Hess, 28 Iowa, 328; Reed v. McKee, 42 Iowa, 689; s. c., n Rep. 631; Shaw v. Reed, 30 Me. Soule v. Bonney, 37 Me. 128; Foley v. eene, 14 R. I. 618; s. c., 51 Am. 419; Averbeck v. Hall, 14 Bush 505; Kimbrough v. Lane, 11 Bush 556; Gardner v. Maxey, 9 B. (Ky.) 90; Swan v. Chandler, 8 B. (Ky.) 97; Henderson v. Palmer, 579; s. c., 22 Am. Rep. 117; Sny- Willey, 33 Mich. 495; Wisner v. ell, 38 Mich. 278; Murphy v. Bot- 40 Mo. 67; Sumner v. Summers, 340; Baker v. Farris, 61 Mo. 389; n v. Padgett, 36 Ga. 609; Puckett v. nemore, 55 Ga. 235; Breathwit v. s, 32 Ark. 758; Collier v. Waugh, d. 456; Ricketts v. Harvey, 78 Ind. s. c., 106 Ind. 564; Crowder v. Reed, d. 1; Wynne v. Whisenant, 37 Ala. ight v. Rindskopf, 43 Wis. 344; v. Leeman, 6 Q. B. 308; Bayley v. Williams, 4 Giff. 638; Galton v. Tay- T R. 475; Kirk v. Strickwood, 4 Ad. 421. Compare Bibb v. Hitch- 49 Ala. 468; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 288. promissory note given for com- ing a public prosecution for a mis- nor is founded upon an illegal con- tion, and void. Jones v. Rice, 18 (Mass.) 440; s. c., 29 Am. Dec. 612; v. Pomeroy, 4 Allen (Mass.), 534; v. Richards, 29 Conn. 232; Hinds v. amberlin, 6 N. H. 225; Porter v. s, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 343; Oakford v. on, 2 Miles (Pa.), 203; Jackson v. k, 2 Miles (Pa.), 362; McGowen v. 17 Tex. 195.

complaint to cancel a note alleged to been executed at the demand of and and received by the defendant "in satisfaction and compromise of the of larceny, robbery, and embezzlement," with which said defendant charged the maker, etc., tenders an issue to which is applicable an instruction that if the defendant took the note under an agreement, express or implied, that he would not prosecute the maker for such crime, and without any other consideration, the jury should find for the plaintiff. Stout v. Turner, 102 Ind. 418; s. c., 3 West. Repr. 303.

It is not necessary that the fact that the note was given for compounding an offence be expressed on the face of the note to make it void. Gardner v. Maxey, 9 B. Monr. (Ky.) 90.

Though a bond be given to secure a valid debt, yet if obtained under an agreement to compound a felony, it is void. Steuben County Bank v. Mathewson, 5 Hill (N. Y.), 249.

A contract to pay one for the use of his influence in securing the consent of a prosecutor to dismiss certain prosecutions for felonies, is contrary to public policy; and a declaration which seeks to recover for services so rendered is demurrable. Rhodes v. Neal, 64 Ga. 704; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 93.

A contract whereby an attorney-at-law undertakes, for a contingent fee, to procure a settlement of a criminal charge for fornication, is against the policy of the law, and cannot be enforced. Ormerod v. Dearman, 100 Pa. St. 561; s. c., 45 Am. Rep. 391.

Even a note partly given to secure the acquittal of one prosecuted for a felony cannot be enforced. Ricketts v. Harvey, 106 Ind. 564. Compare Haynes v. Rudd, 102 N. Y. 372.

The money for which the note was given may be actually due the payee, as in case of an embezzlement; but if the consideration for the note is even in part the abandonment or prevention of criminal proceedings, the instrument is illegal and void. Godwin v. Crowell, 56 Ga. 566; Taylor v. Jaques, 106 Mass. 291; Buck v. First Nat'l Bk., 27 Mich. 293.

But if there is no agreement to cheat the criminal law, and the money is really due, the note is good. Cohoes v. Cropsey, 55 N. Y. 685; Von Windisch v. Klaus, 46 Conn. 433.

Money paid in consideration of compounding a felony cannot be recovered back. Daimouth v. Bennett, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 541; Collins v. Lane, 80 N. Y. 627.

Where a person has voluntarily, i. e., without the coercion of force or threats, given his promissory note to compound a crime, and has been compelled to pay the same, it having been transferred to a bona-fide holder for value before maturity, he cannot maintain an action against the one to whom the note was so given to recover back the moneys paid. Haynes v. Rudd, 83 N. Y. 251. And see also same case, 102 N. Y. 372; s. c., 55 Am. Rep. 815.

Where a convict pays money to another to secure a pardon, he cannot, after the contract is executed, recover back the money paid. In such a case it is immaterial that the contract was made while the civil rights of the convict were suspended, or that the parties were not in pari delicto. O'Reilly v. Cleary, 8 Mo. App. 186.

If A deposits with B money to be paid to C when C shall have compounded a felony, C cannot maintain an action against B for the money. English v. Rumsey, 32 Hun (N. Y.), 486. But if B does not so pay it, but converts it to his own use, he cannot retain it as against A on the ground that the contract with C was illegal. Kiewert v. Rindskopf, 46 Wis. 481.

A receipt in full given in consideration of stifling a criminal prosecution is void. Bailey v. Buck, 11 Vt. 252.

Where two or more informations are pending against the same person for unlawful sales of intoxicating liquors, an agreement between the defendant and the prosecuting attorney that if the defendant will plead guilty to one of the informations the fine shall be only a certain amount, and the other information shall be dismissed, and the defendant's permit shall not be forfeited, is a corrupt agreement, and the defendant who is misled by thus corruptly purchasing his indulgence is not entitled to relief. Golden v. State, 49 Ind. 424.

An agreement with one of several jointly indicted that in case he will testify fully and candidly the facts will be presented to the court with a recommendation on the part of the prosecutor or prosecuting officer that a nolle prosequi be entered as to him, is not void as against public policy. Nickelson v. Wilson, 60 N. Y. 362.

An agreement by one under sentence for crime, to deliver notes and money to the prosecuting witness on condition of signing a petition for pardon and the granting of such petition, or a subsequent discharge on a new trial, is void. Haines v. Lewis, 54 Iowa, 301; s. c., 37 Am. Rep. 202. But an attorney may lawfully agree to do "what he can" to procure a pardon, and can recover for services rendered accordingly. It is to be presumed that proper acts only were contemplated. Bremsen v. Engler, 49 N. Y. Super. Ct. 41; Meadow v. Bird, 22 Ga. 246.

A promissory note, given to secure restoration of stolen property, is void; a part of its consideration is an agreement not to search the house of the thief for the property before the next pending negotiations for a settlement of the matter. Merrill v. Carr, 60 N. H. 1.

A promissory note and a mortgage were given in consideration that a prosecution for a felony should be discontinued. The mortgage was afterward foreclosed by a proceeding in which a waiver of consideration could not be pleaded as a defence, and the property was sold to an agent of the mortgagee. Held, that the consideration of the note and mortgage was illegal and void; and that the court of equity would cancel the note and mortgage, and set aside the foreclosure and the sale. Henderson v. Palmer, 111 Ill. 579; s. c., 22 Am. Rep. 117.

No action can be maintained upon a promissory note, given by a person who was under arrest on a complaint for larceny of property exceeding in value $100, by the owner of the property alleged to have been stolen, under an agreement that a complaint shall be placed on file, the plaintiff having received the note with notice of the circumstances; and the question of the guilt or innocence of the accused person is not open in such action. Gorham v. Keyes, 137 Mass. 583.

If it be alleged that a bond was given in consideration of an agreement to suppress or in any way embarrass the course of a criminal prosecution then pending against the felon, the plea is sufficient though it do not aver that a felony in fact been committed; but where the pendency of criminal proceedings is stated, the plea must show the actual commission of the felony; a mere threat to commence a prosecution will not sustain the defence. Steuben County B. v. Mathewson, 5 Hill (N. Y.), 249; Clinton v. Henton, 9 Wis. 442, Keith v. B. B., 16 Ill. App. 121; State v. Ruthven, 10 Iowa, 121; Conderman v. Hicks, 3 L. (N. Y.) 108; Fribly v. State, 42 Ohio 205; Ford v. Cratty, 52 Ill. 313; Platt v. Gunn, 2 Woods (U. S.), 372. See Gardner v. Maxey, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 90.

One cannot be directly or collaterally adjudged guilty of compounding a felony unless it has been established that he or other party to the unlawful compact was guilty of the felony. It is not sufficient that he be charged or indicted merely. Deere v. Wolff, 65 Iowa, 32.

An answer, alleging that a promissory note was executed in consideration of an agreement to suppress a prosecution for a felony, is sufficient without averring the accused had actually committed crime charged. Crowder v. Reed, 80 Mo. 1; Baker v. Farris, 61 Mo. 389.

Where one alleges that a contract could be avoided on the ground that it was made to compound a felony, it must be shown that there was an agreement to prosecute, and it must appear by a preponderance of evidence that a crime was actually committed. Threats of execution unless a certain security was given will not justify an inference that if security was given the agreement was that no prosecution would follow. People v. Jefferson Fire Insurance Co., 124 N. Y. St. 251.

One may take a note from another for what he owes him, though for money embezzled; but, if he procure the note to be executed upon an agreement not to execute him for the embezzlement, the contract will be illegal and void. Martin v. Tucker, 25 Ark. 279.

A clerk in a post-office embezzled funds which the postmaster was liable to the government. To secure himself the postmaster induced the clerk to give him a note with surety, he agreeing not to execute criminally for the embezzlement. Held, that the note was valid and the surety liable. The consideration notwithstanding the agreement to refrain from the execution, but the debt owed for the amount of the embezzlement. Bibb v. Brock, 49 Ala. 468; s. c., 20 Am. Rep. 288.

One having robbed the plaintiff bank, a surety of B. was induced to execute to the plaintiff promissory notes in consideration of a promise by the plaintiff to petition the court to mitigate the punishment. Held, that the notes were against public policy, and not enforceable by the plaintiff. Buck v. First Nat. Bank, 27 N. J. 293; s. c., 15 Am. Rep. 189.

Where, without an agreement to prevent prosecution, a note given to procure discharge from arrest for theft is illegal and void. McMahon v. Smith, 47 Conn. 288. Bowen v. Buck, 28 Vt. 308; Ozarne v. Barber, 30 La. Ann. 384; Couderman v. Hicks, 3 Lans. (N. Y.) 108. Or one to prevent the prosecution for forgery of a note of the maker. National Bank of Pa. v. Kirk, 90 Pa. St. 49.

A mortgage executed upon consideration that the mortgagees should obtain from the governor, even by fair means, a nolle prosequi to be entered in a prosecution against a third party, and in the issuance of which the mortgagors are interested, is against public policy and void. Key v. Collier, 7 Md. 273; s. c., 61 Dec. 346.

A bond executed by the prosecutor to pay the costs of a criminal action, the matter being then compromised by entering a nolle prosequi, and the accused paying the prosecutor a sum of money, is against public policy and void. Guilford Co. Commrs. v. March, 89 N. Car. 268.

A husband agreed, in consideration that his wife should prosecute to final judgment a suit for divorce, to make no defence thereto, and to convey certain land to her. Held, upon her suit in equity to have a mistake in the deed corrected, that the contract was against public policy, and that therefore the court would not interfere. Phillips v. Thorp, 10 Oreg. 494.

The owner of a distillery, indicted for defrauding the revenue, agreed to pay his bookkeeper, who knew all the transactions, his salary and travelling expenses as long as he kept out of the jurisdiction and avoided service of process. Held, that the agreement was unlawful, and that the bookkeeper could recover nothing thereon—not even his expenses. Bierbauer v. Wirth, 10 Biss. C. C. (U. S.) 60.

Where a mortgage is executed with an understanding by the parties that a part of the consideration thereof is that certain criminal proceedings shall be stopped, the agreement vitiates the mortgage, and this irrespective of the question whether the criminal proceedings are stopped or prosecuted to judgment; and where it is executed without any express agreement on the part of the mortgagee that in consideration thereof criminal proceedings shall not be instituted, and yet there are allegations and representations in relation to such criminal proceedings made by the mortgagee which are intended to and actually do deceive the mortgagor, and in consequence said mortgagor, relying on said mortgagee's statement that no criminal proceedings will be instituted, executes the mortgage, the subsequent institution of such proceedings will relieve the said mortgagor from liability. A was the president of an unincorporated savings-bank, whereof his son B was cashier. Both A and B were guilty of embezzlement of the bank's funds, whereupon on complaint of the directors an indictment was found against B, and criminal proceedings also threatened against A. At a meeting of the stockholders to raise a fund for the payment of depositors and creditors, C, another son of A, subscribed $4000 himself, and $2000 on behalf of his mother D, without the latter's authority. These subscriptions C made at the request of E, a director of the bank, who stated that he believed and

6. A Misdemeanor.—Compounding an offence, although formerly punished very severely, is now generally considered to be a misdemeanor, and punished with fine and imprisonment. The punishment for the offence is regulated by the statutes.<sup>1</sup> was satisfied it would stop the prosecutions against A and B if C could get his mother, D, to pay the sums subscribed. C having subsequently notified D of his subscription on her behalf, D said she would agree to it if it would stop the prosecutions. E subsequently called upon D to induce her to execute a mortgage to him for $6000. D stated that she would not sign the mortgage till the criminal matters were fixed up. E replied that if she signed it he firmly believed it would settle the whole criminal business, and if she did not it would be the worst thing she ever did. D then signed the mortgage with the understanding that the bank would not appear against her son B or prosecute her husband A. If she had not so understood she testified that she would not have executed the mortgage. Afterwards a nolle prosequi was entered in the prosecution against B, and on complaint of the bank an indictment was found against A and B for conspiracy, on which they were tried, convicted, and sentenced. The mortgage being subsequently assigned by E to the trustee of the bank, a scire facias was issued thereon against D. Held, that it was for the jury to say whether an agreement to desist from the criminal prosecutions did not constitute part of the consideration of the mortgage, in which event the mortgage would be vitiated because based on an illegal consideration. Held, further, even if this were not the case, that it was for the jury to say whether the plaintiff had not induced the defendant to execute the mortgage by representing that the criminal prosecutions would not be pushed, in which event the actual pushing of such prosecutions would relieve the defendant from liability. Held, further, that under the circumstances the assignee of the mortgage occupied no higher ground than the assignor. Riddle v. Hall, 99 Pa. St. 116.

7. Taking Rewards for Helping to Recover Stolen Goods—Advertising Rewards, etc.—Similar to the offence of compounding a felony is that of taking a reward for the return of stolen property, and advertising a reward for the same purpose.

Where the consideration for a contract is the compounding of a felony neither party can obtain relief in a court of equity. The parties will be left as found. Allison v. Hess, 28 Iowa, 388; Wilcox v. Daniels, 3 Atl. Repr. (R. I.) 204.

1. 1 Russell on Crimes (9th Ed.), 133; 4 Black. Com. 133; Porter v. Jones, Coldw. (Tenn.) 313; State v. Dandy, Brev. (S. Car.) 395; Com v. Pease, Mass. 91; Jones v. Rice, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 440; Plumer v. Smith, 5 N. H. 553; Bowell v. Brown, 51 Ill. 234.

To attempt to induce a witness on part of the State not to attend a public prosecution, even where such witness had not been served with a subpoena, was known to be a material witness and was relied on, was held to be an indictable offence. State v. Keyes, 8 Vt. 57.

By the New York Penal Code the punishment of the offence of compounding a felony or a misdemeanor is graded according to the magnitude of the offence compounded. By this code it is considered either a felony or a misdemeanor. N. Y. Penal Code, § 125; Cushman v. Trenchard, 58 Barb. (N. Y.) 168; Daimouth v. Bennett, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 541.

8. Whosoever shall corruptly take money or reward, directly or indirectly under pretence or upon account of helping any person to any chattel, money, valuable security, or other property whatsoever, which shall by any felony or misdemeanor have been stolen, taken, detained, extorted, embezzled, converted or disposed of as in this act before mentioned, shall, unless he shall have used all due diligence to cause the offender to be brought to trial for the same, be guilty of felony. Upon an indictment under this statute it is not necessary to show that the prisoner had any connection with the commission of the previous felony; it is sufficient if the evidence satisfies the jury that the prisoner had some corrupt and improper design when he received the money, and did not bona fide intend to use such means as he could for the detection and punishment of the offender. R. v. King, 1 Cox C. C. 36. Where A was charged with corruptly and feloniously receiving from B money under pretence of helping B to recover goods before then stolen from B, and with not causing the thieves to be apprehended, three questions were left for

COMPULSION—COMPUTE—CONCEAL.

COMPROMISE. See ACCORD AND SATISFACTION; COMPOSITION WITH CREDITORS.

COMPULSION. See note 1.

COMPUTE. See note 2.

CONCEAL.—To hide; to withdraw from observation; to cover keep from sight.*

1. Did A mean to screen the guilty thieves, or to share the money with them? 2. Did A know the thieves, and aid to assist them in getting rid of the property by promising B to buy it? 3. Did A know the thieves, and assist B, her agent, and at her request, in endeavoring to purchase the stolen property from them, not meaning to bring the thieves to justice? The jury answered the two first questions in the negative and the third in the affirmative. It was held that the receipt of the money under the above circumstances was a corrupt giving of the money by A within the meaning of the statute. R. v. Pascoe, 1 Den. C. C. R. 18 L. J. M. C. 186; Roscoe's Cr. (10th Ed.) 420.

In a certificate of acknowledgment by a married woman, the use of the words "without undue influence or compulsion of her husband" is a sufficient compliance with a statute which requires acknowledgment to be that the deed was executed "of her own free will," without undue influence or compulsion of her husband. Tubbs v. Gatewood, 128 Ark. 128.

An allegation, in a plea of justification in libel, that the plaintiff, the cashier of a bank, "unfairly and secretly debited" the amount of a certain note did not necessarily imply that he was guilty of "moral obliquity," of which he was accused in the language alleged to be defamatory. Kerr v. Force, 3 Cr. C. C.

Webster. Worcester's definition of conceal is "to hide; to keep secret; to secrete; to cover; to disguise." Both are quoted in Driskill v. Parrish, 3 McLean C. C.

In this case it was held that "to harbor or conceal" a fugitive from labor, under an act imposing a penalty for so doing, must be with a view to elude the law of the master. In this act "harbor" and "conceal" are not synonymous; there may be a harboring without concealment. "What amounts to concealment, also, may depend much on the circumstances. It does not necessarily follow that the subject of it be secreted in a garret or a cellar, a barn or a covered wagon. The highways of a remote and uncultivated country . . . may be better places of concealment than the byways of many other places." Van Meter v. Mitchell, 2 Wall. Jr (C. C.) 311.

A similar statute was interpreted in the same way in Alabama, where it was held that harboring and concealing were distinct offences, and that a person might be convicted of the former though there were no concealment. McElhaney v. State, 24 Ala. 71. The contrary was held in Driskill v. Parrish, 3 McLean C. C. 631, where it was said that the two constituted one and the same offence.

Where one is charged with "harboring, hiding, concealing and employing" a runaway slave, a verdict finding him guilty of "concealing and employing, etc.," finds him guilty of the offence charged. Cook v. State, 26 Ga. 593.

"The word 'conceal,' according to the best lexicographers, signifies to withhold or keep secret mental facts from another's knowledge, as well as to hide or secrete physical objects from sight or observation." Hence the concealment of the fact of the falsification of certain facts which would constitute a cause of action is a concealment of a cause of action, within an exception to a statute of limitations. Gerry v. Dunham, 57 Me. 334.

Concealment of a cause of action must be something more than mere silence; it must be an arrangement or contrivance to prevent subsequent discovery, and must be of an affirmative character. Boyd v. Boyd, 27 Ind. 429.

"Concealed" is not synonymous with "lying in wait" in a statute defining murder; in order to constitute homicide murder, the concealment must be for the purpose of killing. A person concealed may kill another without being guilty of murder. People v. Miles, 55 Cal. 207.

The mere acts of resisting the officers of the customs, in the seizure of goods, and casting the packages of goods out of a window of a stable, whereby they were entirely removed from the possession of the officers, does not per se constitute a concealing of the goods, which under

CONCEALED WEAPONS.

Statutory Offence, 408.

What Weapons Included, 409.

Carried About the Person, 410.

What is Concealment, 410.

Statutory Exemptions, 411.

The Intent, 414.

1. Statutory Offence.—The statutes of some of the States have made it an offence to carry weapons concealed about the body, while others prohibit the simple carrying of weapons, whether they are concealed or not. Such statutes have been held not to conflict with the constitutional right of the people of the United States to keep and to bear arms.<sup>1</sup> statute would work a forfeiture, although it may have led to a concealment. U. S. v. Farnsworth, 1 Mason (C. C.), 1.

"The term 'concealed' used in this section is one of plain interpretation, and obviously applies to articles intended to be secreted and withdrawn from public view on account of their being so subject to duties, or from some fraudulent motive." The fraudulent removal from the storehouses agreed upon by the collector and the importer, by some person other than the claimants, who were bona fide purchasers, and without their knowledge and consent, is not such a concealment. U. S. v. 350 Chests of Tea, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 486.

"Concealed" in statutes making it a misdemeanor to carry concealed deadly weapons, means "wilfully or knowingly covered or kept from sight." Owen v. State, 31 Ala. 387. "So hidden from general view as to put others off their guard." Carr v. State, 34 Ala. 448. The weapon must consequently be entirely out of sight. Stockdale v. State, 32 Ga. 225.

A deed which has been recorded according to law cannot be said to be concealed. Dick v. Balch, 8 Pet. (U. S.) 30.

1. State v. Speller, 86 N. Car. 697; State v. Jumel, 13 La. Ann. 399; State v. Smith, 11 La. Ann. 633; State v. Chandler, 5 La. Ann. 489; Wright v. Com., 77 Pa. St. 470; State v. Wilforth, 74 Mo. 528; State v. Hopper, 4 Western Repr. (Mo.) 276; State v. Mitchell, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 229; Walls v. State, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 572; State v. Reid, 1 Ala. 612; Owen v. State, 31 Ala. 387; Andrews v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 165; s. c., 8 Am. Rep. 8; Aymette v. State, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 154; State v. Wilburn, 7 Baxt. (Tenn.) 57; Haynes v. State, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 120; State v. Buzzard, 4 Ark. 18; Fife v. State, 31 Ark. 455; s. c., 25 Am. Rep. 556; Haile v. State, 38 Ark. 564; Hill v. State, 53 Ga. 472; Stockdale v. State, 32 Ga. 225; Munn v. State, 1 Ga. 243; Killet v. State, 32 Ga. 292; Alford

v. State, 33 Ga. 303; Washington v. State, 36 Ga. 242; Cockrum v. State, 24 Tex. 394; Lewis v. State, 2 Tex. App. English v. State, 35 Tex. 493; s. c., Am. Rep. 374.

The second article of the amendment to the constitution of the United States securing to the people the right to keep and bear arms, is a restriction upon powers of the national government only, and not upon State legislation. The statutes prohibiting the carrying of concealed, dangerous, and deadly weapons upon the person, and the exhibition of the same, and the carrying of deadly weapons when intoxicated, is a reasonable regulation to which the citizen must yield, and is a valid exercise of the legislative power. State v. Shelby, 90 Mo. 302.

The Texas statute relative to carrying deadly weapons does not operate as a prohibition of carrying weapons, but as a regulation of the manner of carrying them. The carrying a pistol is not necessarily an offence, though it becomes so when the weapon is carried under circumstances or in the manner prohibited. Lewis v. State, 2 Tex. App.

Some authorities, however, hold that acts prohibiting the carrying of concealed weapons are unconstitutional. Bliss v. Com., 2 Litt. (Ky.) 90; Simpson v. State, 5 Yerg. (Tenn.) 356.

So is a provision in a statute providing for the forfeiture of a weapon upon conviction of carrying the same in violation of the statute unconstitutional. Linnens v. State, 5 Tex. App. 298; Leath v. State, 6 Tex. App. 244; Hubbard v. State, 38 Tex. 535.

Although a statute prescribes a penalty for the offence of carrying concealed weapons, a municipal ordinance may provide a punishment for the same offence. Linnens City v. Dusky, 1 Western Repr. (Mo.) 321.

A municipal ordinance forbidding the carrying of concealed weapons is not in conflict with a general law which makes

What Weapons Included.—Most statutes specify the weapons included in the prohibition. Pistols, dirks, butcher or bowie knives, cut-throats, daggers, a sword or spear in a cane, brass or metal knuckles, razors, slungshots, are generally included.<sup>1</sup>

Exception for those whose lives are endangered. Linnens v. Dusky, 19 Mo. 20.

State v. Duzan, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 31; State v. State, 35 Tex. 493; s. c., 14 Am. Rep. 374.

Arkansas it has been held that the legislature may to some extent regulate the mode and occasion of wearing war weapons, but to prohibit the citizen from carrying or carrying a "war arm," except on his own premises or when on a journey, or when acting as or in aid of an officer, is an unwarranted restriction on his constitutional right to keep and bear arms. Wilson v. State, 33 Ark. 557; State v. State, 31 Ark. 455; s. c., 25 Am. Rep. 556; Holland v. State, 33 Ark. 560. See Aymette v. State, 2 Humph. (Tenn.) 158; Andrews v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 165; s. c., 8 Am. Rep. 8; Page v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 198; English v. State, 35 Tex. 493; s. c., 14 Am. Rep.

Andrews v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) s. c., 8 Am. Rep. 8, it was held that a revolver belongs to the "arms of war," therefore a statute prohibiting the carrying of a revolver to be unconstitutional. See Puryear v. State, 44 Ga. 221. No doubt in time of peace persons may be prohibited from wearing war weapons to places of public worship, or elections, etc. Andrews v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 182.

The provision of a statute which makes it an offence to carry concealed knives, in form, shape, or size resemble cut-throats, is not void on the ground that it is too indefinite to be safely executed. Haynes v. State, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 120; Sears v. State, 33 Ala. 347. The words "deadly weapons," as used in the Kentucky statute, are not restricted to such weapons or instruments as are actually designed for offensive or defensive purposes, or for the destruction of property, or the infliction of injury, but they include any deadly weapon by which a person may be wounded by cutting or stabbing, as a chisel. Com. v. Branham, 100 Mass. (Ky.), 387.

At the trial of one for unlawfully carrying brass knuckles, it was proved that the knuckles were made of lead. Held, "brass knuckles" was used as the name of a weapon, and it made no difference of what metal it was made. Patterson v. State, 3 Lea (Tenn.), 575.

A statute making it indictable for one to carry concealed about his person any "pistol, bowie-knife, razor, or other deadly weapon of like kind," embraces a butcher's knife. The words "other deadly weapons of like kind" imply simply similarity in the deadly character of weapons, such as can be conveniently concealed about one's person, to be used as a weapon of offence and defence. State v. Erwin, 91 N. Car. 545. See State v. Hall, 3 West. Repr. (Mo.) 290, where a pair of "brass knucks" was considered to be a dangerous weapon.

It has been held that a pistol, to come under the prohibited weapons, need not be one in perfect order, and ready to be discharged or used as a weapon. A pistol, the tubes of which were battered and the lock so much out of order that it could not be discharged by the trigger, was held to come under the statute. Atwood v. State, 53 Ala. 508. And also a pistol of which the mainspring was broken, and which was so disabled that it could not be discharged in the usual way. Williams v. State, 61 Ga. 417. But compare Evins v. State, 46 Ala. 88, where it was held that the statute did not cover a pistol which had no mainspring or other necessary machinery of a lock, the hammer and cock of which were disconnected and loose, and the nipple or tube of which was not touched by the hammer when down, and which could not be discharged by a cap on the tube. The court said, "It is not enough that it has a stock and a barrel, and may be loaded and fired off by a match or in some other such way."

One who conceals on his person the various parts of a pistol, incapable of use while thus separate, but capable of being readily put together and becoming effective as a pistol, is guilty of carrying concealed weapons. Hutchinson v. State, 62 Ala. 3; s. c., 34 Am. Rep. 1. Compare Cook v. State, 11 Tex. App. 19, where it was held that all the essential parts must be in the possession of the party carrying the pistol, and that carrying a pistol without a cylinder is not unlawful.

A pistol need not be loaded to come within the statute. State v. Duzan, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 31; Ridenour v. State, 65

3. Carried About the Person.—Where a statute makes it an offense to conceal a weapon "about the person," it will be sufficient if it is concealed near, in close proximity to the person, within convenient control and easy reach so that it can be promptly used.<sup>1</sup>

4. What is Concealment.—Where a statute prohibits only the carrying of "concealed" weapons the word "concealed" means wilfully and knowingly covered and kept from sight.

Ind. 411; Gamblin v. State, 45 Miss. 658; State v. Wardlaw, 43 Ark. 73. But see Carr v. State, 34 Ark. 448, where it was held that to constitute the offense of wearing concealed weapons, under the statute, the implement must be carried about the person, to be always accessible for use in fight, and so hidden from general view as to put others off their guard. If a pistol, not loaded, or unfit for use, this rebuts the presumption that it was carried as a weapon. If a pistol be worn concealed, the jury may presume that it was loaded and worn as a weapon. But this is a presumption of fact, and not of law, and may be rebutted by proof.

1. So held where a pistol was concealed in a basket on the defendant's lap. State v. McManus, 89 N. Car. 555.

A person who being in the room of another in which there are several persons has a pistol in his vest-pocket, and wilfully or knowingly covers or keeps it from sight, violates the statute. Owen v. State, 31 Ala. 387.

A charge that a person carried a pistol about his person is supported by proof that he carried it in his hand. Woodward v. State, 5 Tex. App. 296.

2. Owen v. State, 31 Ala. 387.

It is sufficient if it is so covered that it is hidden from ordinary observation, although it may have been discovered by close inspection. Jones v. State, 51 Ala. 16; State v. Johnson, 16 S. Car. 187; Sutton v. State, 12 Fla. 135.

To constitute the offense of carrying a concealed weapon, it must be worn or carried so that persons near enough to see it, if it was not concealed, cannot see it with ordinary observation. Street v. State, 67 Ala. 87.

But a pistol carried in the belt with the greatest part exposed is carried openly under such statute. Stockdale v. State, 32 Ga. 225; Killelt v. State, 32 Ga. 292. Compare Sutton v. State, 12 Fla. 135.

A pistol partly stuck in a pocket and partly exposed is a "concealed" weapon within the meaning of the statute. State v. Biaz, 37 La. Ann. 259.

The possession of a weapon is prima facie evidence of its concealment, but such evidence may be rebutted by proof. The burden of proof is, however, upon the defendant. State v. Roten, 86 N. Car. 701; State v. Gilbert, 87 N. Car. 527; State v. McManus, 89 N. Car. 555.

On trial of an indictment for carrying a weapon concealed, it was shown the defendant had two pistols buckled around him without scabbards and naked on his belt, on the outside of his clothing. Held, that the presumption of concealment raised by the statute was rebutted, and the defendant not guilty. State v. Roten, 86 N. Car. 701.

A charge which assumes, as a fact, that "there is no proof as to whether the witness looked to see whether the defendant had a pistol or not," when the witness had testified that he passed within a few feet of the defendant, while lying on the ground drunk, "but did not examine him," is properly refused; nor can it be affirmed, as matter of law, that unless the witness, while passing, "looked to see whether the defendant had a pistol or not, there could be no inference that the pistol was then concealed," which another witness saw in his hand a short time previously. Farley v. State, 72 Ala. 170.

In a prosecution for carrying concealed weapons, the evidence showed that the defendant was watching a watermelon patch, which had been previously depredated, until her father and brother should return from a school meeting to which they had gone; that she took a revolver from the house with her, carrying it in her hand, in the box in which it had been purchased; that, while at the melon patch she heard her father and brother coming home and some men following them, threatening to beat her brother; that she took the revolver from the ground where it had been lying, and, carrying it in her hand, went to her brother's rescue and succeeded in getting him away from the men; that the revolver was at no time concealed, unless it was when the defendant folded her arms at the scene of disturbance. Held, that the evidence did not make a case against the defendant for carrying concealed weapons. Smith v. State, 69 Ind. 140.

One accused of carrying concealed weapons cannot show that he was in the habit of carrying the weapon openly, and

5. Statutory Exemptions.—The statutes generally exempt some specially designated persons,<sup>1</sup> as travellers,<sup>2</sup> officers of the

and it concealed only at the time charged. Washington v. State, 36 Ga. 242.

Where on the trial of one indicted for carrying concealed weapons evidence was given of his having been seen once before wearing such weapon under circumstances which implied that such was a general practice, he was convicted, and the judgment affirmed. Hicks v. Commonwealth, 7 Gratt. (Va.) 597.

Where the carrying of arms in an open manner is not prohibited, and such privilege is abused, the party abusing it will be liable to an action at common law. De v. Roten, 86 N. Car. 701.

The offence of riding or going armed with unusual and dangerous weapons, to the terror of the people, is an offence at common law, and is indictable. A man may carry a gun for any lawful purpose, business or amusement, but he cannot go about with that or any other dangerous weapon to terrify and alarm, and in such manner as naturally will terrify and alarm a peaceful people. It is the wicked purpose and the mischievous result which essentially constitute the crime. State v. Huntley, 3 Ired. L. (N. Car.) 8.

On the trial of a defendant charged with carrying a concealed deadly weapon the concealment alleged is a material fact, and unless proved a conviction cannot be sustained. Ridenour v. State, 65 Ind. 411; Smith v. State, 69 Ind. 140; Burst v. State, 89 Ind. 133, 134; State v. Johnson, 16 S. Car. 187.

Where there is any evidence tending to show that the weapon was not concealed, it is error to refuse to charge the jury on request that they must acquit the defendant unless they are convinced from all the evidence that he did carry it concealed about his person. Jones v. State, 51 Ala. 16.

To justify a conviction on the charge of carrying concealed weapons there should be certainty in proof, such as would amount to that which is morally certain. A conviction upon the following evidence was held to be void: "I saw a belt around the waist of defendant. I saw, underneath the coat of defendant, what I took to be the handle of a pistol. It did not look like the handle of a knife, but like the handle of a pistol. Would you swear that what I saw was a pistol." Smith v. State, 10 Tex. App. 420.

Under an indictment charging that the defendant carried "concealed deadly weapons, to wit, a bowie-knife and also a dirk or dagger," it is not necessary in order to conviction to prove that he carried both a bowie-knife and a dirk or dagger. Proof that he carried either is sufficient. Com. v. Howard, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 407.

On a trial upon an indictment for carrying a deadly weapon one witness swore that during a quarrel between him and the defendant he saw a pistol about the person of the latter. Another witness swore that he saw no pistol; that he looked sharp and must have seen one if the defendant had it about his person. Held, that both witnesses may have sworn truthfully, but that the preponderance of the evidence was in favor of the positive evidence of the prosecutor. Fitzgerald v. State, 12 Ga. 213; Haskew v. State, 7 Tex. App. 107.

Carrying a navy pistol in a scabbard on a saddle while riding along a public road is a violation of a statute prohibiting carrying an army pistol otherwise than openly in the hands. Barton v. State, 7 Baxt. (Tenn.) 105.

1. Exp. Boland, 11 Tex. App. 159; Reynolds v. State, 1 Tex. App. 617.

2. Travellers.—A traveller under the statute is one who goes a distance from home beyond the circle of his acquaintances. It must be without his ordinary habits, business, or duties. Gholson v. State, 53 Ala. 519; s. c., 25 Am. Rep. 652.

But the length of the distance travelled is immaterial. Lockett v. State, 47 Ala. 42. In this case a passenger on a railway train for the distance of 28 miles, seeking employment, was held to be travelling.

One making a two days' journey on a river raft is a traveller. Baker v. State, 49 Ala. 350.

One travelling in the neighborhood of his house, although in another county, is not a traveller under the statute. Smith v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 511.

Nor a person daily returning to his home in the country from his business in the city. Eslava v. State, 49 Ala. 355.

One who is going from home by the highway to a definite point far enough distant to carry him beyond the circle of his neighbors, and to detain him throughout the day, and not within the routine of his daily business, is upon a journey within the meaning of the exception in the statute against carrying weapons. Davis v. State, 45 Ark. 359.

law,<sup>1</sup> persons who are threatened with bodily harm<sup>2</sup> or who are on their own premises,<sup>3</sup> from the operation of the statute.<sup>4</sup>

(~~See~~ Notes 2, 3, and 4 are on pages 413 and 414.)

The privilege given by a statute to carry a weapon concealed about the person when travelling begins when one is setting out on a journey, and continues until he reaches home. Coker v. State, 63 Ala. 95. In this case the accused was held to be improperly convicted for carrying a concealed weapon while returning, and near his own residence, from a collecting trip which had taken him some 40 miles from his home.

"Travelling" and "setting out on a journey" are used in the statute in the popular meaning of the terms, and it is impossible to lay down any unbending rule or determine the distances which will characterize the act as a journey or the actor as a traveller. Much must depend on the circumstances of each particular case. The fact of leaving the neighborhood of one's immediate acquaintances and friends, going among strangers, and, possibly, the purpose and object in view, are circumstances to be weighed by the jury in determining whether the defendant was travelling, or setting out on a journey, so as to excuse the carrying of weapons concealed about his person. There may be cases so plain that the presiding judge may, as matter of law, instruct the jury that the defendant was or was not travelling or setting out on a journey. But when the only evidence in the case was, that defendant was setting out by railroad to a place in another county, distant by railroad forty miles, and by dirt road twenty miles, and the court charged the jury this was not setting out on a journey, held, error. Wilson v. State, 68 Ala. 41.

Whether a traveller was "upon a journey" in the spirit of the law against wearing concealed weapons, while stopping at a town on his way, is a question for the jury, upon all the circumstances before them. His intent governs, and the question of fact is, was he really prosecuting his journey, only stopping for a temporary purpose, or had he stopped to stay awhile, mingling generally with the citizens, either for business or pleasure. Carr v. State, 34 Ark. 448.

One passing through a country at a rate of ten miles a day with cattle to market is a traveller. Rice v. State, 10 Tex. App. 288.

A Texas act prohibiting the carrying of deadly weapons was not intended to prevent persons travelling in buggies or carriages upon the public highway from placing arms in their vehicles for self-defence, or even from carrying them from place to place for an innocent purpose. Maxwell v. State, 38 Tex. 112.

In a prosecution for carrying concealed weapons the evidence showed that at the time of the alleged offence, and before and since, the defendant resided in P. county, was extensively engaged in the stove business, having stove yards in various places in that and an adjoining county, that he travelled from his residence in a buggy to and from these several places in attending to his said business, and was so engaged three fourths of his time. On the day of the alleged offence, while travelling in his business, he stopped, 22 miles distant from his home, at a picnic in P. county, and while there made a harmless exhibition of a pistol to one person, and then replaced it in his pocket. Held, that the defendant was a traveller within the meaning of the statute, and the evidence insufficient to sustain a conviction. Burst v. State, 89 Ind. 133.

1. Officers of the Law.—Irvine v. State, 18 Tex. App. 51; Summerlin v. State, 3 Tex. App. 444; Rainey v. State, 8 Tex. App. 62; Snell v. State, 4 Tex. App. 171.

Though not technically a peace-officer or a policeman, a sergeant or under-officer in the penitentiary service is, while in charge of a convict camp and engaged in duties incidental thereto, a "civil officer engaged in the discharge of official duty," within the meaning of the Code, and as such is expressly exempt from amenability for carrying a pistol. Carmichael v. State, 11 Tex. App. 27.

To give an officer the benefit of the exemption of the statute against carrying a pistol, he must produce the process under which he claims to have acted, or a certified copy thereof, if in existence. Beasley v. State, 5 Lea (Tenn.), 705.

The exemption only applies in favor of an officer while actually engaged in executing process, or searching for and arresting criminals. Miller v. State, 6 Baxt. (Tenn.) 450; Bremer v. State, 6 Baxt. (Tenn.) 446; State v. Hayne, 88 N. Car. 625; State v. Wisdom, 84 Mo. 177.

The provisions of the act of 1879, making it lawful for officers and policemen, under proper circumstances, to go armed, does not extend to a private detective, appointed by a mayor, under a city ordinance clothing him with power to ferret out felonies and make arrests, if he had no warrant or capias at the time he carried the pistol. Horn v. State, 6 Lea (Tenn.), 335.

A person summoned by an officer to attend him as one of the posse to assist in the execution of a search warrant cannot be convicted for carrying deadly weapons while thus employed, though he may in company with the officer and while under his orders have gone in a direction which he was not required to go in executing the process. O'Conner v. State, 40 Tex. 27.

But a tax collector, while engaged in distraining property from taxes, can be indicted for carrying a pistol. Gayle v. State, 4 Lea (Tenn.), 466.

2. Threatened with Bodily Harm.—Carrying a pistol concealed in violation of a statute, even for self-protection, is not excused by a communication of threats of violence made against the defendant. State v. Speller, 86 N. Car. 697. See Carroll v. State, 28 Ark. 99; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 538; Coffee v. State, 4 Lea (Tenn.), 245.

Reasonable ground to apprehend an attack at a dangerous locality which defendant visited about daybreak will not be a sufficient excuse for carrying a concealed weapon procured for that visit late in the day at a locality not shown to be dangerous. Chatteaux v. State, 52 Ala. 388.

Evidence that defendant had been shot at by strangers more than two years ago, and that ever since he carried a pistol in self-defence, was held to be irrelevant. Hopkins v. Com., 3 Bush (Ky.), 481.

In Kentucky it has been held that where a person has reasonable grounds to believe that his person or the person of some member of his family will be in immediate danger of violence or crime at the hands of another whenever that person is present, then he may lawfully carry concealed weapons whenever and wherever he has reasonable ground to apprehend that he will encounter such person and be exposed to the apprehended danger. Bailey v. Com., 11 Bush (Ky.), 692. See Polk v. State, 62 Ala. 237.

In a trial on an indictment for carrying concealed weapons it was proved that the accused had previously been taken from his home at midnight by certain armed men, and that he received notice of threats made by them to do so again, and that they had no scruples about shooting him. Held, that evidence that these men were prowling through the country, armed and without any employment, sometimes for a while in Georgia, dodging in and out of the State of Alabama, was admissible. Hardin v. State, 63 Ala. 38.

That defendant's life was in danger was held not to be a defence for carrying a weapon near an election poll. Livingston v. State, 3 Tex. App. 74.

In a prosecution for carrying a concealed pistol, the defence being that the defendant had been threatened with, and had good reason to apprehend, an attack, it is not permissible for him to show that a person to whom he had spoken of the threat advised him to arm himself. Berney v. State, 69 Ala. 233.

To make out a threatened or apprehended attack, as a defence to a prosecution for carrying concealed weapons, the defendant offered in evidence a letter written by the prosecutor to the chief of police, in which the writer stated "that he did not wish to violate the law, nor to be arrested for violating the law, but that he understood the defendant had made threats against him, and was therefore carrying a pistol concealed about his person." Held, that the contents of the letter could not be garbled by the defendant, but must be taken altogether as written; and that the court properly refused a charge, requested by him, to the effect "that what was said in the letter about any threats made by him could not be considered by the jury as evidence." To make out the defence of a threatened or apprehended attack, within the statutory exception, the motive (or purpose) of carrying the weapon must be defence against violence, threatened or apprehended. If offence instead of defence—a meditated attack on another, and not an apprehended attack by him—be the real motive, the party is guilty of violating the statute; and as bearing on this question, the conduct and declarations of the accused and the prosecutor, during an altercation and subsequent rencontre between them, out of which the prosecution arose, are relevant and competent evidence. To establish the defence of a threatened attack, the threat must be real, and not simply apparent or simulated; but, to make out an apprehended attack, it is sufficient to show facts which may convince the jury that he had good reason to apprehend an attack—as reports of threats, believed to be true, though not true in fact; hostile demonstrations; preparations for attack, real or apparent, and the entire conduct of the parties. Shorter v. State, 63 Ala. 129, citing Baker v. State, 49 Ala. 350; Eslava v. State, 49 Ala. 355; Stroud's Case, 55 Ala. 77; McManus v. State, 36 Ala. 285; Mitchell v. State, 60 Ala. 26.

6. The Intent.—The implement must be worn—that is, placed about the person, and carried around in some way, to be at all times accessible. If it is merely, and in good faith, being transported, to be repaired, or given to another, or for purposes of trade, or any other object, save to be used in fight, it cannot be said to be worn.<sup>5</sup>

Under a statute prohibiting the carrying of concealed weapons, the exception in favor of a person "being threatened with, or having good reason to apprehend an attack," was construed to justify the carrying of such weapons as a means of defence only against such threatened or apprehended attack, and not as a means of offence by a person who intended to provoke an attack, though he had been threatened; but, to make out this justification, it was sufficient for the defendant to show such threats or apprehended attack, and he was not required to negative an offensive purpose or intention on his part. Collier v. State, 68 Ala. 499.

3. On Defendant's own Premises.—Under a statute prohibiting the carrying of weapons "publicly or privately," it was held that it makes no difference whether the offender was at the time on his own farm or not. Dycus v. State, 6 Lea (Tenn.), 584. See Carroll v. State, 28 Ark. 99; s. c., 18 Am. Rep. 538. Or within the curtilage of his own abode. Harmar v. State, 69 Ala. 248.

Where the statute excepts the carrying of weapons "on his or her own premises or at his or her own place of business," this refers only to a particular locality, as the farm, store, shop, or dwelling-place, but does not authorize the carrying of concealed deadly weapons while hunting for stock in the woods. Baird v. State, 38 Tex. 599.

On trial of an indictment for carrying a concealed weapon off the defendant's own premises, the jury found specially that defendant, a minor, was seen with a pistol in a public road which ran over his father's land, and the judge ruled he was not guilty. Held, no error. In contemplation of law the son was not off his own premises. State v. Hewell, 90 N. Car. 705.

One indicted for carrying concealed weapons off his premises cannot defend himself by proving that he carried the weapon on his own property when in fact such property had been leased to another, and the lease gave him no authority to enter thereupon. Zallner v. State, 15 Tex. App. 23.

One who is in the occupation of land as a tenant, even at will or by sufferance, or an agent or overseer, or any one else who is vested with the right of dominion, is the owner of land within the meaning of the statute against carrying concealed weapons. A mere servant or hireling who is found with a concealed weapon on the premises of his employer is not on his own premises, and is guilty under the act. State v. Terry, 93 N. Car. 585.

A mere contractor and supervisor of the erection of a building for another cannot carry weapons about the building as upon his own premises. The exception in the statute protects only such as have an interest or estate in the real property which constitutes the premises. Kinthead v. State, 45 Ark. 536.

4. Burden of Proof.—Whether the burden of proof that the accused comes under the exceptions under the statute is on the defendant, or whether the indictment must negative the exceptions, is a question on which the decisions are not unanimous. The following cases decide that the indictment must negative the exceptions: State v. Clayton, 43 Tex. 410; State v. Duke, 42 Tex. 455; Smith v. State, 42 Tex. 464; Young v. State, 42 Tex. 462; Leatherwood v. State, 6 Tex. App. 244; Summerlin v. State, 3 Tex. App. 444; State v. Carter, 36 Tex. 89; Hill v. State, 53 Ga. 472.

Others decide that the burden of proof is on the defendant. State v. Maddox, 74 Ind. 105; Wiley v. State, 52 Ind. 516; State v. Williams, 29 N. Western Repr. (Iowa) 801; State v. Jackson, 1 Lea (Tenn.), 680; Beasley v. State, 5 Lea (Tenn.), 705; Territory v. Burns, 9 Pac. Repr. (Mont.) 432; Com. v. McClanahan, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 8; State v. Hedrick, 2 Western Repr. (Mo.) 591; State v. Hayne, 88 N. Car. 625.

When there is an exception in the enacting clause of a statute, it must be negated in the indictment, but when a statute contains provisos and exceptions in distinct clauses it is not necessary to state that the defendant does not come within the exceptions, or to negative the proviso it contains. Wilson v. State, 33 Ark. 557.

5. Carr v. State, 34 Ark. 448; s. c., 36

Am. Rep. 15; Page v. State, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 198. But see Cutsinger v. Com., 7 Bush (Ky.), 392, where it was held that one who carried a pistol from the seller to the purchaser merely for the sake of accommodation was guilty. And see State v. Martin, 31 La. Ann. 849, and Walls v. State, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 572, where it was held that the motive for carrying the pistol was immaterial. Morton v. State, 46 Ga. 292.

If one carry a pistol off his own premises, concealed about his person, for the purpose of hunting, he is guilty of a violation of the statute. State v. Woodfin, 87 N. Car. 526; Titus v. State, 42 Tex. 578.

To conceal a weapon means something more than the mere act of having it where it may not be seen. It implies an assent of the mind, and a purpose to so carry it that it may not be seen. And to hold that a merchant, who, having just purchased a pistol with a view to his trade, and in carrying it from one store in a town to another for the purpose of having it packed with other goods, thoughtlessly puts it in his pocket, not caring and not thinking whether it could be seen or not, is guilty of a criminal violation of the laws of his country, is more, we think, than was ever contemplated by those who framed the law upon the subject, and very certainly seems far removed from the mischief that it was intended to remedy. State v. Gilbert, 87 N. Car. 527.

Where one bought a pair of pistols, and carried them from the store to another store to buy ammunition for them, and thence home, it was held not to be a violation of the statute for want of any criminal intent. Waddell v. State, 37 Tex. 355; Christian v. State, 37 Tex. 475. Compare Hilliard v. State, 37 Tex. 358.

A letter written by a third party to the chief of police, stating that the writer "understood that the defendant had made threats against him, and that he was consequently carrying concealed about his person a pistol," was held to be competent evidence to go to the jury to show the intentions of the defendant. Shorter v. State, 63 Ala. 129.

One who had to use a pistol in a part he had to play in a school exhibition concealed it about his person on a different day from that on which the exhibition was to take place, and used it in a personal difficulty. Held, that he was not entitled to an acquittal on the charge of carrying concealed weapons. Preston v. State, 63 Ala. 127.

When a person borrows a pistol for the purpose of joining in a chase for a bear, returning the pistol soon after the return from the chase, he is not guilty of going armed in the sense of the law. Moorefield v. State, 5 Lea (Tenn.), 348.

Proof that defendant merely picked up a pistol, held it in his hands for a few minutes, and then replaced it, will be a good defence. Brooks v. State, 15 Tex. App. 88.

Where one finds a pistol on the road and carries it home, he does not infringe on the statute. Mangum v. State, 15 Tex. App. 362.

One is not guilty of a violation of the statute prohibiting the carrying of concealed weapons, where it appears that he had a pistol in his pocket for the purpose of delivering it to the owner who had sent him for it. The facts here show that there was no criminal intent. State v. Brodnax, 91 N. Car. 543.

If a man carry a deadly weapon concealed about his person, off of his own premises, for the purpose of trading it off, and the jury believe that such is his purpose, he is entitled to an acquittal. State v. Harrison, 93 N. Car. 605.

Carrying a pistol to or from a repair shop for repairs is not "carrying concealed weapons," even though he fires it off. Pressler v. State, 19 Tex. App. 52; s. c., 53 Am. Rep. 383.

The statements of a defendant of his intended use of a pistol at the time he borrowed it of the witness, and a like statement when he exhibited it to another witness, were admissible in evidence as part of the res gesta. Wilson v. State, 33 Ark. 557.

An indictment for being armed with a dangerous weapon when arrested by a police officer on a warrant must aver that the arrest was lawful or that the officer was authorized to make it. Com. v. Doherty, 103 Mass. 443.

In an indictment charging the carrying of concealed weapons the intent need not be expressed. State v. Judy, 60 Ind. 138; State v. Swope, 20 Ind. 106; Walls v. State, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 572; State v. McManus, 89 N. Car. 555; Pickett v. State, 10 Tex. App. 290; State v. Williams, 29 N. Western Rep'r (Iowa), 801.

Carrying a weapon concealed about the person is necessarily an act continuous in its nature; and where it appears that the defendant, while visiting a neighboring plantation, and inviting the residents to a dance, exhibited a pistol at two houses some fifty or sixty yards apart, and has been tried and convicted (or acquitted) on the testimony of the persons at one of the houses, he cannot

CONCEALMENT. See ATTACHMENT; FRAUD; INSOLVENCY; INSURANCE; LIMITATION OF ACTIONS; MISREPRESENTATION.

CONCEALMENT OF BIRTH.—In England and the United States statutes have been enacted making it a criminal offence to conceal the birth of a child. These statutes vary in many essential particulars, and must be construed according to their own peculiar requirements. It seems, however, that their general intent is to make the concealment of the birth of a bastard child upon which the crime of murder could have been committed criminal.<sup>1</sup>

What Constitutes the Offence.—The offence being purely statutory, its requirements in the indictment must be strictly followed. The statutes make heavily punishable what of itself is nearly or quite innocent, simply because of its tendency toward an unproved wrong. Hence the interpretation is always specially strict.<sup>2</sup> be again prosecuted on the testimony of the persons who saw him at the other house. Smith v. State, 79 Ala. 257.

A person who, in a state of intoxication, has about his person a deadly weapon, is guilty of but one offence, where the proof shows but one carrying at the same time and place, and he cannot be convicted of both carrying about his person a deadly weapon when under the influence of intoxicating drink, and for carrying concealed a deadly weapon. State v. Shelby, 90 Mo. 302.

1. Desty Am. Crim. Law, § 90 a. See the various statutes.

Some of the statutes make the offence consist in concealing the "death," others the "birth," of the child; the idea being that it is a badge of murder. Bishop on Stat. Crimes (2d Ed.), § 770.

The offence of concealing the birth of a child was first provided against by the 21 Jac. I., c. 27, which was repealed by the 43 Geo. III., c. 58. The latter statute was also repealed and the offence provided for by the 9 Geo. IV., c. 31, sec. 14. This is also repealed; and now by the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, sec. 60, "if any woman shall be delivered of a child, every person who shall, by any secret disposition of the dead body of the said child, whether such child die before, at, or after its birth, endeavor to conceal the birth thereof, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor; provided, that if any person tried for the murder of any child shall be acquitted thereof, it shall be lawful for the jury by whose verdict such person shall be acquitted, to find, in case it shall so appear in evidence, that the child had recently been born, and that such person did, by some secret disposition of the dead body of such child, endeavor to conceal the birth thereof, and thereupon the court may pass such sentence as if such person had been convicted upon an indictment for the concealment of the birth."

Upon a prosecution for this offence, the prosecutor, after establishing the birth of the child, must prove the secret burying or other disposal of a dead body, the identity of the body with that of the child so born, and the endeavor to conceal the birth. In general, the evidence to prove the first point will also tend to establish the last.

Where the bill for murder was not found by the grand jury, and the prisoner was tried for murder on the coroner's inquisition, it was held that she might be found guilty of the concealment. R. v. Maynard, Russ. & R. 240; R. v. Cole, 2 Leach, 1095; 3 Camp. 371.

Upon an indictment for the murder of a child, any person, on failure of the proof as to the murder, may be now convicted by the statute of endeavoring to conceal the birth. Formerly no person but the mother could be so convicted. R. v. Wright, 9 C. & P. 154.

The date of the parent statute of 21 Jac. I., c. 27, is 1623, sufficiently early to be common law in most of our States. The Pennsylvania judges do not include it in their list; but Kilty says it was received in Maryland, and under it there were in early times numerous convictions. Bishop on Stat. Crimes (2d Ed.), § 767.

2. Bishop on Stat. Crimes (2d Ed.), § 769.

Some statutes require that it must appear that the child was born alive, for where the child was stillborn there is no crime. Desty Am. Crim. Law, § 90 a, citing State v. Kirby, 57 Me. 30; State v. Joiner, 4 Hawks (N. Car.), 350; State v. Love, 1 Bay (S. Car.), 167; Douglass v. Com., 8 Watts (Pa.), 538; Boyles v. Com., 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 40; Com. v. Clark, 2 Ashm. (Pa.) 105; Pennsylvania v. McKee, Addis (Pa.), 33. See also State v. Conover, 4th Crim. L. Mag. 233.

Under a statute providing that "if a woman is willingly delivered in secret of the issue of her body, which would be a bastard if born alive, and conceals the death thereof, so that it is not known whether it was born dead or was born alive and was murdered, she shall be punished," held, that if the child is proved to have been born dead, although she concealed its birth she cannot be convicted. State v. Kirby, 57 Me. 30.

The secret burying or other secret disposal of the body of a dead child, born alive, is a misdemeanor; and the endeavor to conceal the birth of such child is also a misdemeanor. State v. Stewart, 93 N. Car. 539.

Other statutes do not require that the child should be born alive. Bishop on Stat. Crimes (2d Ed.), § 774; R. v. Cornwall, Russ. & Ry. 336; R. v. Wright, 9 Car. & P. 754; R. v. Coxhead, 1 C. & K. 623.

An indictment for concealing the death of a bastard child must expressly and distinctly allege the child to be dead; but it need not state whether the child died before, at, or after its birth, nor how the mother endeavored to conceal its death. State v. Ellis, 43 Ark. 93; R. v. Coxhead, 1 C. & K. 623.

An indictment against a woman for endeavoring to conceal the birth of a child, of which she has been delivered, by secretly burying the same, will be good if it follows the language of the statute. It need not allege any specific intent on her part; and it is immaterial whether the child was still-born or not. State v. White, 76 Mo. 96.

It seems that a foetus not bigger than a man's finger, but having the shape of a child, is a "child" within the statute. R. v. Colmer, 9 Cox C. C. 506. But in R. v. Hewitt, 4 F. & F. 1101, it was left to the jury to say whether what the prisoner had concealed was a child or was only a foetus.

It has, however, also been held that the foetus, to be a "child" under the statute, must so far be advanced that in the natural course of things it must have a chance to be born alive and to live after birth, and that the great probability is that under seven months this chance does not exist. R. v. Berriman, 6 Cox C. C. 388; R. v. Sleep, 9 Cox C. C. 559.

Where a woman went in great pains from the house to a thicket a few yards away and remained there for about an hour, and afterward a new-born child still living was found in the thicket in a ditch with about six inches of water, the child being bruised about the head and other parts of its body, it was held sufficient evidence to convict the mother. Peters v. State, 67 Ga. 29.

An indictment against a mother for concealing the death of her child must allege that the child was a bastard. Sullivan v. State, 36 Ark. 64. See Boyles v. Com., 2 S. & R. (Pa.) 43; Douglass v. Com., 8 Watts (Pa.), 535; State v. Love, 1 Bay (S. Car.), 167; State v. Joiner, 4 Hawks (N. Car.), 350.

Concealment.—Where the evidence was, that the prisoner had been delivered of a child, and had placed it in a drawer, where it was found locked up, the drawer being opened by a key taken from the prisoner's pocket, the court directed an acquittal, being of opinion that the former statute by the words "buried or otherwise disposed of" contemplated a final disposing of the body. R. v. Ash, 2 Moo. & R. 293. So where the prisoner had placed the child in a box in her bedroom, held that the disposing of the body must be in some place intended for its final deposit. R. v. Bell, MS. 2 Moo. & R. 294. These authorities have since been overruled. R. v. Goldthorpe, 2 Moo. C. C. R. 244. There the prisoner had been suspected of being with child, but always denied it, and after her delivery persisted in denying that she had been delivered, but on being pressed by the surgeon who examined her, she confessed that the child was between the bed and the mattress, where it was discovered. The case having been reserved the conviction was affirmed. The point was again reserved in R. v. Perry, Dears. C. C. R. 473; 24 L. J. M. C. 137. There the prisoner placed the dead body of the child under the bolster, with the intention of endeavoring, as far as she could, to conceal the body from the surgeon, but with the intention of removing it elsewhere when an opportunity offered. This was held by the court to be disposing of a dead body within the statute. R. v. Opie, 8 Cox C. C. 332. Where the prisoner denied to her mistress that she was in the family way, but told the doctor she had been confined and the child was in a box in her bedroom, and the child was found in a box with the lid open in her bedroom, it was left to the jury to say if they thought this was a secret disposition of the body. In his opinion it was not. R. v. Sleep, 9 Cox C. C. 559. Where the prisoner put the dead body of her child over a wall into a field where there was no path, this was held to be a secret disposition. R. v. Brown, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 244, 39 L. J. M. C. 94. Where the prisoner was stopped going across a yard, in the direction of a privy, with a bundle, which on examination was found to be a cloth sewed up, containing the body of a child, it was held that the prisoner could not be convicted, the offence not having been completed. R. v. Snell, 2 Moo. & R. 44. Evidence was given that the prisoner denied her pregnancy, and also, after the birth of the child, denied that also; but she afterwards confessed to a surgeon that she had borne a child. The body of the child was, on the same day, found among the soil in the privy. Held it to be essential to the commission of the offence, that the prisoner should have done some act of disposal of the body after the child was dead; therefore if she had gone to the privy for another purpose and the child came from her unawares, and fell into the soil, and was suffocated, she must be acquitted of the charge, notwithstanding her denial of the birth of the child. The prisoner was acquitted. R. v. Turner, 8 C. & P. 755. See also R. v. Coxhead, 1 C. & K. 623; R. v. Cornwall, Russ. & Ry. 336.

On an indictment against the mother for concealment of the birth of her illegitimate child, it appeared that the body of the child was found, three days after it was born, behind the door of the privy belonging to the house where she lived as a domestic servant, in a tub covered over with a small cloth. Held, that there was no conclusive evidence to warrant the jury in finding a verdict for concealment of the birth. R. v. Opie, 8 Cox C. C. 332.

On an indictment against the mother for the murder of her illegitimate child, it appeared that the body of the child was found, a few hours after its birth, on the floor of an attic in a house where she lived as domestic servant, the head severed from the body, and both lying in sheets which had been removed from the bedroom below, which was occupied by the prisoner and her mistress, and where there was evidence to show that the birth had taken place, but it was doubtful whether the severance of the head from the body was effected there or in the attic. Held, that there was no evidence to warrant the jury in finding a verdict for the statutory misdemeanor of endeavoring to conceal the birth. R. v. Goode, 6 Cox C. C. 318.

The act of throwing a bastard child down the privy, by its mother, was evidence of an endeavor to conceal the birth within 43 Geo. III. c. 58, s. 3; R. v. Cornwall, R. & R. C. C. 337.

D. and one H. were indicted for murder of a female child, of which were acquitted; whereupon the jury desired to inquire whether the female was guilty of endeavoring to conceal the birth. The prisoners had been living together for some time, and in the night, or about four in the morning, she was ordered of the child, in the presence of the male prisoner, who was the father. The male prisoner very soon afterwards put the child (which had not been rated from the after-birth) into a bag, and carried it downstairs into the cellar, and threw the whole into the privy, the male prisoner remaining in bed up. She was proved to have said she knew what was to be done. The fact of her having a child was, some time before her delivery, known by her mother, who lived at some distance, and was apparent to other women. No female was present at the delivery; one had been seen at the commencement of the labor, twelve at night, but was so ill that she could not attend. There were no preparations, or other provision made for the parties were in a state of the most abject poverty and destitution. The jury found her guilty of endeavoring to conceal the birth. Held, that the concealment made to other persons was not evidence, but no bar, and that the conviction was good. R. v. Douglas, 1 C. C. 480. So in R. v. Skelton, 3 C. K. 119, the court directed the jury that if a woman be delivered of a child which is dead, and a man take the child and secretly bury it, she was indicted for the concealment by secret burial under the statute, and he for aiding and abetting, if there was a common purpose in both in thus endeavoring to conceal the birth of the child; but that the jury must be satisfied, not only that she wished to conceal the birth, but that she was a party to the carrying that wish into effect by the secret burial by the hand of the man, in pursuance of a common purpose between them. R. v. Bird, 2 C. C. 817; R. v. Bate, 11 Cox C. C. 617; R. v. Higley, 4 Car. & P. 366.

Leaving the dead body of a child in a box, closed, but not locked or fastened, one being placed inside the other in the bedroom, but in such a position as to attract the attention of those who descended to the room, is not a secret position of the body within the statute. R. v. George, 11 Cox C. C. 41.

Where an indictment for concealment of the birth of a child alleged the concealment to have been in and among a heap of carrots, and the evidence was that the body was not laid u

CONCEPTION.—The act of conceiving; first stage of generation on the part of the female.<sup>1</sup>

CONDEMNATION.—The act of condemning; that is, pronouncing a judicial sentence against. Used of the sentence or judgment of any court of competent jurisdiction, but most commonly of the decree by which property is seized and made subject to forfeiture ested or concerned in keeping or exhibiting a table for gaming.

Concerned in the Loss.—A fire policy on a saw-mill and machinery therein, required, in the event of a loss, a certificate containing certain information "under the hand of a magistrate or notary public most contiguous to the place of the fire, and not concerned in the loss as a creditor or otherwise." Held, that the words "concerned in the loss" meant interested in the loss, and directly, not remotely, interested. McRossie v. Provincial Ins. Co., 34 Upper Canada (Q. B.), 55.

For Whom it may Concern.—A policy in the name of a particular person, "for whom it may concern," will inure to the interest of the party for whom it was intended by the person who ordered it, provided he at the time of effecting the insurance had the requisite authority from such party, or the latter subsequently adopted it. Hooper v. Robinson, 98 U. S. 528; Wise v. St. Louis Marine Ins. Co., 23 Mo. 80; Walsh v. Washington Ins. Co., 32 N. Y. 427; Newson v. Douglass, 7 Har. & John. (Md.) 417; s. c., 16 Am. Dec. 317. See also De Bollé v. Penna. Ins. Co., 4 Whart. (Pa.) 68; s. c., 33 Am. Dec. 38; Sleeper v. Union Ins. Co., 65 Me. 385; Barnes v. Union Ins. Co., 45 N. H. 21; Buck v. Chesapeake Ins. Co., 1 Peters (U. S.), 151.

When the words "for whom it may concern" are used in a policy, evidence dehors the writing is admissible to apply the words and show to whom they referred. Richardson v. Home Ins. Co., 15 Jones & Sp. (N. Y.) 138; Lee v. Adsit, 37 N. Y. 78; Newson v. Douglass, 7 H. & J. (Md.) 417.

1. Worcester's Dict.

Effect of Evidence of Conception in Rape.—It was formerly supposed that if a woman conceived, it was no rape, because that showed her consent. But such opinion is now admitted on all hands to have no sort of foundation either in reason or law. 1 East P.C. 445.

Declarations in Travail.—The declarations of a woman in travail, as to who was the father of the child, are not competent evidence. The State v. Hus, 7 Iowa, 409.

Cause of Conception.—In an indictment for bastardy, the mother will not be permitted to decide which of the conditions about the same time was the operative cause of conception. Com. v. Fritz, 8 Penn. L. J. 43; Com. v. Carty, 4 Penn. L. J. 140; s. c., 2 C. (Pa.), 351; Wharton on Ev. § 1299. Com. v. McCarty, 4 Penn. L. J. Ellis, C. J., in charging the jury, "The organs of conception, like those of digestion, perform their appropriate offices without the volition of the female. She is not conscious, at the moment of the occurrence, of what has taken place. It is only by inference that she can determine the paternity of her offspring. If intercourse has been confined to one individual, there is no difficulty in drawing a correct conclusion from the premises. But if she exposed herself to the embraces of several, at or about the time she became pregnant, she has placed out of her power to draw any safe conclusions on the subject. Where several causes are shown to exist, either of which is adequate to produce the effect, and there are no circumstances to determine the mind in favor of either, the cause must necessarily remain uncertain, and in that case there is not sufficient evidence to justify a conviction."

2. Condemnation of Lands.—Where two suits were pending for the condemnation of certain lands for the use of two distilling water companies the lower court refused to appoint commissioners on the petition of one of the companies, on the ground that he could not determine to his satisfaction which of the two companies had the better right to condemn. This was held error, and a mandamus granted, the court, Shafter, J., saying: "Two suits for the same cause of action may be pending in the same court between the same parties, but the fact never attracts judicial attention until the pendency of the one suit has been pleaded in abatement of the other. Or there may be two actions pending in the same court at the same time at the suit of different plaintiffs and against a common defendant, it would be contrary to established principle should the court in such cases refuse to proceed with either suit until it had decided and determined an issue between the plaintiffs in the respective proceedings, as to which had the better right to the land inter sese. The condemnation of the land is but a purchase of them in invitum, the title acquired is but a quitclaim. A corporation starts proceedings under a statute, to get a title of that quality, like proceedings have been commenced by another company, and there should be a condemnation and payment in both proceedings, both corporations should have good title as against the real owner or owners; but as between the companies, the lands would belong to the one over whose proceedings the title first acquired jurisdiction—a question to be litigated between the companies. It may be that either company might make the other party defendant to the condemnation, or, failing that, that one of the companies might intervene in the proceedings of the other.—Contra U. S. v. R. Co. v. Moss, 23 Cal. 323.—At the question of priority might be determined in advance of a purchase by one; but should the junior applicant, knowing all the facts, or having the means of knowing them, push its suit to a quitclaim and voluntarily pay the purchase-money, the responsibility would not be on the law." Lake Merced Water Co. v. Lewis, 31 Cal. 215.

Condemnation Money.—Where a Georgia Act (Act 16, Dec. 1811, § 3; Prim. Dig. 1811) declared that "No injunction shall be granted or granted by any judge of the superior courts of this State until the court requiring the same shall have previously given to the party against whom the injunction is to operate, by application to the clerk of the superior court at that purpose, a bond with good and sufficient security for the eventual condemnation-money, together with all further costs," the court held that "the eventual condemnation-money" secured by the injunction bond was the amount ultimately awarded and settled by the judgment of the court in the case; Warner, J., saying: "The term 'condemnation' as defined by Bouvier in his Law Dictionary, 395, to be 'a sentence or judgment which condemns some one to do something, or to pay something; or which declares that his claim or pretensions are unfounded.' 'Judgments are the sentences of the law, pronounced by the court in the matter contained in the record.' Com. 395. The 'eventual condemnation-money,' then, is that which the law sentences the party to pay; expressed by the judgment of the court, the legitimate organ of the law." Lockwood v. Saffold, 1 Ga. 72.

In a suit on an appeal bond against the executors of one of the sureties, where the appeal had been taken by a defendant from a judgment against him in ejectment, and the bond was conditioned for the prosecution of the appeal with effect, and the payment of the condemnation-money and costs should the judgment be against the appellant, it was held that the plaintiff could not recover, in this suit, the mesne profits, the court, Sullivan, J., saying: "By 'the condemnation-money' is meant the damages that should be awarded against the appellant, by the judgment of the court. It does not embrace damages not included in the judgment." Doe v. Daniels, 6 Blackf. (Ind.) 8.

Condemnation and Confiscation Distinguished.—In allowing the claim of an owner of cotton seized, and holding that he was entitled to judgment for the proceeds in the treasury, although placed there under a decree of a court of admiralty to be distributed in prize, on the ground that a court of admiralty is without jurisdiction to distribute in prize a moiety previously awarded to a naval officer as informer by a district in proceedings for the confiscation of enemy's property, the court of claims, by Davis, J., said: "A suit for confiscation is an action of an entirely different nature from a proceeding in prize. Confiscation is the act of the sovereign against a rebellious subject. Condemnation as prize is the act of a belligerent against another belligerent. Confiscation may be effected by such means, either summary or arbitrary, as the sovereign, expressing its will through lawful channels, may please to adopt. Condemnation as prize can only be made in accordance with principles of law recognized in the common jurisprudence of the world. Both are proceedings in rem; but confiscation recognizes the title of the original owner to the property which is to be forfeited, while in prize the tenure of the property seized is qualified, provisional, and destitute of absolute ownership. The Peterhof, Blatchf. Prize Cases, 620. To confiscate property seized upon land, resort must be had to the common-law side of the court. The Confiscation Cases, 20 Wall. 110. Prize proceedings are always in admiralty." Winchester v. U. S., 14 Court of Claims, 13.

CONDITION (See also ESTATES; MORTGAGES.)—That on which anything depends; a pre-existing state of things requisite in order that something else may take effect.<sup>1</sup>

1. Where a State bank, being indebted to the State of Michigan, conveyed to the State, in satisfaction of such indebtedness, certain real and personal property, and it was expressly agreed that the assignment of the property was made upon and subject to the condition that the State should indemnify and save harmless the bank from and against certain claims and liabilities therein mentioned, it was held that this was a conveyance upon a "condition subsequent," and that the property would revert to the bank on failure of the State to perform the condition; the court, Whipple, J., saying: "What, then, is a condition, and what are its legal effects? Estates upon condition are such as have a qualification annexed to them by which they may, upon the happening of a particular event, be created, or enlarged, or destroyed. 3 Kent's Com. 120; Co. Litt. 201. The following definition is more full and satisfactory: 'A condition is a restriction or a qualification annexed to a conveyance of lands, whereby it is provided that in case a particular event does or does not happen, or in case the grantee does or omits to do a particular act, an estate shall commence, be enlarged, or defeated.' 2 Cruise's Dig. 2. Littleton divides them into two classes: 1st, estates upon condition implied or in law; and, 2d, estates upon condition express or in deed. Litt. § 325. The 'condition' in the case before us belongs to the second class, and is a condition express or in deed. The right to annex a condition to a conveyance results from the power of alienation; and this power of alienation is an incident to the right of property. If, then, that condition be precedent, and the act upon which the estate depends be not performed, the estate does not vest; but if the condition be subsequent, the estate does vest, and will continue to vest until defeated by a failure on the part of the grantee to perform the condition annexed to the estate; or, in other words, until there is a breach of the condition. If, for instance, a person have an estate in fee subject to a condition, he may convey or devise the same, and the grantee or devisee will continue to hold as though no qualification had been annexed; but until the condition be performed the estate is liable to be defeated; unless, indeed, the performance of the condition become impossible by the act of God or of the individual who imposes it. 'For if a condition annexed to lands be possible at the making of the condition, and become impossible by the act of God, yet the estate of the feoffee shall not be avoided.' Co. Litt. § 334. 'And so it is in the case of a feoffment in fee with a condition subsequent that is impossible; the estate of the feoffee is absolute. And he that coveneth for a condition broken shall be seized in his first estate, or of that estate which he had at the time of the estate made upon condition.' Co. Litt. § 325. Michigan State Bank v. Hastings, Doug. (Mich.) 225.

In holding that a homestead right is a quality annexed to land whereby an estate is exempted from sale under an execution for debt, and cannot be defeated by the failure of the sheriff to have the homestead laid off by metes and bounds even where there is an actual adverse possession under a sheriff's deed, the court, Pearson, C. J., compared it to a "condition" which, he said, "is a quality annexed to land whereby an estate may be defeated." Littlejohn v. Egerton, 77 Car. 379.

A covenant against alienation if it is to be considered as a condition is void, though it may be supported as a personal undertaking in the nature of a mortgage. Campan v. Chew, 1 Mich. 400.

A mere covenant gives no right of entry and forfeiture on breach thereof, and in a case of doubt as to the true construction of a clause in a lease it should be held to be a covenant, and not a condition or limitation. Johnson v. Garl, 52 Tex. 222.

Where the payment of the purchase money has been made a condition precedent which must be fully performed before the part of the purchaser to entitle him to an estate in fee, it does not follow that the mere failure to pay the interest at the time it becomes due will of itself forfeit the estate of the purchaser in the land. Smith v. White, 5 Neb. 405.

A warranty of the existence of a certain set of facts at the time of making a contract is not a condition precedent to the contract, so as to make it part of a plaintiff's case that he shall aver the warranty and negative the breach of it. Redman v. Aetna Ins. Co., 49 Wis. 43.

In holding that the covenants in a contract are not conditions precedent subsequent to the performance of the contract. Welles, J., said: "By the word 'condition' is usually understood some quality annexed to real estate, by virtue of which it may be defeated, enlarged, or created upon an uncertain event; also, qualities annexed to personal contracts and agreements are frequently called conditions, and these must be interpreted according to the real intention of the parties. Bac. Abr., Conditions. The learning in the books relates principally to the former kind. Conditions of the latter class rest upon the same general reasoning with those of the former. 'Conditions precedent' are such as must be punctually performed before the estate can vest, but in a condition subsequent the estate is immediately executed; yet the continuance of the estate depends upon the breach or performance of the condition.' Bac. Abr. Conditions." Selden v. Prince, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 458.

Condition Precedent.—"A condition precedent," says Chancellor Kent, 4 Com. 125, "is one which must take place before the estate can vest or be enlarged." Therefore where a testator devised all his property to his wife for her life, with a remainder over "to Henry Clew, the young man who is now and has for a long time past lived with me, his heirs and assigns forever, upon the express condition, however, that he, the said Henry Clew, do remain with me and my wife during our lives, and the life of the survivor of us;" and Henry Clew, the devisee, survived the testator but died before the widow—it was held that the requirement that Henry Clew should remain with the testator and his wife during their lives, and the life of the survivor, constituted a "condition precedent," which being unperformed, prevented the estate from vesting in him, the consequence being that it passed to the heir at law. Den ex dem. Blean v. Messenger, 4 Vroom, (N. J.) Law, 499.

Condition Subsequent.—A subsequent condition is one which operates upon an estate already created and vested, and renders it liable to be defeated. Conditions subsequent are not favored in law, and are construed strictly, because they tend to destroy estates. Therefore, it is doubtful whether a clause in a deed is a condition or a covenant, the courts will incline against the condition. A covenant is far preferable. Thus in construing a conveyance of land "in consideration of helping to support and maintain a school for the purpose of teaching the art of reading, writing, and arithmetic," it was held that no forfeiture was worked, although no income having been realized from the lot thus conveyed, on three occasions timber was taken therefrom to make and repair other schoolhouses in the district, in which schools of the kind specified in the deed were kept. Chapin v. School District, 35 N. H. 445.

Conditions Precedent and Subsequent Distinguished.—Where an action of ejectment was brought for land conveyed to a railroad upon the express condition that the conveyance should be void unless the railroad was completed through the premises on or before a certain date, the court held that this was a condition subsequent, but that such conditions are not favored in law, and that such an estate is not defeated by a neglect to perform the condition, but voidable only by the grantor by some act equivalent to a re-entry at common law; and that such a voidable estate may be confirmed by the acts of the grantor, without a new grant; Brown, J., saying: "Where a condition must be performed before the estate can commence, it is called a condition precedent. But when the effect of the condition is either to enlarge or to defeat the estate already created, it is then called a condition subsequent." Ludlow v. New York & Harlem R. Co., 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 440.

Condition and Limitation Distinguished.—But where a condition subsequent is followed by a limitation over, in case the condition is not complied with, or there is a breach of it, it is termed a "conditional limitation," and takes effect without any entry or claim, and no act is necessary to vest the estate in the party to whom it is limited. Stearns v. Godfrey, 16 Me. 158.

Conditional Fee.—See ESTATES TAIL.

Conditional Contract.—In holding that a contract whereby A. agreed to subscribe to the stock of a railroad, on condition that the railroad was placed on a certain course, was a conditional contract, and the subscriber was a conditional subscriber only, and not bound by the acts of a majority of the corporation, Campbell, J., said. "A conditional contract is an executory contract, the performance of which depends upon a condition. It is not simply an executory contract, since the latter may be an absolute agreement to do or not to do some thing; but it is a contract whose very existence depends upon a contingency and condition. . . The conditional subscriber was either never a stock-

CONDITIONAL SALES. (See also CHATTEL MORTGAGE SALES.)

Definition, 424.

Criteria and Requisites of Conditional Sales, 424.

Conditional Sales Disguised as Leases, 426.

Condition Precedent to be Performed by Vendor, 427.

Condition Precedent to be Fulfilled by Purchaser, 429.

Where Payment and Delivery are to be Concurrent, 430.

Partial Failure of Delivery, 431.

Instalment Sales, 431.

Sales "To Arrive," 432.

Contract of "Sale or Return," 433.

Rights and Remedies of Conditional Vendor, 434.

Waiver of Conditions, 435.

Rights of Third Parties, 436.

1. Definition.—The parties to a contract of bargain and sale of goods may agree that the investiture of the purchaser with complete title to the thing sold, or his retention of it, shall depend upon a condition, precedent or subsequent. In either case the transaction is known as a conditional sale. If the condition is precedent, no title passes until it is performed, but after that the sale becomes absolute. If the condition is subsequent, the vendor takes a title which is subject to be divested by the performance of the condition.<sup>1</sup>

2. Criteria and Requisites of Conditional Sales.—The distinction between absolute and conditional sales lies chiefly in the position of title and the respective rights and remedies of the parties. Where a condition precedent is alleged, the test as to whether the property vests in the vendee or remains in the vendor is, whether the vendee could recover of the vendor, either at law or in equity, the interest or property he claims to have purchased.<sup>2</sup> But a holder and member of the company if the condition was a precedent one, or ceased to be a stockholder and member on the violation of the condition, if the condition were a subsequent one, and violated after the payment of calls, or exercise by the subscriber of the right of a member; and the conditional subscriber, never having been a stockholder and member of the company, or having ceased to be so on the violation of the condition, the rule of law mentioned (namely, that a member of a corporation is ordinarily bound by the acts of the majority of the corporation) has no application to him." N. & N. W. R. Co. v. Jones, 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 574.

<sup>1</sup> Sewall v. Henry, 9 Ala. 24.

In Harkness v. Russell (U. S. Sup. Ct.), 23 Repr. 65. Bradley, J., in speaking of conditional sales, observes: "Such contracts are well known in the law and often recognized, and when free from any fraudulent intent are not repugnant to any principle of justice or equity, even though possession of the property be given to the proposed purchaser."

<sup>2</sup> Pierce v. Lyman, 28 Ark. 550.

Distinction between Absolute and Conditional Sales.—This distinction is well illustrated in the case of Green v. Ben, 23 Mich. 464, as follows: Under a contract for the sale of the wood and timber on certain lands, to be removed at certain specified times, if the contract be construed as making an absolute sale, the wood and timber remain the property of the purchaser, though not removed within the time provided, and the taking of the removal of the same by the seller would be a wrongful conversion for which the purchaser has a clear right of action, though he may be liable for a breach of the covenant to remove the same within the times specified. But if the contract be construed as conditional, and the provision for removal of the timber within the specified periods is in the nature of a condition upon the purchaser, if the seller should remove the wood and timber not removed within the times specified, and the seller would have the right to insist upon the breach of condition, and hold the wood not thus removed, and this would constitute his only security against, and which was absolute at its inception may be changed into a conditional sale by the subsequent agreement of the parties.<sup>1</sup>

The necessity for distinguishing between conditional sales and chattel mortgages chiefly arises in cases where the possession of personalty is transferred in consideration of an existing indebtedness, and the buyer's title depends upon a condition. Here the test is: if the conveyance merely secures the debt, it is a mortgage; if it extinguishes the debt, it is a sale, notwithstanding the reservation of a right to redeem.<sup>2</sup> But a transaction, in effect a conditional remedy for, the failure to perform condition.

Test of Warranty.—A warranty in a contract of sale, that the article shall conform to inspection, is nothing more than a warranty of the soundness of the goods, and does not change the sale into a executory contract. Gibson v. Stevens, 8 How. (U. S.) 384.

A mere promise to sell when certain conditions are complied with does not create a title, but only creates an obligation which may be enforced by an action to compel a specific performance, or for recovery of damages. Knox v. Payne, 10 Ala. Ann. 361.

Where a note is given for the purchase of goods, the sale may be a conditional sale; if the note is secured upon other property, it is an absolute sale. Silver Mining Co. v. Lowry, 23 Repr. (Ilt.) 311.

A contract absolute in its inception, consummated by delivery, will not be converted into a conditional sale by an ambiguous phrase indorsed upon it, even if such would have been the effect if a part of the original contract. Way v. Wallace, 2 Ala. 542.

One sells and delivers property to another absolutely, and the parties subsequently make it a conditional sale, a change of possession is necessary to protect the property from attachment by creditors of the vendee. Wright v. Smith, 45 Vt. 369.

A contract for the sale of a steam-engine and the iron frame for a saw-mill, the buyer giving his notes in payment of the goods being delivered, after which the seller agreed that on non-payment of the notes the seller might repossess himself of the goods, held a conditional sale. Wilmington Steam-engine Co. v. Davis, 5 Del. (Del.) 192.

Where goods are purchased and paid for at a stipulated price, the sale is not affected or qualified by an agreement in the bill of sale that the seller will receive such sum as the goods will sell for above the price paid. Lincoln v. Lincoln, 2 Shep. (Me.) 116.

Substitution of Goods.—Where the vendor of personal property reserves a lien upon it at the time of sale, and the property is subsequently exchanged for other property, by the vendor's consent, with an agreement between him and the vendee that his original lien shall attach to the property exchanged for, such lien can be enforced. Kelsey v. Kendall, 48 Vt. 24.

Parish v. Gates, 29 Ala. 254; Smith v. Beattie, 31 N. Y. 542; Houser v. Camp, 3 Pa. St. 208; Todd v. Campbell, 32 Pa. St. 250; Blodgett v. Blodgett, 52 Vt. 32; Wilmerding v. Mitchell, 13 Vroom (N. J.), 476; Robinson v. Willoughby, 65 N. Car. 520; Ruffier v. Womack, 30 Tex. 332; Reeves v. Sebern, 16 Iowa, 234; Cooper v. Brock, 41 Mich. 488; Musgat v. Pumpelly, 46 Wis. 660; Slowey v. McMurray, 27 Mo. 113; Moore v. Murdock, 26 Cal. 514; 1 Benj. on Sales (4th Am. Ed.), p. 8.

In Turner v. Kerr, 44 Mo. 429, it is said by Currier, J.: "A conveyance to secure a debt is a mortgage, and the stipulations of the parties cannot make it otherwise. But a conveyance to pay a debt is a totally different affair. If the conveyance extinguishes the debt and the parties so intend, so that a plea of payment would bar an action, a subsequent or contemporaneous stipulation in the interest of the debtor, securing to him an opportunity to reacquire the title, ought not to be construed to the creditor's prejudice. Such a transaction is no mortgage, but a conditional sale."

Conditional Sales not Favored.—The inclination of courts of equity always has been to lean against conditional sales; because an error which converts a conditional sale into a mortgage is not as injurious as one which changes a mortgage into a conditional sale; and this inclination is strongly manifested whenever the transaction had its origin in a proposition for a loan, or the relation of debtor and creditor existed between the parties. Locke v. Palmer, 26 Ala. 312; Parish v. Gates, 29 Ala. 254.

Cases of Conditional Sales.—Where upon sale of a chattel, may be afterwards modified so as to make the contract a mortgage.<sup>1</sup>

Where one agrees, on receiving possession of personal property under a contract of sale, that the title shall remain in the vendor until the price is paid, this is not a bailment, but a conditional sale.<sup>2</sup> An oral condition cannot be attached to a written conveyance of chattels absolute on its face.<sup>3</sup> In several of the States all conditional sales must, to be valid as against third persons, be recorded in all respects like chattel mortgages.<sup>4</sup>

3. Conditional Sales Disguised as Leases.—Where the transaction between the parties is in reality, and in its legal effect, a contract of sale conditioned upon the payment of the purchase price in successive instalments, it cannot be modified, nor its legal effect avoided by the fact that they speak of it as a "lease," and call the instalments "rent."<sup>5</sup>

In the sale of a chattel the purchaser gave his note with sureties for the price, and it was agreed by parol between the parties at the time that the chattel should belong to the sureties until the note was paid. Held, that the effect of the agreement was to pass the title to the chattel from the seller to the sureties, and not from the seller to the purchaser, and then from him to his sureties for their indemnity, for in the latter case it would have been a mortgage, which would have been void for want of registration. Worthy v. Cole, 69 N. Car. 157.

An instrument under seal signed by B., promising to pay C. $150 "for one bay horse bought of him, and to secure him the horse stands his own security," was held to be a conditional sale, and not a mortgage. Clayton v. Hester, 80 N. Car. 275.

An agreement to convey property on the payment of certain sums of money and the performance of certain conditions, followed by delivery of possession, constitutes a conditional sale and not a mortgage. Rowan v. Union Arms Co., 36 Vt. 124.

Sale with Right of Repurchase.—Where there is an absolute conveyance of a chattel, but a right is reserved to the grantor to redeem or repurchase the same at a stipulated price within a given time, it is a conditional sale, and not a pledge or mortgage, if the exercise of such right is optional with the grantor and cannot be compelled by the grantee. Conway v. Alexander, 7 Cranch (U. S.), 218; Logwood v. Hussey, 60 Ala. 417; Thompson v. Chumney, 8 Tex. 389; Glover v. Payne, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 518.

1. Griffith v. Morrison, 58 Tex. 46.

2. Bryant v. Crosby, 36 Me. 562; Pennsylvania and Alabama decisions take a different view. See Chamberlain v. Smith, 44 Pa. St. 431; Henry v. Paulson, 57 Pa. St. 346; Forrest v. Nelson, 19 Repr. (Pa.) 380; McCall v. Powell, Ala. 254.

Consignment to Sell.—Where goods are delivered for the purpose of being sold at prices fixed by the consignor, and are to be paid for at fixed rates by the consignee after sale, accounts to be rendered monthly, the transaction imports a consignment for sale, and not a present sale. Walker v. Butterick, 105 Mass. 22; Audenried v. Betteley, 8 Allen (Mass.) 302. Compare Nutter v. Wheeler, 2 L. (U. S.) 346; In re Linforth, 4 Sawy. (C.) 370; Fish v. Benedict, 74 N. Y. 6.

3. A partner, being sick at the time, conveyed to his copartner, by a written instrument, all his interest in the firm, agreeing with him verbally at the same time that in case he should recover the sale was to be null and void, and he was to continue in the firm as before. Held, that this verbal condition was nugatory, and the sale absolute. Wallace v. McVicker, 6 Ind. 300.

The intention of the parties to a sale, as to the time when the title is to pass, can be ascertained only from the terms of the agreement as expressed in the language and conduct of the parties, as applied to known usage and the subject-matter. It must be manifested at the time the bargain is made. Foster v. Ropes, 111 Mass. 10.

4. New York, Act of 1884, ch. 315, § 1, 2; Iowa, Rev. Code 1880, § 10; Missouri, Rev. Stat. 1879, § 2505; Nebraska, Genl. Stat. 1883, § 169; South Carolina, Genl. Stat. 1882, § 2022; Act of 1882, ch. 20.

5. Sales Disguised as Leases.—Transactions of this character are of frequent in two States, however, a different view obtains.<sup>1</sup>

Condition Precedent to be Performed by Vendor.—Where by the agreement the vendor is to do anything to the goods for the purpose of putting them into a deliverable state, the performance of these things will, in the absence of a contrary intention, be taken as evidence, and principally in connection with the transfer of such articles as sewing-machines, pianos and organs, furniture, and rolling-stock on railroads. They usually provide for the immediate transfer of the property on what is called "lease;" that certain payments shall be made from time to time called "rent;" that the title is to remain in the "lessor" until all payments are made; that he may retake the property upon default in payment, and declare previous payments forfeited; and that, upon payment of the last instalment, the title is to vest in the "lessee" without further ceremony, and with or without a bill of sale or other conveyance. The object is to afford the vendor a better security, or to avoid the inconvenience of a chattel mortgage. But the courts now hold that a transaction is a conditional sale (not a contract of letting and hiring), and must be so considered for all purposes. Hervey v. Locomotive Works, 93 U. S. 664; Heryford v. Davis, 102 U. S. 35; Myer v. Car Co., 102 U. S. 1; Roberts v. Roberts, 48 Conn. 267; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 170; Loomis v. Bragg, 50 Mo. 228; s. c., 47 Am. Rep. 638; Carter v. Scott, 13 R. I. 477; Whitcomb v. Woodward, 54 Vt. 544; Price v. Callister, 3 Grant (Pa.), 248; Greer v. Church, 13 Bush (Ky.), 430; Cole v. Fry, 42 N. J. L. 308; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Cole, 4 Lea (Tenn.), 439; s. c., 40 Am. Rep. 20; Murch v. Wright, 46 Ill. 487; Case v. Campbell, 88 Ill. 447; Sumner v. Cotley, 71 Mo. 121; Singer Co. v. Whitcomb, 40 Iowa, 33; Kohler v. Hayes, Cal. 455; Hegler v. Eddy, 53 Cal. 597; Domestic Sewing Machine Co. v. Anderson, 23 Minn. 57.

In the American editor's note to Benj. Sales (4th Am. Ed. p. 10), it is said: "The hardship of a forfeiture, where nearly all the price has been paid under the name of rent, has led to much litigation, in which the claim for the buyer is always made that the transaction is in fact a sale with a lien for price reserved. Generally, however, the courts have enforced these contracts according to their true terms, and have held that if the buyer saw fit to sign a lease, he must be regarded as bailee, and not as purchaser." With the exception of the Pennsylvania cases (to be presently noticed), this proposition is supported only by the following decisions: Sargent v. Giles, 8 N. H. 325; Bailey v. Colby, 34 N. H. 29; Austin v. Dye, 46 N. Y. 500; Bean v. Edge, 84 N. Y. 510; Haviland v. Johnson, 7 Daly (N. Y.), 297. And all the latest authorities as above cited are directly opposed to it.

The conclusive argument, as it seems to us, is stated by Davis, J., in Hervey v. Locomotive Works, 93 U. S. 664, where he says. "It was evidently not intended that this large sum should be paid as rent for the mere use of the engine for one year. If so, why agree to sell and convey the full title on the payment of the last instalment?"

Rights of Mortgagees.—In the case of Carpenter v. Scott, 13 R. I. 477, under an agreement similar to those above described, the conditional vendee mortgaged the property to a third person pending the term, and afterwards received from his vendor the bill of sale that had been stipulated for. Held, that the so-called lease was a conditional sale, and that the vendee had a right to mortgage the property, which, upon his making the last payment and receiving the bill of sale, vested in him, so that the mortgage took precedence of an attachment.

Rights of Third Purchasers.—It is also held, under the species of contracts now under consideration, that one who has in good faith bought and paid for the article from the conditional vendee, in ignorance that the latter has not yet paid in full, and in reliance on his possession and apparent ownership, will receive a good title. Greer v. Church, 13 Bush (Ky.), 430; Domestic Sewing Machine Co. v. Anderson, 23 Minn. 57. See, infra, section 13 of this article, "Rights of Third Parties."

1. Pennsylvania and Alabama.—In these two States, contrary to the general rule, the kind of contracts we are at present discussing are regarded, not as conditional sales, but as "bailments for use." Thus in Forrest v. Nelson, 19 Repr. (Pa.) 380, Sterrett, J., observes. "A present sale and delivery of personal property to the vendee, coupled with an agreement that the title shall not vest in the latter unless he pays the price agreed upon at the time appointed therefor, and as a condition precedent to the vesting of the property.<sup>1</sup> Also when some act remains to be done (not by the buyer) in relation to property which is the subject of sale, such as weighing, counting, testing, or measuring to determine its identity or separating it from bulk, or to ascertain the price, and there is no evidence of an intention of the parties to make an absolute and complete sale, the performance of such act is a prerequisite to the consummation of the contract, and until it is performed the property does not pass to the vendee.<sup>2</sup> The foregoing principles are commonly known as Lord Blackburn's two rules.

that in default of such payment the vendor may recover possession of the property, is quite different in its effect from a bailment for use, or, as it is sometimes called, a lease of the property, coupled with an agreement whereby the lessee may subsequently become owner of the property upon payment of a price agreed upon. As between the parties to such contracts both are valid and binding; but as to creditors the latter is good while the former is invalid." See Chamberlain v. Smith, 44 Pa. St. 431; Henry v. Patterson, 57 Pa. St. 346; Rowe v. Sharp, 51 Pa. St. 26; Becker v. Smith, 59 Pa. St. 469; Crist v. Kleber, 79 Pa. St. 290; Enlow v. Klein, 79 Pa. St. 488.

So in Alabama. McCall v. Powell, 64 Ala. 254.

1. 1 Benj. on Sales (4th Am. Ed.), § 364; Blackburn on Sale, 151; Elgee Cotton Cases, 22 Wall. (U. S.) 180; Smith v. Parkman, 55 Miss. 649; Bond v. Greenwald, 51 Tenn. 453; Pritchett v. Jones, 4 Rawle (Pa.), 260; Keeler v. Vanderore, 5 Lans. (N. Y.) 313; Foster v. Ropes, 111 Mass. 10; Groffe v. Belche, 62 Mo. 400; Wilkinson v. Holiday, 33 Mich. 385; McClung v. Kelley, 21 Iowa, 508; Cleaver v. Ogle, 1 Houst. (Del.) 453.

Where the thing to be sold is yet to be manufactured, the title does not pass until there has been some act equivalent to delivery and acceptance. Comfort v. Kiersted, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 472; Andrews v. Durant, 11 N. Y. 35; s. c., 62 Am. Dec. 55; Williams v. Jackman, 16 Gray (Mass.), 514; West Jersey R. v. Trenton Car Works, 32 N. J. L. 517.

Condition Partly Performed.—Where the vendor has performed everything that is required of him as to a portion of the things sold, but something still remains to be done as to the rest, the portion in regard to which the vendor has performed all his duty becomes the property of the vendee, but the portion in respect to which something is yet to be done still belongs to the vendor, and it makes no difference as to the operation of this rule whether the contract is entirety or not. Thompson v. Conover, 3 Vroom (N. J.), 466.

Acts to be Done after Delivery.—Title to property in goods will pass, even though something remains to be done by the vendor in relation to the goods sold after their delivery to the vendee. Hammond v. Anderson, 1 B. & P. N. R. 1; Greaves v. Hepke, 2 B. & Ald. 1; Mount Hope Iron Co. v. Buffington, 1 Mass. 62; Goddard v. Binney, 115 Mass. 450; 1 Benj. on Sales (4th Am. Ed.) 378.

2. 1 Benj. on Sales (4th Am. Ed.) 364; Blackburn on Sale, 152; Stone v. Peacock, 35 Me. 385; Handlette v. Toman, 2 Shep. (Me.) 400; Messer v. Woman, 22 N. H. 172; Smart v. Batchelder, 57 N. H. 140; Fuller v. Bean, 34 N. H. 290; Gilman v. Hill, 36 N. H. 3; Ockington v. Richey, 41 N. H. 2; Riddle v. Varnum, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 2; Sherwin v. Mudge, 127 Mass. 547; Andrew v. Dieterich, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 2; Rapelye v. Mackie, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 2; Outwater v. Dodge, 7 Cow. (N. Y.) 1; Kein v. Tupper, 52 N. Y. 550; Nesbitt v. Burry, 25 Pa. St. 208; Nicholson v. Taylor, 31 Pa. St. 128; Devane v. Fennell, 2 Ired. (N. Car.) 36; Hudson v. Weir, 29 Ala. 294; Beller v. Block, Ark. 566; Chamblee v. McKenzie, Ark. 155; Moffatt v. Green, 9 Ind. 1; Commercial Bank v. Gillette, 90 Ind. 2; s. c., 46 Am. Rep. 222; O'Keefe v. Klogg, 15 Ill. 347; Frost v. Woodruff, Ill. 155; Courtright v. Leonard, 11 Iowa 32; Cunningham v. Ashbrook, 20 N. H. 553; Obe v. Carson, 62 Mo. 209; Latham v. Eggleston, 27 Mich. 324; Marshall v. Hurlbut, 9 Minn. 142.

Intention of Parties to Govern.—If it appears by the terms of the contract that it was the intention of the parties that title to the goods should pass before they were weighed, measured, etc., this intention will override the general rule, and effect will be given to it. Graff v. Fitch, 58 Ill. 373; Chapin v. Potter

5. Condition Precedent to be Fulfilled by Purchaser.—Where the buyer is by the contract bound to do anything as a condition, whether precedent or concurrent, on which the passing of the property depends, the property will not pass until the condition be fulfilled, even though the goods may have been actually delivered to the possession of the vendee.<sup>1</sup> Thus where, in a contract of sale, it is agreed that the title to the property is not to vest in the purchaser until the price is fully paid, the title remains in the vendor until that event, though the property was delivered at the time; the payment is strictly a condition precedent and must be complied with before the title passes.<sup>2</sup> So where the payment for the goods is to be made in notes of the vendee or mortgages,

(N. Y.) 366; Young v. Matthews, 2 R. 2 C. P. 127; Turley v. Bates, 2 R. & Colt. 200.

Delivery.—Delivery to the buyer will vest the title though the goods sold are intended to be weighed, counted, or measured. Macomber v. Parker, 13 Mass. 175; Cunningham v. Ashcroft, 20 Mo. 555; Haxall v. Willis, 15 Va. 434. In Macomber v. Parker, Pick. (Mass.) 175, Wilde, J. said: "Where the goods are actually delivered, it shows the intent of the parties to complete the sale by delivery; and the weighing, or counting, or measuring afterwards would not be considered as part of the contract of sale, but would be taken to refer to the adjustment of the final settlement of the price. The sale would be as complete as a sale on credit before the actual payment of price."

Separation, when Necessary.—Where there is a sale of a specified quantity of goods from a mass identical in kind and form in value, a separation of the quantity sold is not necessary to pass the title where the intention of the parties that the property should pass by the contract of sale is clearly manifested; otherwise where the articles composing the mass are of different qualities and values, making a selection, and not merely a separation, necessary. Hurff v. Hires, 1 J. L. 581.

1 Benj. on Sales (4th Am Ed.) § 366. Fosdick v. Schall, 99 U. S. 250; Page v. Stubbs, 26 Me. 243; Rogers v. Dehouse, 71 Me. 222; Luey v. Bundy, 1 H. 298; Holt v. Holt, 58 N. H. 276; Wicks v. Pike, 60 N. H. 447; Manwell v. Briggs, 17 Vt. 176; Root v. Lord, 23 Vt. 568; Burnell v. Marvin, 44 Vt. 277; Gill v. Railroad, 3 Gray (Mass.) 545; Went v. Metcalf, 5 Gray (Mass.) 306; Werner v. Puffer, 114 Mass. 376; Salomon v. Hathaway, 126 Mass. 482; Goodwin v. Fairbrother, 12 R. I. 233; Skelton

v. Manchester, 12 R. I. 326, Brown v. Fitch, 43 Conn. 512; Hine v. Roberts, 48 Conn. 267; Herring v. Hoppock, 15 N. Y. 409; Herring v. Willard, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 418; Ballard v. Burgett, 40 N. Y. 314; Austin v. Dye, 46 N. Y. 500; Cole v. Mann, 61 N. Y. 1; Boon v. Moss, 70 N. Y. 465; Cole v. Berry, 42 N. J. L. 308; Enlow v. Klein, 79 Pa. St. 488; Hartley v. Decker, 89 Pa. St. 470; Walsh v. Taylor, 39 Md. 592; Leavell v. Robinson, 2 Leigh (Va.) 161; Clayton v. Hester, 80 N. Car. 275; Vasser v. Buxton, 86 N. Car. 335; Bennett v. Sims, 1 Rice (S. Car.) 421; Talmadge v. Oliver, 14 S. Car. 522; Jowers v. Blandy, 58 Ga. 379; Boyd v. Loftin, 34 Ga. 494; Dudley v. Abner, 52 Ala. 572; Ketchum v. Brennan, 53 Miss. 596; Christian v. Bunker, 38 Tex. 234; Patton v. McCane, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 555; Vaughn v. Hopson, 10 Bush (Ky.) 337; Price v. Jones, 3 Head (Tenn.) 84; Sumner v. McFarlan, 15 Kans. 600; Fleck v. Warner, 25 Kans. 492; Carroll v. Wiggins, 30 Ark. 402; Sanders v. Keber, 28 Ohio St. 630; Forrest v. Hamilton, 98 Ind. 91; Bradshaw v. Warner, 54 Ind. 58; Van Duzor v. Allen, 90 Ill. 499; Bailey v. Harris, 8 Clarke (Iowa), 331; Moseley v. Shattuck, 43 Iowa, 540; Little v. Page, 44 Mo. 412; Ridgeway v. Kennedy, 52 Mo. 24; Wrangler v. Franklin, 70 Mo. 659; Fifield v. Elmer, 25 Mich. 48; Hunter v. Warner, 1 Wis. 141; McClelland v. Nichols, 24 Minn. 176; Putnam v. Lamphier, 36 Cal. 151; Aultman v. Mallory, 5 Neb. 178; Cardinal v. Edwards, 5 Nev. 36.

Waiver of Condition.—One who has contracted to purchase personal property on credit, the title to remain in the vendor till payment, does not forfeit his rights by mere neglect to pay by the day named, as the vendor may waive his right to a forfeiture for a prior neglect to pay by seeking afterwards to collect the balance due. Devoe v. Jamison, 33 Mich. 94.

the title will not pass until the giving of the notes or execution of the mortgages.<sup>1</sup> Other examples are given in the note.<sup>2</sup>

6. Where Payment and Delivery are to be Concurrent.—When time of payment is specified at the making of the contract, the law presumes that the sale is for cash; and in such a case payment and delivery are immediate and concurrent acts, and the seller has an indisputable right to refuse to deliver without payment.<sup>3</sup> A sale for "cash on delivery" is a conditional sale, not vesting until the condition is complied with.<sup>4</sup>

But where, in a contract of sale of personal property, the title to the property was to pass to the purchaser upon his deposit of the purchase-money in a particular bank by a certain day, held that the refusal of the bank to receive the deposit was no excuse for non-performance of the condition. Thompson v. Ray, 46 Ala. 224.

Intent of Purchaser.—Upon the question of the validity of a sale made upon a condition as to payment, the condition not being performed, the intent of the purchaser to pay or not is immaterial, where no fraud is imputed to him, or where he testified that he had no intention of taking the goods, and it is not error to exclude an inquiry as to whether he intended to pay. Jessop v. Miller, 2 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 449.

1 Congar v. Railroad, 17 Wis. 477; Thorpe v. Fowler, 57 Iowa, 541.

2. When a contract for the sale of goods by its terms provides that the property is to be delivered "subject to the inspection of B. or others mutually satisfactory," neither party has the right to demand inspection by any other person unless B. neglects or refuses to act. The fact that B. is one of the sellers makes no difference. Dustan v. Andrew, 44 N. Y. 72.

The ownership of a building sold as personal property, to be removed within a reasonable time, reverts to the owner of the land if the building is not removed, and the purchaser cannot recover back the money paid for such building, as the right to remove it was a sufficient consideration for the purchase-money. Shaw v. Carbrey, 13 Allen (Mass.), 462.

An agreement in a bill of sale "that this sale is upon this express condition that said steamboat is not within ten years from — to be run," was held to be a condition and not a covenant, there being no engagement or promise on the part of the vendee. Hale v. Finch, 104 U. S. 261.

Where by the terms of a deed in trust to pay debts, the trustee is required to give notice to the bargainor of the time and place of sale, the giving of such notice is in the nature of a condition precedent, and if such notice is not given the sale is void, and communicates no title to the purchaser. Henderson v. Gallo, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 692.

Rights of Conditional Vendee.—Where a party bargained for a horse, but was to perform a condition precedent to the vesting of his title and right of possession, and failed to perform such condition, held that he could not maintain an action of trover for the value of the horse against a bailee who was to deliver the horse on the performance of such precedent condition. Ferrier v. Wood, 4 Ark. 85.

3. Southwestern Freight Co. v. P., 45 Mo. 517; Talmadge v. White, 3 N. Y. Super. Ct. 219.

Where delivery and payment are concurrent acts, the promises of the parties are dependent and conditional, neither can maintain an action against the other for non-performance without showing an actual performance or tender of performance on his part. Keller v. Upton, 5 Duer (N. Y.), 336.

4. Evansville, etc., R. Co. v. Erwin, Ind. 457; Lanman v. McGregor, 94 Ind.

But in Wabash, etc., R. Co. v. Shryver, 9 Ill. App. 323, it is held that a sale for cash may or may not be conditional according to circumstances and the intention of the parties, and it is error to instruct a jury that in a sale for cash the property does not pass until the price is paid.

In a sale of chattels, when the price is to be paid on delivery to the purchaser, the title remains in the seller until delivery. And this is so even where a partial payment is made to bind the bargain if no credit is contemplated after the delivery. Pierson v. Hoag, 47 Barb. (N. Y.) 243.

In case of a sale for cash on delivery, the transfer of a bill of lading to the purchaser before payment, though ordinarily constituting delivery, does not divest the vendor's title. Evansville, etc., R. Co. v. Erwin, 84 Ind. 457.

7. Partial Failure of Delivery.—Under a contract for the sale and delivery of a certain number of articles or a certain quantity of merchandise, at a stipulated price and within an agreed time, the delivery of the whole is a condition precedent to the seller's right of action; the buyer is not required to receive less than the designated amount, and, until full performance, there can be no recovery by the seller.<sup>1</sup> But where there is a delivery of a portion only of the goods agreed to be furnished by a contract entire in its nature and providing one gross sum for the whole, and the vendee accepts and appropriates them so as to derive a benefit therefrom, the vendor is entitled, in a proper case, to recover the reasonable worth of the goods delivered, not exceeding the contract price, subject to the vendee's right to recoup damages for breach of the contract.<sup>2</sup>

8. Instalment Sales.—Where goods are to be sold and delivered in instalments at fixed periods, default by the purchaser in accepting and settling for an instalment will relieve the vendor from forwarding subsequent instalments; and default on the part of the vendor in sending the first instalment will relieve the purchaser from his obligation in taking the other instalments.<sup>3</sup> A contract to build a vessel according to specifications, and to deliver it completed at a place designated before a day certain, for which payments are to be made as the work progresses, vests no title in the vendee until after the completion and delivery of the vessel.<sup>4</sup>

Effect of Delivery.—Where the agreement is that goods are to be paid for in cash on delivery, and the goods are delivered, the sale is complete whether the payment is made or not. Warder v. Over, 51 Iowa, 491. Compare Dudley Sawyer, 41 N. H. 326.

But where goods are sold for cash, and the seller delivers them to the buyer on faith of his paying cash for them, and immediately demands the cash, and the buyer refuses to pay, the delivery is an absolute but a conditional delivery, and if the buyer refuses to perform the condition, no property in the goods passes to him. Refining Co. v. Miller, 7 Phila. 97; Harding v. Meitz, 1 Tenn. Ch. 610. Where goods have been purchased for cash, which, by a custom of trade, is understood to mean payment at not ten days after the purchase, the contract imports that the delivery is qualified and that the property in the goods does not pass until payment. Dous v. Johnston, 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 393.

Rockford, etc., R. Co. v. Lent, 63 Ill. 288; Smith v. Lewis, 40 Ind. 98; Ant v. Lyon, 49 N. Y. 552; Timmons v. Nelson, 66 Barb. (N. Y.) 594.

Where there is a contract of sale of a certain quantity of goods to be shipped on the name of the vessel to be given as soon as received, and the quantity is increased in the shipment and on notice accepted, the purchaser may refuse to accept delivery of less than the increased quantity, and by other shipments than that stated. Salamon v. Boykin, 23 Repr. (Md.) 366.

2. Wilson v. Wagar, 26 Mich. 452; Flanders v. Putney, 58 N. H. 358; Matthews v. Holby, 48 Barb. (N. Y.) 167.

But this right is an innovation upon the common law and is based on equity, and it should never be allowed to a vendor who wantonly or in bad faith refuses to perform his contract. Wilson v. Wagar, 26 Mich. 452.

3. Hoare v. Remie, 5 H. & N. 19; Houck v. Miller L. R. 7 Q. B. 92; Phillips Co. v. Seymour, 91 U. S. 646; Dwinell v. Howard, 30 Me. 258; King Phillip Mills v. Slater, 12 R. I. 82; Reybold v. Voorhees, 30 Pa. St. 116; Hartje v. Collins, 46 Pa. St. 268; Robson v. Bohn, 27 Minn. 333.

4. Forsyth v. Dickson, 1 Grant (Pa.), 26; Edwards v. Elliott, 36 N. J. L. 449; Andrews v. Durant, 11 N. Y. 35; Mixer v. Howarth, 21 Pick. (Mass.) 205; Williams v. Jackman, 16 Gray (Mass.), 514; Green v. Hall, 1 Houst. (Del.) 506. Compare Wood v. Russell, 5 B. & Ad. 942; Clarke v. Spence, 4 Ad. & E. 448.

Where the sale is conditional, and title is to remain in the vendor until the price is fully paid, any partial payments that may have been made are forfeited and irrecoverable by the buyer upon the latter's default in paying the residue.<sup>1</sup>

9. Sales "To Arrive."—A sale to arrive is conditional, and if the article do not arrive, as contracted for, either from the ship's being lost or other cause, the contract is at an end.<sup>2</sup>

In Andrews v. Durant, 11 N. Y. 35, A agreed by contract to build for B a vessel of certain dimensions and to deliver it finished on a day designated for $5000, of which the sum of $3000 was to be paid at specified stages of the work, and $2000 when it was completed and delivered, the workmanship and materials to be inspected as the work progressed and to be approved by the superintendent of B, which was done. Held, that B had no property in the vessel until it was completed.

1. 1 Benj. on Sales (4th Am. Ed.), § 429 et seq.; Fleck v. Warner, 25 Kans. 492; Seré v. McGovern, 65 Cal. 244; Angier v. Taunton Paper Co., 1 Gray (Mass.), 621; 2 C., 61 Am. Dec. 436; Colcord v. McDonald, 128 Mass. 470; Knox v. Perkins, 15 Gray (Mass.), 529; Brown v. Haynes, 52 Me. 578; Everett v. Hall, 67 Me. 497; Duke v. Shackelford, 56 Miss. 552; Haviland v. Johnson, 7 Daly (N. Y.), 297; Singer Mfg. Co. v. Treadway, 4 Brad. (Ill.) 57; Latham v. Sumner, 89 Ill. 233. Compare Preston v. Whitney, 23 Mich. 260; Johnson v. Whittemore, 27 Mich. 463.

In a New York decision it is said that where, in a case of conditional sale, the seller claims that the amount already paid is forfeited by the failure of the buyer to pay one of the instalments when due, it is his duty to inform the buyer of such claim, in order that the latter may pay or tender such amount. Cushman v. Jewell, 14 N. Y. Supreme Ct. 525.

Forfeiture prevented by Statute.—Whenever personal property is sold or delivered on a conditional sale or lease, an agreement that it shall remain the property of the vendor until payment is made or other condition performed, it is, in two States (Ohio and Missouri), made unlawful for the vendor or lessor to take possession or seize the property without refunding the sums actually paid by the lessee, less a reasonable compensation for use, in no case exceeding twenty-five per cent (in Ohio fifty per cent) of such sums paid, and for actual breakage or damage. Ohio, act of 1885, p. 239, § 2; Missouri, Rev. Stat. 1879, § 2508.

Waiver of Forfeiture.—If the seller, retaining title to property delivered on conditional sale, permits the buyer to retain possession and receives payment after the default, this operates as a waiver of the forfeiture. Hutchings v. Mager, 41 N. Y. 155; Cushman v. Jewell, 7 Hun (N. Y.), 525; Taylor v. Finley, Vt. 78; Blair v. Hamilton, 48 Ind. Compare Hegler v. Eddy, 53 Cal. 59.

A forfeiture in the sale of personal property waived where the seller, after default, makes a new contract with the buyer and others, and receives from them all past due instalments. Hill v. Towns, 69 Ala. 286.

2. Shields v. Pettee, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 262; Benedict v. Field, 4 Duer (N. Y.) 154; Hooper v. Railroad, 27 Wis. 81.

But a sale of an invoice of sugar ordered to board the vessel at the time, "more or less, to arrive on or before the first of August, to be of current quality," is an absolute sale and not a conditional sale. Havemeyer v. Cunningham, 35 B. (N. Y.) 515.

Sales to Arrive—Effect of Different Terms.—"A vendor may bind himself absolutely to deliver goods 'on arrival' of a particular ship by a contract to that effect. Whether delivery is conditional on the goods being on the ship, is to be determined by the construction of the particular contract. If I say that goods 'are now on passage' by a particular ship, and engage to deliver the goods on arrival of the ship, this is a warranty that the goods are on board, and makes me liable for the goods when the ship arrives. Gorriessen v. Perrin, 2 C. E. S. 681. And a contract to deliver goods 'on arrival' of a particular ship is an absolute engagement to deliver the goods when the ship arrives, so that the vendor is liable in case of the goods not coming in the ship. Hale v. Rawson, 4 C. E. N. S. 85. On the other hand, a vendor may avoid a warranty by using the terms 'expected to arrive by,' or even 'to arrive by,' or 'on arrival by' a particular ship, and in such case the delivery will be dependent not only on the arrival of the ship, but on the arrival of the goods on board. Boyd v. Siffert, Camp. 326; Idle v. Thornton, 3 C.

Contract of "Sale or Return."—Where goods are sold under a contract of "sale or return," the property passes to the purchaser subject to an option in him (condition subsequent) to return them within the fixed time, or within a reasonable time, if none is designated.<sup>1</sup> And where the contract provides that an article agreed to be sold (or to be manufactured for the vendee) shall be satisfactory to the purchaser, he cannot be required to take it because he ought to be satisfied with it; it must be in fact satisfactory to him or he is not bound to pay for it.<sup>2</sup> Under a contract of this character, if Novatt v. Hamilton, 5 M. & W. 639. Vendor is not liable, on such a contract, where the goods intended to have been sold were not shipped, though others of similar character, consigned to the vendor, but sold to other parties, were on the same ship. Smith v. Myers, 5 Q. B. 429. Nor where goods of same class were shipped, but consigned to another person. Gorrissen v. ..., 2 C. B. N. S. 681. Nor where goods were on the ship, belonging to the vendor and unsold, but substantially different. Vernede v. Weber, 1 H. & N. 1. Wharton on Contr. § 563. Goods were sold to arrive by a certain date and to be paid for at the market on the paper of L. B., whom both parties supposed to be solvent, without reserve. Before the ship arrived L. B. died. Held, that the vendor was not bound to deliver the goods upon a substituted tender of the notes, though they were not entirely worthless. Benedict v. ..., 16 N. Y. 595.

Caveat Emptor does not Apply.—Where merchandise is sold to arrive, and the vendor has not on hand and neither party can inspect, it would be contrary to sound morality and public policy to enforce the doctrine of caveat emptor and compel the purchaser to pay for goods of an unmerchantable quality. The first principle of the civil law, caveat venditor, should be applied in such cases. Wright v. Wall, 35 N. Y. Super. Ct. 108. Loss v. Sweet, 3 Engl. Law & Eq. 205. Perkins v. Douglas, 7 Shep. (Me) 10. Hotchkiss v. Higgins, 52 Conn. 205; 12 Am. Rep. 582; Schlesinger v. ..., 9 R. I. 578; Jameson v. Gregory, 10 Ky. 363.

Where an article is sold on the condition that it may be returned if it does not correspond with a warranty, and the article is returned and accepted unconditionally by the vendor, the contract is terminated and the vendor cannot recover the price. Manny v. ..., 15 Wis. 50.

Verment it is thought that in a sale, the contract is not terminated. 3 C. of L.—28 what is termed giving a refusal to a party who may take the article or not within a certain time, unless upon some other consideration or under seal, is not a valid contract in law, for want of consideration. Faulkner v. Hebard, 26 Vt. 452.

Vendee's Risk.—If the property is lost or accidentally destroyed before the purchaser has exercised his option in the matter of returning it, he must bear the loss, and the seller can recover the price. Carter v. Wallace, 32 Hun (N. Y.) 384. Compare Pierce v. Cooley, 20 Repr. (Mich.) 83.

Silsby Mfg. Co. v. Chico, 24 Fed. Repr. 893; McCarren v. McNulty, 7 Gray (Mass.) 139; Brown v. Foster, 113 Mass. 136; Zaleski v. Clark, 44 Conn. 218; Gibson v. Cranage, 39 Mich. 49; Gray v. Railroad, 11 Hun (N. Y.) 70; Heron v. Davis, 3 Bosw. (N. Y.) 336; Wood Reaper Co. v. Smith, 50 Mich. 565; s. c., 45 Am. Rep. 57; Grant v. Burch, 26 Hun (N. Y.) 376.

Buyer Must be in Fact Dissatisfied.—Under such a contract, the buyer cannot get rid of his obligation by merely declaring the article not to be satisfactory to him when it really is. Silsby Mfg. Co. v. Chico, 24 Fed. Repr. 893.

Where the purchaser of a machine took it upon trial, and was to pay for it if he liked it and to return it to the vendor if he did not like it, it was held that he was bound to bring to the trial of it honesty of purpose and judgment according to his capacity. Hartford Mfg. Co. v. Brush, 43 Vt. 528. But compare the cases cited above.

One who buys a machine with election to return it and receive back the price in case it does not "prove to be suited to his purpose and entirely satisfactory in all respects," is not bound to give notice of dissatisfaction or opportunity to remedy the difficulty, and after return and demand may maintain an action for the price, although the seller manages to make it work well without alteration. Aiken v. Hyde, 99 Mass. 183.

One bought a fanning mill with a rethe article is not returned, or the dissatisfaction of the buyer manifested within a reasonable time, or within the time agreed upon, the sale becomes absolute, and the price may be recovered in an action for goods sold and delivered.<sup>1</sup> A sale of personal property on condition that the vendee may return the article in a specified time becomes absolute if the vendee so misuse the property during that time as materially to impair its value.<sup>2</sup>

11. Rights and Remedies of Conditional Vendor.—The vendor of a conditional sale, upon breach of condition, may sue for the price or may bring replevin against the purchaser or his alienee for the goods.<sup>3</sup> If he has reserved the right to retake the property on default, or on deeming himself insecure, he has an implied irrevocable right of entry, and is not liable in trespass for retaking the goods.

Where the vendee is allowed until the end of the year to determine whether the conditional sale shall become absolute, he may make his election at any time before the expiration of the year, and is not confined to the last day of the year. Reese v. Beck, 24 Ala. 651.

1. Moss v. Sweet, 3 Engl. Law & Eq. 311; Jameson v. Gregory, 4 Metc. (Ky.) 363; Jones v. Wright, 71 Ill. 61.

Reasonable Time.—Where a sale is made conditioned on the article sold being satisfactory to the buyer, and no time is fixed within which the buyer is to manifest his approval or disapproval, he must do so within a reasonable time or the sale becomes absolute. Hickman v. Shimp, 20 Repr. (Pa.) 345; Washington v. Johnson, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 468; Quinn v. Stout, 31 Mo. 160; Spickler v. Marsh, 36 Md. 222.

What is a reasonable time is generally a question of fact for the jury. Washington v. Johnson, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 468.

Fifteen years is held to far exceed the reasonable time allowed a purchaser to accept an optional contract. Cooper v. Carlisle, 2 Green (N. J.) 525.

Where a cotton-gin was taken upon trial in the spring of the year, with an agreement to purchase if it answered its purpose, and notice was sent in October following by the party who took it that he would not keep it, held, that he had made his election seasonably. Hall v. Meriwether, 19 Tex. 224.

Time Fixed by Contract.—If the time within which the purchaser must exercise his option be designated in the agreement, he will make the sale absolute by retaining the property beyond that time. Prairie Farmer Co. v. Taylor, 69 Ill. 440; Moore v. Piercy, 1 Jones (N. Car.) 131; Johnson v. McLane, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 501.

2. Ray v. Thompson, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 281.

3. Salomon v. Hathaway, 126 Mass. 482; Brown v. Haynes, 52 Me. 493; Keitt v. Counts, 15 S. Car. 493.

Where a sale is made upon credit on condition that security be given, and the purchaser takes the property without giving the security, an action for the price will lie before the term of credit expires. Rice v. Andrews, 32 Vt. 61.

4. McClelland v. Nichols, 24 Mass. 176; Walsh v. Taylor, 39 Md. 308; Matthews v. Lucia, 55 Vt. 308.

But such a right does not authorize the seller to enter the buyer's premises by force and violence, for the purpose of retaking the goods, nor surreptitiously in his absence. Van Wren v. Flynn, 1 La. Ann. 1158; Drury v. Hervey, 10 Mass. 519; Churchill v. Holbert, 10 Mass. 42.

Where, after a sale of machinery upon condition that the same should remain the property of the seller until full payment, the same was so affixed to the buyer's mill that it could not be removed without material injury to the mill, held, that the seller might enforce a lien on the buildings for the amount remaining due under the contract. Cooper v. Cleghorn, 50 Wis. 113.

A chattel was sold on installment, title to remain in the seller until full payment, and the agreement providing that the chattel should be kept at a certain place and should not be removed therefrom without the seller's written consent. The requisite consent to its removal may also recover damages for injury to the chattels, although not entitled to the possession thereof at the time of the injury.<sup>1</sup> And if a sale is merely conditional, or by way of security, the seller retains an interest which is subject to levy and sale on execution.<sup>2</sup> Where an animal is sold on condition that it shall remain in the vendor's property until the payment of the price, its natural increase accruing before the performance of the condition belongs to the vendor.<sup>3</sup>

2. Waiver of Conditions.—Where goods are sold on condition of being paid for on delivery, and a delivery is made without exact performance of the condition, or anything being said or done to show an intention that the delivery should not be considered complete, the presumption is that the condition is waived.<sup>4</sup> But this presumption may be controlled and explained by extraneous evidence, and it is a question for the jury upon all the evidence whether the delivery was or was not subject to the condition.<sup>5</sup> The acceptance of past due instalments, where payment is to be made in that manner, will also amount to a waiver of any forfeiture that may have previously accrued.<sup>6</sup> But a mere mental whether certain place was given. Held, this did not authorize a second removal to still another place. Gibbons v. Duke, 37 Hun (N. Y.), 576.

Kent v. Buck, 45 Vt. 18.

McMillan v. Larned, 41 Mich. 521;

rett v. Hall, 67 Me. 497.

Clark v. Hayward, 51 Vt. 14; Buck-

er v. Smith, 22 Vt. 203; Allen v.

no, 55 Me. 113; Stewart v. Hall, 33

154; Kellogg v. Loveley, 46 Mich.

Smith v. Lynes, 5 N. Y. 41; Cald-

v. Bartlett, 3 Duer (N. Y.), 341;

Dequin v. Sands, 25 Wend. (N. Y.)

Marston v. Baldwin, 17 Mass. 606;

h v. Dennie, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 262;

ow v. Ellis, 15 Gray (Mass.), 229.

Sage v. Sleutz, 23 Ohio St. 1.

that a chattel to be delivered on ment part in cash and part in was delivered without asking for payment, is presumptive evidence of waiver of the condition and of an immediate vesting of title in the vendee.

v. Owen, 9 Wis. 152.

Farlow v. Ellis, 15 Gray (Mass.),

Seed v. Lord, 66 Me. 580.

goods are sold on the condition that shall be paid for by the promissory note of the purchaser "satisfactorily induced" by a third person, the taking of note by the seller without an indorsement on the promise of the purchaser

the indorsement shall be furnished, making no subsequent demand for indorsement, and failure to return

note, do not, as matter of law, amount to a waiver of the condition. Kenney v. Ingalls, 126 Mass. 488.

Custom of Trade.—Proof is admissible of a custom among merchants, where merchandise is sold on condition, to deliver it to the buyer before compliance with the condition, and that such change of custody is not de facto a waiver of the condition, and the property does not pass thereby. Farlow v. Ellis, 15 Gray (Mass.), 229; Fleeman v. McKean, 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 474; Bauendahl v. Horr, 7 Blatchf. (U. S. Cir.) 548.

Where, upon a conditional sale, the property is delivered to the purchaser without a compliance with the condition being insisted on at the time, yet if it is insisted on immediately afterwards, when a bill of sale is rendered, and the vendee fully recognizes and acknowledges the condition as still subsisting and binding upon him, this is sufficient to uphold the condition. Draper v. Jones, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 263.

8. Upon a conditional sale of a boat it was agreed that the purchaser should have possession, but if default should be made in the payment of any of the notes given for the purchase-money, the seller might retake possession of the boat. After the last note became due, although the purchaser had failed to make all the payments, he was allowed to retain possession, and the seller afterwards received a partial payment. Held, that this was an asset by the seller to delay in making payment and a waiver of his right to enforce forfeiture and a recognidetermination to rest satisfied with the non-performance of the condition, not procured by the vendee nor notified to him, will not operate as a waiver of such condition so as to vest the property in the article sold in the vendee.<sup>1</sup>

18. Rights of Third Parties.—It is the general doctrine of the American cases that where, by a contract for the sale of personal property, the title remains in the seller until full payment, and the purchaser acquires merely the possession with the right to inventory himself with title at a future time by payment of the stipulated purchase-money, the vendee cannot confer a title by sale and transfer of the property, even to a bona fide purchaser in good faith and without notice of the original vendor's claim to the property. But this position is not universally acceded to, and there are many cases holding that where chattels are sold and delivered conditionally, the vendor's right to the property will remain good against the vendee and his voluntary assignee, but not as against third parties. The purchaser to acquire title by payment of the residue of the purchase money, and a tender by the purchaser of the amount due, under the circumstances, discharged all lien or claim of title to the property by the seller. Hutchings v. Munger, 41 N. Y. 155; and see Cushman v. Jewell, 7 Hun (N. Y.), 525; Taylor v. Finley, 48 Vt. 78; Blair v. Hamilton, 48 Ind. 32. Compare Hegler v. Eddy, 53 Cal. 597.

1. Maxwell v. Briggs, 17 Vt. 176.

2. Harkness v. Russell (U. S. Sup. Ct. Nov. 8, 1886), 23 Repr. 65; In re Binford, 17 Nat. Bank. Reg. 353; Brown v. Haynes, 52 Me. 578; Everett v. Hall, 67 Me. 497; McFarland v. Farmer, 42 N. H. 386; King v. Bates, 57 N. H. 446; Gray v. Stevens, 28 Vt. 1; Duncan v. Stone, 45 Vt. 118; Coggill v. Railroad, 3 Gray (Mass.), 545; Deshon v. Bigelow, 8 Gray (Mass.), 159; Burbank v. Crooker, 7 Gray (Mass.), 158; Carter v. Kingman, 103 Mass. 517; Benner v. Puffer, 114 Mass. 376; Lucas v. Birdsey, 41 Conn. 357; Brown v. Fitch, 43 Conn. 512; Dous v. Dennistoun, 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 393; Ballard v. Burgett, 40 N. Y. 314; Walker v. Mitchell, 25 Hun (N. Y.), 527; Kenny v. Planer, 3 Daly (N. Y.), 131; Wescott v. Tilton, 1 Duer (N. Y.) 53; Austin v. Dye, 46 N. Y. 500 (compare New York cases cited in next note); Cole v. Berry, 42 N. J. L. 308; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 511; Clayton v. Hiester, 80 N. Car. 275; Guilford v. McKinley, 61 Ga. 230; Ketchum v. Brennan, 53 Miss. 596; Duke v. Shackelford, 56 Miss. 552; Sumner v. Woods, 67 Ala. 139; s. c., 42 Am. Rep. 104; Fairbanks v. Eureka Co., 67 Ala. 109 (overruling Sumner v. Woods, 52 Ala.

94; Dudley v. Abner, 52 Ala. 50; Case v. Jennings, 17 Tex. 661; Holmes v. Molin, 5 Cold. (Tenn.) 482; Hall v. Draper, 20 Kans. 137; Sanders v. Keane, 28 Ohio St. 630; Lanman v. McGree, 94 Ind. 301; Hodson v. Warner, 60 Iowa 214; Baker v. Hall, 15 Iowa, 277; Palmer v. Catherwood, 36 Mo. 479; Sumner v. Cottey, 71 Mo. 121; Couse v. Tregel, 11 Mich. 65; Whitney v. McConnell, 11 Mich. 12; Aultman v. Mallory, 5 Mich. 178; Singer Co. v. Graham, 8 Oreg. 178; Kohler v. Hayes, 41 Cal. 455; Hobbs v. Zugbaum, 5 Mont. 344; s. c., 36 Am. Rep. 59; Warner v. Roth, 2 Wyo. 63.

Conflict of Laws.—Where there is a sale of an article on instalments, to come the property of the purchaser on payment of the purchase price, though the contract is made in Pennsylvania, the law of which State a purchaser takes title to it from the conditional vendee, yet if the article is sold by the vendee in New Jersey, the law of the latter jurisdiction will apply, and the purchaser will take only the title of the purchaser, and the vendor's title will fail. Marvin Safe Co. v. Norton, 10 Repr. (N. J.) 243.

Effect of Seller's Laches.—A conditional vendor, entitled by his contract to retake the property in case of default, broken, loses his right as against a bona fide purchaser who buys from the conditional vendor without notice of the condition, if the seller is guilty of laches in asserting his right, or if his conduct has been such as to waive performance of the condition. Robbins v. Phillips, 10 Mo. 100.

bona fide purchaser without notice.<sup>1</sup> It is in general held that a sale and delivery of a chattel on condition that the title shall remain in the vendor until payment of the price, vests no title in the purchaser before such payment which can be taken and sold on execution against the vendee.<sup>2</sup>

1. Wait v. Green, 36 N. Y. 556; Steel v. Singer, 2 Hilt. (N. Y.) 96; Western Trans. Co. v. Marshall, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 509; Hall v. Hinks, 21 Md. 406; Old Dominion S. S. Co. v. Burckhardt, 31 Gratt. (Va.) 644; Carnall v. Clark, 27 Ark. 500; Brundage v. Camp, 111 Ill. 330.

In Hall v. Hinks, 21 Md. 406, it is held that the supposed distinction between a sale and delivery of goods on condition, where the condition is not performed, and a sale and delivery procured by fraud, does not in reality exist as between the parties to the original contract; the vendee no more acquires the title in the latter case than in the former. As to these cases the principle that "a party having no title to property can pass none to others" does not apply.

Distinction Taken in Pennsylvania.—In Pennsylvania, as already stated (§ 3 of this article), the courts draw a distinction between sales under an agreement that the title shall not pass until the vendee pays the full price, and "bailments for use," coupled with an agreement whereunder the lessee may subsequently become owner of the property upon payment of stipulated price. As to creditors and purchasers, the latter species of contract is good, while the former is invalid. Forrest v. Nelson, 19 Repr. (Pa.) 380; Chamblain v. Smith, 44 Pa. St. 431; Rowe v. Sharp, 51 Pa. St. 26; Crist v. Kleber, 52 Pa. St. 290; Enlow v. Klein, 79 Pa. St. 488.

Conditional Sales called "Leases."—In several cases hold that, notwithstanding the parties to a contract for the transfer of personal property speak of it in the contract as "rented," and call the instalments to be paid "rent," to prevent the title from passing until payment in full has been made, yet if all the circumstances show that a sale was intended and the stipulated payments were really purchase-money, one who has in good faith bought and paid for the thing from the buyer, in ignorance that the latter has not yet paid in full, and in reliance on his possession and apparent ownership, will get a good title. Greer v. Church, 13 Bush (Ky.), 430; Domestic M. Co. v. Anderson, 23 Minn. 57; Adfeldt v. Huntsman, 92 Pa. St. 53; s. c. 37 Am. Rep. 661.

Where Conditional Sales are Treated as Chattel Mortgages.—"Since the enactment in most of the States of acts rendering chattel mortgages void as against the creditors of or bona fide purchasers from the mortgagor, unless filed or recorded, many decisions have been made holding conditional contracts of the class now under consideration to be chattel mortgages. This opinion is gaining ground, having been lately adopted by the United States Supreme Court." 1 Benj. on Sales (4th Am. Ed.), § 452, citing Hervey v. Locomotive Works, 93 U. S. 664; Heryford v. Davis, 102 U. S. 235; Herring v. Hoppock, 15 N. Y. 409; Murch v. Wright, 46 Ill. 487; Hart v. Barney, 7 Fed. Repr. 543.

Where one buys a chattel conditionally, and obtains possession by fraudulent representations and then sells to an innocent purchaser, the title vests in the latter. Vaughn v. Hopson, 10 Bush (Ky.), 337.

An owner of merchandise who, by intrusting it to a purchaser on a conditional sale, enables the purchaser to ship it and obtain a negotiable bill of lading, loses his title to the merchandise as against a bona fide purchaser or pledgee for value of the bill of lading. Rawls v. Deshler, 4 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 12.

2. Blanchard v. Child, 7 Gray (Mass.), 155; Armington v. Houston, 38 Vt. 448; Bigelow v. Huntley, 8 Vt. 151; Cole v. Berry, 42 N. J. L. 308; s. c. 36 Am. Rep. 511; Thompson v. Walker, 2 McCrary (U. S. Cir.), 33; Piser v. Stearns, 1 Hilt. (N. Y.) 86; City Bank v. Tufts, 63 Tex. 113. And see, generally, citations in the two preceding notes. Compare Brunswick & Balke Co. v. Hoover, 95 Pa. St. 508; Heppe v. Speakman, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 117; Sinker v. Comparet, 62 Tex. 470.

Mortgage by Vendee.—A sells furniture to B with the condition that the property shall remain in A until payment. B takes it into another county and mortgages it to C without notice. Held, that A's title overrides the claim of the mortgagee. Goodwin v. May, 23 Ga. 205; Winchester v. King, 46 Mich. 102.

Authorities for Conditional Sales.—Benjamin on Sales; Blackburn on Sales; Langdell's Leading Cases on Sales; Story on Sales; Usher on Sales; Parsons on Contracts; Wharton on Contracts;

CONDITIONS. See various titles.

CONDONATION. See DIVORCE.

CONDUCT.—Mode of action ; behavior.<sup>1</sup>

CONFEDERACY is when two or more combine together to do any damage or injury to another, or to do any unlawful act.<sup>2</sup> (See also CONSPIRACY.)

CONFEDERATE MONEY. See MONEY.

<sup>1</sup> Smith's Leading Cases (8th Ed.), 33, 34; 30 Am. Law Register, 224; 15 Am. Law Review, 380, on "Conversion by Purchase."

1. Where the main asset of a bankrupt was a reversionary interest under his father's will, contingent on his surviving his mother, and the trustee found that he could sell the bankrupt's interest if the purchaser could obtain a policy of insurance on the bankrupt's life, but the bankrupt refused to undergo a medical examination for the purpose of the insurance, it was held that such refusal, however unreasonable, is not "conduct" which the court can take into consideration on his application for his discharge; because said Lord Esher, M. R., "the examination required would not be in relation to any property of the bankrupt as it is, but to add a new value to it. When that value is added the trustee desires to sell the property of the bankrupt as so increased in value. If we allowed this appeal we should be overruling In re Garnett, 55 Law J. Rep. Q. B. 77, because if it is misconduct not to do this act, an order might be made to do it; but in my opinion that case was rightly decided, and Mr. Justice Cave arrived at his decision on the same ground as I do." In re Betts, 56 Law J. Rep. Q. B. N. S. 370; 2 C. 4 Bankr. Rep. 170.

Right of Fishery as it has Heretofore been Conducted—Where in a deed a grant is made of "our right and privilege of the fishery as it has heretofore been conducted," and a wharf was erected by an adjoining owner, B, whose grantor had originally conveyed the whole tract without reference to any servitude in B's deed, and subsequently conveyed to C the adjoining land to B's, with the right of fishery, covering in extent all of B's water-front, and C had afterwards, but prior to the erection of the wharf, conveyed by a deed containing the above language to D, who after said erection brought suit for damages against B, it was held that the language "as has heretofore been conducted" referred only to the manner in which the fishery was conducted, and had no necessary relation to the extent thereof, and that also there was no such ambiguity in the grant as required extrinsic evidence of its extent. Paxson, J., saying: "The rule which allows extrinsic evidence to explain the intent of the subject sold has no application when a subject-matter exists which satisfies the terms of the instrument of conveyance. Harvey v. Vandegrift, 89 Pa. St.

Conducting Actions or Suits.—Where a borough council passed a resolution prescribing the duties of a town clerk, among which was the duty to "act as the professional adviser of the mayor and council in the business of the council," and that he should be paid the usual professional charges for conducting actions or suits at law or in equity, preparing leases, conveyances, and mortgages, and all charges for travelling, etc.; and the town clerk, having been subsequently appointed, was directed by the finance committee to prepare a bill of indemnity to the overseers of a township which had resisted the payment of a borough rate, and whose overseers had intimated that they would pay nothing except under legal obligation, the council had directed said committee to take proper proceedings to enforce payment and maintain the rate, and necessary give above bonds; and in performance the clerk attended conferences in London and went to various expenses sent in a bill,—the committee paid. It was held on certiorari that charges, so far as they regarded the direct course of the dispute, might properly be paid to the corporation, as not exceeding salary given for the performance of the ordinary duties of town clerk; and that charges were payable out of the fund, that the committee were directed to make the order. Reg. 1 B. 44.

<sup>2</sup> State v. Crowley, 41 Wis. 2d; Watson v. Harlem & N. Y. Navigation Co., 52 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 353.

CONFESSIONS.

Definition, 439.
 Ground of Admissibility, 440.
 Degree of Credit to be Given to, 440.
 Nature and Effect, 445.
 Corroboration, 447.
 Corpus Delicti, 448.
 Must be Free and Voluntary, 449.
 What Confessions are Not Admissible, 451.
 What is an Inducement, 452.
 Whether the Inducement Must Have Reference to the Charge, 454.
 Inducement Held Out with Reference to a Different Charge, 456.
 Inducement Must be Held Out by a Person in Authority, 456. [457.
 Confession in Presence of the Police, Who is a Person in Authority, 459.
 To Persons Not in Authority, 463.
 Made Under Arrest, 470.
 Violence of Mobs, 470.
 Inducement by Offer of Pardon, 477.
 Inducement by Accepting as State's Evidence, 477.
 Inducement—Where Held to Have Ceased, 477. [479.
 Where Held Not to Have Ceased,

Confessions Obtained by Artifice or Deception Admissible, 481.
Facts Ascertained by Inadmissible Confessions, 481.
Subsequent Confessions, 482.
Confessions Evidence only against Parties Making Them, 482.
Confessions Obtained by Questioning Admissible, 484.
Confessions Obtained in Course of Legal Proceedings, 489.
By Children, 489.
By Agents, 490.
Admissions by the Prosecutor, 490.
The Whole of a Confession Must be Taken Together, 491.
Confessions of Matters Void in Law or False in Fact, 492.
Inferred from Silence or Demeanor, 492.
To the Clergy, 495.
Must Be of the Crime Charged, 495.
The Mode of Introducing Confessions in Evidence, 495.
Furnishing Copy of, 497.

1. Definition.—A confession is a person's admission or declaration of his agency or participation in a crime, and is restricted to acknowledgments of guilt.<sup>1</sup> It must relate to a past or present state of facts.<sup>2</sup>

Confessions may be by acts as well as by words.<sup>3</sup>

1. People v. Le Roy, 4 Pac. Repr. (Cal.) 649; People v. Velarde, 59 Cal. 457.
 A confession is rather a fact to be proved by evidence, than evidence to prove a fact. It is not so much proof of a particular thing took place, as it is a waiver by the party charged of his right to have certain facts alleged against him technically proved. Whar. Cr. Ev. (9th Ed.) § 623.
 A confession of guilt is a direct admission of the criminal act, not of acts from which such criminal act may be inferred. People v. Red 53 Iowa, 69. See Bergen v. People, 17 Ill. 427; s. c., 65 Am. Dec. 2. People v. Parton, 49 Cal. 632; Waser v. State, 55 Ga. 325.
 A plea of guilty is an admission in the most solemn form. Com. v. Ayers, 115 Mass. 137.
 A confession is not destroyed by a subsequent denial. Jones v. State, 13 Tex. 168.
 Torture to extort confession is indictable at common law. State v. Hobbs, 2 Tyler (Vt.), 388.

"In our law the term 'admission' is usually applied to civil transactions, and to those matters of fact in criminal cases which do not involve criminal intent; the term 'confession' being generally restricted to acknowledgments of guilt." Greenleaf's Ev. (14th Ed.) § 170.

